This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at `http://books.google.com/`

13411.12 A

HARVARD
COLLEGE
LIBRARY

SHAKESPEARE:

THE FIRST FOLIO.

The First Edition of Shakespeare.

THE WORKS

OF

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

IN REDUCED FACSIMILE

FROM THE FAMOUS FIRST FOLIO EDITION OF 1623.

WITH AN INTRODUCTION

BY J. O. HALLIWELL-PHILLIPPS.

London:
CHATTO AND WINDUS, PICCADILLY.
1876.

20

13411.12
A ✓

HARVARD
COLLEGE
LIBRARY

PREFACE.

IT may be safely asserted, without fear of the writer being accused of exaggeration, that the First Folio Edition of Shakespeare is the most interesting and valuable book in the whole range of English literature. There is no work in that literature at all approaching near to it in critical value. When it is mentioned that this volume is the sole authority for the texts of such masterpieces as the Tempest, Macbeth, Twelfth Night, Measure for Measure, Coriolanus, Julius Cæsar, Timon of Athens, Antony and Cleopatra, Cymbeline, As you Like It, and The Winter's Tale—were the rest of the book waste-paper, enough will have been said to confirm its unrivalled importance. And its value increases every day, for day by day it is more clearly ascertained that many of the subtler meanings of passages in the works of Shakespeare depend upon minute indications and peculiarities which are alone to be traced in the original printed text.

A few of the dramas in the First Folio were possibly edited from Shakespeare's original manuscripts. This may be conjectured to have been probably the case with some of the author's latest productions, single copies of which might have sufficed for some years for the necessities of the theatres; but there can be no doubt that most of the autographs of the plays had been lost some time before the writer's decease, many possibly having been destroyed by the fire at the Globe Theatre in the year 1613. The editors of the Folio, however, boldly assert that they "have published them as where before you were abused with divers stolen and surreptitious copies, maimed and deformed by the frauds and stealths of injurious impostors that exposed them, even those are now offered to your view cured and perfect of their limbs, and all the rest absolute in their numbers as he conceived them; who, as he was a happy imitator of nature, was a most gentle expresser of it; his mind and hand went together, and what he thought he uttered with that easiness that we have scarce received from him a blot in his papers." This evidently is meant to imply that the whole of the volume was carefully edited from the author's manuscripts, whereas it is certain that in several instances Heminge and Condell used printed copies of the old quarto editions, in which were certain manuscript alterations, some of the latter being valuable, but others the reverse. Horne Tooke, indeed, inconsiderately followed by numerous others, goes so far as to say that "the First Folio is the only edition worth regarding;" adding,—"it is much to be wished that an edition of Shakespeare were given literatim according to the First Folio, which is now become so scarce and dear that few persons can obtain it; for, by the presumptuous license of the dwarfish commentators, we risk the loss of Shakespeare's genuine text which that Folio assuredly contains, notwithstanding some few slight errors of the press." Horne Tooke was not so well read as were the commentators, none of whom could have exhibited such an entire ignorance of the value of the Quartos. Every one, however, who has really studied the question, must admit that his opinion is correct in regard to no inconsiderable portion of the Folio volume, and that, even in those cases in which the texts of the Quartos are on the whole to be preferred, no student of Shakespeare could possibly dispense with incessant references to the collective edition. The value of the First Folio is so unequivocal, that there is no necessity for its wildest partizan to resort to exaggeration.

The reader will more readily understand the purport of these observations, if we add a list of the plays in the order in which they are here printed, with observations on the relative authorities of the texts. It will, of course, be understood that the mention of the circumstance of any drama in this volume being a first edition, conveys also the fact that it is the only authoritative text:—1. The Tempest. First edition. Perhaps edited from the author's own manuscript, which we know was not amongst those destroyed in the fire at the Globe Theatre. 2. The Two Gentlemen of Verona. First edition. 3. The Merry Wives of Windsor. First edition of the play in its complete state. A surreptitious quarto appeared in 1602, but it is merely an imperfect copy of the author's first sketch of the comedy. 4. Measure for Measure. First edition. 5. Comedy of Errors. First edition. 6. Much Ado about Nothing. Printed from a quarto edition which appeared in 1600, with a few omissions and variations. 7. Love's Labour's Lost. Printed from a quarto edition published in 1598, with a few alterations of slight consequence. 8. A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Printed from Roberts's quarto edition of 1600. 9. The Merchant of Venice. Printed from Heyes's quarto of 1600, with a number of variations and corrections. 10. As You Like It. First edition. 11. The Taming of the Shrew. First edition. 12. All's Well that Ends Well. First edition. 13. Twelfth Night. First edition. 14. The Winter's Tale. First edition. 15. King John. First edition. 16. Richard the Second. Mainly printed from the quarto edition of 1615. 17. First Part of Henry the Fourth. Chiefly taken from the quarto edition of 1613. 18. Second Part of Henry the Fourth. There was a quarto edition issued in 1600, but the editors of the Folio appear to have used a manuscript playhouse transcript of the comedy. 19. Henry the Fifth. First complete edition. The earlier quartos were surreptitiously printed, and are very imperfect. 20. First Part of Henry the Sixth. First edition. This play could not have been written by Shakespeare, though he may possibly have added a few touches to it. 21. The Second Part of Henry the Sixth. First edition. It is an alteration of an older play called the "First part of the Contention betwixt the Two Famous Houses of York and Lancaster, with the Death of the good Duke Humphrey," 1594. 22. The Third Part of Henry the Sixth. First edition.

It is an alteration of the "True Tragedy of Richard Duke of York, and the Death of good King Henry the Sixth, with the whole Contention between the two Houses, Lancaster and York," 1595. 23. Richard the Third. Edited from a playhouse copy of the quarto edition of 1602, which must, however, have had numerous manuscript alterations and additions. 24. Henry the Eighth. First edition. 25. Troilus and Cressida. Printed from the quarto of 1609, with certain omissions and some valuable additions. 26. Coriolanus. First edition. 27. Titus Andronicus. Edited from a playhouse transcript. It is nearly impossible to believe that this drama could have been written by Shakespeare, and I rather incline to conjecture that the editors of the First Folio inserted the older play on the subject, first printed in 1594, through either mistake or ignorance, knowing that Shakespeare had written a drama on the same theme, and finding no other version of it in their collection of plays. 28. Romeo and Juliet. Edited from a playhouse copy of the quarto edition of 1609. 29. Timon of Athens. First edition. 30. Julius Cæsar. First edition. 31. Macbeth. First edition. 32. Hamlet. Edited from a playhouse transcript. 33. King Lear. Edited from a playhouse transcript, certainly not from the author's manuscript. 34. Othello. Edited from a playhouse transcript. 35. Antony and Cleopatra. First edition. 36. Cymbeline. First edition.

The First Folio was originally issued at the selling price of twenty shillings. The present average value of a perfect copy is £500, and one very fine example in the possession of Lady Burdett-Coutts cost that lady, at the Daniel sale, no less a sum than £714. There is no doubt that these prices will be largely exceeded in the future. It is scarcely necessary to say that the volume has been for generations the almost exclusive property of wealthy collectors, and a sealed book to the generality of readers and students. By the aid of modern science it is now placed in a conveniently reduced form within the reach of all. It is not of course pretended that any facsimile of any old book will in all cases of minute research entirely supersede the necessity of a reference to copies of the ancient impression, but for all usual practical objects of study this cheap reproduction will place its owner on a level with the envied possessors of the far-famed original.

J. O. HALLIWELL-PHILLIPPS.

SHAKESPEARE:

THE FIRST FOLIO.

[1623.]

A Reduced Facsimile.

To the Reader.

This Figure, that thou here ſeeſt put,
It was for gentle Shakeſpeare cut:
Wherein the Grauer had a ſtrife
with Nature, to out-doo the life:
O, could he but haue drawne his wit
As well in braſſe, as he hath hit
His face, the Print would then ſurpaſſe
All, that vvas euer vvrit in braſſe.
But, ſince he cannot, Reader, looke
Not on his Picture, but his Booke.

B. I.

Mr. WILLIAM

SHAKESPEARES

COMEDIES, HISTORIES, & TRAGEDIES.

Published according to the True Originall Copies.

LONDON

Printed by Isaac Iaggard, and Ed. Blount. 1623.

TO THE MOST NOBLE
AND INCOMPARABLE PAIRE OF BRETHREN.

WILLIAM
Earle of Pembroke, &c. Lord Chamberlaine to the Kings most Excellent Maiesty.

AND

PHILIP
Earle of Montgomery, &c. Gentleman of his Maiesties
Bed-Chamber. Both Knights of the most Noble Order of the Garter, and our singular good LORDS.

Right Honourable,

WHilst we studie to be thankful in our particular, for the many fauors we haue receiued from your L.L we are faine vpon the ill fortune, to mingle two the most diuerse things that can bee, feare, and rashnesse; rashnesse in the enterprize, and feare of the successe. For, when we valew the places your H.H. sustaine, we cannot but know their dignity greater, then to descend to the reading of these trifles: and, while we name them trifles, we haue deprii'd our selues of the defence of our Dedication. But since your L.L. haue beene plea'd to thinke these trifles some-thing, heeretofore; and haue prosequuted both them, and their Authour liuing, with so much fauour: we hope, that (they out-liuing him, and he not hauing the fate, common with some, to be exequutor to his owne writings) you will vse the like indulgence toward them, you haue done vnto their parent. There is a great difference, whether any Booke choose his Patrones, or finde them: This hath done both. For, so much were your L. L. likings of the seuerall parts, when they were acted, as before they were published, the Volume ask'd to be yours. We haue but collected them, and done an office to the dead, to procure his Orphanes, Guardians; without ambition either of selfe-profit, or fame: onely to keepe the memory of so worthy a Friend, & Fellow aliue, as was our SHAKESPEARE, by humble offer of his playes, to your most noble patronage. Wherein, as we haue iustly obserued, no man to come neere your L. L. but with a kind of religious addresse; it hath bin the height of our care, who are the Presenters, to make the present worthy of your H. H. by the perfection. But, there we must also craue our abilities to be considerd, my Lords. We cannot go beyond our owne powers. Country hands reach foorth milke, creame, fruites, or what they haue: and many Nations (we haue heard) that had not gummes & incense, obtained their requests with a leauened Cake. It was no fault to approch their Gods, by what meanes they could: And the most, though meanest, of things are made more precious, when they are dedicated to Temples. In that name therefore, we most humbly consecrate to your H. H. these remains of your seruant Shakespeare; that what delight is in them, may be euer your L. L. the reputation his, & the faults ours, if any be committed, by a payre so carefull to shew their gratitude both to the liuing, and the dead, as is

Your Lordshippes most bounden,

IOHN HEMINGE.
HENRY CONDELL.

To the great Variety of Readers.

FRom the most able, to him that can but spell: There you are number'd. We had rather you were weighd. Especially, when the fate of all Bookes depends vpon your capacities: and not of your heads alone, but of your purses. Well! It is now publique, & you wil stand for your priuiledges wee know: to read, and censure. Do so, but buy it first. That doth best commend a Booke, the Stationer saies. Then, how odde soeuer your braines be, or your wisedomes, make your licence the same, and spare not. Iudge your sixe-pen'orth, your shillings worth, your fiue shillings worth at a time, or higher, so you rise to the iust rates, and welcome. But, what euer you do, Buy. Censure will not driue a Trade, or make the Iacke go. And though you be a Magistrate of wit, and sit on the Stage at Black-Friers, or the Cock-pit, to arraigne Playes dailie, know, these Playes haue had their triall alreadie, and stood out all Appeales; and do now come forth quitted rather by a Decree of Court, then any purchas'd Letters of commendation.

It had bene a thing, we confesse, worthie to haue bene wished, that the Author himselfe had liu'd to haue set forth, and ouerseen his owne writings; But since it hath bin ordain'd otherwise, and he by death departed from that right, we pray you do not envie his Friends, the office of their care, and paine, to haue collected & publish'd them; and so to haue publish'd them, as where (before) you were abus'd with diuerse stolne, and surreptitious copies, maimed, and deformed by the frauds and stealthes of iniurious impostors, that expos'd them: euen those, are now offer'd to your view cur'd, and perfect of their limbes; and all the rest, absolute in their numbers, as he conceiued thé. Who, as he was a happie imitator of Nature, was a most gende expresser of it. His mind and hand went together: And what he thought, he vttered with that easinesse, that wee haue scarse receiued from him a blot in his papers. But it is not our prouince, who onely gather his works, and giue them you, to praise him. It is yours that reade him. And there we hope, to your diuers capacities, you will finde enough, both to draw, and hold you: for his wit can no more lie hid, then it could be lost. Reade him, therefore; and againe, and againe: And if then you doe not like him, surely you are in some manifest danger, not to vnderstand him. And so we leaue you to other of his Friends, whom if you need, can bee your guides: if you neede them not, you can leade your selues, and others. And such Readers we wish him.

Iohn Heminge.
Henrie Condell.

To the memory of my beloued, The AVTHOR MR. WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE: AND what he hath left vs.

I dare no more fancy (Shakespeare) on thy name,
Nor I thee ample to thy Booke, and Fame:
While I confesse thy writings to be such,
As neither Man, nor Muse, can praise too much.
'Tis true, and all mens suffrage. But these wayes were not the paths I meant unto thy praise:
For seeking reverence on those may light,
Which, when it sounds at best, but echo's right;
Or blinde Affection, which doth ne're advance
The truth, but gropes, and urgeth all by chance.
Or crafty Malice, might pretend this praise,
And think to ruine, where it seem'd to raise.
These are, as some infamous Bawd, or whore,
Should praise a Matron. What could hurt her more?
But thou art proof against them, and indeed
Above th'all fortune of them, or the need.
I, therefore will begin. Soule of the Age!
The applause! delight! the wonder of our Stage!
My Shakespeare, rise; I will not lodge thee by Chaucer, or Spenser, or bid Beaumont lye
A little further, to make thee a roome:
Thou art a Monument, without a tombe,
And art alive still, while thy Booke doth live,
And we have wits to read, and praise to give.
That I not mixe thee so, my brains excuses;
I mean with great, but disproportion'd Muses:
For, if I thought my judgement were of yeares,
I should commit thee surely with thy peeres,
And tell, how farre thou didst'st our Lily out-shine,
Or sporting Kid, or Marlowes mighty line.
And though thou hadst small Latine, and less Greeke,
From thence to honour thee, I would not seeke
For names; but call forth thund'ring Æschylus,
Euripides, and Sophocles to us,
Pacuvius, Accius, him of Cordova dead,
To life again, to heare thy Buskin tread,
And shake a Stage: Or, when thy Sockes were on,
Leave thee alone, for the comparison

Of

Of all, that insolent Greece, or haughtie Rome sent forth, or since did from their ashes come.
Triumph, my Britaine, thou hast one to show,
To whom all Scenes of Europe homage owe.
He was not of an age, but for all time!
And all the Muses still were in their prime,
when like Apollo he came forth to warme
Our eares, or like a Mercury to charme!
Nature her selfe was proud of his designes,
And joy'd to weare the dressing of his lines!
which were so richly spun, and woven so fit,
As since, she will vouchsafe no other Wit.
The merry Greeke, tart Aristophanes,
Neat Terence, witty Plautus, now not please;
But antiquated, and deserted lye
As they were not of Natures family.
Yet must I not give Nature all: Thy Art,
My gentle Shakespeare, must enjoy a part.
For though the Poets matter, Nature be,
His Art doth give the fashion. And, that he,
Who casts to write a living line, must sweat,
(such as thine are) and strike the second heat
Vpon the Muses anvile: turne the same,
(And himselfe with it) that he thinkes to frame;
Or for the Lawrell, he may gaine a scorne,
For a good Poet's made, as well as borne.
And such wert thou. Looke how the fathers face
Lives in his issue, even so, the race
Of Shakespeares minde, and manners brightly shines
In his well turned, and true filed lines:
In each of which, he seemes to shake a Lance,
As brandish't at the eyes of Ignorance.
Sweet Swan of Avon! what a sight it were
To see thee in our water; yet appeare,
And make those flights vpon the banks of Thames,
That so did take Eliza, and our James!
But stay, I see thee in the Hemisphere
Advanc'd, and made a Constellation there!
Shine forth, thou Starre of Poets, and with rage,
Or influence, chide, or cheare the drooping Stage;
Which, since thy flight fro'hence, hath mourn'd like night,
And despaires day, but for thy Volumes light.

BEN: IONSON.

Vpon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenicke Poet, Master WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

THose hands, which you so clapt, go now, and wring
You Britaines brave; for done are Shakespeares dayes:
His dayes are done, that made the dainty Playes,
Which made the Globe of heav'n and earth to ring.
Dry'de is that veine, dry'd is the Thespian Spring,
Turn'd all to teares, and Phœbus clouds his rayes:
That corp's, that coffin now besticke those bayes,
Which crown'd him Poet first, then Poets King.
If Tragedies might any Prologue have,
All those he made, would scarse make one to this:
Where Fame, now that he gone is to the grave
(Death's publique tyring-house) the Nuncius is.
For though his line of life went soone about,
The life yet of his lines shall never out.

HVGH HOLLAND.

TO THE MEMORIE
of the deceased Authour Maister
W. SHAKESPEARE.

SHake-speare, at length thy pious fellowes giue
The world thy Workes: thy Workes, by which, out-liue
Thy Tombe, thy name must when that stone is rent,
And Time dissolues thy Stratford Moniment,
Here we alive shall view thee still. This Booke,
When Brasse and Marble fade, shall make thee looke
Fresh to all Ages: when Posteritie
Shall loath what's new, thinke all is prodegie
That is not Shake-speares; eu'ry Line, each Verse
Here shall reuiue, redeeme thee from thy Herse.
Nor Fire, nor cankring Age, as Naso said,
Of his, thy wit-fraught Booke shall once inuade.
Nor shall I e're beleeue, or thinke thee dead
(Though misi) vntill our bankrout Stage be sped
(Impossible) with some new straine t'out-do
Passions of Iuliet, and her Romeo;
Or till I heare a Scene more nobly take,
Then when thy half-Sword parlying Romans spake.
Till these, till any of thy Volumes rest
Shall with more fire, more feeling be exprest,
Be sure, our Shake-speare, thou canst neuer dye,
But crown'd with Laurell, liue eternally.

L. Digges.

To the memorie of M. W. Shake-speare.

VVEE wondred (Shake-speare) that thou went'st so soone
From the Worlds-Stage, to the Graues-Tyring-roome.
Wee thought thee dead, but this thy printed worth,
Tels thy Spectators, that thou went'st but forth
To enter with applause. An Actors Art,
Can dye, and liue, to acte a second part.
That's but an Exit of Mortalitie,
This, a Re-entrance to a Plaudite.

I. M.

The Workes of William Shakeſpeare, containing all his Comedies, Hiſtories, and Tragedies: Truely ſet forth, according to their firſt ORIGINALL.

The Names of the Principall Actors in all theſe Playes.

William Shakeſpeare.
Richard Burbadge.
John Hemmings.
Auguſtine Phillips
William Kempt.
Thomas Poope.
George Bryan.
Henry Condell.
William Sly.
Richard Cowly.
John Lowine.
Samuell Groſſe.
Alexander Cooke.

Samuel Gilburne.
Robert Armin.
William Oſtler.
Nathan Field.
John Underwood.
Nicholas Tooley.
William Eccleſtone.
Joſeph Taylor.
Robert Benfield.
Robert Gough.
Richard Robinſon.
Iohn Shancke.
Iohn Rice.

A CATALOGVE

of the ſeuerall Comedies, Hiſtories, and Tragedies contained in this Volume.

COMEDIES.

The Tempeſt.	Folio 1.
The two Gentlemen of Verona.	20
The Merry Wiues of Windſor.	38
Meaſure for Meaſure.	61
The Comedy of Errours.	85
Much adoo about Nothing.	101
Loues Labour loſt.	122
Midſummer Nights Dreame.	145
The Merchant of Venice.	163
As you Like it.	185
The Taming of the Shrew.	208
All is well, that Ends well.	230
Twelfth-Night, or what you will.	255
The Winters Tale.	304

HISTORIES.

The Life and Death of King John.	Fol. 1.
The Life & death of Richard the ſecond.	23
The First part of King Henry the fourth.	46
The Second part of K. Henry the fourth.	74
The Life of King Henry the Fift.	69
The First part of King Henry the Sixt.	96
The Second part of King Hen. the Sixt.	120
The Third part of King Henry the Sixt.	147
The Life & Death of Richard the Third.	173
The Life of King Henry the Eight.	205

TRAGEDIES.

The Tragedy of Coriolanus.	Fol. 1.
Titus Andronicus.	31
Romeo and Juliet.	53
Timon of Athens.	80
The Life and death of Julius Cæſar.	109
The Tragedy of Macbeth.	131
The Tragedy of Hamlet.	152
King Lear.	283
Othello, the Moore of Venice.	310
Anthony and Cleopater.	346
Cymbeline King of Britaine.	369

THE TEMPEST.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

A tempestuous noise of Thunder and Lightning heard: Enter a Ship-master, and a Boatswaine.

Master.

BOte-swaine.

Boatf. Heere Master: What cheere?

Mast. Good: Speake to th'Mariners: fall to't, yarely, or we run our selues a ground, bestirre, bestirre. Exit.

Enter Mariners.

Boatf. Heigh my hearts, cheerely, cheerely my hearts: yare, yare: Take in the toppe-sale: Tend to th'Masters whiste: Blow till thou burst thy winde, if roome enough.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Ferdinando, Gonzalo, and others.

Alon. Good Boatswaine haue care: where's the Master? Play the men.

Boatf. I pray now keepe below.

Ant. Where is the Master, Boson?

Boatf. Do you not heare him? you marre our labour, Keepe your Cabines: you do assist the storme.

Gonz. Noy, good be patient.

Boatf. When the Sea is: hence, what cares these roarers for the name of King? to Cabine; silence: trouble vs not.

Gon. Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard.

Boatf. None that I more loue then my selfe. You are a Counsellor, if you can command these Elements to silence, and worke the peace of the present, wee will not hand a rope more, vse your authoritie: If you cannot, give thanks you haue liu'd so long, and make your selfe readie in your Cabine for the mischance of the houre, if it so hap. Cheerely good hearts: out of our way I say. Exit.

Gon. I haue great comfort from this fellow methinks he hath no drowning marke vpon him, his complexion is perfect Gallowes: stand fast good Fate to his hanging, make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our owne doth little aduantage: If he be not borne to bee hang'd, our case is miserable. Exit.

Enter Boatswaine.

Boatf. Downe with the top-Mast: yare, lower, lower, bring her to Try with Maine-course. A plagge——— A cry within. Enter Sebastian, Anthonio & Gonzalo. vpon this howling: they are louder then the weather, or our office: yet againe? What do you heere? Shal we giue ore and drowne, haue you a minde to sinke?

Sebast. A pox o'your throat, you bawling, blasphemous incharitable Dog.

Boatf. Worke you then.

Ant. Hang cur, hang, you whoreson insolent Noyse-maker, we are lesse afraid to be drownde, then thou art.

Gonz. I'le warrant him for drowning, though the Ship were no stronger then a Nut-shell, and as leaky as an vnstanched wench.

Boatf. Lay her a hold, a hold, set her two courses off to Sea againe, lay her off.

Enter Mariners wet.

Mari. All lost, to prayers, to prayers, all lost.

Boatf. What must our mouths be cold?

Gonz. The King, and Prince, at prayers, let's assist them, for our case is as theirs.

Sebast. I am out of patience.

An. We are merely cheated of our liues by drunkards, This wide-chops-rascall, would thou mightst lye drowning the washing of ten Tides.

Gonz. Hee'l be hang'd yet,
Though every drop of water swearе against it,
And gape at widst to glue him. A confused noyse within.
Mercy on vs.
We split, we split, Farewell my wife and children,
Farewell brother: we split, we split, we split.

Ant. Let's all sinke with' King

Seb. Let's take leaue of him. Exit.

Gonz. Now would I giue a thousand furlongs of Sea, for an Acre of barren ground: Long heath, Browne firrs, any thing: the wills above be done, but I would faine dye a dry death. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Prospero and Miranda.

Mira. If by your Art (my deerest father) you haue
Put the wild waters in this Roare; slay them:
The skye it seemes would powre down stinking pitch,
But that the Sea, mounting to th' welkins cheeke,
Dashes the fire out. Oh! I haue suffered
With those that I saw suffer: A braue vessell

(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)
Dash'd all to peaces: O the cry did knocke
Against my very heart: poore soules, they perish'd.
Had I bya my God of power, I would
Haue sunckt the Sea within the Earth, or ere
It should the good Ship so hoae swallow'd, and
The ploughting Soules within her.
Pro. Be collected,
No more amazement: Tell your piteous heart
there's no harme done.
Mira. O woe, the day.
Pro. No harme:
I haue done nothing, but in care of thee
(Of thee my deere one; thee my daughter) who
Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing
Of whence I am; nor that I am more better
Then Prospero, Master of a full poore cell,
And thy no greater Father.
Mira. More to know
Did neuer medle with my thoughts.
Pro. 'Tis time
I should informe thee farther: Lend thy hand
And pluck my Magick garment from me: So,
Lye there thy Art: wipe thou thine eyes, haue comfort,
The direfull spectacle of the wracke which touch'd
The very vertue of compassion in thee:
I haue with such provision in mine Art
So safely ordered, that there is no foule
No not so much perdition as an hayre
Betid to any creature in the vessell
Which thou heardst cry, which thou saw'st sinke: Sit
For thou must now know farther. [downe,
Mira. You haue often
Begun to tell me what I am, but stope
And left me to a bootlesse inquisition,
Concluding, Stay: not yet.
Pro. The hour's now come
The very minute bids thee ope thine eare,
Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
A time before we came vnto this Cell?
I doe not thinke thou canst, for then thou wast not
Out three yeeres old.
Mira. Certainely Sir, I can.
Pro. By what? by any other house, or person?
Of any thing the Image, tell me, that
Hath kept with thy remembrance.
Mira. 'Tis farre off:
And rather like a dreame, then an assurance
That my remembrance warrants: Had I not
Fowre, or five women once, that tended me?
Pro. Thou hadst; and more Miranda: But how is it
That this lives in thy minde? What seest thou els
In the dath-backward and Abisme of Time?
If thou remembrest ought ere thou came hare,
How thou cam'st here thou mayst.
Mira. But that I doe not.
Pro. Twelue yeere since (Miranda) twelue yeere since,
Thy father was the Duke of Millaine and
A Prince of power.
Mira. Sir, are not you my Father?
Pro. Thy Mother was a peece of vertue, and
She said thou wert my daughter; and thy father
Was Duke of Millaine, and his onely heire,
And Princesse; no worse issued.
Mira. O the heauens,
What foule play had we, that we came from thence?
Or blessed was't we did?
Pro. Both, both my Girle.
By fowle-play (as thou saist) were we heau'd thence,
But blessedly holpe hither.
Mira. O my heart bleedes
To thinke oth' teene that I haue turn'd you to,
Which is from my remembrance, please you, further.
Pro. My brother and thy vncle, call'd Antonio:
I pray thee marke me, that a brother should
Be so perfidious: he, whom next thy selfe
Of all the world I lou'd, and to him put
The manage of my state, as at that time
Through all the signories it was the first,
And Prospero, the prime Duke, being so reputed
In dignity; and for the liberall Arts,
Without a parallel; those being all my studie,
The Gouernment I cast vpon my brother,
And to my State grew stranger, being transported
And rapt in secret studies, thy false vncle
(Do'st thou attend me?)
Mira. Sir, most heedefully.
Pro. Being once perfected how to graunt suites, how to deny them: who t'aduance, and who
To trash for ouer-topping; new created
The creatures that were mine, I say, or chang'd 'em,
Or els new form'd 'em; hauing both the key,
Of Officer, and office, set all hearts i'th state
To what tune pleas'd his eare, that now he was
The Iy which had hid my princely Trunch,
And suckt my verdure out on't: Thou attend'st not?
Mira. O good Sir, I doe.
Pro. I pray thee marke me:
I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
To closenes, and the bettering of my mind with that, which but by being so retir'd
Ore-prim'd all popular rate in my false brother
Awak'd an euill nature, and my trust
Like a good parent, did beget of him
A falsehood in it's contrarie, as great
As my trust was, which had indeede no limit,
A confidence sans bound. He being thus Lorded,
Not onely with what my reuenew yielded,
But what my power might else exact. Like one
Who hauing into truth, by telling of it,
Made such a sinner of his memorie
To credite his owne lie, he did believe
He was indeed the Duke, out o'th' Substitution
And executing th' outward face of Roialtie
With all prerogatiue: hence his Ambition growing:
Do'st thou heare?
Mira. Your tale, Sir, would cure deafenesse.
Pro. To hasten to Scheeme between this past he plaid,
And him he plaid it for, he needes will be
Absolute Millaine, Me (poore man) my Libraire
Was Dukedome large enough: of temporall roalties
He thinks me now incapable. Confederates
(so dole he was for Sway) with King of Naples
To giue him Annuall tribute, doe him homage
Subiect his Coronet, to his Crowne and bend
The Dukedom yet vnbow'd (alas poore Millaine)
To most ignoble stooping.
Mira. Oh the heauens:
Pro. Marke his condition, and th'euent, then tell me
If this might be a brother.
Mira. I should sinne
To thinke but Nobile of my Grand-mother,

Good

Good wombes haue borne bad sonnes.

Pro. Now the Condition.
This King of Naples being an Enemy
To me inueterate, hearkens my Brothers suite,
Which was, That he in lieu o'th premises,
Of homage, and I know not how much Tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine
Out of the Dukedome, and confer faire Millaine
With all the Honours, on my brother: Whereon
A treacherous Armie leuied, one mid-night
Fated to th' purpose, did Antholio open
The gates of Millaine, and i'th' dead of darkenesse
The ministers for th' purpose hurried thence
Me, and thy crying selfe.

Mir. Alack, for pitty:
I not remembring how I cride out then
Will cry it ore againe: it is a hint
That wringes mine eyes too't.

Pro. Heare a little further,
And then I'le bring thee to the present businesse
Which now's vpon's: without the which, this Story
Were most impertinent.

Mir. Wherefore did they not
That howre destroy vs?

Pro. Well demanded, wench:
My Tale prouokes that question: Deare, they durst not,
So dearе the loue my people bore me: nor set
A marke so bloudy on the business; but
With colours fairer, painted their foule ends.
In few, they hurried vs a-board a Barke,
Bore vs some Leagues to Sea, where they prepared
A rotten carkasse of a Butt, not rigg'd,
Nor tackle, sayle, nor mast, the very rats
Instinctively haue quit it: There they hoyst vs
To cry to th' Sea, that roard to vs; to sigh
To th' windes, whose pitty sighing backe againe
Did vs but loaing wrong.

Mir. Alack, what trouble
Was I then to you?

Pro. O, a Cherubin
Thou wast that did preserue me; Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heauen,
When I haue deck'd the sea with drops full salt,
Vnder my burthen groan'd, which rais'd in me
An vndergoing stomacke, to beare vp
Against what should ensue.

Mir. How came we a shore?

Pro. By prouidence diuine,
Some food, we had, and some fresh water, that
A noble Neapolitan Gonzalo
Out of his Charity, (who being then appointed Master of this designe) did giue vs, with Rich garments, linnens, stuffs, and necessaries
Which since haue steeled much, so of his gentlenesse
Knowing I loa'd my bookes, he furnishd me
From mine owne Library, with volumes, that
I prize aboue my Dukedome.

Mir. Would I might
But euer see that man.

Pro. Now I arise,
Sit still, and heare the last of our sea-sorrow:
Heere in this Band we arriu'd, and heere
Haue I, thy Schoolemaster, made thee more profit
Than other Princesse can, that haue more time
For vainer howres; and Tutors, not so carefull.

Mir. Heauens thank you for't. And now I pray you Sir,
For still 'tis beating in my minde; your reason
For raysing this Sea-storme?

Pro. Know thus far forth,
By accident most strange, bountifull Fortune
(Now my deere Lady) hath mine enemies
Brought to this shore: And by my prescience
I finde my Zenith doth depend vpon
A most auspitious starre, whose influence
If now I court not, but omit; my fortunes
Will euer after droope: Heare cease more questions,
Thou art inclinde to sleepe: 'tis a good dulnesse,
And giue it way: I know thou canst not chuse:
Come away, Seruant, come; I am ready now,
Approach my Ariel. Come. Enter Ariel.

Ari. All haile, great Master, grave Sir, haile: I come
To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly,
To swim, to dine into the fire: to ride
On the curld clowds: to thy strong bidding, taske
Ariel, and all his Qualitie.

Pro. Hast thou, Spirit,
Performd to point, the Tempest that I bad thee.

Ar. To every Article.
I boorded the Kings ship: now on the Beake,
Now in the Waste, the Decke, in every Cabyn,
I flam'd amazement, sometime I'ld diuide
And burne in many places; on the Top-mast,
The Yards and Bore-spirit, would I flame distinctly,
Then meete, and ioyne. Iouis Lightning, the precursers
O'th dreadfull Thunder-claps more momentarie
And sight out-running were not; the fire, and cracks
Of sulphurous roaring, the most mighty Neptune
Seeme to besiege, and make his bold waues tremble,
Yea, his dread Trident shake.

Pro. My brave Spirit,
Who was so firme, so constant, that this coyle
Would not infect his reason?

Ar. Not a soule
But felt a Feauer of the madde, and plaid
Some tricks of desperation; all but Mariners
Plung'd in the foaming brynne, and quit the vessell;
Then all a fire with me the Kings sonne Ferdinand
With haire vp-staring (then like reeds, not haire)
Was the first man that leaps; cride hell is empty,
And all the Diuels are heere.

Pro. Why that's my spirit:
But was not this nye shore?

Ar. Close by, my Master.

Pro. But are they (Ariell) safe?

Ar. Not a haire perished:
On their sustaining garments not a blemish,
But fresher then before: and as thou badst me,
In troops I haue dispersd them 'bout the Isle:
The Kings sonne haue I landed by himselfe,
Whom I left cooling of the Ayre with sighes,
In an odde Angle of the Isle, and sitting
His armes in this sad knot.

Pro. Of the Kings ship,
The Mariners, say how thou hast disposd,
And all the rest o'th' Fleete?

Ar. Safely in harbour
Is the Kings shippe, in the deepe Nooke, where once
Thou calldst me vp at midnight to fetch dewe
From the still-vext Bermoothes, there she's hid;
The Mariners all vnder hatches stowed,
Who, with a Charme ioynd to their suffred labour
I haue left asleep: and for the rest o'th' Fleet

(Which I dispers'd) they all haue met againe,
And are vpon the Mediterranian Flote
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the Kings ship wrackt,
And his great person perish.
Pro Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is perform'd; but there's more worke:
What is the time o'th'day?
Ar. Past the mid season.
Pro. At least two Glasses: the time 'twixt six & now
Must by vs both be spent most preciously.
Ar. Is there more toyle? Since ye doſt giue me paines,
Let me remember thee what thou hast promis'd,
Which is not yet perform'd me.
Pro. How now? moodie?
What is't thou canst demand?
Ar. My Libertie.
Pro. Before the time be out? no more:
Ar. I prethee,
Remember I haue done thee worthy seruice,
Told thee no lyes, made thee no mistakings, serv'd
Without or grudge, or grumblings; thou did promise
To bate me a full yeere.
Pro. Do'st thou forget
From what a torment I did free thee? Ar. No.
Pro. Thou do'st: & thinkst it much to tread ye Ooze
Of the salt deepe;
To run vpon the sharpe winde of the North,
To doe me businesse in the veines o'th' earth
When it is bak'd with frost.
Ar. I doe not Sir.
Pro. Thou liest, malignant Thing? hast thou forgot
The fowle Witch Sycorax, who with Age and Enuy
Was growne into a hoope? hast thou forgot her?
Ar. No Sir.
Pro. Thou hast: where was she born? speak; tell me:
Ar. Sir, in Argier.
Pro. Oh, was she so: I must
Once in a moneth recount what thou hast bin,
Which thou forgetst. This damn'd Witch Sycorax
For mischiefes manifold, and sorceries terrible
To enter humane hearing, from Argier
Thou know'st was banish'd: for one thing she did
They wold not take her life: Is not this true? Ar. I, Sir.
Pro. This blew ey'd hag, was hither brought with
And here was left by th' Saylors; thou my slaue, (child,
As thou reportst thy selfe, was then her seruant,
And for thou wast a Spirit too delicate
To act her earthy, and abhord commands,
Refusing her grand hests, she did confine thee
By helpe of her more potent Ministers,
And in her most vnmittigable rage,
Into a cloven Pyne, within which rift
Imprison'd, thou didst painefully remaine
A dozen yeeres: within which space she di'd,
And left thee there: where thou didst vent thy groanes
As fast as Mill-wheeles strike: Then was this Island
(Saue for the Son, that he did littour heere,
A frekelld whelpe, hag-borne) not honour'd with
A humane shape.
Ar. Yes: Caliban her sonne.
Pro. Dull thing, I say so: he, that Caliban
Whom now I keepe in seruice, thou best know'st
What torment I did finde thee in; thy groanes
Did make wolues howle, and penetrate the breasts
Of euer-angry Beares; it was a torment
To lay vpon the damn'd, which Sycorax
Could not against vndoe: it was mine Art,
When I arriu'd, and heard thee, that made gape
The Pyne, and let thee out.
Ar. I thanke thee Master.
Pro. If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an Oake
And peg-thee in his knotty entrailes, till
Thou hast howl'd away twelue winters.
Ar. Pardon, Master,
I will be correspondent to command
And doe my spryting, gently.
Pro. Doe so: and after two daies
I will discharge thee.
Ar. That's my noble Master:
What shall I doe? say what? what shall I doe?
Pro. Goe make thy selfe like a Nymph o'th' Sea,
Be subiect to no sight but thine, and mine: invisible
To euery eye-ball else: goe take this shape
And hither come in't: goe: hence
With diligence. Exit.
Pro. Awake, deere hart awake, thou hast slept well,
Awake.
Mir. The strangeness of your story, put
Heauinesse in me.
Pro. Shake it off: Come on,
Wee'll visit Caliban, my slaue, who neuer
Yeelds vs kinde answere.
Mir. 'Tis a villaine Sir, I doe not loue to looke on.
Pro. But as 'tis
We cannot missе him: he do's make our fire,
Fetch in our wood, and serues in Offices
That profit vs: What ho: slaue: Caliban:
Thou Earth, thou: speake.
Cal. within. There's wood enough within.
Pro. Come forth I say, there's other busines for thee:
Come thou Tortoys, when? Enter Ariel like a water-Nymph.
Fine apparition: my quaint Ariel,
Heark in thine eare.
Ar. My Lord, it shall be done. Exit.
Pro. Thou poysonous slaue, got by ye diuell himselfe
Vpon thy wicked Dam; come forth. Enter Caliban.
Cal. As wicked dewe, as ere my mother brush'd
With Rauens feather from vnwholesome Fen
Drop on you both: A Southwest blow on yee,
And blister you all ore.
Pro. For this be sure, to night thou shalt haue crampes,
Side-stitches, that shall pen thy breath vp, Vrchins
Shall for that vast of night, that they may worke
All exercise on thee: thou shalt be pinch'd
As thicke as hony-combe, each pinch more stinging
Then Bees that made 'em.
Cal. I must eat my dinner:
This Island's mine by Sycorax my mother,
Which thou tak'st from me: when thou cam'st first
Thou strok'st me, & made much of me: wouldst giue me
Water with berries in't: and teach me how
To name the bigger Light, and how the lesse
That burne by day, and night: and then I lou'd thee
And shew'd thee all the qualities o'th' Isle,
The fresh Springs, Brine-pits; barren place and fertill,
Curs'd be I that did so: All the Charmes
Of Sycorax: Toades, Beetles, Batts light on you:
For I am all the Subiects that you haue,
Which first was min owne King: and here you sty-me
In this hard Rocke, whiles you doe keepe from me
The rest o'th' Island.

Pro. Thou

Pro. Thou most lying slaue,
Whom stripes may moue, not kindnes: I haue vs'd thee
(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodg'd thee
In mine owne Cell, till thou didst seeke to violate
The honor of my childe.
Cal. Oh ho, oh ho, would't had been done:
Thou didst preuent me, I had peopel'd else
This Ile with Calibans.
Mira. Abhorred Slaue,
Which any print of goodnesse wilt not take,
Being capable of all ill: I pittied thee,
Took paines to make thee speak, taught thee each houre
One thing or other: when thou didst not (Sauage)
Know thine owne meaning; but wouldst gabble, like
A thing most brutish, I endow'd thy purposes
With words that made them known: But thy vild race
(Tho thou didst learn) had that in't, which good natures
Could not abide to be with; therefore wast thou
Deseruedly confin'd into this Rocke, who hadst
Deser'd more then a prison.
Cal. You taught me Language, and my profit on't
Is, I know how to curse: the red-plague rid you
For learning me your language.
Pro. Hag-seed, hence:
Fetch vs in Fewell, and be quicke thou'rt best
To answer other business: (shrug'st thou (Malice)
If thou neglect'st, or dost vnwillingly
What I command, Ile racke thee with old Crampes,
Fill all thy bones with Aches, make thee roare,
That beasts shall tremble at thy dyn.
Cal. No, 'pray thee.
I must obey, his Art is of such pow'r,
It would controll my Dams god Setebos,
And make a vassaile of him.
Pro. So slaue, hence. Exit Cal.
Enter Ferdinand & Ariel, inuisible playing & singing.
Ariel Song. Come vnto these yellow sands,
and take hands:
Court sied when you come, and kiss
the wilde waues whist:
Foote it featly heere, and there, and sweete Sprights bearе
the burthen. Burthen dispersedly.
Hark, hark, bough wough: the watch-Dogges barke,
bough-wough
1st. Hark, hark, I heare, the strain of strutting Chanticlere cry cock-a-diddle-dowe.
Fer. Where should this Musick be? I'th aire, or th'earth?
It sounds no more: and sure it waytes vpon
Some God 'oth'Iland, sitting on a banke,
Weeping again the King my Fathers wracke.
This Musicke crept by me vpon the waters,
Allaying both their fury, and my passion
With it's sweet ayre: thence I haue follow'd it
(Or it hath drawne me rather) but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.
Ariel Song. Full fathom five thy Father lies,
Of his bones are Corrall made:
Those are pearles that were his eies,
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a Sea-change
Into something rich, & strange:
Sea-Nimphs hourly ring his knell.
Burthen: ding dong.
Harke now I heare them, ding-dong bell.
Fer. The Diety do's remember my drown'd father,
This is no mortall business, nor no sound
That the earth owes: I heare it now aboue me.
Pro. The fringed Curtaines of thine eye aduance;
And say what thou see'st yond.
Mira. What is't a Spirit?
Lord, how it lookes about: Beleeue me sir,
It carries a brane forme. But 'tis a spirit.
Pro. No wench, it eats, and sleeps, & hath such senses
As we haue: such. This Gallant which thou seest
Was in the wracke: and but hee's something stain'd
With greefe (that's beauties canker) ye might'st call him
A goodly person: he hath lost his fellowes,
And strayes about to finde 'em.
Mir. I might call him
A thing diuine, for nothing naturall
I euer saw so Noble.
Pro. It goes on I see
As my soule prompts it: Spirit, fine spirit, Ile free thee
Within two dayes for this.
Fer. Most sure the Goddesse
On whom these ayres attend: Vouchsafe my pray's
May know if you remaine vpon this Island,
And that you will some good instruction giue
How I may beare me heere: my prime request
(Which I do last pronounce) is (O you wonder)
If you be Mayd, or no?
Mir. No wonder Sir,
But certainly a Mayd.
Fer. My Language? Heauens:
I am the best of them that speake this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.
Pro. How? the best?
What we'r thou if the King of Naples heard thee?
Fer. A single thing, as I am now, that wonders
To heare thee speake of Naples: he do's heare me,
And that he do's, I weepe: my selfe am Naples,
Who, with mine eyes (never since at ebbe) beheld
The King my Father wrack't.
Mir. Alacke, for mercy.
Fer. Yes faith, & all his Lords, the Duke of Milaine
And his brave sonne, being twaine.
Pro. The Duke of Milaine
And his more braver daughter, could controll thee
If now 'twere fit to do't: At the first sight
They haue chang'd eyes: Delicate Ariel,
Ile set thee free for this. A word good Sir,
I feare you haue done your selfe some wrong: A word.
Mir. Why speakes my father so vngently? This
Is the third man that ere I saw: the first
That ere I sigh'd for: pitty mouе my father
To be inclin'd my way.
Fer. O, if a Virgin,
And your affection not gone forth, Ile make you
The Queene of Naples.
Pro. Soft sir, one word more.
They are both in either pow'rs: But this swift business
I must vneasie make, least too light winning
Make the prize light. One word more: I charge thee
That thou attend me: Thou do'st heere vsurpe
The name thou ow'st not, and hast put thy selfe
Vpon this Island, as a spy, to win it
From me, the Lord on't.
Fer. No, as I am a man.
Mir. Ther's nothing ill, can dwell in such a Temple
If the ill-spirit haue so fayre a house,
Good things will strue to dwell with't
Pro. Follow me.

Pro. Speake not you for him: hee's a Traitor: come,
Ile manacle thy necke and feete together:
Sea water shalt thou drinke: thy food shall be
The fresh-brooke Mussels, wither'd roots, and husks
Wherein the Acorne cradled. Follow.
For. No,
I will resist such entertainment, till
Mine enemy ha's more pow'r.
He drawes, and is charmed from moving.
Mira. O deere Father,
Make not too rash a triall of him, for
Hee's gentle, and not fearfull.
Pro. What I say,
My foote my Tutor? Put thy sword vp Traitor,
Who mak'st a shew, but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possest with guilt: Come, from thy ward,
For I can heere disarme thee with this sticke,
And make thy weapon drop.
Mira. Beseech you Father.
Pro. Hence: hang not on my garments.
Mira. Sir have pity,
Ile be his surety.
Pro. Silence: One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee: What,
An advocate for an Impostor? Hush;
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
(Having seene but him and Caliban:) Foolish wench,
To th'most of men, this is a Caliban,
And they to him are Angels.
Mira. My affections
Are then most humble: I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.
Pro. Come on, obey:
Thy Nerves are in their infancy againe,
And have no vigour in them.
For. So they are:
My spirits, as in a dreame, are all bound vp:
My Fathers loss, the weaknesse which I feele,
The wracke of all my friends, nor this mans threats,
To whom I am subdude, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this Mayd: all corners else o'th'Earth
Let liberty make vse of: space enough
Have I in such a prison.
Pro. It workes: Come on.
Thou hast done well, fine Ariell: follow me,
Harke what thou else shalt do mee.
Mira. Be of comfort,
My Fathers of a better nature (Sir)
Then he appeares by speech: this is vnvoonced
Which now came from him.
Pro. Thou shalt be as free
As mountaine windes; but then exactly do
All poines of my command.
Ariell. To th'syllable.
Pro. Come follow: (speake not for him. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Anthonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, and others.

Gonz. Beseech you Sir, be merry; you have cause,
(So have we all) of ioy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss; our hint of woe
Is common, every day, some Saylors wife,
The Masters of some Merchant, and the Merchant
Have lost our Theame of woe: But for the miracle,
(I meane our preseruation) few in millions
Can speake like vs: then wisely (good Sir) weigh
Our sorrow, with our comfort.
Alons. Prethee peace.
Seb. He receiues comfort like cold porridge.
Ant. The Visitor will not give him ore so.
Seb. Looks, hee's winding vp the watch of his wit,
By and by it will strike.
Gon. Sir.
Seb. One: Tell.
Gon. When every greefe is entertaind,
That's offer'd comes to th'entertainer.
Seb. A dollor.
Gon. Dolour comes to him indeed, you have spoken truer then you purpos'd.
Seb. You have taken it wiseller then I meant you should.
Gon. Therefore my Lord.
Ant. Fie, what a spend-thrift is he of his tongue.
Alon. I pre-thee spare.
Gon. Well, I have done: But yet
Seb. He will be talking.
Ant. Which, of he, or Adrian, for a good wager,
First begins to crow?
Seb. The old Cocke.
Ant. The Cockrell.
Seb. Done: The wager?
Ant. A Laughter.
Seb. A match.
Adr. Though this Island seeme to be desert.
Seb. Ha, ha, ha.
Ant. So: you't paid.
Adr. Vninhabitable, and almost inaccessible.
Seb. Yet
Adr. Yet
Ant. He could not miss't.
Adr. It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.
Ant. Temperance was a delicate wench.
Seb. I, and a subtle, as he most learnedly delivor'd.
Adr. The ayre breathes vpon vs here most sweetly.
Seb. As if it had Lungs, and rotten ones.
Ant. Or, as 'twere perfum'd by a Fen.
Gon. Heere is every thing advantageous to life.
Ant. True, save meanes to liue.
Seb. Of that there's none, or little.
Gon. How lush and lusty the grasse looker?
How greene?
Ant. The ground indeed is tawny.
Seb. With an eye of greene in't.
Ant. He misses not much.
Seb. No: he doth but mistake the truth totally.
Gon. But the rarietyof it is, which is indeed almost beyond credit.
Seb. As many vouche rarieties are.
Gon. That our Garments being (as they were) drenchd in the Sea, hold notwithstanding their freshnesse and glosse, being rather new dy'de then stain'd with salt water.
Ant. If but one of his pockets could speake, would it not say he lyes?
Seb. I, or very falsely pocket vp his report.

Gon. Me thinkes our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Affricke, at the marriage of the kings faire daughter Claribel to the king of Tunis.

Seb. 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper well in our returne.

Adri. Tunis was never grac'd before with such a Paragon to their Queene.

Gon. Not since widdow Dido's time.

Ant. Widow? A pox o'that: how came that Widdow in? Widdow Dido!

Seb. What if he had said Widdower Æneas too? Good Lord, how you take it?

Adri. Widdow Dido said you? You make me studyof that: She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.

Gon. This Tunis Sir was Carthage.

Adri. Carthage? Gon. I assure you Carthage.

Ant. His word is more then the miraculous Harpe.

Seb. He hath hit'd the wall, and hoyses too.

Ant. What impossible matter wil he make easy next?

Seb. I thinke hee will carry this Island home in his pocket, and give it his sonne for an Apple.

Ant. And sowing the kernels of it in the Sea, bring forth more Islands.

Gon. I. Ant. Why in good time.

Gon. Sir, we were talking, that our garments seeme now as fresh as when we were at Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now Queene.

Ant. And the rarest that ere came there.

Seb. Bate (I beseech you) widdow Dido.

Ant. O Widdow Dido? I, Widdow Dido.

Gon. Is not Sir my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I meane in a sort.

Ant. That sort was well fish'd for.

Gon. When I wore it at your daughters marriage.

Alon. You cram these words into mine eares, against the stomacke of my sense: would I had never Married my daughter there: For comming thence My sonne is lost, and (in my rate) she too, Who is so farre from Italy removed, I ne're againe shall see her: O thou mine heire Of Naples and of Millaine, what strange fish Hath made his meale on thee?

Fran. Sir he may live, I saw him beate the surges vnder him, And ride vpon their backes; he trod the water Whose enmity he flung aside: and brested The surge most swoln that met him: his bold head 'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared Himselfe with his good armes in lusty stroke To th'shore; that o'er his wave-worne basis bowed As stooping to relieve him: I not doubt He came alive to Land.

Alon. No, no, hee's gone.

Seb. Sir you may thank your selfe for this great losse, That would not bless our Europe with your daughter, But rather loose her to an Affrican, Where she at least, is banish'd from your eye, Who hath cause to wet the greefe on't.

Alon. Pro-thee peace.

Seb. You were knee'd too, & importun'd otherwise By all of vs: and the faire soule her selfe Weigh'd between loathnesse, and obedience, at Which end o'th'beame should bow: we have lost your Sonne, I feare for ever: Millaine and Naples have Mo widdowes in them of this business making, Then we bring men to comfort them: The fault's your owne.

Alon. So is the dear'st o'th'losse.

Gon. My Lord Sebastian, The truth you speake doth lacke some gentlenesse, And time to speake it in: you rub the sore, When you should bring the plaister.

Seb. Very well. Ant. And most Chirurgeonly.

Gon. It is foule weather in vs all, good Sir, When you are cloudy.

Seb. Fowle weather? Ant. Very foule.

Gon. Had I plantation of this Isle my Lord.

Ant. Hee'd sow't with Nettle-seed.

Seb. Or dockes, or Mallowes.

Gon. And were the King on't, what would I do?

Seb. Scape being drunke, for want of Wine.

Gon. I'th'Commonwealth I would (by contraries) Execute all things: For no kinde of Trafficke Would I admit: No name of Magistrate: Letters should not be knowne: Riches, poverty, And vse of service, none: Contract, Succession, Borne, bound of Land, Tilth, Vineyard none: No vse of Mettall, Corne, or Wine, or Oyle: No occupation, all men idle, all: And Women too, but innocent and pure: No Soueraignty.

Seb. Yet he would be King on't.

Ant. The latter end of his Common-wealth forgets the beginning.

Gon. All things in common Nature should produce Without sweat or endeuour: Treason, felony, Sword, Pike, Knife, Gun, or neede of any Engine Would I not haue: but Nature should bring forth Of it owne kinde, all foyzon, all abundance To feed my innocent people.

Seb. No marrying 'mong his subiects?

Ant. None (man) all idle; Whores and knaves.

Gon. I would with such perfection gouerne Sir: T'Excell the Golden Age.

Seb. 'Saue his Maiesty. Ant. Long liue Gonzalo.

Gon. And do you mark me, Sir? (me.

Alon. Pro-thee no more: thou dost talke nothing to

Gon. I do well believe your Highnesse, and did it to minister occasion to these Gentlemen, who are of such sensible and nimble Lungs, that they always vse to laugh at nothing.

Ant. 'Twas you we laugh'd at.

Gon. Who, in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you: so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

Ant. What a blow was there given?

Seb. And it had not falne flat-long.

Gon. You are Gentlemen of braue mettals: you would lift the Moone out of her sphearе, if she would continue in it five weeke without changing.

Enter Ariell playing solemne Musicke.

Seb. We would so, and then go a Bat-fowling.

Ant. Nay good my Lord, be not angry.

Gon. No I warrant you, I will not adventure my discretion so weakly: Will you laugh me asleepe, for I am very heavy.

Ant. Go sleepe, and heare vs.

Alon. What, all so soone asleepe? I wish mine eyes Would (with themselves) shut vp my thoughts, I finde they are inclin'd to do so.

Seb. Please you Sir, Do not emis the heavy offer of it: It seldome visits sorrow, when it doth, it is a Comforter.

Ant.

Ant. We two my Lord, will guard your person,
While you take your rest, and watch your safety.
Alon. Thanke you: Wondrous heavy.
Seb. What a strange drowsinesse possesses them?
Ant. It is the quality o'th'Clymate.
Seb. Why
Doth it not then our eye-lids sinke? I finde
Not my selfe disposed to sleep.
Ant. Nor I, my spirits are nimble:
They fell together all, as by consent
They dropt, as by a Thunder-stroke: what might Worthy Sebastian? O, what might? no more:
And yet, me thinkes I see it in thy face,
What thou should'st be: th'occasion speaks thee, and
My strong imagination sees a Crowne
Dropping vpon thy head.
Seb. What art thou waking?
Ant. Do you not heare me speake?
Seb. I do, and surely
It is a sleepy Language; and thou speak'st
Out of thy sleepe: What is it thou dids't say?
This is a strange repose, to be asleepe
With eyes wide open: standing, speaking, moving:
And yet so fast asleepe.
Ant. Noble Sebastian,
Thou let'st thy fortune sleepe: die rather: wink'st
Whiles thou art waking.
Seb. Thou do'st seeme distinctly,
There's meaning in thy snores.
Ant. I am more serious then my custome: you
Must be so too, if heed me: which to do,
Trebbles thee o're.
Seb. Well: I am standing water.
Ant. I'le teach you how to flow.
Seb. Do so: to ebbe
Hereditary Sloth instructs me.
Ant. O!
If you but knew how you the purpose cherish
Whilst thus you mocke it: how in stripping it
You more inuest it: ebbing men, indeed
(Most often) do so neere the bottome run
By their owne feare, or sloth.
Seb. Pre-thee say on,
The setting of thine eye, and cheeke proclaime
A matter from thee; and a birth, indeed,
Which throwes thee much to yeeld.
Ant. Thus Sir:
Although this Lord of weake remembrance; this
Who shall be of as little memory
When he is earth'd, hath here almost perswaded
(For he's a Spirit of perswasion, only Professes to perswade) the King his sonne's alive,
'Tis as impossible that he's vndrown'd,
As he that sleepes heere, swims.
Seb. I have no hope
That he's vndrown'd.
Ant. O, out of this no hope,
What great hope have you? No hope that way, Is Another way so high a hope, that even
Ambition cannot pierce a winke beyond
But doubt discovery there. Will you grant with me
That Ferdinand is drown'd.
Seb. He's gone.
Ant. Then tell me, who's the next heire of Naples?
Seb. Clarihell.
Ant. She that is Queene of Tunis: she that dwells
Ten leagues beyond mans life: she that from Naples
Can have no note, vnlesse the Sun were post:
The Man i'th Moone's too slow, till new-borne chinnes
Be rough, and Razor-able: She that from whom
We all were sea-swallow'd, though some cast againe,
(And by that destiny) to performe an act
Whereof, what's past is Prologue; what to come
In yours, and my discharge.
Seb. What stuffe is this? How say you?
'Tis true my brothers daughter's Queene of Tunis,
So is she heyre of Naples, 'twixt which Regions
There is some space.
Ant. A space, whose ev'ry cubit
Seemes to cry out, how shall that Clarihell
Measure vs backe to Naples? keepe in Tunis,
And let Sebastian wake. Say, this were death
That now hath seiz'd them, why they were no worse
Then now they are: There be that can rule Naples
As well as he that sleepes; Lords, that can prate
As amply, and vnnecessarily
As this Gonzalo: I my selfe could make
A Chough of as deepe chat: O, that you bore
The minde that I do; what a sleepe were this
For your advancement? Do you vnderstand me?
Seb. Me thinkes I do...
Ant. And how do's your content
Tender your owne good fortune?
Seb. I remember
You did supplant your Brother Prospero.
Ant. True:
And looke how well my Garments sit vpon me,
Much fester then before: My Brothers seruants
Were then my fellowes, now they are my men.
Seb. But for your conscience.
Ant. I Sir: where lies that? If 'twere a kybe
'Twould put me to my slipper: But I feele not
This Deity in my bosome: Twentie consciences
That stand 'twixt me, and Millaine, candied be they,
And melt ere they mollest: Heere lies your Brother,
No better then the earth he lies vpon.
If he were that which now hee's like (that's dead)
Whom I wish this obedient steele (three inches of is)
Can lay to bed for ever: whiles you doing thus,
To the perpetuall winke for eye might pay
This ancient morsell: this Sir Prudence, who Should not vpbraid our course: for all the rest
They'l take suggestion, as a Cat laps milke,
They'l tell the clocke, to any businesse that
We say besits the houre.
Seb. Thy case, deere friend
Shall be my president: As thou gos't Millaine,
I'le come by Naples: Draw thy sword, one stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou paiest,
And I the King shall love thee.
Ant. Draw together:
And when I reare my hand, do you the like
To fall it on Gonzalo.
Seb. O, but one word.

Enter Ariell with Musicke and Song.

Ariel. My Master through his Art foresees the danger
That you (his friend) are in, and sends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keepe them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's ears.

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-ey'd Conspiracie
His time doth take:

If

If of Life you keepe a care,
Shake off slumber and beware.
Awake, awake.

Ant. Then let vs both be sodaine.

Gon. Now, good Angels preserue the King.

Alo. Why how now hoa; awake? why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?

Gon. What's the matter?

Seb. Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
(Even now) we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like Bels, or rather Lyons, did't not wake you?
It struke mine eare most terribly.

Alo. I heard nothing.

Ant. O, 'twas a din to fright a Monsters eare;
To make an earthquake: sure it was the roare
Of a whole heard of Lyons.

Alo. Heard you this Gonzalo?

Gon. Vpon mine honour, Sir, I heard a humming,
(And that a strange one too) which did awake me:
I shak'd you Sir, and cride: as mine eyes opend,
I saw their weapons drawne: there was a noyse,
That's verily: 'tis best we stand vpon our guard;
Or that we quit this place: let's draw our weapons.

Alo. Lead off this ground & let's make further search
For my poore Sonne.

Gon. Heauens keepe him from these Beasts:
For he is sure i'th Ilsland.

Alo. Lead away. (done.

Arioll. Prospero my Lord, shall know what I haue
So (King) goe safely on to seeke thy Son. Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Caliban, with a burthen of Wood (a noyse of Thunder heard)

Cal. All the infections that the Sunne sucks vp
From Bogs, Fens, Flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By ynch-meale a disease: his Spirits heare me,
And yet I needes must curse. But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with Vrchyn-shewes, pitch me i'th mire,
Nor lead me like a fire-brand, in the darke
Out of my way, vnlesse he bid em; but
For every trifle, are they set vpon me.
Sometime like Apes, that moe and chatter at me,
And after bite me: then like Hedg-hogs, which Lie tumbling in my bare-foote way, and mount
Their pricks at my foot-fall: sometime am I
All wound with Adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hisse me into madnesse: Lo, now Lo, Enter
Here comes a Spirit of his, and to torment me Trinculo.
For bringing wood in slowly: I'le fall flat,
Perchance he will not mande me.

Tri. Heaues at other bush, nor shrub to beare off any weather at all: and another Storme brewing, I heare it sing ith' winde: yond same blacke cloud, yond huge one, looke, like a foul bumbard that would shed his liquor: if it should thunder, as it did before, I know not where to hide my head: yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailes-fuls. What haue we here, a man, or a fish? dead or aliue? a fish, hee smels like a fish: a very ancient and fish-like smell: a kinde of, not of the newest poore-Iohn: a strange fish: were I in England now (as once I was) and had but this fish painted; not a holiday-foole there but would giue a peece of siluer: there, would this Monster, make a man: any strange beast there, makes a man: when they will not giue a doit to relieue a lame Begger, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian: Leg'd like a man; and his Finnes like Armes: warme o' my troth: I doe now let loose my opinion; hold it no longer; this is no fish, but an Islander, that hath lately suffered by a Thunderbolt: Alas, the storme is come againe: my best way is to creepe vnder his Gaberdine: there is no other shelter hereabout: Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellowes: I will here shrowd till the dregges of the storme be past.

Enter Stephano singing.

Ste. I shall no more to sea, to sea, here shall I dye ashore.
This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a mans
Funerall: well, here's my comfort. Drinkes.

Sings. The Master, the Swabber, the Boate-swaine & I;
The Gunner, and his Mate
Lou'd Mall, Meg, and Marrian, and Margerie,
But none of vs car'd for Kate.
For she had a tongue with a tang,
Would cry to a Sailor goe hang:
She lou'd not the savour of Tar nor of Pitch,
Yet a Tailor might scratch her where ever she did itch.
Then to Sea Boyes, and let her goe hang.
This is a scurvy tune too:
But here's my comfort. drinks.

Cal. Doe not torment me: oh.

Ste. What's the matter?
Haue we diuels here?
Doe you put trickes vpon's with Salvages, and Men of Inde? ha? I haue not scap'd drowning, to be afeard now of your foure legges: for it hath bin said; as proper a man as euer went on foure legs, cannot make him giue ground: and it shall be said so againe, while Stephano breathes at' nostrils.

Cal. The Spirit torments me: oh.

Ste. This is some Monster of the Ile, with foure legs; who hath got (as I take it) an Ague: where the diuell should he learne our language? I will giue him some reliefe if it be but for that: if I can recouer him, and keepe him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a Present for any Emperour that euer trod on Neates-leather.

Cal. Doe not torment me 'prethee: I'le bring my wood home faster.

Ste. He's in his fit now; and doe's not talke after the wisest: hee shall taste of my Bottle: if hee haue neuer drunke wine afore, it will goe neere to remoue his Fit: If I can recouer him, and keepe him tame, I will not take too much for him; hee shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

Cal. Thou do'st me yet but little hurt; thou wilt anon, I know it by thy trembling: Now Prospero workes vpon thee.

Ste. Come on your wayes. open your mouth: here is that which will giue language to you Cat; open your mouth; this will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly: you cannot tell who's your friend; open your chaps againe.

Tri. I should know that voyce:
It should be,

But.

But hee is drownd; and these are diuels: O defend me.

Stv. Foure legges and two voyces; a most delicate Monster: his forward voyce now is to speake well of his friend: his backward voice, is to vtter foule speeches, and to detract: If all the wine in my bottle will recouer him, I will helpe his Ague: Come: Amen, I will poure some to thy other mouth.

Tri. Stephano.

Ste. Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy: This is a diuell, and no Monster: I will leaue him, I haue no long Spoone.

Tri. Stephano: if thou beest Stephano touch me, and speake to me: for I am Trinculo; be not afeard, thy good friend Trinculo.

Ste. If thou bee'st Trinculo: come forth: I'le pull thee by the lesser legges: If any be Trinculo's legges, these are they: Thou art very Trinculo indeede: how cam'st thou to be the siege of this Moone-calfe? Can he vent Trinculo's?

Tri. I tooke him to be kt'd with a thunder-stroke; but art thou not drownd Stephano: I hope now thou art not drownd: Is the Storme ouer-blowne: I hid mee vnder the dead Moone-Calfes Gaberdine, for feare of the Storme: And art thou liuing Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitanes scap'd?

Ste. Prethee doe not turne me about, my stomache is not constant.

Cal. These be fine things, and if they be not sprights: that's a braue God, and bears Celestiall liquor: I will kneele to him.

Ste. How did'st thou scape?
How cam'st thou hither?.
Sweare by this Bottle how thou cam'st hither: I escap'd vpon a But of Sacke, which the Saylors heaued o'reboord, by this Bottle which I made of the barke of a Tree, with mine owne hands, since I was cast a-shore.

Cal. I'le sweare vpon that Bottle, to be thy true subiect, for the liquor is not earthly.

St. Heere: sweare then how thou escap'dst.

Tri. Swom ashore (man) like a Duckc: I can swim like a Ducke: I'le be sworne.

Ste. Here, kisse the Booke.
Though thou canst swim like a Ducke, thou art made like a Goose.

Tri. O Stephano, ha'st any more of this?

Ste. The whole But (man) my Cellar is in a rocke by th'sea-side, where my Wine is hid:
How now Moone-Calfe, how do's thine Ague?

Cal. Ha'st thou not dropt from heauen?

Ste. Out o'th Moone I doe assure thee. I was the Man ith' Moone, when time was.

Cal. I haue seene thee in her: and I doe adore thee: My Mistris shew'd me thee, and thy Dog, and thy Bush.

Ste. Come, sweare to this: kisse the Booke: I will furnish it anon with new Contents: Sweare.

Tri. By this good light, this is a very shallow Monster: I afeard of him? a very weake Monster:
The Man ith Moone?
A most poore creadulous Monster:
Well drawne Monster, in good sooth.

Cal. Ile shew thee every fertill inch 'oth Island: and I will kisse thy foote. I prethee be my god.

Tri. By this light, a most perfidious, 'and drunken Monster, when's god's a sleepe he'll rob his Bottle.

Cal. Ile kisse thy foot. Ile sweare my selfe thy Subiect.

Ste. Come on then: downe and sweare.

Tri. I shall laugh my selfe to death at this puppi-headed Monster: a most scurue Monster: I could finde in my heart to beate him.

Ste. Come, kisse.

Tri. But that the poore Monster's in drinke:
An abhominable Monster.

Cal. I'le show thee the best Springs: I'le pluckc thee Berries: I'le fish for thee; and get thee wood enough.
A plague vpon the Tyrant that I serue;
I'le beare him no more Sticks, but follow thee, thou wondrous man.

Tri. A most rediculous Monster, to make a wonder of a poore drunkard.

Cal. I'prethee let me bring thee where Crabs grow; and I with my long nayles will digge thee pig-nuts; show thee a Iayes nest, and instruct thee how to snare the nimble Marmozet: I'le bring thee to clustring Philberts, and sometimes I'le get thee young Scamels from the Rocke: Wilt thou goe with me?

Ste. I pre'thee now lead the way without any more talking. Trinculo, the King, and all our company else being drownd, wee will inherit here: Here; beare my Bottle: Fellow Trinculo; we'll fill him by and by again.

Caliban Sings drunkenly.

Farewell Master; farewell, farewell.

Tri. A howling Monster: a drunken Monster.

Cal. No more dams I'le make for fish,
Nor fetch in firing, at requiring,
Nor scrape trenchering, nor wash dish,
'Ban' ban' Cacaliban
Has a new Master, get a new Man.

Freedome, high-day, high-day freedome, freedome high-day, freedome.

Ste. O brave Monster; lead the way. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Ferdinand (bearing a Log.)

Fer. There be some Sports are painfull; & their labor
Delight in them set off: Some kindes of basenesse
Are nobly vndergon; and most poore matters
Point to rich ends: this my meane Taske
Would be as heauy to me, as odious, but
The Mistris which I serue, quickens what's dead,
And makes my labours, pleasures: O She is
Ten times more gentle, then her Father's crabbed;
And he's compos'd of harthnesse. I must remoue
Some thousands of these Logs, and pile them vp,
Vpon a sore injunction; my sweet Mistris
Weepes when she sees me worke, & says, such basenes
Had never like Executor: I forget:
But these sweet thoughts, doe euen refresh my labours,
Most base left, when I doe it. Enter Miranda and Prospero.

Mir. Alas, now pray you
Worke not so hard: I would the lightning had
Burnt vp those Logs that you are enioyned to pile:
Pray set it downe, and rest you: when this burnes
'Twill weepe for having wearied you: my Father
Is hard at study; pray now rest your selfe.

He's

Here's sake for these three houres.
Fer. O most deere Mistris,
The Sun will set before I shall discharge
What I must strive to do.
Mir. If you'l sit downe
Ile bearе your Logges the whiles: pray give me that,
Ile carry it to the pile.
Fer. No precious Creature,
I had rather crackes my sinewes, breake my backe,
Then you should such dishonor vndergoe,
While I sit lazy by.
Mir. It would become me
As well as it do's you; and I should do it
With much more ease: for my good will is to it,
And yours it is against.
Pro. Poore worme thou art infected,
This visitation shewes it.
Mir. You looke wearily.
Fer. No, noble Mistris, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night: I do beseech you
Chiefely, that I might sit in my prayers
What is your name?
Mir. Miranda, O my Father,
I haue broke your best to say so.
Fer. Admir'd Miranda,
Indeede the top of Admiration, worth
What's deerest to the world: full many a Lady
I haue ey'd with best regard, and many a time
Th'harmony of their tongues, hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent eare: for seuerall vertues
Haue I lik'd seuerall women, never any
With so full soule, but some defect in her
Did quarrell with the noblest grace she ow'd,
And put it to the foile. But you, O you,
Soperfect, and so peerlesse, are created
Of euerie Creatures best.
Mir. I do not know
One of my sexe; no womans face remember,
Save from my glasse, mine owne: Nor haue I seene
More that I may call men, then you good friend,
And my deere Father: how features are abroad
I am skilleffe of; but by my modestie
(The iewell in my dower) I would not wish
Any Companion in the world but you:
Nor can imagination forme a shape
Besides your selfe, to like of: but I prattle
Something too wildely, and my Fathers precepts
I therein do forget.
Fer. I am, in my condition
A Prince (Miranda) I do thinke a King
(I would not so) and would no more endure
This wooden slaverie, then to suffer
The flesh-flie blow my mouth: heare my soule speake,
The verie instant that I saw you, did
My heart flie to your seruice, there resides
To make me slaue to it, and for your sake
Am I this patient Logge-man.
Mir. Do you loue me?
Fer. O heauen; O earth, bearе witnes to this sound,
And crowne what I professe with kinde euent
If I speake true: if hollowly, invert
What best is boaded me, to mischiefe: I,
Beyond all limit of what else i'th world
Do loue, prize, honor you.
Mir. I am a foole
To weepe at what I am glad of.
Pro. Faire encounter
Of two most rare affections: heauens raine grace
On that which breeds betweene 'em.
Fer. VVherefore weepe you?
Mir. At mine vnworthinesse, that dare not offer
VVhat I desire to giue; and much lesse take
VVhat I shall die to want: But this is trifling,
And all the more it seekes to hide it selfe,
The bigger bulke it shewes. Hence bashfull cunning,
And prompt me plaine and holy innocence.
I am your wife, if you will marrie me;
If not, Ile die your maid: to be your fellow
You may denie me, but Ile be your seruant
VVhether you will or no.
Fer. My Mistris (deerest)
And I thus humble euer.
Mir. My husband then?
Fer. I, with a heart as willing
As bondage ere of freedome: heere's my hand.
Mir. And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewel
Till halfe an houre hence.
Fer. A thousand, thousand. Exeunt.
Pro. So glad of this as they I cannot be,
VVho are surpriz'd with all; but my reioycing
At nothing can be more: Ile to my booke,
For yet ere supper time, must I performe
Much businesse appertaining. Exit.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo.

Ste. Tell not me, when the But is out we will drinke water, not a drop before; therefore bearе vp, & board 'em' Seruant Monster, drinke to me.
Trin. Seruant Monster? the folly of this Ilnnd, they say there's but fiue vpon this Isle; we are three of them, if th'other two be brain'd like vs, the State totters.
Ste. Drinke seruant Monster when I bid thee, thy eies are almost set in thy head.
Trin. VVhere should they bee set else? hee were a braue Monster indeede if they were set in his taile.
Ste. My man-Monster hath drown'd his tongue in sacke: for my part the Sea cannot drowne mee, I swam ere I could recouer the shore, fiue and thirtie Leagues off and on, by this light thou shalt bee my Lieutenant Monster, or my Standard.
Trin. Your Lieutenant if you list, hee's no standard.
Ste. VVeel not run Monsieur Monster.
Trin. Nor go neither: but you'l lie like dogs, and yet say nothing neither.
Ste. Moone-calfe, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good Moone-calfe.
Cal. How does thy honour? Let me licke thy shooe: Ile not seruе him, he is not valiant.
Trin. Thou liest most ignorant Monster, I am in case to iustle a Constable: why, thou debosh'd Fish thou, was there euer man a Coward, that hath drunk so much Sacke as I to day? wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but halfe a Fish, and halfe a Monster?
Cal. Lou, how he mockes me, wilt thou let him my Lord?

Trin. Lord, quoth he? that a Monster should be such a Naturall?

Cal. Loe, loe againe: bite him to death I prethee.

Ste. Trinculo, keepe a good tongue in your head: If you prouе a mutineere, the next Tree · the poore Monster's my subiect, and he shall not suffer indignity.

Cal. I thanke my noble Lord. Wilt thou be pleas'd to hearken once againe to the suite I made to thee?

Ste. Marry will I: kneele, and repeate it,
I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter Ariell invisible.

Cal. As I told thee before, I am subiect to a Tiranit,
A Sorcerer, that by his cunning hath cheated me
Of the Island.

Ariell. Thou lyest.

Cal. Thou lyest, thou iesting Monkey thou:
I would my valiant Master would destroy thee.
I do not lye.

Ste. Trinculo, if you trouble him any more in's tale,
By this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

Trin. Why, I said nothing.

Ste. Mum then, and no more: proceed.

Cal. I say by Sorcery he got this Isle
From me, he got it. If thy Greatnesse will Reuenge it on him, (for I know thou dar'st)
But this Thing dare not.

Ste. That's most certaine.

Cal. Thou shalt be Lord of it, and I'le serue thee.

Ste. How now shall this be compast?
Canst thou bring me to the party?

Cal. Yea, yea my Lord, I'le yeeld him thee asleepe,
Where thou maist knocke a naile into his head.

Ariell. Thou liest, thou canst not.

Cal. What a py de Ninnie's this? Thou scuruy patch:
I do beseech thy Greatnesse give him blowes,
And take his bottle from him: When that's gone,
He shall drinke nought but brine, for I'le not shew him
Where the quicke Freshes are.

Ste. Trinculo, run into no further danger:
Interrupt the Monster one word further, and by this hand, I'le turne my mercie out o'doores, and make a
Stockfish of thee.

Trin. Why, what did I? I did nothing:
I'le go farther off.

Ste. Didst thou not say he lyed?

Ariell. Thou liest.

Ste. Do I so? Take thou that,
As you like this, give me the lye another time.

Trin. I did not give the lie: Out o'your wittes, and hearing too?
A pox o'your bottle, this can Sacke and drinking doo:
A murren on your Monster, and the diuell take your fingers.

Cal. Ha, ha, ha.

Ste. Now forward with your Tale: prethee stand further off.

Cal. Beate him enough: after a little time
I'le beate him too.

Ste. Stand farther: Come proceede.

Cal. Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custome with him
I'th afternoone to sleepe: there thou maist braine him,
Having first seiz'd his bookes: Or with a logge
Batter his skull, or paunch him with a stake,
Or cut his weasand with thy knife. Remember
First to possesse his Bookes; for without them
He's but a Sot, as I am; nor hath not
One Spirit to command: they all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Burne but his Bookes.
He ha's braue Vtensils (for so he calles them)
Which when he ha's a house, he'l decke withall.
And that most deeply to consider, is
The beautie of his daughter: he himselfe
Cals her a non-pareill: I never saw a woman
But onely Sycorax my Dam, and she;
But she as farre surpasseth Sycorax.
As great'st do's least.

Ste. Is it so braue a Lasse?

Cal. I Lord, she will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth braue brood.

Ste. Monster, I will kill this man: his daughter and
I will be King and Queene, saue our Graces: and Trinculo and thy selfe shall be Vice-roys:
Dost thou like the plot Trinculo?

Trin. Excellent.

Ste. Giue me thy hand, I am sorry I beate thee:
But while thou liu'st keepe a good tongue in thy head.

Cal. Within this halfe houre will he be asleepe,
Wilt thou destroy him then?

Ste. I on mine honour.

Ariell. This will I tell my Master.

Cal. Thou mak'st me merry: I am full of pleasure,
Let vs be iocond. Will you troule the Catch
You taught me but whileare?

Ste. At thy request Monster, I will do reason,
Any reason: Come on Trinculo, let vs sing.

Sings.

Flout 'em, and cout 'em: and skout 'em, and flout 'em.
Thought is free.

Cal. That's not the tune.

Ariell plaies the tune on a Tabor and Pipe.

Ste. What is this same?

Trin. This is the tune of our Catch, plaid by the picture of No-body.

Ste. If thou beest a man, shew thy selfe in thy likeness:
If thou beest a diuell, take't as thou list.

Trin. O forgiue me my sinnes.

Ste. He that dies payes all debts: I defie thee;
Mercy vpon vs.

Cal. Art thou afeard?

Ste. No Monster, not I.

Cal. Be not afeard, the Ile is full of noyses,
Sounds, and sweet aires, that give delight and hart not:
Sometimes a thousand twangling Instruments
Will hum about mine eares; and sometime voices,
That if I then had wak'd after long sleepe,
Will make me sleepe againe, and then in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open, and shew riches
Ready to drop vpon me, that when I wak'd
I cri'de to dreame againe.

Ste. This will prouе a braue kingdome to me,
Where I shall haue my Musicke for nothing.

Cal. When Prospero is destroy'd.

Ste. That shall be by and by:
I remember the story.

Trin. The sound is going away.
Lets follow it, and after do our worke.

Ste. Leade Monster,
We'l follow: I would I could see this Taborer,
He layes it on.

Trin. Wilt come?
I'le follow Stephano.

Exeunt
Scena

Scena Tertia.

Enter Alonso, Sebastian, Antonio, Gonzalo, Adrian, Francisco, &c.

Gon. By'r lakin, I can goe no further, Sir,
My old bones akes: here's a maze trod indeede
Through fourth rights, & Meanders: by your patience
I needes must rest me.

Al. Old Lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who, am my selfe attach'd with wearinesse
To th'dotting of my spirits: Sit downe, and rest:
Even here I will put off my hope, and keepe it
No longer for my Flatterer: he is drown'd
Whom thus we stray to finde, and the Sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land: well, let him goe.

Ant. I am right glad, that he's so out of hope:
Doe not for one repulse forgoe the purpose
That you resolu'd t'effect.

Seb. The next advantage will we take throughly.

Ant. Let it be to night,
For now they are oppress'd with travaile, they
Will not, nor cannot vse such vigilance
As when they are fresh.

Solemne and strange Musicke: and Prospero on the top (invisible:) Enter seuerall strange shapes, bringing in a Banket; and dance about it with gentle action of salutations, and inuiting the Kingesto eaten, they depart.

Seb. I say to night: no more.

Al. What harmony is this? my good friends, harke.

Gon. Marvellous sweet Musicke.

Alo. Gaue vs kind keepers, heauen: what were these?

Seb. A living Drolerie: now I will believe
That there are Vnicornes: that in Arabia
There is one Tree, the Phœnix throne, one Phœnix
At this houre reigning there.

Ant. Ile believe both:
And what do'e else want credit, come to me
And Ile be sworne 'tis true: Travellers ne're did lye,
Though fooles at home condemne em.

Gon. If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me?
If I should say I saw such Islands;
(For certes, these are people of the Island)
Who though they are of monstrous shape, yet note
Their manners are more gentle, kinde, then of
Our humane generation you shall finde
Many, nay almost any.

Pro. Honest Lord,
Thou hast said well: for some of you, here present:
Are worse then diuels.

Al. I cannot too much muse
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound expressing
(Although they want the vse of tongue) a kinde
Of excellent dumbe discourse.

Pro. Praise in departing.

Fr. They vanish'd strangely.

Seb. No matter, since (macks.
They haue left their Viands behinde; for wee haue sto-
Will please you taste of what is here?

Ala. Not I. (Boyes

Gon. Faith Sir, you neede not feare: when wee were
Who would beleeue that there were Mountayneeres,
Dew-lapt, like Bulls, whose throats had hanging at'em
Wallets of flesh? or that there were such men
Whose heads stood in their breste? which now we finde
Each proper man, as fine for one, will bring vs
Good warrant of.

Al. I will stand to, and feede,
Although my lad, no matter, since I feele
The best is past: brother: my Lord, the Duke,
Stand too, and doe as we.

Thunder and Lightning. Enter Ariell (like a Harpy) claps his wings vpon the Table, and with a quaint device the Banquet vanishes.

Ar. You are three men of sinne, whom destiny
That hath to instrument this lower world,
And what is in't: the never surfeited Sea,
Hath cast'd to belch vp you; and on this Island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men,
Being most vnfit to liue: I have made you mad;
And even with such like valour, men hang, and drowne
Their proper selues: you fooles, I and my fellowes
Are ministers of Fate, the Elements
Of whom your swords are temper'd, may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemockt-at-Stabs
Kill the still closing waters, as diminish
One dowle that's in my plumbe: My fellow ministers
Are like-inuulnerable: if you could hurt,
Your swords are now too massie for your strengths,
And will not be vplifted: But remember
(For that's my business to you) that you three
From Milanne did supplant good Prospero,
Expos'd vnto the Sea (which hath requit it)
Him, and his innocent childe: for which foule deed,
The Powres, delaying (not forgetting) haue
Incens'd the Seas, and Shores; yea, all the Creatures
Against your peace: Thee of thy Sonne, Alonso
They haue bereft; and doe pronounce by me
Lingring perdition (worse then any death
Can be at once) shall step, by step attend
You, and your wayes, whose wrathes to guard you from,
Which here, in this most desolate Isle, else fals
Vpon your heads, is nothing but hearts-sorrow,
And a clewe life ensuing.

He vanishes in Thunder: then (to soft Musicke.) Enter the shapes again, and dance (with mocks and mowes) and carrying out the Table.

Pro. Bravely the figure of this Harpie, hast thou
Perform'd (my Ariell) a grace it had deuouring:
Of my Instruction, hast thou nothing bated
In what thou had'st to say: so with good life,
And obseruation strange, my meaner ministers
Their seuerall kindes haue done: my high charmes work,
And these (mine enemies) are all knit vp
In their distractions: they now are in my powre;
And in these fits, I leaue them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand (whom they suppose is droun'd)
And his, and mine lost'd darling.

Gon. I'th name of something holy, Sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?

Al. O, it is monstrous: monstrous:
Me thought the billowes spoke, and told me of it,
The windes did sing it to me: and the Thunder
(That deepe and dreadfull Organ-Pipe) pronounc'd
The name of Prospero: it did base my Trespasse,
Therefore my Sonne i'th Ooze is bedded; and
I'le seeke him deeper then ere plummet sounded,
And with him there lye mudded. Exit.

Seb. But one feend at a time,
Ile fight their Legions ore.

Ant. He be thy second. Exeunt.
Gon. All three of them are desperate: their great guilt
(Like poyson given to worke a great time after)
Now gins to bite the spirits: I doe beseech you
(That are of suppler ioynts) follow them swiftly,
And hinder them from what this extasie
May now provoke them to.
Ad. Follow, I pray you. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Prospero, Ferdinand, and Miranda.

Pro. If I have too austerely punish'd you,
Your compensation makes amends, for I
Have given you here, a third of mine owne life,
Or that for which I live: who, once againe
I tender to thy hand: All thy vexations
Were but my trials of thy loue, and thou
Hast strangely stood the test: here, afore heauen
I ratifie this my rich guift: O Ferdinand,
Doe not smile at me, that I boast her of,
For thou shalt finde she will out-strip all praise
And make it halt, behinde her.
Fer. I doe believe it
Against an Oracle.
Pro. Then, as my guest, and thine owne acquisition
Worthily purchas'd, take my daughter: But
If thou do'st breake her Virgin-knot, before
All sanctimonious ceremonies may
With full and holy right, be ministred,
No sweet aspersion shall the heauens let fall
To make this contract grow; but barraine hate,
Sower-ey'd disdaine, and discord shall bestrew
The vnion of your bed, with weedes so loathly
That you shall hate it both: Therefore take heede,
As Hymens Lamps shall light you.
Fer. As I hope
For quiet dayes, fair Issue, and long life,
With such loue, as 'tis now the murkiest den,
The most opportune place, the strongest suggestion,
Our worser Genius can, shall never melt
Mine honor into lust, to take away
The edge of that dayes celebration,
When I shall thinke, or Phebus Steeds are founderd,
Or Night kept chain'd below.
Pro. Fairely spoke;
Sit then, and talke with her, she is thine owne;
What Ariell, my industrious seruitor Ariell. Enter Ariell.
Ar. What would my potent master? here I am.
Pro. Thou, and thy meaner fellowes, your last seruice
Did worthily performe: and I must vse you
In such another tricke: goe bring the rabble
(Ore whom I gue thee powre) here, to this place:
Incite them to quicke motion, for I must Bestow vpon the eyes of this yong couple
Some vanity of mine Art: it is my promise,
And they expect it from me.
Ar. Presently?
Pro. I: with a twinckle.
Ar. Before you can say come, and goe,
And breathe twice; and cry, so, so:
Each one tripping on his Toe,
Will be here with mop, and mowe.
Doe you loue me Master? no?
Pro. Dearely, my delicate Ariell: doe not approach
Till thou do'st heare me call.
Ar. Well: I conceiue. Exit.
Pro. Looke thou be true: doe not give dalliance
Too much the raigne: the strongest oathes, are straw
To th'fire ith' blood: be more abstemious,
Or else good night your vow.
Fer. I warrant you, Sir,
The white cold virgin Snow, vpon my heart
Abates the ardour of my Liver.
Pro. Well.
Now come, my Ariell, bring a Corolary,
Rather then want a Spirit; appear, & pertly. Soft musick.
No tongue: all eyes; be silent. Enter Iris.
Ir. Ceres, most bounteous Lady, thy rich Leas
Of Wheate, Rye, Barley, Fetches, Oates and Pease;
Thy Turphie-Mountaines, where live nibling Sheepe,
And flat Medes thetch'd with Stowes, them to keepe:
Thy banks with pioned, and twilled brims
Which spongie April, at thy best betrims;
To make cold Nymphes chaft crownes; & thy broome-
Whose shadow the dismissed Bachelor loues, (groues;
Being lasse-lorne: thy pole-clipt vineyard,
And thy Sea-marge sterrile, and rocky-hard,
Where thou thy selfe do'st ayre, the Queene o'th Skie,
Whose watry Arch, and messenger, am I.
Bids thee leave these, & with her soueraigne grace, Iuno
Here on this grasse-plot, in this very place descends.
To come, and sport: here Peacocks fly amaine:
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertaine. Enter Ceres.
Cer. Haile, many-coloured Messenger, that neere
Do'st disobey the wife of Iupiter:
Who, with thy saffron wings, vpon my flowres
Diffuse'st hony drops, refreshing showres,
And with each end of thy blew bowe do'st crowne
My boskie acres, and my vnshrubd downe,
Rich scarph to my proud earth; why hath thy Queene
Summond me hither, to this short grass'd Greene?
Ir. A contract of true Loue, to celebrate,
And some donation freely to estate
On the bles'd Louers.
Cer. Tell me heauenly Bowe,
If Venus or her Sonne, as thou do'st know,
Doe now attend the Queene? since they did plot
The meanes, that dusktie Dis, my daughter got,
Her, and her blind-Boyes scandald company,
I have forswome.
Ir. Of her societie
Be not afraid: I met her deitie
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos: and her Son
Dove drawn with her: here thought they to have done
Some wanton charme, vpon this Man and Maide,
Whose vowes are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymens Torch be lighted: but in vaine,
Mars, hot Minion is returned againe,
Her waspish headed sonne, has broke his arrowes,
Swears he will shoote no more, but play with Sparrowes,
And be a Boy right out.
Cer. Highest Queene of State,
Great Iuno comes, I know her by her gate.
Iu. How do's my bounteous sister? goe with me
To blesse this twaine, that they may prosperous be,
And honoured in their Issue. They Sing.
Iu. Honor, riches, marriage, blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly ioyes, be still vpon you,

Iuno

Iuno sings her blessings: cerean.
Earth throughout, sing on plentie,
Barnes, and Garners, never empty.
Vines, with clustring bunches growing,
Plants, with goodly burthen bowing:
Spring come to you at the farthest,
In the very end of Harvest.
Scarcity and want shall shun you,
Ceres blessing so is on you.

Fer. This is a most maiesticke vision, and Harmonious charmingly: may I be bold
To thinke these spirits?

Pro. Spirits, which by mine Art
I haue from their confines call'd to enact
My present fancies.

Fer. Let me live here ever,
So rare a wondred Father, and a wife
Makes this place Paradise.

Pro. Sweet now, silence:
Iuno and Ceres whisper seriously,
There's something else to doe: hush, and be mute
Or else our spell is mar'd.

Iuno and Ceres whisper, and send Iris on employment.

Iris. You Nimphs call'd Nayades of ye wandring brooks,
With your sedg'd crownes, and cver-harmlesse lookes,
Leave your crispe channels, and on this greene-Land
Answere your summons, Iuno do's command.
Come temperate Nimphes, and helpe to celebrate
A Contract of true Loue: be not too late.

Enter Certaine Nimphes.

You Sun-burn'd Sicklemen of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow, and be merry,
Make holly day: your Rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh Nimphes encounter every one
In Country footing.

Enter certaine Reapers (properly habited:) they leape with the Nimphes in a graceful dance, towards the end whereof, Prospero starts suddenly and speakes, after which to a strange hollow and confused noyse, they heavily vanish.

Pro. I had forgot that foule conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban, and his confederates
Against my life: the minute of their plot
Is almost come: Well done, auoid: no more.

Fer. This is strange: your fathers in some passion
That workes him strongly.

Mir. Never till this day
Saw I him touch'd with anger, so distempere'd.

Pro. You doe looke (my son) in a mou'd sort,
As if you were dismaid: be cheerefull Sir,
Our Reuels now are ended: These our actors,
(As I foretold you) were all Spirits, and
Are melted into Ayre, into thin Ayre,
And like the baseless fabricke of this vision
The Cloud-capt Towres, the gorgeous Pallaces,
The solemne Temples, the great Globe itselfe,
Yea, all which it inherit, shall dissolue,
And like this insubstantiall Pageant faded
Leave not a racke behinde: we are such stuffe
As dreames are made on; and our little life
Is rounded with a sleepe: Sir, I am vext,
Bear with my weaknesse, my old braine is troubled:
Be not disturb'd with my infirmitie,
If you be pleas'd, retire into my Cell,
And there repose, a turne or two, I'le walke
To still my beating minde.

Fer. Mir. We wish your peace. Exit.

Pro. Come with a thought; I thank thee Ariell: come.

Enter Ariell.

Ar. Thy thoughts I cleane to, what's thy pleasure?

Pro. Spirit: We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

Ar. I my Commander, when I presented Ceres
I thought to haue told thee of it, but I feat'd
Least I might anger thee.

Pro. Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?

Ar. I told you Sir, they were red-hot with drinking,
So full of valour, that they smote the ayre
For breathing in their faces: beate the ground
For kissing of their feete; yet alwaies bending
Towards their project: then I beate my Tabor,
At which like vnbeck'd colts they prickt their eares,
Aduanc'd their eye-lids, lifted vp their noses
As they smelt musicke, so I charm'd their eares
That Calfe-like, they my lowing follow'd, through
Tooth'd briers, sharpe firzes, pricking goffe, & thorns,
Which entred their fraile shins: at last I left them
I'th' filthy mantled poole beyond your Cell,
There dancing vp to th'chins, that the fowle Lake
Ore-stuck their feet.

Pro. This was well done (my bird)
Thy shape invisible retaine thou still:
The trumpery in my house, goe bring it hither
For stale to catch these theeues. Ar. I go, I goe. Exit.

Pro. A Deuill, a borne-Deuill, on whose nature
Nurture can never sticke: on whom my paines
Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost,
And, as with age, his body ouglier growes,
So his minde cankers: I will plague them all,
Euen to roaring: Come, hang on them this line.

Enter Ariell, loaden with glistering apparell, &c. Enter Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo, all wet.

Cal. Pray you tread softly, that the blinde Mole may not heare a foot fall: we now are neere his Cell.

St. Monster, your Fairy, by you say is a harmles Fairy,
Has done little better then plaid the Iacke with vs.

Trin. Monster, I do smell all horse-pisse, at which
My nose is in great indignation.

Ste. So is mine. Do you heare Monster: If I should Take a displeasure against you: Looke you.

Trin. Thou wert but a lost Monster.

Cal. Good my Lord, give me thy fauour still,
Be patient, for the prize I'le bring thee too
Shall hudwinke this mischance: therefore speake softly,
All's hushtas midnight yet.

Trin. I, but to loose our bottles in the Poole.

Ste. There is not onely disgrace and dishonor in that Monster, but an infinite losse.

Tr. That's more to me then my wetting:
Yet this is your harmlesse Fairy, Monster.

Ste. I will fetch off my bottle,
Though I be o're eares for my labour.

Cal. Pre-thee (my King) be quiet. Seest thou heere
This is the mouth o'th Cell: no noise, and enter:
Do that good mischeefe, which may make this Island
Thine owne for euer, and I thy Caliban
For aye thy foot-licker.

Ste. Give me thy hand,
I do begin to haue bloody thoughts.

Trin. O King Stephano, O Peere: O worthy Stephano,
Looke what a wardrobe heere is for thee.

Cal. Let it alone thou foole, it is but trash.

Tri. Oh, ho, Monster: wee know what belongs to a frippery, O King Stephano.

Ste. Put off that gowne (Trinculo) by this hand Ile haue that gowne.

Tri. Thy grace shall haue it. (meane

Cal. The dropsie drowne this foole, what doe you To doate thus on such luggage? let's alone And doe the murther first: if he awake, From toe to crowne hee'l fill our skins with pinches, Make vs strange stuffe.

Ste. Be you quiet (Monster) Mistris line, is not this my Jerkin? now is the Jerkin vnder the line: now Jerkin you are like to lose your haire, & prouse a bald Jerkin.

Trin. Doe, doe; we steale by lyne and leuell, and't like your grace.

Ste. I thank thee for that ieft; heer's a garment for't: Wit shall not goe vn-rewarded while I am King of this Country: Steale by line and leuell, is an excellent passe of pate: there's another garment for't.

Tri. Monster, come put some Lime vpon your fingers, and away with the rest.

Cal. I will haue none on't: we shall loose our time, And all be turn'd to Barnacles, or to Apes With forcheads villainous low.

Ste. Monster, lay to your fingers: helpe to beare this away, where my hogshead of wine is, or Ile turne you out of my kingdome: goe to, carry this.

Tri. And this.

Ste. I, and this.

A noise of Hunters heard. Enter diuers Spirits in shape of Dogs and Hounds, hunting them about: Prospero and Ariel setting them on.

Pro. Hey Mountaine, hey.

Ari. Siluer: there it goes, Siluer.

Pro. Fury, Fury: there Tyrant, there: harke, harke. Goe, charge my Goblins that they grinde their ioynts With dry Conuultions, shorten vp their sinewes With aged Cramps, & more pinch-spotted make them, Then Pard, or Cat o' Mountaine.

Ari. Harke, they roare.

Pro. Let them be hunted soundly: At this houre Lies at my mercy all mine enemies: Shortly shall all my labours end, and thou Shalt haue the ayre at freedome: for a little Follow, and doe me seruice. Exeunt.

Actus quintus: Scæna Prima.

Enter Prospero (in his Magicke robes) and Ariel.

Pro. Now do's my Project gather to a head: My charmes crackle not: my Spirits obey, and Time Goes vpright with his carriage: how's the day?

Ar. On the sixt hower, at which time, my Lord You said our worke should cease.

Pro. I did say so, When first I rais'd the Tempest: say my Spirit, How fares the King, and 's followers?

Ar. Confin'd together In the same fashion, as you gaue in charge, Just as you left them; all prisoners Sir In the Lime-groue which weather-fends your Cell, They cannot bouldge till your release: The King, His Brother, and yours, abide all three distracted, And the remainder mourning ouer them, Brim full of sorrow, and dismay: but chiefly Him that you term'd Sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo, His teares runs downe his beard like winters drops From eaues of reeds: your charm so strongly works 'em That if you now beheld them, your affections Would become tender.

Pro. Dost thou thinke so, Spirit?

Ar. Mine would, Sir, were I humane.

Pro. And mine shall. Hast thou (which art but aire) a touch, a feeling Of their afflictions, and shall not my selfe, One of their kinde, that relishes all as sharpely, Passion as they, be kindlier moo'd then thou art? Though with their high wrongs I am struck to th'quick, Yet, with my nobler reason, gainst my furie Doe I take part: the rarer Action is In vertue, then in vengeance: they, being penitent, The sole drift of my purpose doth extend Not a frowne further: Goe, release them Ariell, My Charmes Ile breake, their senses Ile restore, And they shall be themselues.

Ar. Ile fetch them, Sir. Exit.

Pro. Ye Elues of hills, brooks, standing lakes & groues, And ye, that on the sands with printlesse foote Doe chase the ebbing-Neptune, and doe flie him When he comes backe: you demy-Puppets, that By Moone-shine doe the greene sowre Ringlets make, Whereof the Ewe not bites: and you, whose pastime Is to make midnight-Mushrumps, that reioyce To heare the solemne Curfewe, by whose aydes (Weake Masters though ye be) I haue bedymm'd The Noone-tide Sun, call'd forth the mutinous winds, And twirt the greene Sea, and the azur'd vault Set roaring warre: To the dread rathing Thunder Haue I given fire, and rifted Iouis stout Oke With his owne Bolt: The strong bass'd promontorie Haue I made shake, and by the spurs plucht vp The Pyne, and Cedar. Graues at my command Haue wak'd their sleepers, op'd, and let 'em forth By my so potent Art. But this rough Magicke I heere abure: and when I haue requir'd Some heauenly Musicke (which euen now I do) To worke mine end vpon their Senses, that This Ayrie-charme is for, I'le breake my staffe, Bury it certaine fadomes in the earth, And deeper then did euer Plummet sound Ile drowne my booke. Solemne musicke.

Heere enters Ariel before: then Alonso with a frantycke gesture, attended by Gonzalo. Sebastian and Antonio in like manner attended by Adrian and Francisco: They all enter the circle which Prospero had made, and there stand charm'd: which Prospero observing, speakes.

A solemne Ayre, and the best comforter, To an vnsettled fancie, Cure thy braines (Now vseless) boile within thy skull: there stand For you are Spell-stope. Holy Gonzalo, Honourable man, Mine eyes ev'n sociable to the shew of thine Fall fellowly drops: The charme dissolues apace, And as the morning steales vpon the night (Melting the darkenesse) so their rising sences Begin to chace the ignorant fumes that mantle Their cleerer reason. O good Gonzalo My true preserver, and a loyall Sir, To him thou follow'st; I will pay thy graces Home both in word, and deeds: Most cruelly

Did'st

Did thou Alonso, vse me, and my daughter:
Thy brother was a furtherer in the Act,
Thou art pinch'd for't now Sebastian. Flesh, and bloud,
You, brother mine, that entertaine ambition,
Expelld remorse, and nature, whom, with Sebastian
(Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong)
Would here haue kill'd your King: I do forgiue thee,
Vnnaturall though thou art: Their vnderstanding
Begins to swell, and the approching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore
That now lye foule, and muddy: not one of them
That yet lookes on me, or would know me: Ariell,
Fetch me the Hat, and Rapier in my Cell,
I will discase me, and my selfe present
As I was sometime Millaine: quickly Spirit,
Thou shalt ere long be free.

Ariell sings, and helps to attire him.

Where the Bee sucks, there suck I,
In a Cowslips bell, I lie.
There I couch when Owles doe crie,
On the Batt's backe I doe flie
after Summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily, shall I liue now.
Vnder the Blossom that hangs on the Bow.

Pro. Why that's my dainty Ariell: I shall misse
Thee, but yet thou shalt haue freedome: so, so, so.
To the Kings ship, invisible as thou art,
There shalt thou finde the Mariners asleepe
Vnder the Hatches: the Master and the Boat-swaine
Being awake, enforce them to this place;
And presently, I pre'thee.
Ar. I drinke the aire before me, and returne
Or ere your pulse twice beate. Exit.
Gon. All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits heere: some heauenly power guide vs
Out of this fearefull Country.
Pro. Behold Sir King
The wronged Duke of Millaine, Prospero:
For more assurance that a liuing Prince
Do's now speake to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee, and thy Company, I bid
A hearty welcome.
Alo. Where thou bee'st he or no,
Or some inchanted triffle to abuse me,
(As late I have been) I dot know: thy Pulse
Beats as of flesh, and blood: and since I saw thee,
Th'affliction of my minde amends, with which
I feare a madnesse held me: this must crave
(And if this be as all) a most strange story.
Thy Dukedome I resigne, and doe entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs: But how should Prospero
Be liuing, and be heere?
Pro. First, noble Friend,
Let me embrace thine age, whose honor cannot
Be vnder'd, or vnsin'd.
Gon. Whether this be,
Or be not, I'le not sweare.
Pro. You doe yet taste
Some subtleties o'th'Ile, that will not let you
Beleeue things certaine: Welcome, my friends all,
But you, my brace of Lords, were I so minded
I heere could pluck his Highnesse frowne vpon you
And justifie you Traitors: at this time
I will tell no tales.
Seb. The Diuell speakes in him:
Pro. No:
For you (most wicked Sir) whom to call brother
Would euen infect my mouth, I do forgiue
Thy rankest fault; all of them: and require
My Dukedome of thee, which, perforce I know
Thou must restore.
Alo. If thou beest Prospero
Giue vs particulars of thy preseruation,
How thou hast met vs heere, whom three howres since
Were wrackt vpon this shore? where I lose lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is)
My deere sonne Ferdinand.
Pro. I am woe for't, Sir.
Alo. Irreparable is the losse, and patience
Saies, it is past her cure.
Pro. I rather thinke
You haue not sought her helpe, of whose soft grace
For the like losse, I haue her souereigne aid,
And rest my selfe content.
Alo. You the like losse?
Pro As great to me, as late, and supportable
To make the deere losse, haue I meanes much weaker
Then you may call to comfort you; for I
Haue lost my daughter.
Alo. A daughter?
Oh heauens, that they were liuing both in Naples
The King and Queene there, that they were, I wish
My selfe were mudded in that oo-zie bed
Where my sonne lies: when did you lose your daughter?
Pro. In these last Tempests. I perceiue these Lords
At this encounter doe so much admire,
That they deuoure their reason, and scarce thinke
Their eies doe offices of Truth: Their words
Are narrell breath: but howsoe'r you haue
Beene inforced from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero, and that very Duke
Which was thrust forth of Millaine, who most strangely
Vpon this shore (where you were wrackt) was landed
To be the Lord on't: No more yet of this,
For 'tis a Chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a break-fast, nor
Beseeming this first meeting: Welcome, Sir;
This Cell's my Court: heere haue I few attendants,
And Subiects none abroad: pray you looke in:
My Dukedome since you haue given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At least bring forth a wonder, to content ye
As much, as me my Dukedome.

Here Prospero discouers Ferdinand and Miranda, play ing at Chesse.

Mir. Sweet Lord, you play me false.
Fer. No my dearest loue,
I would not for the world. (wrangle,
Mir. Yes, for a score of Kingdomes, you should
And I would call it faire play.
Alo. If this prouе
A vision of the Island, one deere Sonne
Shall I twice loose.
Seb. A most high miracle.
Fer. Though the Seas threaten they are merciffull,
I haue cus'd them without cause.
Alo. Now all the blessings
Of a glad father, compasse thee about:
Arise, and say how thou cam'st heere.
Mir. O wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there heere?
How beauteous mankinde is? O brane new world

That has such people in't.

Pro. 'Tis new to thee. (play?

Alo. What is this Maid, with whom thou wast at
Your eld'st acquaintance cannot be three houres:
Is she the goddesse that hath seuer'd vs,
And brought vs thus together;

Fer. Sir, she is mortall;
But by immortall prouidence, she's mine;
I chose her when I could not aske my Father
For his aduise: nor thought I had one: She
Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milliaine,
Of whom, so often I haue heard renowne,
But never saw before: of whom I haue
Receiu'd a second life; and second Father
This Lady makes him to me.

Alo. I am hers.
But O, how odly will it sound, that I
Must aske my childe forgiueneſſe?

Pro. There Sir stop,
Let vs not burthen our remembrances, with
A heauinesse that's gon.

Gon. I haue ly'd wept,
Or should haue spoke ere this: looke downe you gods
And on this couple drop a blessed crowne;
For it is you, that haue chalk'd forth the way
Which brought vs hither.

Alo. I say Amen, Gonzalo.

Gon. Was Milliaine thrust from Milliaine, that his Issue
Should become Kings of Naples? O reioyce
Beyond a common ioy, and let it downe
With gold on lasting Pillers: In one voyage
Did Clarihel her husband finde at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother, found a wife,
Where he himselfe was lost: Prospero, his Dukedome
In a poore Isle: and all of vs, our selues,
When no man was his owne.

Alo. Giue me your hands;
Let griefe and sorrow still embrace his heart,
That doth not wish you ioy.

Gon. Be it so, Amen.

Enter Ariell, with the Master and Boatswaine amazedly following.

O looke Sir, looke Sir, here is more of vs:
I prophesi'd, if a Gallowes were on Land
This fellow could not drowne: Now blasphemy,
That swear'st Grace ore-board, not an oath on shore,
Hast thou no mouth by land?
What is the newes?

Bot. The best newes is, that we haue safely found
Our King, and company: The next: our Ship,
Which but three glasses since, we gaue out spin,
Is tyte, and yare, and brauely rig'd, as when
We first put out to Sea.

Ar. Sir, all this seruice
Haue I done since I went.

Pro. My trickſey Spirit.

Alo. These are not naturall euents, they strengthen
From strange, to stranger: say, how came you hither?

Bot. If I did thinke, Sir, I were well awake,
I'ld striue to tell you: we were dead of sleepe,
And (how we know not) all clapt vnder hatches,
Where, but euen now, with strange, and seuerall noyses
Of roring, shreeking, howling, gingling chaines,
And mo diuersitie of sounds, all horrible.
We were awak'd: straight way, at liberty;
Where we, in all our trim, freshly beheld
Our royall, good, and gallant Ship: our Master
Capring to eye her: on a trice, so pleaſe you,
Euen in a dreame, were we diuided from them,
And were brought moaping hither.

Ar. Was't well done?

Pro. Brauely (my diligence) thou shalt be free.

Alo. This is as strange a Maze, as ere men trod,
And there is in this businesse, more then nature
Was euer conduct of: some Oracle
Must rectifie our knowledge.

Pro. Sir, my Leige,
Doe not infest your minde, with beating on
The strangeneſſe of this businesse, at pickt leisure
(Which shall be shortly single) I'le resolue you,
(Which to you shall seeme probable) of every
These happend accidents: till when, be cheerefull
And thinke of each thing well: Come hither Spirit,
Set Caliban, and his companions free:
Vnty'e the Spell: How fares my gracious Sir?
There are yet missing of your Companie
Some few odde Lads, that you remember not

Enter Ariell, driuing in Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo in their stolne Apparell.

Ste. Every man shift for all the rest, and let
No man take care for himselfe; for all is
But fortune: Coragio Bully-Monster Coragio.

Tri. If these be true spies which I weare in my head, here's a goodly sight.

Cal. O Setebos, these be brave Spirits indeede
How fine my Master is? I am afraid
He will chastise me.

Seb. Ha, ha:
What things are these, my Lord Antonio?
Will money buy em?

Ant. Very like: one of them
Is a plaine Fish, and no doubt marketable.

Pro. Marke but the badges of these men, my Lords,
Then say if they be true: This misshapen knaue;
His Mother was a Witch, and one so strong
That could controle the Moone; make flowes, and ebs
And deale in her command, without her power:
These three base robd me, and this demy-diuell;
(For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life: two of these Fellowes, you
Must know, and owne, this Thing of darkeneſſe, I Acknowledge mine.

Cal. I shall be pinche to death.

Alo. Is not this Stephano, my drunken Butler?

Seb. He is drunke now;
Where had he wine?

Alo. And Trinculo is reeling ripe: where should they
Finde this grand Liquor that hath gilded 'em?
How cam'st thou in this pickle?

Tri. I haue bin in such a pickle since I saw you last,
That I feare me will never out of my bones:
I shall not feare fly-blowing.

Seb. Who how now Stephano?

Ste. O touch me not, I am not Stephano, but a Cramp.

Pro. You'ld be King o'the Isle, Sirha?

Ste. I should haue bin a sore one then.

Alo. This is a strange thing as ere I look'd on.

Pro. He is as disproportion'd in his Manners
As in his shape: Goe Sirha, to my Cell,
Take with you your Companions: as you looke
To haue my pardon, trim it handsomely.

Cal. I that I will: and I'le be wise hereafter,

And

And seeke for grace: what a thrice double Asse
Was I to take this drunkard for a god?
And worship this dull foole?
Pro. Goe to, away. (found it.
Ala. Hence, and bestow your luggage where you
Seb. Or'ble it rather.
Pro. Sir, I invite your Highnesse, and your traine
To my poore Cell: where you shall take your rest
For this one night, which part of it, I'le waste
With such discourse, as I not doubt, shall make it
Goe quicke away: The story of my life,
And the particular accidents, goe by
Since I came to this Ile: And in the morne
I'le bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,
Where I hope to see the nuptiall
Of these our dere-belou'd, solemnized,
And thence retire me to my Milaine, where
Every third thought shall be my grave.
Ala. I long
To heare the story of your life; which must Take the ear strangely.
Pro. I'le deliver all,
And promise you calme Seas, auspicious gales,
And saile, so expedicious, that shall catch
Your Royall fleet far off: My Ariel; chicke
That is thy charge: Then to the Elements
Be free, and fare thou well: please you draw neere!
Exeunt omnes.

EPILOGVE,
spoken by Prospero.

NOw my Charmes are all ore-thrown,
And what strength I have's mine owne.
Which is most faint: now 'tis true
I must be here confinde by you,
Or sent to Naples, Let me not
Since I have my Dukedome got,
And pardon'd the deceiver, dwell
In this bare Island, by your Spell,
But release me from my bands
With the helpe of your good hands:
Gentle breath of yours, my Sailes
Must fill, or else my project failes, which was to please: Now I want
Spirits to enforce: Art to enchant,
And my ending is despaire,
Unlesse I be relieu'd by prayer
Which pierces so, that it assaults
Mercy itselfe, and frees all faults.
As you from crimes would pardon'd be,
Let your Indulgence set me free. Exit.

The Scene, an vn-inhabited Island

Names of the Actors.

Alonso, K. of Naples:
Sebastian his Brother.
Prospero, the right Duke of Milaine.
Antonio his brother, the usurping Duke of Milaine
Ferdinand, Son to the King of Naples.
Gonzalo, an honest old Counsellor.
Adrian, & Francisco, Lords.
Caliban, a salvage and deformed slave.
Trinculo, a Jester.
Stephano, a drunken Butler.
Master of a Ship.
Boate-Swaine
Marriners.
Miranda, daughter to Prospero.
Ariell, an ayrie spirit.
Iris
Ceres
Iuno
Nymphes
Reapers } Spirits.

FINIS.

THE

THE Two Gentlemen of Verona.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Valentine: Protheus, and Speed.

Valentine.

Base to perswade, my loving Protheus;
Home-keeping-youth, haue ever homely wits.
Wer't not affection chaines thy tender dayes
To the sweet glances of thy honour'd Loue,
I rather would entreat thy company,
To see the wonders of the world abroad,
Then (liuing dully sluggardiz'd at home)
Weare out thy youth with shapelesse idlenesse.
But since thou lost'st; loue still, and thriue therein,
Even as I would, when I to loue begin.

Pro. Wilt thou be gone? Sweet Valentine adew,
Thinke on thy Protheus, when thou (hap'ly) seest
Some rare note-worthy obiect in thy trauaile.
Wish me partaker in thy happinesse,
When thou do'st meet good hap; and in thy danger,
(If ever danger doe enuiron thee)
Commend thy grieuance to my holy prayers,
For I will be thy beadsf-man, Valentine.

Val. And on a loue-booke pray for my successe?

Pro. Vpon some booke I loue, I'le pray for thee.

Val. That's on some shallow Storie of deepe loue,
How yong Leander crost the Hellespont.

Pro. That's a deepe Storie, of a deeper loue.
For he was more then ouer-shooes in loue.

Val. 'Tis true; for you are ouer-bootes in loue,
And yet you never swom the Hellespont

Pro. Ouer the Bootes? nay giue me not the Boots.

Val. No, I will not; for it boots thee not.

Pro. What? (groaes:

Val. To be in loue; where scorne is bought with
Coy looks, with hart-sore sighes: one fading moments
With twenty watchfull, weary, tedious nights; (mirth,
If hap'ly won, perhaps a hapless gaine,
If lost, why then a grieuous labour won,
How euer: but a folly bought with wit,
Or else a wit, by folly vanquished

Pro. So, by your circumstance, you call me foole.

Val. So, by your circumstance, I feare you'll proue.

Pro. 'Tis Loue you cauill at, I am not Loue.

Val. Loue is your master, for he masters you;
And he that is so yoked by a foole,
Methinkes should not be chronicled for wise.

Pro. Yet Writers say; as in the sweetest Bud,
The eating Canker dwels; so eating Loue
Inhabits in the finest wits of all.

Val. And Writers say; as the most forward Bud
Is eaten by the Canker ere it blow,
Even so by Loue, the yong, and tender wit
Is turn'd to folly, blasting in the Bud,
Loosing his verdure, even in the prime,
And all the faire effects of future hopes.
But wherefore waste I time to counsaile thee
That art a votary to fond desire?
Once more adieu: my Father at the Road
Expects my comming, there to see me ship'd.

Pro And thither will I bring thee Valentine.

Val. Sweet Protheus, no: Now let vs take our leaue
To Milleine let me heare from thee by Letters
Of thy successe in loue; and what newes else
Betideth here in absence of thy Friend:
And I likewise will visite thee with mine.

Pro. All happinesse bechance to thee in Millaine.

Val. As much to you at home: and so farewell. Exit

Pro. He after Honour hunts, I after Loue;
He leaues his friends, to dignifie them more;
I loue my selfe, my friends, and all for loue?
Thou Iulia thou hast metamorphis'd me:
Made me neglect my Studies, loose my time;
Warre with good counsaile, set the world at nought;
Made Wit with musing, weake; hart sick with thought

Sp. Sir Protheus: saue you: saw you my Master?

Pro. But now he parted hence to embarque for Millaine

Sp. Twenty to one then, he is ship'd already,
And I haue plaid the Sheepe in loosing him.

Pro. Indeede a Sheepe doth very often stray,
And if the Shepheard be awhile away.

Sp. You conclude that my Master is a Shepheard then and I Sheepe?

Pro. I doe.

Sp. Why then my hornes are his hornes, whether wake or sleepe.

Pro. A silly answere, and fitting well a Sheepe.

Sp. This proues me still a Sheepe.

Pro. True: and thy Master a Shepheard.

Sp. Nay, that I can deny by a circumstance.

Pro. It shall goe hard but ile proue it by another.

Sp. The Shepheard seekes the Sheepe, and not the Sheepe the Shepheard; but I seeke my Master, and not Master seekes not me: therefore I am no Sheepe

Pro. The Sheepe for fodder follow the Shepheard the Shepheard for foode followes not the Sheepe: the for wages followest thy Master, thy Master for wages
followes not thee: therefore thou art a Sheepe.

Sp. Such another proofe will make me cry baa.

Pro. But do'st thou heare: gau'st thou my Letter to Iulia?

Sp.

Sp. I Sir: I (a lost-Mutton) gaue your Letter to her (a lac'd-Mutton) and she (a lac'd-Mutton) gaue mee (a lost-Mutton) nothing for my labour.

Pro. Here's too small a Pasture for such store of Muttons.

Sp. If the ground be ouer-charg'd, you were best stricke her.

Pro. Nay, in that you are astray: 'twere best pound you.

Sp. Nay Sir, lesse then a pound shall serue me for carrying your Letter.

Pro. You mistake; I meane the pound, a Pinfold.

Sp. From a pound to a pin? fold it ouer and ouer, 'Tis threefold too little for carrying a letter to your louer

Pro. But what said she?

Sp. I.

Pro. Nod-I, why that's noddy.

Sp. You mistooke Sir: I say she did nod; And you aske me if she did nod, and I say I.

Pro. And that set together is noddy.

Sp. Now you haue taken the paines to set it together, take it for your paines.

Pro. No, no, you shall haue it for bearing the letter.

Sp. Well, I perceiue I must be faine to beare with you.

Pro. Why Sir, how doe you beare with me?

Sp. Marry Sir, the letter very orderly, Hauing nothing but the word noddy for my paines.

Pro. Beshrew me, but you haue a quicke wit.

Sp. And yet it cannot ouer-take your slow purse.

Pro. Come, come, open the matter in briefe; what said she.

Sp. Open your purse, that the money, and the matter may be both at once delivered.

Pro. Well Sir: here is for your paines: what said she?

Sp. Truely Sir, I thinke you'll hardly win her.

Pro. Why? could'st thou perceiue so much from her?

Sp. Sir, I could perceiue nothing at all from her; No, not so much as a durcket for delivering your letter: And being so hard to me, that brought your minde; I feare she'll proue as hard to you in telling your minde. Gaue her no token but stones, for she's as hard as steele.

Pro. What said she, nothing?

Sp. No, not so much as take this for thy paines (me; To testifie your bounty, I thank you, you haue testern'd Inuiuiall wherefore, henceforth, carry your letters your selfe: And so Sir, I'le commend you to my Mistrisse.

Pro. Go, go, be gone, to saue your Ship from wrack, Which cannot perish having thee aboard, Being destin'd to a drier death on shore: I will go send some better Messenger, For my Iulia would not deigne my lines, Receiving them from such a worthless post.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Iulia and Lucetta.

Iul. But say Lucetta (now we are alone) Would'st thou then counsaile me to fall in loue?

Luc. I Madam, so you stumble not vnheedfully.

Iul. Of all the faire resort of Gentlemen, That may day with your's conceiue me,

In thy opinion which is worthiest loue?

Luc. Please you repeat their names, ile shew my minde, According to my shallow simple skill.

Iul. What thinkst thou of the faire sir Eglamour?

Luc. As of a Knight, well-spoken, neat, and fine; But were I you he never should be mine.

Iu. What think'st thou of the rich Mercatio?

Lu. Well of his wealth; but of himselfe, so, so.

Iu. What think'st thou of the gentle Protheus?

Lu. Lord, Lord: to see what folly raignes in vs.

Iu. How now? what meanes this passion at his name?

Lu. Pardon deare Madam, 'tis a passing shame, That I (vnworthy body as I am) Should censure thus on lovely Gentlemen

Iu. Why not on Protheus, as of all the rest?

Lu. Then thus: of many good, I thinke him best.

Iul. Your reason?

Lu. I haue no other but a womans reason: I thinke him so, because I thinke him so.

Iul. And would'st thou haue me cast my loue on him?

Lu. I: if you thought your loue not cast away.

Iul. Why he, of all the rest, hath never mou'd me.

Lu. Yet he, of all the rest, I thinke best loues ye.

Iul. His little speaking, shewes his loue but small.

Lu. Fire that's closest kept, burnes most of all.

Iul. They doe not loue, that doe not shew their loue.

Lu. Oh, they loue least, that let men know their loue.

Iul. I would I knew his minde.

Lu. Peruse this paper Madam.

Iul. To Iulia: say, from whom?

Lu. That the Contents will shew.

Iul. Say, say: who gaue it thee?

Lu. Sir Valentines page; & sent I think from Protheus; He would haue given it you, but I being in the way, Did in your name receiue it: pardon the fault I pray.

Iul. Now (by my modesty) a goodly Broker: Dare you presume to harbour wanton lines? To whisper, and conspire against my youth? Now trust me, 'tis an office of great worth, And you an officer fit for the place: There, take the paper: see it be return'd, Or else returne no more into my sight.

Lu. To plead for loue, deserues more fee, then hate.

Iul. Will ye be gon?

Lu. That you may ruminate. Exit.

Iul. And yet I would I had ore-look'd the Letter; It were a shame to call her backe againe, And pray her to a fault, for which I chid her. What Foole is she, that knowes I am a Maid, And would not force the letter to my view? Since Maides, in modesty, say no, to that, Which they would haue the profferer construe, I. Fie, fie: how way-ward is this foolish loue; That (like a testie Babe) will scratch the Nurse, And presently, all humbled kisse the Rod? How churlishly, I chid Lucetta hence, When willingly, I would haue had her here? How angerly I taught my brow to frowne, When inward ioy enforc'd my heart to smile? My penance is, to call Lucetta backe And aske remission, for my folly past. What hoe: Lucetta.

Lu. What would your Ladiship.

Iul. Is't noone dinner time?

Lu. I would it were, That you might kill your stomacke on your meat,

And

And not vpon your Maid.
Iu. What is't that you
Tooke vp so gingerly?
Lu. Nothing.
Iu. Why did'st thou stoope then?
Lu. To take a paper vp, that I let fall.
Iul. And is that paper nothing?
Lu. Nothing concerning me.
Iul. Then let it lye, for those that it concernes.
Lu. Madam, it will not lye where it concernes,
Vnlesse it haue a false Interpreter.
Iul. Some loue of yours, hath writ to you in Rime.
Lu. That I might sing it (Madam) to a tune:
Giue me a Note, your Ladiship can sez.
Iul. At little by such toyes, as may be possible:
Best sing it to the tune of Light O, Loue.
Lu. It is too heauy for so light a tune.
Iu. Heauy? belike it hath some burden then?
Lu. Ist and melodious were it, would you sing it,
Iu. And why not you?
Lu. I cannot reach so high.
Iu. Let's see your Song
How now Minion?
Lu. Keepe tune there still; so you will sing it out:
And yet me thinkes I do not like this tune.
Iu You doe not?
Lu. No (Madam) tis too sharpe.
Iu. You (Minion) are too saucie.
Lu. Nay, now you are too flat;
And marre the concord, with too harsh a descant:
There wanteth but a Mease to fill your Song.
Iu. The mease is drownd with you vnruly base.
Lu. Indeede I bid the base for Proteus.
Iu. This babble shall not henceforth trouble me;
Here is a coile with protestation:
Goe, get you gone: and let the papers lye:
You would be fingring them, to anger me.
Lu. She makes it strange, but she would be best pleas'd
To be so angred with another Letter.
Iu. Nay, would I were so angred with the same:
Oh hatefull hands, to teare such loving words;
Iniurious Wasps, to feede on such sweet hony,
And kill the Bees that yeelde it, with your stings;
Ile kisse each seuerall paper, for amends:
Looke, here is writ, kinde Iulia: vnkinde Iulia,
As in reuenge of thy ingratitude,
I throw thy name against the bruzing-stones,
Trampling contemptuously on thy disdaine.
And here is writ, Loue wounded Proteus.
Poore wounded name: my bosome, as a bed,
Shall lodge thee till thy wound be throughly heal'd;
And thus I search it with a souersigne kisse.
But twice, or thrice, was Proteus written downe:
Be calme (good winde) blow not a word away,
Till I haue found each letter, in the Letter,
Except mine own name: That, some whirle-winde bearre
Vnto a ragged, fearefull, hanging Rocke,
And throw it thence into the raging Sea.
Loe, here in one line is his name twice writ:
Poore forlorne Proteus, passionate Proteus:
To the sweet Iulia: that ile tearre away:
And yet I will not, sith so prettily
He couples it, to his complaining Names;
Thus will I fold them, one vpon another;
Now kisse, embrace, contrand, doe what you will.
Lu. Madam: dinner is ready, and your father stayes.
Iu. Well, let vs goe.
Lu. What, shall these papers lye, like Tel-tales here?
Iu. If you respect them; best to take them vp.
Lu. Nay, I was taken vp, for laying them downe.
Yet here they shall not lye, for catching cold.
Iu. I see you haue a months minde to them.
Lu. I (Madam) you may say what sights you see;
I see things too, although you iudge I winke.
Iu. Come, come, will please you goe. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Antonio and Panthino, Protheus.

Ant. Tell me Panthino, what sad talke was that,
Wherewith my brother held you in the Cloyster?
Pan. 'Twas of his Nephew Proteus, your Sonne.
Ant. Why? what of him?
Pan. He wondred that your Lordship
Would suffer him, to spend his youth at home,
While other men, of slender reputation
Put forth their Sonnes, to seeke preferment out.
Some to the warres, to try their fortune there;
Some, to discouer Islands farre away:
Some, to the studious Vniuersities;
For any, or for all these exercises,
He said, that Proteus, your sonne, was meet;
And did request me, to importune you
To let him spend his time no more at home;
Which would be great impeachment to his age,
In having knowne no trauaile in his youth.
Ant. Nor need'st thou much importune me to that Whereon, this month I haue bin hamering.
I haue consider'd well, his loss of time,
And how he cannot be a perfect man,
Not being tryed, and tutored in the world:
Experience is by industry atchiev'd,
And perfected by the swift course of time:
Then tell me, whether were I best to send him?
Pan. I thinke your Lordship is not ignorant
How his companion, youthfull Valentine,
Attends the Emperour in his royall Court.
Ant. I know it well. (thither.
Pan. 'Twere good, I thinke, your Lordship sent him
There shall he practise Tilts, and Turnaments;
Heare sweet discourse, conuerse with Noble-men,
And be in eye of every Exercise
Worthy his youth, and nobleness of birth.
Ant. I like thy counsaile: well hast thou aduis'd:
And that thou mist perceiue how well I like it,
The execution of it shall make knowne;
Euen with the speediest expedition,
I will dispatch him to the Emperors Court.
Pan. To morrow, may it please you, Don Alphonso,
With other Gentlemen of good esteeme
Are iourneying, to salute the Emperor,
And to commend their seruices to his will.
Ant. Good company: with them shall Proteus go:
And in good time: now will we breake with him.
Pro. Sweet Loue, sweet loue, sweet life,
Here is her hand, the agent of her heart;
Here is her oath for loue, her honour pawne;

O that our Fathers would applaud our loues
To seale our happinesse with their consents.
Pro. Oh heauenly Iulia.
Ant. How now? What Letter are you reading there?
Pro. May't please your Lordship, 'tis a word or two
Of commendations sent from Valentine;
Deliuer'd by a friend, that came from him.
Ant. Lend me the Letter: Let me see what newes.
Pro. There is no newes (my Lord) but that he writes
How happily he lives, how well-belou'd,
And daily graced by the Emperor;
Wishing me with him, partner of his fortune.
Ant. And how stand you affected to his wish?
Pro. As one relying on your Lordships will,
And not depending on his friendly wish.
Ant. My will is something sorted with his wish:
Muse not that I thus suddenly proceed;
For what I will, I will, and there an end:
I am resolu'd, that thou shalt spend some time
With Valentinus, in the Emperors Court:
What maintenance he from his friends receiues,
Like exhibition thou shalt haue from me,
To morrow be in readinesse, to goe,
Excuse it not: for I am peremptory.
Pro. My Lord I cannot be so soone prouided,
Please you deliberate a day or two.
Ant. Look what thou want'st shalbe sent after thee:
No more of stay: to morrow thou mult goe;
Come on Panthino; you shall be imployd,
To hasten on his Expedition.
Pro. Thus haue I shund the fire, for feare of burning
And drench'd me in the sea, where I am drown'd.
I feard to shew my Father Iulia Letter,
Lest he should take exceptions to my loue,
And with the vantage of mine owne excuse
Hath he excepted most against my loue.
Oh, how this spring of loue resembleth
The uncertaine glory of an Aprill day,
Which now shewes all the beauty of the Sun,
And by and by a cloud takes all away.
Pan. Sir Protheus, your Fathers call's for you,
He is in haste, therefore I pray you go.
Pro. Why this it is: my heart accords thereto,
And yet a thousand times it answer's no.
Exeunt. Finis.

Actus secundus: Scæna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, Silvia.

Speed. Sir, your Gloue.
Valen. Not mine: my Gloues are on.
Sp. Why then this may be yours: for this is but one
Val. Ha? Let me see: I, gine it me, it's mine:
Sweet Ornament, that deckes a thing diuine,
Ah Silvia, Silvia.
Speed. Madam Silvia: Madam Silvia.
Val. How now Sirha?
Speed. She is not within hearing Sir.
Val. Why sir, who bad you call her?
Speed. Your worship sir, or else I mistoke.
Val. Well: you'l still be too forward.
Speed. And yet I was last chidden for being too slow.
Val. Goe to, sir, tell me: do you know Madam Silvia?
Speed. She thus your worship loues?
Val. Why, how know you that I am in loue?
Speed. Marry by these speciall markes: first, you haue learn'd (like Sir Protheus) to wreath your Armes like a Male-content: to relishs a Loue-song, like a Robin-red-breast: to walke alone like one that had the pestilence: to sigh, like a Schoole-boy that had lost his A. B. C. to weep like a yong wench that had buried her Grandam: to fast, like one that takes diet: to watch, like one that feares robbing: to speake puling, like a beggar at Hallow-Masse: You were wont, when you laughed, to crow like a cocke; when you walk'd, to walke like one of the Lions: when you fasted, it was presently after dinner: when you look'd sadly, it was for want of money: And now you are Metamorphis'd with a Mistris, that when I looke on you, I can hardly thinke you my Master.
Val. Are all these things perceiu'd in me?
Speed. They are all perceiu'd without ye.
Val. Without me? they cannot.
Speed. Without you? nay, that's certaine: for without you were so simple, none else would: but you are so without these follies, that these follies are within you, and shine through you like the water in an Vrinall: that not an eye that sees you, but is a Physician to comment on your Malady.
Val. But tell me: do'st thou know my Lady Silvia?
Speed. She that you gaze on so, as she sits at supper?
Val. Hast thou obserd'd that? euen she I meane.
Speed. Why sir, I know her not.
Val. Do'st thou know her by my gazing on her, and yet know'st her not?
Speed. Is she not hard-fauour'd, sir?
Val. Not so faire (boy) as well fauour'd.
Speed. Sir, I know that well enough.
Val. What dost thou know?
Speed. That shee is not so faire, as (of you) well-fauoured?
Val. I meane that her beauty is exquisite,
But her fauour infinite.
Speed. That's because the one is painted, and the other out of all count.
Val. How painted? and how out of count?
Speed. Marry sir, so painted to make her faire, that no man counts of her beauty.
Val. How esteem'st thou me? I account of her beauty.
Speed. You never saw her since she was deform'd.
Val. How long hath she beene deform'd?
Speed. Euer since you lou'd her.
Val. I haue lou'd her euer since I saw her,
And still I see her beautifull.
Speed. If you loue her, you cannot see her.
Val. Why?
Speed. Because Loue is blinde: O that you had mine eyes, or your owne eyes had the lights they were wont to haue, when you chidde at Sir Protheus, for going vngarter'd.
Val. What should I see then?
Speed. Your owne present folly, and her passing deformitie: for hee being in loue, could not see to garter his hose; and you, being in loue, cannot see to put on your hose. (ning
Val. Belike (boy) then you are in loue, for last mor-
You could not see to wipe my shooes.
Speed. True sir: I was in loue with my bed, I thanke you, you swing'd me for my loue, which makes mee the bolder bolder to chide you, for yours.

Val. In conclusion, I stand affected to her.

Speed. I would you were set, so your affection would cease.

Val. Last night she enjoyn'd me,
To write some lines to one she loues.

Speed. And have you?

Val. I haue.

Speed. Are they not lamely writt?

Val. No (Boy) but as well as I can do them.
Peace, here she comes.

Speed. Oh excellent motion; oh exceeding Puppet: Now will he interpret to her.

Val. Madam & Mistres, a thousand good-morrows.

Speed. Oh, 'give ye-good-ev'n: here's a million of manners.

Sil. Sir Valentine, and seruant, to you two thousand.

Speed. He should giue her interest: & she gives it him.

Val. As you inioynd me; I have writ your Letter
Vnto the secret, nameles friend of yours:
Which I was much vnwilling to proceed in,
But for my duty to your Ladiship. (done.

Sil. I thanke you (gentle Seruant) 'tis very Clerkly.

Val. Now trust me (Madam) it came hardly-off:
For being ignorant to whom it goes,
I writ at randome, very doubtfully.

Sil. Perchance you think too much of so much paine?

Val. No (Madam) so it stood you, I will write
(Please you commend) a thousand times as much:
And yet ——

Sil. A pretty period: well: I ghesse the sequell;
And yet I will not name it: and yet I care not.
And yet, take this againe: and yet I thanke you:
Meaning henceforth to trouble you no more.

Speed. And yet you will: and yet, another yet,

Val. What means your Ladiship?
Doe you not like it?

Sil. Yes, yes: the lines are very quaintly writ,
But (since vnwillingly) take them again.
Nay, take them.

Val. Madam, they are for you.

Sil. I, I: you writ them Sir, at my request,
But I will none of them: they are for you:
I would haue had them writ more mouingly:

Val. Please you, I'le write your Ladiship another.

Sil. And when it's writ: for my sake read it ouer,
And if it please you, so: if not: why so:

Val. If it please me, (Madam?) what then?

Sil. Why if it please you, take it for your labour;
And so good-morrow Seruant. Exit. Sil.

Speed. Oh I'lest vnkeene: inscrutable: inuisible,
As a nose on a mans face, or a Weathercocke on a steeple:
My Master sues to her: and she hath taught her Suitor,
He being her Pupill, to become her Tutor.
Oh excellent deuise, was there euer heard a better?
That my master being scribe,
To himselfe should writ the Letter?

Val. How now Sir?
What are you reasoning with your selfe?

Speed. Nay: I was rhyming: 'tis you y haue the reason.

Val. To doe what?

Speed. To be a Spokesman from Madam Siluia.

Val. To whom?

Speed. To your selfe: why, she woes you by a figure.

Val. What figure?

Speed. By a Letter, I should say

Val. Why she hath not writ to me?

Speed. What need she,
When shee hath made you write to your selfe?
Why, doe you not perceiue the iest?

Val. No, believe me.

Speed. No believing you indeed sir:
But did you perceiue her earnest?

Val. She gaue me none, except an angry word.

Speed. Why she hath given you a Letter.

Val. That's the Letter I writ to her friend.

Speed. And y letter hath she deliuer'd, & there an end.

Val. I would it were no worse.

Speed. Ile warrant you, 'tis as well:
For often haue you writ to her: and she in modesty,
Or else for want of idle time, could not againe reply,
Or feering els some messiger, y might her mind discouer
Her self hath taught her Loue himself, to write vnto her
All this I speak in print, for in print I found it. (loues.
Why muse you sir, 'tis dinner time.

Val. I haue dyn'd.

Speed. I, but hearken sir: though the Cameleon Loue can feed on the ayre, I am one that am nourish'd by my victuals: and would fame haue meate: oh bee not like your Mistresse, be moued, be moued. Exeunt.

Scæna secunda.

Enter Protheus, Iulia, Panthion.

Pro. Haue patience, gentle Iulia:

Iul. I must where is no remedy.

Pro. When possibly I can, I will returne.

Iul. If you turne not: you will return the sooner:
Keepe this remembrance for thy Iulia's sake.

Pro. Why then wee'll make exchange;
Here, take you this.

Iul. And seale the bargaine with a holy kisse.

Pro. Here is my hand, for my true constancies:
And when that houre o're-slips me in the day,
Wherein I sigh not (Iulia) for thy sake,
The next ensuing houre, some foule mischance
Torment me for my Loues forgetfulnesse:
My father staies my comming: answer not:
The tide is now; nay, not thy tide of teares,
That tide will stay me longer then I should,
Iulia, farewell: what, goes without a word?
I, so true loue should doe: it cannot speake,
For truth hath better deeds, than words to grace it.

Panth. Sir Protheus: you are staid for.

Pro. Goe: I come, I come
Alas, this parting strikes poore Louers dumbe.

Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Launce, Panthion.

Launce. Nay, 'twill bee this hour ere I haue done weeping: all the kinde of the Launces, haue this very fault: I haue receiu'd my proportion, like the prodigious

Sonne,

Seruant, and am going with Sir Protheus to the Imperiall Court: I think Crab my dog, be the sowrest natured dogge that liues: My Mother weeping: my Father wailing: my Sister crying: our Maid howling: our Cate wringing her hands, and all our house in a great perplexitie, yet did not this cruell-hearted Curre shedde one teare: he is a stone, a very pibble stone, and has no more pitty in him than a dogge: a Iew would haue wept to haue seene our parting: why my Grandsire hauing no eyes, looke you, wept her selfe blinde at my parting: nay, Ile shew you the manner of it. This shoe is my father: no, this left shoe is my father; no, no, this left shoe is my mother: nay, that cannot be so neyther: yes; it is so, it is so: it hath the worser sole: this shoe with the hole in it, is my mother: and this my father: a vengeance on't, there 'tis. Now sir, this staffe is my sister: sir, loobe you, she is as white as a lilly, and as small as a wand: this hat is Nan our maid: I am the dogge: no, the dogge is himselfe, and I am the dogge: oh, the dogge is me, and I am my selfe: I; so, so: now come I to my Father; Father, your blessing: now should not the shoe speake a word for weeping: now should I kisse my Father; well, hee weepes on: Now come I to my Mother: Oh that she could speake now, like a would-woman: well, I kisse her: why there 'tis; here's my mothers breath vp and downe: Now come I to my father; marke the moone she makes: now the dogge all this while sheds not a teare: nor speakes a word: but see how I lay the dust with my teares.

Panth. Launce, away, away: a Boord: thy Master is ship'd, and thou art to post after with oares: what's the matter? why weep'st thou man? away ass, you loose the Tide, if you tarry any longer.

Laun. It is no matter if the tide were lost, for it is the vnkindest Tide, that ever any man tide.

Panth. What's the vnkindest tide?

Lau. Why, he that's tide here, Crab my dog.

Pan. Tut, man: I mean thou'lt loose the flood, and in loosing the flood, loose thy voyage, and in loosing thy voyage, loose thy Master, and in loosing thy Master, loose thy seruice, and in loosing thy seruice: —— why dost thou stop my mouth?

Laun. For feare thou shouldst loose thy tongue.

Panth. Where should I loose my tongue?

Laun. In thy Tale.

Panth. In thy Taile.

Laun. Loose the Tide, and the voyage, and the Master, and the Seruice, and the tide: why man, if the Riuer were drie, I am able to fill it with my teares: if the wiode were downe, I could drive the boate with my sighes.

Panth. Come: come away man, I was sent to call thee.

Lau. Sir: call me what thou dar'st.

Pan. Wilt thou goe?

Laun. Well, I will goe.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Silvia, Thurio, Speed, Duke, Protheus.

Sil. Seruant.

Val. Mistris.

Spee. Master, Sir Thurio frowns on you.

Val. I Boy, it's for loue.

Spee. Not of you.

Val. Of my Mistresse then.

Spee. 'Twere good you knockt him.

Sil. Seruant, you are sad.

Val. Indeed, Madam, I seeme so.

Thu. Seeme you that you are not?

Val. Hap'ly I doe.

Thu. So doe Counterfeyts.

Val. So doe you.

Thu. What seeme I that I am not?

Val. Wise.

Thu. What instance of the contrary?

Val. Your folly.

Thu. And how quoat you my folly?

Val. I quoat it in your Ierkin.

Thu. My Ierkin is a doublet.

Val. Well then, Ile double your folly.

Thu. How?

Sil. What, angry, Sir Thurio, do you change colour?

Val. Giue him leaue, Madam, he is a kind of Camelion.

Thu. That hath more minde to feed on your blood, then liue in your ayre.

Val. You haue said Sir.

Thu. I Sir, and done too for this time.

Val. I know it wel sir, you alwaies end ere you begin.

Sil. A fine volly of words, gentlemen, & quickly shot off.

Val. 'Tis indeed, Madam, we thank the giuer.

Sil. Who is that Seruant?

Val. Your selfe (sweet Lady) for you gaue the fire, Sir Thurio borrows his wit from your Ladiships looke, And spends what he borrowes kindly in your company.

Thu. Sir, if you spend word for word with me, I shall make your wit bankrupt. (words,

Val. I know it well sir: you haue an Exchequer of And I think, no other treasure to giue your followers: For it appeares by their bare Liueries That they liue by your bare words.

Sil. No more, gentlemen, no more: Here comes my father.

Duke. Now, daughter Silvia, you are hard beset. Sir Valentine, your father is in good health, What say you to a Letter from your friends Of much good newes?

Val. My Lord, I will be thankfull, To any happy messenger from thence.

Duke. Know ye Don Antonio, your Countrimen?

Val. I, my good Lord, I know the Gentleman To be of worth, and worthy estimacion, And not without desert so well reputed.

Duke. Hath he not a Sonne?

Val. I, my good Lord, a Son, that well deserues The honor, and regard of such a father.

Duke. You know him well?

Val. I knew him as my selfe: for from our Infancie We haue conuerst, and spent our howres together, And though my selfe haue beene an idle Trewant, Omitting the sweet benefit of time To cloath mine age with Angel-like perfection: Yet hath Sir Protheus (for that's his name) Made vse, and faire aduantage of his daies: His yeares but yoog, but his experience old. His head vn-mellowed, but his Iudgement ripe And in a word (for far behinde his worth Comes all the praises that I now bestow.)

He is compleat in feature, and in minde,
With all good grace, to grace a Gentleman.
Duke. Beshrew me sir, but if he make this good
He is as worthy for an Emperesse loue,
As meet to be an Emperors Counsellor:
Well, Sir: this Gentleman is come to me
With Commendation from great Potentates,
And heere he meanes to spend his time a while,
I thinke 'tis no vn-welcome newes to you.
Val. Should I haue wish'd a thing, it had beene he.
Duke. Welcome him then according to his worth:
Valinine, I speake to you, and you Sir Thurio,
For Valentine, I need not cite him to it,
I will send him hither to you presently.
Val. This is the Gentleman I told your Ladiship
Had come along with me, but that his Mistresse
Did hold his eyes, lockt in her Christall lookes.
Sil. Be-like that now she hath enfranchis'd them
Vpon some other pawne for fealty.
Val. Nay sure, I thinke she holds them prisoners still.
Sil. Nay then he should be blind, and being blind
How could he see his way to seeke out you?
Val. Why Lady, Loue hath twenty paire of eyes.
Thur. They say that Loue hath not an eye at all.
Val. To see such Louers, Thurio, as you seele,
Vpon a homely object, Loue can winke.
Sil. Haue done, haue done: here comes ye gentleman.
Val. Welcome, dear Protheus: Mistris, I beseech you
Confirme his welcome, with some speciall fauor.
Sil. His worth is warrant for his welcome hether,
If this be he you oft haue wish'd to heare from.
Val. Mistris, it is: sweet Lady, entertaine him
To be my fellow-seruant to your Ladiship.
Sil. Too low a Mistres for so high a seruant.
Pro. Not so, sweet Lady, but too meane a seruant
To haue a looke of such a worthy a Mistresse.
Val. Leaue off discourse of disabilitie:
Sweet Lady, entertaine him for your Seruant.
Pro. My duties will I boast of, nothing else.
Sil. And duties never yet did want his meed.
Seruant, you are welcome to a worthiesse Mistresse.
Pro. Ile die on him that saies so but your selfe.
Sil. That you are welcome?
Pro. That you are worthiesse. (you.
Thur. Madam, my Lord your father wold speak with
Sil. I wait vpon his pleasure: Come Sir Thurio,
Goe with me: once more, new Seruant welcome;
Ile leaue you to confer of home affaires,
When you haue done, we looke too heare from you.
Pro. We'll both attend vpon your Ladiship.
Val. Now tell me: how do all from whence you came?
Pro. Your friends are wel, & haue the much commended.
Val. And how doe yours?
Pro. I left them all in health.
Val. How does your Lady? & how thriues your loue?
Pro. My tales of Loue were wont to weary you,
I know you ioy not in a Loue-discourse.
Val. I Protheus, but that life is alter'd now,
I haue done penance for contemning Loue,
Whose high emperious thoughts haue punish'd me
With bitter fasts, with penitentiall groanes,
With nightly teares, and daily hart-sore sighes,
For in reuenge of my contempt of loue,
Loue hath chas'd sleepe from my enthralled eyes,
And made them watchers of mine owne hearts sorrow.
O gentle Protheus, Loue's a mighty Lord,
And hath so humbled me, as I confesse
There is no wae to his correction,
Nor no his Seruice, no such ioy on earth:
Now, no discourse, except it be of loue:
Now can I breake my fast, dine, sup, and sleepe,
Vpon the very naked name of Loue.
Pro. Enough; I read your fortune in your eye:
Was this the Idoll, that you worship so?
Val. Euen She; and is she not a heauenly Saint
Pro. No; But she is an earthly Paragon.
Val. Call her diuine.
Pro. I will not flatter her.
Val. O flatter me: for Loue delights in praises.
Pro. When I was sick, you gaue me bitter pils,
And I must minister the like to you.
Val. Then speake the truth by her; if not diuine,
Yet let her be a principalitie,
Soueraigne to all the Creatures on the earth.
Pro. Except my Mistresse.
Val. Sweet: except not any,
Except thou wilt except against my Loue.
Pro. Haue I not reason to prefer mine owne?
Val. And I will help thee to prefer her too:
Shee shall be dignified with this high honour,
To beare my Ladies traine, lest the base earth
Should from her vesture chance to steale a kisse,
And of so great a fauor growing proud,
Disdaine to roote the Sommer-swelling flowre,
And make rough winter everlastingly.
Pro. Why Valentine, what Bragadisme is this?
Val. Pardon me (Protheus) all I can is nothing,
To her, whose worth, make other worthies nothing;
Shee is alone.
Pro. Then let her alone.
Val. Not for the world: why man, she is mine owne,
And I as rich in hauing such a Iewell
As twenty Seas, if all their sand were pearle,
The water, Nectar, and the Rocks pure gold.
Pardon me, that I doe not dinnerse on thee,
Because thou seest me doote vpon my loue:
My foolish Riuall that her Father likes
(Onely for his possessions are so huge)
Is gone with her along, and I must after,
For Loue (thou know'st is full of iealousie.)
Pro. But she loues you? (houre.
Val. I, and we are betrothd: nay more, our marriage
With all the cunning manner of our flight
Determin'd of: how I must climbe her window,
The Ladder made of Cords, and all the meane
Plotted, and 'greed on for my happinesse.
Good Protheus goe with me to my chamber,
In these affaires to aid me with thy counsaile.
Pro. Goe on before: I shall enquire you forth.
I must vnto the Road, to dis-embarque
Some necessaries, that I needs must vse,
And then Ile presently attend you.
Val. Will you make haste? Exit.
Pro. I will.
Euen as one heate, another heate expels,
Or as one naile, by strength drives out another.
So the remembrance of my former Loue
Is by a newer object quite forgotten,
It is mine, or Valentines praise?
Her true perfection, or my false transgression?
That makes me reasonable, to reason thus?
Shee is faire; and so is Iulia that I loue,

(Thus

(Thus I did loue, for now my loue is thaw'd,
Which like a waxen Image 'gainst a fire
Bears no impression of the thing it was.)
Me thinkes my zeale to Valentine is cold,
And that I loue him not as I was wont:
O, but I loue his Lady too too much,
And that is the reason I loue him so little.
How shall I dote on her with more deuoce,
That thus without deuice begin to loue her?
'Tis but her picture I haue yet beheld,
And that hath dazel'd my sonsons sight:
But when I looke on her perfections,
There is no reason, but I shall be blinde.
If I can checke my erring loue, I will,
If not, to compasse her I'le vse my skill.

Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Speed and Launce.

Speed. Launce, by mine honesty welcome to Padua.

Laun. Forswore not thy selfe, sweet youth, for I am not welcome. I reckon this alwaies, that a man is never vndone till he be hang'd, nor never welcome to a place, till some certaine shot be paid, and the Hostesse say welcome.

Speed. Come on you mad-cap: Ile ne the Ale-house with you presently; where, for one shot of fiue pence, thou shalt haue fiue thousand welcomes: But sirha, how did thy Master part with Madam Iulia?

Laun. Marry after they clos'd in earnest, they parted very fairly in iest.

Spee. But shall she marry him?

Laun. No.

Spee. How then? shall he marry her?

Laun. No, neither.

Spee. What, are they broken?

Laun. No; they are both as whole as a fish.

Spee. Why then, how stands the matter with them?

Laun. Marry thus, when it stands well with him, it stands well with her.

Spee. What are ye? are thou, I vnderstand thee not.

Laun. What a blockie art thou, thou can'st not? My staffe vnderstands me?

Spee. What thou said'st?

Laun. I and what I do too: looke thee, I'le but lean, and my staffe vnderstands me.

Spee. It stands vnder thee indeed.

Laun. Why, stand-vnder and vnder-stand is all one.

Spee. But tell me true, will't be a match?

Laun. Aske my dog, if he say I, it will: if he say no, it will: if he shake his taile, and say nothing, it will.

Spee. The conclusion is then, that it will.

Laun. Thou shalt never get such a secret from me, but by a parable.

Spee. 'Tis well that I get it so: but Launce, how sayest thou that that my master is become a notable Louer?

Laun. I never knew him otherwise.

Spee. Then how?

Laun. A notable Lubber: as thou reportest him to be.

Spee. Why, thou whoreson Asse, thou mistak'st me.

Laun. Why Foole, I meant not thee, I meant thy Master.

Spee. I tell thee, my Master is become a hot Louer.

Laun. Why, I tell thee, I care not, though he burne himselfe in Loue. If thou wilt go with me to the Ale-house; if not, thou art an Hebrew, a Iew, and not worth the name of a Christian.

Spee. Why?

Laun. Because thou hast not so much charity in thee as to go to the Ale with a Christian: Wilt thou go?

Spee. At thy seruice.

Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Protheus solus.

Pro. To leaue my Iulia, shall I be forsworne?
To loue faire Silvia, shall I be forsworne?
To wrong my friend, I shall be much forsworne.
And ev'n that Power which gaue me first my oath
Prouokes me to this three-fold perjurie.
Loue bad me sweare, and Loue bids me for-sweare;
O sweet-suggesting Loue, if thou hast sin'd,
Teach me (thy tempted subiect) to excuse it.
At first I did adore a twinkling Starre,
But now I worship a celestiall Sunne:
Vn-heedfull vowes may heedfully be broken,
And he wants wit, that wants resolu'd will,
To learne his wit, t'exchange the bad for better;
Fie, fie, vnreuerend tongue, to call her bad,
Whose soueraignty so oft thou hast preferd,
With twenty thousand soule-confirming oathes,
I cannot leaue to loue; and yet I doe:
But there I leaue to loue, where I should loue.
Iulia I loose, and Valentine I loose,
If I keepe them, I needs must loose my selfe:
If I loose them, thus finde I by their loss;
For Valentine, my selfe: for Iulia, Silvia.
I to my selfe am dearer than a friend,
For Loue is still most precious in itself,
And Silvia (witnesse heauen that made her faire)
Shewes Iulia but a swarthy Ethiope.
I will forget that Iulia is aliue,
Remembring that my Loue to her is dead.
And Valentine I'le hold an Enemie,
Ayming at Silvia as a sweeter friend.
I cannot crosse prouo confiance to my selfe,
Without some treachery vs'd to Valentine.
This night he meaneth with a Corded-ladder
To climbe celestiall Silvia's chamber window,
My selfe in counsaile his competitor.
Now presently I'le giue her father notice
Of their disguising and pretended flight:
Who (all inrag'd) will banish Valentine:
For Thurio he intends shall wed his daughter,
But Valentine being gone, I'le quickly crosse
By some sly tricke, blunt Thurio's dull proceeding.
Loue lend me wings, to make my purpose swift
As thou hast lent me wit, to plot this drift.

Exit.

Scœna septima.

Enter Iulia and Lucetta.

Iul Counsaile, Lucetta, gentle girle assist me,
And ev'ninkinde loue, I doe conjure thee,
Who art the Table wherein all my thoughts
Are visibly Character'd, and engrau'd,
To lesson me, and tell me some good meane
How with my honour I may vndertake
A iourney to my loving Protheus.
Luc. Alas, the way is wearisome and long
Iul. A true-deuoted Pilgrime is not weary
To measure Kingdomes with his feeble steps.
Much lesse shall she that hath Loues wings to flie,
And when the flight is made to one so deere,
Of such diuine perfection as Sir Protheus
Luc. Better forbeare, till Protheus make returne.
Iul. Oh, know'st ϑ not, his looks are my soules food?
Pitty the dearth that I haue pined in,
By longing for that food so long a time.
Didst thou but know the inly touch of Loue,
Thou wouldst as soone goe kindle fire with snow
As seeke to quench the fire of Loue with words.
Luc. I doe not seeke to quench your Loues hot fire,
But qualifie the fires extreame rage
Lest it should burne aboue the bounds of reason.
Iul. The more thou dam'st it vp, the more it burnes:
The Current that with gentle murmure glides
(Thou know'st) being stop'd, impatiently doth rage:
But when his faire course is not hindered,
He makes sweet musicke with th'enameld stones,
Giuing a gentle kisse to every sedge
He ouer-taketh in his pilgrimage.
And so by many winding nookes he straies
With willing sport to the wilde Ocean.
Then let me goe, and hinder not my course.
Ile be as patient as a gentle stream,
And make a pastime of each weary step,
Till the last step haue brought me to my Loue,
And there Ile rest, as after much turmoile
A blessed soule doth in Elizium.
Luc. But in what habit will you goe along?
Iul. Not like a woman, for I would preuent
The loose encounters of lascuious men
Gentle Lucetta, fit me with such weedes
As may beseeme some well reputed Page.
Luc. Why then your Ladiship must cut your haire.
Iul. No girle, Ile knit it vp in silken strings,
With twentie od-conceited true-loue knots:
To be fantastique, may become a youth
Of greater time then I shall shew to be. (ches-
Luc. What fashion (Madam) shall I make your bree-
Iul. That fits as well, as tell me (good my Lord)
What compasse will you weare your Farthingale?
Why cu'n what fashion thou best likes (Lucetta.)
Luc. You must needs haue th'e with a cod-peece (Ma
Iul. Out, out, (Lucetta) that will be ill fauoured. (dam)
Luc. A round hose (Madam) now's not worth a pin
Vnlesse you haue a cod-peece to stick pins on.
Iul. Lucetta, as thou lou'st me let me haue
What thou think'st meet, and is most mannerly.
But tell me (wench) how will the world repute me
For vndertaking so vnstaid a iourney?
I feare me it will make me scandalis'd.
Luc. If you thinke so, then stay at home, and go not
Iul. Nay, that I will not.
Luc. Then neuer dreame on Infamy, but go:
If Protheus like your iourney, when you come,
No matter who's displeas'd, when you are gone:
I feare me he will scarce be pleas'd with all.
Iul. That is the least (Lucetta) of my feare:
A thousand oathes, an Ocean of his teares,
And instances of infinite of Loue,
Warrant me welcome to my Protheus.
Luc. All these are seruants to deceitfull men.
Iul. Base men, that vse them to so base effect;
But truer starres did gouerne Protheus birth.
His words are bonds, his oathes are oracles,
His loue sincere, his thoughts immaculate,
His teares, pure messengers, sent from his heart,
His heart, as far from fraud, as heauen from earth.
Luc. Pray heau'n he proue so when you come to him.
Iul. Now, as thou lou'st me, do him not that wrong,
To beare a hard opinion of his truth:
Onely deserue my loue, by losing him,
And presently goe with me to my chamber
To take a note of what I stand in need of,
To furnish me vpon my longing iourney.
All that is mine I leaue at thy dispose,
My goods, my Lands, my reputation,
Onely, in lieu thereof, dispatch me hence:
Come; answere not: but to it presently,
I am impatient of my tarriance.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius, Scœna Prima.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus, Valentine, Launce, Speed.

Duke Sir Thurio, giue vs leaue (I pray) a while,
We haue some secrets to confer aboue.
Now tell me Protheus, what's your will with me?
Pro. My gracious Lord, that which I wold discouer,
The Law of friendship bids me to conceale,
But when I call to minde your gracious fauours
Done to me (vndeseruing as I am)
My duties pricks me on to vtter that
Which else, no worldly good should draw from me:
Know (worthy Prince) Sir Valentine my friend
This night intends to steale away your daughter:
My selfe am one made priuy to the plot.
I know you haue determin'd to bestow her
On Thurio, whom your gentle daughter hates,
And should she thus be stolne away from you,
It would be much vexation to your age.
Thus (for my duties sake) I rather chose
To crosse my friend in his intended drift,
Then (by concealing it) heap on your head
A pack of sorrowes, which would presse you downe
(Being vnpreuented) to your timelesse graue
Duke. Protheus, I thank thee for thine honest care,
Which to requite, command me while I liue.
This loue of theirs my selfe haue often seene
Haply when they haue nidg'd me fast asleepe,
And oftentimes haue purpos'd to forbid

Sir

Sir Valentine her companie, and my Court.
But fearing left my teslous eyne might erre,
And so (vnworthily) disgrace the man
(A rashnesse that I euer yet haue shun'd)
I gaue him gentle looks, thereby to finde
That which thy selfe hast now disclos'd to me.
And that thou maist perceiue my feare of this,
Knowing that tender youth is soone suggested,
I nightly lodge her in an vpper Towre,
The key whereof, my selfe haue euer kept:
And thence she cannot be conuey'd away.

Pro. Know (noble Lord) they haue deuis'd a meane
How he her chamber-window will ascend,
And with a Corded-ladder fetch her downe:
For which, the youthfull Louer now is gone,
And this way comes he with it presently.
Where (if it please you) you may intercept him.
But (good my Lord) doe it so cunningly
That my discouery be not aimed at:
For, loue of you, not hate vnto my friend,
Hath made me publisher of this pretence.

Duke. Vpon mine Honor, he shall neuer know
That I had any light from thee of this.

Pro. Adieu, my Lord, Sir Valentine is comming.

Duke. Sir Valentine, whether away so fast?

Val. Please it your Grace, there is a Messenger
That stayes to bear my Letters to my friends,
And I am going to deliuer them.

Duke. Be they of much import?

Val. The tenure of them doth but signifie
My health, and happy being at your Court.

Duke. Nay then no matter: stay with me a while,
I am to breake with thee of some affaires
That touch me neere: wherein thou must be secret.
'Tis not vnknown to thee, that I haue sought
To match my friend Sir Thurio, to my daughter.

Val. I know it well (my Lord) and fare the Match
Were rich and honourable: besides, the gentleman
Is full of Vertue, Bounty, Worth, and Qualities
Beseeming such a Wife, as your faire daughter:
Cannot your Grace win her to fancie him?

Duk. No, trust me, She is peeuish, sullen, froward,
Proud, disobedient, stubborne, lacking duty,
Neither regarding that she is my childe,
Nor fearing me, as if I were her father:
And my I say to thee, this pride of hers
(Vpon aduice) hath drawne my loue from her,
And where I thought the remnant of mine age
Should haue beene cherish'd by her child-like duzie,
I now am full resolu'd to take a wife,
And spend her out, to who will take her in:
Then let her beauty be her wedding dowre:
For me, and my possessions she esteemes not.

Val. What would your Grace haue me to do in this?

Duk. There is a Lady in Verona heere
Whom I affect: but she is nice, and coy,
And naught esteemes my aged eloquence.
Now therefore would I haue thee to my Tutor
(For long agone I haue forgot to court,
Besides the fashion of the time is chang'd)
How, and which way I may bestow my selfe
To be regarded in her sun-bright eye.

Val. Win her with gifts, if she respect not words,
Dumbe Iewels often in their silent kinde
More then quicke words, doe moue a womans minde.

Duk. But she did scorne a present that I sent her,

Val. A woman sometime scorns what best contents her.
Send her another: never giue her ore,
For scorne at first, makes after-loue the more.
If she doe frowne, 'tis not in hate of you,
But rather to beget more loue in you.
If she doe chide, 'tis not to haue you gone,
For why, the fooles are mad, if left alone.
Take no repulse, what euer she doth say,
For, get you gon, she doth not meane away.
Flatter, and praise, commend, extoll their graces:
Though ere so blacke, say they haue Angells faces,
That man that hath a tongue, I say is no man,
If with his tongue he cannot wind a woman.

Duk. But she I meane, is promis'd by her friends
Vnto a youthfull Gentleman of worth,
And kept seuerely from resort of men,
That no man hath access by day to her.

Val. Why then I would resort to her by night.

Duk. I, but the doores be locke, and keyes kept safe,
That no man hath recourse to her by night.

Val. What lets but one may enter at her window?

Duk. Her chamber is aloft, far from the ground,
And built so shelving, that one cannot climbe it
Without apparant hazard of his life.

Val. Why then a Ladder quaintly made of Cords
To cast vp, with a paire of anchoring hookes,
Would serue to scale another Hero's towre,
So bold Leander would aduenture it.

Duk. Now as thou art a Gentleman of blood
Aduise me, where I may haue such a Ladder.

Val. When would you vse it? pray sir, tell me that.

Duk. This very night; for Loue is like a childe
That longs for euery thing that he can come by.

Val. By seuen a clock, I'le get you such a Ladder.

Duk. But harke thee: I will goe to her alone,
How shall I best conuey the Ladder thither?

Val. It will be light (my Lord) that you may bear it
Vnder a cloake, that is of any length.

Duk. A cloake as long as thine will serue the turne?

Val. I my good Lord.

Duk. Then let me see thy cloake,
I'le get me one of such another length.

Val. Why any cloake will serue the turn (my Lord)

Duk. How shall I fashion me to weare a cloake?
I pray thee let me sooke thy cloake vpon me.
What Letter is this same? what's here? to Siluia?
And here an Engine fit for my proceeding.
I'le be so bold to breake the seale for once.

My thoughts do harbour with my Siluia nightly,
And slumbers they are to me, that send them flying.
Oh, could their Master come, and go as lightly,
Himselfe would lodge where (sweetes) they are lying.
My Herald Thoughts, in thy pouncksome rest-them,
While I (their King) that thither them importune
Do curse the grace, that with such grace hath blest them,
Because my selfe do want my seruants fortune.
I curse my selfe, for they are sent by me,
That they should harbour where their Lord should be.

What's here? Siluia, this night I will enfauorche thee.
Tis so: and heere's the Ladder for the purpose.
Why Phaeton (for thou art Merops sonne)
Wilt thou aspire to guide the heauenly Car?
And with thy daring folly burne the world?
Wilt thou reach stars, because they shine on thee?

Goe base Intruder, ouer-weening Slaue,
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And think we may patience, (more then thy desire)
Is priuiledge for thy departure hence.
Thanke me for this, more then for all the fauors
Which (all too-much) I haue bestowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then swiftest expedition
Will giue thee time to leaue our royall Court,
By heauen, my wrath shall farre exceed the loue
I ever bore my daughter, or thy selfe.
Be gone, I will not heare thy vaine excuse,
But as thou lou'ſt thy life, make speed from hence.
Val. And why not death, rather then liuing torment?
To die, is to be banisht from my selfe,
And Siluia is my selfe: banisht from her
Is selfe from selfe. A deadly banishment:
What light, is light, if Siluia be not seene?
What ioy is ioy, if Siluia be not by?
Vnlesse it be to thinke that she is by
And feed vpon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Siluia in the night,
There is no musicke in the Nightingale.
Vnlesse I looke on Siluia in the day,
There is no day for me to looke vpon.
She is my essence, and I leaue to be;
If I be not by her fair influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alue.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doome,
Tarry I heere, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life.
Pro. Run (boy) run, run, and seeke him out.
Lan. So-ho, so-ho
Pro. What seest thou?
Lan. Him we goe to finde,
There's not a haire on's head, but t'is a Valentine.
Pro. Valentine?
Val. No.
Pro. Who then? his Spirit?
Val. Neither.
Pro. What then?
Val. Nothing
Lan. Can nothing speake? Master, shall I strike?
Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?
Lan. Nothing.
Pro. Villaine, forbeare.
Lan. Why Sir, Ile strike nothing: I pray you.
Pro. Sirha, I say forbeare: friend Valentine, a word.
Val. My eares are stopt, & cannot hear good newes,
So much of bad already hath possest them.
Pro. Then in dumbe silence will I bury mine,
For they are both, vn-eareable, and bad.
Val. Is Siluia dead?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Siluia,
Hath she forsworne me?
Pro. No, Valentine.
Val. No Valentine, if Siluia haue forsworne me.
What is your newes?
Lan. Sir, there is a proclamation, & you are vanished.
Pro. That thou art banisht (oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Siluia, and from me thy friend.
Val. Oh, I haue fed vpon this woe already,
And now excesse of it will make me surfet.
Doth Siluia know that I am banisht?
Pro. I, I: and she hath offered to the doome
(Which vn-reuerst stands in effectuall force)
A Sea of melting pearle, which some call teares:
Those at her fathers churlish feete she tendered,
With them vpon her knees, her humble selfe,
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held vp,
Sad sighes, deepe groanes, nor silent-shedding teares
Could penetrate her vncompassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be ta'ne, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeale was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.
Val. No more: vnless the next word that thou speak'ſt
Haue some malignant power vpon my life:
If so: I pray thee breath it in mine eare,
As ending Anthems of my endleſſe dolor.
Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not helpe,
And study helpe for that which thou lament'ſt,
Time is the Nurse, and breeder of all good;
Here, if thou stay, thou canst not see thy loue;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a lowers staffe, walke hence with that
And manage it, against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliuer'd
Euen in the milke-white bosome of thy Loue.
The time now serues not to expostulate,
Come, Ile conuey thee through the City-gate.
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concerne thy Loue-affaires:
As thou lou'ſt Siluia (though not for thy selfe)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.
Val. I pray thee Lance, and if thou seest my Boy
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the North-gate.
Pro. Goe sirha, finde him out: Come Valentine.
Val. Oh my deere Siluia; hapleſse Valentine.
Lance. I am but a foole, looke you, and yet I haue the wit to think my Master is a kinde of a knaue: but that's all one, if he be but one knaue: He loues not now that knowes me to be in loue, yet I am in loue, but a Teame of horse shall not pluck that from me: nor who 'tis I loue: and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell my selfe: and yet 'tis a Milke-maid: yet 'tis not a maid: for shee hath had Gossips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Masters-maid, and serues for wages. She hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, which is much in a bare Christian: Heere is the Cote-log of her Condition. Imprimis. She can fetch and carry: why a horse can doe no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry, therefore is shee better then a Iade. Item. She can milke, looke you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.
Speed. How now Signior Lance? what newes with your Mastership?
La. With my Mastership? why, it is at Sea:
Sp. Well, your old vice still: mistake the wordes what newes then in your paper?
La. The black'ſt newes that euer thou heard'ſt.
Sp. Why man? how blacke?
La. Why, as blacke as Inke.
Sp. Let me read them?
La. Fie on thee Inke-head, thou canst not read.
Sp. Thou lyest: I can.
La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?
Sp. Marry,

Sp. Marry, the son of my Grand-father.

La. Oh illiterate loyterer; it was the sonne of thy Grand-mother: this proues that thou canst not read.

Sp. Come sooke, come: try me in thy paper.

La. There, and S. Nicholas be thy speed.

Sp. Imprimis she can milke.

La. I that she can.

Sp. Item, she brewes good Ale.

La. And thereof comes the prouerbe: (Blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale.)

Sp. Item, she can sowe.

La. That's as much as to say (Can she so?)

Sp. Item she can knit.

La. What makes a man care for a sock with a wench, When she can knit him a stocke?

Sp. Item, she can wash and scoure.

La. A speciall vertue: for then shee neede not be wash'd, and scoour'd.

Sp. Item, she can spin.

La. Then may I set the world on wheeles, when she can spin for her liuing.

Sp. Item, she hath many nameless vertues.

La. That's as much as to say Bastard-vertues: that indeede know not their fathers; and therefore haue no names.

Sp. Here follow her vices.

La. Close at the heeles of her vertues.

Sp. Item, shee is not to be fasting in respect of her breath.

La. Well: that fault may be mended with a breakfast: read on.

Sp. Item, she hath a sweet mouth.

La. That makes amends for her soure breath.

Sp. Item, she doth talke in her sleepe.

La. It's no matter for that; so shee sleepe not in her talke.

Sp. Item, she is slow in words.

La. Oh villaine, that set this downe among her vices; To be slow in words, is a woomans only vertue.
I pray thee out with't, and place it for her chiefe vertue.

Sp. Item, she is proud.

La. Out with that too:
It was Eue legacie, and cannot be t'ake from her.

Sp. Item, she hath no teeth.

La. I care not for that neither: because I loue crusts.

Sp. Item, she is curst.

La. Well: the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Sp. Item, she will often praise her liquor.

La. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Sp. Item, she is too liberall.

La. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ downe she is slow of: of her purse, shee shall not, for that ile keepe shut: Now, of another thing shee may, and that cannot I helpe. Well, proceede.

Sp. Item, shee hath more haire then wit, and more faults then haires, and more wealth then faults.

La. Stop there: Ile haue her: she was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last Article: rehearse that once more.

Sp. Item, she hath more haire then wit.

La. More haire then wit: it may be, shee prone is: The cover of the fait, hides the fait, and therefore it is more then the fait; the haire that couers the wit, is more then the wit; for the greater hides the lesse: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then haires.

La. That's monstrous: oh that that were out.

Sp. And more wealth then faults.

La. Why that word makes the faults gracious: Well, ile haue her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.

Sp. What then?

La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master staies for thee at the North gate.

Sp. For me?

La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath staid for a better man then thee.

Sp. And must I goe to him?

La. Thou must run to him; for thou hast staid so long, that going will scarce serue the turne.

Sp. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox of your loue Letters.

La. Now will he be swing'd for reading my Letter; An vnmannerly slaue, that will thrust himselfe into secrets: Ile after, to reioyce in the boyes correctio. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus.

Du. Sir Thurio, feare not, but that she will loue you
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Th. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most,
Forswore my company, and rail'd at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Du. This weake impresse of Loue, is as a figure
Trenched in ice, which with an houres heate
Dissolues to water, and doth loose his forme.
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthlesse Valentine shall be forgot.
How now sir Protheus, is your countriman
(According to our Proclamation) gon?

Pro. Gon, my good Lord.

Du. My daughter takes his going grieuously?

Pro. A little time (my Lord) will kill that griefe.

Du. So I beleeue: but Thurio thinkes not so:
Protheus, the good conceit I hold of thee,
(For thou hast showne some signe of good desert)
Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer then I prone loyall to your Grace,
Let me not liue, to looke vpon your Grace.

Du. Thou know'st how willingly, I would effect
The match betweene sir Thurio, and my daughter?

Pro. I doe my Lord.

Du. And also, I thinke, thou art not ignorant
How she opposes her against my will?

Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.

Du. Loud peuersly, she perseuers so:
What might we doe to make the girle forget
The loue of Valentine, and loue sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is, to slander Valentine,
With falsehood, cowardize, and poore descent:
Three things, that women highly hold in hate.

Du. I, but she'll thinke, that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. I, if his enemy deliuer it.
Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken
By one, whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Du. Then you must vndertake to slander him.

Pro.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to doe:
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being intreated to it by your friend.
Pro. You houe preuail'd (my Lord) if I can doe it
By ought that I can speake in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue loue to him:
But say this weede her loue from Valentine,
It followes not that she will loue sir Thurio.
Th. Therefore, as you vnwinde her loue from him;
Least it should ravell, and be good to none,
You must prouide to bottome it on me:
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As you, in worth dispraise, sir Valentine.
Du. And Protheus, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already loues firme votary,
And cannot soone reuolt, and change your minde.
Vpon this warrant, shall you haue access,
Where you, with Silvia, may conferre at large
For she is lampish, heavy, mellancholly,
And (for your friends sake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perswasion,
To hate yong Valentine, and loue my friend.
Pro. As much as I can doe, I will effect:
But you sir Thurio, are not sharpe enough:
You must lay Lime, to tangle her desires
By wafefull Sonnets, whose composed Rimes
Should be full fraught with seruiceable vowes.
Du. I, much is the force of heauen-bred Poesie.
Pro. Say that vpon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your teares, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your inke be dry: and with your teares
Moist it againe: and frame some feeling line,
That may discouer such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute, was strung with Poets sinewes,
Whose golden touch could soften steele and stones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leviathans
Forsake vnsounded deepes, to dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet Consort; To their Instruments
Tune a deploring dumpe: the nights dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grieuance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Du. This discipline, showes thou hast bin in loue
Th. And thy advice, this night, ile put in practise.
Therefore, sweet Protheus, my direction-giuer,
Let vs into the City presently
To sort some Gentlemen, well skil'd in Musicke.
I haue a Sonnet, that will serue the turne
To glue the on-set to thy good advise.
Du. About it Gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait vpon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certaine Out-lawes.
1. Out-l. Fellowes, stand fast: I see a passenger.
2. Out. If there be ten, shrinke not, but down with 'em.
3. Out. Stand sir, and throw vs what you haue about 'ye.
If not: we'll make you sit, and rifle you.
Sp. Sir we are vndone; these are the Villaines
That all the Trauailers doe feare so much.
Val. My friends.
1. Out. That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace: we'll heare him.
3. Out. I by my beard will we: for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know that I haue little wealth to loose;
A man I am, crost'd with adversitie:
My riches, are these poore habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I haue.
2. Out. Whether trauell you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Milleine.
3. Out. Haue you long sojourn'd there? (stand,
Val. Some sixteene moneths, and longer might haue
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2. Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kil'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I slew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.
1. Out. Why ner repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banisht for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doome.
2. Out. Haue you the Tongues?
Val. My youthfull trauaile, therein made me happy,
Or else I often had beene often miserable.
3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin Hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wilde faction.
1. Out. We'll haue him: Sirs, a word.
Sp. Master, be one of them:
It's an honourable kinde of theevery.
Val. Peace villaine.
2. Out. Tell vs this: haue you any thing to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of vs are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of vngouern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awfull men.
My selfe was from Verona banished,
For practising to steale away a Lady,
And heire and Neece, slide vnto the Duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I stab'd vnto the heart.
1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawlesse lives;
And partly seeing you are beautifide
With goodly shape; and by your owne report,
A Linguist, and a man of such perfection,
As we doe in our quality much want.
2. Out. Indeede because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, aboue the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our Generall?
To make a vertue of necessity,
And live as we doe in this wildernesse?
3. Out. What saist thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say I, and be the captaine of vs all:
We'll doe thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Loue thee, as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out. But if thou scorne our curtesie, thou dyest.
2. Out. Thou shalt not lose, so bring what we haue of.
Val. I take your offer, and will live with you, (sfer'd.
Prouided that you do no outrages
On silly women, or poore passengers.
3. Out. No, we detest such vile base practises.
Come, goe with vs, we'll bring thee to our Crewes,
And show thee all the Treasure we haue got;
Which, with our selues, all rest at thy disposé. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Iulia, Host, Musitian, Siluia.

Pro. Already haue I bin false to Valentine,
And now I must be as vnsaft to Thurio,
Vnder the colour of commending him,
I haue accesse my owne loue to prefer.
But Siluia is too faire, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthlesse gifts;
When I protest true loyalty to her,
Shewes me with my falsehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vowes,
She bids me thinke how I haue bin forsworne
In breaking faith with Iulia, whom I lou'd;
And notwithstanding all her sodaine quipe,
The kisse whereof would quell a louers hope:
Yet (Spaniel-like) the more she spurnes my loue,
The more it growes, and fawneth on her still;
But here comes Thurio; now must we to her window,
And giue some euening Musique to her eare.
Th. How now, sir Protheus, are you crept before vs?
Pro. I gentle Thurio, for you know that loue
Will creepe in seruice, where it cannot goe.
Th. I, but I hope, Sir, that you loue not here.
Pro. Sir, but I doe: or else I would be hence.
Th. Who, Siluia?
Pro. I, Siluia, for your sake.
Th. I thanke you for your owne: Now Gentlemen
Let's tune: and to it lustily a while.
Host. Now, my yong guest, me thinks your' allycholly
I pray you why is it?
Iu. Marry (mine Host) because I cannot be merry.
Host. Come, we'll loue you merry: ile bring you where you shall heare Musique, and see the Gentleman that you ask'd for.
Iu. But shall I heare him speake.
Host. I that you shall.
Iu. That will be Musique.
Host. Harke, harke.
Iu. Is he among these?
Host. I: but peace, let's heare'm.

Song. Who is Siluia? what is she?
That all our Swaines commend her?
Holy, faire, and wise is she,
The heauens such grace did lend her,
that she might admired be.
Is she kinde as she is faire?
For beauty lines with kindnesse:
Loue doth to her eyes repaire,
To helpe him of his blindnesse:
And being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Siluia, let vs sing,
That Siluia is excellent;
She excels each mortall thing
Vpon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let vs Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you sadder then you were before;
How doe you, man? the Musicke likes you not.
Iu. You mistake: the Musician likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
Iu. He plaies false (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings.
Iu. Not so: but yet
So false that he grieues my very heart-strings.
Ho. You haue a quicke eare (heart.
Iu. I, I would I were deafe: it makes me haue a slow
Ho. I perceiue you delight not in Musique.
Iu. Not a whit, when it iars so.
Ho. Harke, what fine change is in the Musique.
Iu. I: that change is the spight.
Ho. You would haue them alwaies play but one thing.
Iu. I would alwaies haue one play but one thing.
But Host doth this Sir Protheus, that we talke on,
Often resort vnto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce his man told me;
He lou'd her out of all nicke.
Iu. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to seeke his dog, which to morrow, by his Masters command, hee must carry for a present to his Lady.
Iu. Peace, stand aside, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, feare not you, I will so plead,
That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meete we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good eu'n to your Ladiship.
Sil. I thanke you for your Musique (Gentlemen)
Who is that that spake?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth,
You would quickly learne to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentle Lady) and your Seruant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compasse yours.
Sil. You haue your wish: my will is euen this,
That presently you hie you home to bed:
Thou subtile, periur'd, false, disloyall man:
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitlesse,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That has't deceiu'd so many with thy vowes?
Returne, returne and make thy loue amends:
For me (by this pale queene of night I sweare)
I am so farre from granting thy request,
That I despise thee, for thy wrongfull suite,
And by and by intend to chide my selfe,
Euen for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (sweet loue) that I did loue a Lady,
But she is dead.
Iu. 'Twere false, if I should speake it;
For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine thy friend
Survives; to whom (thy selfe art witnesse)
I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd
To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.

Pro. I likewise heare that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I; for in her grave
Assure thy selfe, my loue is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me take it from the earth.
Sil. Goe to thy Ladies grave and call hers thence,
Or at the least, in hers, sepulcher thine.
Iul. He heard not that.
Pro. Madam: if your heart be so obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your Picture for my loue,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that ile speake, to that ile sigh and weepe:
For since the substance of your perfect selfe
Is else deuoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow, will I make true loue.
Iul. If 't were a substance you would sure deceiue it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.
Sil. I am very loath to be your Idoll Sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadowes, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and ile send it:
And so, good rest.
Pro. As wretches haue ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne.
Iul. Host, will you goe?
Ho. By my hallidome, I was fast asleepe.
Iul. Pray you, where lies Sir Protheus?
Ho. Marry, at my house:
Trust me, I thinke 'tis almost day.
Iul. Not so: but it hath bin the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the most heauiest.

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Silua.

Eg. This is the houre that Madam Silua
Entreated me to call, and know her minde
There's some great matter she'ld employ me in.
Madam, Madam.
Sil. Who cals?
Eg. Your seruant, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiships command.
Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thousand times good morrow.
Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your selfe:
According to your Ladiships impose,
I am thus early come, to know what seruice
It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. Oh Eglamore, thou art a Gentlemen:
Thinke not I flatter (for I swore I doe not)
Valiant, wise, remorse-full, well accomplish'd,
Thou art not ignorant what deere good will
I beare vnto the banish'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vaine Thurio (whom my very soule abhor'd.)
Thy selfe hast loe'd, and I haue heard thee say
No griefe did euer come so neere thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-loue dide;
Vpon whose Grave thou vow'dst pure chastitie:
Sir Eglamore: I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where I heare, he makes abroad;
And for the waies are dangerous to passe,
I doe desire thy worthy company,
Vpon whose faith and honor, I repose.
Vrge not my fathers anger (Eglamore)
But thinke vpon my griefe (a Ladies griefe)
And on the iustice of my flying hence,
To keepe me from a most vnholy match,
Which heauen and fortune still rewards with plagues.
I doe desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrowes, as the Sea of sands,
To beare me company, and goe with me:
If not, to hide what I haue said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Egl. Madam, I pitty much your grieuances,
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,
I give consent to goe along with you,
Wreaking as little what beseemeth me,
As much, I wish all good befortune you.
When will you goe?
Sil. This euening comming.
Eg. Where shall I meete you?
Sil. At Friar Patrickes Cell,
Where I intend holy Confession.
Eg. I will not faile your Ladiship:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)
Sil. Good morrow, kinde Sir Eglamore. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Launce, Protheus, Iulia, Silvia.

Lau. When a mans seruant shall play the Curre with him (looke you) it goes hard: one that I brought vp of a puppy: one that I saw'd from drowning, when three or foure of his blinde brothers and sisters went to it: I have taught him (even as one would say precisely, thus I would teach a dog) I was sent to deliver him, as a pre sent to Mistris Silvia, from my Master; and I came no sooner into the dyning-chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and steales her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keepe himselfe in all compa nies: I would haue (as one should say) one that takes vp on him to be a dog indeede, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, to take a fault vpon me that he did, I thinke verily he had bin hang'd for 't: sure as I liue he had suffer'd for 't: you shall iudge. Hee thrusts me himselfe into the company of three or foure gentlemen-like-dogs, vnder the Dukes table: he had not bin there (blesse the marke) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him: out with the dog (sayes one) what cur is that (sayes another) whip him out (sayes the third) hang him vp (sayes the Duke.) I hauing been acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogges: friends (quoth I) you meane to whip the dog: I marry doe I (quoth he) you doe him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Masters would doe this for his Seruant? nay, ile be sworne I have sat in the stockes, for puddings he hath stolne, otherwise he had bin executed: I haue stood on the Pilloric for Geese he hath kil'd, otherwise he had suffered for 't: thou think'st not of this now: nay, I remember the trickie you serv'd me, when I tooke my leaue of Madam Silvia: did not nor I bid thee still attendme, and doe as I doe; when did'st thou see me heave up my leg, and make water against a Gentlewomans farthingale? did'st thou ever see me doe such a trick?

Pro. Sebastian is thy name: I like thee well,
And will employ thee in some service presently.

Iu. In what you please, ile doe what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.
How now you whor-son peasant,
Where have you bin these two dayes loytering?

La. Marry Sir, I carried Mistris Iulias the dogge you bad me.

Pro. And what saies she to my little Iewell?

La. Marry she saies your dog was a cur, and tels you curtish thanks is good enough for such a present.

Pro. But she receiu'd my dog?

La. No indeede did she not:
Here have I brought him backe againe.

Pro. What, hadst thou offer her this from me?

La. I Sir, the other Squirrell was stolne from me
By the Hungrynum boyes in the market place.
And then I offer'd her mine owne, who is a dog
As big as ten of yours, & therefore the gift, the greater.

Pro. Goe, get thee hence, and finde my dog againe,
Or neere returne againe into my sight.
Away, I say: stayest thou to vexe me here;
A Slaue, that still an end, turnes me to shame:
Sebastian, I have entertained thee,
Partly that I have neede of such a youth,
That can with some discretion doe my businesse:
For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish Lowt,
But chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaviour,
Which (if my Augury deceive me not)
Witnesse good bringing up, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thee, for this I entertaine thee.
Go presently, and take this Ring with thee,
Deliver it to Madam Iulia;
She lou'd me well, deliver'd it to me

Iul. It seemes you lou'd not her, not leave her token:
She is dead belike!

Pro. Not so: I thinke she lives.

Iul. Alas.

Pro. Why do'st thou cry alas?

Iul. I cannot choose but pity her.

Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pitty her?

Iul. Because, methinkes that she lou'd you as well
As you do loue your Lady Iulia:
She dreames on him, that has forgot her loue,
You dreame on her, that cares not for your loue.
To pitty Loue, should be so contrary
And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: goe, take that Ring, and there withall
This Letter; tell her chamber: Tell my Lady,
I stand to the promise for her heavenly Picture:
Your message done, hye home vnto my chamber,
Where thou shalt finde me sad, and solitarie.

Iul. How many women would doe such a message?
Alsupose Protheus have half mourtain'd
A Fox, to be the Shepheard of thy Lambs,
Alas, poore mouse, why doe I pitty him
That with his very heart despiseth me?
Because he loues her, he despiseth me,
Because I loue him, I must pitty him.
This Ring I gaue him, when he parted from me,
To bind him to remember my good will
And now am I (vnhappy Messenger)
To plead for that, which I would not obtaine,
To carry that, which I would have refus'd
To praise his faith, which I would have disprais'd.
I am my Masters true confirmed Loue,
But cannot be true seruant to my Master,
Vnlesse I prove false traitor to my selfe
Yet will I woe for him, but yet so coldly,
As (heaven it knowes) I would not have him speed.
Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my meane
To bring me where to speake with Madam Iulia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?

Iul. If you be she, I doe intreat your patience
To heare me speake the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Iul. From my Master, Sir Protheus, Madam.

Sil. Oh: he sends you for a Picture?

Iul. I, Madam.

Sil. Vrsula, bring my Picture there,
Goe, give your Master this: tell him from me
One Iulia, that his changing thoughes forget
Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.

Iul. Madam, please you peruse this Letter;
Pardon me (Madam) I have vnadvis'd
Deliver'd you a paper that I should not;
This is the Letter to your Ladiship.

Sil. I pray thee let me looke on that againe.

Iul. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.

Sil. There, hold:
I will not looke vpon your Masters lines.
I know they are stuft with protestations,
And full of new-found oathes, which he will breake
As easily as I doe teare his paper.

Iul. Madam, he sends your Ladiship this Ring.

Sil. The more shame for him, that he sends it me;
For I have heard him say a thousand times,
His Iulia gaue it him, at his departure
Though his false finger have prophan'd the Ring,
Mine shall not doe his Iulia so much wrong.

Iul. She thankes you.

Sil. What sai'st thou?

Iul. I thanke you Madam, that you tender her:
Poore Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much.

Sil. Do'st thou know her?

Iul. Almost as well as I doe know my selfe.
To think vpon her woes, I doe protest
That I have wept a hundred severall times.

Sil. Belike she thinks that Protheus hath forsook her?

Iul. I think she doth: and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing faire?

Iul. She hath bin fairer (Madam) then she is,
When she did think my Master lou'd her well;
She, in my judgement, was as faire as you.
But since she did neglect her looking-glasse,
And threw her Sun-expelling Masque away,
The ayre hath staru'd the roses in her cheeks,
And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as blacke as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Iul. About my stature: for at Pentecost,
When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,
Our youth got me to play the womans part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Iulia's gowne,
Which serued me as fit, by all mens judgements,
As if the garment had bin made for me:
Therefore I know she is about my height,
And at that time I made her weepe a good,

For:

For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam) 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Theseus periury, and vnruft flight;
Which I so liuely acted with my teares:
That my poore Mistris moued therewithall,
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas (poore Lady) desolate, and left;
I weepe my selfe to thinke vpon thy words.
Here youth: there is my purse; I gue thee this (well.
For thy sweet Mistris sake, because thou loe'st her. Fare-
Iul. And she shall thanke you for't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull. (her.
I hope my Masters suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my Mistris loue so much.
Alas, how loue can trifle with it selfe:
Here is her Picture: let me see, I thinke
If I had such a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as louely, as is this of hers:
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Vnlesse I flatter with my selfe too much.
Her haue is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow,
If that be all the difference in his loue,
Ile get me such a couloun'd Perrywig:
Her eyes are grey as glasse, and so are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in my selfe?
If this fond Loue, were not a blinded god.
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow vp,
For 'tis thy riuall: O thou senceless forme,
Thou shalt be worship'd, kiss'd, Loo'd, and ador'd;
And were there sence in his Idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
Ile vse thee kindly, for thy Mistris sake
That vs'd me so: or else by Ioue, I vow,
I should haue scratch'd out your vnseeing eyes,
To make my Master out of loue with thee. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Eglamoure, Siluia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the westerne skie,
And now it is about the very houre
That Siluia, at Fryer Patricks Cell should meet me,
She will not faile; for Louers breake not houres,
Vnlesse it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes: Lady a happy euening.
Sil. Amen, Amen: goe on (good Eglamoure)
Out at the Posterne by the Abbey wall;
I feare I am attended by some Spies.
Egl. Feare not: the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recouer that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Protheus, Iulia, Duke.

Th. Sir Protheus, what saies Siluia to my suit?
Pro. Oh Sir, I finde her milder then she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What? that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little. (der.
Thu. Ile weare a Boote, to make it somewhat rou-
Pro. But loue will not be spurd to what it loathes.
Thu. What saies she to my face?
Pro. She saies it is a faire one.
Thu. Nay then the wanton lyes: my face is blacke.
Pro. But Pearles are faire; and the old saying is,
Blacke men are Pearles, in beauteous Ladies eyes.
Thu. 'Tis true, such Pearles as put out Ladies eyes.
For I had rather winke, then looke on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when you talke of war.
Thu. But well, when I discourse of loue and peace.
Iul. But better indeede, when you hold you peace.
Thu. What sayes she to my valour?
Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Iul. She needes not, when she knowes it cowardice.
Thu. What saies she to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriu'd.
Iul. True: from a Gentlemen, to a foole.
Thu. Considers she my Possessions?
Pro. Oh, I: and pitties them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Iul. That such an Asse should owe them.
Pro. That they are out by Lease.
Iul. Here comes the Duke.
Du. How now sir Protheus; how now Thurio?
Which of you saw Eglamoure of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Not I.
Du. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. Why then
She's fled vnto that peasant, Valentine,
And Eglamoure is in her Company:
'Tis trust for Frier Lawrence met them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he knew well: and guess'd that it was she,
But being mask'd, he was not sure of it.
Besides she did intend Confession
At Patricks Cell this euen, and there she was not.
These hilthoods confirme her flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you stand, not to discourse,
But mount you presently, and meete with me
Vpon the rising of the Mountaine foote
That leads toward Mantua, whether they are fled:
Dispatch (sweet Gentlemen) and follow me.
Thu. Why this is it, to be a peeuish Girle,
That flies her fortune when it followes her:
Ile after; more to be reueng'd on Eglamoure,
Then for the loue of reck-lesse Siluia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Siluia loue
Then hate of Eglamoure that goes with her.
Iul. And I will follow, more to crosse that loue
Then hate for Siluia, that is gone for loue. Exeunt.

Scœna Tertia.

Siluia, Out-lawes.

1. Out. Come, come be patient:

We must bring you to our Captaine.

Sil. A thousand more mischances then this one Haue learn'd me how to brooke this patiently.

2 Out. Come, bring her away.

1 Out. Where is the Gentleman that was with her?

3 Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run vs. But Moyses and Valerius follow him: Goe thou with her to the West end of the wood, There is our Captaine: We'll follow him that's fled, The Thicket is before, he cannot scape.

1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captains cage. Feare not: he beares an honourable minde, And will not vse a woman lawlesly.

Sil. O Valentine: this I endure for thee.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Proteus, Siluia, Iulia, Duke, Thurio, Out-lawes.

Val. How vile doth breed a habit in a man? This shadowy desert, vnfrequented woods I better brooke then flourishing peopled Townes: Here can I sit alone, vn-seene of any, And to the Nightingales complaining Notes Tune my distresses, and record my woes. O thou that dost inhabit in my breft, Leaue not the Mansion so long Tenant-lesse, Left growing ruinous, the building fall, And leaue no memory of what it was, Repaire me, with thy presence, Siluia: Then gentle Nimph, cherish thy forlorne swaine. What hallowing, and what stir is this to day? These are my mates, that make their wills their Law, Haue some vnhappy passenger in chace; They loue me well: yet I haue much to doe To keepe them from vncivill outrages. Withdraw thee Valentine: who's this comes heere?

Pro. Madam, this seruice I haue done for you (Though you respect not aught your seruant doth) To hazard life, and rescue you from him, That would haue forc'd your honour, and your loue, Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one faire looke: (A smaller boone then this I cannot beg, And less then this, I am sure you cannot give)

Val. How like a dreame is this? I see, and heare: Loue, lend me patience to forbeare a while.

Sil. O miserable, vnhappy that I am.

Pro. Vnhappy were you (Madam) ere I came: But by my coming, I haue made you happy.

Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most vnhappy.

Iul. And me, when he approcheth to your presence.

Sil. Had I beene seized by a hungry Lion, I would haue beene a breakfast to the Beast, Rather then haue false Proteus rescue me: Oh heauen be iudge how I loue Valentine, Whose life's as tender to me as my soule, And full as much (for more there cannot be) I doe detest false perfut'd Proteus: Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.

Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death Would Loue vndergoe, for one calme looke: Oh tis the curse in Loue, and still approu'd When women cannot loue, where they're belou'd.

Sil. When Proteus cannot loue, where he's belou'd: Read ouer Iulia's heart, (thy first best Loue) For whose deare sake, thou didst then rend thy faith Into a thousand oathes; and all those oathes, Descended into perjury, to loue me. Thou hast no faith left now, vnlesse thou'dst two, And that's farre worse then none: better haue none. Then plurall faith, which is too much by one: Thou Counterfeyt, to thy true friend.

Pro. In Loue, Who respects friend?

Sil. All men but Proteus.

Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of mouing words Can no way change you to a milder forme: Ile woo you like a Souldier, at armes end, And loue you gainst the nature of Loue: force ye.

Sil. Oh heauen.

Pro. Ile force thee yeeld to my desire.

Val. Ruffian: let goe that rude vncisill touch, Thou friend of an ill fashion.

Pro. Valentine.

Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or loue. For such is a friend now: treacherous man, Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye Could haue perswaded me: now I dare not say I haue one friend aliue; thou wouldst disproue me: Who should be trusted, when ones right hand Is periured to the bosome? Proteus I am sorry I must never trust thee more, But count the world a stranger for thy sake: The priuate wound is deepest: oh time, most accurst: 'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!

Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me: Forgiue me Valentine: if hearty sorrow Be a sufficient Ransome for offence, I tender't heere: I doe as truely suffer, As ere I did commit.

Val. Then I am paid: And once, againe, I doe receiue thee honest; Who by Repentance is not satisfied, Is not of heauen, nor earth; for these are pleas'd: By Penitence th'Eternalls wrath's appeas'd: And that my loue may appeare plaine and free, All that was mine, in Siluia, I giue thee.

Iul. Oh me vnhappy.

Pro. Looke to the Boy.

Val. Why, Boy?

Why wag how now? what's the matter? look vp: speak.

Iul. O good sir, my master charg'd me to deliuer a ring to Madam Siluia: w (out of my neglect) was never done.

Pro. Where is that ring? boy?

Iul. Heere 'tis: this is it.

Pro. How? let me see.

Why this is the ring I gaue to Iulia.

Iul. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I haue mistooke: This is the ring you sent to Siluia.

Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart I gaue this vnto Iulia.

Iul. And Iulia her selfe did giue it me, And Iulia her selfe hath brought it hither.

Pro. How? Iulia?

Iul. Behold her, that gaue aymes to all thy oathes, And entertain'd'em deeply in her heart. How oft hast thou with periury cleft the roote? Oh Proteus, let this habit make thee blush.

Goe base Intruder, over-weening Slave,
Bestow thy fawning smiles on equall mates,
And thinke my patience, (more then thy desert)
Is priviledge for thy departure hence.
Thanke me for this, more then for all the favors
Which (all too-much) I have bestowed on thee.
But if thou linger in my Territories
Longer then swiftest expedition
Will give thee time to leave our royall Court,
By heaven, my wrath shall farre exceed the loss
I ever bore my daughter, or thy selfe.
Be gone, I will not heare thy vaine excuse,
But as thou lou'st thy life, make speed from hence.

Val. And why not death, rather then living torment?
To die, is to be banisht from my selfe,
And Silvia is my selfe: banish'd from her
Is selfe from selfe. A deadly banishment:
What light, is light, if Silvia be not seene?
What joy is joy, if Silvia be not by?
Unlesse it be to thinke that she is by
And feed upon the shadow of perfection.
Except I be by Silvia in the night,
There is no musicke in the Nightingale.
Unlesse I looke on Silvia in the day,
There is no day for me to looke upon.
She is my essence, and I leave to be;
If I be not by her fayre influence
Foster'd, illumin'd, cherish'd, kept alive.
I flie not death, to flie his deadly doome,
Tarry I heere, I but attend on death,
But flie I hence, I flie away from life.

Pro. Run (boy) run, run, and seeke him out.

Lan. So-ho, so-ho

Pro. What seest thou?

Lan. Him we goe to finde,
There's not a hair on's head, but t'is a Valentine.

Pro. Valentine?

Val. No.

Pro. Who then? his Spirit?

Val. Neither.

Pro. What then?

Val. Nothing

Lan. Can nothing speake? Master, shall I strike?

Pro. Who wouldst thou strike?

Lan. Nothing.

Pro. Villaine, forbeare.

Lan. Why Sir, Ile strike nothing: I pray you.

Pro. Sirha, I say forbeare: friend Valentine, a word.

Val. My eares are stopt, & cannot hear good newes,
So much of bad already hath possest them.

Pro. Then in dumbe silence will I bury mine,
For they are harsh, vn-seasonable, and bad.

Val. Is Silvia dead?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine indeed, for sacred Silvia,
Hath she forsworne me?

Pro. No, Valentine.

Val. No Valentine, if Silvia have forsworne me.
What is your newes?

Lan. Sir, there is a proclamation, ? you are vanished.

Pro. That thou art banish'ed oh that's the newes,
From hence, from Silvia, and from me thy friend.

Val. Oh, I have fed upon this woe already,
And now excesse of it will make me surfet.
Doth Silvia know that I am banish'd?

Pro. I, I and she hath offered to the doome
(Which vn-reuerst stands in effectuall force)
A Sea of melting pearle, which some call teares
Those at her fathers churlish feete she tendered,
With them vpon her knees, her humble selfe,
Wringing her hands, whose whiteness so became them,
As if but now they waxed pale for woe:
But neither bended knees, pure hands held vp,
Sad sighes, deepe groanes, nor silver-shedding teares
Could pearce one word vnpassionate Sire;
But Valentine, if he be tane, must die.
Besides, her intercession chaf'd him so,
When she for thy repeale was suppliant,
That to close prison he commanded her,
With many bitter threats of biding there.

Val. No more: vnless the next word that thou speak'st
Have some malignant power vpon my life:
If so: I pray thee breath it in mine eare,
As ending Anthemne of my endlesse dolor.

Pro. Cease to lament for that thou canst not helpe,
And study helpe for that which thou lament'st,
Time is the Nurse, and breeder of all good;
Here, if thou stay, thou canst not see thy loue;
Besides, thy staying will abridge thy life:
Hope is a lovers staffe, walke hence with that
And manage it, against despairing thoughts:
Thy letters may be here, though thou art hence,
Which, being writ to me, shall be deliver'd
Even in the milke-white bosome of thy Loue.
The time now serves not to expostulate,
Come, Ile conuey thee through the City-gate,
And ere I part with thee, confer at large
Of all that may concerne thy Loue-affaires:
As thou lov'st Silvia (though not for thy selfe)
Regard thy danger, and along with me.

Val. I pray thee Lance, and if thou seest my Boy
Bid him make haste, and meet me at the North-gate.

Pro. Goe sirha, finde him out: Come Valentine.

Val. Oh my deere Silvia; hapless Valentine.

Lance. I am but a foole, looke you, and yet I have the wit to think my Master is a kinde of a knaue: but that's all one, if he be but one knaue: He lives not now that knowes me to be in loue, yet I am in loue, but a Teame of horse shall not pluck that from me nor who 'tis I love: and yet 'tis a woman; but what woman, I will not tell my selfe: and yet 'tis a Milke-maid: yet 'tis not a maid: for shee hath had Gossips: yet 'tis a maid, for she is her Masters-maid, and serves for wages. Shee hath more qualities then a Water-Spaniell, which is much in a bare Christian: Heere is the Cote-log of her Condition. Imprimis, Shee can fetch and carry: why a horse can do no more; nay, a horse cannot fetch, but only carry, therefore is shee better then a Iade. Item, She can milke, looke you, a sweet virtue in a maid with clean hands.

Speed. How now Signior Lance? what newes with your Mastership?

La. With my Mastership? why, it is at Sea:

Sp. Well, your old vice still: mistake the vnsuch what newes then in your paper?

La. The black'st newes that ever thou heard'st.

Sp. Why man? how blacke?

La. Why, as blacke as Inke.

Sp. Let me read them?

La. Fie on thee Inke-head, thou canst not read.

Sp. Thou lyest: I can.

La. I will try thee: tell me this: who begot thee?

Sp. Marry,

Sp. Marry, sheerson of my Grand-father.

La. Oh illiterate loyterer; it was the sonne of thy Grand-mother: this proues that thou canst not read.

Sp. Come sooole, come: try me in thy paper.

La. There, and S. Nicholas be thy speed.

Sp. Imprimis: she can milke.

La. I that she can.

Sp. Item, she brewes good Ale.

La. And thereof comes the prouerbe: (Blessing of your heart, you brew good Ale.)

Sp. Item, she can sowe.

La. That's as much as to say (Can she so?)

Sp. Item she can knit.

La. What needs a man care for a stock with a wench, When she can knit him a stocke?

Sp. Item, she can wash and scoure.

La. A speciall vertue: for then shee neede not be wash'd, and scour'd.

Sp. Item, she can spin.

La. Then may I set the world on wheeles, when she can spin for her living.

Sp. Item, she hath many nameless vertues.

La. That's as much as to say Bastard-vertues: that indeede know not their fathers; and therefore haue no names.

Sp. Here follow her vices.

La. Close at the heeles of her vertues.

Sp. Item, shee is not to be fasting in respect of her breath.

La. Well: that fault may be mended with a breakfast: read on.

Sp. Item, she hath a sweet mouth.

La. That makes amends for her soure breath.

Sp. Item, she doth talke in her sleepe.

La. It's no matter for that; so shee sleepe not in her talke.

Sp. Item, she is slow in words.

La. Oh villoine, that set this downe among her vices; To be slow in words, is a womans only vertue.
I pray thee out with't, and place it for her chiefe vertue.

Sp. Item, she is proud.

La. Out with that too.
It was Eue legacie, and cannot be t'aste from her.

Sp. Item, she hath no teeth.

La. I care not for that neither: because I loue crusts.

Sp. Item, she is curst.

La. Well: the best is, she hath no teeth to bite.

Sp. Item, she will often praise her liquor.

La. If her liquor be good, she shall: if she will not, I will; for good things should be praised.

Sp. Item, she is too liberall.

La. Of her tongue she cannot; for that's writ downe she is slow of: of her purse, shee shall not, for that ile keepe shut: Now, of another thing shee may, and that cannot I helpe. Well, proceede.

Sp. Item, shee hath more haire then wit, and more faults then haires, and more wealth then faults.

La. Stop there: Ile heare her: shee was mine, and not mine, twice or thrice in that last Article: rehearse that once more.

Sp. Item, she hath more haire then wit.

La. More haire then wit: it may be the proue it: The cover of the salt, hides the salt, and therefore it is more then the salt; the haire that couers the wit, is more then the wit; for the greater hides the lesse: What's next?

Sp. And more faults then haires.

La. That's monstrous: oh that that were out.

Sp. And more wealth then faults.

La. Why that word makes the faults gracious: Well, ile haue her: and if it be a match, as nothing is impossible.

Sp. What then?

La. Why then, will I tell thee, that thy Master staies for thee at the North gate.

Sp. For me?

La. For thee? I, who art thou? he hath staid for a better man then thee.

Sp. And must I goe to him?

La. Thou must run to him; for thou hast staid so long, that going will scarce serue the turne.

Sp. Why didst not tell me sooner? 'pox of your loue Letters.

La. Now will he be swing'd for reading my Letter; An vnmannerly slaue, that will thrust himselfe into secrets: Ile after, to reioyce in the boyes correctio. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, Thurio, Protheus.

Du. Sir Thurio, feare not, but that she will loue you
Now Valentine is banish'd from her sight.

Th. Since his exile she hath despis'd me most,
Forswore my company, and rail'd at me,
That I am desperate of obtaining her.

Du. This weake impresse of Loue, is as a figure
Treached in ice, which with an houres heate
Dissolues to water, and doth loose his forme.
A little time will melt her frozen thoughts,
And worthlesse Valentine shall be forgot.
How now sir Protheus, is your countryman
(According to our Proclamation) gon?

Pro. Gon, my good Lord.

Du. My daughter takes his going grieuously?

Pro. A little time (my Lord) will kill that griefe.

Du. So I beleeue: but Thurio thinkes not so:
Protheus, the good conceit I hold of thee,
(For thou hast showne some signe of good desert)
Makes me the better to confer with thee.

Pro. Longer then I prouе loyall to your Grace,
Let me not liue, to looke vpon your Grace.

Du. Thou know'st how willingly, I would effect
The match betweene sir Thurio, and my daughter?

Pro. I doe my Lord.

Du. And also, I thinke, thou art not ignorant
How she opposes her against my will?

Pro. She did my Lord, when Valentine was here.

Du. Loud peuerely, she perseuers so.
What might we doe to make the girle forget
The loue of Valentine, and loue sir Thurio?

Pro. The best way is, to slander Valentine,
With falsehood, cowardize, and poore descent:
Three things, that women highly hold in hate.

Du. I, but she'll thinke, that it is spoke in hate.

Pro. I, if his enemy deliuer it.
Therefore it must with circumstance be spoken
By one, whom she esteemeth as his friend.

Du. Then you must vndertake to slander him.

Pro.

Pro. And that (my Lord) I shall be loath to doe:
'Tis an ill office for a Gentleman,
Especially against his very friend.
Du. Where your good word cannot advantage him,
Your slander never can endamage him;
Therefore the office is indifferent,
Being intreated to it by your friend.
Pro. You haue preuail'd (my Lord) if I can doe it
By ought that I can speake in his dispraise,
She shall not long continue loue to him:
But say this weede her loue from Valentine,
It followes not that she will loue sir Thurio.
Th. Therefore, as you vnwinde her loue from him;
Least it should ranckle, and be good to none,
You must prouide to bottome it on me:
Which must be done, by praising me as much
As you, in worth dispraise, sir Valentine.
Du. And Protheus, we dare trust you in this kinde,
Because we know (on Valentines report)
You are already loues firme votary,
And cannot soone reuolt, and change your minde.
Vpon this warrant, shall you haue access,
Where you, with Silvia, may conferre at large
For she is lampish, heavy, mellancholly,
And (for your friends sake) will be glad of you;
Where you may temper her, by your perswasion,
To hate yong Valentine, and loue my friend.
Pro. As much as I can doe, I will effect:
But you sir Thurio, are not sharpe enough:
You must lay Lime, to tangle her desires
By walefull Sonnets, whose composed Rimes
Should be full fraught with seruiceable vowes.
Du. I, much is the force of heauen-bred Poesie.
Pro. Say that vpon the altar of her beauty
You sacrifice your teares, your sighes, your heart:
Write till your inke be dry: and with your teares
Moist it againe: and frame some feeling line,
That may discouer such integrity:
For Orpheus Lute, was strung with Poets sinewes,
Whose golden touch could soften steele and stones;
Make Tygers tame, and huge Leviathans
Forsake vnsounded deepes, to dance on Sands.
After your dire-lamenting Elegies,
Visit by night your Ladies chamber-window
With some sweet Consort; To their Instruments
Tune a deploring dumpe: the nights dead silence
Will well become such sweet complaining grieuance:
This, or else nothing, will inherit her.
Du. This discipline, showes thou hast bin in loue
Th. And thy aduice, this night, ile put in practise.
Therefore, sweet Protheus, my direction-giuer,
Let vs into the City presently
To sort some Gentlemen, well skil'd in Musicke.
I haue a Sonnet, that will serue the turne
To giue the on-set to thy good aduise.
Du. About it Gentlemen.
Pro. We'll wait vpon your Grace, till after Supper,
And afterward determine our proceedings.
Du. Even now about it, I will pardon you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scæna Prima.

Enter Valentine, Speed, and certaine Out-lawes.
1. Out-l. Fellowes, stand fast: I see a passenger.
2. Out. If there be ten, shrinke not, but down with 'em.
3. Out. Stand sir, and throw vs that you haue about ye.
If not: we'll make you sit, and rifle you.
Sp. Sir we are vndone; these are the Villaines
That all the Trauailers doe feare so much.
Val. My friends.
1. Out. That's not so, sir: we are your enemies.
2. Out. Peace: we'll heare him.
3. Out. I by my beard will we: for he is a proper man.
Val. Then know that I haue little wealth to loose;
A man I am, crost'd with aduersitie:
My riches, are these poore habiliments,
Of which, if you should here disfurnish me,
You take the sum and substance that I haue.
2. Out. Whether trauell you?
Val. To Verona.
1. Out. Whence came you?
Val. From Milleine.
3. Out. Haue you long sojourn'd there? (stand,
Val. Some sixteene moneths, and longer might haue
If crooked fortune had not thwarted me.
1. Out. What, were you banish'd thence?
Val. I was.
2. Out. For what offence?
Val. For that which now torments me to rehearse;
I kil'd a man, whose death I much repent,
But yet I slew him manfully, in fight,
Without false vantage, or base treachery.
1. Out. Why nere repent it, if it were done so;
But were you banisht for so small a fault?
Val. I was, and held me glad of such a doome.
2. Out. Haue you the Tongues?
Val. My youthfull trauaile, therein made me happy,
Or else I often had beene often miserable.
3. Out. By the bare scalpe of Robin Hoods fat Fryer,
This fellow were a King, for our wilde faction.
1. Out. We'll haue him: Sirs, a word.
Sp. Master, be one of them:
It's an honourable kinde of theevery.
Val. Peace villaine.
2. Out. Tell vs thee: haue you any thing to take to?
Val. Nothing but my fortune.
3. Out. Know then, that some of vs are Gentlemen,
Such as the fury of vngouern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awfull men.
My selfe was from Verona banished,
For practising to steale away a Lady,
And heire and Neece, slide vnto the Duke.
2. Out. And I from Mantua, for a Gentleman,
Who, in my moode, I stab'd vnto the heart.
1. Out. And I, for such like petty crimes as these
But to the purpose: for we cite our faults,
That they may hold excus'd our lawlesse lives;
And partly seeing you are beautifide
With goodly shape; and by your owne report,
A Linguist, and a man of such perfection,
As we doe in our quality much want.
2. Out. Indeede because you are a banish'd man,
Therefore, aboue the rest, we parley to you:
Are you content to be our Generall?
To make a vertue of necessity,
And liue as we doe in this wildernesse?
3. Out. What saist thou? wilt thou be of our consort?
Say I, and be the captaine of vs all:
We'll doe thee homage, and be rul'd by thee,
Loue thee, as our Commander, and our King.

1. Out. But if thou scorne our curtesie, thou dyest.
2. Out. Thou shalt not liue, so brag what we haue of-
Vl. I take your offer, and will liue with you, (fer'd.
Prouided that you do no outrages
On silly women, or poore passengers.
3. Out. No, we detest such vile base practises.
Come, goe with vs, we'll bring thee to our Crewes,
And show thee all the Treasure we haue got;
Which, with our selues, all rest at thy disposé. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Protheus, Thurio, Iulia, Host, Musitian, Siluia.

Pro. Already haue I bin false to Valentine,
And now I must be as vniust to Thurio,
Vnder the colour of commending him,
I haue access my owne loue to prefer.
But Siluia is too faire, too true, too holy,
To be corrupted with my worthlesse gifts;
When I protest true loyalty to her,
She twits me with my falsehood to my friend;
When to her beauty I commend my vowes,
She bids me thinke how I haue bin forsworne
In breaking faith with Iulia, whom I lou'd;
And notwithstanding all her sodaine quips,
The least whereof would quell a louers hope:
Yet (Spaniel-like) the more she spurnes my loue,
The more it growes, and fawneth on her still;
But here comes Thurio; now must we to her window,
And giue some euening Musique to her eare.
Th. How now, sir Protheus, are you crept before vs?
Pro. I gentle Thurio, for you know that loue
Will creepe in seruice, where it cannot goe.
Th. I, but I hope, Sir, that you loue not here.
Pro. Sir, but I doe: or else I would be hence.
Th. Who, Siluia?
Pro. I, Siluia, for your sake.
Th. I thanke you for your own: Now Gentlemen
Let's tune: and to it lustily a while.
Host. Now, my young guest, me thinks your' allycholly
I pray you why is it?
Iu. Marry (mine Host) because I cannot be merry.
Host. Come, we'll loue you merry: ile bring you where you shall heare Musique, and see the Gentleman that you ask'd for.
Iu. But shall I heare him speake.
Host. I that you shall.
Iu. That will be Musique.
Host. Harke, harke.
Iu. Is he among these?
Host. I: but peace, let's heare'm.

Song. Who is Siluia? what is she?
That all our Swaines commend her?
Holy, faire, and wise is she,
The heauens such grace did lend her,
that she might admired be.
Is she kinde as she is faire?
For beauty lines with kindnesse:
Loue doth to her eyes repaire,
To helpe him of his blindnesse:
And being help'd, inhabits there.
Then to Siluia, let vs sing,
That Siluia is excelling;
She excels each mortall thing
Vpon the dull earth dwelling.
To her let vs Garlands bring.

Ho. How now? are you sadder then you were before;
How doe you, man? the Musicke likes you not.
Iu. You mistake: the Musician likes me not.
Ho. Why, my pretty youth?
Iu. He plaies false (father.)
Ho. How, out of tune on the strings.
Iu. Not so: but yet
So false that he grieues my very heart-strings.
Ho. You haue a quicke eare (heart.
Iu. I, I would I were deafe: it makes me haue a slow
Ho. I perceiue you delight not in Musique.
Iu. Not a whit, when it iars so.
Ho. Harke, what fine change is in the Musique.
Iu. I: that change is the spight.
Ho. You would haue them alwaies play but one thing.
Iu. I would alwaies haue one play but one thing.
But Host doth this Sir Protheus, that we talke on,
Often resort vnto this Gentlewoman?
Ho. I tell you what Launce his man told me;
He lou'd her out of all nicke.
Iu. Where is Launce?
Ho. Gone to seeke his dog, which to morrow, by his Masters commaud, hee must carry for a present to his Lady.
Iu. Peace, stand aside, the company parts.
Pro. Sir Thurio, feare not you, I will so plead,
That you shall say, my cunning drift excels.
Th. Where meete we?
Pro. At Saint Gregories well.
Th. Farewell.
Pro. Madam: good eu'n to your Ladiship.
Sil. I thanke you for your Musique (Gentlemen)
Who is that that spake?
Pro. One (Lady) if you knew his pure hearts truth,
You would quickly learne to know him by his voice.
Sil. Sir Protheus, as I take it.
Pro. Sir Protheus (gentle Lady) and your Seruant.
Sil. What's your will?
Pro. That I may compasse yours.
Sil. You haue your wish: my will is euen this,
That presently you hie you home to bed:
Thou subtile, periur'd, false, disloyall man:
Think'st thou I am so shallow, so conceitlesse,
To be seduced by thy flattery,
That has't deceiu'd so many with thy vowes?
Returne, returne and make thy loue amends:
For me (by this pale queene of night I (weare)
I am so farre from granting thy request,
That I despise thee, for thy wrongfull suite,
And by and by intend to chide my selfe,
Euen for this time I spend in talking to thee.
Pro. I grant (sweet loue) that I did loue a Lady,
But she is dead.
Iu. 'Twere false, if I should speake it;
For I am sure she is not buried.
Sil. Say that she be; yet Valentine thy friend
Survives; to whom (thy selfe art witnesse)
I am betroth'd; and art thou not asham'd
To wrong him, with thy importunacy?

Pro.

Pro. I likewise heare that Valentine is dead.
Sil. And so suppose am I; for in her grave
Assure thy selfe, my loue is buried.
Pro. Sweet Lady, let me take it from the earth.
Sil. Goe to thy Ladies grave and call hers thence,
Or at the least, in hers, sepulcher thine.
Iul. He heard not that.
Pro. Madam: if your heart be so obdurate:
Vouchsafe me yet your Picture for my loue,
The Picture that is hanging in your chamber:
To that ile speake, to that ile sigh and weepe:
For since the substance of your perfect selfe
Is else deuoted, I am but a shadow;
And to your shadow, will I make true loue.
Iul. If twere a substance you would sure deceiue it,
And make it but a shadow, as I am.
Sil. I am very loath to be your Idoll Sir;
But, since your falsehood shall become you well
To worship shadowes, and adore false shapes,
Send to me in the morning, and ile send it:
And so, good rest.
Pro. As wretches haue ore-night
That wait for execution in the morne.
Iul. Host, will you goe?
Ho. By my hallidome, I was fast asleepe.
Iul. Pray you, where lies Sir Protheus?
Ho. Marry, at my house:
Trust me, I thinke 'tis almost day.
Iul. Not so: but it hath bin the longest night
That ere I watch'd, and the most heauiest.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Eglamore, Silvia.

Eg. This is the houre that Madam Silvia
Entreated me to call, and know her minde
Ther's some great matter she'ld employ me in.
Madam, Madam.
Sil. Who cals?
Eg. Your seruant, and your friend;
One that attends your Ladiships command.
Sil. Sir Eglamore, a thousand times good morrow.
Eg. As many (worthy Lady) to your selfe:
According to your Ladiships impose,
I am thus early come, to know what seruice
It is your pleasure to command me in.
Sil. Oh Eglamore, thou art a Gentlemen:
Thinke not I flatter (for I swearе I doe not)
Valiant, wise, remorse-full, well accomplish'd,
Thou art not ignorant what deere good will
I beare vnto the banish'd Valentine:
Nor how my father would enforce me marry
Vaine Thurio (whom my very soule abhor'd.)
Thy selfe hast loe'd, and I haue heard thee say
No griefe did euer come so neere thy heart,
As when thy Lady, and thy true-loue dide;
Vpon whose Grave thou vow'dst pure chastitie:
Sir Eglamore: I would to Valentine
To Mantua, where I heare, he makes aboad;
And for the waies are dangerous to passe,
I doe desire thy worthy company,
Vpon whose faith and honor, I repose.
Vrge not my fathers anger (Eglamore)
But thinke vpon my griefe (a Ladies griefe)
And on the iustice of my flying hence,
To keepe me from a most vnholy match,
Which heauen and fortune still rewards with plagues.
I doe desire thee, even from a heart
As full of sorrowes, as the Sea of sands,
To beare me company, and goe with me:
If not, to hide what I haue said to thee,
That I may venture to depart alone.
Egl. Madam, I pitty much your grieuances,
Which, since I know they vertuously are plac'd,
I giue consent to goe along with you,
Wreaking as little what beideth me,
As much, I wish all good befortune you.
When will you goe?
Sil. This euening comming.
Eg. Where shall I meete you?
Sil. At Friar Patricks Cell,
Where I intend holy Confession.
Eg. I will not faile your Ladiship:
Good morrow (gentle Lady.)
Sil. Good morrow, kinde Sir Eglamore. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Launce, Protheus, Iulia, Silvia.

Lau. When a mans seruant shall play the Cuore with him (looke you) it goes hard: one that I brought vp of a puppy: one that I sau'd from drowning, when three or foure of his blinde brothers and sisters went to it: I haue taught him (euen as one would say precisely, thus I would teach a dog) I was sent to deliver him, as a present to Mistris Silvia, from my Master; and I came no sooner into the dining-chamber, but he steps me to her Trencher, and steales her Capons-leg: O, 'tis a foule thing, when a Cur cannot keepe himselfe in all companies: I would haue (as one should say) one that takes vpon him to be a dog indeede, to be, as it were, a dog at all things. If I had not had more wit then he, to take a fault vpon me that he did, I thinke verily hee had bin hang'd for't: sure as I liue he had suffer'd for't: you shall iudge: Hee thrusts me himselfe into the company of three or foure gentlemen-like-dogs, vnder the Dukes table: hee had not bin there (blesse the marke) a pissing while, but all the chamber smelt him: out with the dog (saies one) what cur is that (saies another) whip him out (saies the third) hang him vp (saies the Duke.) I hauing bin acquainted with the smell before, knew it was Crab; and goes me to the fellow that whips the dogges: friend (quoth I) you meane to whip the dog: I marry doe I (quoth he) you doe him the more wrong (quoth I) 'twas I did the thing you wot of: he makes me no more adoe, but whips me out of the chamber: how many Masters would doe this for his Seruant? nay, ile be sworne I haue sat in the stocks, for puddings he hath stolne, otherwise he had bin executed: I haue stood on the Pillorie for Geese he hath kil'd, otherwise he had suffer'd for't: thou think'st not of this now: nay, I remember the tricke you serv'd me, when I tooke my leaue of Madam Silvia: did not not I bid thee still mark me, and doe as I doe: when did'st thou see me heave vp my leg, and make water against a Gentlewomans farthingale? did'st thou euer see me doe such a tricke?

Pro. Sebastian is thy name: I like thee well,
And will employ thee in some seruice presently.

In. In what you please, ile doe what I can.

Pro. I hope thou wilt.
How now you whor-son peasant,
Where haue you bin these two dayes loytering?

La. Marry Sir, I carried Mistris Iulias the dogge you bad me.

Pro. And what saies she to my little Iewell?

La. Marry she says your dog was a cur, and tels you currish thanks is good enough for such a peasent.

Pro. But she receiu'd my dog?

La. No indeede did she not:
Here haue I brought him backe againe.

Pro. What, shalt thou offer her this from me?

La. I Sir, the other Squirrill was stolne from me
By the Hangmans boyes in the market place.
And then I offer'd her mine own, who is a dog
As big as ten of yours, & therefore the gift the greater.

Pro. Goe, get thee hence, and finde my dog againe,
Or ne'er returne againe into my sight.
Away, I say: stayest thou to vexe me here;
A Slaue, that still an end, turnes me to shame:
Sebastian, I haue entertained thee,
Partly that I haue neede of such a youth,
That can with some discretion doe my businesse:
For 'tis no trusting to yond foolish Lout,
But chiefly, for thy face, and thy behaiour,
Which (if my Augury deceiue me not)
Witnesse good bringing vp, fortune, and truth:
Therefore know thee, for this I entertaine thee.
Go presently, and take this Ring with thee,
Deliuer it to Madam Siluia;
She lou'd me well, deliuer'd it to me

Iul. It seemes you lou'd not her, not to know her vaiuen:
She is dead belike?

Pro. Not so: I thinke she liues.

Iul. Alas.

Pro. Why do'st thou cry alas?

Iul. I cannot choose but pitty her.

Pro. Wherefore should'st thou pitty her?

Iul. Because, methinkes that she lou'd you as well
As you do loue your Lady Siluia:
She dreames on him, that has forgot her loue,
You dote on her, that cares not for your loue.
'Tis pitty Loue, should be so contrary
And thinking on it, makes me cry alas.

Pro. Well: giue her that Ring, and therewithall
This Letter: that her chamber: Tell my Lady,
I claime the promise for her heauenly Picture:
Your message done, hye home vnto my chamber,
Where thou shalt finde me sad, and solitarie.

Iul. How many women would doe such a message?
Alas poore Proteus, thou hast entrusted
A Fox, to be the Shepheard of thy Lambs,
Alas poore foole, why doe I pitty him
That with his very heart despiseth me?
Because he loues her, he despiseth me,
Because I loue him, I must pitty him.
This Ring I gaue him, when he parted from me,
To bande him to remember my good will
And now am I (vnhappy Messenger)
To plead for that, which I would not obtaine,
To carry that, which I would haue refus'd
To praise his faith, which I would haue disprais'd.
I am my Masters true confirmed Loue,
But cannot be true seruant to my Master,
Vnlesse I prouе false traitor to my selfe
Yet will I woe for him, but yet so coldly,
As (heauen it knowes) I would not haue him speed.
Gentlewoman, good day: I pray you be my meane
To bring me where to speake with Madam Siluia.

Sil. What would you with her, if that I be she?

Iul. If you be she, I doe intreat your patience
To heare me speake the message I am sent on.

Sil. From whom?

Iul. From my Master, Sir Proteus, Madam.

Sil. Oh: he sends you for a Picture?

Iul. I, Madam.

Sil. Vrsula, bring my Picture there,
Goe, giue your Master this: tell him from me
One Iulia, that his changing thoughts forget
Would better fit his Chamber, then this Shadow.

Iul. Madam, please you peruse this Letter;
Pardon me (Madam) I haue vnadui'sd
Deliuer'd you a paper that I should not;
This is the Letter to your Ladiship.

Sil. I pray thee let me looke on that againe.

Iul. It may not be: good Madam pardon me.

Sil. There, hold:
I will not looke vpon your Masters lines.
I know they are stuft with protestations,
And full of new-found oathes, which he will breake
As easily as I doe tearе his paper.

Iul. Madam, he sendes your Ladiship this Ring.

Sil. The more shame for him, that he sends it me;
For I haue heard him say a thousand times,
His Iulia gaue it him, at his departure
Though his false finger haue prophan'd the Ring,
Mine shall not doe his Iulia so much wrong.

Iul. She thankes you.

Sil. What sai'st thou?

Iul. I thanke you Madam, that you tender her:
Poore Gentlewoman, my Master wrongs her much.

Sil. Do'st thou know her?

Iul. Almost as well as I doe know my selfe.
To thinke vpon her woes, I doe protest
That I haue wept a hundred seuerall times:

Sil. Belike she thinks that Proteus hath forsook her!

Iul. I thinke she doth: and that's her cause of sorrow.

Sil. Is she not passing faire?

Iul. She hath bin fairer (Madam) then she is,
When she did thinke my Master lou'd her well;
She, in my iudgement, was as faire as you.
But since she did neglect her looking-glasse,
And threw her Sun-expelling Masque away,
The eyre hath starr'd the roses in her cheeks,
And pinch'd the lilly-tincture of her face,
That now she is become as blacke as I.

Sil. How tall was she?

Iul. About my stature: for at Pentecost,
When all our Pageants of delight were plaid,
Our youth got me to play the womans part,
And I was trim'd in Madam Iulias gowne,
Which serued me as fit, by all mens iudgements,
As if the garment had bin made for me:
Therefore I know she is about my height,
And at that time I made her weepe a good,

For

For I did play a lamentable part.
(Madam) 'twas Ariadne, passioning
For Thesus periury, and vnrust flight;
Which I so liuely acted with my teares:
That my poore Mistris moued therewithall.
Wept bitterly: and would I might be dead,
If I in thought felt not her very sorrow.
Sil. She is beholding to thee (gentle youth)
Alas (poore Lady) desolate, and left;
I weepe my selfe to thinke vpon thy words.
Here youth: there is my purse; I giue thee this (well.
For thy sweet Mistris sake, because thou lou'st her. Fare-
Iul. And she shall thanke you for 't, if ere you know
A vertuous gentlewoman, milde, and beautifull. (her.
I hope my Masters suit will be but cold,
Since she respects my Mistris loue so much.
Alas, how loue can trifle with it selfe:
Here is her Picture: let me see, I thinke
If I had such a Tyre, this face of mine
Were full as louely, as is this of hers:
And yet the Painter flatter'd her a little,
Vnlesse I flatter with my selfe too much.
Her haire is Aburne, mine is perfect Yellow,
If that be all the difference in his loue,
Ile get me such a coulour'd Perrywig:
Her eyes are grey as glasse, and so are mine:
I, but her fore-head's low, and mine's as high:
What should it be that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in my selfe?
If this fond Loue, were not a blinded god.
Come shadow, come, and take this shadow vp,
For 'tis thy riuall: O thou senceless forme,
Thou shalt be worship'd, kiss'd, loo'd, and adoe'd;
And were there sence in his Idolatry,
My substance should be statue in thy stead.
Ile vse thee kindly, for thy Mistris sake
That vs'd me so: or else by Ioue, I vow,
I should haue scratch'd out your vnseeing eyes,
To make my Master out of loue with thee. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Eglamour, Silvia.

Egl. The Sun begins to guild the westerne skie.
And now it is about the very houre
That Silvia, at Fryer Patricks Cell should meet me,
She will not faile; for Louers breake not houres,
Vnlesse it be to come before their time,
So much they spur their expedition.
See where she comes: Lady a happy euening.
Sil. Amen, Amen: goe on (good Eglamour)
Out at the Posterne by the Abbey wall;
I feare I am attended by some Spies.
Egl. Feare not: the Forrest is not three leagues off,
If we recouer that, we are sure enough. Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Thurio, Protheus, Iulia, Duke.

Th. Sir Protheus, what saies Silvia to my suit?
Pro. Oh Sir, I finde her milder then she was,
And yet she takes exceptions at your person.
Thu. What? that my leg is too long?
Pro. No, that it is too little. (der.
Thu. Ile weare a Boote, to make it somewhat rou-
Pro. But loue will not be spurd to what it loathes.
Thu. What saies she to my face?
Pro. She saies it is a faire one.
Thu. Nay then the wanton lyes: my face is blacke
Pro. But Pearles are faire; and the old saying is,
Blacke men are Pearles, in beauteous Ladies eyes.
Thu. 'Tis true, such Pearles as put out Ladies eyes,
For I had rather winke, then looke on them.
Thu. How likes she my discourse?
Pro. Ill, when you talke of war.
Thu. But well, when I discourse of loue and peace.
Iul. But better indeede, when you hold you peace.
Thu. What sayes she to my valour?
Pro. Oh Sir, she makes no doubt of that.
Iul. She needes not, when she knowes it cowardise.
Thu. What saies she to my birth?
Pro. That you are well deriu'd.
Iul. True: from a Gentleman, to a foole.
Thu. Considers she my Possessions?
Pro. Oh, I: and pitties them.
Thu. Wherefore?
Iul. That such an Asse should owe them.
Pro. That they are out by Lease.
Iul. Here comes the Duke.
Du. How now sir Protheus; how now Thurio?
Which of you saw Eglamoure of late?
Thu. Not I.
Pro. Not I.
Du. Saw you my daughter?
Pro. Neither.
Du. Why then
She's fled vnto that peasant, Valentine,
And Eglamoure is in her Company:
'Tis trust for Frier Lawrence mes them both
As he, in penance wander'd through the Forrest:
Him he knew well: and guess'd that it was she,
But being mask'd, he was not sure of it.
Besides she did intend Confession
At Patricks Cell this euen, and there she was not.
These likelihoods confirme her flight from hence;
Therefore I pray you stand, not to discourse,
But mount you presently, and meete with me
Vpon the rising of the Mountaine foote
That leads toward Mantua, whether they are fled:
Dispatch (sweet Gentlemen) and follow me.
Thu. Why this it is, to be a peruish Girle,
That flies her fortune when it followes her:
Ile after; more to be reueng'd on Eglamoure,
Then for the loue of reck-lesse Silvia.
Pro. And I will follow, more for Silvias loue
Then hate of Eglamoure that goes with her.
Iul. And I will follow, more to crosse that loue
Then hate for Silvia, that is gone for loue. Exeunt.

Scœna Tertia.

Silvia, Out-lawes.

1. Out. Come, come be patient:

We

We must bring you to our Captaine.
Sil. A thousand more mischances then this one
Haue learn'd me how to brooke this patiently.
2 Out. Come, bring her away.
1 Out. Where is the Gentleman that was with her?
3 Out. Being nimble footed, he hath out-run vs.
But Mopsso and Valerius follow him:
Goe thou with her to the West end of the wood,
There is our Captaine: We'll follow him that's fled,
The Thicket is beset, he cannot scape.
1 Out. Come, I must bring you to our Captains eaue.
Feare not: he beares an honourable minde,
And will not vse a woman lawlesly.
Sil. O Valentine: this I endure for thee.

Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, Protheus, Siluia, Iulia, Duke, Thurio, Out-lawes.

Val. How vse doth breed a habit in a man?
This shadowy desert, vnfrequented woods
I better brooke then flourishing peopled Townes:
Here can I sit alone, vn-seene of any,
And to the Nightingales complaining Notes
Tune my distresses, and record my woes.
O thou that dost inhabit in my breft,
Leaue out the Mansion so long Tenant-lesse,
Left growing ruinous, the building fall,
And leaue no memory of what it was,
Repaire me, with thy presence, Siluia:
Thou gentle Nimph, cherish thy forlorne swaine.
What hallowing, and what stir is this to day?
These are my mates, that make their wills their Law,
Haue some vnhappy passenger in chace;
They loue me well: yet I haue much to doe
To keepe them from vncuill outrages.
Wel thou here Valentine: who's this comes here?
Pro. Madam, this seruice I haue done for you
(Though you respect not aught your seruant doth)
To hazard life, and rescue you from him.
That would haue stay'd your honour, and your loue,
Vouchsafe me for my meed, but one faire looke:
(A smaller boone then this I cannot beg,
And less then this, I am sure you cannot give)
Val. How like a dreame is this? I see, and heare:
Loue, lend me patience to forbeare a while.
Sil. O miserable, vnhappy that I am.
Pro. Vnhappy were you (Madam) ere I came:
But by my coming, I haue made you happy.
Sil. By thy approach thou mak'st me most vnhappy.
Iul. And me, when he approcheth to your presence.
Sil. Had I beene seized by a hungry Lion,
I would haue beene a breakfast to the Beast,
Rather then haue false Protheus rescue me:
Oh heauens be iudge how I loue Valentine,
Whose life's as tender to me as my soule,
And full as much (for more there cannot be)
I doe detest false perfiu'd Protheus:
Therefore be gone, solicit me no more.
Pro. What dangerous action, stood it next to death
Would I not vndergoe, for one calme looke:
Oh this the curse in Loue, and still approu'd
When women cannot loue, where they're belou'd.
Sil. When Protheus cannot loue, where he's belou'd:
Read over Iulia's heart, (thy first bell Loue)
For whose deare sake, thou didst then rend thy faith
Into a thousand oathes; and all those oathes,
Descended into perfury, to loue me,
Thou hast no faith left now, vnlesse thou'dst two,
And that's farre worse then none: better haue none.
Then plurall faith, which is too much by one:
Thou Counterfeyt, to thy true friend.
Pro. In Loue,
Who respects friend?
Sil. All men but Protheus.
Pro. Nay, if the gentle spirit of mouing words
Can no way change you to a milder forme:
Ile woo you like a Souldier, at armes end,
And loue you gainst the nature of Loue: force ye.
Sil. Oh heauen.
Pro. Ile force thee yeeld to my desire.
Val. Ruffian: let goe that rude vncuill touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion.
Pro. Valentine.
Val. Thou common friend, that's without faith or loue,
For such is a friend now: treacherous man,
Thou hast beguil'd my hopes; nought but mine eye
Could haue perswaded me: now I dare not say
I haue one friend aliue; thou wouldst disproue me:
Who should be trusted, when ones right hand
Is periured to the bosome? Protheus
I am sorry I must never trust thee more,
But count the world a stranger for thy sake:
The priuate wound is deepest: oh time, most accurst:
'Mongst all foes that a friend should be the worst!
Pro. My shame and guilt confounds me:
Forgiue me Valentine: if hearty sorrow
Be a sufficient Ransome for offence,
I tender't heere: I doe as truely suffer,
As ere I did commit.
Val. Then I am paid:
And once again, I doe receiue thee honest;
Who by Repentance is not satisfied,
Is not of heauen, nor earth; for these are pleas'd:
By Penitence th'Eternalls wrath's appeas'd:
And that my loue may appeare plaine and free,
All that was mine, in Siluia, I giue thee.
Iul. Oh me vnhappy.
Pro. Looke to the boy.
Val. Why, Boy!
Why wag, how now? what's the matter? look vp: speak.
Iul. O good sir, my master charg'd me to deliuer a ring to Madam Siluia: w (out of my neglect) was neuer done.
Pro. Where is that ring? boy?
Iul. Heere 'tis: this is it.
Pro. How? let me see.
Why this is the ring I gaue to Iulia.
Iul. Oh, cry you mercy sir, I haue mistooke:
This is the ring you sent to Siluia.
Pro. But how cam'st thou by this ring? at my depart
I gaue this vnto Iulia.
Iul. And Iulia her selfe did giue it me,
And Iulia her selfe hath brought it hither.
Pro. How? Iulia?
Iul. Behold her, that gaue aime to all thy oathes,
And entertain'd 'em deeply in her heart.
How oft hast thou with periury cleft the roote?
Oh Protheus, let this habit make thee blush.

Be thou asham'd that I haue tooke vpon me,
Such an immodest payment; if shame lie
In a disguise of loue?
It is the lesser blot modesty finds,
Women to change their shapes, then men their minds.
Pro. Then men their minds? 'tis true: oh heuen, were man
But Constant, he were perfect; that one error
Fils him with faults: makes him run through all th'sins;
Inconstancy falls-off, ere it begins.
What is in Siluia's face, but I may spie
More fresh in Iulia's, with a constant eye?
Val. Come, come: a hand from either.
Let me be blest to make this happy close
'Twere pity two such friends should be long foes.
Pro. Beare witnes (heauen) I haue my wish for euer.
Iul. And I mine.
Out-l. A prize: a prize: a prize.
Val. Forbeare, forbeare I say: It is my Lord the Duke.
Your Grace is welcome to a man disgrac'd,
Banished Valentine.
Duke. Sir Valentine?
Thu. Yonder is Siluia: and Siluia's mine.
Val. Thurio giue backe; or else embrace thy death:
Come not within the measure of my wrath:
Doe not name Siluia thine: if once againe,
Verona shall not hold thee: heere she stands,
Take but possession of her, with a Touch:
I dare thee, but to breath vpon my Loue.
Thur. Sir Valentine, I care not for her, I:
I hold him but a foole that will endanger
His Body, for a Girle that loues him not:
I claime her not, and therefore she is thine.
Duke. The more degenerate and base art thou
To make such meanes for her, as thou hast done,
And leaue her on such slight conditions.
Now, by the honor of my Ancestry,
I doe applaud thy spirit, Valentine,
And thinke thee worthy of an Empresse loue:
Know then, I heere forget all former greefes,
Cancell all grudge, repeale thee home againe,
Plead a new state in thy vn-riual'd merit,
To which I thus subscribe: Sir Valentine,
Thou art a Gentleman, and well deriu'd,
Take thou thy Siluia, for thou hast deseru'd her.
Val. I thank your Grace, y gift hath made me happy:
I now beseech you (for your daughters sake)
To grant one Boone that I shall aske of you.
Duke. I grant it (for thine owne) what ere it be.
Val. These banish'd men, that I haue kept withall,
Are men endu'd with worthy qualities:
Forgiue them what they haue committed here,
And let them be recall'd from their Exile:
They are reformed, civill, full of good,
And fit for great employment (worthy Lord.)
Duke. Thou hast preuail'd, I pardon them and thee:
Dispose of them, as thou knowst their deserts.
Come, let vs goe, we will include all iarres,
With Triumphes, Mirth, and rare solemnity.
Val. And as we walke along, I dare be bold
With our discourse, to make your Grace to smile.
What thinke you of this Page (my Lord?)
Duke. I think the Boy hath grace in him, he blushes
Val. I warrant you (my Lord) more grace, then Boy.
Duke. What meane you by that saying?
Val. Please you, I'le tell you, as we passe along,
That you will wonder what hath fortuned:
Come Protheus, 'tis your penance, but to heare
The story of your Loues discouered.
That done, our day of marriage shall be yours
One Feast, one house, one mutuall happinesse. Exeunt.

The names of all the Actors.

Duke: Father to Siluia.
Valentine. } the two Gentlemen.
Protheus. }
Anthonio: father to Protheus.
Thurio: a foolish riuall to Valentine.
Eglamoure: Agent for Siluia in her escape.
Host: where Iulia lodges.
Out-lawes with Valentine.
Speed: a clownish seruant to Valentine.
Launce: the like to Protheus.
Panthion: seruant to Antonio.
Iulia: beloued of Protheus.
Siluia: beloued of Valentine.
Lucetta: waiting-woman to Iulia.

FINIS.

THE

THE Merry Wiues of Windsor.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Iustice Shallow, Slender, Sir Hugh Euans, Master Page, Fallstaffe, Bardolph, Nym, Pistoll, Anne Page, Mistresse Ford, Mistresse Page, Simple.

Shallow.

Sir Hugh, persuade me not: I will make a Star-Chamber matter of it, if hee were twenty Sir Iohn Fallstaffs, he shall not abuse Robert Shallow Esquire. (Coram.

Slen. In the County of Glocester, Iustice of Peace and Shal. I (Cosen Slender) and Cost-alorum.

Slen. I, and Ratolorum too; and a Gentleman borne (Master Parson) who writes himselfe Armigero, in any bill, Warrant, Quittance, or Obligation, Armigero.

Shal. I that I doe, and haue done any time these three hundred yeeres.

Slen. All his successors (gone before him) hath don't: and all his Ancestors (that come after him) may: they may give the dozen white Luces in their Coate.

Shal. It is an olde Coate.

Euans. The dozen white Louses doe become an old Coat well: it agrees well passant: It is a familiar beast to man, and signifies Loue.

Shal. The Luce is the fresh fish, the salt-fish, is an old Coate.

Slen. I may quarter (Coz).

Shal. You may, by marrying.

Euans. It is marring indeed, if he quarter it.

Shal. Not a whit.

Euans. Yes per-lady: if he has a quarter of your coat, there is but three Skarts for your selfe, in my simple conclusions: but that is all one: if Sir Iohn Fallstaffe haue committed disparagements vnto you, I am of the Church and will be glad to do my benevolence, to make attonements and compromises betweene you.

Shal. The Councell shall heare it, it is a Riot.

Euans. It is not meet the Councell heare a Riot: there is no feare of Got in a Riot: The Councell (looke you) shall desire to heare the feare of Got, and not to heare a Riot: take your vrsa-ments in that.

Shal. Ha; o'my life, if I were young againe, the sword should end it.

Euans. It is petter that friends is the sword, and end it: and there is also another device in my praine, which peradventure prings goot discretions with it. There is Anne Page, which is daughter to Master Thomas Page which is pretty virginity.

Slen. Mistris Anne Page? she has browne haire, and speaks small like a women.

Euans. It is that ferry person for all the orld, as iust as you will desire, and seuen hundred pounds of Monoyes, and Gold, and Siluer, is her Grand-fire vpon his deathsbed, (Got deliuer to a ioyfull resurrections) giue, when she is able to ouertake seuenteene yeeres old. It were a goot motion, if we leaue our prabbles and prabbles, and desire a marriage betweene Master Abraham, and Mistris Anne Page.

Slen. Did her Grand-sire leaue her seauen hundred pound?

Euan. I, and her father is make her a petter penny.

Slen. I know the young Gentlewoman, she has good gifts.

Euan. Seuen hundred pounds, and possibilities, is goot gifts.

Shal. Wel, let vs see honest Mr Page: is Falstaffe there?

Euan. Shall I tell you a lye? I doe despise a lyer, as I doe despise one that is false, or as I despise one that is not true: the Knight Sir Iohn is there, and I beseech you be ruled by your well-willers: I will prat the doore for Mr. Page. What hoe? Got-pless your house heere.

Mr. Page. Who's there?

Euan. Here is go't's plessing and your friend, and Iustice Shallow, and heere yong Master Slender: that peradventures shall tell you another tale, if matters grow to your likings.

Mr. Page. I am glad to see your Worships well: I thanke you for my Venison Master Shallow.

Shal. Master Page, I am glad to see you: much good doe it your good heart: I wish'd your Venison better, it was ill killd: how doth good Mistresse Page? and I thank you always with my heart, la: with my heart.

M. Page. Sir, I thanke you.

Shal. Sir, I thanke you: by yes, and no I doe.

M. Pa. I am glad to see you, good Master Slender.

Slen. How do's your fallow Greyhound, Sir, I heard say he was out-run on Cotsall.

M. Pa. It could not beandg'd, Sir.

Slen. You'll not confesse: you'll not confesse.

Shal. That he will not, 'tis your fault, 'tis your fault: 'tis a good dogge.

M. Pa. A Cur, Sir.

Shal. Sir: hee's a good dog, and a faire dog, can there be more said? he is good, and faire. Is Sir Iohn Fallstaffe heere?

M. Pa. Sir, hee is within: and I would I could doe a good office betweene you.

Euan. It is spoke as a Christians ought to speake.

Shal. He hath wrong'd me (Master Page.)

M. Pa. Sir, he doth in some sort confesse it.

Shal. If it be confessed, it is not redressed; is not that so (M. Page?) he hath wrong'd me, indeed he hath, at a word he hath; believe me, Robert Shallow Esquire, saith he is wronged.

Ma. Pa. Here comes Sir Iohn.

Fal. Now, Master Shallow, you'll complaine of me to the King?

Shal. Knight, you haue beaten my men, kill'd my derre, and ' .oke open my Lodge.

Fal. But not kiss'd your Keepers daughter?

Shal. Tut, a pin: this shall be answer'd.

Fal. I will answere it strait, I haue done all this: That is now answer'd.

Shal. The Councell shall know this.

Fal. 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsell: you'll be laugh'd at.

Ev. Pauca verba; (Sir Iohn) good worts.

Fal. Good worts? good Cabidge; Slender, I broke your head: what matter haue you against me?

Slen. Marry sir, I haue matter in my head against you, and against your cony-catching Rascalls, Bardolf, Nym, and Pistoll.

Bar. You Banbery Cheese.

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Pist. How now, Mephostophilus?

Slen. I, it is no matter.

Nym. Slice, I say; pauca, pauca: Slice, that's my humor.

Slen. Where's Simple my man? can you tell, Cosen?

Eua. Peace, I pray you: now let vs vnderstand: there is three Vmpires in this matter, as I vnderstand; that is, Master Page (fidelicet Master Page,) & there is my selfe, (fidelicet my selfe) and the three party is (lastly, and finally) mine Host of the Gater.

Ma. Pa. We three to hear it, & end it between them.

Eua. Ferry goo't, I will make a priefe of it in my note-booke, and we wil afterwards orke vpon the cause, with as great discreetly as we can.

Fal. Pistoll.

Pist. He hears with eares.

Eua. The Tewill and his Tam; what phrase is this? he hears with eare? why, it is affectations.

Fal. Pistoll, did you picke M. Slenders purse?

Slen. I, by these gloues did hee, or I would I might never come in mine owne great chamber againe else, of seauen groates in mill-sixpences, and two Edward Shouelboords, that cost me two shilling and two pence a peece of Yead Miller: by these gloues.

Fal. Is this true, Pistoll?

Eua. No, it is false, if it is a picke-purse.

Pist. Ha, thou mountaine Forreyner: Sir Iohn, and Master mine, I combat challenge of this Latine Bilboe: word of deniall in thy labras here; word of denial: froth, and scum thou liest.

Slen. By these gloues, then 'twas he.

Nym. Be aue'd sir, and passe good humours: I will say marry trap with you, if you runne the nut-hooks humor on me, that is the very note of it.

Slen. By this hat, then he in the red face had it: for though I cannot remember what I did when you made me drunke, yet I am not altogether an asse.

Fal. What say you Scarlet, and Iohn?

Bar. Why sir, (for my part) I say the Gentleman had drunke himselfe out of his fiue sentences.

Eu. It is his fiue senses: fie, what the ignorance is.

Bar. And being fap, sir, was (as they say) cashiered: and so conclusions past the Car-eires.

Slen. I, you speake in Latten then too: 'tis no matter; Ile nere be drunk whilst I liue againe, but in honest, civill, godly company for this tricke: if I be drunke, I'l be drunke with those that haue the feare of God, and not with drunken knaues.

Eua. So got-udge me, that is a vertuous minde.

Fal. You heare all these matters deni'd, Gentlemen, you heare it.

M. Page. Nay daughter, carry the wine in, we'l drinke within.

Slen. Oh heauen: This is Mistresse Anne Page.

M. Page How now Mistris Ford?

Fal. Mistris Ford, by my troth you are very wel met: by your leaue good Mistris.

M. Page. Wife, bid these gentlemen welcome: come, we haue a hot Venison pasty to dinner; Come gentlemen, I hope we shall drinke downe all vnkindnesse.

Slen. I had rather then forty shillings I had my book of Songs and Sonnets heere: How now Simple, where haue you beene? I must wait on my selfe, must I? you haue not the booke of Riddles about you, haue you?

Sim. Booke of Riddles? why did you not lend it to Alice Short-cake vpon Allhallowmas last, a fortnight before Michaelmas.

Shal. Come Cos, come Cos, we stay for you: a word with you Cos: marry this, Cos: there is a 'tweene a tender, a kinde of tender, made a farre-off by Sir Hugh here: doe you vnderstand me?

Slen. I Sir, you shall finde me reasonable; if it be so. I shall doe that that is reason.

Shal. Nay, but vnderstand me.

Slen. So I doe Sir.

Eua. Giue eare to his motions; (Mr. Slender) I will description the matter to you, if you be capacity of it.

Slen. Nay, I will doe as my Cozen Shallow saies: I pray you pardon me, he's a Iustice of Peace in his Countrie, simple though I stand here.

Eua. But this is not the question: the question is concerning your marriage.

Shal. I, there's the point Sir.

Eu. Marry is it; the very point of it, to Mi. Anne Page.

Slen. Why if it be so; I will marry her vpon any reasonable demands.

Eu. But can you affection the 'o-man, let vs commune to know that of your mouth, or of your lips: for divers Philosophers hold, that the lips is parcell of the mouth therfore precisely, Eu you carry your good wil to ỹ maid

Sh. Cosen Abraham Slender, can you loue her?

Slen. I hope sir, I will do as it shall become one that would doe reason.

Eu. Nay, got's Lords, and his Ladies, you must speak possitable, if you can carry-her your desires towards her

Shal. That you must:

Will you, (vpon good dowry) marry her?

Slen. I will doe a greater thing then that, vpon your request (Cosen) in any reason.

Shal. Nay conceiue me, conceiue mee. (Sweet Cos) what I doe is to pleasure you (Cos:) can you loue the maid?

Slen. I will marry her (Sir) at your request; but if there bee no great loue in the beginning, yet Heaven may decrease it vpon better acquaintance, when we are married, and haue more occasion to know one another: I hope vpon familiarity will grow more content: but if you say marry-her, I will marry-her, that I am freely dissolued, and dissolutely.

Eu. I

Ea. It is a fery discretion-answere; saue the fall is in th'ord, dissolutely: the ort is (according to our meaning) resolutely: his meaning is good.

Sh. I: I thinke my Cosen meant well.

Sl. Ie, or else I would I might be hang'd(la.)

Sh. Here, comes faire Mistris Anne; would I were yong for your sake, Mistris Anne.

An. The dinner is on the Table, my Father desires your worships company.

Sh. I will wait on him, (faire Mistris Anne.)

Ea. Od's plessed-will: I wil not be absence at the grace.

An. Will't please your worship to come in, Sir?

Sl. No, I thank you forsooth, hartely; I am very well.

An. The dinner attends you, Sir.

Sl. I am not a-hungry, I thanke you, forsooth: goe Sirha, for all you are my man, goe wait vpon my Cosen Shallow: a Iustice of peace sometime may be beholding to his friend, for a Man; I keepe but three Men, and a Boy yet, till my Mother be dead: but what though, yet I liue like a poore Gentleman borne.

An. I may not goe in without your worship: they will not sit till you come.

Sl. I faith, ile eate nothing: I thanke you as much as though I did.

An. I pray you Sir walke in.

Sl. I had rather walke here (I thanke you) I bruiz'd my shin th'other day, with playing at Sword and Dagger with a Master of Fence (three veneys for a dish of stew'd Prunes) and by my troth, I cannot abide the smell of hot meate since. Why doe your dogs barke so? be there Beares ith' Towne?

An. I thinke there are, Sir, I heard them talk'd of.

Sl. I loue the sport well, but I shall as soone quarrell at it, as any man in England: you are afraid if you see the Beare loose, are you not?

An. I indeede Sir.

Sl. That's meate and drinke to me now: I saw one Sackerson loose, twenty times, and hee taken him by the Chaine: but (I warrant you) the women haue so cride and shreekt at it, that it past: But women indeede, cannot abide 'em, they are very ill-fauour'd rough things.

Mr. Pa. Come, gentle M. Slender, come; we stay for you.

Sl. Ile eate nothing. I thanke you Sir.

Mr. Pa. By cocke and pie, you shall not choose, Sir eate, eate.

Sl. Nay, pray you lead the way.

Mr. Pa. Come on, Sir.

Sl. Mistris Anne: your selfe shall goe first.

An. Not I Sir, pray you keepe on.

Sl. Truely I will not goe first: truely-la: I will not doe you that wrong.

An. I pray you Sir.

Sl. Ile rather be vnmannerly, then troublesome: you doe your selfe wrong indeede-la. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Eaans, and Simple.

Ea. Go your waies, and aske of Doctor Caius house, which is the way; and there dwels one Mistris Quickly; which is in the manner of his Nurse; or his dry-Nurse; or his Cooke; or his Laundry; his Washer, and his Ringer.

Si. Well Sir.

Ea. Nay, it is better yet: giue her this letter; for it is a'oman that altogethers acquaintace with Mistris Anne Page; and the Letter is to desire, and require her to solicite your Masters desires, to Mistris Anne Page: I pray you be gon: I will make an end of my dinner; ther's Pippins and Cheese to come. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falstaffe, Host, Bardolfe, Nym, Pistoll, Page.

Fal. Mine Host of the Garter?

Ho. What saies my Bully Rooke? speake schollerly, and wisely.

Fal. Truely mine Host; I must turne away some of my followers.

Ho. Discard, (bully Hercules) cashiere; let them wag; trot, trot.

Fal. I sit at ten pounds a weeke.

Ho. Thou'rt an Emperor (Cæsar, Keiser and Phearaoh) I will entertaine Bardolfe: he shall draw; he shall tap: said I well (bully Hector?)

Fa. Doe so (good mine Host.

Ho. I haue spoke: let him follow: let me see thee froth, and liue: I am at a word: follow.

Fal. Bardolfe, follow him: a Tapster is a good trade. an old Cloake, makes a new Ierkin: a wither'd Seruingman, a fresh Tapster: goe, adew.

Ba. It is a life that I haue desir'd: I will thriue.

Pist. O base hungarian wight: wilt ♁ the spigot wield

Ni. He was gotten in drinkns not the humor cõceited?

Fal. I am glad I am so acquit of this Tinderbox: his Theefts were too open: his filching was like an vnskilfull Singer, he kept not time.

Ni. The good humor is to steale at a minutes rest.

Pist. Conuey: the wise it call: Steale? foh: a fico for the phrase.

Fal. Well sirs, I am almost out at heeles.

Pist. Why then let Kibes ensue.

Fal. There is no remedy: I must conicateh, I must shift.

Pist. Yong Rauens must haue foode.

Fal. Which of you know Ford of this Towne?

Pist. I ken the wight: he is of substance good.

Fal. My honest Lads, I will tell you what I am about.

Pist. Two yards, and more.

Fal. No quips now Pistoll: (Indeede I am in the waste two yards about: but I am now about no waste: I am about thrift) briefely: I doe meane to make loue to Fords wife: I spie entertainment in her: shee discourses: shee carues: she giues the leere of inuitation: I can construe the action of her familiar stile, & the hardest voice of her behauiour (to be english'd rightly) is, I am Sir Iohn Falstaffe.

Pist. He hath studied her will, and translated her will: out of honesty, into English.

Ni. The Anchor is deepe: will that humor passe?

Fal. Now, the report goes, she has all the rule of her husbands Purse: he hath a legend of Angels.

Pist. As many diuels entertaine: and to her Boy say I.

Ni. The humor rises: it is good: humor me the angels.

Fal. I haue writ me here a letter to her: & here another to Page: wife, who euen now gaue mee good eyes too examinde my parts with most iudicious illiads: sometimes the beame of her view, guilded my foote: sometimes my portly belly.

Pist. Then did the Sun on dunghill shine.
Ni. I thanke thee for that humour.
Fal. O she did so course o're my exteriors with such a greedy intention, that the appetite of her eye, did seeme to scorch me vp like a burning-glasse: here's another letter to her: She beares the Purse too: She is a Region in Guiana: all gold, and bountie: I will be Cheaters to them both, and they shall be Exchequers to mee: they shall be my East and West Indies; and I will trade to them both: Goe, beare thou this Letter to Mistris Page; and thou this to Mistris Ford: we will thriue (Lads) we will thriue.
Pist. Shall I Sir Pandarus of Troy become,
And by my side weare Steele? then Lucifer take all.
Ni. I will run no base humor: here take the humor-Letter; I will keepe the hauior of reputation.
Fal. Hold Sirrha, beare you these Letters tightly,
Saile like my Pinnasse to these golden shores.
Rogues, hence, auaunt, vanish like hailie-stones; goe,
Trudge; plod away ith' hoofe: seeke shelter, packe·
Falstaffe will learne the honor of the age,
French-thrift, you Rogues, my selfe, and skutted Page.
Pist. Let Vultures gripe thy guts: for gourd, and Fullam holds: & high and low beguiles the rich & poore,
Tester ile haue in pouch when thou shalt lacke,
Base Phrygian Turke.
Ni. I haue opperations,
Which be humors of reuenge.
Pist. Wilt thou reuenge?
Ni. By Welkin, and her Star.
Pist. With wit, or Steele:
Ni. With both the humors, I:
I will discusse the humour of this Loue to Ford.
Pist. And I to Page shall eke vnfold
How Falstaffe (varlet vile)
His Doue will proue: his gold will hold,
And his soft couch defile.
Ni. My humour shall not coole: I will incense Ford to deale with poyson: I will possesse him with yellownesse, for the reuolt of mine is dangerous: that is my true humour.
Pist. Thou art the Mars of Malecontents: I second thee: troope on. Exeunt.

Scœna Quarta.

Enter Mistris Quickly, Simple, Iohn Rugby, Doctor, Caius, Fenton.

Qu. What, Iohn Rugby, I pray thee goe to the Casement and see if you can see my Master, Master Doctor Caius comming: if he doe (I faith) and finde any body in the house; here will be an old abusing of Gods patience, and the Kings English.
Ru. Ile goe watch.
Qu Goe, and we'll haue a posset for't soone at night, (in faith) at the latter end of a Sea-cole-fire: An honest, willing, kinde fellow, as euer seruant shall come in house withall: and I warrant you, no tel-tale, nor no breede-bate: his worst fault is that he is giuen to prayer; hee is somthing peeuish that way: but no body but has his fault: but let that passe. Peter Simple, you say your name is?
Si. I: for fault of a better.
Qu. And Master Slender's your Master?
Si. I forsooth.
Qu. Do'ho not weare a great round Beard, like a Glouers paring-knife?
Si. No forsooth: he hath but a little wee-face; with a little yellow beard: a Caine coloured Beard.
Qu. A softly-spirighted man, is he not?
Si. I forsooth: but he is as tall a man of his hands, as any is betweene this and his head: he hath fought with a Warrener.
Qu. How say you: oh, I should remember him: do's he not hold vp his head, (as it were?) and strut in his gait?
Si. Yes indeede do's he.
Qu. Well, heauen send Anne Page, no worse fortune: Tell Master Parson Euans, I will doe what I can for your Master: Anne is a good girle, and I wish ——
Ru. Out alas: here comes my Master.
Qu. We shall all be shent: Run in here, good young man: goe into this Closet: he will not stay long: what Iohn Rugby? Iohn: what Iohn I say? goe Iohn, goe inquire for my Master, I doubt he be not well, that hee comes not home: (and down, down, adown'a, &c.
Ca. Vat is you sing? I doe not like des-toyes: pray you goe and vetch me in my Closet, vnboyteene verd: a Box, a greene-a-Box: do intend vat I speake? a greene-a-Box.
Qu. I forsooth ile fetch it you:
I am glad hee went not in himselfe: If he had found the yong man he would haue bin horne-mad.
Ca. Fe, fe, fe, fe, mai foy, il faut fort chaude, Ie meur vat a le Court la grand affaires.
Qu. Is it this Sir?
Ca. Oui mette le au mon pocket, depatch quickly:
Vere is dat knaue Rugby?
Qu. What Iohn Rugby, Iohn?
Ru. Here Sir.
Ca. You are Iohn Rugby, and you are Iaske Rugby: Come, take-a-your Rapier, and come after my heele to the Court.
Ru. 'Tis ready Sir, here in the Porch.
Ca. By my troe: I tarry too long: od's-me: qu'ay ie oublie: dere is some Simples in my Closet, dat I will not for the varld I shall leaue behinde.
Qu. Ay-me, he'll finde the yong man there, & be mad.
Ca. O Diable, Diable: vat is in my Closet? Villanie, La-roone: Rugby, my Rapier.
Qu. Good Master be content.
Ca. Wherefore shall I be content-a?
Qu. The yong man is an honest man.
Ca. What shall de honest man do in my Closet: dere is no honest man dat shall come in my Closet.
Qu. I beseech you be not so flegmaticke: heare the truth of it. He came of an errand to me, from Parson Hugh.
Ca. Vell.
Si. I forsooth: to desire her to ——
Qu. Peace, I pray you.
Ca. Peace-a-your tongue: speake-a-your Tale.
Si. To desire this honest Gentlewoman (your Maid) to speake a good word to Mistris Anne Page, for my Master in the way of Marriage.
Qu. This is all indeede-la: but ile ne're put my finger in the fire, and neede not.
Ca. Sir Hugh send-a you? Rugby, baillow me some paper: tarry you a littell-a-while.

Qui. I am glad he is so quiet: if he had bin throughly moved, you should have heard him so loud, and so melancholly: but notwithstanding man, Ile do you your Master what good I can: and the very yea, & the no is, the French Doctor my Master, (I may call him my Master, looke you, for I keepe his house; and I wash, ring, brew, bake, scowre, dresse meat and drinke, make the beds, and do all my selfe.)

Slep. 'Tis a great charge to come vnder one bodies hand.

Qui. Are you a-vis'd o'that? you shall finde it a great charge: and to be vp early, and down late: but notwithstanding, (to tell you in your ear, I wold haue no words of it) my Master himselfe is in loue with Mistris Anne Page: but notwithstanding that I know Anne mind, that's neither here nor there.

Caius. You, Jack Nape: give-a this Letter to Sir Hugh, by gar it is a challenge: I will cut his troat in de Parke, and I will teach a scurvy Jack-a-nape Priest to meddle, or make: —— you may be gon: it is not good you tarry here: by gar I will cut all his two stones: by gar, he shall not have a stone to throw at his dogge.

Qui. Alas: he speakes but for his friend.

Caius. It is no matter's ver dat: do not you tell-a-me dat I shall have Anne Page for my selfe? by gar, I will kill de Jack-Priest: and I have appointed mine Host of de Iarteer to measure our weapon: by gar, I will my selfe have Anne Page.

Qui. Sir, the maid loues you, and all shall bee well: We must give folkes leave to prate: what the good-ier.

Caius. Rugby, come to the Court with me: by gar, if I have not Anne Page, I shall turne your head out of my door: follow my heeles, Rugby.

Qui. You shall have An-foolies head of your owne: No, I know Anne mind for that: never a woman in Windsor knowes more of Anne minde than I doe, nor can doe more than I doe with her, I thanke heauen.

Fenton. Who's within there, hoe?

Qui. Who's there, I trow? Come neere the house I pray you.

Fen. How now (good woman) how dost thou?

Qui. The better that is pleaseth your good Worship to aske?

Fen. What news? how do's pretty Mistris Anne?

Qui. In truth Sir, and she is pretty, and honest, and gentle, and one that is your friend, I can tell you that by the way. I praise heauen for it.

Fen. Shall I doe any good thinkest thou? shall I not lose my suit?

Qui. Troth Sir, all is in his hands above: but notwithstanding (Master Fenton) Ile be sworne on a booke shee loues you: haue not your Worship a wart above your eye?

Fen. Yes marry have I, what of that?

Qui. Well, thereby hangs a tale: good faith, it is such another Nan; (but (I deare) an honest maid as ever broke bread: we had an howres talke of that wart; I shall never laugh but in that maids company: but (indeed) she is given too much to Allicholy and mating: but for you —— well —— goe too ——

Fen. Well: I shall see her to day: hold, there's money for thee: Let me heare thy voice in my behalfe: if thou seest her before me, commend me ——

Qui. Will I? I faith that wee will: And I will tell your Worship more of the Wart, the next time we haue conference, and of other wooers.

Fen. Well, fare-well, I am in great haste now.

Qui. Farre-well to your Worship: truely an honest Gentleman: but Anne loues him not: for I know Anne minde as well as another do's: out vpon't: what haue I forgot. Exeu.

Actus Secundus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, Master Page, Master Ford, Pistoll, Nim, Quickly, Host, Shallow.

Mist. Page. What, haue scap'd Loue-letters in the holly-day-time of my beauty, and am I now a subject for them? let me see?

Aske me no reason why I loue you, for though Loue vse Reason for his precision, he admits him not for his Counsellour. You are not young, no more am I: go to then, there's simpathie: you are merry, so am I: ha, ha, then there's more simpathie: you loue sacke, and so do I: would you desire better simpathie? Let it suffice thee (Mistris Page) at the least of the Loue of Souldiers can suffice, that I loue thee: I will not say pitty mee, 'tis not a Souldier-like phrase; but I say, loue me:

By me, thine owne true Knight, by day or night;
Or any kinde of light, with all his might,
For thee to fight. John Falstaffe.

What a Herod of Iurie is this? O wicked, wicked world: One that is well-nye worne to pieces with age To show himselfe a young Gallant? What an vnweiled Behaviour hath this Flemith drunkard picke (with The Deuills name) out of my conuersation, that he dares In this manner assay me? why, hee hath not beene thrice In my Company: what should I say to him? I was then Frugall of my mirth: (heauen forgiue mee:) why Ile Exhibit a Bill in the Parliament for the putting downe of men: how shall I be reueng'd on him? for reueng'd I will be? as sure as his guts are made of puddings.

Mist Ford. Mistris Page, trust me, I was going to your house.

Mist. Page. And trust me, I was comming to you: you looke very ill.

Mist. Ford. Nay, Ile neere believe thee; I haue to shew to the contrary.

Mist. Page. 'Faith but you doe in my minde.

Mist. Ford. Well: I doe then: yet I say, I could shew you to the contrary: O Mistris Page, give mee some counsaile.

Mist. Page. What's the matter, woman?

Mi. Ford. O woman; if it were not for one trifling respect, I could come to such honour.

Mi. Page. Hang the trifle (woman) take the honour what is it? dispence with trifles: what is it?

Mi. Ford. If I would but goe to hell, for an eternall moment, or so: I could be knighted.

Mi. Page. What thou lieest? Sir Alice Ford? these Knights will hacke, and so thou shouldst not stear the article of thy Gentry.

Mi. Ford. Wee turne day-light: heere, read, read: perceiue how I might bee knighted, I shall thinke the worse of fat men, as long as I haue an eye to make difference of meate liking: and yet hee would not sweare; praise praise womens modesty: and gaue such orderly and well-behaued reproofe to al vncomelinesse, that I would haue sworne his disposition would haue gone to the truth of his words: but they doe no more adhere and keep place together, then the hundred Psalms to the tune of Greensleeues: What tempest (I troe) threw this Whale, (with so many Tuns of oyle in his belly) a'shoare at Windsor? How shall I bee reuenged on him? I thinke the best way were, to entertaine him with hope, till the wicked fire of lust haue melted him in his owne grease: Did you euer heare the like?

Mis.Page. Letter for letter; but that the name of Page and Ford differs: to thy great comfort in this mystery of ill opinions, heere's the twyn-brother of thy Letter: but let thine inherit first, for I protest mine neuer shall: I warrant he hath a thousand of these Letters, writ with blanke-space for different names (sure more): and these are of the second edition: hee will print them out of doubt: for he cares not what hee puts into the presse, when he would put vs two: I had rather be a Gianteesse, and lye vnder Mount Pelion: Well; I will find you twentie lascinious Turtles ere one chaste man.

Mis.Ford. Why this is the very same: the very hand: the very words: what doth he thinke of vs?

Mis.Page. Nay I know not: it makes me almost readie to wrangle with mine owne honesty: Ile entertaine my selfe like one that I am not acquainted withall: for sure vnlesse hee know some strayne in mee, that I know not my selfe, hee would neuer haue boorded me in this fasie.

Mis. Ford. Boording, call you it? Ile bee sure to keepe him aboue decke.

Mis.Page. So will I: if hee come vnder my hatches, Ile never to Sea againe: Let's bee reueng'd on him: let's appoint him a meeting: giue him a shew of comfort in his Suit, and lead him on with a fine baited delay, till hee hath pawn'd his horses to mine Host of the Garter.

Mis.Ford. Nay, I will consent to act any villany against him, that may not sully the chaunesse of our honesty: oh that my husband saw this Letter: it would giue eternall food to his iealousie.

Mis.Page. Why look where he comes; and my good man too: hee's as farre from iealousie, as I am from giuing him cause, and that (I hope) is an vnmeasurable distance.

Mis.Ford. You are the happier woman.

Mis.Page. Let's consult together against this greasie Knight: Come hither.

Ford. Well: I hope, it be not so

Pist. Hope is a curtall-dog in some affaires:
Sir John affects thy wife.

Ford. Why sir, my wife is not young.

Pist. He woos both high and low, both rich & poor, both yong and old, one with another (Ford) he loues the Gally-mawfry (Ford) perpend.

Ford. Loue my wife?

Pist. With liuer, burning hot: prouent:
Or goe thou like Sir Actaon he, with Ring-wood at thy heeles: O, Actaon is the name.

Ford. What name Sir?

Pist. The horne I say: Farewell:
Take heed, haue open eye, for theeues doe foot by night.
Take heed, ere summer comes, or Cuckoo-birds do sing.
Away sir Corporall Nim
Beleeue it (Page) he speakes sence.

Ford. I will be patient: I will find out this.

Nim. And this is true: I like not the humor of lying: he hath wronged me in some humors: I should haue borne the humour'd Letter to her: but I haue a sword: and it shall bite vpon my necessitie: he loues your wife; There's the short and the long: My name is Corporall Nim: I speak, and I mouch; 'tis true: my name is Nim: and Falstaffe loues your wife: adieu, I loue not the humour of bread and cheese: adieu.

Page. The humour of it (quoth'a?) heere's a fellow frights English out of his wits.

Ford. I will seeke out Falstaffe.

Page. I never heard such a drawling-affecting rogue.

Ford. If I doe finde it: well.

Page. I will not beleeue such a Cataio, though the Priest o'th'Towne commended him for a true man.

Ford. 'Twas a good sensible fellow: well.

Page. How now Meg?

Mist. Page. Whether goe you (George?) harke you.

Mis Ford. How now (sweet Frank) why art thou melancholy?

Ford. I melancholy? I am not melancholy:
Get you home: goe.

Mis.Ford. Faith, thou hast some crochets in thy head, Now: will you goe Mistris Page?

Mis.Page. Haue with you you'll come to dinner George? Looke who comes yonder: shee shall bee our Messenger to this paltrie Knight.

Mis.Ford. Trust me, I thought on her: shee'll fit it.

Mis.Page. You are come to see my daughter Anne?

Qu. I forsooth: and I pray how do's good Mistresse Anne?

Mis.Page. Go in with vs and see: we haue an hours talke with you.

Page. How now Master Ford?

For. You heard what this knaue told me, did you not?

Page. Yes, and you heard what the other told me?

Ford. Doe you thinke there is truth in them?

Pag. Hang em slaues: I doe not thinke the Knight would offer it: But these that accuse him in his intent towards our wiues, are a yoake of his discarded men: very rogues, now they be out of seruice.

Ford. Were they his men?

Page. Marry were they.

Ford. I like it never the beter for that,
Do's he lye at the Garter?

Page. I marry do's he: if hee should intend this voyage toward my wife, I would turne her loose to him; and what hee gets more of her, then sharpe words, let it lye on my head.

Ford. I doe not mistoubt my wife: but I would bee loath to turne them together: a man may be too confident: I would haue nothing lye on my head: I cannot be thus satisfied.

Page. Looke where my ranting-Host of the Garter comes: there is eyther liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when hee looke so merrily: How now mine Host?

Host. How now Bully-Rooke: thou'rt a Gentleman Cauelero Iustice, I say

Shal. I follow, (mine Host) I follow. Good-euen, and twenty (good Master Page.) Master Page, will you go with vs? we haue sport in hand.

Host. Tell him Cauelero-Iustice: tell him Bully-Rooke.

Shal. Sir, there is a fray to be fought, betweene Sir Hugh the Welch Priest, and Caius the French Doctor.

Ford. Good

Ford. Good mine Host o'th Garter: a word with you.

Hos. What saist thou, my Bully-Rooke?

Shal. Will you go with vs to behold it? My merry Host hath had the measuring of their weapons; and (I thinke) hath appointed them contrary places; for (be-leeue me) I heare the Parson is no Iester: harke, I will tell you what our sport shall be.

Hos. Hast thou no suit against my Knight? my guest-Caualiere?

Shal. None, I protest: but I'le giue you a pottle of burn'd sacke, to give me recourse to him, and tell him my name is Broome: only for a iest.

Hos. My hand, (Bully:) thou shalt haue egresse and regresse, (said I well?) and thy name shall be Broome. It is a merry Knight: will you go An-heires?

Shal. Haue with you mine Host.

Page. I haue heard the French-man hath good skill in his Rapier.

Shal. Tut sir: I could haue told you more: In these times you stand on distance: your Passes, Stoccado's, and I know not what: 'tis the heart (Master Page) 'tis here, 'tis here: I haue seene the time, with my long-sword, I would haue made you foure tall fellowes skippe like Rattes.

Hos. Here boyes, here, here: shall we wag?

Page. Haue with you: I had rather heare them scold, then fight.

Ford. Though Page be a secure foole, and stands so firmely on his wiues frailty; yet, I cannot put-off my opinion so easily: she was in his company at *Page*s house: and what they made there, I know not. Well, I will looke further into 't, and I haue a disguise, to sound Falstaffe; if I finde her honest, I loose not my labor: if she be otherwise, 'tis labour well bestowed. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe, Pistoll, Robin, Quickly, Bardolffe, Ford.

Fal. I will not lend thee a penny.

Pist. Why then the world's mine Oyster, which I, with sword will open.

Fal. Not a penny: I haue beene content (Sir,) you should lay my countenance to pawne: I haue grated vpon my good friends for three Reprieues for you, and your Coach-fellow Nimy; else you had look'd through the grate, like a Gaminy of Baboones: I am damn'd in hell, for swearing to Gentlemen my friends, you were good Souldiers, and tall-fellowes. And when Mistrisse Briget lost the handle of her Fan, I took't vpon mine honour thou hadst it not.

Pist. Didst not thou share? hadst thou not fifteene pence?

Fal. Reason, you rogues, reason: thinkst thou I'le endange my soule, gratis? at a word, hang no more about me, I am no gibbet for you: goe, a short knife, and a throng, go your Manner of Pickt-hatch: goe, you'll not beare a Letter for me you rogues? you stand vpon your honor: why, (thou vncomfortable balestiffe) it is as much as I can doe to keepe the termes of my honoure precise: I, I, I my selfe sometimes, leaning the stem of honoure on the left hand, and bidding mine honor in my necessity, am faine to shuffle: to hedge, and to lurch, and yet, you Rogue, will ensconce your rags; your Cat-a-Mountaine-lookes, your red-lattice phrases, and your bold-beating-oathes, vnder the shelter of your honor? you will not doe it? you?

Pist. I doe relent: what would thou more of man?

Robin. Sir, here's a woman would speake with you.

Fal. Let her approach.

Qui. Giue your worship good morrow.

Fal. Good-morrow, good-wife.

Qui. Not so, and't please your worship.

Fal. Good maid then.

Qui. I'le be sworne,
As my mother was the first houre I was borne.

Fal. I doe believe the swearer; what wish me?

Qui. Shall I vouch-safe your worship a word, or two?

Fal. Two thousand (faire woman) and ile vouchsafe thee the hearing.

Qui. There is one Mistrisse Ford, (Sir) I pray come a little nearer this waies: I my selfe dwell with M. Doctor Caius:

Fal. Well, on; Mistrisse Ford, you say.

Qui. Your worship saies very true: I pray your worship come a little nearer this waies.

Fal. I warrant thee, no-bodie heares: mine owne people, mine owne people.

Qui. Are they so? heauen-blesse them, and make them his Seruants.

Fal. Well; Mistrisse Ford, what of her?

Qui. Why, Sir; shee's a good-creature; Lord, Lord, your Worship's a wanton: well: heauen forgiue you, and all of vs, I pray———.

Fal. Mistrisse Ford: come, Mistrisse Ford.

Qui. Marry this is the short, and the long of it: you haue brought her into such a Canaries, as 'tis wonderfull: the best Courtier of them all (when the Court lay at Windsor) could never haue brought her to such a Canarie: yet there has beene Knights, and Lords, and Gentlemen, with their Coaches; I warrant you Coach after Coach, letter after letter, gift after gift, smelling so sweetly; all Muske, and so rustling, I warrant you, in silke and golde, and in such alligant termes, and in such wine and sugar of the best, and the fairest, that would have wonne any womans heart: and I warrant you, they could never get an eye-winke of her: I had my selfe twenty Angels given me this morning, but I dese all Angels (in any such sort, as they say) but in the way of honesty: and I warrant you, they could never get her so much as sippe on a cup with the proudest of them all, and yet there has beene Earles: nay, (which is more) Pensioners, but I warrant you all is one with her.

Fal. But what saies shee to mee? be briefe my good shee-Mercury.

Qui. Marry, she hath receiu'd your Letter; for the which she thankes you a thousand times; and she gives you to notifie, that her husband will be absence from his house, betweene ten and eleuen.

Fal. Ten, and eleuen.

Qui. I, forsooth: and then you may come and see the picture (she says) that you wot of: Master Ford her husband will be from home: alas, the sweet woman leades an ill life with him: he's a very iealoufie-man; she leads a very frampold life with him, (good heart.)

Fal. Ten, and eleuen.

Women

Woman, commend me to her, I will not faile her.

Qu. Why, you say well: But I haue another messenger to your worship: Mistresse Page hath her hearte commendations to you to: and let mee tell you in your eare, shee's as fartuous a civill modest wife, and one (I tell you) that will not misse you morning nor evening prayer, as any is in Windsor, who ere bee the other: and shee bade me tell your worship, that her husband is seldome from home, but she hopes there will come a time. I never knew a woman so doate vpon a man; surely I thinke you haue charmes, la: yes in truth.

Fal. Not I, I assure thee; setting the attraction of my good parts aside, I haue no other charmes.

Qu. Blessing on your heart for't.

Fal. But I pray thee tell me this: has Fords wife, and Pages wife acquainted each other, how they loue me?

Qu. That were a lest indeed: they haue not so little grace I hope, that were a tricke indeed. But Mistris Page would desire you to send her your little Page of al loues: her husband has a marvellous infection to the little Page: and truely Master Page is an honest man: never a wife in Windsor leades a better life: then she does: doe what shee will, say what she will, take all, pay all, goe to bed when she list, rise when she list, all is as she will: and truly she deserues it; for if there be a kinde women in Windsor, she is one: you must send her your Page, no remedie.

Fal. Why, I will.

Qu. Nay, but doe so then and looke you, hee may come and goe betweene you both: and in any case haue a nay-word, that you may know one anothers minde, and the Boy never neede to vnderstand any thing; for 'tis not good that children should know any wickednes: olde folkes you know, haue discretion, as they say, and know the world.

Fal. Farethee well, commend mee to them both: there's my purse, I am yet thy debter. Boy, goe along with this woman, this newes distracts me.

Pist. This Puncke is one of Cupids Carriers,
Clap on more sailes, pursue: vp with your fighes:
Giue fire: she is my prize, or Ocean whelme them all.

Fal. Saist thou so (old Iacke) go thy waies: Ile make more of thy olde body then I haue done: will they yet looke after thee? wilt thou after the expence of so much money, be now a gainer? good Body, I thanke thee: let them say 'tis grossely done, so it bee fairely done. no matter.

Bar. Sir John, there's one Master Broome below would faine speake with you, and be acquainted with you; and hath sent your worship a mornings draught of Sacke.

Fal. Broome is his name?

Bar. I Sir.

Fal. Call him in: such Broomes are welcome to mee, that ore'flowes such liquor: ah ha, Mistresse Ford and Mistresse Page, haue I encompass'd you? goe to, via.

Ford. Blesse you sir.

Fal. And you sir. would you speake with me?

Ford. I make bold, to presse, with so little preparation vpon you.

Fal. You'r welcome, what's your will? giue vs leaue Drawer.

Ford. Sir. I am a Gentleman that haue spent much, my name is Broome.

Fal. Good Master Broome, I desire more acquaintance of you.

Ford. Good Sir John, I sue for yours. not to charge you, for I must let you vnderstand, I thinke my selfe in better plight for a Lender, then you are: the which hath something emboldned me to this vnseason'd intrusion: for they say, if money goe before, all waies doe lye open.

Fal. Money is a good Souldier (Sir) and will on.

Ford. Troth, and I haue a bag of money heere troubles me: if you will helpe to beare it (Sir John) take all, or halfe, for easing me of the carriage.

Fal. Sir, I know not how I may deserue to bee your Porter.

Ford. I will tell you sir, if you will giue mee the hearing.

Fal. Speake (good Master Broome) I shall be glad to be your Seruant.

Ford. Sir, I heare you are a Scholler: (I will be briefe with you) and you haue been a man long knowne to me, though I had never so good means as desire, to make my selfe acquainted with you. I shall discouer a thing to you, wherein I must very much lay open mine owne imperfection: but (good Sir John) as you haue one eye vpon my follies, as you heare them vnfolded, turne another into the Register of your owne, that I may passe with a reproofe the easier, sith you your selfe know how easie it is to be such an offender.

Fal. Very well Sir, proceed.

Ford. There is a Gentlewoman in this Towne, her husbands name is Ford.

Fal. Well Sir.

Ford. I haue long lou'd her, and I protest to you, bestowed much on her: followed her with a doting observance: ingross'd opportunities to meete her: fee'd every slight occasion that could but niggardly giue mee sight of her: not only bought many presents to giue her, but haue giuen largely to many, to know what shee would haue giuen: briefly, I haue pursu'd her, as Loue hath pursued mee, which hath beene on the wing of all occasions: but whatsoever I haue merited, either in my minde, or in my meanes, meede I am sure I haue receiued none, vnlesse Experience be a Iewell, that I haue purchased at an infinite rate, and that hath taught mee to say this,

"Loue like a shadow flies, when subst ance Loue pursues,
"Pursuing that that flies, and flying what pursues

Fal. Haue you receiu'd no promise of satisfaction at her hands?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Haue you importun'd her to such a purpose?

Ford. Never.

Fal. Of what qualitie was your loue then?

Ford. Like a fair house, built on another mans ground, so that I haue lost my edifice, by mistaking the place, where I erected it.

Fal. To what purpose haue you vnfolded this to me?

Ford. When I haue told you that, I haue told you all: Some say, that though she appeare honest to mee, yet in other places shee enlargeth her mirth so farre, that there is shrewd construction made of her. Now (Sir John) here is the heart of my purpose: you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, admirable discourse, of great admittance, authenticke in your place and person, generally allow'd for your many warlike, court-like, and learned preparations.

Fal. O Sir.

Ford. Believe it, for you know it: there is money, spend it, spend it, spend more; spend all I haue, onely

giue

give me so much of your time in exchange of it, as to lay an amiable siege to the honesty of this Fords wife: vse your Art of wooing; win her to consent to you: if any man may, you may as soone as any.

Fal. Would it apply well to the vehemency of your affection that I should win what you would enioy? Methinks you prescribe to your selfe very preposterously.

Ford. O, vnderstand my drift: she dwells so securely on the excellency of her honor, that the folly of my soule dares not present it selfe: shee is too bright to be look'd against. Now, could I come to her with any detection in my hand; my desires had instance and argument to commend themselues, I could driue her then from the ward of her purity, her reputation, her marriage-vow, and a thousand other her defences, which now are too-too strongly embattaild against me: what say you too't, Sir Iohn?

Fal. Master Brooke, I will first make bold with your money: next, give mee your hand: and last, as I am a gentleman, you shall, if you will, enioy Fords wife.

Ford. O good Sir.

Fal. I say you shall.

Ford. Want no money (Sir Iohn) you shall want none.

Fal. Want no Mistresse Ford (Master Brooke) you shall want none: I shall be with her (I may tell you) by her owne appointment, even as you came in to me, her assistant, or goe-betweene, parted from me: I say I shall be with her betweene ten and eleuen: for at that time the iealous-iaccally-knaue her husband will be forth: come you to me at night, you shall know how I speed.

Ford. I am blest in your acqeaintance: do you know Ford Sir?

Fal. Hang him (poore Cuckoldly knaue) I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poore: They say the iealous wittolly-knaue hath masses of money, for the which his wife seemes to me well-fauoured: I will vse her as the key of the Cuckoldly-rogues Coffer, & there's my harvest-home.

Ford. I would you knew Ford, sir, that you might auoid him, if you saw him.

Fal. Hang him, mechanicall-salt-butter rogue; I will stare him out of his wits: I will awe him with my cudgell: it shall hang like a Meteor ore the Cuckolds horns: Master Brooke, thou shalt know, I will predominate ouer the peasant, and thou shalt lye with his wife. Come to me soone at night: Ford's a knaue, and I will aggrauate his stile: thou (Master Brooke) shalt know him for knaue, and Cuckold. Come to me soone at night.

Ford. What a damn'd Epicurian-Rascall is this? my heart is ready to crack with impatience: who saies this is improuident iealousie? my wife hath sent to him, the houre is fixt, the match is made: would any man haue thought this? see the hell of hauing a false woman: my bed shall be abus'd, my Coffers ransack'd, my reputation gnawne at, and I shall not onely receiue this villanous wrong, but stand vnder the adoption of abhominable terms, and by him that does mee this wrong: Termes, names: Amaimon sounds well: Lucifer, well: Barbason, well: yet they are Diuels additions, the names of fiends: But Cuckold, Wittell. Cuckold? the Diuell himselfe hath not such a name. Page is an Asse, a secure Asse; hee will trust his wife, hee will not be iealous: I will rather trust a Flemming with my butter, Parson Hugh the Welshman with my Cheese, an Irish-man with my Aqua-vitæ-bottle, or a Theefe to walke my ambling gelding, then my wife with her selfe. Then she plots, then shee ruminates, then shee deuises: and what they thinke in their hearts they may effect; they will breake their hearts but they will effect. Heauen bee prais'd for my iealousie: eleuen o' clocke the houre, I will preuent this, detect my wife, bee reuenge'd on Falstaffe, and laugh at Page. I will about it, better three houres too soone, then a minute too late: fie, fie, fie: Cuckold, Cuckold, Cuckold.

Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Caius, Rugby, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host.

Caius. Iack Rugby.

Rug. Sir.

Caius. Vat is the clocke, Iack.

Rug. 'Tis past the howre (Sir) that Sir Hugh promis'd to meet.

Cai. By gar, he has saue his soule, dat he is no-come: hee has pray his Pible well, dat he is no-come: by gar (Iack Rugby) he is dead already, if he be come.

Rug. Hee is wise Sir: hee knew your worship would kill him if he came.

Cai. By gar, de herring is no dead, so as I will kill him: take your Rapier, (Iacky) I will tell you how I vill kill him.

Rug. Alas sir, I cannot fence.

Cai. Villanie, take your Rapier.

Rug. Forbeare: heer's company.

Host. 'Blesse thee, bully-Doctor.

Shal. 'Saue you Mr. Doctor Caius.

Page. Now, good Mr. Doctor.

Slen. 'Giue you good-morrow, sir.

Caius. Vet be all you one, two, tree, fowre, come for?

Host. To see thee fight, to see thee foigne, to see thee traverse, to see thee heere, to see thee there, to see thee passe thy punchio, thy stock, thy reuerse, thy distance, thy montant: Is he dead, my Ethiopian? Is he dead, bully-Stale? is he dead?

Cai. By gar, he is de Coward-Iack-Priest of de vorld: he is not show his face.

Host. Thou art a Castalion king-Vrinall: Hector of Greece (my Boy)

Cai. I pray you bere witnesse, that me haue stay, six or seuen, two tree howres for him, and hee is no-come.

Shal. He is the wiser man (M. Doctor) he is a curer of soules, and you a curer of bodies: if you should fight, you goe against the haire of your professions: is it not true, Master Page?

Page. Master Shallow; you haue your selfe beene a great fighter, though now a man of peace.

Shal. Body-kins M. Page, though I now be old, and of the peace; if I see a sword out, my finger itches to make one: though wee are Iustices, and Doctors, and Churchmen (M. Page) wee haue some salt of our youth in vs, we are the sons of women (M. Page.)

Page. 'Tis true, Mr. Shallow.

Shal. It wil be found so, (M. Page:) M. Doctor Caius, I am come to fetch you home: I am sworn of the peace: you haue show'd your selfe a wise Physician, and Sir Hugh hath showne himselfe a wise and patient Churchman: you must goe with me, M. Doctor.

Host. Pas-

Host. Pardon, Guest-Iustice; a Monsieur Mocke-water.

Cai. Mock-vater? vat is dat?

Host. Mock-water, in our English tongue, is Valour (Bully.)

Cai. By gar, then I haue as much Mock-vater as de Englishman: scurvy-lack-dog-Priest: by gar, mee vill cut his eares.

Host. He will Clapper-claw thee tightly (Bully.)

Cai. Clapper-de-claw? vat is dat?

Host. That is, he will make thee amends.

Cai. By-gar, me doe looke hee shall clapper-de-claw me, for by-gar, me vill haue it.

Host. And I will provoke him to 't, or let him wag.

Cai. Me tanck you for dat.

Host. And moreouer, (Bully) but first, Mr. Ghuest, and M. Page, & eeke Caualeiro Slender, goe you through the Towne to Frogmore.

Page. Sir Hugh is there, is he?

Host. He is there, see what humor he is in: and I will bring the Doctor about by the Fields: will it doe well?

Shal. We will doe it.

All. Adieu, good M. Doctor.

Cai. By-gar, me vill kill de Priest, for he speake for a Iack-an-Ape to Anne Page.

Host. Let him dies sheath thy impatience: throw cold water on thy Choller: goe about the fields with mee through Frogmore, I will bring thee where Mistris Anne Page is, at a Farm-house a-Feasting: and thou shals woo her: Cride-game, said I well?

Cai. By-gar, mee dancke you vor dat: by gar I loue you: and I shall procure 'a you de good Guest: de Earle, de Knighte, de Lords, de Gentlemen, my patients.

Host. For the which, I will be thy aduersary toward Anne Page: said I well?

Cai. By-gar, 'tis good: vell said.

Host. Let vs wag then.

Cai. Come at my heeles, Iack Rugby.

Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scœna Prima.

Enter Evans, Simple, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Caius, Rugby.

Evans. I pray you now, good Master Slender's seruing-man, and friend Simple by your name; which way haue you look'd for Master Caius, that calls himselfe Doctor of Phisicke.

Sim. Marry Sir, the pittie-ward, the Parke-ward: every way: olde Windsor way, and every way but the Towne-way.

Evans. I most fehemently desire you, you will also looke that way.

Sim. I will sir.

Evans. 'Pleese my soule! how full of Chollers I am, and trempling of minde: I shall be glad if he haue deceiued me: how melancholies I am? I will knog his Vrinalls about his knaues costard, when I haue good oportunities for the orke: 'Pleese my soule: To shallow Riuers, to whose falls: melodious Birds sings Madrigalls: There will we make our Peds of Roses: and a thousand fragrant posies. To shallow: 'Mercie on mee, I haue a great dispositions to cry. Melodious birds sing Madrigalls: —— When as I sat in Pabilon: and a thousand vagrant Posies. To shallow, &c.

Sim. Yonder he is comming, this way, Sir Hugh.

Evans. Hee's welcome: To shallow Riuers, to whose falls: Heauen prosper the right: what weapons is he?

Sim. No weapons, Sir: there comes my Master, Mr. Shallow, and another Gentlemen; from Frogmore, ouer the stile, this way.

Evans. Pray you giue mee my gowne, or else keepe it in your armes.

Shal. How now Master Parson? good morrow good Sir Hugh: keepe a Gamester from the dice, and a good Studient from his booke, and it is wonderfull.

Slen. Ah sweet Anne Page.

Page. 'Saue you, good Sir Hugh.

Evans. 'Pleese you from his mercy-sake, all of you.

Shal. What? the Sword, and the Word? Do you studyе them both, Mr. Parson?

Page. And youthfull still, in your doublet and hose, this raw-rumaticke day?

Evans. There is reasons, and causes for it.

Page. We are come to you, to doe a good office, Mr. Parson.

Evans. Fery-well: what is it?

Page. Yonder is a most reuerend Gentleman; who (be-like) having received wrong by some person, is at most odds with his owne gravity and patience, that ever you saw.

Shal. I haue lived fourre-score yeeres, and vpward: I never heard a man of his place, gravity, and learning, so wide of his owne respect.

Evans. What is he?

Page. I think you know him: Mr. Doctor Caius the renowned French Physician.

Evans. Got's-will, and his passion of my heart: I had as liefe you would tell me of a messe of porredge.

Page. Why?

Evans. He has no more knowledge in Hibocrates and Galen, and hee is a knaue besides: a cowardly knaue, as you would desires to be acquainted withall.

Page. I warrant you, hee's the man should fight with him.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Shal. It appeares so by his weapons: keepe them asunder: here comes Doctor Caius.

Page. Nay good Mr. Parson, keepe in your weapon.

Shal. So doe you, good Mr. Doctor.

Host. Disarme them, and let them question: let them keepe their limbs whole, and hack our English.

Cai. I pray you let-a-mee speake a word with your eare; wherefore vill you not meet-a me?

Evans. Pray you vse your patience in good time.

Cai. By-gar, you are de Coward: de Iack dog: Iohn Ape.

Evans. Pray you let vs not be laughing-stocks to other mens humors: I desire you in friendship, and I will one way or other make you amend: I will knog your Vrinal about your knaues Cogs-combe.

Cai. Diable: Iack Rugby: mine Host de Iarteer: haue I not stay for him, to kill him? haue I not at de place I did appoint?

Evans. As I am a Christians-soule, now looke you: this is the place appointed, Ile bee iudgement by mine Host of the Garter.

Host. Peace, I say, Gallia and Gaule, French & Welsh, Soule-Curer, and Body-Curer.

Cai. I,

Cai. I, dat is very good, excellent.

Host. Peace, I say: hearke mine Host of the Garter. Am I politicke? Am I subtle? Am I a Machiavell? Shall I loose my Doctor? No, hee gives me the Potions and the Motions. Shall I loose my Parson? my Priest? my Sir Hugh? No, he gives me the Proverbes, and the No-verbes. Give me thy hand (Celestiall) so. Boyes of Art, I have deceiu'd you both. I have directed you to wrong places: your hearts are mighty, your skinnes are whole, and let burn'd Sacke be the issue: Come, lay their swords to pawne: Follow me, Lad of peace, follow, follow, follow.

Shal. Trust me, a mad Host: follow Gentlemen, follow.

Slen. O sweet Anne Page.

Cai. Ha' do I perceiue dat? Have you make-a-de-sot of us, ha, ha?

Fen. This is well, he has made vs his vlowting-stog: I desire you that we may be friends: and let vs knog our prains together to be reuenge on this same scull-scurvy-cogging-companion the Host of the Garter.

Cai. By gar, with all my heart: he promise to bring me where is Anne Page: by gar he deceiue me too.

Fen. Well, I will smite his noddles: pray you follow.

Scena Secunda.

Mist. Page, Robin, Ford, Page, Shallow, Slender, Host, Evans, Caius.

Mist. Page. Nay keepe your way (little Gallant) you were wont to be a follower, but now you are a Leader: whether had you rather lead mine eyes, or eye your masters heeles?

Rob. I had rather (forsooth) go before you like a man, than follow him like a dwarfe. (Courtier.

M. Pa. O you are a flattering boy, now I see you'l be a

Ford. Well met mistris Page, whether go you

M. Pa. Truly Sir, to see your wife, is she at home?

Ford. I, and as idle as she may hang together for want of company. I thinke if your husbands were dead, you two would marry.

M. Pa. Be sure of that, two other husbands.

Ford. Where had you this pretty weather-cocke?

M. Pa. I cannot tell what (the dickens) his name is my husband had him of, what do you call your Knights name (sirrah?

Rob. Sir John Fallstaffe.

Ford. Sir John Fallstaffe.

M. Pa. He, he, I can neither his on's name; there is such a league betweene my goodman, and he: is your Wife at Ford. Indeed she is. (home indeed?

M. Pa. By your leaue sir, I am sicke till I see her.

Ford. Has Page any braines? Hath he any eies? Hath he any thinking? Sure they sleepe, he hath no vse of them: why this boy will carrie a letter twentie mile as easie, as a Canon will shoot point-blanke twelue score: hee pees out his wiues inclination: he giues her folly motion and aduantage: and now she's going to my wife, & Fallstaffe boy with her: A man may heare this showre sing in the winde; and Fallstaffes boy with her: good plots, they are laide, and our reuolted wiues share damnation together. Well, I will take him, then torture my wife, pluck the borrowed vaile of modestie from the so-seeming Mist. Page, diuulge Page himselfe for a secure and wilfull Actaon, and to these violent proceedings all my neighbors shall cry aame. The clocke giues me my Qu, and my assurance bids me search, there I shall finde Fallstaffe: I shall be rather praisd for this, then mock'd, for it is as possible, as the earth is firme, that Fallstaffe is there: I will go.

Shal. Page, &c. Well met Mr Ford.

Ford. Trust me, a good knotte: I have good cheere at home, and I pray you all go with me.

Shal. I must excuse my selfe Mr Ford.

Slen. And so must I Sir,
We haue appointed to dine with Mistris Anne,
And I would not breake with her for more money
Then I'le speake of.

Shal. We haue linger'd about a match betweene Anne Page, and my cousen Slender, and this day wee shall haue our answer.

Slen. I hope I haue your good will Father Page.

Pag. You haue Mr Slender, I stand wholly for you,
But my wife (Mr Doctor) is for you altogether.

Cai. I be-gar, and de Maid is loue-a-me. my nurse-a-Quickly tell me so mush.

Host. What say you to yong Mr Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eies of youth: he writes verses, hee speakes holliday, he smels April and May, he will carry't, he will carry't, 'tis in his buttons, he will carry't.

Page. Not by my consent I promise you. The Gentleman is of no having, hee kept companie with the wilde Prince, and Poins: he is of too high a Region, he knows too much: no, hee shall not knit a knot in his fortunes, with the finger of my substance: if he take her, let him take her simply: the wealth I haue waits on my consent, and my consent goes not that way.

Ford. I beseech you heartily, some of you goe home with me to dinner: besides your cheere you shall haue sport, I will shew you a monster: Mr Doctor, you shal go, so shall you Mr Page, and you Sir Hugh.

Shal. Well, fare you well:
We shall haue the freer woing at Mr Pages.

Cai. Go home John Rugby, I come anon.

Host. Farewell my hearts, I will to my honest Knight Fallstaffe, and drinke Canarie with him.

Ford. I thinke I shall drinke in Pipe-wine first with him, I'le make him dance. Will you go, Gentles?

All. Haue with you, to see this Monster. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mr. Ford, Mr. Page, Seruants, Robin, Fallstaffe, Ford, Page, Caius, Evans.

Mist. Ford. What John, what Robert.

M. Page. Quickly, quickly: Is the Buck-basket——

Mist. Ford. I warrant. What Robin I say

Mist. Page. Come, come, come.

Mist. Ford. Heere, set it downe.

M. Pag. Giue your men the charge, we must be brieft.

M. Ford. Marrie, as I told you before (John & Robert) be ready here hard-by in the Brew-house, & when I sodainly call you, come forth, and (without any pause, or staggering) take this basket on your shoulders: ⸗ dooe, trudge with it in all haste, and carry it among the Whitsters in Doctor Meed, and there empty it in the muddie ditch, close by the Thames side.

M. Page. You will do it? (direction.

M. Ford. I ha told them ouer and ouer, they lacke no

Be gone, and come when you are call'd.

M.Page. Here comes little Robin. (with you?

Mist.Ford. How now my Eyas-Musket, what newes

Rob. My M. Sir John is come in at your backe doore (Mist. Ford, and requests your company.

M.Page. You little Iack-a-lent, haue you bin true to vs

Rob. I, Ile be sworne: my Master knowes not of your being heere: and hath threatned to put me into everlasting liberty, if I tell you of it: for he swears he'll turne me away.

Mist.Pag. Thou rt a good boy: this secrecy of thine shall be a Tailor to thee, and shall make thee a new doublet and hose. Ile go hide me.

Mist.Ford. Do so: go tell thy Master, I am alone: Mistris Page, remember you your Cue.

Mist.Pag. I warrant thee, if I do not act it, hisse me.

Mist.Ford. Go-too then: we'l vse this vnwholsome humidity, this grosse-watry Pumpion; we'll teach him to know Turtles from Iayes.

Fal. Haue I caught thee, my heauenly Iewell? Why now let me die, for I haue liu'd long enough: This is the period of my ambition: O this blessed houre.

Mist.Ford. O sweet Sir John.

Fal. Mistris Ford, I cannot cog, I cannot prate (Mist. Ford) now shall I sin in my wish; I would thy Husband were dead, Ile speake it before the best Lord, I would make thee my Lady.

Mist.Ford. I your Lady Sir John? Alas, I should bee a pitiefull Lady.

Fal. Let the Court of France shew me such another: I see how thine eye would emulate the Diamond: Thou hast the right arched-beauty of the brow, that becomes the Ship-tyre, the Tyre-valiant, or any Tire of Venetian admittance.

Mist.Ford. A plaine Kerchiefe, Sir John: My browes become nothing else, nor that well neither.

Fal. Thou art a tyrant to say so: thou wouldst make an absolute Courtier, and the firme fixture of thy foote, would giue an excellent motion to thy gait, in a semi-circled Farthingale. I see what thou wert if Fortune thy foe, were not Nature thy friend: Come, thou canst not hide it.

Mist.Ford. Believe me, there's no such thing in me.

Fal. What made me loue thee? Let that persuade thee. There's something extraordinary in thee: Come, I cannot cog, and say thou art this and that, like a-many of these lisping-hawthorne buds, that come like women in mens apparrell, and smell like Bucklers-berry in simple time: I cannot, but I loue thee, none but thee; and thou deseru'st it.

M.Ford. Do not betray me sir, I fear you loue M. Page.

Fal. Thou mighst as well say, I loue to walke by the Counter-gate, which is as hatefull to me, as the reeke of a Lime-kill.

Mis.Ford. Well, heauen knowes how I loue you, And you shall one day finde it.

Fal. Keepe in that minde, Ile deserue it.

Mist.Ford. Nay, I must tell you, so you doe; Or else I could not be in that minde.

Rob. Mistris Ford, Mistris Ford: heere's Mistris Page at the doore, sweating, and blowing, and looking wildely, and would needs speake with you presently.

Fal. She shall not see me, I will ensconce mee behinde the Arras.

M.Ford. Pray you do so, she's a very talking Woman. What's the matter? How now?

Mist.Page. O mistris Ford what haue you done? You're sham'd, y'are ouerthrowne, y'are vndone for euer.

M.Ford. What's the matter, good mistris Page?

M.Page. O weladay, mist. Ford, having an honest man to your husband, to giue him such cause of suspition.

M.Ford. What cause of suspition?

M.Page. What cause of suspition? Out vpon you: How am I mistooke in you?

M.Ford. Why (alas) what's the matter?

M.Page. Your husband's comming hether (Woman) with all the Officers in Windsor, to search for a Gentleman, that he sayes is heere now in the house; by your consent to take an ill advantage of his absence: you are vndone.

M.Ford. 'Tis not so, I hope.

M.Page. Pray heauen it be not so, that you haue such a man heere: but 'tis most certaine your husband's comming, with halfe Windsor at his heeles, to serch for such a one, I come before to tell you: If you know your selfe cleere, why I am glad of it: but if you haue a friend heere, conuey, conuey him out. Be not amaz'd, call all your senses to you, defend your reputation, or bid farwell to your good life for ever.

M.Ford. What shall I do? There is a Gentleman my deere friend: and I feare not mine owne shame so much, as his perill. I had rather then a thousand pound he were out of the house.

M.Page. For shame, never stand (you had rather, and you had rather:) your husband's heere at hand, bethinke you of some conueyance: in the house you cannot hide him. Oh, how haue you deceiu'd me? Looke, heere is a basket, if he be of any reasonable stature, he may creepe in heere, and throw fowle linnen vpon him, as if it were going to bucking: Or it is whiting time, send him by your two men to Datchet-Meade.

M.Ford. He's too big to go in there: what shall I do?

Fal. Let me see't, let me see't, O let me see't: Ile in, Ile in: Follow your friends counsell, Ile in.

M.Page. What Sir John Falstaffe? Are these your Letters, Knight?

Fal. I loue thee, helpe mee away: let me creepe in heere: ile never——

M.Page. Helpe to conuey your master (Boy:) Call your men (Mist. Ford.) You dissembling Knight.

M.Ford. What John, Robert, John; Go, take vp these clothes heere, quickly: Where's the Cowle-staffe? Look how you drumble? Carry them to the Landresse in Datchet mead: quickly, come.

Ford. Pray you come neere: if I suspect without cause, Why then make sport at me, then let me be your iest, I deserue it: How now? Whether bestow you this?

Ser. To the Landresse forsooth?

M.Ford. Why, what haue you to doe whether they beare it? You were best meddle with buck-washing.

Ford. Buck? I would I could wash my selfe of ye Buck: Buck, buck, buck, I buck: I warrant you Buck, And of the season too; it shall appeare. Gentlemen, I haue dream'd to night, Ile tell you my dreame: heere, heere, heere bee my keyes, ascend my Chambers, search, seeke, finde out: Ile warrant we'le vnkennell the Fox. Let me stop this way first: so, now vncape.

Page. Good master Ford, be contented: You wrong your selfe too much.

Ford. True (master Page) vp Gentlemen. You shall see sport anon:

Follow

Follow me Gentlemen.

Bard. This is very fantastical humors and iealousies.

Caius. By gar, 'tis no-the fashion of France: It is not iealous in France.

Page. Nay follow him (Gentlemen) see the yssue of his search.

Mist. Page Is there not a double excellency in this?

Mist. Ford. I know not which pleases me better, That my husband is deceiued, or Sir Iohn.

Mist. Page. What a taking was hee in, when your husband asks who was in the basket?

Mist. Ford. I am halfe affraid he will haue neede of washing: so throwing him into the water, will doe him a benefit.

Mist. Page. Hang him dishonest rascall: I would all of the same straine were in the same distresse.

Mist. Ford. I thinke my husband hath some speciall suspition of Falstaffe being here: for I never saw him so gealie in his iealousie till now.

Mist. Page. I will lay a plot to try that, and wee will yet haue more tricks with Falstaffe: his dissolute disease will scarse obey this medicine.

Mist. Ford Shall we send that foolishion Carion, Mist. Quickly to him, and excuse his throwing into the water, and giue him another hope, to betray him to another punishment?

Mist. Page. We will do it: let him be sent for to morrow eighe a clocke to haue amends.

Ford. I cannot finde him: may be the knaue bragg'd of that he could not compasse.

Mist. Page. Heard you that?

Mist. Ford. You vse me well, M. Ford? Do you?

Ford. I, I do so.

Mist. Ford. Heauen make you better then your thoghts

Ford. Amen.

Mist. Page. You do your selfe mighty wrong (M. Ford)

Ford. I, I: I must bear it.

Eu. If there be any body in the house, & in the chambers, and in the coffers, and in the presses: heauen forgiue my sins at the day of iudgement

Caius. Be gar, nor I too: there is no-bodies

Page Fy, fy, M. Ford, are you not asham'd? What spirit, what diuell suggests this imagination? I wold not ha your distempet in this kind, for ye welth of Windsor castle.

Ford. 'Tis my fault (M. Page) I suffer for it.

Euans. You suffer for a pad conscience: your wife is as honest a o'mans, as I will desires among fiue thousand, and fiue hundred too.

Cai. By gar, I see 'tis an honest woman.

Ford. Well, I promisd you a dinner: come, come, walk in the Parke, I pray you pardon me: I will hereafter make knowne to you why I haue done this. Come wife, come Mi. Page, I pray you pardon me. Pray hartily pardon me.

Page. Let's go in Gentlemen, but (trust me) we'l mock him: I doe mean you to morrow morning to my house to breakfast: after we'll a Birding together, I haue a fine Hawke for the bush. Shall it be so.

Ford. Any thing.

Eu. If there is one, I shall make two in the Companie

Ca. If there be one, or two, I shall make-a-theiard.

Ford. Pray you go, M. Page.

Eu. I pray you now remembrance to morrow on the lowsie knaue, mine Host.

Ca. Dat is good by gar, with all my heart.

Eu. A lowsie knaue, to haue his gibes, and his mockeries. Exeunt.

Scœna Quarta.

Enter Fenton, Anne, Page, Shallow, Slender, Quickly, Page, Mist. Page.

Fent. I see I cannot get thy Fathers loue,
Therefore no more turne me to him (sweet Nan.)

Anne. Alas, how then?

Fen. Why thou must be thy selfe.
He doth obiect, I am too great of birth,
And that my state being gall'd with my expence,
I seeke to heale it onely by his wealth.
Besides these, other barres he layes before me,
My Riots past, my wilde Societies,
And tels me 'tis a thing impossible
I should loue thee, but as a property.

An. May be he tels you true

Fen. No, heauen so speed me in my time to come,
Albeit I will confesse, thy Fathers wealth
Was the first motiue that I woo'd thee (Anne:)
Yet wooing thee, I found thee of more valew
Then stampes in Gold, or summes in sealed bagges,
And 'tis the very riches of thy selfe,
That now I ayme at.

An. Gentle M. Fenton,
Yet seeke my Fathers loue, still seeke it sir,
If opportunity and humblest suite
Cannot attaine it, why then harke you hither.

Shal. Breake their talke Mistris Quickly.
My Kinsman shall speake for himselfe.

Slen. Ile make a shaft or a bolt on 't, slid, 'tis but venturing.

Shal. Be not dismaid.

Slen. No, she shall not dismay me:
I care not for that, but that I am afeard.

Qui. Hark ye, M. Slender would speak a word with you

An. I come to him. This is my Fathers choice:
O what a world of vilde ill-fauour'd faults
Looke handsome in three hundred pounds a yeere?

Qui. And how do's good Master Fenton?
Pray you a word with you.

Shal. She's comming; to her Coz.
O boy, thou hadst a father.

Slen. I had a father (M. Anne) my vncle can tel you good iests of him: pray you Vncle, tel Mist. Anne the iest how my Father stole two Geese out of a Pen, good Vncle.

Shal. Mistris Anne, my Cozen loues you.

Slen. I that I do, as well as I loue any woman in Gloucestershire.

Shal. He will maintaine you like a Gentlewoman.

Slen. I that I will, come cut and long-tale, vnder the degree of a Squire.

Shal. He will make you a hundred and fifne pounds ioynture.

Anne. Good Maister Shallow let him woo for himselfe.

Shal. Marrie I thanke you for it: I thanke you for that good comfort: she cals you (Coz) Ile leaue you.

Anne. Now Master Slender.

Slen. Now good Mistris Anne.

Anne. What is your will?

Slen. My will? Odd's-hart-lings, that's a prettie iest indeede: I ne're made my Will yet (I thanke Heauen) I am not such a sickely creature, I giue Heauen praise.

Anne. I meane (M.Slender) what wold you with me?
Slen. Truely, for mine owne part, I would little or nothing with you: your father and my vncle hath made motions: if it be my lucke, so; if not, happy man bee his dole, they can tell you how things go, better then I can: you may aske your father, heere he comes.
Page. Now Mr Slender; Loue him daughter Anne.
Why how now? What does Mr Fenton here?
You wrong me Sir, thus still to haunt my house:
I told you Sir, my daughter is disposd of.
Fen. Nay Mr Page, be not impatiente.
Mist.Page. Good M. Fenton, come not to my child.
Page. She is no match for you.
Fen. Sir, will you heare me?
Page. No, good M. Fenton.
Come M. Shallow: Come sonne Slender, in;
Knowing my minde, you wrong me (M. Fenton.)
Qui. Speake to Mistris Page.
Fen. Good Mist. Page, for that I loue your daughter
In such a righteous fashion as I do,
Perforce, against all checkes, rebukes, and manners,
I must aduance the colours of my loue,
And not retire. Let me haue your good will.
An. Good mother, do not marry me to yond foole.
Mist.Page. I meane it not, I seeke you a better husband.
Qui. That's my master, M. Doctor.
An. Alas I had rather be set quick i'th earth,
And bowl'd to death with Turnips.
Mist.Page. Come, trouble not your selfe good M. Fenton, I will not be your friend, nor enemy:
My daughter will I question how she loues you,
And as I finde her, so am I affected:
Till then, farewell Sir, she must needs go in,
Her father will be angry.
Fen. Farewell gentle Mistris: farewell Nan.
Qui. This is my doing now: Nay, saide I, will you cast away your childe on a Foole, and a Phyfitian:
Looke on M. Fenton, this is my doing.
Fen. I thanke thee: and I pray thee once to night,
Giue my sweet Nan this Ring: there's for thy paines.
Qui. Now heauen send thee good fortune, a kinde heart he hath: a woman would run through fire & water for such a kinde heart. But yet, I would my Maister had Mistris Anne, or I would M. Slender had her, or (in sooth) I would M. Fenton had her; I will do what I can for them all three, for so I haue promisd, and Ile bee as good as my word, but speciously for M. Fenton. Well, I must of another errand to Sir Iohn Falstaffe from my two Mistresses: what a beast am I to slacke it. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Quickly, Ford.

Fal. Bardolfe I say.
Bar. Heere Sir.
Fal. Go, fetch me a quart of Sacke, put a toast in't.
Haue I lin'd to be carried in a Basket like a barrow of butchers Offall? and to be throwne in the Thames? Well, if I be serv'd such another tricke, Ile haue my braines 'tane out and butter'd, and giue them to a dogge for a New-yeares gift. The rogues slighted me into the riuer with as little remorse, as they would haue drown'de a blinde bitches Puppies, fifteene i'th litter: and you may know by my size, that I haue a kinde of alacrity in sinking: if the bottome were as deepe as hell, I should down. I had beene drown'd, but that the shore was shelsy and shallow: a death that I abhorre: for the water swellies a man; and what a thing should I haue beene, when I had beene swel'd? I should haue beene a Mountaine of Mummie.
Bar. Here's M. Quickly Sir to speake with you.
Fal. Come, let me poure in some Sack to the Thames water: for my bellies as cold as if I had swallow'd snow-bals, for pilles to coole the reines. Call her in.
Bar. Come in women.
Qui. By your leaue: I cry you mercy!
Giue your worship good morrow.
Fal. Take away these Chalices:
Go, brew me a pottle of Sacke finely.
Bard. With Egges, Sir?
Fal. Simple of it selfe: Ile no Pullet-Spersme in my brewage. How now?
Qui. Marry Sir, I come to your worship from M. Ford.
Fal. Mist. Ford? I haue had Ford enough: I was thrown into the Ford; I haue my belly full of Ford.
Qui. Alas the day, (good-heart) that was not her fault: she do's so take on with her men; they mistooke their erection. (promise.
Fal. So did I mine, to build vpon a foolish Woman
Qui. Well, she laments Sir for it, that it would yern your heart to see it: her husband goes this morning a birding; she desires you once more to come to her, betweene eight and nine: I must carry her word quickely, she'll make you amends I warrant you.
Fal. Well, I will visit her, tell her so: and bidde her thinke what a man is: Let her consider his frailtey, and then iudge of my merit.
Qui. I will tell her.
Fal. Do so. Betweene nine and ten saist thou?
Qui. Eight and nine Sir.
Fal. Well, be gone: I will not misse her.
Qui. Peace be with you Sir.
Fal. I marueile I heare not of Mr Broome: he sent me word to stay within: I like his money well.
Oh, heere he comes.
Ford. Blesse you Sir.
Fal. Now M. Broome, you come to know
What hath past betweene me, and Ford's wife.
Ford. That indeed (Sir Iohn) is my business.
Fal. M. Broome I will not lye to you,
I was at her house the houre she appointed me.
Ford. And sped you Sir?
Fal. very ill-fauouredly M. Broome.
Ford. How so sir, did she change her determination?
Fal. No (M. Broome) but the peaking Cornuto her husband (M. Broome) dwelling in a continual larum of iealousie, come me in the instant of our encounter, after we had embrast, kist, protested, &c (as it were) spoke the prologue of our Comedy: and at his heeles, a rabble of his companions, thither prouoked and instigated by his distemper, and (forsooth) to serch his house for his wiues Loue.
Ford. What? While you were there?
Fal. While I was there.
Fo. And did he search for you, & could not find you?
Fal. You shall heare. As good lucke would haue it, comes in one Mist. Page, gues intelligence of Fords approch: and in her inuention, and Fords wiues distraction, they conuey'd me into a bucke basket.

Ford

Ford. A Buck-basket?

Fal. Yes: a Buck-basket: ram'd mee in with foule Shirts and Smockes, Socks, foule Stockings, greasie Napkins, that (Master Broome) there was the rankest compound of villainous smell, that ever offended nostrill.

Ford. And how long lay you there?

Fal. Nay, you shall heare (Master Broome) what I have suffered, to bring this woman to euill, for your good: Being thus cram'd in the Basket, a couple of Fords knaues, his Hinders, were cald forth by their Mistris, to carry mee in the name of foule Cloathes to Datchet-lane: they tooke me on their shoulders: met the iealous knaue their Master in the doore; who ask'd them once or twice what they had in their Basket? I quak'd for feare least the Lunatique Knaue would haue search'd it: but Fate (ordaining he should be a Cuckold) held his hand: well, on went hee, for a search, and away went I for foule Cloathes: But mark the sequell (Master Broome) I suffered the pangs of three sundrall deaths: First, an intolerable fright, to be detected with a iealious rotten Bell-weather: Next to be compass'd like a good Bilbo in the circumstance of a Peeche, hilt to point, heele to head. And then to be slope in like a strong distillation with stinking Clothes, that fretted in their owne grease: thinke of that, a man of my Kidney; thinke of that, that am as subject to heate as butter; a man of continuall dissolution, and thaw: it was a miracle to scape suffocation. And in the height of this Bath (when I was more then halfe stew'd in grease (like a Dutch-dish) to be throwne into the Thames, and cold, glowing-hot, in that serge like a Horse-sheet; thinke of that; hissing hot: thinke of that (Master Broome.)

Ford. In good sadnesse Sir, I am sorry, that for my sake you have suffered all this.
My suit then is desperate: You'll vndertake her no more?

Fal. Master Broome: I will be throwne into Etna, as I have beene into Thames, ere I will leaue her thus; her Husband is this morning gone a Birding: I haue receiued from her another ambassie of meeting: 'twixt eight and nine is the houre (Master Broome.)

Ford. 'Tis past eight already Sir.

Fal. Is it? I will then addresse mee to my appointment: Come to mee at your conuenient leisure, and you shall know how I speede: and the conclusion shall be crowned with your enioying her: adieu: you shall haue her (Master Broome) Master Broome, you shall cuckold Ford.

Ford. Hum: ha? Is this a vision? Is this a dreame? doe I sleepe? Master Ford awake, awake Master Ford: there's a hole made in your best coate (Master Ford.) this 'tides be married; this 'tis to haue Linnen, and Buck-baskets: Well, I will proclaime my selfe what I am: I will now take the Leacher: hee is at my house: hee cannot scape me: 'tis impossible hee should: hee cannot creepe into a halfe-penny purse, nor into a Pepper-Box: But lest the Diuell that guides him, should aide him, I will search impossible places: though what I am, I cannot auoide; yet to be what I would not, shall not make me tame: If I haue hornes, to make me mad, let the prouerbe goe with me, Ile be horne-mad.

Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Mistris Page, Quickly, William, Euans.

Mist. Pag. Is he at M. Fords already think'st thou?

Qui. Sure he is by this; or will be presently; but truely he is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. Mistris Ford desires you to come soddainely.

Mist. Pag. Ile be with her by and by: Ile but bring my yong-man here to Schoole: looke where his Master comes; 'tis a playing day I see: how now Sir Hugh, no Schoole to day?

Eua. No: Master Slender is let the Boyes leaue to play.

Qui. 'Blessing of his heart.

Mist. Pag. Sir Hugh, my husband saies my sonne profits nothing in the world at his Booke: I pray you aske him some questions in his Accidence.

Eu. Come hither William; hold vp your head; come.

Mist. Pag. Come-on Sirha; hold vp your head; answere your Master, be not afraid.

Eua. William, how many Numbers is in Nownes?

Wil. Two.

Qui. Truely, I thought there had bin one Number more, because they say od's-Nownes.

Eua. Peace, your tatlings. What is (Faire) William?

Wil. Pulcher.

Qu. Powlcats? there are fairer things then Powlcats, sure.

Eua. You are a very simplicity o'man: I pray you peace. What is (Lapis) William?

Wil. A Stone.

Eua. And what is a Stone (William?)

Wil. A Peeble.

Eua. No; it is Lapis: I pray you remember in your praine.

Wil. Lapis.

Eua. That is a good William: what is he (William) that do's lend Articles.

Wil. Articles are borrowed of the Pronoune; and be thus declined. Singuliariter nominatiuo hic, hæc, hoc.

Eua. Nominatiuo hig, hag, hog: pray you marke: genitiuo huius: Well, what is your Accusatiue-case?

Wil. Accusatiuo hinc.

Eua. I pray you haue your remembrance (childe) Accusatiuo hing, hang, hog.

Qu. Hang-hog, is latten for Bacon, I warrant you.

Eua. Leaue your prables (o'man) What is the Focatiue case (William?)

Wil. O, Vocatiuo, O.

Eua. Remember William, Focatiue, is caret.

Qu. And that's a good roote.

Eua. O'man, forbeare.

Mist. Pag. Peace.

Eua. What is your Genitiue case plurall (William?)

Wil. Genitiue case?

Eua. I.

Wil. Genitiue horum, harum, horum.

Qu. 'Vengeance of Ginyes case; fie on her; never name her (childe) if she be a whore.

Eua. For shame o'man.

Qu. You doe ill to teach the childe such words: hee teaches him to hic, and to hac; which they'll doe fast enough of themselues, and to call horum; fie vpon you.

 Eua. O'man

Euans. O'man, art thou Lunaties? Hast thou no vnderstandinge for thy Cases, & the numbers of the Genders? Thou art as foolish Christian creatures, as I would desires.

Mi.Page. Pre'thee hold thy peace.

Eu. Shew me now (William) some declensions of your Pronounes.

Will. Forsooth, I haue forgot.

Eu. It is Qui, que, quod: if you forget your Quies, your Ques, and your Quods, you must be preeches: Goe your waies and play, go.

M.Pag. He is a better scholler then I thought he was.

Eu. He is a good sprag-memory: Farewel Mu.Page.

Mis.Page. Adieu good Sir Hugh:
Get you home boy, Come we stay too long. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Falstaffe, Mist.Ford, Mist. Page, Seruants, Ford, Page, Caius, Euans, Shallow.

Fal. Mis. Ford, Your sorrow hath esten vp my sufferance; I see you are obsequious in your loue, and I professe requitall to a haires breadth, not onely Mist. Ford, in the simple office of loue, but in all the accoustrement, complement, and ceremony of it: But are you sure of your husband now?

Mis.Ford. Hee's a birding (sweet Sir Iohn.)

Mis.Page. What hoa, gossip Ford: what hoa.

Mis.Ford. Step into th chamber, Sir Iohn.

Mis. Page. How now (sweete heart) whose at home besides your selfe?

Mis Ford Why none but mine owne people.

Mis Page. Indeed?

Mis.Ford. No certainly: Speake louder.

Mist. Pag. Truly, I am so glad you haue no body here.

Mist.Ford. Why?

Mis Page. Why woman, your husband is in his olde lines againe: he so takes on yonder with my husband, so railes against all married mankinde; so curses all Eues daughters, of what complexion soeuer; and so buffetes himselfe on the for-head: crying peere-out, peere-out, that any madnesse I euer yet beheld, seem'd but tamenesse, ciuility, and patience to this his distemper he is in now: I am glad the fat Knight is not heere.

Mist.Ford. Why, do's he talke of him?

Mist.Page. Of none but him, and sweares he was caried out the last time hee search'd for him, in a Basket: Protests to my husband he is now heere, & hath drawne him and the rest of their company from their sport, to make another experiment of his suspition: But I am glad the Knight is not heere; now he shall see his owne foolerie.

Mist.Ford. How neere is he Mistris Page?

Mist.Pag. Hard by, at street end; he will be here anon.

Mist.Ford. I am vndone, the Knight is heere.

Mist.Page. Why then you are vtterly sham'd, & he's but a dead man. What a woman are you? Away with him, away with him: Better shame, then murther.

Mist.Ford. Which way should he go? How should I bestow him? Shall I put him into the basket againe?.

Fal. No, Ile come no more i'th Basket;
May I not go out ere he comes?

Mist.Page. Alas: three of Mr. Fords brothers watch the doore with Pistols, that none shall issue out: otherwise you might slip away ere hee came: But what make you heere?

Fal. What shall I do? Ile creepe vp into the chimney.

Mist.Ford. There they alwaies vse to discharge their Birding-peeces: creepe into the Kill-hole.

Fal. Where is it?

Mist.Ford. He will seeke there on my word: Neyther Presse, Coffer, Chest, Trunke, Well, Vaule, but he hath an abstract for the remembrance of such places, and goes to them by his Note: There is no hiding you in the house.

Fal. Ile go out then.

Mist.Ford. If you goe out in your owne semblance, you die Sir Iohn, vnlesse you go out disguis'd.

Mist. Ford. How might we disguise him?

Mist.Page. Alas the day I know not, there is no woemans gowne bigge enough for him: otherwise he might put on a hat, a muffler, and a kerchiefe, and so escape.

Fal. Good hearts, deuise something: any extremitie, rather then a mischiefe.

Mist. Ford. My Maids Aunt the fat woman of Brainford, has a gowne aboue.

Mist. Page. On my word it will serue him: shee's as big as he is: and there's her thrum'd hat, and her muffler too: run vp Sir Iohn.

Mist.Ford. Go, go, sweet Sir Iohn: Mistris Page and I will looke some linnen for your head.

Mist.Page. Quicke, quicke, wee'le come dresse you straight: put on the gowne the while.

Mist.Ford. I would my husband would meete him in this shape: he cannot abide the old woman of Brainford; he sweares she's a witch, forbad her my house, and hath threatned to beate her.

Mist.Page. Heauen guide him to thy husbands cudgell: and the diuell guide his cudgell afterwards.

Mist Ford. But is my husband comming?

Mist.Page. I in good sadnesse is he, and talkes of the basket too, howsoeuer he hath had intelligence.

Mist.Ford. Wee'l try that: for Ile appoint my men to carry the basket againe, to meete him at the doore with it, as they did last time.

Mist.Page. Nay, but hee'l be heere presently: let's go dresse him like the witch of Brainford.

Mist. Ford. Ile first direct direct my men, what they shall doe with the basket: Goe vp, Ile bring linnen for him straight.

Mist.Page Hang him dishonest Varlet,
We cannot misuse enough:
We'll leaue a proofe by that which we will doo,
Wiues may be merry, and yet honest too:
We do not act that often, iest, and laugh,
'Tis old, but true, Still Swine eats all the draugh.

Mist.Ford. Go Sirs, take the basket againe on your shoulders: your Master is hard at doore: if hee bid you set it downe, obey him: quickly, dispatch.

1 Ser. Come, come, take it vp.

2 Ser. Pray heauen it be not full of Knight againe.

1 Ser. I hope not, I had liefe as beare so much lead.

Ford. I, but if it proue true (Mr. Page) haue you any way then to vnfoolme me againe. Set downe the basket villaine: some body call my wife: Youth in a basket: Oh you Panderly Rascals, there's a knot: a gin, a packe, a conspiracie against me: Now shall the diuel be sham'd. What wife I say: Come, come forth: behold what honest cest clothes you send forth to bleaching.

Page. Why, this passes M. Ford: you are not to goe loose any longer, you must be pinnion'd.

Evans. Why, this is Lunaticks: this is madde, as a mad dogge.

Shal. Indeed M. Ford, this is not well indeed.

Ford. So say I too Sir, come hither Mistris Ford, Mistris Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the vertuous creature, that hath the ielious foole to her husband: I suspect without cause (Mistris) do I?

Mist. Ford. Heauen be my witnesse you doe, if you suspect me in any dishonesty.

Ford. Well said Brazon-face, hold it out: Come forth sirrah.

Page. This passes.

Mist. Ford. Are you not asham'd, let the cloths alone.

Ford. I shall finde you anon.

Eua. 'Tis vnreasonable; will you take vp your wiues cloathes? Come, away.

Ford. Empty the basket I say.

M. Ford. Why man, why?

Ford. Master Page, as I am a man, there was one conuey'd out of my house yesterday in this basket: why may not he be there againe, in my house I am sure he is: my intelligence is true, my ielousie is reasonable, pluck me out all the linnen.

Mist. Ford. If you find a man there, he shall dye a Flea's death.

Page. Here's no man.

Shal. By my fidelity this is not well Mr. Ford: This wrongs you.

Evans. Mr Ford, you must pray, and not follow the imaginations of your owne heart: this is ielousies.

Ford. Well, hee's not heere I seeke for.

Page. No, not no where else but in your braine.

Ford. Helpe to search my house this one time: if I find not what I seeke, shew no colour for my extremity: Let me for euer be your Table-sport: Let them say of me, as ielous as Ford, that search'd a hollow Wall-nut for his wiues Leman. Satisfie me once more, once more search with me.

M. Ford. What hoa (Mistris Page,) come you and the old woman downe: my husband will come into the Chamber.

Ford. Old woman? what old womans that?

M. Ford. Why it is my maids Aunt of Brainford.

Ford. A witch, a Queane, an olde cozening queane: Haue I not forbid her my house. She comes of errands, do's she? We are simple men, wee doe not know what's brought to passe vnder the profession of Fortune-telling. She works by Charmes, by Spels, by th'Figure, & such dowbery as this is, beyond our Element: wee know nothing. Come downe you Witch, you Hagge you, come downe I say.

Mist. Ford. Nay, good sweet husband, good Gentlemen, let him strike the old woman.

Mist. Page. Come mother Prat, Come give me your hand.

Ford. Be Prat-her: Out of my doore, you Witch, you Ragge, you Baggage, you Poulcat, you Runnion, out, out: Ile conjure you, Ile fortune-tell you.

Mist. Page. Are you not asham'd?
I think you haue kill'd the poore woman.

Mist. Ford. Nay he will do it, 'tis a goodly credite for you.

Ford. Hang her witch.

Eua. By yea, and no, I think the o'man is a witch indeede: I like not when a o'man has a great peard; I spie a great peard vnder his mussler.

Ford. Will you follow Gentlemen, I beseech you follow: see but the issue of my ielousie: If I cry out thus vpon no traile, neuer trust me when I open again.

Page. Let's obey his humour a little further: Come Gentlemen.

Mist. Page. Trust me he beate him most pittifully.

Mist. Ford. Nay by th'Masse that he did not: he beate him most vnpittifully, me thought.

Mist. Page. Ile haue the cudgell hallow'd, and hang ore the Altar, it hath done meritorious seruice.

Mist. Ford. What thinke you? May we with the warrant of woman hood, and the witnesse of a good conscience, pursue him with any further reuenge?

M. Page. The spirit of wantonnesse is sure scar'd out of him, if the diuell haue him not in fee-simple, with fine and reccovery, he will neuer (I thinke) in the way of waste, attempt vs again.

Mist. Ford. Shall we tell our husbands how wee haue seru'd him?

Mist. Page. Yes, by all meanes: if it be but to scrape the figures out of your husbands braines: if they can find in their hearts, the poore vnvertuous fat Knight shall be any further afflicted, wee two will still bee the ministers.

Mist. Ford. Ile warrant, they'l haue him publiquely sham'd, and methinkes there would be no period to the ieft, should he not be publikely sham'd.

Mist. Page. Come, to the Forge with it, then shape it: I would not haue things coole. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Host and Bardolfe.

Bar. Sir, the Germane desires to haue three of your horses: the Duke himselfe will be to morrow at Court, and they are going to meet him.

Host. What Duke should that be comes so secretly? I heare not of him in the Court: let mee speake with the Gentlemen, they speake English?

Bar. I Sir? Ile call him to you.

Host. They shall haue my horses, but Ile make them pay: Ile sauce them, they haue had my houses a week at command: I haue turn'd away my other guests, they must come off, Ile sawce them, come. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Page, Ford, Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, and Evans.

Eua. 'Tis one of the best discretions of a o'man as euer I did looke vpon.

Page. And did he send you both these Letters at an instant?

Mist. Page. VVithin a quarter of an houre.

Ford. Pardon me (wife) henceforth do what I will: I rather will suspect the Sunne with gold,
Then thee with wantonnes: Now doth thy honor stand

(In

(In him that was of late an Heretike).
As firme as faith.
Page. Tis well, 'tis well, no more:
Be not as extreme in submission, as in offence,
But let our plot go forward: Let our wiues
Yet once againe (to make vs publike sport)
Appoint a meeting with this old fat-fellow,
Where we may take him, and disgrace him for it.
Ford. There is no better way then that they spoke of.
Page. How? to send him word they'll meete him in the Parke at midnight? Fie, fie, he'll neuer come.
Eu. You say he has bin throwne in the Riuers: and has bin greeuously peaten, as an old o'man: me-thinkes there should be terrors in him, that he should not come: Me-thinkes his flesh is punish'd, he shall haue no desires.
Page. So thinke I too.
M. Ford. Deuise but how you'l vse him whē he comes, And let vs two deuise to bring him thether.
Mis. Page. There is an old tale goes, that Herne the Hunter (sometime a keeper here in Windsor Forrest) Doth all the winter time, at still midnight
Walke round about an Oake, with great rag'd-hornes,
And there he blasts the tree, and takes the cattle,
And makes milch-kine yeeld blood, and shakes a chaine
In a most hideous and dreadfull manner.
You haue heard of such a Spirit, and well you know
The superstitious idle-headed-Eld
Receiu'd, and did deliuer to our age
This tale of Herne the Hunter, for a truth.
Page. Why yet there want not many that do feare
In deepe of night to walke by this Hernes Oake:
But what of this?
Mis. Ford. Marry this is our deuise,
That Fallstaffe at that Oake shall meete with vs.
Page. Well, let it not be doubted but he'll come,
And in this shape, when you haue brought him thether,
What shall be done with him? What is your plot?
Mis. Pa. That likewise haue we thoght vpon: it thus:
Nan Page (my daughter) and my little sonne,
And three or foure more of their growth, we'l dresse
Like Vrchins, Oupbes, and Fairies, greene and white,
With rounds of waxen Tapers on their heads,
And rattles in their hands; vpon a sodaine,
As Falstaffe, she, and I, are newly met,
Let them from forth a saw-pit rush at once
With some diffused song: Vpon their sight
We two, in great amazednesse will fye:
Then let them all encircle him about,
And Fairy-like to pinch the vncleane Knight;
And sake him why that houre of Fairy Reuell,
In their so sacred paths, he dares to tread
In shape prophane.
Ford. And till he tell the truth,
Let the supposed Fairies pinch him, sound,
And burne him with their Tapers.
Mis. Page. The truth being knowne,
We'll all present our selues; dis-horne the spirit,
And mocke him home to Windsor.
Ford. The children must
Be practis'd well to this, or they'l neu'r doo't.
Eua. I will teach the children their behaviours: and I will be like a Iacke-an-Apes also, to horne the Knight with my Taber.
Ford. That will be excellent,
Ile go buy them vizards.
Mis. Page. My Nan shall be the Queene of all the Fairies, finely attired in a robe of white.
Page. That silke will I go buy, and in that time
Shall M. Slender steale my Nan away,
And marry her at Eaton: go, send to Falstaffe straight.
Ford. Nay, Ile to him againe in name of Brooue,
Hee'l tell me all his purpose: sure hee'l come.
Mis. Page. Feare not you that: Go get vs properties
And tricking for our Fayries.
Eueus. Let vs about it,
It is admirable pleasures, and ferry honest knaueries.
Mis. Page Go Mis. Ford,
Send quickly to Sir Iohn, to know his minde:
Ile to the Doctor, he hath my good will,
And none but he to marry with Nan Page:
That Slender (though well landed) is an Idiot:
And he, my husband best of all affects:
The Doctor is well monied, and his friends
Potent at Court: he, none but he shall haue her,
Though twenty thousand worthier come to creue her.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Host, Simple, Falstaffe, Bardolfe, Eueus, Caius, Quickly.

Host. What would'st thou haue? (Boore) what? (thick skin) speake, breathe, discusse: breefe, short, quicke, snap.
Simp. Marry Sir, I come to speake with Sir Iohn Falstaffe from M. Slender.
Host. There's his Chamber, his House, his Castle, his standing-bed and truckle-bed: 'tis painted about with the story of the Prodigall, fresh and new: go, knock and call: hee'l speake like an Anthropophaginian vnto thee: Knocke I sy.
Simp. There's an olde woman, a fat woman gone vp into his chamber: Ile be so bold as stay Sir till she come downe: I come to speake with her indeed.
Host. Hō? A fat woman? The Knight may be robb'd: Ile call. Bully-Knight, Bully Sir Iohn: speake from thy Lungs Military: Art thou there? It is thine Host, thine Ephesian cals.
Fal. How now, mine Host?
Host. Here's a Bohemian-Tartar tarries the comming downe of thy fat-woman: Let her descend (Bully) let her descend: my Chambers are honourable: Fie, priuacy? Fie.
Fal. There was (mine Host) an old-fat-woman even now with me, but she's gone.
Simp. Pray you Sir, was't not the Wise-woman of Brainford?
Fal. I marry was it (Mussel-shell) what would you with her?
Simp. My Master (Sir) my master Slender sent to her seeing her go thorough the streets, to know (Sir) whether one Nim (Sir) that beguil'd him of a chaine, had the chaine, or no.
Fal. I spake with the old woman about it.
Sim. And what sayes she, I pray Sir?
Fal. Marry shee sayes, that the very same man that beguil'd Master Slender of his Chaine, cozen'd him of it.
Simp. I would I could haue spoken with the Woman-kind her her selfe, I had other things to haue spoken with her too, from him.

Fal. What are they? let vs know

Host. I: come: quicke.

Fal. I stay not conuerse them (Sir.)

Host. Conuerse them, or thou di'st.

Slen. Why sir, they were nothing but about Mistris Anne Page, to know if it were my Masters fortune to haue her, or no.

Fal. 'Tis, 'tis his fortune.

Slen. What sir?

Fal. To haue her, or no: goe; say the woman told me so.

Slen. May I be bold to say so Sir?

Fal. I Sir: like who more bold.

Slen. I thanke your worship: I shall make my Master glad with these tydings.

Host. Thou art clerkly: thou art clerkly (Sir Iohn) was there a wise woman with thee?

Fal. I that there was (mine Host) one that hath taught me more wit, then ever I learn'd before in my life: and I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning.

Bar. Out ass (Sir) cozonage: meere cozonage.

Host. Where be my horses? speake well of them varlets.

Bar. Run away with the cozoners: for so soone as I came beyond Eaton, they threw me off, from behinde one of them, in a slough of myre; and set spurres, and away; like three Germans-diuels; three Doctor Faustuses.

Host. They are gone but to meete the Duke (villaine) doe not say they be fled: Germans are honest men.

Enter. Where is mine Host?

Host. What is the matter Sir?

Enter. Have a care of your entertainments: there is a friend of mine come to Towne, tells mee there is three Cozen-germans, that has cozend all the Hosts of Reading, of Maidenhead; of Cole-brooke, of horses and money: I tell you for good will (looke you) you are wise, and full of gibes, and vlouting-stocks: and 'tis not conuenient you should be cozened. Fare you well.

Ca. Ver's mine Host de Iarteere?

Host. Here (Master Doctor) in perplexitie, and doubtfull dilemma.

Cai. I cannot tell vat is dat: but it is tell-a-me, dat you make grand preparation for a Duke de Iamanie: by my troe: der is no Duke that the Court is know, to come: I tell you for good will: adieu.

Host. Hay and cry, (villaine) goe: assist me Knight, I am vndone: fly, run: hay, and cry (villaine) I am vndone.

Fal. I would all the world might be cozend, for I haue beene cozend and beaten too: if it should come to the eare of the Court, how I haue beene transformed; and how my transformation hath beene washd, and cudgeld, they would melt mee out of my fat drop by drop, and liquor Fishermens-boots with me: I warrant they would whip me with their fine wits, till I were as crest-fallen as a dried-peare: I neuer prosper'd, since I forswore my selfe at Primero: well, if my winde were but long enough; I would repent. Now? Whence come you?

Qui. From the two parties forsooth.

Fal. The Diuell take one partie, and his Dam the other: and so they shall be both bestowed; I haue suffer'd more for their sakes; more then the villanous inconstancy of mans disposition is able to beare.

Qui. And haue not they suffer'd? Yes, I warrant; speciously one of them; Mistris Ford (good heart) is beaten blacke and blew, that you cannot see a white spot about her.

Fal. What tell'st thou mee of blacke, and blew? I was beaten my selfe into all the colours of the Raine-bow; and I was like to be apprehended for the Witch of Brainford, but that my admirable dexteritie of wit, my counterfeiting the action of an old woman deliuer'd me, the knaue Constable had set me ith' Stocks, ith' common Stocks, for a Witch.

Qui. Sir: let me speake with you in your Chamber, you shall heare how things goe, and (I warrant) to your content: here is a Letter will say somewhat: (good-hearts) what a-doe here is to bring you together? Sure, one of you doe's not serue heauen well, that you are so crost'd.

Fal. Come vp into my Chamber. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Fenton, Host.

Host. Master Fenton, talke not to mee, my minde is heavy: I will giue ouer all.

Fen. Yet heare me speake: assist me in my purpose,
And (as I am a gentleman) ile giue thee
A hundred pound in gold, more then your loose.

Host. I will heare you (Master Fenton) and I will (at the least) keepe your counsell.

Fen. From time to time, I haue acquainted you
With the deare loue I beare to faire Anne Page,
Who, mutually, hath answer'd my affection,
(So farre forth, as her selfe might be her chooser)
Euen to my wish; I haue a letter from her
Of such contents, as you will wonder at;
The mirth whereof, so larded with my matter,
That neither (singly) can be manifested
Without the shew of both: fat Falstaffe
Hath a great Scene; the image of the iest
Ile show you here at large (harke good mine Host:)
To night at Herne-Oke, iust 'twixt twelue and one,
Must my sweet Nan present the Faerie-Queene;
The purpose why, is here: in which disguise
While other Iests are something ranke on foote,
Her father hath commanded her to slip
Away with Slender, and with him, at Eaton
Immediately to Marry: She hath consented: Now Sir,
Her Mother, (euen strong against that match
And firme for Doctor Caius) hath appointed
That he shall likewise shuffle her away,
While other sports are tasking of their minds,
And at the Deanery, where a Priest attends
Strait marry her: to this her Mothers plot
She seemingly obedient) likewise hath
Made promise to the Doctor: Now, thus it rests,
Her Father means she shall be all in white;
And in that habit, when Slender sees his time
To take her by the hand, and bid her goe,
She shall goe with him: her Mother hath intended
(The better to denote her to the Doctor,
For they must all be mask'd, and vizarded)

That quaint in greene, she shall be loose en-roab'd,
With Ribonds-pendant, flaring 'bout her head;
And when the Doctor spies his vantage ripe,
To pinch her by the hand, and on that token,
The maid hath given consent to go with him.

Host. Which meanes she to deceiue? Father, or Mother.

Fen. Both (my good Host) to go along with me:
And heere it rests, that you'l procure the Vicar
To stay for me at Church, 'twixt twelue, and one,
And in the lawfull name of marrying,
To giue our hearts vnited ceremony.

Host. Well, husband your device; Ile to the Vicar,
Bring you the Maid, you shall not lacke a Priest.

Fen. So shall I euermore be bound to thee;
Besides, Ile make a present recompence. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Falstaffe, Quickly, and Ford.

Fal. Pre'thee no more prattling: go, Ile hold, this is the third time: I hope good lucke lies in odde numbers: Away, go, they say there is Diuinity in odde Numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death: away.

Qui. Ile prouide you a chaine, and Ile do what I can to get you a pair of hornes.

Fal. Away I say, time weares, hold vp your head & mince. How now M. Broome? Master Broome, the matter will be knowne to night, or never. Bee you in the Parke about midnight, at Hernes-Oake, and you shall see wonders.

Ford. Went you not to her yesterday (Sir) as you told me you had appointed?

Fal. I went to her (Master Broome) as you see, like a poore-old-man, but I came from her (Master Broome) like a poore-old-woman; that same knaue (Ford his husband) hath the finest mad diuell of iealousie in him (Master Broome) that euer gouern'd Frensie. I will tell you, he beate me grieuously, in the shape of a woman: (for in the shape of Man (Master Broome) I feare not Goliah with a Weauers beame, because I know also, life is a Shuttle) I am in haste, go along with mee, Ile tell you all (Master Broome:) since I plackt Geese, plaide Trewant, and whipt Top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten, till lately. Follow mee, Ile tell you strange things of this knaue Ford, on whom to night I will be reuenged, and I will deliuer his wife into your hand. Follow, strange things in hand (M. Broome) follow. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Page, Shallow, Slender.

Page. Come, come: wee'l couch i'th Castle-ditch, till we see the light of our Fairies. Remember son Slender, my Slen. I forsooth, I haue spoke with her, & we haue a my-word, how to know one another. I come to her in white, and cry Mum; she cries Budget, and by that we know one another.

Shal. That's good too: But what needes either your Mum, or her Budget? The white will decipher her well enough. It hath strooke ten a'clocke.

Page. The night is darke, Light and Spirits will become it wel: Heauen prosper our sport. No man means euill but the deuill, and we shal know him by his hornes. Lets away: follow me. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Mist. Page, Mist. Ford, Caius.

Mist. Page. Mr Doctor, my daughter is in green, when you see your time, take her by the hand, away with her to the Deanerie, and dispatch'it quickly: go before into the Parke: we two must go together.

Cai. I know vat I haue to do, adieu.

Mist. Page. Fare you well (Sir.) my husband will not reioyce so much at the abuse of Falstaffe, as he will chafe at the Doctors marrying my daughter: But 'tis no matter; better a little chiding, then a great deale of heart-breake.

Mist. Ford. Where is Nan now? and her troop of Fairies? and the Welch-deuill Herne?

Mist. Page. They are all couch'd in a pit hard by Hernes Oake, with obscur'd Lights; which at the very instant of Falstaffes and our meeting, they will at once display to the night.

Mist. Ford. That cannot choose but amaze him.

Mist. Page. If he be not amaz'd he will be mock'd: If he be amaz'd, he will every way be mock'd.

Mist. Ford. We'll betray him finely.

Mist. Page. Against such Lewdsters, and their lechery, Those that betray them, do no treachery.

Mist. Ford. The houre drawes on: to the Oake, to the Oake. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Euans and Fairies.

Euans. Trib, trib Fairies: Come, and remember your parts: be bold (I pray you) follow me into the pit, and when I giue the watch-'ords, do as I did you: Come, come, trib, trib. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Falstaffe, Mistris Page, Mistris Ford, Euans, Anne Page, Fairies, Page, Ford, Quickly, Slender, Pistol, Caius, Pistol.

Fal. The Windsor-bell hath stroke twelue: the Minute drawes-on: Now the hot-bloodied-Gods assist me: Remember Loue, thou wast a Bull for thy Europa, Loue set on thy hornes. O powerfull Loue, that in some respects makes a Beast a Man: in some other, a Man a beast. You were also (Iupiter) a Swan, for the loue of Leda: O omnipotent omnipotent Loue, how neere the God drew to the complexion of a Goose: a fault done first in the forme of a beast, (O Ioue, a beastly fault:) and then another fault in the semblance of a Fowle, thinke on't (Ioue) a fowle-fault. When Gods haue hot backes, what shall poore men do? For me, I am heere a Windsor Stagge, and the fattest (I thinke) i'th Forrest. Send me a cooler rut-time (Ioue) or who can blame me to piffe my Tallow? Who comes heere? my Doe?

*M. Ford. Sir Iohn? Art thou there (my Deere?)
My male-Deere?*

Fal. My Doe, with the black Scut? Let the skie raine Potatoes: let it thunder, to the tune of Greenesleeues, haile-stones, Comfits, and snow Eringoes: Let there come a tempest of provocation, I will shelter me heere.

M. Ford. Mistris Page is come with me (sweet hart.)

*Fal. Diuide me like a brib'd-Buck, each a Haunch:
I will keepe my sides to my selfe, my shoulders for the fellow of this walke; and my hornes I bequeath your husbands. Am I a Woodman, ha? Speake I like Herne
the Hunter? Why, now is Cupid a child of conscience, he makes restitution. As I am a true spirit, welcome.*

M. Page. Alas, what noise?

M. Ford. Heauen forgiue our sinnes.

Fal. What should this be?

M. Ford. M. Page. Away, away.

*Fal. I thinke the diuell will not haue me damn'd, least the oyle that's in me should sea hell on fire;
he would never else crosse me thus.*

Enter Fairies.

*Qui. Fairies blacke, gray, greene, and white,
You Moone-shine reuellers, and shades of night.
You Orphan heires of fixed destiny,
Attend your office, and your quality.
Crier Hob-goblin, make the Fairy Oyes.*

*Pist. Elues, list your names: Silence you aiery toyes
Cricket, to Windsor-chimnies shalt thou leape:
Where fires thou find'st vnrak'd, and hearths vnswept,
There pinch the Maids as blew as Bill-berry.
Our radiant Queene, hates Sluts, and Sluttery.*

*Fal. They see Fairies, he that speaks to them shall die,
I'le winke, and couch: No man their workes must eie.*

*Eu. Where's Bede? Go you, and where you find a maid
That ere she sleepe has thrice her prayers said,
Raise vp the Organs of her fantasie,
Sleepe she as sound as carelesse infancie,
But those as sleepe, and thinke not on their sins,
Pinch them armes, legs, backes, shoulders, sides, & shins.*

*Qu. About, about:
Search Windsor Castle (Elues) within, and out.
Strew good luck (Ouphes) on every sacred roome,
That it may stand till the perpetuall doome,
In state as wholsome, as in state 'tis fit,
Worthy the Owner, and the Owner it.
The seuerall Chaires of Order, looke you scowre
With iuyce of Balme; and every precious flowre,
Each fair Installment, Coate, and seu'rall Creft,
With loyall Blazon, euermore be blest.
And Nightly-meadow-Fairies, looke you sing
Like to the Garters-Compasse, in a ring,
Th'expressure that it bears: Greene let it be,
More fertile-fresh then all the Field to see:
And Hony Soit Qui Mal-y-Pense, write
In Emerald-tufts, Flowres purple, blew, and white,
Like Saphire-pearle, and rich embroiderie,
Buckled below faire Knight-hoods bending knee.
Fairies vse Flowres for their characterie.
Away, disperse: But till 'tis one a clocke,
Our Dance of Custome, round about the Oke
Of Herne the Hunter, let vs not forget.*

*Eua. Pray you lock hand in hand; your selues in order set:
And twenty glow-wormes shall our Lanthornes bee
To guide our Measure round about the Tree.
But stay, I smell a man of middle earth.*

*Fal. Heauens defend me from that Welsh Fairy,
Least he transforme me to a peece of Cheese.*

Pist. Vilde worme, thou wast ore-look'd euen in thy birth.

*Qu. With Triall-fire touch me his finger end:
If he be chaste, the flame will backe descend
And turne him to no paine: but if he start,
It is the flesh of a corrupted hart.*

Pist. A triall, come.

Eua. Come: will this wood take fire?

Fal. Oh, oh, oh.

*Qui. Corrupt, corrupt, and tainted in desire.
About him (Fairies) sing a scornfull rime,
And as you trip, still pinch him to your time.*

The Song.

*Fie on sinnefull phantasie: Fie on Lust, and Luxurie:
Lust is but a bloody fire, kindled with vnchaste desire,
Fed in heart whose flames aspire,
As thought: do blow them higher and higher.
Pinch him (Fairies) mutually: Pinch him for his villanie.
Pinch him, and burne him, and turne him about,
Till Candles, & Star-light, & Moone-shine be out.*

Page. Nay do not flye, I thinke we haue watcht you now: Will none but Herne the Hunter serue your turne?

M. Page. I pray you come, hold vp the iest no higher. Now (good Sir Iohn) how like you Windsor wiues? See you these husband? Do not these faire yokes Become the Forrest better then the Towne?

Ford. Now Sir, whose a Cuckold now?
Mr Brooome, Falstaffe a Knaue, a Cuckoldly knaue,
Heere are his hornes Master Brooome:
And Master Brooome, he hath enioyed nothing of Fords, but his Buck-basket, his cudgell, and twenty pounds of money, which must be paid to Mr Brooome, his horses are arrested for it. Mr Brooome.

M. Ford. Sir Iohn, we haue had ill luck: wee could never meete: I will never take you for my Loue again, but I will alwayes count you my Deere.

Fal. I do begin to perceiue that I am made an Asse.

Ford. I, and an Ox too: both the proofes are extant.

Fal. And these are not Fairies:
I was three or foure times in the thought they were not Fairies, and yet the guiltinesse of my minde, the sodaine surprise of my powers, drone the grossenesse of the foppery into a receiu'd beleefe, in despight of the tenth of all rime and reason, that they were Fairies. See now how wit may be made a Iacke-a-Lent, when 'tis vpon ill imployment.

Eua. Sir Iohn Falstaffe, serue God, and leaue your desires, and Fairies will not pinse you.

Ford. Well said Fairy Hugh.

Eua. And leaue you your iealousies too, I pray you.

Ford.

Ford. I will never mistrust my wife againe, till thou art able to woo her in good English.

Fal. Have I laid my brame in the Sun, and dri'de it, that it wants matter to present so groſſe ore-reaching as this? Am I ridden with a Welch Goote too? Shal I haue a Coxcombe of Frize? Tis time I were choak'd with a peece of toaſted Cheeſe.

Eu. Seeſe is not good to give putter; your belly is all putter.

Fal. Seeſe, and Putter? Haue I liu'd to ſtand at the taunt of one that makes Fritters of Engliſh? This is enough to be the decay of luſt and late-walking through the Realme.

Miſt.Page. Why Sir Iohn, do you thinke though wee would haue thruſt vertue out of our hearts by the head and ſhoulders, and haue giuen our ſelues without ſcruple to hell, that euer the deuill could haue made you our delight?

Ford. What, a hodge-pudding? A bag of flax?

Miſt.Page. A poft-man?

Page. Old, cold, wither'd, and of intolerable entrailes?

Ford. And one that is as ſlanderous as Satan?

Page. And as poore as Iob?

Ford. And as wicked as his wife?

Euan. And giuen to Fornications, and to Tauernes, and Sacke, and Wine, and Metheglins, and to drinkings and ſwearings, and ſtarings? Pribles and prables?

Fal. Well, I am your Theame: you haue the ſtart of me, I am deiected: I am not able to anſwer the Welch Flannell, Ignorance is feſe is a plummet ore me, vſe me as you will.

Ford. Marry Sir, wee'l bring you to Windſor to one Mr Brooke, that you haue cozen'd of money, to whom you ſhould haue bin a Pander: euer and aboue that you haue ſuffer'd, I thinke, to repay that money will be a biting affliction.

Page. Yet be cheerefull Knight: thou ſhalt eat a poſſet to night at my houſe, wher I will deſire thee to laugh at my wife, that now laughes at thee: Tell her Mr Slender hath married her daughter.

Miſt.Page. Doctors doubt that!

If Anne Page be my daughter, ſhe is (by this) Doctor Caius wife.

Slen. Whoo hoe, hoe, Father Page.

Page. Sonne? How now? How now Sonne, Haue you diſpatch'd?

Slen. Diſpatch'd? I'le make the beſt in Gloſterſhire know on't: would I were hang'd la, elſe.

Page. Of what ſonne?

Slen. I came yonder at Eaton to marry Miſtris Anne Page, and ſhe's a great lubberly boy. If it had not bene i'th Church, I would haue ſwing'd him, or her ſhould haue ſwing'd me. If I did not thinke it had beene Anne Page, would I might never ſtirre, and 'tis a Poſt-maſters Boy.

Page. Vpon my life then, you tooke the wrong.

Slen. What needs you tell me that? I think ſo, when I tooke a Boy for a Girle: If I had bene married to him, (for all he was in womans apparell) I would not haue had him.

Page. Why this is your owne folly,
Did not I tell you how you ſhould know my daughter,
By her garments?

Slen. I went to her in greene, and cried Mum, and ſhe cride budget, as Anne and I had appointed, and yet it was not Anne, but a Poſt-maſters boy

Miſt.Page. Good George be not angry, I knew of your purpoſe: turn'd my daughter into white, and indeede ſhe is now with the Doctor at the Deanerie, and there married.

Cai. Ver is Miſtris Page: by gar I am cozened, I ha married oon Garſoon, a boy; oon peſant, by gar. A boy, it is not Anne Page, by gar, I am cozened.

Mi.Page. Why? did you take her in white?

Cai. I bee gar, and 'tis a boy: be gar, I'le raiſe all Windſor.

Ford. This is ſtrange: Who hath got the right Anne?

Page. My heart miſgiues me, here comes Mr Fenton.
How now Mr Fenton?

Anne Pardon good father, good my mother pardon

Page. Now Miſtris:
How chance you went not with Mr Slender?

Mi.Page. Why went you not with Mr Doctor, maid?

Fen. You do amaze her: heare the truth of it.
You would haue married her moſt ſhamefully,
Where there was no proportion held in loue:
The truth is, ſhe and I (long ſince contracted)
Are now ſo ſure that nothing can diſſolue vs.
Th'offence is holy, that ſhe hath committed,
And this deceit looſes the name of craft,
Of diſobedience, or vnduteous title.
Since therein ſhe doth quitance and ſhun
A thouſand irreligious curſed hours
Which forced marriage would haue brought vpon her.

Ford. Stand not amaz'd, here is no remedie:
In Loue, the heauens themſelues do guide the ſtate,
Money buyes Lands, and wiues are ſold by fate.

Fal. I am glad, though you haue tane a ſpecial ſtand to ſtrike at me, that your Arrow hath glanc'd.

Page. Well, what remedy? Fenton, heauen giue thee joy. what cannot be eſchew'd, muſt be embrac'd.

Fal. When night-dogges run, all ſorts of Deere are chac'd.

Miſt.Page. Well, I will muſe no further: Mr Fenton,
Heauen giue you many, many merry days:
Good husband, let vs every one go home.
And laugh this ſport ore by a Countrie fire.
Sir Iohn and all.

Ford. Let it be ſo (Sir Iohn)
To Maſter Brooke, you yet ſhall hold your word,
For he, to night, ſhall lye with Miſtris Ford.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

MEASVRE, For Measure.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Duke, Escalus, Lords.

Duke.

Escalus.

Esc. My Lord.

Duke. Of Gouernment, the properties to vnfold,
Would seeme in me t'affect speech & discourse,
Since I am put to know, that your owne Science
Exceedes (in that) the lists of all aduice
My strength can giue you: Then no more remaines
But that, to your sufficiency, as your worth is able,
And let them worke: The nature of our People,
Our Cities Institutions, and the Termes
For Common Iustice, y'are as pregnant in
As Art, and practise, hath inriched any
That we remember: There is our Commission,
From which, we would not haue you warpe; call hither,
I say, bid come before vs Angelo:
What figure of vs thinke you, he will beare.
For you must know, we haue with speciall soule
Elected him our absence to supply;
Lent him our terror, dreft him with our loue,
And giuen his Deputation all the Organs
Of our owne powre: What thinke you of it?

Esc. If any in Vienna be of worth
To vndergoe such ample grace, and honour,
It is Lord Angelo.

Enter Angelo.

Duke. Looke where he comes.

Ang. Always obedient to your Graces will,
I come to know your pleasure.

Duke. Angelo:
There is a kinde of Character in thy life,
That to th' obscuresst, doth thy history
Fully vnfold: Thy selfe, and thy belongings
Are not thine owne so proper, as to waste
Thy selfe vpon thy vertues; they on thee:
Heauen doth with vs, as we, with Torches doe,
Not light them for themselues: For if our vertues
Did not goe forth of vs, 'twere all alike
As if we had them not: Spirits are not finely touch'd
But to fine issues: nor nature never lends
The smallest scruple of her excellence,
But like a thrifty goddesse, she determines
Her selfe the glory of a creditour,
Both thanks, and vse; but I do bend my speech
To one that can my part in him aduertise;
Hold therefore Angelo:
In our remoue, be thou at full, our selfe:
Mortalitie and Mercie in Vienna
Liue in thy tongue, and heart: Old Escalus
Though first in question, is thy secondary.
Take thy Commission.

Ang. Now good my Lord
Let there be some more test, made of my mettle,
Before so noble, and so great a figure
Be stamp't vpon it.

Duke. No more euasion:
We haue with a leauen'd, and prepared choice
Proceeded to you; therefore take your honors:
Our haste from hence is of so quicke condition,
That it prefers itselfe, and leaues vnquestion'd
Matters of needfull value: We shall write to you
As time, and our concernings shall importune,
How it goes with vs, and doe looke to know
What doth befall you here. So fare you well;
To th' hopefull execution doe I leaue you,
Of your Commissions.

Ang. Yet giue leaue (my Lord,)
That we may bring you something on the way.

Duke. My haste may not admit it,
Nor needs you (on mine honor) haue to doe
With any scruple: your scope is as mine owne,
So to inforce, or qualifie the Lawes
As to your soule seemes good: Giue me your hand,
I'le priuily away: I loue the people,
But doe not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it doe well, I doe not relish well
Their lowd applause, and Aues vehement:
Nor doe I thinke the man of safe discretion
That do's affect it. Once more fare you well.

Ang. The heauens giue safety to your purposes.

Esc. Lead forth, and bring you backe in happinesse. Exit.

Duke. I thanke you, fare you well.

Esc. I shall desire you, Sir, to giue me leaue
To haue free speech with you; and it concernes me
To looke into the bottome of my place:
A powre I haue, but of what strength and nature,
I am not yet instructed.

Ang. 'Tis so with me: Let vs with-draw together,
And we may soone our satisfaction haue
Touching that point.

Esc. I'le wait vpon your honor. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Lucio, and two other Gentlemen.

Luc. If the Duke, with the other Dukes, come not to composition with the King of Hungary, why then all the Dukes fall vpon the King.

1. Gent. Heauen grant vs its peace, but not the King of Hungaries.

2. Gent. Amen.

Luc. Thou concluds't like the Sanctimonious Pirate, that went to sea with the ten Commandements, but scrap'd one out of the Table.

2. Gent. Thou shalt not Steale?

Luc. I, that he raz'd.

1. Gent. Why? 'twas a commandement, to command the Captaine and all the rest from their functions: they put forth to steale: There's not a Souldier of vs all, that in the thanks-giuing before meate, do rallish the petition well, that praies for peace.

2. Gent. I neuer heard any Souldier dislike it.

Luc. I believe thee: for I thinke thou neuer was't where Grace was said.

2. Gent. No? a dozen times at least.

1. Gent. What? In meeter?

Luc. In any proportion, or in any language.

1. Gent. I thinke, or in any Religion.

Luc. I, why not? Grace, is Grace, despight of all controuersie: as for example; Thou thy selfe art a wicked villaine, despight of all Grace.

1. Gent. Well: there went but a paire of sheeres betweene vs.

Luc. I grant: as there may betweene the Lists, and the Velvet. Thou art the List.

1. Gent. And thou the Velvet; thou art good velvet; thou'rt a three-pild-peece I warrant thee: I had as liefe be a List of an English Kersey, as be pil'd, as thou art pil'd, for a French Velvet. Do I speake feelingly now?

Luc. I thinke thou do'st; and indeed with most painfull feeling of thy speech: I will, out of thine owne confession, learne to begin thy health; but, whilst I liue forget to drinke after thee.

1. Gent. I think I haue done my selfe wrong, haue I not?

2. Gent. Yes, that thou hast; whether thou art tainted, or free. Enter Bawde.

Luc. Behold, behold, where Madam Mitigation comes. I haue purchas'd as many diseases vnder her Roofe,
As come to

2. Gent. To what, I pray?

Luc. Iudge.

3. Gent. To three thousand Dollours a yeare.

1. Gent. I, and more.

Luc. A French crowne more.

1. Gent. Thou art always figuring diseases in me; but thou art full of error, I am sound.

Luc. Nay, not (as one would say) healthy: but so sound, as things that are hollow; thy bones are hollow; Impiety has made a feast of thee.

1. Gent. How now, which of your hips has the most profound Cistics?

Bawd. Well, well: there's one yonder arrested, and carried to prison, was worth fiue thousand of you all.

2. Gent. Who's that I pray thee?

Bawd. Marry Sir, that's Claudio, Signior Claudio.

1. Gent. Claudio to prison? 'tis not so.

Bawd. Nay, but I know 'tis so: I saw him arrested: saw him carried away: and which is more, within these three dales has head to be chop'd off.

Luc. But, after all this fooling, I would not haue it so: Art thou sure of this?

Bawd. I am too sure of it: and it is for getting Madam Iulietta with childe.

Luc. Believe me this may be: she promis'd to meete me two howres since, and he vnseuer precise in promise keeping.

2. Gent. Besides you know, it drawes something neere to the speech we had to such a purpose.

1. Gent. But most of all agreeing with the proclamation.

Luc. Away: let's goe learne the truth of it. Exeunt.

Bawd. Thus, what with the war; what with the sweat, what with the gallowes, and what with poverty, I am Custom-shrunke. How now? what's the newes with you. Enter Clowne.

Clo. Yonder man is carried to prison.

Baw. Well: what has he done?

Clo. A Woman.

Baw. But what's his offence?

Clo. Groping for Trowts, in a peculiar Riuer.

Baw. What? is there a maid with child by him?

Clo. No: but there's a woman with maid by him: you haue not heard of the proclamation, haue you?

Baw. What proclamation, man?

Clow. All howses in the Suburbs of Vienna must be pluck'd downe.

Bawd. And what shall become of those in the Cide?

Clow. They shall stand for seed: they had gon downe too, but that a wise Burger put in for them.

Bawd. But shall all our houses of resort in the Suburbs be puld downe?

Clow. To the ground, Mistris.

Bawd. Why heere's a change indeed in the Commonwealth: what shall become of me?

Clow. Come: feare not you: good Counsellors lacke no Clients: though you change your place, you neede not change your Trade: Ile bee your Tapster still; courage, there will bee pitty taken on you; you that haue worne your eyes almost out in the service, you will bee considered.

Bawd. What's to doe heere, Thomas Tapster? let's withdraw?

Clo. Here comes Signior Claudio, led by the Prouost to prison: and there's Madam Iuliet. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Prouost, Claudio, Iuliet, Officers, Lucio, & 2. Gent.

Cla. Fellow, why do'st thou show me thus to th'worldl?
Beare me to prison, where I am committed.

Pro. I do it not in euill disposition,
But from Lord Angelo by speciall charge.

Clau. Thus can the demy-god (Authority)
Make vs pay downe, for our offence, by weight.
The words of heauen; on whom it will, it will,
On whom it will not (so) yet still 'tis just. (Restraint.

Luc. Why how now Claudio? whence comes this re-

Cla. From too much liberty, (my Lucio) Liberty
As surfeit is the father of much fait,
So every Scope by the immoderate vse
Turnes to restraint: Our Natures doe pursue

Like

Like Rats that ramp downe their proper Bane,
A thirsty euill, and when we drinke, we die.

Luc. If I could speake so wisely vnder an arrest, I would send for certaine of my Creditors: and yet, to say the truth, I had as liefe haue the foppery of freedome, as the morality of imprisonment: what's thy offence, Claudio?

Cla. What (but to speake of) would offend againe.

Luc. What, is't murder?

Cla. No.

Luc. Lecherie?

Cla. Call it so.

Pro. Away, Sir, you must goe.

Cla. One word, good friend
Lucio, a word with you.

Luc. A hundred:
If they'll doe you any good: Is Lockeryd so look'd after?

Cla. Thus stands it with me: vpon a true contract
I got possession of Iuliets bed,
You know the Lady, she is fast my wife,
Saue that we doe the denunciation lacke
Of outward Order. This we came not to,
Onely for propagation of a Dowre
Remaining in the Coffer of her friends,
From whom we thought it meet to hide our Loue
Till Time had made them for vs. But it chances
The stealth of our most mutuall entertainment
With Character too grosse, is writ on Iuliet.

Luc. With childe, perhaps?

Cla. Vnhappily, euen so.
And the new Deputie, now for the Duke,
Whether it be the fault and glimpse of newnes
Or whether that the body publique, be
A horse whereon the Gouernor doth ride,
Who newly in the Seate, that it may know
He can command; lets it strait feele the spur:
Whether the Tirranny be in his place,
Or in his Eminence that fills it vp
I stagger in: But this new Gouernor
Awakes me all the inrolled penalties
Which haue (like vn-scowr'd Armor) hung by th'wall
So long, that nineteene Zodiacks haue gone round,
And none of them beene worne; and for a name
Now puts the drowsie and neglected Act
Freshly on me: 'tis surely for a name.

Luc. I warrant it is: And thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, that a milke-maid, if she be in loue, may sigh it off: Send after the Duke, and appeale to him.

Cla. I haue done so, but hee's not to be found.
I pre'thee (Lucio) doe me this kinde seruice:
This day, my sister should the Cloyster enter,
And there receiue her approbation.
Acquaint her with the danger of my state,
Implore her, in my voice, that she make friends
To the strict deputie: bid her selfe assay him,
I haue great hope in that: for in her youth
There is a prone and speechlesse dialect,
Such as moue men: beside, she hath prosperous Art
When she will play with reason, and discourse,
And well she can perswade.

Luc. I pray thee may; as well for the encouragement of the like, which else would stand vnder grieuous imposition: as for the enioying of thy life, who I would be sorry should bee thus foolishly lost, at a game of tick-tacke: Ile to her.

Cla. I thanke you good friend Lucio.

Luc. Within two houres.

Cla. Come Officer, away. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke and Frier Thomas.

Duke. No: holy Father, throw away that thought,
Beleeue not that the dribling dart of Loue
Can pierce a complest bosome: why, I desire thee
To giue me secret harbour, hath a purpose
More graue, and wrinkled, then the aimes, and ends
Of burning youth.

Fri. May your Grace speake of it?

Duke. My holy Sir, none better knowes then you
How I haue ever lou'd the life remoued
And held in idle price, to haunt assemblies
Where youth, and cost, witlesse braggery keepes.
I haue deliuerd to Lord Angelo
(A man of stricture and firme abstinence)
My absolute power, and place here in Vienna,
And he supposes me trauaild to Poland,
(For so I haue strewed it in the common eare)
And so it is receiu'd: Now (pious Sir)
You will demand of me, why I do this.

Fri. Gladly, my Lord.

Duke. We haue stricte Statutes, and most biting Lawes,
(The needfull bits and curbes to headstrong weedes,)
Which for this fourteene yeares, we haue let slip
Euen like an ore-growne Lyon in a Cage
That goes not out to prey: Now, as fond Fathers,
Hauing bound vp the threatning twigs of birch,
Onely to sticke it in their childrens sight
For terror, not to vse: in time the rod
More mock'd, then fear'd: so our Decrees,
Dead to infliction, to themselues are dead,
And liberties, plucks Iustice by the nose;
The Baby beares the Nurse, and quite a-kew are Goes all decorum.

Fri. It rested in your Grace
To vnloose this tyde-vp Iustice, when you pleas'd:
And it in you more dreadfull would haue seem'd
Then in Lord Angelo.

Duke. I doe feare: too dreadfull:
Sith 'twas my fault, to giue the people scope,
'T would be my tirrany to strike and gall them,
For what I bid them doe: For, we bid this be done
When euill deedes haue their permissiue passe,
And not the punishment: therefore indeede (my father)
I haue on Angelo impos'd the office,
Who may in th'ambush of my name, strike home,
And yet, my nature never in the fight
To do in slander: And to behold his sway
I will, as 'twere a brother of your Order,
Visit both Prince, and People: Therefore I pre'thee
Supply me with the habit, and instruct me
How I may formally in person beare
Like a true Frier: Moe reasons for this action
At our more leysure, shall I render you;
Onely, this one: Lord Angelo is precise,
Stands at a guard with Enuie: scarce confesses
That his blood flowes: or that his appetite
Is more to bread then stone: hence shall we see
If power change purpose: what our Seemers be. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Isabell and Francisca a Nun.

Isa. And haue you Nuns no further priuiledges?
Nun. Are not these large enough?
Isa. Yes truely: I speake not as desiring more,
But rather wishing a more strict restraint
Vpon the Sisterhood, the Votaries of Saint Clare.
Lucio within.
Luc. Hoa? peace be in this place.
Isa. Who's that which calls?
Nun. It is a mans voice: gentle Isabella
Turne you the key, and know his businesse of him;
You may; I may not: you are yet vnsworne;
When you haue vow'd, you must not speake with men,
But in the presence of the Priuiledge;
Then if you speake, you must not show your face,
Or if you show your face, you must not speake:
He calls againe: I pray you answere him.
Isa. Peace and prosperitie: who is't that calls?
Luc. Haile Virgin, (if you be) as those cheeke-Roses
Proclaime you are no lesse: can you so stead me,
As bring me to the sight of Isabella,
A Nouice of this place, and the faire Sister
To her vnhappie brother Claudio?
Isa. Why her vnhappy Brother? Let me aske,
The rather for I now must make you know
I am that Isabella, and his Sister.
Luc. Gentle & faire: your Brother kindly greets you;
Not to be weary with you; he's in prison.
Isa. Woe me; for what?
Luc. For that, which if my selfe might be his bailge,
He should receiue his punishment, in thankes:
He hath got his friend with childe.
Isa. Sir, make me not your story.
Luc. 'Tis true; I would not, though 'tis my familiar sin,
With Maids to seeme the Lapwing, and to iest
Tongue, far from heart: play with all Virgins so:
I hold you as a thing enskied, and sainted,
By your renouncement, an immortall spirit
And to talk'd with in sincerity,
As with a Saint.
Isa. You doe blaspheme the good, in mocking me.
Luc. Doe not beleeue it: fewnes, and truth; 'tis thus,
Your brother, and his louer haue embrac'd;
As those that feed, grow full: as blossoming Time
That from the seedsues, the bare fallow bringe
To seeming foyson: euen so her plenteous wombe
Expressesth his full Tilth, and husbandry.
Isa. Some one with childe by him? my cosen Iuliet?
Luc. Is she your cosen?
Isa. Adoptedly, as schoole-maids change their names
By vaine, though apt affection.
Luc. She it is.
Isa. Oh, let him marry her.
Luc. This is the point.
The Duke is very strangely gone from hence;
Bore many gentlemen (my selfe being one)
In hand, and hope of action: but we doe learne,
By those that know the very Nerues of State,
His giuing-out, were of an infinite distance
From his true meant designe: vpon his place,
(And with full line of his authority)
Gouernes Lord Angelo; A man, whose blood
Is very snow-broth: one, who never feeles
The wanton stings, and motions of the sence;
But doth rebate, and blunt his naturall edge
With profits of the minde: Studie, and fast
He (to giue feare to vse, and libertie,
Which haue, for long, run by the hideous law,
As Mice, by Lyons) hath picht out an act,
Vnder whose heauy sence, your brothers life
Falls into forfeit: he arrests him on it,
And followes close the rigor of the Statute
To make him an example: all hope is gone,
Vnlesse you haue the grace, by your faire praiser
To soften Angelo: And that's my pith of businesse
'Twixt you, and your poore brother.
Isa. Doth he so,
Seeke his life?
Luc. Has censur'd him already,
And as I heare, the Prouost hath a warrant
For's execution.
Isa. Alas: what poore
Abilitie's in me, to doe him good.
Luc. Assay the powre you haue.
Isa. My power? alas, I doubt.
Luc. Our doubts are traitors
And makes vs loose the good we oft might win,
By fearing to attempt: Goe to Lord Angelo
And let him learne to know, when Maidens sue
Men giue like gods: but when they weepe and kneele,
All their petitions, are as freely theirs
As they themselues would owe them.
Isa. Ile see what I can doe.
Luc. But speedily.
Isa. I will about it strait;
No longer staying, but to giue the Mother
Notice of my affaire: I humbly thanke you:
Commend me to my brother: soone at night
Ile send him certaine word of my successe.
Luc. I take my leaue of you.
Isa. Good sir, adieu. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Angelo, Escalus, and seruants, Iustice.

Ang. We must not make a scare-crow of the Law,
Setting it vp to feare the Birds of prey,
And let it keepe one shape, till custome make it
Their peareh, and not their terror.
Esc. I, but yet
Let vs be keene, and rather cut a little
Then fall, and bruise to death: alas, this gentleman
Whom I would saue, had a most noble father,
Let but your honour know
(Whom I beleeue to be most strait in vertue)
That in the working of your owne affections,
Had time cohered with Place, or place with wishing,
Or that the resolute acting of our blood
Could haue attaind th'effect of your owne purpose,
Whether you had not sometime in your life
Er'd in this point, which now you censure him,
And pald the Law vpon you.
Ang. 'Tis one thing to be tempted (Escalus)

Another

Another thing to fall: I not deny
The Iury passing on the Prisoners life
May in the sworne-twelue haue a thiefe, or two
Guiltier then him they try: what's open made to Iustice,
That Iustice seizes; What knowes the Lawes
That theeues do passe on theeues? Tis very pregnant,
The Iewell that we finde, we stoope, and take't,
Because we see it; but what we doe not see,
We tread vpon, and neuer thinke of it.
You may not so extenuate his offence,
For I haue had such faults; but rather tell me
When I, that censure him, do so offend,
Let mine owne Iudgement patterne out my death,
And nothing come in partiall. Sir, he must dye.

Enter Prouost.

Esc. Be it as your wisedome will.

Ang. Where is the Prouost?

Pro. Here if it like your honour.

Ang. See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning,
Bring him his Confessor, let him be prepar'd,
For that's the vtmost of his pilgrimage.

Esc. Well: heauen forgiue him; and forgiue vs all:
Some rise by sinne, and some by vertue fall.
Some run from brakes of Ice, and answere none,
And some condemned for a fault alone.

Enter Elbow, Froth, Clowne, Officers.

Elb. Come, bring them away: if these be good people in a Common-weale, that doe nothing but vse their shoes in common houses, I know no law: bring them away.

Ang. How now Sir, what's your name? And what's the matter?

Elb. If it please your honour, I am the poore Dukes Constable, and my name is Elbow; I doe leane vpon Iustice Sir, and doe bring in here before your good honor, two notorious Benefactors.

Ang. Benefactors? Well: What Benefactors are they? Are they not Malefactors?

Elb. If it please your honour, I know not well what they are: But precise villaines they are, that I am sure of, and void of all prophanation in the world, that good Christians ought to haue.

Esc. This comes off well: here's a wise Officer.

Ang. Goe to: What quality are they of? Elbow is your name?
Why do st thou not speake Elbow?

Clo. He cannot Sir: he's out at Elbow.

Ang. What are you Sir?

Elb. He Sir: a Tapster Sir: parcell Baud: one that serues a bad woman: whose house Sir was (as they say) plucke downe in the Suburbs: and now shee professes a hot-house; which, I thinke is a very ill house too.

Esc. How know you that?

Elb. My wife Sir? whom I detest before heauen, and your honour.

Esc. How? thy wife?

Elb. I Sir: whom I thanke heauen is an honest woman.

Esc. Do'st thou detest her therefore?

Elb. I say sir, I will detest my selfe also, as well as she, that this house, if it be not a Bauds house, it is pitty of her life, for it is a naughty house.

Esc. How do'st thou know that, Constable?

Elb. Marry sir, by my wife, who, if she had bin a woman Cardinally giuen, might haue bin accus'd in fornication, adultery, and all vncleanlinesse there.

Esc. By the womens meanes?

Elb. I sir, by Mistris Ouer-dons meanes: but as she spit in his face, so she defide him.

Clo. Sir, if it please your honor, this is not so.

Elb. Proue it before these varlets here, thou honorable man, proue it.

Esc. Doe you heare how he misplaces?

Clo. Sir, she came in great with childe: and longing (sauing your honors reuerence) for stewd prewyns; sir, we had but two in the house, which at that very distant time stood, as it were in a fruit dish (a dish of some three pence; your honours haue seene such dishes) they are not China-dishes, but very good dishes.

Esc. Go too: go too: no matter for the dish sir.

Clo. No indeede sir not of a pin; you are therein in the right: but, to the point: As I say, this Mistris Elbow, being (as I say) with childe, and being great bellied, and longing (as I said) for prewyns: and having but two in the dish (as I said) Master Froth here, this very man, hauing eaten the rest (as I said) & (as I say) paying for them very honestly: for, as you know Master Froth, I could not giue you three pence againe.

Fro. No indeede.

Clo. Very well: you being then (if you be remembred) cracking the stones of the foresaid prewyns.

Fro. I, so I did indeede.

Clo. Why very well: I telling you then (if you be remembred) that such a one, and such a one, were past cure of the thing you wot of, vnlesse they kept very good diet, as I told you.

Fro. All this is true.

Clo. Why very well then.

Esc. Come: you are a tedious foole: to the purpose: what was done to Elbows wife, that hee hath cause to complaine of? Come me to what was done to her.

Clo. Sir, your boot cannot come to that yet.

Esc. No sir, nor I meane it not.

Clo. Sir, but you shall come to it, by your honours leaue: And I beseech you, looke into Master Froth here sir, a man of foure score pound a yeare; whose father died at Hallowmas: Was't not at Hallowmas Master Froth?

Fro. All hallond-Eue.

Clo. Why very well: I hope here be truthes: he Sir, sitting (as I say) in a lower chaire, Sir. 'twas in the bunch of Grapes, where indeede you haue a delight to sit, haue you not?

Fro. I haue so, because it is an open roome, and good for winter.

Clo. Why very well then: I hope here be truthes.

Ang. This will last out a night in Russia
When nights are longest there: Ile take my leaue,
And leaue you to the hearing of the cause;
Hoping youle finde good cause to whip them all. Exit.

Esc. I thinke no lesse: good morrow to your Lordship. Now Sir, come on: What was done to Elbows wife, once more?

Clo. Once Sir? there was nothing done to her once.

Elb. I beseech you Sir, aske him what this man did to my wife.

Clo. I beseech your honor, aske me.

Esc. Well sir, what did this Gentleman to her?

Clo. I beseech you sir, looke in this Gentlemans face: good Master Froth looke vpon his honor; 'tis for a good purpose: doth your honor marke his face?

Esc. I sir, very well.

Clo. Nay, I beseech you marke it well.

Esc. Well, I doe so.

Clo. Doeth your honor see any harme in his face?

Esc. Why no.

Clo. Ile be supposd vpon a booke, his face is the worst thing about him: good then: if his face be the worst thing about him, how could Master Froth doe the Constables wife any harme? I would know that of your honour.

Esc. He's in the right (Constable) what say you to it?

Elb. First, and it like you, the house is a respected house; next, this is a respected fellow; and his Mistris is a respected woman.

Clo. By this hand Sir, his wife is a more respected person then any of us all.

Elb. Varlet, thou lyest; thou lyest wicked varlet: the time is yet to come that thee was euer respected with man, woman, or childe.

Clo Sir, she was respected with him, before he married with her.

Esc. Which is the wiser here; Iustice or Iniquitie? Is this true?

Elb. O thou caytiffe: O thou varlet: O thou wicked Hannibal; I respected with her, before I was married to her? If ever I was respected with her, or she with me, let not your worship thinke mee the poore Duke's Officer: prouе this, thou wicked Hannibal, or ile haue mine action of battery on thee.

Esc. If he tooke you a box 'oth'eare, you might haue your action of slander too.

Elb. Marry I thanke your good worship for it: what is't your Worships pleasure I shall doe with this wicked Caitiffe?

Esc. Truly Officer, because he hath some offences in him, that thou wouldst discouer, if thou couldst, let him continue in his courses, till thou knowst what they are.

Elb. Marry I thanke your worship for it: Thou seest thou wicked varlet now, what's come vpon thee. Thou art to continue now thou Varlet, thou art to continue.

Esc. Where were you borne, friend?

Froth. Here in Vienna, Sir.

Esc. Are you of fourescore pounds a yeere?

Froth. Yes, and 't please you sir.

Esc. So: what trade are you of, sir?

Clo. A Tapster, a poore widdowes Tapster.

Esc. Your Mistris name?

Clo. Mistris Ouer-don.

Esc. Hath she had any more then one husband?

Clo. Nine, sir: Ouer-don by the last.

Esc. Nine? come hether to me, Master Froth; Master Froth, I would not haue you acquainted with Tapsters; they will draw you Master Froth, and you wil hang them: get you gon, and let me heare no more of you.

Fro. I thanke your worship: for mine owne part, I neuer come into any roome in a Tap-house, but I am drawne in.

Esc. Well: no more of it Master Froth: farewell: Come you hether to me, M'. Tapster: what's your name M'. Tapster?

Clo. Pompey.

Esc. What else?

Clo. Bum, Sir.

Esc. Troth, and your bum is the greatest thing about you, so that in the boastliest sence, you are Pompey the great; Pompey, you are partly a bawd, Pompey; howsoeuer you colour it in being a Tapster, are you not? come, tell me true, it shall be the better for you.

Clo. Truly sir, I am a poore fellow that would liue.

Esc. How would you liue Pompey? by being a bawde what doe you thinke of the trade Pompey? is it a lawfull trade?

Clo. If the Law would allow it, sir.

Esc. But the Law will not allow it Pompey; nor it shall not be allowed in Vienna.

Clo. Do's your Worship meane to geld and spay all the youth of the City?

Esc. No, Pompey.

Clo. Truely Sir, in my poore opinion they will too't then: if your worship will take order for the drabs and the knaues, you need not to feare the bawds.

Esc. There is pretty orders beginning I can tell you: It is but boasting, and hanging.

Clo. If you hang, and hang all that offend that way but for ten yeare together; you'll be glad to giue out a Commission for more heads: If this law hold in Vienna ten yeare, ile rent the fairest house in it after three pence a Bay: If you liue to see this come to passe, say Pompey told you so.

Esc. Thanke you good Pompey; and in requital of your prophesie, harke you: I aduise you let me not finde you before me againe vpon any complaint whatsoeuer; no, not for dwelling where you doe: if I doe Pompey, I shall beat you to your Tent, and prouе a shrewd Cæsar to you: in plaine dealing Pompey, I shall haue you whipt; so for this time, Pompey, fare you well.

Clo. I thanke your Worship for your good counsell; but I shall follow it as the flesh and fortune shall better determine. Whip me? no, no, let Carman whip his Iade, The valiant heart's not whipt out of his trade. Exit.

Esc. Come hether to me, Master Elbow: come hither Master Constable: how long haue you bin in this place of Constable?

Elb. Seuen yeere, and a halfe sir.

Esc. I thought by the readinesse in the office, you had continued in it some time: you say seuen yeares together.

Elb. And a halfe sir.

Esc. Alas, it hath beene great paines to you: they do you wrong to put you so oft vpon't. Are there not men in your Ward sufficient to serue it?

Elb. Faith sir, few of any wit in such matters: as they are chosen, they are glad to choose me for them: I do it for some peece of money, and goe through with all.

Esc. Looke you bring mee in the names of some foure or seuen, the most sufficient of your parish.

Elb. To your Worships house sir?

Esc. To my house: fare you well: what's a clocke, thinke you?

Iust. Eleuen, Sir.

Esc. I pray you home to dinner with me.

Iust. I humbly thanke you.

Esc. It grieues me for the death of Claudio
But there's no remedie:

Iust. Lord Angelo is seuere.

Esc. It is but needfull.
Mercy is not it selfe, that oft lookes so,
Pardon is still the nurse of second woe:
But yet, poore Claudio; there is no remedie.
Come Sir.

Exeunt.

Scena

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost, Seruant.

Ser. Hee's hearing of a Caule; he will come straight. I'le tell him of you.

Pro. Pray you doe; Ile know
His pleasure, may be he will relent; alas
He hath but as offended in a dreame,
All Sects, all Ages smack of this vice, and he
To die for't?

Enter Angelo.

Ang. Now, what's the matter Prouost?

Pro. Is it your will Claudio shall die to morrow?

Ang. Did not I tell thee yea? hadst thou not order?
Why dost thou aske againe?

Pro. Lest I might be too rash:
Vnder your good correction, I haue seene
When after execution, Iudgement hath
Repented ore his doome.

Ang. Goe to; let that be mine,
Doe you your office, or giue vp your Place,
And you shall well be spar'd.

Pro. I crame your Honours pardon:
What shall be done Sir, with the groaning Iuliet?
Shee's very neere her howre.

Ang. Dispose of her
To some more fitter place; and that with speed.

Ser. Here is the sister of the man condemn'd,
Desires access to you.

Ang. Hath he a Sister?

Pro. I my good Lord, a very vertuous maid,
And to be shortlie of a Sister-hood,
If not already.

Ang. Well: let her be admitted,
See you the Fornicatresse be remou'd,
Let her haue needfull, but not lauish meanes,
There shall be order for't.

Enter Lucio and Isabella.

Pro. Saue your Honour. (will?

Ang. Stay a little while: y'are welcome: what's your

Isab. I am a wofull Suitor to your Honour,
Please but your Honor heare me.

Ang. Well: what's your suite.

Isab. There is a vice that most I doe abhorre,
And most desire should meet the blow of Iustice;
For which I would not plead, but that I must,
For which I must not plead, but that I am
At warre, twixt will, and will not.

Ang. Well: the matter?

Isab. I haue a brother is condemn'd to die,
I doe beseech you let it be his fault,
And not my brother.

Pro. Heauen giue thee moving graces.

Ang. Condemn: the fault, and not the actor of it,
Why every fault 's condemnd ere it be done:
Mine were the verie Cipher of a Function
To fine the faults, whose fine stands in record,
And let goe by the Actor:

Isab. Oh just, but seuere Law:
I had a brother then; heauen keepe your honour.

Luc. Giue 't not ore so: to him againe, entreat him,
Kneele downe before him, hang vpon his gowne,
You are too cold: if you should need a pin,
You could not with more tame a tongue desire it:
To him, I say.

Isab. Must he needs die?

Ang. Maiden, no remedie.

Isab. Yes: I doe thinke that you might pardon him,
And neither heauen, nor man grieue at the mercy.

Ang. I will not doe't.

Isab. But can you if you would?

Ang. Looke what I will not, that I cannot doe.

Isab. But might you doe't & do the world no wrong
If so your heart were touch'd with that remorse,
As mine is to him?

Ang Hee's sentenc'd, tis too late.

Luc. You are too cold.

Isab. Too late? why no: I that doe speak a word
May call it againe: well, beleeue this
No ceremony that to great ones longs,
Not the Kings Crowne; nor the deputed sword,
The Marshalls Truncheon, nor the Iudges Robe
Become them with one halfe so good a grace
As mercie does: If he had bin as you, and you as he,
You would haue slipt like him, but he like you
Would not haue beene so sterne.

Ang. Pray you be gone.

Isab. I would to heauen I had your potencie,
And you were Isabell: should it then be thus?
No: I would tell what 'twere to be a Iudge,
And what a prisoner.

Luc. I, touch him: there's the vaine.

Ang. Your Brother is a forfeit of the Law,
And you but waste your words.

Isab. Alas, alas:
Why all the soules that were, were forfeit once,
And he that might the vantage best haue tooke,
Found out the remedie: how would you be,
If he, which is the top of Iudgement, should
But iudge you, as you are? Oh, thinke on that,
And mercie then will breathe within your lips
Like men new made.

Ang. Be you content, (faire Maid)
It is the Law, not I, condemne your brother,
Were he my kinsman, brother, or my sonne,
It should be thus with him: he must die to morrow.

Isab. To morrow? oh, that's sodaine,
Spare him, spare him:
Hee's not prepar'd for death; euen for our kitchins
We kill the fowle of season: shall we serue heauen
With lesse respect then we doe minister
To our grosse-selues? good, good my Lord, bethink you;
Who is it that hath di'd for this offence?
There's many haue committed it.

Luc. I, well said.

Ang. The Law hath not bin dead, though it hath slept
Those many had not dar'd to doe that euill
If the first, that did th' Edict infringe
Had answer'd for his deed. Now 'tis awake,
Takes note of what is done, and like a Prophet
Looke in a glasse that shewes what future euils
Either now, or by remissenesse, new conceiu'd,
And so in progresse to be hatc'hd, and borne,
Are now to haue no successiue degrees,
But here they liue to end.

Isab. Yet shew some pittie.

Ang. I shew it most of all, when I show Iustice;
For then I pittie those I doe not know,
Which a dismis'd offence, would after gaule

And

And doe him right, that answering one foule wrong
Liues not to act another. Be satisfied;
Your Brother dies to morrow; be content.
Isab. So you must be ye first that giues this sentence,
And he, that suffers: Oh, it is excellent
To haue a Giants strength: but it is tyrannous
To vse it like a Giant.
Luc. That's well said.
Isab. Could great men thunder
As Iouis himselfe do's, Ioue would never be quiet.
For every pelting petty Officer
Would vse his heauen for thunder;
Nothing but thunder: Merciful heauen,
Thou rather with thy sharpe and sulpherous bolt
Splits the vn-wedgable and gnarled Oke,
Then the soft Mertill: But man, proud man,
Drest in a little briefe authoritie,
Most ignorant of what he's most assur'd,
(His glassie Essence) like an angry Ape
Plaies such phantastique tricks before high heauen,
As makes the Angels weepe; who with our spleenes,
Would all themselues laugh mortall.
Luc. Oh, to him, to him wench: he will relent,
Hee's comming: I perceiue't.
Pro. Pray heauen she win him.
Isab. We cannot weigh our brother with our selfe,
Great men may iest with Saints: tis wit in them,
But in the lesse foule prophanation.
Luc. Thou'rt i'th right (Girle) more o'that.
Isab. That in the Captaine's but a cholericke word,
Which in the Souldier is flat blasphemie.
Luc. Art asha'd o'that? more on't.
Ang. Why doe you put these sayings vpon me?
Isab. Because Authoritie, though it erre like others,
Hath yet a kinde of medicine in it selfe
That skins the vice o'th top; goe to your bosome,
Knock there, and aske your heart what it doth know
That's like my brothers fault: if it confesse
A naturall guiltinesse, such as is his,
Let it not sound a thought vpon your tongue
Against my brothers life.
Ang. Shee speakes, and 'tis such sence
That my Sence breeds with it; fare you well.
Isab. Gentle my Lord, turne backe.
Ang. I will bethinke me: come again to morrow.
Isa. Hark, how Ile bribe you: good my Lord turn back.
Ang. How? bribe me?
Is. I, with such gifts that heauen shall share with you.
Luc. You had mar'd all else.
Isab. Not with fond Sickles of the tessled-gold,
Or Stones, whose rate are either rich, or poore
As fancie values them: but with true prayers,
That shall be vp at heauen, and enter there
Ere Sunne rise: prayers from preserued soules,
From fasting Maides whose minds are dedicate
To nothing temporall.
Ang. Well: come to me to morrow.
Luc. Goe to: 'tis well; away.
Isab. Heauen keepe your honour safe.
Ang. Amen.
For I am that way going to temptation,
Where prayers crosse.
Isab. At what hower to morrow,
Shall I attend your Lordship?
Ang. At any time 'fore-noone.
Isab. 'Saue your Honour.
Ang. From thee: euen from thy vertue.
What's this? what's this? is this her fault, or mine?
The Tempter, or the Tempted, who sins most? ha?
Not she: nor doth she tempt: but it is I,
That, lying by the Violet in the Sunne,
Doe as the Carrion do's, not as the flowre,
Corrupt with vertuous season: Can it be,
That Modesty may more beetray our Sence
Then woman lightnesse? having waste ground enough,
Shall we desire to raze the Sanctuary
And pitch our euils there? oh fie, fie, fie:
What doest thou? or what art thou Angelo?
Doest thou desire her fowly, for those things
That make her good? oh, let her brother liue:
Theeues for their robbery haue authority,
When Iudges steale themselues: what, doe I loue her,
That I desire to heare her speake again?
And feast vpon her eyes? what is't I dreame on?
Oh cunning enemy, that to catch a Saint,
With Saints doth bait thy hooke: most dangerous
Is that temptation, that doth goad vs on-
To sinne, in loosing vertue: never could the Strumpet
With all her double vigor, Art, and Nature
Once stir my temper: but this vertuous Maid
Subdues me quite: Ever till now
When men were fond, I smild, and wondred how. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Duke and Provost.

Duke. Haile to you, Provost, so I think you are.
Pro. I am the Provost: whats your will, good Frier?
Duke. Bound by my charity, and my blest order,
I come to visite the afflicted spirits
Here in the prison: doe me the common right
To let me see them: and to make me know
The nature of their crimes, that I may minister
To them accordingly.
Pro. I would do more then that, if more were needfull.

Enter Iulietta.

Looke here comes one: a Gentlewoman of mine,
Who falling in the flawes of her owne youth,
Hath blistered her report: She is with childe,
And he that got it, sentenc'd: a yong man,
More fit to doe another such offence,
Then dye for this.
Duke. When must he dye?
Pro. As I do thinke to morrow.
I haue prouided for you, stay a while
And you shall be conducted.
Duke. Repent you (faire one) of the sin you carry?
Iul. I doe; and beare the shame most patiently.
Du. Ile teach you how you shal arraign your conscience
And try your penitence, if it be found,
Or hollowly put on.
Iul. Ile gladly learne.
Duke. Loue you the man that wrong'd you?
Iul. Yes, as I loue the woman that wrong'd him.
Duke. So then it seemes your most offence full act
Was mutually committed.
Iul. Mutually.
Duke. Then was your sin of heauier kinde than his.
Iul. I doe confesse it, and repent it (Father.)

Duke. Tis meet so (daughter) but least you do repent
As that the sin hath brought you to this shame,
Which sorrow is alwaies toward our selues, not heauen,
Showing we would not spare heauen, as we loue it,
But as we stand in feare.

Isa. I doe repent me, as it is an euill,
And take the shame with ioy.

Duke. There rest:
Your partner (as I heare) must die to morrow,
And I am going with instruction to him:
Grace goe with you, Benedicite. Exit.

Isa. Must die to morrow? oh iniurious Loue
That respites me a life, whose very comfort
Is still a dying horror.

Pro. Tis pitty of him. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo.

An. When I would pray, & think, I thinke, and pray
To seuerall subiects: heauen hath my empty words,
Whilst my Inuention, hearing not my Tongue,
Anchors on Isabell: heauen in my mouth,
As if I did but onely chew his name,
And in my heart the strong and swelling euill
Of my conception: the state whereon I studied
Is like a good thing, being often read
Grownne feard, and tedious: yea, my Graunte
Wherein (let no man heare me) I take pride,
Could I, with boote, change for an idle plume
Which the ayre beats for vaine: oh place, oh forme,
How often dost thou with thy case, thy habit
Wrench awe from fooles, and tye the wiser soules
To thy false seeming? Blood, thou art blood,
Let's write good Angell on the Deuills horne
Tis not the Deuills Crest: how now? who's there?

Enter Seruant.

Ser. One Isabell, a Sister, desires access to you.

Ang. Teach her the way: oh, heauens
Why does my blood thus muster to my heart,
Making bath it vnable for it selfe,
And disposseasing all my other parts
Of necessary fitnesse?
So play the foolish throngs with one that swounds,
Come all to help him, and so stop the ayre
By which he should reuiue: and euen so
The generall subiect to a well-wisht King
Quit their owne part, and in obsequious fondnesse
Crowd to his presence, where their vn-taught loue
Must needs appear offence: how now faire Maid.

Enter Isabella.

Isab. I am come to know your pleasure. (me,

An. That you might know it, would much better please
Then to demand what tis: your Brother cannot liue.

Isab. Euen so: heauen keeps your Honor.

Ang. Yet may he liue a while: and it may be
As long as you, or I: yet he must die.

Isab. Vnder your Sentence?

Ang. Yea.

Isab. When, I beseech you: that in his Reprieue
(Longer, or shorter) he may be so fitted
That his soule sicken not.

Ang. Ha! fie, these filthy vices: It were as good
To pardon him, that hath from nature stolne
A man already made, as to remit
Their sawcie sweetnes, that do coyne heauens Image
In stamps that are forbid: 'tis all as easie,
Falsely to take away a life true made,
As to put mettle in restrained meanes
To make a false one.

Isab. Tis set downe so in heauen, but not in earth.

Ang. Say you so: then I shall poze you quickly.
Which had you rather, that the most iust Law
Now tooke your brothers life, and to redeeme him
Giue vp your body to such sweet vncleannesse
As she that he hath staind?

Isab. Sir, believe this.
I had rather giue my body, then my soule.

Ang. I talke not of your soule: our compel'd sins
Stand more for number, then for accompt.

Isab. How say you?

Ang. Nay lle not warrant that: for I can speake
Against the thing I say: Answere to this,
I (now the voyce of the recorded Law)
Pronounce a sentence on your Brothers life,
Might there not be a charitie in sinne,
To saue this Brothers life?

Isab. Please you to doo't,
Ile take it as a perill to my soule,
It is no sinne at all, but charitie.

Ang. Pleas'd you to doo't, at perill of your soule
Were equall poize of sinne, and charitie.

Isab. That I do beg his life, if it be sinne
Heauen let me beare it: you granting of my suit,
If that be sin, Ile make it my Morne-praies,
To haue it added to the faults of mine,
And nothing of your answere.

Ang. Nay, but heare me.
Your sence pursues not mine: either you are ignorant,
Or seeme so crafty; and that's not good.

Isab. Let be ignorant, and in nothing good,
But graciously to know I am no better.

Ang. Thus wisdome wishes to appeare most bright,
When it doth tax it selfe: As these blacke Masques
Proclaime an en-shield beauty ten times louder
Then beauty could displaied: But marke me,
To be receiued plaine. Ile speake more grosse.
Your Brother is to dye.

Isab. So.

Ang. And his offence is so, as it appeares,
Accountant to the Law, vpon that paine.

Isab. True.

Ang. Admit no other way to saue his life
(As I subscribe not that, nor any other,
But in the loss of question) that you, his Sister,
Finding your selfe desir'd of such a person,
Whose credit with the Iudge, or owne great place,
Could fetch your Brother from the Manacles
Of the all-building-Law: and that there were
No earthly meane to saue him, but that either
You must lay downe the treasures of your body,
To this supposed, or else to let him suffer:
What would you doe?

Isab. As much for my poore Brother, as my selfe;
That is: were I vnder the termes of death,
Th'impression of keene whips, I'ld weare as Rubies,
And strip my selfe to death, as to a bed,
That longing haue bin sicke for, ere I'ld yeeld
My body vp to shame.

Ang. That

Ang. Then must your brother die.
Isa. And 'twer the cheaper way:
Better it were a brother died at once,
Then that a sister, by redeeming him
Should die for ever.
Ang. Were not you then as cruell as the Sentence,
That you have slander'd so?
Isa. Ignomie in ransome, and free pardon
Are of two houses: lawfull mercie,
Is nothing kin to foule redemption.
Ang. You seem'd of late to make the Law a tirant,
And rather proo'd the sliding of your brother
A merriment, then a vice.
Isa. Oh pardon me my Lord, it oft falls out
To have, what we would have,
We speake not what we mean:
I something do excuse the thing I hate,
For his advantage that I dearely love.
Ang. We are all frailie.
Isa. Else let my brother die,
If not a fedarie but onely he
Owe, and suffered thy weaknesse.
Ang. Nay, women are frailie too.
Isa. I, as the glasses where they view themselves,
Which are as easie broke as they make formes:
Women? Helpe heaven! men their creation marre
In profiting by them: Nay, call us ten times frailie,
For we are soft, as our complexions are,
And credulous to false prints.
Ang. I think it well:
And from this testimonie of your owne sex
(Since I suppose we are made to be no stronger
Then faults may shake our frames) let me be bold;
I do arrest your words. Be that you are,
That is a woman; if you be more, you're none.
If you be one (as you are well expresst
By all externall warrants) shew it now,
By putting on the destin'd Liverie.
Isa. I have no tongue but one; gentle my Lord,
Let me entreate you speake the former language.
Ang. Plainlie conceive I love you.
Isa. My brother did love Iuliet,
And you tell me that he shall die for't.
Ang. He shall not Isabell if you give me love.
Isa. I know your vertue hath a licence in't,
Which seemes a little fouler then it is,
To plaster an others.
Ang. Believe me on mine Honor,
My words expresse my purpose.
Isa. Ha! Little honor, to be much believ'd,
And most pernicious purpose: Seeming, seeming.
I will proclaime thee Angelo, looke for't.
Signe me a present pardon for my brother,
Or with an out-stretch'd throate I'le tell the world aloud
What man thou art.
Ang. Who will believe thee Isabell?
My unspotted name, th ostentaneitie of my life,
My vouch against you, and my place i'th State,
Will so your accusation overweigh,
That you shall stifle in your owne report,
And smell of calumnie. I have begun,
And now I give my sensuall race, the reins,
Fie thy content to my sharpe appetite,
Ley by all nicetie, and prolixious blushes
That banish what they sue for: Redeeme thy brother,
By yielding up thy bodie to my will,
Or else he must not onelie die the death,
But thy unkindnesse shall his death draw out
To lingring sufferance: Answer me to morrow,
Or by the affection that now guides me most,
I'le prove a Tirant to him. As for you,
Say what you can; my false, o're-weighs your true. Exit
Isa. To whom should I complaine? Did I tell this,
Who would believe me? O perilous mouthes
That bear in them, one and the selfe-same tongue,
Either of condemnation, or approofe,
Bidding the Law make curtsie to their will,
Hooking both right and wrong to th'appetite,
To follow as it drawes. I'le to my brother,
Though he hath falne by prompture of the blood,
Yet hath he in him such a minde of Honor,
That had he twentie heads to tender downe
On twentie bloodie blockes, hee'ld yeeld them up,
Before his sister should her bodie stoope
To such shhord pollution.
Then Isabell live chaste, and brother die;
More then our Brother, is our Chastitie.
I'le tell him yet of Angelo's request,
And fit his minde to death, for his soules rest. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Claudio, and Provost.

Du. So then you hope of pardon from Lord Angelo?
Cla. The miserable have no other medicine
But onely hope: I have hope to live, and am prepar'd to die.
Duke. Be absolute for death: either death or life
Shall thereby be the sweeter. Reason thus with life:
If I do loose thee, I do loose a thing
That none but fooles would keepe: a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyre-influences,
That dost this habitacion where thou keepst
Hourely affict: Merrily, thou art death's foole,
For him thou labourst by thy flight to shun,
And yet runst toward him still. Thou art not noble,
For all th'accommodations that thou bearst,
Are nurst by baseness: Thou'rt by no meanes valiant,
For thou dost fear the soft and tender forke
Of a poore worme: thy best of rest is sleepe,
And that thou oft provoakst; yet grosselie feerst
Thy death, which is no more. Thou art not thy false,
For thou arrist on manie a thousand graines
That issue out of dust. Happie thou art not,
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast forgetst. Thou art not certaine,
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the Moone: If thou art rich, thou'rt poore,
For like an Asse, whose backe with Ingots bowes;
Thou bearst thy heavie riches but a journie,
And death unloads thee; Friend hast thou none.
For thine owne bowels which do call thee, fire
The meere effusion of thy proper loines
Do curse the Gowt, Sapego, and the Rheume
For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth, nor age
But as it were an after-dinners sleepe
Dreaming on both, for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth begge the alms
Of palsied-Eld: and when thou art old, and rich

Thou

Thou hast neither heate, affection, limbe, nor beautie
To make thy riches pleasant: what's yet in this
That bettres the name of life? Yet in this life
Lie hid more thousand deathes; yet death we feare
That makes these odds, all euen.
Cla. I humblie thanke you.
To sue to liue, I finde I seeke to die,
And seeking death, finde life: Let it come on.
Enter Isabella.
Isab. What hoa? Peace heere; Grace, and good compasse.
Pro. Who's there?
Duke. Nay, the wish deserues a welcome.
Cla. Most holie Sir, I thanke you.
Isa. My businesse is a word or two with Claudio.
Pro. And very welcome: looke Signior, heere's your sister.
Duke. Prouost, a word with you.
Pro. As manie as you please.
Duke. Bring them to heare me speak, where I may be concealed.
Cla. Now sister, what's the comfort?
Isa. Why,
As all comforts are: most good, most good indeede,
Lord Angelo hauing affaires to heauen
Intends you for his swift Ambassador,
Where you shall be an euerlasting Leiger:
Therefore your best appointment make with speed,
To Morrow you set on.
Cla. Is there no remedie?
Isa. None, but such remedie, as to saue a head
To cleaue a heart in twaine.
Cla. But is there any?
Isa. Yes brother, you may liue;
There is a diuellish mercie in the Iudge,
If you'l implore it, that will free your life.
But fetter you till death.
Cla. Perpetuall durance?
Isa. Ist, perpetuall durance, a restraine
Through all the worlds vaultidge you had
To a determinate scope.
Cla. But in what nature?
Isa. In such a one, as you consenting to t,
Would bar'ke your honor from that trunke you beare,
And leaue you naked.
Cla. Let me know the point.
Isa. Oh, I do feare thee Claudio, and I quake,
Lest thou a feuerous life shouldst entertaine,
And six or seuen winters more respect
Than a perpetuall Honor. Dar'st thou die?
The sence of death is most in apprehension,
And the poore Beetle that we tread vpon
In corporall sufferance, finde a pang as great,
As when a Giant dies.
Cla. Why giue you me this shame?
Thanke you I can a resolution fetch
From flowrie tenderneffe? If I must die,
I will encounter darknesse as a bride,
And hugge it in mine armes.
Isa. There spake my brother: there my fathers graue
Did vtter forth a voice. Yes, thou must die:
Thou art too noble, to conserue a life
In base appliances. This outward sainted Deputie,
Whose settled visage, and deliberate mood
Nips youth i'th head, and follies doth emmew
As Falcon doth the Fowle, is yet a diuell:
His filth within being cast, he would appeare
A pond, as deepe as hell.
Cla. The prenzie, Angelo?
Isa. Oh 'tis the cunning Liuerie of hell,
The damnest bodie to inuest, and couer
In prenzie gardes; dost thou thinke Claudio,
If I would yeeld him my virginitie
Thou might'st be freed?
Cla. Oh heauens, it cannot be.
Isa. Yes, he would giu't thee; from this rank offence
So to offend him still. This night's the time
That I should do what I abhorre to name,
Or else thou diest to morrow.
Cla. Thou shalt not do't.
Isa. O, were it but my life,
I'de throw it downe for your deliuerance
As frankely as a pin.
Cla. Thankes deere Isabell.
Isa. Be ready Claudio, for your death to morrow.
Cla. Yes. Has he affections in him,
That thus can make him bite the Law by th'nose,
When he would force it? Sure it is no sinne,
Or of the deadly seuen it is the least.
Isa. Which is the least?
Cla. If it were damnable, he being so wise,
Why would he for the momentarie trickle
Be perdurable fin'de? Oh Isabell.
Isa. What saies my brother?
Cla. Death is a fearefull thing.
Isa. And shamed life, a hatefull.
Cla. I, but to die, and go we know not where,
To lie in cold obstruction, and to rot,
This sensible warme motion, to become
A kneaded clod; And the delighted spirit
To bath in fierie floods, or to reside
In thrilling Region of thicke-ribbed Ice,
To be imprison'd in the viewlesse winds
And blowne with restlesse violence round about
The pendant world; or to be worse then worst
Of those, that lawlesse and incertaine thought,
Imagine howling, 'tis too horrible.
The weariest, and most loathed worldly life
That Age, Ache, periury, and imprisonment
Can lay on nature, is a Paradise
To what we feare of death.
Isa. Alas, alas.
Cla. Sweet Sister, let me liue.
What sinne you do, to saue a brothers life,
Nature dispenses with the deede so farre,
That it becomes a vertue.
Isa. Oh you beast,
Oh faithlesse Coward, oh dishonest wretch,
Wilt thou be made a man, out of my vice?
Is't not a kinde of Incest, to take life
From thine owne sisters shame? What should I thinke,
Heauen shield my Mother plaid my Father faire:
For such a wasted slip of wildernesse
Nere issu'd from his blood. Take my defiance,
Die, perish: Might but my bending downe
Repreeue thee from thy fate, it should procede.
Ile pray a thousand prayers for thy death,
No word to saue thee.
Cla. Nay heare me Isabell.
Isa. Oh fie, fie, fie:
Thy sinne's not accidentall, but a Trade;

Mercy to thee would prouse it selfe a Bawd,
'Tis best that thou dieſt quickly.

Cla. Oh heare me Iſabella.

Duk. Vouchſafe a word, young ſiſter, but one word.

Iſa. What is your Will.

Duk. Might you diſpenſe with your leyſure, I would by and by haue ſome ſpeech with you: the ſatisfaction I would require, is likewiſe your owne benefit.

Iſa. I haue no ſuperfluous leyſure, my ſtay muſt be ſtolen out of other affaires: but I will attend you a while.

Duke. Son, I haue ouer-heard what hath paſt between you & your ſiſter. Angelo had neuer the purpoſe to corrupt her; onely he hath made an eſſay of her vertue, to practiſe his iudgement with the diſpoſition of natures. She (hauing the truth of honour in her) hath made him that gracious deniall, which he is moſt glad to receiue: I am Confeſſor to Angelo, and I know this to be true, therfore prepare your ſelfe to death: do not ſatisfie your reſolution with hopes that are fallible, to morrow you muſt die, goe to your knees, and make ready.

Cla. Let me ask my ſiſter pardon, I am ſo out of loue with life, that I will ſue to be rid of it.

Duke. Hold you there: farewell. Prouoſt, a word with you.

Pro. What's your will (father?)

Duk. That now you are come, you will be gone: leaue me a while with the Maid, my minde promiſes with my habit, no loſſe ſhall touch her by my company.

Pro. In good time. Exit.

Duke. The hand that hath made you faire, hath made you good: the goodnes that is cheape in beauty, makes beauty briefe in goodnes; but grace being the ſoule of your complexion, ſhall keepe the body of it ever faire: the aſſault that Angelo hath made to you, Fortune hath conuaid to my vnderſtanding; and but that frailty hath examples for his falling, I ſhould wonder at Angelo: how will you doe to content this Subſtitute, and to ſaue your Brother?

Iſab. I am now going to reſolue him: I had rather my brother die by the Law, then my ſonne ſhould be vnlawfullie borne. But (oh) how much is the good Duke deceiu'd in Angelo: if ever he returne, and I can ſpeake to him, I will open my lips in vaine, or diſcouer his gouernment.

Duke. That ſhall not be much amiſſe: yet, as the matter now ſtands, he will auoid your accuſation: he made triall of you onelie. Therefore faſten your eare on my admiſings, to the loue I haue in doing good; a remedie preſents it ſelfe. I doe make my ſelfe believe that you may moſt vprightcouſly do a poor wronged Lady a merited benefit; redeem your brother from the angry Law; doe no ſtaine to your owne gracious perſon, and much pleaſe the abſent Duke, if peradventure he ſhall ever returne to haue hearing of this buſineſſe.

Iſab. Let me heare you ſpeake farther; I haue ſpirit to do any thing that appeares not foule in the truth of my ſpirit.

Duke. Vertue is bold, and goodnes never fearefull: Haue you not heard ſpeake of Mariana the ſiſter of Frederick the great Souldier, who miſcarried at Sea?

Iſa. I haue heard of the Lady, and good words went with her name.

Duke. Shee ſhould this Angelo haue married: was affianced to her oath, and the nuptiall appointed: between which time of the contract, and iſſue of the ſolemnitie, her brother Frederick was wreckt at Sea, leaving in that perihed veſſell, the dowry of his ſiſter: but marke how heauily this befell to the poore Gentlewoman, there ſhe loſt a noble and renowned brother, in his loue toward her, ever moſt kinde and naturall: with him the portion and ſinew of her fortune, her marriage dowry: with both, her combynate-husband, this well-ſeeming Angelo.

Iſab. Can this be ſo? did Angelo ſo leaue her?

Duke. Left her in her teares, & dried not one of them with his comfort: ſwallowed his vowes whole, pretending in her, diſcoueries of diſhonor: in few, bellow'd her on her owne lamentation, which ſhe yet weares for his ſake: and he, a marble to her teares, is wadhed with them, but relents not.

Iſab. What a merit were it in death to take this poore maid from the world? what corruption in this life, that it will let this man liue? But how out of this can ſhee auaile?

Duke. It is a rupture that you may eaſily heale: and the cure of it not onely ſaues your brother, but keepes you from diſhonor in doing it.

Iſab. Shew me how (good Father.)

Duke. This ſore-named Maid hath yet in her the continuance of her firſt affection: his vnkindneſſe (that in all reaſon ſhould haue quenched her loue) hath (like an impediment in the Current) made it more violent and varuly: Goe you to Angelo, anſwere his requiring with a plauſible obedience, agree with his demands to the point: onely referre your ſelfe to this aduantage; firſt, that your ſtay with him may not be long: that the time may haue all ſhadow, and ſilence in it: and the place anſwere to conuenience: this being granted in courſe, and now followes all: wee ſhall adviſe this wronged maid to ſteed vp your appointment, goe in your place: if the encounter acknowledge it ſelfe hereafter, it may compell him to her recompence; and here, by this is your brother ſaued, your honor vntainted, the poore Mariana aduantaged, and the corrupt Deputy ſcaled. The Maid will I frame, and make fit for his attempt: if you thinke well to carry this as you may, the doubleneſs of the benefit defends the deceit from reproofe. What thinke you of it?

Iſab. The image of it gives me content already, and I truſt it will grow to a moſt proſperous perfection.

Duk. It lies much in your holding vp: haſte you ſpeedily to Angelo, if for this night he intreat you to his bed, giue him promiſe of ſatisfaction: I will preſently to S. Luke, there at the moated-Grange reſides this deiected Mariana; at that place call vpon me, and diſpatch with Angelo, that it may be quickly.

Iſab. I thank you for this comfort. fare you well good father. Exit.

Enter Elbow, Clowne, Officers.

Ele. Nay, if there be no remedy for it, but that you will needes buy and ſell men and women like beaſts, we ſhall haue all the world drinke browne & white baſtard.

Duke. Oh heauens, what ſtuffe is heere.

Clow. Twas never merry world ſince of two vſuries the merrieſt was put downe, and the worſer allow'd by order of Law: a ſur'd gowne to keepe him warme; and ſtuf'd with Fox and Lamb-ſkins too, to ſignifie, that craft being richer then Innocency, ſtands for the facing.

Ele. Come you my fa: 'bleſſe you good Father Frier.

Duke. And you good Brother Father; what offence hath this man made you, Sir?

Ele. Marry

Elb. Marry Sir, he hath offended the Law; and Sir, we take him to be a Theefe too Sir. for wee haue found vpon him Sir, a strange Pick-lock, which wee haue sent to the Deputie.

Duke. Fie, fiftah, a Bawd, a wicked bawd,
The euill that thou consest to be done,
That is thy meanes to liue. Do thou but thinke
What 'tis to cram a maw, or clothe a backe
From such a filthie vice: say to thy selfe,
From their abhominable and beastly touches
I drinke, I eate away my selfe, and liue
Canst thou beleeue thy liuing is a life,
So stinkingly depending? Go mend, go mend.

Clo. Indeed, it do's stinke in some sort, Sir:
But yet Sir I would proue

Duke. Nay, if the diuell haue given thee proofs for sin
Thou wilt proue his. Take him to prison Officer:
Correction, and Instruction must both worke
Ere this rude beast will profit.

Elb. He must before the Deputy Sir, he has given him warning: the Deputy cannot abide a Whore-master: if he be a Whore-monger, and comes before him, he were as good go a mile on his errand.

Duke. That we were all, as some would seeme to bee
From our faults, as faults from seeming free.

Enter Lucio.

Elb. His neeke will come to your waist, a Cord sir.

Clo. I spy comfort, I cry bail: Here's a Gentleman, and a friend of mine.

Luc. How now noble Pompey? What, at the wheels of Cæsar? Art thou led in triumph? What is there none of Pygmalions Images newly made woman to bee had now, for putting the hand in the pocket, and extracting clutch'd? What reply? Ha? What saist thou to this Tune, Matter, and Method? Is't not drown'd i'th last raine? Ha? What saist thou Trot? Is the world as it was Man? Which is the way? Is it sad, and few words? Or how? The trickie of it?

Duke. Still thus, and thus: still worse?

Luc. How doth my deere Morsell, thy Mistris? Procures she still? Ha?

Clo. Troth sir, shee hath eaten vp all her beefe, and she is her selfe in the tub.

Luc. Why 'tis good: It is the right of it: it must be so. Ever your fresh Whore, and your powder'd Bawd, an vnbaken'd consequence, it must be so. Art going to prison Pompey?

Clo. Yes faith sir.

Luc. Why 'tis not amiss Pompey: farewell: goe say I sent thee thether: for debt Pompey? Or how?

Elb. For being a bawd, for being a bawd.

Luc. Well, then imprison him: If imprisonment be the due of a bawd, why 'tis his right. Bawd is he doubtless, and of antiquity too: Bawd borne. Farwell good Pompey: Commend me to the prison Pompey, you will proue good husband now Pompey, you will keepe the house.

Clo. I hope Sir, your good Worship wil be my baile?

Luc. No indeed will I not Pompey, it is not the wear: I will pray (Pompey) to encrease your bondage if you take it not patiently: Why, your mettle is the more: Adieu trusticie Pompey.
Bless you Friar.

Duke. And you.

Luc. Do's Bridget paint still, Pompey? Ha?

Elb. Come your waies sir, come.

Clo. You will not baile me then Sir?

Luc. Then Pompey, not now: what newes abroad Friar? What newes?

Elb. Come your waies sir, come.

Luc. Goe to kennell (Pompey) goe:
What newes Friar of the Duke?

Duke. I know none: can you tell me of any?

Luc. Some say he is with the Emperor of Russia: other some, he is in Rome: but where is he thinke you?

Duke. I know not where: but wherefoeuer, I wish him well.

Luc. It was a mad fantasticall tricke of him to steale from the State, and vsurpe the beggerie hee was neuer borne to: Lord Angelo Dukes it well in his absence: he puts transgression too't.

Duke. He do's well in't.

Luc. A little more lenitie to Lecherie would doe no harme in him. Something too crabbed that way, Friar.

Duk. It is too general a vice, and seuerities must cure it.

Luc. Yes in good sooth, the vice is of a great kindred; it is well allied, but it is impossible to extirpe it quite, Friar, till eating and drinking be put downe. They say this Angelo vvas not made by Man and Woman, after this downe-right vvay of Creation: is it true, thinke you?

Duke. How should he be made then?

Luc. Some report, a Sea-maid spawn'd him. Some, that he vvas begot betweene two Stock-fishes. But it is certaine, that when he makes water, his Vrine is congeal'd ice, that I know to bee true: and he is a motion generatiue, that's infallible.

Duke. You are pleasant sir, and speake apace.

Luc. Why, what a rathlesse thing is this in him, for the rebellion of a Cod-peece, to take away the life of a man? Would the Duke that is absent haue done this? Ere he vvould haue hang'd a man for the getting a hundred Bastards, he vvould haue paide for the Nursing a thousand. He had some feeling of the sport, hee knew the seruice, and that instructed him to mercie.

Duke. I never heard the absent Duke much detected for Women, he was not enclin'd that vvay.

Luc. Oh Sir, you are deceiu'd.

Duke. 'Tis not possible.

Luc. Who, not the Duke? Yes, your beggar of fifty: and his vse was, to put a ducket in her Clack-dish; the Duke had Crochets in him. Hee would be drunke too, that let me informe you.

Duke. You do him wrong, surely.

Luc. Sir, I vvas an inward of his: a shie fellow vvas the Duke, and I beleeue I know the cause of his vvithdrawing.

Duke. What (I prethee) might be the cause?

Luc. No, pardon: 'Tis a secret must bee locke within the teeth and the lippes; but this I can let you vnderstand, the greater file of the subiects held the Duke to be vvise.

Duke. Vvise? Why no question but he vvas.

Luc. A very superficiall, ignorant, vnweighing fellow.

Duke. Either this is Enuie in you, Folly, or mistaking: The very streame of his life, and the businesse he hath helmed, must vppon a warranted neede, giue him a better proclamation. Let him be but testimonied in his owne bringings forth, and he shall appeare to the enuious, a Scholler, a Statesman, and a Soldier: therefore you speake vnskilfully: or, if your knowledge bee more, it is much darkned in your malice.

Luc. Sir, I know him, and I loue him.

Duke. Loue talkes with better knowledge, & knowledge with deare loue.

Luc. Come Sir, I know what I know

Duke. I can hardly beleeue that, since you know not what you speake. But if euer the Duke returne (as our prayers are he may) let me desire you to make your answer before him; if it bee honest you haue spoke, you haue courage to maintaine it; I am bound to call vpon you, and I pray you your name?

Luc. Sir my name is Lucio, well known to the Duke.

Duke. He shall know you better Sir, if I may liue to report you.

Luc. I feare you not

Duke. O you hope the Duke will returne no more: or you imagine me to vnhurtfull an opposite: but indeed I can doe you little harme: You'll forswear this againe?

Luc. Ile be hang'd first. Thou art deceiu'd in mee Friar. But no more of this Canst thou tell if Claudio die to morrow, or no?

Duke. Why should he die Sir?

Luc. Why? For filling a bottle with a Tunnel dish: I would the Duke we talke of were return'd againe: this vngenitur'd Agent will vn-people the Prouince with Continencie. Sparrowes must not build in his houseeaues, because they are lecherous: The Duke yet would haue darke deeds darkelie answered, hee would never bring them to light: would hee were return'd. Marrie this Claudio is condemned for vntrussing Farwell good Friar, I prethee pray for me: The Duke (I say to thee againe) would eate Mutton on Fridaies. He's now past it, yet (and I say to thee) hee would mouth with a beggar, though she smelt browne-bread and Garlicke: say that I said so: Farewell. Exit.

Duke. No might, nor greatnesse in mortalitie
Can censure scape: Back wounding calumnie
The whitest vertue strikes. What King so strong
Can tie the gall vp in the slanderous tong?
But who comes heere?

Enter Escalus, Prouost, and Bawd.

Esc. Go, away with her to prison.

Bawd. Good my Lord be good to me, your Honor is accounted a mercifull man: good my Lord.

Esc. Double, and trebble admonition, and still forfeite in the same kinde? This would make mercy sweare and play the Tirant.

Pro. A Bawd of eleuen yeares continuance, may it please your Honor.

Bawd. My Lord, this is one Lucio's information against me, Mistris Kate Keep-down was with childe by Lucio in the Dukes time, he promis'd her marriage: his Childe is a yeere and a quarter olde come Philip and Lacob: I haue kept it my selfe; and see how he goes about to abuse me.

Esc. That fellow is a fellow of much License: Let him be call'd before vs. Away with her to prison: Goe too, no more words. Prouost, my Brother Angelo will not be alter'd, Claudio must die to morrow: Let him be furnish'd with Diuines, and haue all charitable preparation. If my brother wrought by my pitie, it should not be so with him.

Pro. So please you, this Friar hath beene with him, and admis'd him for th'entertainment of death.

Esc. Good'euen, good Father

Duke. Bliss, and goodnesse on you.

Esc. Of whence are you?

Duke. Not of this Countre, though my chance is now
To vse it for my time: I am a brother
Of gracious Order, late come from the See,
In speciall busnesse from his Holinesse.

Esc. What newes abroad i'th World?

Duke. None, but that there is so great a Feuor on goodnesse, that the dissolution of it must cure it. Noueltie is onely in request, and as it is as dangerous to be aged in any kinde of course, as it is vertuous to be constant in my vndertaking. There is scarce truth enough alive to make Societies secure, but Securitie enough to make Fellowships accurst: Much vpon this riddle runs the wisdome of the world: This newes is old enough, yet it is euerie daies newes. I pray you Sir, of what disposition was the Duke?

Esc. One, that above all other strifes,
Contended especially to know himselfe.

Duke. What pleasure was he giuen to?

Esc. Rather reioycing to see another merry, than merrie at anie thing which proffest to make him reioyce. A Gentleman of all temperance. But leaue wee him to his events, with a praier they may proue prosperous, & let me desire to know, how you finde Claudio prepar'd? I am made to vnderstand, that you haue lent him visitation.

Duke. He professes to haue receiued no sinister measure from his Iudge, but most willingly humbles himselfe to the determination of Iustice: yet had he framed to himselfe (by the instruction of his frailty) manie deceiuing promises of life, which I (by my good leisure) haue discredited to him, and now is he resolu'd to die.

Esc. You haue paid the heauens your Function, and the prisoner the verie debt of your Calling. I haue labour'd for the poore Gentleman, to the extremest shore of my modestie, but my brother-Iustice haue I found so seuere, that he hath forc'd me to tell him, he is indeede Iustice.

Duke. If his owne life,
Answere the straitnesse of his proceeding,
It shall become him well: wherein if he chance to faile
he hath sentenc'd himselfe.

Esc. I am going to visit the prisoner, Fare you well.

Duke. Peace be with you,
He who the sword of Heauen will beare,
Should be as holy, as seuere:
Patterne in himselfe to know,
Grace to stand, and Vertue go:
More, nor lesse to others paying,
Then by selfe-offences weighing.
Shame to him, whose cruell striking,
Kils for faults of his owne liking:
Twice-trebble shame on Angelo,
To weed my vice, and let his grow.
Oh, what may Man within him hide,
Though Angel on the outward side?
How may likenesse made in crimes,
Making practise on the Times,
To draw with idle Spiders strings
Most ponderous and substantiall things?
Craft against vice, I must applie.
With Angelo to night shall lye
His old betroched (but despised:)
So disguise shall by th'disguised
Pay with falsehood, false exacting,
And performe an olde contracting.

Exit

Duke

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Mariana, and Boy singing.

Song. Take, oh take those lips away,
that so sweetly were forsworne,
And those eyes: the breake of day
lights that do misleed the Morne
But my kisses bring again, bring again,
Seales of love, but seal'd in vaine, seal'd in vaine.

Enter Duke.

Mar. Breake off thy song, and haste thee quick away,
Here comes a man of comfort, whose advice
Hath often still'd my brawling discontent.
I cry you mercie, Sir, and well could wish
You had not found me here so musicall.
Let me excuse me, and beleeue me so,
My mirth it much displeas'd, but pleas'd my woe
Duke. 'Tis good, though Musick oft hath such a charme
To make bad, good; and good provoke to harme.
I pray you tell me, hath any body enquir'd for mee here to day; much vpon this time have I promis'd here to meete.
Mar. You haue not bin enquir'd after. I haue sat here all day

Enter Isabell.

Duke. I doe constantly believe you: the time is come even now. I shall crave your forbearance a little, may be I will call vpon you anone for some advantage to your selfe.
Mar. I am alwayes bound to you. Exit.
Duke. Very well met, and well come:
What is the newes from this good Deputie?
Isab. He hath a Garden circumvent'd with Bricke,
Whose westerne side is with a Vineyard back't;
And to that Vineyard is a planched gate,
That makes his opening with this bigger Key
This other doth command a little doore,
Which from the Vineyard to the Garden leades,
There haue I made my promise, vpon the
Heavy middle of the night, to call vpon him.
Duke. But shall you on your knowledge find this way?
Isab. I haue t'ane a due, and wary note vpon't,
With whispering, and most guiltie diligence,
In action all of precept, he did show me
The way twice ore.
Duke. Are there no other tokens
Betweene you greed, concerning her observance?
Isab. No: none but onely a repaire th' darke.
And that I haue possest him, my most stay
Can be but briefe: for I haue made him know,
I haue a Seruant comes with me along
That stayes vpon me; whose perswasion is,
I come about my Brother.
Duke. 'Tis well borne vp.
I haue not yet made knowne to Mariana
Enter Mariana.
A word of this: what hoa, within; come forth,
I pray you be acquainted with this Maid,
She comes to doe you good.
Isab. I doe desire the like.
Duke. Do you perswade your selfe that I respect you?
Mar. Good Friar, I know you do, and haue found it.
Duke. Take then this your companion by the hand
Who hath a storie readie for your eare:
I shall attend your leisure, but make haste
The vaporous night approaches.
Mar. Wilt please you walke aside. Exit
Duke. Oh Place, and greatnes: millions of false eies
Are stucke vpon thee: volumes of report
Run with these false, and most contrarious Quest
Vpon thy doings: thousand escapes of wit
Make thee the father of their idle dreame,
And racke thee in their fancies. Welcome, how agreed?
Enter Mariana and Isabella.
Isab. She'll take the enterprise vpon her father,
If you advise it.
Duke. It is not my consent,
But my entreaty too.
Isa. Little haue you to say
When you depart from him, but soft and low,
Remember now my brother.
Mar. Feare me not.
Duke. Not gentle daughter, feare you not at all;
He is your husband on a pre-contract:
To bring you thus together 'tis no sinne,
Sith that the Iustice of your title to him
Doth flourish the deceit. Come, let vs goe,
Our Corne's to reape, for yet our Tithes to sow. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Provost and Clowne.

Pro. Come hither sirha; can you cut off a mans head?
Clo. If the man be a Bachelor Sir, I can.
But if he be a married man, he's his wiues head,
And I can never cut off a womans head.
Pro. Come sir, leaue me your snatches, and yeeld me a direct answere. To morrow morning are to die Claudio and Barnardine: heere is in our prison a common executioner, who in his office lacks a helper, if you will take it on you to assist him, it shall redeeme you from your Gyues: if not, you shall haue your full time of imprisonment, and your deliuerance with an vnpitied whipping: for you haue beene a notorious bawd.
Clo. Sir, I haue beene an vnlawfull bawd, time out of minde, but yet I will bee content to be a lawfull hangman: I would bee glad to receiue some instruction from my fellow partner.
Pro. What hoa, Abhorson: where's Abhorson there?
Enter Abhorson.
Abh. Doe you call sir?
Pro. Sirha, here's a fellow will helpe you to morrow in your execution: if you thinke it meet, compound with him by the yeere, and let him abide here with you, if not, vse him for the present, and dismisse him, hee cannot plead his estimation with you: he hath beene a Bawd.
Abh. A Bawd Sir? fie vpon him, he will discredit our mysterie.
Pro. Goe too Sir, you weigh equallie: a feather will turne the Scale. Exit.
Clo. Pray sir, by your good fauor. for sorely sir, a good fauor you haue, but that you haue a hanging look: Doe you call sir, your occupation a Mysterie?

Abh. I Sir, a Misterie.

Clo. Painting Sir, I have heard say, is a Misterie; and your Whores sir, being members of my occupation, using painting, do prove my Occupation, a Misterie: but what Misterie there should be in hanging, if I should be hang'd, I cannot imagine.

Abh. Sir, it is a Misterie.

Clo. Proofe.

Abh. Every trade mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Clo. If it be too little for your theefe, your trade man thinkes it bigge enough. If it bee too bigge for your Theefe, your Theefe thinkes it little enough: So every trade mans apparrell fits your Theefe.

Enter Prouost.

Pro. Are you agreed?

Clo. Sir, I will serue him: For I do finde your Hangman is a more penitent Trade then your Bawd: he doth oftner ask forgiuenesse.

Pro. You arrah, prouide your blocke and your Axe to morrow, foure a clock.

Abh. Come on (Bawd) I will instruct thee in my Trade: follow.

Clo. I do desire to learne sir: and I hope, if you haue occasion to vse me for your owne turne, you shall finde me y'are. For truly sir, for your kindnesse, I owe you a good turne. Exit

Pro. Call hether Barnardine & Claudio:
Th'one has my pitty; not a iot the other,
Being a Murtherer, though he were my brother.

Enter Claudio.

Looke, here's the Warrant Claudio, for thy death,
'Tis now dead midnight, and by eight to morrow
Thou must be made immortall. Where's Barnardine.

Cla. As fast lock'd vp in sleepe, as guiltlesse labour,
When it lies starkely in the Travellers bones,
He will not wake.

Pro. Who can do good on him?
Well, go, prepare your selfe. But hark, what noise?
Heauen giue your spirits comfort: by, and by,
I hope it is some pardon, or reprieue
For the most gentle Claudio. Welcome Father.

Enter Duke.

Duke. The best, and wholsomest spirits of the night,
Inuellop you, good Prouost: who call'd here of late?

Pro. None since the Curfew rung.

Duke. Not Isabell?

Pro. No.

Duke. They will then ere't be long

Pro. What comfort is for Claudio?

Duke. There's some in hope.

Pro. It is a bitter Deputie.

Duke. Not so, not so: his life is paralel'd
Euen with the stroke and line of his great Iustice
He doth with holie abstinence subdue
That in himselfe, which he spurres on his powre
To quoffle in others: were he meal'd with that
Which he corrects, then were he tirannous,
But this being so, he's just. Now are they come.
This is a gentle Prouost, seldome when
The steeled Gaoler is the friend of men:
How now? what noise? That spirit's possest with haste,
That wounds th'vnfitting Posterne with these strokes.

Pro. There he must stay vntil the Officer
Arise to let him in: he is call'd vp.

Duke. Haue you no countermand for Claudio yet?
But he must die to morrow?

Pro. None Sir, none.

Duke. As neere the dawning Prouost as it is,
You shall heare more ere Morning.

Pro. Happily
You something know: yet I believe there comes
No countermand: no such example haue we:
Besides, vpon the verie siege of Iustice,
Lord Angelo hath to the publike ears
Profest the contrarie.

Enter a Messenger.

Duke. This is his Lordships man.

Pro. And heere comes Claudio's pardon.

Mess. My Lord hath sent you this note,
And by mee this further charge;
That you swerue not from the smallest Article of it,
Neither in time, matter, or other circumstance.
Good morrow: for as I take it, it is almost day.

Pro. I shall obey him.

Duke. This is his Pardon purchas'd by such sin,
For which the Pardoner himselfe is in:
Hence hath offence his quicke celeritie,
When it is borne in high Authority.
When Vice makes Mercie; Mercie's so extended,
That for the faults loue, is th'offender friended.
Now Sir, what newes?

Pro. I told you:
Lord Angelo (be-like) thinking me remisse
In mine Office, awakens mee
With this vnwonted putting on, methinks strangely:
For he hath not vs'd it before.

Duke. Pray you let's heare.

The Letter.

Whatsoever you may heare to the contrary, let Claudio be executed by fours of the clocke, and in the afternoone Barnardine: For my better satisfaction, let mee haue Claudio head sent mee by five. Let this be duely performed, with a thought that more depends on it, than we must yet deliuer. Thus fails not to do your Office, as you will answere it at your peril.

What say yo to this Sir?

Duke. What is that Barnardine, who is to be executed in th'afternoone?

Pro. A Bohemian borne: But here hath vp & bred,
One that is a prisoner nine yeeres old.

Duke. How came it, that the absent Duke had not either deliver'd him to his liberty, or executed him? I haue heard it was ever his manner to do so.

Pro. His friends still wrought Repreeues for him:
And indeed has fast till now in the gouernment of Lord Angelo, came not to an vndoubtfull proofe.

Duke. It is now apparent?

Pro. Most manifest, and not denied by himselfe.

Duke. Hath he borne himselfe penitently in prison
How seemes he to be touch'd?

Pro. A man that apprehends death no more dreadfully, but as a drunken sleepe, careless, vnwaiteffe, and forgetfull of what's past, present, or to come: insensible of mortality, and desperately mortall.

Duke. He wanes advice.

Pro. He wil heare none: he hath euermore had the liberty of the prison: give him leaue to escape hence, he would not. Drunke many times a day, if not many dayes entirely drunke. We haue verie oft awak'd him, as if to certifie him to execution and shew'd him a seeming warrant for it, it hath not moued him at all.

Duke.

Duke. More of him anon: There is written in your brow Provost, honesty and constancie; if I reade it not truly, my ancient skill beguiles me: but in the boldnes of my cunning, I will lay my selfe in hazard: Claudio, whom heere you haue warrant to execute, is no greater forfeit to the Law, then Angelo who hath sentenc'd him. To make you vnderstand this in a manifested effect, I crave but foure dayes respit: for the which, you are to do me both a present, and a dangerous courtesie.

Pro. Pray Sir, in what?

Duke. In the delaying death.

Pro. Alacke, how may I do it. Having the houre limited, and an expresse command, vnder penaltie, to deliver his head in the view of Angelo? I may make my case as Claudio's, to crosse this in the smallest.

Duke. By the vow of mine Order, I warrant you,
If my instructions may be your guide,
Let this Barnardine be this morning executed,
And his head borne to Angelo.

Pro. Angelo hath seene them both,
And will discouer the fauour.

Duke. Oh, death's a great disguiser, and you may adde to it; Shaue the head, and tie the beard, and say it was the desire of the penitent to be so bar'de before his death: you know the course is common. If any thing fall to you vpon this, more then thankes and good fortune, by the Saint whom I professe, I will plead against it with my life.

Pro. Pardon me, good Father, it is against my oath.

Duke. Were you sworne to the Duke, or to the Deputie?

Pro. To him, and to his Substitutes.

Duke. You will think you haue made no offence, if the Duke auouch the iustice of your dealing?

Pro. But what likelihood is in that?

Duke. Not a resemblance, but a certainty; yet since I see you fearfull, that neither my coate, integrity, nor perswasion, can with ease attempt you, I wil go further then I meant, to plucke all feares out of you. Looke you Sir, heere is the hand and Seale of the Duke: you know the Character I doubt not, and the Signet is not strange to you?

Pro. I know them both.

Duke. The Contents of this, is the returne of the Duke; you shall anon ouer-reade it at your pleasure: where you shall finde within these two dales, he will be heere. This is a thing that Angelo knowes not, for hee this very day receiues letters of strange tenor, perchance of the Dukes death, perchance entering into some Monasterie, but by chance nothing of what is writ. Looke, th'vnfolding Starre calles vp the Shepheard; put not your selfe into amazement, how these things should be: all difficulties are but easie when they are knowne. Call your executioner, and off with Barnardines head: I will giue him a present shrift, and aduise him for a better place. Yet you are amaz'd, but this shall absolutely resolue you: Come away, it is almost cleere dawne. Exit.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. I am as well acquainted heere, as I was in our house of profession: one would thinke it were Mistris Ouer-dons owne house, for heere be manie of her olde Customers. First, here's yong Mr Rash, hee's in for a commoditie of browne paper, and olde Ginger, nine score and seuentcene pounds, of which hee made fiue Markes readie money: marrie then, Ginger was not much in request, for the olde Women were all dead. Then is there heere one Mr Caper, at the suite of Master Three-Pile the Mercer, for some foure suites of Peach-colour'd Satten, which now peaches him a beggar. Then haue we heere, yong Dizzie, and yong Mr Deepe-vow, and Mr Copper-spurre, and Mr Starue-Lackey the Rapier and dagger man, and yong Drop-heire that kild lastie Pudding, and Mr Forthlight the Tilter, and braue Mr Shoote the great Traueller, and wilde Half-Canne that stabb'd Pots, and I thinke forte more, all great doers in our Trade, and are now for the Lords sake.

Enter Abhorson.

Abh. Sirrah, bring Barnardine hether.

Clo. Mr Barnardine, you must rise and be hang'd, Mr Barnardine.

Abh. What hoa Barnardine.

Barnardine within.

Bar. A pox o'your throats: who makes that noyse there? What are you?

Clo. Your friends Sir, the Hangman!
You must be so good Sir to rise, and be put to death.

Bar. Away you Rogue, away, I am sleepie.

Abh. Tell him he must awake,
And that quickly too.

Clo. Pray Master Barnardine, awake till you are executed, and sleepe afterwards.

Ab. Go in to him, and fetch him out.

Clo. He is comming Sir, he is comming: I heare his Straw rustle.

Enter Barnardine.

Abh. Is the Axe vpon the blocke, sirrah?

Clo. Very readie Sir.

Bar. How now Abhorson?
What's the newes with you?

Abh. Truly Sir, I would desire you to clap into your prayers: for looke you, the Warrants come.

Bar. You Rogue, I haue bin drinking all night,
I am not fitted for't.

Clo. Oh, the better Sir: for he that drinkes all night, and is hanged betimes in the morning, may sleepe the sounder all the next day.

Enter Duke.

Abh. Looke you Sir, heere comes your ghostly Father: do we iest now, think you?

Duke. Sir, induced by my charitie, and hearing how hastily you are to depart, I am come to aduise you, Comfort you, and pray with you.

Bar. Friar, not I: I haue bin drinking hard all night, and I will haue more time to prepare mee, or they shall beat out my braines with billets: I will not consent to die this day, that's certaine.

Duke. Oh Sir, you must: and therefore I beseech you Looke forward on the iournie you shall go.

Bar. I swearre I will not die to day for anie mans perswasion.

Duke. But heare you:

Bar. Not a word: if you haue anie thing to say to me, come to my Ward: for thence will not I to day.

Exit

Enter Prouost.

Duke. Vnfit to liue, or die: oh grauell heart.

After him (Fellowes) bring him to the blocke.

Pro. Now Sir, how do you finde the prisoner?

Duke. A creature vnpre-par'd, vnmeet for death,
And to transport him in the minde he is,
Were damnable.

Pro. Heere in the prison, Father.
There died this morning of a cruell Feuer,
One Ragozine, a most notorious Pirate,
A man of Claudio's yeares: his beard, and head
Iust of his colour. What if we do omit
This Reprobate, til he were wel inclin'd,
And satisfie the Deputie with the visage
Of Ragozine, more like to Claudio?

Duke. Oh, 'tis an accident that heauen prouides.
Dispatch it presently, the houre drawes on
Prefixt by Angelo: See this be done,
And send according to command, whiles I
Perswade this rude wretch willingly to die.

Pro. This shall be done (good Father) presently:
But Barnardine must die this afternoone,
And how shall we continue Claudio,
To saue me from the danger that might come,
If he were knowne alive?

Duke. Let this be done.
Put them in secret holds, both Barnardine and Claudio,
Ere twice the Sun hath made his iournall greeting
To yond generation, you shal finde
Your safetie manifested.

Pro. I am your free dependant. Exit.

Duke. Quicke, dispatch, and send the head to Angelo
Now will I write Letters to Angelo,
(The Prouost he shal beare them) whose contents
Shal witnesse to him I am neere at home:
And that by great Iniunctions I am bound
To enter publikely: him Ile desire
To meet me at the consecrated Fount,
A League below the Cite: and from thence,
By cold gradation, and weale-ballanc'd forme,
We shal proceed with Angelo.

Enter Prouost.

Pro. Heere is the head, Ile carrie it my selfe.

Duke. Conuenient is it: Make a swift returne.
For I would commune with you of such things,
That want no ease but yours.

Pro. Ile make all speede. Exit

Isabell within.

Isa. Peace hoa, be heere.

Duke. The tongue of Isabell. She's come to know,
If yet her brothers pardon be come hither:
But I will keepe her ignorant of her good,
To make her heauenly comforts of dispaire,
When it is least expected.

Enter Isabella.

Isa. Hoa, by your leaue.

Duke. Good morning to you, faire, and gracious daughter.

Isa. The better giuen me by so holy a man,
Hath yet the Deputie sent my brothers pardon?

Duke. He hath released him, Isabell, from the world,
His head is off, and sent to Angelo.

Isa. Nay, but it is not so.

Duke. It is no other.
Shew your wisedome daughter in your close patience.

Isa. Oh, I wil to him, and pluck out his eies.

Duke. You shal not be admitted to his sight.

Isa. Vnhappie Claudio, wretched Isabell,
Iniurious world, most damned Angelo.

Duke. This nor hurts him, nor profits you a iot,
Forbeare it therefore, giue your cause to heauen.
Marke what I say, which you shal finde
By every syllable a faithful veritie.
The Duke comes home to morrow: nay dris your eyes,
One of our Couent, and his Confessor
Giues me this instance: Already he hath carried
Notice to Escalus and Angelo,
Who do prepare to meete him at the gates, (doome,
There to giue vp their powers: If you can pace your wit
In that good path that I would wish it go,
And you shal haue your bosome on this wretch,
Grace of the Duke, reuenges to your heart,
And general Honor.

Isa. I am directed by you.

Duke. This Letter then to Friar Peter giue,
'Tis that he sent me of the Dukes returne:
Say, by this token, I desire his companie
At Marianna's house to night. Her cause, and yours
Ile perfect him withall, and he shal bring you
Before the Duke; and to the head of Angelo
Accuse him home and home. For my poore selfe,
I am combined by a sacred Vow,
And shall be absent. Wend you with this Letter:
Command these fretting waters from your eies
With a light heart; trust not my holie Order
If I peruert your course: whose heere?

Enter Lucio.

Luc. Good-euen;
Friar, where's the Prouost?

Duke. Not within Sir.

Luc. Oh pretie Isabella, I am pale at mine heart, to see thine eyes so red: thou must be patient; I am faine to dine and sup with water and bran: I dare not for my head fill my belly. One fruitful Meale would set me too't: but they say the Duke will be heere to Morrow. By my troth Isabell I lou'd thy brother, if the olde fantastical Duke of darke corners had bene at home, he had liued.

Duke. Sir, the Duke is marueilous little beholding to your reports, but the best is, he liues not in them.

Luc. Friar, thou knowest not the Duke so wel as I do: he's a better woodman then thou tak'st him for.

Duke. Well: ye'l answer this one day. Fare ye well.

Luc. Nay tarrie, Ile go along with thee,
I can tel thee pretty tales of the Duke.

Duke. You haue told me too many of him already, sir if they be true: if not true, none were enough.

Lucio. I was once before him for getting a Wench with childe.

Duke. Did you such a thing?

Luc. Yes marrie did I; but I was faine to forswear it. They would else haue married me to the rotten Medler.

Duke. Sir your company is fairer then honest, rest you well.

Lucio. By my troth Ile go with thee to the lanes end: if bawdy talke offend you, we'el haue very litle of it: nay Friar, I am a kind of Burre, I shal sticke. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Angelo & Escalus.

Esc. Every Letter he hath writ, hath disinuch'd other.

Ang.

Ma. In most weuen and distracted manner, his actions show much like to madnesse, pray heauen his wisedome bee not tainted: and why meet him at the gates and retiner on authorities there?

Esc. I ghesse not.

Ang. And why should wee proclaime it in an houre before his entring, that if any crave redresse of iniustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street?

Esc. He showes his reason for that: to haue a dispatch of Complaints, and to deliuer vs from deuices hereafter, which shall then haue no power to stand against vs.

Ang. Well: I beseech you let it bee proclaim'd betimes i'th' morne, Ile call you at your house: giue notice to such men of sort and suite as are to meete him.

Esc. I shall sir: fareyouwell. Exit.

Ang. Good night.
This deede vnshapes me quite, makes me vnpregnant
And dull to all proceedings. A deflowred maid,
And by an eminent body, that enforc'd
The Law against it? But that her tender shame
Will not proclaime against her maiden losse,
How might she tongue me? yet reason dares her no
For my Authority bears of a credent bulke,
That no particular scandell once can touch
But it confounds the breather. He should haue liu'd
Some that his riotous youth with dangerous sense
Might in the times to come haue ta'ne reuenge
By so receiuing a dishonor'd life
With ransome of such shame: would yet he had lived
Alack, when once our grace we haue forgot
Nothing goes right, we would, and we would not. Exit.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Duke and Friar Peter.

Duke. These Letters at fit time deliuer me.
The Provost knowes our purpose and our plot,
The matter being a foote, keepe your instruction
And hold you ever to our speciall drift,
Though sometimes you doe blench from this to that
As cause doth minister: Goe call at Flauia's house,
And tell him where I stay: giue the like notice
To Valentius, Rowland, and to Crassus,
And bid them bring the Trumpets to the gate:
But send me Flauius first.

Peter. It shall be speeded well.

Enter Varrius.

Duke. I thank thee Varrius, thou hast made good hast,
Come, we will walke: There's other of our friends
Will greet vs heere anon: my gentle Varrius. Exeunt.

Scena Sexta.

Enter Isabella and Mariana.

Isab. To speak so indirectly I am loath,
I would say the truth, but to accuse him so
That is your part, yet I am adui'sd to doo it.
He sayes, to vaile full purpose.

Mar. Be ruled by him.

Isab. Besides he tells me, that if peradventure
He speake against me on the adverse side,
I should not thinke it strange, for 'tis a physicke
That's bitter, to sweet end.

Enter Peter.

Mar. I would Friar Peter

Isab. Oh peace, the Friar is come.

Peter. Come I haue found you out a stand most fit,
Where you may haue such vantage on the Duke
He shall not passe you:
Twice haue the Trumpets sounded.
The generous, and graueſt Citizens
Haue heat the gates, and very neere vpon
The Duke is entring:
Therefore hence away. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Varrius, Lords, Angelo, Escalus, Lucio, Citizens at seuerall doores.

Duke. My very worthy Cosen, fairely met,
Our old, and faithfull friend, we are glad to see you

Ang. Esc. Happy returne be to your royall grace

Duke. Many and harty thankings to you both:
We haue made enquiry of you, and we heare
Such goodnesse of your Iustice, that our soule
Cannot but yeeld you forth to publique thankes
Forerunning more requitall.

Ang. You make my bonds still greater.

Duke. Oh your desert speaks loud, & I should wrong it
To locke it in the wards of couert bosome
When it deserues with characters of brasse
A forted residence 'gainst the tooth of time,
And razure of oblivion: Giue me your hand
And let the Subiect see, to make them know
That outward courtesies would faine proclaime
Fauours that keepe within: Come Escalus.
You must walke by vs, on our other hand.
And good supporters are you.

Enter Peter and Isabella.

Peter. Now is your time
Speake loud, and kneele before him.

Isab. Iustice, O royall Duke, vaile your regard
Vpon a wrong'd (I would faine haue said a Maid)
Oh worthy Prince, dishonor not your eye
By throwing it on any other obiect,
Till you haue heard me, in my true complaint,
And giuen me Iustice, Iustice, Iustice, Iustice.

Duke. Relate your wrongs:
In what, by whom? be briefe:
Here is Lord Angelo shall giue you Iustice,
Reueale your selfe to him.

Isab. Oh worthy Duke,
You bid me seeke redemption of the diuell,
Heare me your selfe: for that which I must speake
Must either punish me, not being beleeu'd,
Or wring redresse from you:
Heare me: oh heare me, heere.

Ang. My Lord, her wits I feare me are not firme:
She hath bin a suitor to me, for her Brother
Cut off by course of Iustice.

Isab. By course of Iustice.

Ang. And she will speake most bitterly, and strange.

Isab. Most

Isab. Most strange: but yet most truely will I speake,
That Angelo's forsworne, is it not strange?
That Angelo's a murtherer, is't not strange?
That Angelo is an adulterous thiefe,
An hypocrite, a virgin violator,
Is it not strange? and strange?
Duke. Nay it is ten times strange?
Isa. It is not truer he is Angelo.
Then this is all as true, as it is strange;
Nay, it is ten times true, for truth is truth
To th'end of reckning.
Duke. Away with her: poore soule
She speakes this in th'infirmity of sence.
Isa. Oh Prince, I conjure thee as thou beleeu'st
There is another comfort, then this world,
That thou neglect me not, with that opinion
That I am touch'd with madnesse: make not impossible
That which but seemes vnlike, 'tis not impossible
But one, the wickedst caitiffe on the ground
May seeme as shie, as grave, as just, as absolute:
As Angelo, even so may Angelo
In all his dressings, caracts, titles, formes,
Be an arch-villaine: Beleeue it, royall Prince
If he be lesse, he's nothing, but he's more,
Had I more name for badnesse.
Duke. By mine honesty
If she be mad, as I beleeue no other,
Her madnesse hath the oddest frame of sense,
Such a dependancy of thing, on thing,
As ere I heard in madnesse.
Isab. Oh gracious Duke
Harpe not on that; nor do not banish reason
For inequality, but let your reason serue
To make the truth appeare, where it seemes hid,
And hide the false seemes true.
Duke. Many that are not mad
Haue sure more lacke of reason:
What would you say?
Isab. I am the Sister of one Claudio,
Condemnd vpon the Act of Fornication
To loose his head, condemn'd by Angelo.
I, (in probation of a Sisterhood)
Was sent to by my Brother; one Lucio
As then the Messenger.
Luc. That's I, and't like your Grace:
I came to her from Claudio, and desir'd her,
To try her gracious fortune with Lord Angelo
For her poore Brothers pardon.
Isab. That's he indeede.
Duke. You were not bid to speake.
Luc. No, my good Lord,
Nor wish'd to hold my peace.
Duke. I wish you now then,
Pray you take note of it: and when you haue
A business for your selfe: pray heaven you then
Be perfect.
Luc. I warrant your honor.
Duke. The warrant's for your selfe: take heede to't.
Isab. This Gentlemen told somewhat of my Tale.
Luc. Right.
Duke. It may be right, but you are i'the wrong
To speake before your time: proceed,
Isab. I went
To this pernicious Caitiffe Deputie.
Duke. That's some what madly spoken.
Isab. Pardon it,
The phrase is to the matter.
Duke. Mended againe: the matter: proceed.
Isab. In briefe, to set the needlesse processe by:
How I persuaded, how I prayd, and kneel'd,
How he refeld me, and how I replide
(For this was of much length) the vild conclusion
I now begin with griefe, and shame to vtter.
He would not, but by gift of my chaste body
To his concupiscible intemperate lust
Release my brother; and after much debatement,
My sisterly remorse, confutes mine honour,
And I did yeeld to him: But the next morne betimes,
His purpose surfetting, he sends a warrant
For my poore brothers head.
Duke. This is most likely.
Isab. Oh that it were as like as it is true. (speak'st,
Duke. By heaven (fond wretch) thy knowst not what thou
Or else thou art suborn'd against his honor
In hatefull practise: first his Integritie
Stands without blemish: next it imports no reason,
That with such vehemency he should pursue
Faults proper to himselfe: if he had so offended
He would haue weigh'd thy brother by himselfe,
And not haue cut him off: some one hath set you on:
Confesse the truth, and say by whose advice
Thou com'st heere to complaine.
Isab. And is this all?
Then oh you blessed Ministers aboue
Keepe me in patience, and with ripened time
Vnfold the euill, which is heere wrapt vp
In countenance: heauen shield your Grace from woe
As I thus wrong'd, hence vnbeleeued goe.
Duke. I know you'ld faine be gone: An Officer:
To prison with her: Shall we thus permit
A blasting and a scandalous breath to fall,
On him so neere vs? This needs must be a practise:
Who knew of your intent and comming hither?
Isa. One that I would were heere. Friar Lodowick.
Duke. A ghostly Father, belike:
Who knowes that Lodowicke?
Luc. My Lord, I know him, tis a medling Fryer.
I doe not like the man: had he been Lay my Lord,
For certaine words he spake against your Grace
In your retirment, I had swing'd him soundly.
Duke. Words against mee? this 'a good Fryer belike
And to set on this wretched woman here
Against our Substitute: Let this Fryer be found.
Luc. But yesternight my Lord, she and that Fryer
I saw them at the prison: a sawcy Fryar,
A very scurvy fellow.
Peter. Blessed be your Royall Grace:
I haue stood by my Lord, and I haue heard
Your royall eare abus'd: first hath this woman
Most wrongfully accus'd your Substitute,
Who is as free from touch, or soyle with her
As she from one vngot.
Duke. We did believe no lesse.
Know you that Friar Lodowick that she speakes of?
Peter. I know him for a man diuine and holy,
Not scurvy, nor a temporary medler
As he's reported by this Gentlemen:
And on my trust, a man that never yet
Did (as he vouches) misreport your Grace.
Luc. My Lord, most villanously, believe it.
Peter. Well: he in time may come to cleere himselfe:
But at this instant he is sicke, my Lord:

Of a strange Feasor: vpon his meere request
Being come to knowledge, that there was complaint
Intended 'gainst Lord Angelo, came I hether
To speake as from his mouth, what he doth know
Is true, and false: And what he with his oath
And all probation will make vp full cleare
Whensoever he's conuented: First for this woman,
To mutiſie this worthy Noble man,
So vulgarly and perſonally accus'd,
Her ſhall you heare diſproued to her eyes,
Till ſhe her ſelfe confeſſe it.

Duk. Good Frier, let's heare it:
Doe you not ſmile at this, Lord Angelo?
Oh heauen, the vanity of wretched fooles.
Give vs ſome ſeates, Come coſen Angelo,
In this I'll be impartiall: be you Iudge
Of your owne Cauſe: Is this the Witnes Frier?

Enter Mariana.

Firſt, let her ſhew your face, and after, ſpeake.

Mar. Pardon my Lord, I will not ſhew my face
Vntill my husband bid me.

Duke. What, are you married?

Mar. No my Lord.

Duke. Are you a Maid?

Mar. No my Lord.

Duk. A Widow then?

Mar. Neither, my Lord.

Duk. Why you are nothing then: neither Maid, Widdow, nor Wife?

Lur. My Lord, ſhe may be a Puncke: for many of them, are neither Maid, Widow, nor Wife.

Duk. Silence that fellow: I would he had ſome cauſe to prattle for himſelfe.

Lur. Well my Lord.

Mar. My Lord, I doe confeſſe I nere was married,
And I confeſſe beſides, I am no Maid,
I haue known my husband, yet my husband
Knowes not, that euer he knew me.

Lur. He was drunk then, my Lord, it can be no better.

Duk. For the benefit of ſilence, would thou wert ſo too.

Lur. Well, my Lord.

Duk. This is no witneſſe for Lord Angelo.

Mar. Now I come to't, my Lord.
She that accuſes him of Fornication,
In ſelfe-ſame manner, doth accuſe my husband,
And charges him, my Lord, with ſuch a time,
When I'le depoſe I had him in mine Armes
With all th'effect of Loue.

Ang. Charges ſhe moe than me?

Mar. Not that I know.

Duk. No? you ſay your husband

Mar. Why iuſt, my Lord, and that is Angelo,
Who thinkes he knowes, that he nere knew my body,
But knowes, he thinkes, that he knowes Iſabel.

Ang. This is a ſtrange abuſe: Let's ſee thy face.

Mar. My husband bids me, now I will vnmaske.
This is that face, thou cruell Angelo
Which once thou ſworeſt, was worth the looking on:
This is the hand, which with a vowd contract
Was faſt belocke in thine: This is the body
That tooke away the match from Iſabell,
And did ſupply thee at thy garden-houſe
In her imagin'd perſon.

Duk. Know you this woman?

Lur. Carnallie ſhe ſaies,

Duk. Sirha, no more.

Lur. Enough my Lord.

Ang. My Lord, I muſt confeſſe, I know this woman,
And fiue yeres ſince there was ſome ſpeech of marriage
Betwixt my ſelfe, and her: which was broke off,
Partly for that her promis'd proportions
Came ſhort of Compoſition: But in chiefe
For that her reputation was diſ-valued
In leuitie: Since which time of fiue yeres
I neuer ſpake with her, ſaw her, nor heard from her
Vpon my faith, and honor.

Mar. Noble Prince,
As there comes light from heauen, and words frō breath,
As there is ſence in truth, and truth in vertue,
I am affianced this mans wife, as ſtrongly
As words could make vp vowes: And my good Lord,
But Tueſday night laſt gon, in's garden houſe,
He knew me as a wife. As this is true,
Let me in ſafety raiſe me from my knees,
Or elſe for euer be confixed here
A Marble Monument.

Ang. I did but ſmile till now,
Now, good my Lord, giue me the ſcope of Iuſtice,
My patience here is touch'd: I doe perceiue
These poore informall women, are no more
But inſtruments of ſome more mightier member
That ſets them on. Let me haue way, my Lord
To finde this practiſe out.

Duke. I, with my heart,
And punniſh them to your height of pleaſure.
Thou foolish Frier, and thou pernicious woman
Compact with her that's gone: thinkſt thou, thy oathes,
Though they would ſwear downe each particular Saint,
Were teſtimonies againſt his worth, and credit
That's ſeald in approbation? you, Lord Eſcalus
Sit with my Cozen, lend him your kinde paines
To finde out this abuſe, whence 'tis deriu'd.
There is another Frier that ſet them on,
Let him be ſent for.

Peter. Would he were here, my Lord, for he indeed
Hath ſet the women on to this Complaint;
Your Prouoſt knowes the place where he abides,
And he may fetch him.

Duke. Goe, doe it inſtantly:
And you, my noble and well-warranted Coſen
Whom it concernes to heare this matter forth,
Doe with your injuries as ſeemes you beſt
In any chaſtiſement; I for a while
Will leaue you; but ſtir not you till you heare
Well determin'd vpon theſe Slanderers. Exit.

Eſc. My Lord, we'll doe it throughly: Signior Lucio, did not you ſay you knew that Frier Lodowick to be a diſhoneſt perſon?

Lur. Cucullus non facit Monachum, honeſt in nothing but in his Clothes, and one that hath ſpoke moſt villanous ſpeeches of the Duke.

Eſc. We ſhall intreat you to abide heere till he come, and inforce them againſt him: we ſhall finde this Frier a notable fellow.

Lur. As any in Vienna, on my word.

Eſc. Call that ſame Iſabell here once againe, I would ſpeake with her: pray you, my Lord, giue me leaue to queſtion, you ſhall ſee how I'le handle her.

Lur. Not better then he, by her owne report.

Eſc. Say you?

Lur. Marry ſir, I thinke, if you handled her priuately ſhee

She would sooner confesse, perchance publikely she'll be asham'd.

Enter Duke, Provost, Isabella.

Esc. I will goe darkely to worke with her.

Luc. That's the way: for women are light at midnight.

Esc. Come on Mistris, here's a Gentlewomen,
Denies all that you haue said.

Luc. My Lord, here comes the rascall I spoke of,
Here, with the Provost.

Esc. In very good time: speake not you to him, till we call vpon you.

Luc. Mum.

Esc. Come Sir, did you set these women on to slander Lord Angelo? they haue confes'd you did.

Duk. 'Tis false.

Esc. How? Know you where you are?

Duk. Respect to your great place; and let the diuell
Be sometime honour'd, for his burning throne.
Where is the Duke? 'tis he should heare me speake.

Esc. The Duke's in vs: and we will heare you speake,
Looke you speake iustly.

Duk. Boldly, at least. But oh poore soules,
Come you to seeke the Lamb here of the Fox:
Good night to your redresse: Is the Duke gone?
Then is your cause gone too: The Duke's vniust,
Thus to retort your manifest Appeale,
And put your triall in the villaines mouth,
Which here you come to accuse.

Luc. This is the rascall: this is he I spoke of.

Esc. Why thou vnreuerend, and vnhallowed Fryer:
Is't not enough thou hast suborn'd these women,
To accuse this worthy man? but in foule mouth,
And in the witnesse of his proper eare,
To call him villaine; and then to glance from him,
To th' Duke himselfe, to taxe him with Iniustice?
Take him hence; to th' rack he with him: we'll towze you
Iointe by iointe, but we will know his purpose:
What? vniust?

Duk. Be not so hot: the Duke dare
No more stretch this finger of mine, then he Dare rack his owne: his Subiect am I not,
Nor here Prouincial: My businesse in this State
Made me a looker on here in Vienna,
Where I haue seene corruption boyle and bubble,
Till it ore-run the Stew: Lawes, for all faults,
But faults so countenanc'd, that the strong Statutes
Stand like the forfeites in a Barbers shop,
As much in mocke, as marke.

Esc. Slander to th' State:
Away with him to prison.

Ang. What can you vouch against him Signior Lucio?
Is this the man that you did tell vs of?

Luc. 'Tis he, my Lord: come hither goodman bald-pate, doe you know me?

Duk. I remember you Sir, by the sound of your voice,
I met you at the Prison, in the absence of the Duke.

Luc. Oh, did you so? and do you remember what you said of the Duke.

Duk. Most notedly Sir.

Luc. Do you so Sir: And was the Duke a flesh-monger, a foole, and a coward, as you then reported him to be?

Duk. You must (Sir) change persons with me, ere you make that my report: you indeede spoke so of him, and much more, much worse.

Luc. Oh thou damnable fellow: did not I pluck thee by the nose, for thy speeches?

Duk. I protest, I loue the Duke, as I loue my sake.

Ang. Harke how the villaine would close; now, after his treasonable abuses.

Esc. Such a fellow is not to be talk'd withall: Away with him to prison: Where is the Provost? away with him to prison: lay bolts enough vpon him: let him speak no more: away with those Giglets too, and with the other confederate companion.

Duk. Stay Sir, stay a while.

Ang. What, resists he? helpe him Lucio.

Luc. Come sir, come sir, come sir: foh sir, why you bald-pated lying rascall, you must be hooded must you? shew your knaues visage with a pone to you: shew your sheepe-biting face, and be hang'd an houre: will't not off?

Duk. Thou art the first knaue, that ere mad'st a Duke.
First Provost, let me bayle these gentle three:
Sneake not away Sir, for the Fryer, and you,
Must haue a word anon: lay hold on him.

Luc. This may prouse worse then hanging.

Duk. What you haue spoke, I pardon: sit you downe,
We'll borrow place of him; Sir, by your leaue:
Has't thou ought word, or wit, or impudence,
That yet can doe thee office? If thou ha's't
Rely vpon it, till my tale be heard,
And hold no longer out.

Ang. Oh, my dread Lord,
I should be guiltier then my guiltinesse,
To thinke I can be vndiscernable,
When I perceiue your grace, like powre diuine,
Hath look'd vpon my passes. Then good Prince,
No longer Session hold vpon my shame,
But let my Triall, be mine owne Confession:
Immediate sentence then, and sequent death,
Is all the grace I beg.

Duk. Come hither Mariana,
Say: was't thou ere contracted to this woman?

Ang. I was my Lord.

Duk. Goe take her hence, and marry her instantly.
Doe you the office (Fryar) which consummate,
Returne him here againe: goe with him Provost. Exit.

Esc. My Lord, I am more amaz'd at his dishonor,
Then at the strangeness of it.

Duk. Come hither Isabell,
Your Friar is now your Prince: As I was then
Aduertising, and holy to your businesse,
(Not changing heart with habit) I am still,
Attourned at your seruice.

Isab. Oh giue me pardon
That I, your vassaile, haue employd, and pain'd
Your vnknowne Soueraignetie.

Duk. You are pardon'd Isabell:
And now, deere Maide, be you as free to vs.
Your Brothers death I know sits at your heart:
And you may marrule, why I obscur'd my selfe,
Labouring to saue his life: and would not rather
Make rash remonstrance of my hidden powre,
Then let him so be lost: oh most kinde Maid,
It was the swift celeritie of his death,
Which I did thinke, with slower foot came on,
That brain'd my purpose: but peace be with him,
That life is better life past fearing death,
Then that which lives to feare: make it your comfort,

So-

So happy is your Brother.

Enter Angelo, Maria, Peter, Provost.

Isab. I doe my Lord.

Duke. For this new-married man, approaching here,
Whose salt imagination yet hath wrong'd
Your well defended honor: you must pardon
For Mariana's sake: But as he adiudg'd your Brother,
Being criminall, in double violation
Of sacred Chastitie, and of promise-breach,
Thereon dependant for your Brothers life,
The very mercy of the Law cries out
Most audible, even from his proper tongue.
An Angelo for Claudio, death for death.
Haste still paies haste, and leasure, answers leasure;
Like doeth quit like, and Measure still for Measure:
Then Angelo, thy fault's thus manifested;
Which though thou would'st deny, denie thee vantage.
We doe condemne thee to the very Blocke
Where Claudio stoop'd to death, and with like haste.
Away with him.

Mar. Oh my most gracious Lord,
I hope you will not mocke me with a husband?

Duke. It is your husband mock't you with a husband,
Consenting to the safe-guard of your honor,
I thought your marriage fit: else Imputation,
For that he knew you, might reproach your life,
And chaste your good to come: For his Possessions,
Although by confiscation they are ours;
We doe en-state, and widow you with all,
To buy you a better husband.

Mar. Oh my deere Lord,
I crave no other, nor no better man.

Duke. Never crave him, we are definitive.

Mar. Gentle my Liege.

Duke. You doe but loose your labour.
Away with him to death: Now Sir, to you.

Mar. Oh my good Lord, sweet Isabell, take my part.
Lend me your knees, and all my life to come,
I'll lend you all my life to doe you service.

Duke. Against all sence you doe importune her,
Should she kneele downe, in mercie of this fact,
Her Brothers ghost, his paued bed would breake,
And take her hence in horror.

Mar. Isabell:
Sweet Isabel, doe yet but kneele by me,
Hold up your hands, say nothing: I'll speake all.
They say best men are moulded out of faults,
And for the most, become much more the better
For being a little bad: So may my husband.
Oh Isabel: will you not lend a knee?

Duke. He dies for Claudio's death.

Isab. Most bounteous Sir.
Looke if it please you, on this man condemn'd,
As if my Brother lies'd: I partly thinke,
A due sincerities governed his deedes,
Till he did looke on me: Since it is so,
Let him not die: my Brother had but Iustice,
In that he did the thing for which he dide.
For Angelo, his Act did not ore-take his bad intent,
And must be buried but as an intent
That perish'd by the way: thoughts are no subiects
Intents, but meerely thoughts.

Mar. Meerely my Lord.

Duke. Your suite's vnprofitable: stand vp I say:
I have bethought me of another fault.
Provost, how came it Claudio was beheaded
At an vnusuall howre?

Pro. It was commanded so.

Duke. Had you a speciall warrant for the deed?

Pro. No my good Lord: it was by priuate message.

Duke. For which I doe discharge you of your office,
Giue vp your keyes.

Pro. Pardon me, noble Lord,
I thought it was a fault, but knew it not,
Yet did repent me after more aduice,
For testimony whereof, one in the prison
That should by priuate order else have dide,
I have reserv'd aliue.

Duke. What's he?

Pro. His name is Barnardine.

Duke. I would thou hadst done so by Claudio:
Goe fetch him hither, let me looke vpon him.

Esc. I am sorry, one so learned, and so wise
As you, Lord Angelo, have still appear'd,
Should slip so grossely, both in the heat of bloud
And lacke of temper'd iudgement afterward.

Ang. I am sorrie, that such sorrow I procure,
And so deepe sticks it in my penitent heart,
That I crave death more willingly then mercy.
'Tis my deserving, and I doe entreat it.

Enter Barnardine and Provost, Claudio, Iuliette.

Duke. Which is that Barnardine?

Pro. This my Lord.

Duke. There was a Friar told me of this man.
Sirha, thou art said to have a stubborne soule
That apprehends no further then this world,
And squar'st thy life according: Thou'rt condemn'd,
But for those earthly faults, I quit them all,
And pray thee take this mercie to prouide
For better times to come: Frier aduise him,
I leaue him to your hand. What muffled fellow's that?

Pro. This is another prisoner that I saw'd,
Who should have di'd when Claudio lost his head,
As like almost to Claudio, as himselfe.

Duke. If he be like your brother, for his sake
Is he pardon'd, and for your louelie sake
Giue me your hand, and say you will be mine,
He is my brother too: But fitter time for that:
By this Lord Angelo perceiues he's safe,
Methinkes I see a quickning in his eye:
Well Angelo, your euill quits you well.
Looke that you loue your wife: her worth, worth yours
I finde an apt remission in my selfe:
And yet heere's one in place I cannot pardon,
You sirha, that knew me for a foole, a Coward,
One all of Luxurie, an asse, a mad man:
Wherein haue I so deserv'd of you
That you extoll me thus?

Luc. Faith my Lord, I spoke it but according to the trick: if you will hang me for it you may: but I had rather it would please you, I might be whipt.

Duke. Whipt first, sir, and hang'd after.
Proclaime it Prouost round about the Citie;
If any woman wrong'd by this lewd fellow
(As I haue heard him sweare himselfe there's one whom he begot with childe) let her appeare,
And he shall marry her: the nuptiall finish'd,
Let him be whipt and hang'd.

Luc. I beseech you Highnesse doe not marry me to a Whore: your Highnesse said euen now I made you a Duke, good my Lord do not recompence me, in making me a Cuckold.

Duke. Vpon

Duke. Vpon mine honor thou shalt marrie her.
Thy slanders I forgiue, and therewithall
Remit thy other forfeits: take him to prison,
And see our pleasure herein executed.
Luc. Marrying a punke my Lord, is pressing to death,
Whipping and hanging.
Duke. Slandering a Prince deserues it.
She Claudio that you wrong'd, looke you restore.
Ioy to you Mariana, loue her Angelo:
I haue confest her, and I know her vertue.
Thanks good friend, Escalus, for thy much goodnesse,
There's more behinde that is more gratulate.
Thanks Prouost for thy care, and secrecie,
We shall imploy thee in a worthier place.
Forgiue him Angelo, that brought you home
The head of Ragozine for Claudio's,
Th'offence pardons it selfe. Deare Isabell,
I haue a motion much imports your good,
Whereto if you'll a willing eare incline;
What's mine is yours, and what is yours is mine:
So bring vs to our Pallace, where we'll shew
What's yet behinde, that meete you all should know.

The Scene Vienna.

The names of all the Actors.

Vincentio: the Duke.
Angelo, the Deputie.
Escalus, an ancient Lord.
Claudio, a yong Gentleman.
Lucio, a fantastique.
2. Other like Gentlemen.
Prouost.
Thomas. } 2. Priests.
Peter. }
Elbow, a simple Constable.
Froth, a foolish Gentleman.
Clowne.
Abhorson, an Executioner.
Barnardine, a dissolute prisoner.
Isabella, sister to Claudio.
Mariana, betrothed to Angelo
Iuliet, beloued of Claudio.
Francisca, a Nun.
Mistris Ouer-don, a Bawd.

FINIS.

The Comedie of Errors.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, with the Merchant of Siracusa, Egeon, and other attendants.

Merchant.

Proceed Solinus to procure my fall,
And by the doome of death end woes and all.

Duke. Merchant of Siracusa, plead no more.
I am not partiall to infringe our Lawes;
The enmity and discord which of late
Sprung from the rancorous outrage of your Duke,
To Merchants our well-dealing Countrimen,
Who wanting gilders to redeeme their liues,
Haue seal'd his rigorous statutes with their bloods,
Excludes all pitty from our threatning lookes:
For since the mortall and intestine iarres
Twixt thy seditious Countrimen and vs,
It hath in solemne Synodes beene decreed,
Both by the Siracusians and our selues,:
To admit no trafficke to our aduerse townes:
Nay more, if any borne at Ephesus
Be seene at any Siracusian Marts and Faytes:
Againe, if any Siracusian borne
Come to the Bay of Ephesus, he dies:
His goods confiscate to the Dukes dispose,
Vnless a thousand markes be leuied
To quit the penalty, and to ransome him:
Thy substance, valued at the highest rate,
Cannot amount vnto a hundred Markes,
Therefore by Law thou art condemn'd to die.

Aege. Yet this my comfort, when your words are done,
My woes end likewise with the euening Sonne.

Duke. Well Siracusian; say in briefe the cause
Why thou departedst from thy natiue home?
And for what cause thou cam'st to Ephesus

Aege. A breuiate talke could not haue beene impor'd,
Then I to speake my griefes vnspeakeable:
Yet that the world may witnesse that my end
Was wrought by nature, not by vile offence,
Ile vnder what my sorrow gives me leaue.
In Syracuse was I borne, and wedde
Vnto a woman, happy but for me,
And by me; had not our hap beene bad:
With her I liu'd in ioy, our wealth increast
By prosperous voyages I often made
To Epidamnum, till my factors death,
And he great care of goods at random left,
Drew me from kinde embracements of my spouse;
From whom my absence was no fiue moneths olde,
Before her selfe (almost at fainting vnder
The pleasing punishment that women beare)
Had made prouision for her following me,
And foone, and safe, arriued where I was:
There had she not beene long, but she became
A ioyfull mother of two goodly sonnes:
And, which was strange, the one so like the other,
As could not be distinguish'd but by names.
That very howre, and in the selfe-same Inne,
A meane woman was deliuered
Of such a burthen Male, twins both alike:
Those, for their parents were exceeding poore,
I bought, and brought vp to attend my sonnes.
My wife, not meanely prowd of two such boyes,
Made daily motions for our home retaine:
Vnwilling I agreed, alas, too soone wee came aboard.
A league from Epidamnum had we saild
Before the alwaies winde-obeying deepe
Gaue vs Tragicke instance of our harme:
But longer did we not retaine much hope;
For what obscured light the heauens did grant,
Did but conuay vnto our fearefull mindes
A doubtfull warrant of immediate death,
Which though my selfe would gladly haue imbrac'd,
Yet the incessant weepings of my wife,
Weeping before for what she saw must come,
And pitteous playnings of the prettie babes
That mourn'd for fashion, ignorant what to feare,
Forst me to seeke delayes for them and me,
And this it was: (for other meanes was none)
The Sailors sought for safety by our boate,
And left the ship then sinking ripe to vs
My wife, more carefull for the latter borne,
Had fastned him vnto a small spare Mast,
Such as sea-faring men prouide for stormes:
To him one of the other twins was bound,
Whil'st I had beene like heedfull of the other.
The children thus dispos'd, my wife and I,
Fixing our eyes on whom our care was fixt,
Fastned our selues at eyther end the mast,
And floating straight, obedient to the streame,
Was carried towards Corinth, as we thought.
At length the sonne gazing vpon the earth,
Dispersst those vapours that offended vs,
And by the benefit of his wished light
The seas waxt calme, and we discouered
Two shippes from farre, making amaine to vs:
Of Corinth that, of Epidarum this,
But ere they came, oh let me say no more,
Gether the sequell by that went before.

Duke. Nay forward old man, doe not breake off so,

For we may pitty, though not pardon thee.
Merch. Oh had the gods done so, I had not now
Worthily tearm'd them merciless to vs:
For ere the ships could meet by twice five leagues,
We were encountred by a mighty rocke,
Which being violently borne vp,
Our helpefull ship was splitted in the midst;
So that in this vnkind divorce of vs,
Fortune had left to both of vs alike,
What to delight in, what to sorrow for,
Her part, poore soule, seeming as burdened
With lesser weight, but not with lesser woe,
Was carried with more speed before the winde,
And in our sight they three were taken vp
By Fishermen of Corinth, as we thought.
At length another ship had seiz'd on vs,
And knowing whom it was their hap to saue,
Gaue healthfull welcome to their ship-wrack't guests,
And would haue reft the Fishers of their prey,
Had not their backe bearie very slow of saile;
And therefore homeward did they bend their course.
Thus haue you heard me sever'd from my birthe,
That by misfortunes was my life prolong'd,
To tell sad stories of my owne mishaps.
Duke. And for the sake of them thou sorrowest for Doe we the fauour to dilate at full,
What haue befalne of them and they till now.
Merch. My yongest boy, and yet my eldest care,
At eighteene yeeres becomes inquisitive
After his brother; and importun'd me
That his attendant, (in his case was like,
Reft of his brother, but retain'd his name,
Might beare him company in the quest of him:
Whom whil'st I laboured of a loue to see,
I hazarded the losse of whom I lou'd.
Fiue Summers haue I spent in farthest Greece,
Roming cleane through the bounds of Asia,
And coasting homeward, came to Ephesus:
Hopelesse to finde, yet loth to leaue vnsought
Or that, or any place that harbours men:
But here must end the story of my life,
And happy were I in my timelie death,
Could all my travells warrant me they liue.
Duke. Hapless Egeon whom the fatefull houre
To beare the extremitie of dire mishap:
Now trust me, were it not against our Lawes,
Against my Crowne, my oath, my dignity,
Which Princes would they may not disanull,
My soule should sue as advocate for thee:
But though thou art adiudged to the death,
And passed sentence may not be reuok'd
But to our honours great disparagement:
Yet will I fauour thee in what I can;
Therefore Merchant, I le limit thee this day
To seeke thy helpe by beneficiall helpe,
Try all the friends thou hast in Ephesus,
Beg thou, or borrow, to make vp the summe,
And liue: If no, then thou art doom'd to die:
Iaylor, take him to thy custodie.
Iaylor. I will my Lord.
Merch. Hopelesse and helpelesse doth Egeon wend,
But to procrastinate his liuelesse end. Exeunt

Enter Antipholus Errant, a Marchant, and Dromio
Mar. Therefore giue out you are of Epidamnum,
Least that your goods too soone be confiscate:
This very day a Syracusian Marchant
Is apprehended for a riuall here,
And not being able to buy out his life,
According to the statute of the towne,
Dies ere the weare summe be in the West:
There is your money that I had to keepe.
Ant. Goe beare it to the Centaure, where we host,
And stay there Dromio, till I come to thee;
Within this hoare it will be dinner time,
Till that I le view the manners of the towne,
Peruse the traders, gaze vpon the buildings,
And then returne and sleepe within mine Inne,
For with long travelle I am stiffe and weare.
Get thee away.
Dro. Many a man would take you at your word,
And goe indeede, hauing so good a meane.
Exit Dromio.
Ant. A trusty villaine sir, that very oft,
When I am dull with care and melancholly,
Lightens my humour with his merry iests:
What will you walke with me about the towne,
And then goe to my Inne and dine with me?
E.Mar. I am intiuted for to certaine Marchants,
Of whom I hope to make much benefit:
I crave your pardon, soone at fiue a clocke,
Please you, I le meeet with you vpon the Mart,
And afterward consort you till bed time
My present business calls me from you now.
Ant. Farewell till then: I will goe loose my selfe,
And wander vp and downe to view the Citie.
E.Mar. Sir, I commend you to your owne content.
Exeunt.
Ant. He that commends me to mine owne content,
Commends me to the thing I cannot get:
I to the world am like a drop of water,
That in the Ocean seeker another drop,
Who falling there to finde his fellow forth,
(Vnseene, inquisitive) confounds himselfe.
So I, to finde a Mother and a Brother,
In quest of them (vnhappie) loose my selfe.

Enter Dromio of Ephesus.
Here comes the almanacke of my true date:
What now? How chance thou art return'd so soone
E.Dro. Return'd so soone, rather approach'd too late:
The Capon burnes, the Pig fals from the spit;
The clocke hath strucken twelue vpon the bell:
My Mistris made it one vpon my cheeke:
She is so hot because the meeate is colde:
The meeate is colde, because you come not home:
You come not home, because you haue no stomacke:
You haue no stomacke, having broke your fast:
But we that know what 'tis to fast and pray,
Are penitent for your default to day.
Ant. Stop in your winde sir, tell me this I pray?
Where haue you left the money that I gaue you.
E.Dro. Oh sixe pence that I had a wensday last,
To pay the Sadler for my Mistris crupper:
The Sadler had it Sir, I hope it not.
Ant. I am not in a sportiue humor now:
Tell me, and dally not, where is the money?
We being strangers here, how dar'st thou trust
So great a charge from thine owne custodie.
E.Dro. I pray you iest sir as you sit at dinner:
I from my Mistris come to you in post:
If I returne I shall be post indeede.

For she will scoure your fault vpon my pate:
Me thinkes your maw, like mine, should be your cooke,
And strike you home without a messenger.

Ant. Come Dromio, come, these iests are out of season,
Reserue them till a merrier hour then this:
Where is the gold I gaue in charge to thee?

E.Dro. To mee sir? why you gaue no gold to me?

Ant. Come on sir knaue, haue done your foolishnes,
And tell me how thou hast dispos'd thy charge.

E.Dro. My charge was but to fetch you fro the Mart
Home to your house, the Phœnix sir, to dinner;
My Mistris and her sister staies for you.

Ant. Now vs I am a Christian answer me,
In what safe place you haue bestow'd my money;
Or I shall breake that merrie sconce of yours
That stands on tricks, when I am vndispos'd:
Where is the thousand Markes thou hadst of me?

E.Dro. I haue some markes of yours vpon my pate:
Some of my Mistris markes vpon my shoulders:
But neu a thousand markes betweene you both.
If I should pay your worship those againe,
Perchance you will not beare them patiently.

Ant. Thy Mistris markes? what Mistris slaue hast thou?

E.Dro. Your worships wife, my Mistris at the Phœnix;
She that doth fast till you come home to dinner:
And praies that you will bie you home to dinner.

Ant. What wilt thou flout me thus vnto my face
Being forbid? There take you that sir knaue.

E.Dro. What means you sir, for God sake hold your hands:
Nay, and you will not sir, Ile take my heeles.

Exeunt Dromio Ep.

Ant. Vnon my life by some deuilish or other,
The villaine is ore-wrought of all my money.
They say this towne is full of cosenage:
As nimble Iuglers that deceiue the eie:
Dark working Sorcerers that change the mindes:
Soule-killing Witches, that deforme the bodies:
Disguised Cheaters, prating Mountebankes;
And many such like liberties of sinne:
If it proue so, I will be gone the sooner:
Ile to the Centaur to goe seeke this slaue,
I greatly feare my money is not safe. Exit.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Adriana, wife to Antipholis Sereptus, with Luciana her Sister.

Adr. Neither my husband nor the slaue return'd,
That is sent to seeke his Master?
Sure Luciana it is two a clocke.

Luc. Perhaps some Merchant hath inuited him,
And from the Mart he's somewhere gone to dinner:
Good Sister let vs dine, and neuer fret;
A man is Master of his libertie:
Time is their Master, and when they see time,
They'l goe or come; If so, be patient Sister.

Adr. Why should their libertie than ours be more?

Luc. Because their business still lies out o'doore.

Adr. Looke when I serue him so, he takes it thus.

Luc. Oh, know he is the bridle of your will.

Adr. There's none but asses will be bridled so.

Luc. Why, headstrong liberty is lasht with woe:
There's nothing situate vnder heauens eye,
But hath his bound in earth, in sea, in skie.
The beasts, the fishes, and the winged fowles
Are their males subiects, and at their controules:
Man more diuine, the Master of all these,
Lord of the wide world, and wilde watry seas,
Indued with intellectuall sense and soules,
Of more preheminence than fish and fowles,
Are masters to their females, and their Lords:
Then let your will attend on their accords.

Adri. This seruitude makes you to keepe vnwed.

Luci. Not this, but troubles of the marriage bed.

Adr. But were you wedded, you would bear some sway

Luc. Ere I learne loue, Ile practise to obey.

Adr. How if your husband start some other where?

Luc. Till he come home againe, I would forbeare.

Adr. Patience vnmou'd, no marrel though she paule.
They can be meeke, that haue no other cause:
A wretched soule bruis'd with aduersitie,
We bid be quiet when we heare it crie.
But were we burdned with like weight of paine,
As much, or more, we should our selues complaine:
So thou that hast no vnkinde mate to greeue thee,
With vrging helpelesse patience would release me;
But if thou liue to see like right bereft,
This foole-begg'd patience in thee will be left.

Luci. Well, I will marry one day but to tries
Heere comes your man, now is your husband nie.

Enter Dromio Eph.

Adr. Say, is your tardie master now at hand?

E.Dro. Nay, he's at two hands with mee, and that my two eares can witnesse.

Adr. Say, didst thou speake with him? knowst thou his minde?

E. Dro. I, I, he told his minde vpon mine eare,
Beshrew his hand, I scarce could vnderstand it.

Luc. Spake he so doubtfully, thou couldst not feele his meaning.

E. Dro. Nay, he stroke so plainly, I could too well feele his blowes; and withall so doubtfully, that I could scarce vnderstand them.

Adri. But say, I prethee, is he coming home?
It seemes he hath great care to please his wife.

E. Dro. Why Mistresse, sure my Master is horne mad.

Adri. Horne mad, thou villaine?

E.Dro. I meane not Cockold mad,
But sure he is starke mad:
When I desir'd him to come home to dinner,
He askt me for a hundred marks in gold:
'Tis dinner time, quoth I: my gold, quoth he:
Your meat doth burne, quoth I: my gold quoth he:
Will you come, quoth I: my gold, quoth he;
Where is the thousand marks I gaue thee villaine?
The Pigge quoth I, is burn'd: my gold, quoth he
My mistresse, sir, quoth I: hang vp thy Mistresse:
I know not thy mistresse, out on thy mistresse.

Luci. Quoth who?

E.Dr. Quoth my Master, I know quoth he, no house, no wife, no mistresse: so that my errant due vnto my tongue, I thanke him, I bare home vpon my shoulders: for in conclusion, he did beat me there.

Adri. Go back again, thou slaue, & fetch him home.

Dro. Goe back again, and be new beaten home?
For Gods sake send some other messenger.

Adri. Backe sloue, or I will breake thy pate a-crosse.
Dro. And he will blesse y crosse with other beating:
Betweene you, I shall haue a holy head.
Adri. Hence prating peſant, fetch thy Maſter home.
Dro. Am I ſo round with you, as you with me,
That like a foot-ball you doe ſpurne me thus:
You ſpurne me hence, and he will ſpurne me hither,
If I lie in this ſeruice, you muſt caſe me in leather.
Luci. Fie how impatience loweth in your face.
Adri. His company muſt do his minions grace,
Whilſt I at home ſtarue for a merrie looke:
Hath homelie age th'allaring beauty tooke
From my poore cheeke? then he hath waſted it.
Are my diſcourſes dull? Barren my wit,
If voluble and ſharpe diſcourſe be mar'd,
Vnkindneſſe blunts it more then marble hard.
Doe their gay veſtments his affections baite?
That's not my fault, he's maſter of my ſtate.
What ruines are in me that can be found,
By him not ruin'd? Then is he the ground
Of my defeatures. My decayed faire,
A ſunnie looke of his, would ſoone repaire.
But, too vnruly Deere, he breakes the pale,
And feedes from home; poore I am but his ſtale.
Luci. Self-harming Iealoueſie; fie beat it hence.
Ad. Vnfeeling fools can with ſuch wrongs diſpence:
I know his eye doth homage other-where,
elſe, what lets it but he would be here?
Sister, you know he promis'd me a chaine,
Would that alone, a loue he would detaine,
So he would keepe faire quarter with his bed.
I ſee the Iewell beſt enamaled
Will looſe his beautie: yet the gold bides ſtill
That others touch, and often touching will.
Where gold and no man that hath a name,
By falſhood and corruption doth it ſhame:
Since that my beautie cannot pleaſe his eye,
Ile weepe (what's left away) and weeping die.
Luci. How manie fond fooles ſerue mad Iealoueſie?
Exeunt.

Enter Antipholis Errotis.

Ant. The gold I gaue to Dromio is laid vp
Safe at the Centaur, and the heedfull ſlaue
Is wandred forth in care to ſeeke me out
By computation and mine hoſts report.
I could not ſpeake with Dromio, ſince at firſt
I ſent him from the Mart? ſee here he comes.

Enter Dromio Sirarcuſa.

How now ſir, is your merrie humor alter'd?
As you loue ſtrokes, ſo ieſt with me againe:
You know no Centaur? you receiu'd no gold?
Your Miſtreſſe ſent to haue me home to dinner?
My houſe was at the Phœnix? Weſt thou mad,
That thou ſo madlie thou did didſt anſwere me?
S.Dro. What anſwer ſir? when ſpake I ſuch a word?
E.Ant. Euen now, euen here, not halfe an houre ſince.
S.Dro. I did not ſee you ſince you ſent me hence
Home to the Centaur with the gold you gaue me.
Ant. Villaine, thou didſt denie the golds receit,
And toldſt me of a Miſtreſſe, and a dinner,
For which I hope thou felt'ſt I was diſpleas'd.
S.Dro. I am glad to ſee you in this merrie vaine,
What meanes this ieſt, I pray you Maſter tell me?
Ant. Yes, doſt thou leere & flout me in the teeth?
Think'ſt y I ieſt? hold, take thou that, & that. Beats Dro.
S.Dr. Hold ſir, for Gods ſake, now your ieſt is earneſt,
Vpon what bargaine do you giue it me?
Antiph. Because that I familiarlie ſometimes
Doe vſe you for my foole, and chat with you,
Your ſawcineſſe will ieſt vpon my loue,
And make a Common of my ſerious hours,
When the ſunne ſhines, let fooliſh gnats make ſport,
But creepe in crannies, when he hides his beames:
If you will ieſt with me, know my aſpect,
And faſhion your demeanor to my lookes,
Or I will beat this method in your ſconce.
S.Dro. Sconce call you it? ſo you would leaue battering, I had rather haue it a head, and you vſe thoſe blows long, I muſt get a ſconce for my head, and inſonce it too, or elſe I ſhall ſeek my wit in my ſhoulders, but I pray ſir, why am I beaten?
Ant. Doſt thou not know?
S.Dro. Nothing ſir, but that I am beaten.
Ant. Shall I tell you why?
S.Dro. I ſir, and wherefore; for they ſay, every why hath a wherefore.
Ant. Why firſt for flouting me, and then wherefore, for vrging it the ſecond time to me.
S.Dro. Was there euer ſuch man thus beaten out of ſeaſon, when in the why and the wherefore, is neither rime nor reaſon. Well ſir, I thanke you.
Ant. Thanke me ſir, for what?
S.Dro. Marry ſir, for this ſomething that you gaue me for nothing.
Ant. Ile make you amends next, to giue you nothing for ſomething. But ſay ſir, is it dinner time?
S.Dro. No ſir, I thinke the meat wants that I haue
Ant. In good time ſir: what's that?
S.Dro. Baſting.
Ant. Well ſir, then 'twill be dre.
S.Dro. If it be ſir, I pray you eat none of it.
Ant. Your reaſon?
S.Dro. Leſt it make you choller icke, and purchaſe me another drie baſting.
Ant. Well ſir, learne to ieſt in good time, there's a time for all things.
S.Dro. I durſt haue denied that before you were ſo choller icke.
Ant. By what rule ſir?
S.Dro. Marry ſir, by a rule as plaine as the plaine bald pate of Father time himſelfe.
Ant. Let's heare it.
S.Dro. There's no time for a man to recouer his haire that growes bald by nature.
Ant. May he not doe it by fine and recouerie?
S.Dro. Yes, to pay a fine for a perewig, and recouer the loſt haire of another man.
Ant. Why, is Time ſuch a niggard of haire, being (as it is) ſo plentifull an excrement?
S.Dro. Because it is a bleſſing that hee beſtowes on beaſts, and what he hath ſcanted them in haire, hee hath giuen them in wit.
Ant. Why, but theres manie a man hath more haire then wit.
S.Dro. Not a man of thoſe but he hath the wit to loſe his haire.
Ant. Why thou didſt conclude hairy men plain dealers without wit.
S.Dro. The plainer dealer, the ſooner loſt; yet he looſeth it in a kinde of iollitie.
An. For what reaſon.
S.Dro. For two, and found ones too.

An. Na

Ant. Nay not found I pray you.

S.Dro. Sure ones then.

Ant. Nay, not sure in a thing falsing.

S.Dro. Certaine ones then.

Ant. Name them.

S.Dro. The one to save the money that he spends in trying: the other, that at dinner they should not drop in his pottage.

Ant. You would all this time have proo'd, here is no time for all things.

S.Dro. Marry and did sir: namely, in no time to recouer haire lost by Nature.

Ant. But your reason was not substantiall, why there is no time to recouer.

S.Dro. Thus I mend it: Time himselfe is bald, and therefore to the worlds end, will haue bald followers.

Ant. I knew 'twould be a bald conclusion: but soft, who wafts vs yonder.

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adri. I, I, Antipholus, looke strange and frowne,
Some other Mistresse hath thy sweet aspects:
I am not Adriana, nor thy wife.
The time was once, when thou vn-vrg'd wouldst vow,
That never words were musicke to thine eare,
That never obiect pleasing in thine eye,
That never touch well welcome to thy hand,
That never meat sweet-sauour'd in thy taste.
Vnlesse I spake, or look'd, or touch'd, or carv'd to thee.
How comes it now, my Husband, oh how comes it,
That thou art then estranged from thy selfe?
Thy selfe I call it, being strange to me:
That vndiuidable Incorporate
Am better then thy deere selfes better part.
Ah doe not teare away thy selfe from me;
For know my loue: as easie maist thou fall
A drop of water in the breaking gulfe,
And take vnmingled thence that drop againe
Without addition or diminishing,
As take from me thy selfe, and not me too.
How deerely would it touch thee to the quicke,
Shouldst thou but heare I were licentious?
And that this body consecrate to thee,
By Ruffian Lust should be contaminate?
Wouldst thou not spit at me, and spurne at me,
And hurle the name of husband in my face,
And tease the skin'd skin of my Harlot brow,
And from my false hand cut the wedding ring,
And breake it with a deepe-diuorcing vow?
I know thou canst, and therefore see thou doe it.
I am possest with an adulterate blot,
My blood is mingled with the crime of lust:
For if we two be one, and thou play false,
I doe digest the poison of thy flesh,
Being strumpered by thy contagion.
Keepe then faire league and truce with thy true bed,
I liue distain'd, thou vndishonoured.

Anti. Plead you to me faire dame? I know you not:
In Ephesus I am but two houres old.
As strange vnto your towne, as to your talke,
Who every word by all my wit being scan'd,
Want wit in all, one word to vnderstand.

Luci. Fie brother, how the world is chang'd with you
When were you wont to vse my sister thus?
She sent for you by Dromio home to dinner.

Ant. By Dromio? Dromio. By me.

Adr. By thee, and this thou didst returne from him.
That he did buffet thee, and in his blowes,
Denied my house for his, me for his wife.

Ant. Did you conuerse sir with this gentlewoman:
What is the course and drift of your compact?

S.Dro. I sir? I never saw her till this time.

Ant. Villaine thou liest, for euen her verie words,
Didst thou deliuer to me on the Mart.

S.Dro. I never spake with her in all my life.

Ant. How can she thus then call vs by our names?
Vnlesse it be by inspiration.

Adri. How ill agrees it with your gruitie,
To counterfeit thus grosely with your slaue,
Abetting him to thwart me in my moode;
Be it my wrong, you are from me exempt,
But wrong not that wrong with a more contempt.
Come I will fasten on this sleeue of thine:
Thou art an Elme my husband, I a Vine:
Whose weaknesse married to thy stranger state,
Makes me with thy strength to communicate:
If ought possesse thee from me, it is dross,
Vsurping Iuie, Brier, or idle Mosse,
Who all for want of pruning, with intrusion,
Infect thy sap, and liue on thy confusion.

Ant. To me shee speakes, shee moues mee for her theame;
What, was I married to her in my dreame?
Or sleepe I now, and thinke I heare all this?
What error drives our eies and eares amisse?
Vntill I know this sure vncertainte,
Ile entertaine the free'd fa'lacie.

Luc. Dromio, goe bid the seruants spred for dinner.

S.Dro. Oh for my beads, I crosse me for a sinner.
This is the Fairie land, oh spight of spights,
We talke with Goblins, Owles and Sprights;
If we obay them not, this will insue:
They'll suckle our breath, or pinch vs blacke and blue.

Luc. Why prat'st thou to thy selfe, and answer'st not?
Dromio, thou Dromio, thou snaile, thou slug, thou sot.

S.Dro. I am transformed Master, am I not?

Ant. I thinke thou art in minde, and so am I.

S.Dro. Nay Master, both in minde, and in my shape.

Ant. Thou hast thine owne forme.

S.Dro. No, I am an Ape.

Luc. If thou art chang'd to ought, 'tis to an Asse.

S.Dro. 'Tis true she rides me, and I long for grasse.
'Tis so, I am an Asse, else it could never be,
But I should know her as well as she knowes me.

Adr. Come, come, no longer will I be a foole,
To put the finger in the eie and weepe;
Whil'st man and Master laughes my woes to scorne:
Come sir to dinner, Dromio keepe the gate:
Husband Ile dine above with you to day,
And shriue you of a thousand idle pranks:
Sirra, if any aske you for your Master,
Say he dines forth, and let no creature enter:
Come sister, Dromio play the Porter well.

Ant. Am I in earth, in heauen, or in hell?
Sleeping or waking, mad or well aduisde:
Knowne vnto these, and to my selfe disguisde:
Ile say as they say, and persever so:
And in this mist at all aduentures go.

S.Dro. Master, shall I be Porter at the gate?

Adr. I, and let none enter, least I breake your pate

Luc. Come, come, Antipholus, we dine too late.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Antipholus of Ephesus, his man Dromio, Angelo the Goldsmith, and Balthasar the Merchant

E.Ant. Good signior Angelo you must excuse vs all,
My wife is shrewish when I keepe not howres;
Say that I lingerd with you at your shop
To see the making of her Carkanet,
And that to morrow you will bring it home.
But here's a villaine that would face me downe
He met me on the Mart, and that I beat him,
And chang'd him with a thousand markes in gold,
And that I did denie my wife and house;
Thou drunkard thou, what didst thou meane by this?
E.Dro. Say what you wil sir, but I know what I know,
That you beat me at the Mart I have your hand to show;
If ye skin were parchment, & ye blows you gave were ink,
Your owne hand-writing would tell you what I think.
E.Ant. I thinke thou art an asse.
E.Dro. Marry so it doth appeare
By the wrongs I suffer, and the blowes I beare,
I should kicke being kickt, and being at that passe,
You would keepe from my heeles, and beware of an asse.
E.An. Y'are sad signior Balthazar, pray God our cheer
May answer my good will, and your good welcome here.
Bal. I hold your dainties cheap sir, & your welcome deer.
E.An. Oh signior Balthazar, either at flesh or fish,
A table full of welcome, makes scarce one dainty dish.
Bal. Good meat sir is common that every churle affords.
Ant. And welcome more common, for thats nothing but words.
Bal. Small cheere and great welcome, makes a merrie feast.
Ant. I, to a niggardly Host, and more sparing guest:
But though my cates be meane, take them in good part,
Better cheere may you have, but not with better hart.
But soft, my doore is lockt; goe bid them let vs in.
E.Dro. Maud, Bridget, Marian, Cisly, Gillian, Ginn.
S.Dro. Mome, Malthorse, Capon, Coxcombe, Idiot, Patch,
Either get thee from the dore, or sit downe at the hatch:
Doest thou conjure for wenches, that ye calst for such store,
When one is one too many, goe get thee from the dore.
E.Dro. What patch is made our Porter? my Master stayes in the street.
S.Dro. Let him walke from whence he came, lest he catch cold on's feet.
E.Ant. Who talks within there? hoa, open the dore.
S.Dro. Right sir, Ile tell you when, and you'll tell me wherefore.
Ant. Wherefore? for my dinner: I have not din'd to day.
S.Dro. Not to day here you must not come againe when you may.
Ant. What art thou that keep'st mee out from the howse I owe?
S.Dro. The Porter for this time Sir, and my name is Dromio.
E.Dro. O villaine, thou hast stolne both mine office and my name,
The one here got me credit, the other mickle blame
If thou hadst beene Dromio to day in my place,
Thou wouldst have chang'd thy face for a name, or thy name for an asse.

Enter Luce.

Luce. What a coile is there Dromio? who are those at the gate?
E.Dro. Let my Master in Luce.
Luce. Faith no, he comes too late, and so tell your Master.
E.Dro. O Lord I must laugh, have at you with a Proverbe,
Shall I set in my staffe.
Luce. Have at you with another, that's when? can you tell?
S.Dro. If thy name be called Luce, Luce thou hast answer'd him well.
Ant. Doe you heare you minion, you'll let vs in I hope?
Luce. I thought to have asht you
S.Dro. And you said no.
E.Dro. So come helpe, well strooke, there was blow for blow.
Ant. Thou baggage let me in.
Luce. Can you tell for whose sake?
E.Dro. Master, knocke the doore hard,
Luce. Let him knocke till it ake.
Ant. You'l cry for this minion, if I beat the doore downe.
Luce What needs all that, and a paire of stocks in the towne?

Enter Adriana.

Adr. Who is that at the doore ye keeps all this noise?
S.Dro. By my troth your towne is troubled with unruly boies.
Ant. Are you there Wife? you might have come before.
Adr. Your wife sir knaue? go get you from the dore.
E.Dro. If you went in pane Master, this knaue would goe sore.
Angelo. Heere is neither cheere sir, nor welcome, we would faine have either.
Balth. In debating which was best, wee shall part with neither.
E.Dro. They stand at the doore, Master, bid them welcome hither.
Ant. There is something in the winde, that we cannot get in.
E.Dro. You would say so Master, if your garments were thin.
Your cake here is warme within: you stand here in the cold.
It would make a man mad as a Buck to be so bought and sold.
Ant. Go fetch me something, Ile break ope the gate.
S.Dro. Breake any breaking here, and Ile breake your knaues pate.
E.Dro. A man may breake a word with your sir, and words are but wynde:
I and breake it in your face, so he break it not behinde.
S.Dro. It seemes thou want'st breaking, out upon thee hinde.
E.Dro. Here's too much out upon thee, I pray thee let me in.
S.Dro. I, when fowles have no feathers, and fish have no fin
Ant. Well, Ile breake in: go borrow me a crow.
S.Dro. A crow without feather, Master meane you so,

For

For a fish without a finne, ther's a fowle without a feather,
If a crow help vs in finne, we'l plucke a crow together.
Ant. Go, get thee gon, fetch me an iron Crow.
Dro. Haue patience sir, oh let it not be so,
Herein you warre against your reputation,
And draw within the compasse of suspect
Th'vnuiolated honor of your wife.
Once this your long experience of your wisedome,
Her sober vertue, yeares, and modestie,
Plead on your part some cause to you vnknowne;
And doubt not sir, but she will well excuse
Why at this time the doores are made against you.
Be rul'd by me, depart in patience,
And let vs to the Tyger all to dinner,
And about euening come your selfe alone.
To know the reason of this strange restraint:
If by strong hand you offer to breake in
Now in the stirring passage of the day,
A vulgar comment will be made of it;
And that supposed by the common rout
Against your yet vngalled estimation.
That may with foule intrusion enter in,
And dwell vpon your grace when you are dead;
For slander lives vpon succession;
For euer howt'd, where it gets possession.
Ant. You haue perswad'd, I will depart in quiet,
And in despight of mirth meane to be merrie:
I know a wench of excellent discourse,
Pretie and witty; wilde, and yet too gentle;
There will we dine: this woman that I meane
My wife (but I protest without desert)
Hath oftentimes vpbraided me withall:
To her will we to dinner, get you home
And fetch the chaine, by this I know 'tis made,
Bring it I pray you to the Porpentine,
For there's the house: That chaine will I bestow
(Be it for nothing but to spight my wife)
Vpon mine hostesse there, good sir make haste:
Since mine owne doores refuse to entertaine me,
Ile knocke else-where, to see if they'll disdaine me.
Ang. Ile meet you at that place some houre hence.
Ant. Do so, this iest shall cost me some expence.
Exeunt.

Enter Iuliana, with Antipholus of Siracusa.

Iuli. And may it be that you haue quite forgot
A husbands office? shall Antipholus
Euen in the spring of Loue, thy Loue-springs rot?
Shall loue in buildings grow so ruinate?
If you did wed my sister for her wealth,
Then for her wealths-sake vse her with more kindnesse:
Or if you like else-where doe it by stealth,
Muffle your false loue with some shew of blindnesse:
Let not my sister read it in your eye:
Be not thy tongue thy owne shames Orator:
Looke sweet, speake faire, become disloyaltie:
Apparell vice like vertues harbenger:
Beare a faire presence, though your heart be tainted,
Teach sinne the carriage of a holy Saint,
Be secret false: what need she be acquainted?
What simple thiefe brags of his owne attaine?
'Tis double wrong to truant with your bed,
And let her read it in thy looks at board:
Shame hath a bastard fame, well managed,
Ill deeds is doubled with an euill word:
Alas poore women, make vs not beleeue
(Being compact of credit) that you loue vs,
Though others haue the arme, shew vs the sleeue
We in your motion turne, and you may moue vs.
Then gentle brother get you in againe;
Comfort my sister, cheere her, call her wife;
'Tis holy sport to be a little vaine,
When the sweet breath of flatterie conquers strife.
S. Ant. Sweete Mistris, what your name is else I know not;
Nor by what wonder you do hit of mine
Lesse in your knowledge, and your grace you show not,
Then our earths wonder, more then earth diuine.
Teach me deere creature how to thinke and speake:
Lay open to my earthie grosse conceit:
Smothred in errors, feeble, shallow, weake,
The foulded meaning of your words deceit:
Against my soules pure truth, why labour you,
To make it wander in an vnknowne field?
Are you a god? would you create me new?
Transforme me then, and to your powre Ile yeild
But if that I am I, then well I know,
Your weeping sister is no wife of mine,
Nor to her bed no homage doe I owe:
Farre more, farre more, to you doe I decline:
Oh traine me not sweet Mermaide with thy note,
To drowne me in thy sister flood of teares:
Sing Siren for thy selfe, and I will dote:
Spread ore the siluer waues thy golden haires;
And as a bud Ile take ther, and there lie:
And in that glorious supposition thinke,
He gaines by death, that hath such meanes to die:
Let Loue being light, be drowned if she sinke.
Luc. What are you mad, that you doe reason so?
Ant. Not mad, but mated, how I doe not know.
Luc. It is a sinne that springeth from your eie.
Ant. For gazing on your beames faire sun being by.
Luc. Gaze when you should, and that will cleere your sight.
Ant. As good to winke sweet loue, as looke on night.
Luc. Why call you me loue? Call my sister so.
Ant. Thy sisters sister.
Luc. That's my sister.
Ant. No: it is thy selfe, mine owne selfes better part:
Mine eies cleere eie, my deere hearts deerer heart;
My foode, my fortune, and my sweet hopes aime;
My sole earths heaven, and my heauens claime.
Luc. All this my sister is, or else should be.
Ant. Call thy selfe sister sweet, for I am thee:
Thee will I loue, and with thee lead my life;
Thou hast no husband yet, nor I no wife:
Give me thy hand.
Luc. Oh soft sir, hold you still:
Ile fetch my sister to get her good will. Exit.

Enter Dromio, Siracusa.

Ant. Why how now Dromio, where run'st thou so fast?
S.Dro. Doe you know me sir? Am I Dromio? Am I your man? Am I my selfe?
Ant. Thou art Dromio, thou art my man, thou art thy selfe.
Dro. I am an ass, I am a women's man, and besides my selfe.
Ant. What womans man? and how besides thy selfe?
Dro. Marrie sir, besides my selfe, I am due to a woman: One that claimes me, one that haunts me, one that will haue me.
Ant. What

Anti. What claime laies she to thee?

Dro. Marry sir, such claime as you would lay to your horse, and she would have me as a beast, not that I being a beast she would have me, but that she being a verie beastly creature layes claime to me.

Anti. What is she?

Dro. A very reuerent body: I such a one, as a man may not speake of, without he say sir reuerence, I have but leane lucke in the match, and yet is she a wondrous fat marriage.

Anti. How dost thou meane a fat marriage?

Dro. Marry sir, she's the Kitchin wench, & st greate, and I know not what vse to put her too, but to make a Lampe of her, and run from her by her owne light. I warrant, her ragges and the Tallow in them, will burne a Poland Winter: If she liues till doomesday, she'l burne a weeke longer then the whole World

Anti. What complexion is she of?

Dro. Swart like my shoo, but her face nothing like so cleane kept: for why? she sweats a man may goe ouer-shoes in the grime of it.

Anti. That's a fault that water will mend.

Dro. No sir, 'tis in graine, Noahs flood could not do it

Anti. What's her name?

Dro. Nell Sir: but her name is three quarters, that's an Ell and three quarters, will not measure her from hip to hip.

Anti. Then she beares some breadth?

Dro. No longer from head to foot, then from hippe to hippe: she is spherical, like a globe: I could find out Countries in her.

Anti. In what part of her body stands Ireland?

Dro. Marry sir in her buttocks, I found it out by the bogges.

Anti. Where Scotland?

Dro. I found it by the barrennesse, hard in the palme of the hand.

Anti. Where France?

Dro. In her forhead, arm'd and reuerted, making warre against her heire.

Anti. Where England?

Dro. I look'd for the chalkie Cliffes, but I could find no whitenesse in them. But I guesse, it stood in her chin by the salt rheume that ranne between France, and it.

Anti. Where Spaine?

Dro. Faith I saw it not: but I felt it hot in her breth.

Anti. Where America, the Indies?

Dro. Oh sir, vpon her nose, all ore embellished with Rubies, Carbuncles, Sophites, declining their rich Aspect to the hot breath of Spaine, who sent whole Armadoes of Carrects to be ballast at her nose.

Anti. Where stood Belgia, the Netherlands?

Dro. Oh sir, I did not looke so low. To conclude, this drudge or Diuiner layd claime to mee, call'd mee Dromio, swore I was assur'd to her, told me what priuie markes I had about mee, as the marke of my shoulder, the Mole in my necke, the great Wart on my left arme, that I amaz'd ranne from her as a witch. And I thinke, if my breft had not beene made of faith, and my heart of steele, she had transform'd me to a Curtall dog, & made me turne i'th wheele.

Anti. Go hie thee presently post to the rode,
And if the winde blow any way from shore,
I will not harbour in this Towne to night.
If any Barke put forth, come to the Mart,
Where I will walke till thou returne to me:
If euerie one knowes vs, and we know none,
'Tis time I thinke to trudge, packe, and be gone.

Dro. As from a Beare a man would run for life,
So flie I from her that would be my wife. Exit

Anti. There's none but Witches do inhabite heere,
And therefore 'tis hie time that I were hence:
She that doth call me husband, euen my soule
Doth for a wife abhorre. But her faire sister
Posseft with such a gentle soueraigne grace,
Of such inchanting presence and discourse,
Hath almost made me Traitor to my selfe:
But least my selfe be guilty to selfe wrong,
Ile stop mine eares against the Mermaids song

Enter Angelo with the Chaine.

Ang. Mr Antipholus.

Anti. I that's my name.

Ang. I know it well sir, loe here's the chaine,
I thought to haue tane you at the Porpentine,
The chaine vnfinish'd made me stay thus long.

Anti What is you will that I shal do with this?

Ang What please your selfe sir: I haue made it for you.

Anti Made it for me sir, I bespoke it not.

Ang. Not once, nor twice, but twentie times you haue:
Go home with it, and please your Wife withall,
And some at supper time Ile visit you,
And then receiue my money for the chaine.

Anti. I pray you sir receiue the money now,
For feare you ne're see chaine, nor money more.

Ang. You are a merry man sir, fare you well. Exit.

Anti. What I should thinke of this, I cannot tell
But this I thinke, there's no man is so vaine,
That would refuse so faire an offer'd Chaine
I see a man heere needs not liue by shifts,
When in the streets he meetes such Golden gifts:
Ile to the Mart, and there for Dromio stay,
If any ship put out, then straight away Exit

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter a Marchant, Goldsmith, and an Officer.

Mar. You know since Pentecost the sum is due,
And since I haue not much importun'd you,
Nor now I had not, but that I am bound
To Persia, and want Gilders for my voyage
Therefore make present satisfaction,
Or Ile attach you by this Officer.

Gold. Euen iust the sum that I do owe to you,
Is growing to me by Antipholus,
And in the instant that I met with you,
He had of me a Cheine, at fiue a clocke
I shall receiue the money for the same.
Pleaseth you walke with me downe to his house,
I will discharge my bond, and thanke you too

Enter Antipholus Ephes. Dromio from the Courtesans.

Offi. That labour may you saue: See where he comes.

Anti. While I go to the Goldsmiths house, go thou

And

And buy a rope's end, that will I bestow
Among my wife, and their confederates,
For locking me out of my doores by day:
But soft, I see the Goldsmith; get thee gone,
Buy thou a rope, and bring it home to me.

Dro. I buy a thousand pound a yeare, I buy a rope.
Exit Dromio

Eph. Ant. A man is well holpe vp that trusts to you,
I promised your presence, and the Chaine,
But neither, Chaine nor Goldsmith came to me:
Belike you thought our loue would last too long
If we were chain'd together: and therefore came not.

Gold. Saying your merrie humor: here's the note
How much your Chaine weighs to the vtmost carat,
The fancifie of the Gold, and chargefull fashion,
Which doth amount to three odde Duckets more
Then I stand debted to this Gentlemen,
I pray you see him presently discharg'd,
For he is bound to Sea, and stayes but for it.

Ant. I am not furnish'd with the present money:
Besides I have some business in the towne,
Good Signior take the stranger to my house,
And with you take the Chaine, and bid my wife
Disburse the summe, on the receit thereof,
Perchance I will be there as soone as you.

Gold. Then you will bring the Chaine to her your selfe.

Ant. No bearer it with you, least I come not time enough.

Gold. Well sir, I will: Haue you the Chaine about you?

Ant. And if I haue not sir, I hope you haue:
Or else you may returne without your money.

Gold. Nay come I pray you sir, give me the Chaine:
Both winde and tide stayes for this Gentleman,
And I too blame have held him heere too long.

Ant. Good Lord, you vse this dallyance to excuse
Your breach of promise to the Porpentine,
I should haue chid you for not bringing it,
But like a shrew you first begin to brawle.

Mer. The house steales on, I pray you sir dispatch.

Gold. You heare how he importunes me, the Chaine.

Ant. Why giue it to my wife, and fetch your money.

Gold. Come, come, you know I gave it you even now.
Either send the Chaine, or send me by some token.

Ant. Fie, now you run this humor out of breath,
Come where's the Chaine, I pray you let me see it.

Mer. My business cannot brooke this dalliance,
Good sir say, wh'r you'l answer me, or no:
Else, I'le leave him to the Officer.

Ant. I answer you? What should I answer you.

Gold. The money that you owe me for the Chaine.

Ant. I owe you none, till I receiue the Chaine.

Gold. You know I gave it you half an houre since.

Ant. You gave me none, you wrong mee much to say so.

Gold. You wrong me more sir in denying it.
Consider how it stands vpon my credit.

Mer. Well Officer, arrest him at my suite.

Offi. I do, and charge you in the Dukes name to obey me.

Gold. This touches me in reputation.
Either consent to pay this sum for me,
Or I attach you by this Officer.

Ant. Consent to pay thee that I never had:
Arrest me foolish fellow if thou dar'st.

Gold. Heere is thy fee, arrest him Officer.
I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorne me so apparently.

Offic. I do arrest you sir, you heare the suite.

Ant. I do obey thee, till I give thee baile.
But sirrah, you shall buy this sport as deere,
As all the mettall in your shop will answer.

Gold. Sir, sir, I shall haue Law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame, I doubt it not.

Enter Dromio Sira. from the Bay.

Dro. Master, there's a Barke of Epidamnum,
That staies but till her Owner comes aboard,
And then sir she bears away. Our fraughtage sir,
I have conuey'd aboard, and I haue bought
The Oyle, the Balsamum, and Aqua-vitæ.
The ship is in her trim, the merrie winde
Blowes faire from land: they stay for nought at all,
But for their Owner, Master, and your selfe.

Ant. How now? a Madman? Why thou peeuish sheep,
What ship of Epidamnum staies for me.

S.Dro. A ship you sent me too, to hier waftage

Ant. Thou drunken slaue, I sent thee for a rope,
And told thee to what purpose, and what end.

S.Dro. You sent me for a ropes end as soone,
You sent me to the Bay sir, for a Barke.

Ant. I will debate this matter at more leisure
And teach your eares to list me with more heedes
To Adriana Villaine hie thee straight:
Giue her this key, and tell her in the Deske
That's couer'd o're with Turkish Tapistrie,
There is a purse of Duckets, let her send it:
Tell her, I am arrested in the streete,
And that shall baile me: hie thee slaue, be gone,
On Officer to prison, till it come. Exeunt

S. Dromio. To Adriana, that is where we din'd,
Where Dowsabell did claime me for her husband,
She is too bigge I hope for me to compasse,
Thither I must, although against my will:
For seruants must their Masters mindes fulfill. Exit

Enter Adriana and Luciana.

Adr. Ah Luciana, did he tempt thee so?
Might'st thou perceiue austerely in his eie,
That he did plead in earnest, yes or no:
Look'd he or red or pale, or sad or merrily?
What obseruation mad'st thou in this case?
Oh, his hearts Meteors tilting in his face.

Luc. First he deni'de you had in him no right.

Adr. He meant he did me none: the more my spight

Luc. Then swore he that he was a stranger heere.

Adr. And true he swore, though yet forsworne hee were.

Luc. Then pleaded I for you.

Adr. And what said he?

Luc. That loue I begg'd for you, he begg'd of me.

Adr. With what perswasion did he tempt thy loue?

Luc. With words, that in an honest suit might moue.
First, he did praise my beautie, then my speech.

Adr. Did'st speake him faire?

Luc. Haue patience I beseech.

Adr. I cannot, nor I will not hold me still,
My tongue, though not my heart, shall heare his will.
He is deformed, crooked, old, and fere,
Ill-fac'd, worse bodied, shapelesse every where.
Vicious, vngentle, foolish, blunt, vnkinde,

Stigma-

Stigmaticall in making worse in minde.

Luc. Who would be iealous then of such a one?
No euill lost is wail'd, when it is gone.

Adr. Ah but I thinke him better then I say:
And yet would herein others eies were worse:
Farre from her nest the Lapwing cries away;
My heart prayes for him, though my tongue doe curse.

Enter S.Dromio.

Dro. Here goe: the deske, the purse, sweet now make haste.

Luc. How hast thou lost thy breath?

S.Dro. By running fast.

Adr. Where is thy Master Dromio? Is he well?

S.Dro. No, he's in Tartar limbo, worse then hell:
A diuell in an everlasting garment hath him;
On whose hard heart is button'd vp with steele:
A Feind, a Fairie, pittilesse and rude:
A Wolfe, nay worse, a fellow all in buffe:
A back friend, a shoulder-clapper, one that countermands
The passages of alleys, creekes, and narrow lands:
A hound that runs Counter, and yet drawes drifoot well,
One that before the Iudgment carries poore soules to hel.

Adr. Why man, what is the matter?

S.Dro. I doe not know the matter, hee is rested on the case.

Adr. What is he arrested? tell me at whose suite?

S.Dro. I know not at whose suite he is arested well; but is in a suice of buffe which rested him, that can I tell, will you send him Mistris redemption, the monie in his deske.

Adr. Go fetch it Sister: this I wonder at.

Exit Luciana.

Thus he vnknowne to me should be in debt:
Tell me, was he arested on a band?

S.Dro. Not on a band, but on a stronger thing:
A chaine, a chaine, doe you not here it ring.

Adria. What, the chaine?

S.Dro. No, no, the bell, 'tis time that I were gone:
It was two ere I left him, and now the clocke strikes one.

Adr. The houres come backe, that did I neue here.

S.Dro. Oh yes, if any houre meete a Serieant, a turnes backe for verie feare.

Adri. As if time were in debt: how sondly do'st thou reason?

S.Dro. Time is a verie bankerout, and owes more then he's worth to season.
Nay, he's a theefe too: haue you not heard men say,
That time comes stealing on by night and day?
If I be in debt and theft, and a Serieant in the way,
Hath he not reason to turne backe an houre in a day?

Enter Luciana.

Adr. Go Dromio, there's the monie, beare it straight,
And bring thy Master home imediately.
Come sister, I am prest downe with conceit:
Conceit, my comfort and my iniurie. Exit.

Enter Antipholus Sirac.

There's not a man I meete but doth salute me
As if I were their well acquainted friend,
And euerie one doth call me by my name:
Some tender monie to me, some taxes me;
Some other give me thanks for kindnesses;
Some offer me Commodities to buy.
Even now a tailor cal'd me in his shop,
And show'd me Silkes that he had bought for me,
And therewithall tooke measure of my body.
Sure these are but imaginarie wiles,
And Iapland Sorcerers inhabite here.

Enter Dromio.S.

S.Dro. Master, here's the gold you sent me for: what haue you got the picture of old Adam new apparel'd?

Ant. What gold is this? What Adam do'st thou meane?

S.Dro. Not that Adam that kept the Paradise: but that Adam that keepes the prison; hee that goes in the calues-skin, that was kil'd for the Prodigall: hee that came behinde you sir, like an euill angel, and bid you forsake your libertie.

Ant. I vnderstand thee not.

S.Dro. No? why 'tis a plaine case: he that went like a Base-Viole in a case of leather; the man sir, that when gentlemen are tired giues them a sob, and rests them: he sir, that takes pittie on decaied men, and giues them suites of durance: he that sets vp his rest to doe more exploits with his Mace, then a Morris Pike.

Ant. What thou mean'st an officer?

S.Dro. I sir, the Serieant of the Band: he that brings any man to answer it that breakes his Band: one that thinkes a man alwaies going to bed, and saies, God giue you good rest.

Ant. Well sir, there rest in your foolerie:
Is there any ships puts forth to night? may we be gone?

S.Dro. Why sir, I brought you word an houre since, that the Barke Expedition put forth to night, and then were you hindred by the Serieant to tarry for the Hoy Delay: Here are the angels that you sent for to deliuer you.

Ant. The fellow is distract, and so am I,
And here we wander in illusions:
Some blessed power deliuer vs from hence.

Enter a Curtizan.

Cur. Well met, well met, Master Antipholus.
I see sir you haue found the Gold-smith now.
Is that the chaine you promis'd me to day.

Ant. Satan auoide, I charge thee tempt me not.

S.Dro. Master, is this Mistris Satan?

Ant. It is the diuell.

S.Dro. Nay, she is worse, she is the diuels dam:
And here she comes in the habit of a light wench, and thereof comes, that the wenches say God dam me, That's as much to say, God make me a light wench: It is written, they appeare to men like angels of light, light is an effect of fire, and fire will burne: ergo, light wenches will burne, come not neere her.

Cur. Your man and you are marauilous merrie sir.
Will you goe with me, we'll mend our dinner here?

S.Dro. Master, if do expect spoon-meate, or bespeake a long spoone.

Ant. Why Dromio?

S.Dro. Marrie he must haue a long spoone that must eate with the diuell.

Ant. Auoid thee fiend, what tell'st thou me of supping?
Thou art, as you are all a sorceresse:
I coniure thee to leaue me, and be gon.

Cur. Giue me the ring of mine you had at dinner,
Or for my Diamond the Chaine you promis'd,
And Ile be gone sir, and not trouble you.

S.Dro. Some diuels aske but the parings of one nails, a rush, a haire, a drop of blood, a pin, a nut, a cherrie-stone: but she more covetous, would haue a chaine: Master be wise, and if you give it her, the diuell will shake her Chaine, and fright vs with it.

Cur. I pray you sir my Ring, or else the Chaine, I hope you do not mean to cheate me so?

Ant. Auaunt thou witch: Come Dromio let vs go.

S. Dro. Flie pride saies the Pea-cocke, Mistris that you know. Exeu.

Cur. Now out of doubt Antipholus is mad, Else would he never so demeane himselfe, A Ring he hath of mine worth forty Duckets, And for the same he prouok'd me a Chame, Both one and other he denies me now: The reason that I gather he is mad, Besides this present instance of his rage, Is a mad tale he told to day at dinner, Of his owne doores being shut against his entrance. Belike his wife acquainted with his fits, On purpose shut the doores against his way: My way is now to hie home to his house, And tell his wife, that being Lunaticke, He rush'd into my house, and tooke perforce My Ring away. This course I fixed choose, For fortie Duckets is too much to loose.

Enter Antipholus Ephes. with a Tailor.

An. Feare me not man, I will not breake away, Ile goue thee ere I leaue thee so much money To warrant thee as I am rested for. My wife is in a wayward moode to day, And will not lightly trust the Messenger, That I should be stayd'd in Ephesus, I tell you 'twill sound harshly in her eares.

Enter Dromio Eph. with a ropes end.

Heere comes my Man, I think he brings the money. How now sir? Haue you that I sent you for?

E. Dro. Here's that I warrant you will pay them all.

Ant. But where's the Money?

E. Dro. Why sir, I gaue the Money for the Rope.

An. Five hundred Duckets villaine for a rope?

E. Dro. Ile serue you sir five hundred at the rate.

Ant. To what end did I bid thee hie thee home?

E. Dro. To ropes end sir, and to that end am I return'd.

An. And to that end sir, I will welcome you.

Off. Good sir be patient.

E. Dro. Nay 'tis for me to be patient, I am in aduersitie.

Off. Good man hold thy tongue.

E. Dro. Nay, rather perswade him to hold his hands.

Ant. Thou whoreson senseless Villaine.

E. Dro. I would I were senseless sir, that I might not feele your blowes.

Ant. Thou art sensible in nothing but blowes, and so is an Asse.

E. Dro. I am an Asse indeede, you may prouue it by my long eares. I haue serued him from the houre of my Nativitie to this instant, and haue nothing at his hands for my seruice but blowes. When I am cold, he heates me with beating: when I am warme, he cooles me with beating: I am wak'd with it when I sleepe, rais'd with it when I sit, driuen out of doores with it when I goe from home, welcom'd home with it when I returne, nay I beare it on my shoulders, as a begger woont her brat: and I thinke when he hath lam'd me, I shall begge with it from doore to doore.

Enter Adriana, Luciana, Courtizan, and a Schoolemaster, call'd Pinch.

Ant. Come goe along, my wife is coming yonder.

E. Dro. Mistris respice finem, respect your end, or rather the prophesie like the Parrat, beware the ropes end.

Ant. Wilt thou still talke? Beats Dro.

Curt. How say you now? Is not your husband mad?

Adri. His incivility confirmes no lesse:
Good Doctor Pinch, you are a Conjurer,
Establish him in his true sence againe,
And I will please you what you will demand.

Luc. Alas how fiery, and how sharpe he looken.

Cur. Marke, how he trembles in his extasie.

Pinch. Giue me your hand, and let mee feele your pulse.

Ant. There is my hand, and let it feele your care.

Pinch. I charge thee Sathan, hous'd within this man,
To yeeld possession to my holie praiers,
And to thy state of darknesse hie thee straight,
I conjure thee by all the Saints in heauen.

Ant. Peace doting wizard, peace; I am not mad.

Adr. Oh that thou wer't not, poore distressed soule.

Ant. You Minion you, are these your Customers?
Did this Companion with the saffron face
Reuell and feast it at my house to day,
Whil'st vpon me the guiltie doores were shut,
And I denied to enter in my house.

Adr. O husband, God doth know you din'd at home
Where would you had remain'd until this time,
Free from these slanders, and this open shame.

Ant. Din'd at home? Thou Villaine, what saydst thou!

Dro. Sir sooth to say, you did not dine at home.

Ant. Were not my doores lockt vp, and I shut out?

Dro. Perdie, your doores were locht, and you shut out.

Ant. And did not she her selfe reuile me there?

Dro. Sans Fable, she her selfe reuil'd you there.

Ant. Did not her Kitchen maide raile, taunt, and scorne me?

Dro. Certis she did, the kitchin vestall scorn'd you.

Ant. And did not I in rage depart from thence?

Dro. In veritie you did, my bones beares witnesse, That since haue felt the vigor of his rage.

Adr. Is't good to sooth him in these contraries?

Pinch. It is no shame, the fellow finds his vaine, And yeelding to him, humors well his frenzie.

Ant. Thou hast suborn'd the Goldsmith to arrest mee.

Adr. Alas, I sent you Monie to redeeme you, By Dromio heere, who came in hast for it.

Dro. Monie by me? Heart and good will you might But surely Master not a rage of Monie.

Ant. Went't not thou to her for a purse of Duckets.

Adri. He came to me, and I deliuer'd it.

Luci. And I am witnesse with her that she did.

Dro. God and the Rope-makes beare me witnesse, That I was sent for nothing but a rope.

Pinch. Mistris, both Man and Master is possest, I know it by their pale and deadly lookes,

They

They must be bound and laide in some darke roome.

Ant. Say wherefore didst thou locke me forth to day,
And why dost thou deniе the bagge of gold?

Adr. I did not gentle husband locke thee forth.

Dro. And gentle Mr I receiu'd no gold:
But I confesse sir, that we were lock'd out.

Adr. Dissembling Villain, thou speak'st false in both

Ant. Dissembling harlot, thou art false in all,
And art confederate with a damned packe,
To make a loathsome abiect scorne of me:
But with these nailes, I'le plucke out these false eyes,
That would behold in me this shamefull sport.

Enter three or foure, and offer to binde him: His friends.

Adr. Oh binde him, binde him, let him not come neere me.

Pinch. More company, the fiend is strong within him

Luc. Aye me poore man, how pale and wan he looks.

Ant. What will you murther me, thou Iailor thou?
I am thy prisoner, wilt thou suffer them to make a rescue?

Offi. Masters let him go: he is my prisoner, and you shall not haue him.

Pinch. Go binde this man, for he is franticke too.

Adr. What wilt thou do, thou peeuish Officer?
Hast thou delight to see a wretched man
Do outrage and displeasure to himselfe?

Offi. He is my prisoner, if I let him go,
The debt he owes will be requir'd of me.

Adr. I will discharge thee ere I go from thee,
Beare me forthwith vnto his Creditor,
And knowing how the debt growes I will pay it.
Good Master Doctor see him safe conney'd
Home to my house, oh most vnhappy day.

Ant. Oh most vnhappie strumpet.

Dro. Master, I am heere entred in bond for you.

Ant. Out on thee Villaine, wherefore dost thou mad mee?

Dro. Will you be bound for nothing, be mad good Master, cry the diuell.

Luc. God helpe poore soules, how idlely doe they talke.

Adr. Go beare him hence, sister go you with me:
Say now, whose suite is he arrested at?

Exeunt. Manet Offic. Adri. Luci. Courtezan

Off. One Angelo a Goldsmith, do you know him?

Adr. I know the man: what is the summe he owes?

Off. Two hundred Duckets.

Adr. Say, how growes it due.

Off. Due for a Chaine your husband had of him.

Adr. He did bespeake a Chain for me, but had it not.

Cur. When as your husband all in rage to day
Came to my house, and tooke away my Ring,
The Ring I saw vpon his finger now,
Straight after did I meete him with a Chaine.

Adr. It may be so, but I did neuer see it.
Come Iailor, bring me where the Goldsmith is,
I long to know the truth hereof at large

Enter Antipholus Sirracusa with his Rapier drawne, and Dromio Sirac.

Luc. God for thy mercy, they are loose againe.

Adr. And come with naked swords.
Let's call more helpe to haue them bound againe.

Exeunt all out.

Off. Away, they'l kill vs.

Exeunt omnes, as fast as may be, frighted.

S. Ant. I see these Witches are afraid of swords.

S. Dro. She that would be your wife, now ran from you.

Ant. Come to the Centaur, fetch our stuffe from thence:
I long that we were safe and sound aboard.

Dro. Faith stay heere this night, they will surely do vs no harme: you saw they speake vs faire, give vs gold: me thinkes they are such a gentle Nation, that but for the Mountaine of mad flesh that claimes marriage of me, I could finde in my heart to stay heere still, and turne Witch.

Ant. I will not stay to night for all the Towne,
Therefore away, to get our stuffe aboard. Exeunt

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter the Merchant and the Goldsmith.

Gold. I am sorry Sir that I haue hindred you,
But I protest he had the Chaine of me,
Though most dishonestly he doth denie it.

Mer. How is the man esteem'd heere in the Citie?

Gold. Of very reuerent reputation sir,
Of credit infinite, highly belou'd,
Second to none that lives heere in the Citie:
His word might beare my wealth at any time.

Mer Speake softly, yonder as I thinke he walkes.

Enter Antipholus and Dromio again.

Gold. 'Tis so: and that selfe chaine about his neeke,
Which he forswore most monstrously to haue.
Good sir draw neere to me, I'le speake to him:
Signior Antipholus, I wonder much
That you would put me to this shame and trouble,
And not without some scandall to your selfe,
With circumstance and oaths, so to denie
This Chaine, which now you weare so openly.
Beside the charge, the shame, imprisonment,
You haue done wrong to this my honest friend,
Who but for staying on our Controuersie,
Had hoisted saile, and put to sea to day:
This Chaine you had of me, can you deny it?

Ant. I thinke I had, I never did deny it.

Mer. Yes that you did sir, and forswore it too.

Ant. Who heard me to denie it or forsweare it?

Mer. These eares of mine thou knowst did hear thee:
Fie on thee wretch, 'tis pitty that thou liu'st
To walke where any honest men resort.

Ant. Thou art a Villaine to impeach me thus,
I'le prouse mine honor, and mine honestie
Against thee presently, if thou dar'st stand:

Mer. I dare and do defie thee for a villaine.

They draw. Enter Adriana, Luciana, Court. and other.

Adr. Hold, heere him not for God sake, he is mad,
Some get within him, take his sword away:
Binde Dromio too, and beare them to my house.

S. Dro. Runne master run, for Gods sake take a house,
This is some Priorie, in, or we are spoyl'd.

Exeunt to the Priorie.

Enter

Enter Luce Abbesse

Ab. Be quiet people, wherefore throng you hither?
Adr. To fetch my poore distracted husband hence,
Let vs come in, that we may binde him fast,
And bearе him home for his recouerie.
Gold. I knew he was not in his perfect wits.
Mar. I am sorry now that I did draw on him.
Ab. How long hath this possession held the man.
Adr. This weeke he hath beene heavie, sowre sad,
And much different from the man he was:
But till this afternoone his passion
Ne re broke into extremity of rage.
Ab. Hath he not lost much wealth by wrack of sea,
Buried some deere friend, hath not else his eye
Stray'd his affection in vnlawfull loue,
A sinne prevailing much in youthfull men,
Who give their eies the liberty of gazing.
Which of these sorrowes is he subject too?
Adr. To none of these, except it be the last,
Namely, some loue that drew him oft from home.
Ab. You should for that haue reprehended him.
Adr. Why so I did.
Ab. I but not rough enough.
Adr. As roughly as my modestie would let me
Ab. Haply in priuate.
Adr. And in assemblies too.
Ab. I, but not enough.
Adr. It was the copie of our Conference.
In bed he slept not for my vrging it,
At board he fed not for my vrging it
Alone, it was the subject of my Theame:
In company I often glanced it:
Still did I tell him, it was vilde and bad.
Ab. And thereof came it, that the man was mad.
The venome clamors of a jealous woman,
Poisons more deadly then a mad dogges tooth.
It seemes his sleepes were hindred by thy railing,
And therefore comes it that his head is light.
Thou said'st his meates were sauor'd with thy vpbraidings,
Vnquiet meales make ill digestions,
Thereof the raging fire of feuer bred,
And what? a Feuer, but a fit of madnesse?
Thou said'st his sports were hindred by thy brallies
Sweet recreation barr'd, what doth ensue
But moodie and dull melancholly,
Kinsman to grim and comfortlesse despaire,
And at her heeles a huge infectious troope
Of pale distemperatures, and foes to life?
In food, in sport, and life-preserving rest
To be disturb'd, would mad or man, or beast:
The consequence is then, thy jealous fits
Hath scar'd thy husband from the vse of wits.
Luc. She never reprehended him but mildely,
When he demean'd himselfe, rough, rude, and wildly,
Why bearе you these rebukes, and answer not?
Adri. She did bearе me to my owne reproofe,
Good people enter, and lay hold on him.
Ab. No not a creature enters in my house.
Ad. Then let your seruants bring my husband forth
Ab. Neither: he tooke this place for sanctuary,
And it shall priuiledge him from your hands,
Till I haue brought him to his wits again,
Or loose my labour in assaying it.
Adr. I will attend my husband, be his nurse,
Diet his sicknesse, for it is my Office,
And will haue no attorney but my selfe,
And therefore let me haue him home with me.
Ab. Be patient, for I will not let him stirre,
Till I haue vs'd the approoued meanes I haue.
With wholsome syrrups, drugges, and holy prayers
To make of him a formall man againe:
It is a branch and parcell of mine oath,
A charitable duties of my order,
Therefore depart, and leaue him heere with me.
Adr. I will not hence, and leaue my husband heere:
And ill it doth beseeme your holinesse
To separate the husband and the wife.
Ab. Be quiet and depart, thou shalt not haue him.
Luc. Complaine vnto the Duke of this indignity
Adr. Come go, I will fall prostrate at his feete,
And neuer rise vntill my teares and prayers
Haue won his grace to come in person hither,
And take perforce my husband from the Abbesse.
Mar. By this I think the Diall points at fiues
Anon I'me sure the Duke himselfe in person
Comes this way to the melancholly vale;
The place of death, and sorrie execution,
Behinde the ditches of the Abbey heere.
Gold. Vpon what cause?
Mar. To see a reuerent Siracusan Merchant,
Who put vnluckily into this Bay
Against the Lawes and Statutes of this Towne,
Beheaded publikely for his offence.
Gold. See where they come, we wil beholds his death
Luc. Kneele to the Duke before he passe the Abbey.

Enter the Duke of Ephesus, and the Merchant of Siracusa bare head, with the Headsman, & other Officers.

Duke. Yet once againe proclaime it publikely,
If any friend will pay the summe for him,
He shall not die, so much we tender him.
Adr. Iustice most sacred Duke against the Abbesse.
Duke. She is a vertuous and a reuerend Lady,
It cannot be that she hath done thee wrong.
Adr. May it please your Grace, Antipholus my husband,
Who I made Lord of me, and all I had,
At your important Letters this ill day,
A most outragious fit of madnesse tooke him:
That desp'rately he hurried through the streete,
With him his bondman, all as mad as he,
Doing displeasure to the Citizens,
By rushing in their houses: bearing thence
Rings, Iewels, any thing his rage did like.
Once did I get him bound, and sent him home,
Whil'st to take order for the wrongs I went,
That heere and there his furie had committed,
Anon I wot not, by what strong escape
He broke from those that had the guard of him,
And with his mad attendant and himselfe,
Each one with irefull passion, with drawne swords
Met vs againe, and madly bent on vs
Chas'd vs away: till raising of more aide
We came againe to binde them: then they fled
Into this Abbey, whether we pursu'd them,
And heere the Abbesse shuts the gates on vs,
And will not suffer vs to fetch him out,
Nor send him forth, that we may beare him hence.

Therefore most gracious Duke with thy command,
Let him be brought forth, and borne hence for helpe.

Duke. Long since thy husband serv'd me in my wars
And I to thee ingag'd a Princes word,
When thou didst make him Master of thy bed,
To do him all the grace and good I could.
Go some of you, knocke at the Abbey gate,
And bid the Lady Abbesse come to me:
I will determine this before I stirre.

Enter a Messenger

Oh Mistris, Mistrse, shift and save your selfe,
My Master and his man are both broke loose,
Beaten the Maids a-row, and bound the Doctor,
Whose beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire,
And ever as it blaz'd, they threw on him
Great pailes of puddled myre to quench the haire;
My Master preaches patience to him, and the while
His man with Cizers nickes him like a foole:
And sure (unlesse you send some present helpe)
Betweene them they will kill the Conjurer.

Adr. Peace fools, thy Master and his man are here,
And that is false thou dost report to us.

Mess. Mistris, upon my life I tel you true,
I have not breath'd almost since I did see it.
He cries for you, and vowes if he can take you,
To scorch your face, and to disfigure you:

Cry within.

Harke, harke, I heare him Mistris: flie, be gone.

Duke. Come stand by me, feare nothing: guard with Halberds.

Adr. Ay me, it is my husband: witnesse you,
That he is borne about invisible,
Even now we hous'd him in the Abbey heere.
And now he's there, past thought of humane reason.

Enter Antipholus, and E. Dromio of Ephesus.

2. Ant. Justice most gracious Duke, oh grant me justice,
Even for the service that long since I did thee,
When I bestrid thee in the warres, and tooke
Deepe scarres to save thy life; even for the blood
That then I lost for thee, now grant me justice.

Mar. Fa. Unlesse the feare of death doth make me dote, I see my sonne Antipholus and Dromio.

E. Ant. Justice (sweet Prince) against ye Woman there:
She whom thou gav'st to me to be my wife;
That hath abused and dishonored me,
Even in the strength and height of injurie:
Beyond imagination is the wrong
That she this day hath shamelesse throwne on me.

Duke. Discover how, and thou shalt finde me just.

E. Ant. This day (great Duke) she shut the doores upon me,
While she with Harlots feasted in my house.

Duke. A grievous fault: say woman, didst thou so?

Adr. No my good Lord. My selfe, he, and my sister,
To day did dine together: so helpe my soule,
As this is false he burthens me withall.

Luc. Nere may I looke on day, nor sleepe on night,
But she tels to your Highnesse simple truth.

Gold. O periur'd woman! They are both forsworne,
In this the Madman justly chargeth them.

E. Ant. My Liege, I am advised what I say,
Neither disturbed with the effect of Wine,
Nor headie-rash provoak'd with raging ire,
Albeit my wrongs might make one wiser mad.
This woman lock'd me out this day from dinner;
That Goldsmith there, were he not pack'd with her,
Could witnesse it: for he was with me then,
Who parted with me to go fetch a Chaine,
Promising to bring it to the Porpentine,
Where Balthasar and I did dine together.
Our dinner done, and he not comming thither,
I went to seeke him. In the street I met him,
And in his companie that Gentleman
There did this perjur'd Goldsmith sweare me downe,
That I this day of him receiv'd the Chaine,
Which God he knowes, I saw not. For the which,
He did arrest me with an Officer.
I did obey, and sent my Peisant home
For certaine Ducats: he with none return'd.
Then fiercely I bespoke the Officer
To go in person with me to my house.
By th'way, we met my wife, her sister, and a rabble more
Of vile Confederates: Along with them
They brought one Pinch, a hungry lean-face'd Villaine;
A meere Anatomie, a Mountebanke,
A thred-bare lugler, and a Fortune-teller,
A needy-hollow-ey'd-sharpe-looking-wretch;
A living dead man. This pernicious slave,
Forsooth tooke on him as a Conjurer:
And gazing in mine eyes, feeling my pulse,
And with no-face (as 'twere) out-facing me,
Cries out, I was possest. Then altogether
They fell upon me, bound me, bore me thence,
And in a darke and dankish vault at home
There left me and my man, both bound together,
Till gnawing with my teeth my bonds in sunder,
I gain'd my freedome; and immediately
Ran hether to your Grace, whom I beseech
To give me ample satisfaction
For these deepe shames, and great indignities.

Gold. My Lord, in truth, thus far I witnes with him:
That he din'd not at home, but was lock'd out.

Duke. But had he such a Chaine of thee, or no?

Gold. He had my Lord, and when he ran in heere,
These people saw the Chaine about his necke.

Mar. Besides, I will be sworne these eares of mine,
Heard you confesse you had the Chaine of him,
After you first forswore it on the Mart,
And thereupon I drew my sword on you,
And then you fled into this Abbey heere,
From whence I thinke you are come by Miracle.

E. Ant. I never came within these Abbey wals,
Nor ever didst thou draw thy sword on me:
I never saw the Chaine, so helpe me heaven:
And this is false you burthen me withall.

Duke. Why what an intricate impeach is this?
I thinke you all have drunke of Circes cup:
If heere you hous'd him, heere he would have bin,
If he were mad, he would not pleade so coldly:
You say he din'd at home, the Goldsmith heere
Denies that saying. Sirra, what say you?

E. Dro. Sir he din'de with her there, at the Porpentine.

Cur. He did, and from my finger snatche that Ring.

E. Ant. 'Tis true (my Liege) this Ring I had of her.

Duke. Saw'st thou him enter at the Abbey heere?

Curt. As sure (my Liege) as I do see your Grace.

Duke. Why this is strange: Go call the Abbesse hither.
I thinke you are all mazed, or starke mad.

Exit

Exit one to the Abbesse.

Fa. Most mighty Duke, vouchsafe me speak a word:
Haply I see a friend will save my life,
And pay the sum that may deliver me.
Duke. Speake freely Syracusian what thou wilt.
Fath. Is not your name sir call'd Antipholus?
And is not that your bondman Dromio?
E. Dro. Within this houre I was his bondman sir,
But he a thanke him gnaw'd in two my cords,
Now am I Dromio, and his man, vnbound.
Fath. I am sure you both of you remember me.
Dro. Our selues we do remember sir by you:
For lately we were bound as you are now.
You are not Pinches patient, are you sir?
Father. Why looke you strange on me? you know me well.
E. Ant. I never saw you in my life till now.
Fa. Oh! griefe hath chang'd me since you saw me last,
And careful houres with times deformed hand,
Haue written strange defeatures in my face:
But tell me yet, dost thou not know my voice?
Ant. Neither.
Fa. Dromio, not thou?
Dro. No truest me sir, not I.
Fa. I am sure thou dost?
E. Dromio. I sir, but I am sure I do not, and whersoeuer a man denies, you are now bound to beleeue him.
Fath. Not know my voice, oh times e trennity
Hast thou so crack'd and splitted my poore tongue
In seuen short yeares, that heere my only sonne
Knowes not my feeble key of vnstu'd cares?
Though now this grained face of mine be hid
In sap-consuming Winters drizled snow,
And all the Conduits of my blood froze vp:
Yet hath my night of life some memorie:
My wasting lampes some fading glimmer left;
My dull deafe eares a little vse to heare:
All these old witnesses, I cannot erre.
Tell me, thou art my sonne Antipholus.
Ant. I never saw my Father in my life.
Fa But seuen yeares since, in Syracuse boy
Thou know'st we parted, but perhaps my sonne,
Thou sham'st to acknowledge me in miserie.
Ant. The Duke, and all that know me in the City,
Can witnesse with me that it is not so.
I ne're saw Syracuse in my life
Duke. I tell thee Syracusian, twentie yeares
Haue I bin Patron to Antipholus,
During which time, he ne're saw Syracuse:
I see thy age and dangers make thee dote.

Enter the Abbesse with Antipholus Syracuse, and Dromio Sir.

Abbesse. Most mightie Duke, behold a man much wrong'd.
All gather to see them.
Adr. I see two husbands, or mine eyes deceiue me.
Duke. One of these men is genius to the other:
And so of these, which is the naturall man,
And which the spirit? Who deciphers them?
S. Dromio. I sir am Dromio, command him away.
E. Dro. I sir am Dromio, pray let me stay.
S. Ant. Egeon art thou not? or else his ghost.
S. Drom. O my olde Master, who hath bound him heere?
Abb. Who ever bound him, I will loose his bonds,
And gaine a husband by his liberti e:
Speake olde Egeon, if thou bee'st th e man
That hadst a wife once call'd Æmilia,
That bore thee at a burthen two fa ire sonnes?
Oh if thou bee'st the same Egeon, speake:
And speake vnto the same Æmilia.
Duke. Why heere begins his Morning storie right:
These two Antipholus, these two so like,
And these two Dromio s, one in semblance:
Besides her vrging of her wracke at sea,
These are the parents to these children,
Which accidentally are met together.
Fa. If I dreame not, thou art Æmilia,
If thou art she, tell me, where is that sonne
That floated with thee on the fatall rafte.
Abb. By men of Epidamnum, he, and I,
And the twin Dromio, all were taken vp;
But by and by, rude Fishermen of Corinth
By force tooke Dromio, and my sonne from them,
And me they left with those of Epidamnum.
What then became of them, I cannot tell:
I, to this fortune that you see mee in.
Duke. Antipholus thou cam'st from Corinth first.
S. Ant. No sir, not I, I came from Syracuse.
Duke. Stay, stand apart, I know not which is which.
E. Ant. I came from Corinth my most gracious Lord
E. Dro. And I with him.
E. Ant. Brought to this Town by that most famous Warriour,
Duke Menaphon, your most renowned Vncle.
Adr. Which of you two did dine with me to day?
S. Ant. I, gentle Mistris.
Adr. And are not you my husband?
E. Ant. No, I say nay to that.
S. Ant. And so do I, yet did she call me so:
And this faire Gentlewoman her sister heere
Did call me brother. What I told you then,
I hope I shall haue leisure to make good,
If this be not a dreame I see and heare.
Goldsmith. That is the Chaine sir, which you had of mee.
S. Ant. I think it be sir, I denie it not.
E. Ant. And you sir for this Chaine arrested me.
Gold. I think I did sir, I deny it not.
Adr. I sent you money sir to be your baile
By Dromio, but I think he brought it not.
E. Dro No, none by me.
S. Ant. This purse of Duckets I receiu'd from you,
And Dromio my man did bring them me:
I see we still did meete each others man,
And I was tane for him, and he for me,
And thereupon these errors are arose.
E. Ant. These Duckets pawne I for my father heere.
Duke. It shall not neede, thy father hath his life.
Cur. Sir I must haue that Diamond from you.
E. Ant. There take it, and much thanks for my good cheere.
Abb. Renowned Duke, vouchsafe to take the paines
To go with vs into the Abbey heere
And heare at large discoursed all our fortunes
And all that are assembled in this place:
That by this sympathized one daies error
Haue suffer'd wrong. Goe, keepe vs companie.
And

And we shall make full satisfaction.
Thirtie three yeares have I but gone in travaile,
Of you my sonnes, and till this present houre
My heavie burthen are delivered:
The Duke my husband, and my children both,
And you the Kalenders of their Nativitie,
Go to a Gossips feast, and go with mee,
After so long greefe such Nativitie.
Duke. With all my heart, Ile Gossip at this feast.

Exeunt omnes. Manet the two Dromio's and two Brothers.

S.Dro. Mast. shall I fetch your stuffe from shipboard?
E.An.Dromio, what stuffe of mine hast thou embarkt
S.Dro. Your goods that lay at host fir in the Centaur.
S.Ant. He speakes to me, I am your master Dromio.
Come go with vs, wee'l looke to that anon,
Embrace thy brother there, rejoyce with him. Exeunt
S.Dro. There is a fat friend at your masters house,
That kitchin'd me for you to day at dinner:
She now shall be my sister, not my wife.
E.D. Methinks you are my glasse, & not my brother:
I see by you, I am a sweet-fac'd youth,
Will you walke in to see their gossipping?
S.Dro. Not I sir, you are my elder.
E.Dro. That's a question, how shall we trie it.
S.Dro. Wee'l draw Cuts for the Signior, till then, lead thou first
E.Dro. Nay then thus:
We came into the world like brother and brother:
And now let's go hand in hand, not one before another.
Exeunt

FINIS.

Much adoe about Nothing.

Actus primus, Scena prima.

Enter Leonato Governour of Messina, Innogen his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his Neece, with a messenger.

Leonato.

LEarne in this Letter, that Don Peter of Arragon, comes this night to Messina.

Mess. He is very neere by this: he was not three Leagues off when I left him.

Leon. How many Gentlemen have you lost in this action?

Mess. But few of any sort, and none of name.

Leon. A victorie is twice itselfe, when the atchiever brings home full numbers: I finde heere, that Don Peter hath bestowed much honor on a young Florentine, called Claudio.

Mess. Much deserv'd on his part, and equally remembred by Don Pedro, he hath borne himselfe beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a Lambe, the feats of a Lion, he hath indeede better bettred expectation, then you must expect of me to tell you how.

Leo. He hath an Vncle heere in Messina, will be very much glad of it.

Mess. I have alreadie delivered him letters, and there appeares much ioy in him, even so much, that ioy could not shew it selfe modest enough, without a badge of bitternesse.

Leo. Did he breake out into teares?

Mess. In great measure.

Leo. A kinde overflow of kindnesse, there are no faces truer, then those that are so wash'd, how much better is it to weepe at ioy, then to ioy at weeping?

Bea. I prey you, is Signior Montanto return'd from the warres, or no?

Mess. I know none of that name, Lady, there was none such in the armie of any sort.

Leon. What is he that you aske for Neece?

Hero. My cousin meanes Signior Benedick of Padua.

Mess. O he's return'd, and as pleasant as ever he was.

Bea. He set up his bils here in Messina, & challeng'd Cupid at the Flight: and my Vncles foole reading the Challenge, subscrib'd for Cupid, and challeng'd him at the Burbolts. I prey you, how many hath he kil'd and eaten in these warres? But how many hath he kill'd? for indeed, I promis'd to eate all of his killing.

Leon. 'Faith Neece, you tax Signior Benedicke too much, but he'l be meet with you, I doubt it not.

Mess. He hath done good service Lady in these wars.

Bea. You had musty victuall, and he hath holpe to eate it: he's a very valiant Trencher-man, he hath an excellent stomacke.

Mess. And a good souldier too Lady.

Bea. And a good souldier to a Lady. But what is he to a Lord?

Mess. A Lord to a Lord, a man to a man, stuft with all honourable vertues.

Bea. It is so indeed, he is no lesse then a stuft man: but for the stuffing well, we are all mortall.

Leon. You must not (sir) mistake my Neece, there is a kind of merry war betwixt Signior Benedick, & her: they never meet, but there's a skirmish of wit between them.

Bea. Alas, he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, foure of his five wits went halting off, and now is the whole man govern'd with one: so that if hee have wit enough to keepe himselfe warme, let him beare it for a difference betweene himselfe and his horse: For it is all the wealth that he hath left, to be knowne a reasonable creature. Who is his companion now? He hath every moneth a new sworne brother.

Mess. I'st possible?

Bea. Very easily possible: he weares his faith but as the fashion of his hat, it ever changes with ye next block.

Mess. I see (Lady) the Gentleman is not in your bookes.

Bea. No, and he were, I would burne my study. But I prey you, who is his companion? Is there no young squarer now, that will make a voyage with him to the diavell?

Mess. He is most in the company of the right noble Claudio.

Bea. O Lord, he will hang upon him like a disease: he is sooner caught then the pestilence, and the taker runs presently mad. God helpe the noble Claudio, if hee have caught the Benedick, it will cost him a thousand pound ere he be cur'd.

Mess. I will hold friends with you Lady.

Bea. Do good friend.

Leo. You'l ne're run mad Neece.

Bea. No, not till a hot Ianuary.

Mess. Don Pedro is approach'd.

Enter don Pedro, Claudio, Benedicke, Balthasar, and Iohn the bastard.

Pedro. Good Signior Leonato, you are come to meet your trouble: the fashion of the world is to avoid cost, and you encounter it.

Leon. Never came trouble to my house in the likeness of your Grace: for trouble being gone, comfort should remaine: but when you depart from me, sorrow abides, and happinesse takes his leave.

Pedro. You embrace your charge too willingly: I thinke this is your daughter.

Leonato. Her mother hath many times told me so.

Bened. Were you in doubt that you aske her?

Leonato. Signior Benedicke, no, for then were you a childe.

Pedro. You haue it full Benedicke, we may ghesse by this, what you are, being a man, truely the Lady fathers her selfe: be happie Lady, for you are like an honorable father.

Ben. If Signior Leonato be her father, she would not haue his head on her shoulders for al Messina, as like him as she is.

Bene. I wonder that you will still be talking, signior Benedicke, no body markes you.

Ben. What my deere Ladie Disdaine! are you yet liuing?

Bene. Is it possible Disdaine should die, while shee hath such meete foode to feede it, as Signior Benedicke? Curtesie itselfe must conuert to Disdaine, if you come in her presence.

Bene. Then is curtesie a turne-coate, but it is certaine I am loued of all Ladies, only you excepted: and I would I could finde in my heart that I had not a hard heart, for truely I loue none.

Bene. A deere happinesse to women, they would else haue beene troubled with a pernitious Suter, I thanke God and my cold blood, I am of your humour for that, I had rather heare my Dog barke at a Crow, than a man sweare he loues me.

Bene. God keepe your Ladiship still in that minde, so some Gentlemen or other shall scape a predestinate scratcht face.

Bene. Scratching could not make it worse, and 'twere such a face as yours were.

Bene. Well, you are a rare Parrot teacher.

Bene. A bird of my tongue, is better than a beast of your.

Ben. I would my horse had the speed of your tongue, and so good a continuer, but keepe your way a Gods name, I haue done.

Bene. You alwaies end with a Iades tricks, I know an of old.

Pedro. This is the summe of all: Leonato, signior Claudio, and signior Benedicke; my deere friend Leonato, hath inuited you all, I tell him we shall stay here, at the least a moneth, and he heartily prayes some occasion may detaine vs longer: I dare sweare he is no hypocrite, but prayes from his heart.

Leon. If you sweare, my Lord, you shall not be forsworne, let mee bid you welcome, my Lord, being reconciled to the Prince your brother: I owe you all duetie.

Iohn. I thanke you, I am not of many words, but I thanke you.

Leon. Please it your grace leade on?

Pedro. Your hand Leonato, we will goe together.

Exeunt. Manet Benedicke and Claudio.

Claud. Benedicke, didst thou note the daughter of signior Leonato?

Bene. I noted her not, but I looke on her.

Claud. Is she not a modest yong Ladie?

Bene. Doe you question me as an honest man should doe, for my simple true iudgement? or would you haue me speake after my custome, as being a professed tyrant to their sexe?

Claud. No, I pray thee speake in sober iudgement.

Bene. Why yfaith me thinks shee's too low for a hie praise, too browne for a faire praise, and too little for a great praise, onely this commendation I can affoord her, that were shee other then she is, she were vnhandsome, and being no other, but as she is, I doe not like her.

Claud. Thou think'st I am in sport, I pray thee tell me truely how thou lik'st her.

Bene. Would you haue her, that you enquier after her?

Claud. Can the world buie such a iewell?

Ben. Yea, and a case to put it into, but speake you this with a sad brow? Or doe you play the flowting iacke, to tell vs Cupid is a good Hare-finder, and Vulcan a rare Carpenter: Come, in what key shall a man take you to goe in the song?

Claud. In mine eie, she is the sweetest Ladie that ever I looke on.

Bene. I can see yet without spectacles, and I see no such matter: there's her cosin, and she were not possest with a furie, exceedes her as much in beautie, as the first of Maie doth the last of December: but I hope you haue no intent to turne husband, haue you?

Claud. I would scarce trust my selfe, though I had sworne the contrarie, if Hero would be my wife.

Bene. If come to this? in faith hath not the world one man but he will weare his cap with suspition? shall I neuer see a batchelor of three score again? goe to yfaith, and thou wilt needes thrust thy neche into a yoke, weare the print of it, and sigh away sondaies: looke, don Pedro is returned to seeke you.

Enter don Pedro, Iohn the bastard.

Pedr. What secret hath held you here, that you followed not to Leonatos?

Bened. I would your Grace would constraine mee to tell.

Pedro. I charge thee on thy allegeance.

Ben. You heare, Count Claudio, I can be secret as a dumbe man, I would haue you thinke so (but on my allegiance, marke you this, on my allegiance) hee is in loue, With who? now that is your Graces part: marke how short his answere is, with Hero, Leonatos short daughter.

Claud. If this were so, so were it vttred.

Bened. Like the old tale, my Lord, it is not so, nor 'twas not so: but indeede, God forbid it should be so.

Claud. If my passion change not shortly, God forbid it should be otherwise.

Pedro. Amen, if you loue her, for the Ladie is verie well worthie.

Claud. You speake this to fetch me in, my Lord.

Pedr. By my troth I speake my thoughts.

Claud. And in faith, my Lord, I spoke mine.

Bened. And by my two faiths and troths, my Lord, I speake mine.

Claud. That I loue her, I feele.

Pedr. That she is worthie, I know.

Bened. That I neither feele how shee should be loued, nor know how shee should be worthie, is the opinion that fire cannot melt out of me, I will die in it at the stake.

Pedr. Thou wast ever an obstinate heretique in the despight of Beautie.

Claud. And never could maintaine his part, but in the force of his will.

Bene. That a woman conceiued me, I thanke her: that she brought me vp, I likewise giue her most humble thanks; but that I will haue a recheate winded in my forehead, or hang my bugle in an inuisible baldricke, all women shall pardon me: because I will not do them the wrong to mistrust any, I will doe my selfe the right to trust none: and the fine is, (for the which I may goe the finer) I will liue a Batchellor.

Pedro. I shall see thee ere I die, looke pale with loue.

Bene. With anger, with sicknesse, or with hunger, my Lord, not with loue: prouse that ever I loose more blood with loue, then I will get agame with drinking, picke out mine eyes with a Ballet-makers penne, and hang me vp at the doore of a brothel-house for the signe of blinde Cupid.

Pedro. Well, if ever thou doost fall from this faith, thou wilt prouse a notable argument.

Bene. If I do, hang me in a bottle like a Cat, & shoot at me, and he that hit's me, let him be clapt on the shoulder, and cal'd Adam

Pedro. Well, as time shall trie: In time the sauage Bull doth beare the yoake.

Bene. The sauage bull may, but if ever the sensible Benedick bare it, pluck off the bulles horns, and set them in my forehead, and let me be vildely painted, and in such great Letters as they write, heere is good horse to hire: let them signifie vnder my signe, here you may see Benedick the married man.

Claud. If this should ever happen, thou wouldst bee horne mad.

Pedro. Nay, if Cupid haue not spent all his Quiuer in Venice, thou wilt quake for this shortly.

Bene. I looke for an earthquake too then.

Pedro. Well, you will temporize with the houres, in the meane time, good Signior Benedick, repaire to Leonato, commend me to him, and tell him I will not fail him at supper, for indeede he hath made great preparation.

Bene. I haue stomacke enough in me for such an Embassage, and so I commit you.

Claud. To the tuition of God. From my house, if I had it.

Pedro. The sixt of July. Your loving friend, Benedick.

Bene. Nay mocke not, mocke not; the body of your discourse is sometime guarded with fragments, and the guardes are but slightly basted on neither, ere you flout old ends any further, examine your conscience, and so I leaue you. Exit.

Claud. My Liege, your Highnesse now may do me good.

Pedro. My loue is thine to teach, teach it but how,
And thou shalt see how apt it is to learne
Any hard Lesson that may do thee good.

Claud. Hath Leonato any sonne my Lord?

Pedro. No childe but Hero, she's his onely heire.
Dost thou affect her Claudio?

Claud. O my Lord,
When you went onward on this ended action,
I look'd vpon her with a souldiers eie,
That lik'd, but had a rougher taske in hand
Then to driue liking to the name of loue:
But now I am return'd, and that warre-thoughts
Haue left their places vacant: in their roomes
Come thronging soft and delicate desires,
All prompting me how faire yong Hero,
Saying I lik'd her ere I went to warre.

Pedro. Thou wilt be like a louer presently,
And tire the hearer with a booke of words:
If thou dost loue faire Hero, cherish it,
And I will breake with her: wast not to this end,
That thou began'st to twist so fine a story?

Claud. How sweetly doe you minister to loue,
That know loues griefe by his complexion!
But lest my liking might too sodaine seeme,
I would haue salu'd it with a longer treatise.

Ped. What need ye bridge much broder then the flood?
The fairest graunt is the necessitie:
Looke what will seruе, is fit: 'tis once, thou loues't,
And I will fit thee with the remedie,
I know we shall haue reuelling to night,
I will assume thy part in some disguise,
And tell faire Hero I am Claudio,
And in her bosome I'le vncloape my heart,
And take her hearing prisoner with the force
And strong incounter of my amorous tale:
Then after, to her father will I breake,
And the conclusion is, shee shall be thine,
In practise let vs put it presently. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato and an old man, brother to Leonato.

Leo. How now brother, where is my cosen your son: hath he prouided this musicke?

Old. He is very busie about it, but brother, I can tell you newes that you yet dreame not of.

Le. Are they good?

Old. As the events stamps them, but they haue a good couer: they shew well outward. the Prince and Counte Claudio walking in a thick pleached alley in my orchard, were thus ouer-heard by a man of mine: the Prince discouered to Claudio that her loued my niece your daughter, and means to acknowledge it this night in a dance, and if hee found her accordant, hee meant to take the present time by the top, and instantly breake with you of it.

Leo. Hath the fellow any wit that told you this?

Old. A good sharpe fellow, I will send for him, and question him your selfe.

Leo. No, no; wee will hold it as a dreame, till it appeare it selfe: but I will acquaint my daughter withall, that she may be the better prepared for an answer, if peradventure this be true: goe you and tell her of it: cosins, you know what you haue to doe, O I cry you mercie friend, goe you with me and I will vse your skill good cosin haue a care this busie time. Exeunt

Enter Sir Iohn the Bastard, and Conrade his companion

Con. What the good yeere my Lord, why are you thus out of measure sad?

Iohn. There is no measure in the occasion that breeds therefore the sadnesse is without limit.

Con. You should heare reason.

Iohn. And when I haue heard it, what blessing brin geth it?

Con. If not a present remedy, yet a patient sufferance.

Iohn. I wonder that thou (being as thou saist thou art borne vnder Saturne) goest about to apply a moral medicine, to a mortifying mischiefe: I cannot hide what I am: I must bee sad when I haue cause, and smile at no mans iests, eat when I haue stomacke, and wait for no mans leisure: sleepe when I am drowsie, and tend on no mans business, laugh when I am merry, and claw no man in his humor.

Con. Yea, but you must not make the full show of this, till you may doe it without controllment, you haue of late late stood out against your brother, and hee hath tane you newly into his grace, where it is impossible you should take root, but by the faire weather that you make your selfe, it is needful that you frame the season for your owne harvest.

John. I had rather be a canker in a hedge, then a rose in his grace, and it better fits my blood to be disdain'd of all, then to fashion a carriage to rob loue from any: in this (though I cannot be said to be a flattering honest man) it must not be denied but I am a plaine dealing villaine. I am trusted with a muzzell, and enfranchisde with a clog, therefore I have decreed, not to sing in my cage: if I had my mouth, I would bite: if I had my liberty, I would do my liking. in the meane time, let me be that I am, and seeke not to alter me.

Con. Can you make no vse of your discontent?

John. I will make all vse of it, for I vse it onely. Who comes here? what newes Borachio?

Enter Borachio.

Bor. I came yonder from a great supper, the Prince your brother is royally entertained by Leonato, and I can give you intelligence of an intended marriage.

John. Will it serue for my Model to build mischiefe on? What is hee for a foole that betrothes himselfe to vnquietnesse?

Bor. Marry it is your brothers right hand.

John. Who, the most exquisite Claudio?

Bor. Even he!

John. A proper squire, and who, and who, which way lookes he?

Bor. Marry on Hero, the daughter and Heire of Leonato.

John. A very forward March-chicke, how came you to this?

Bor. Being entertain'd for a perfumer, as I was smoaking a musty roome, comes me the Prince and Claudio, hand in hand in sad conference: I whipt behind the Arras, and there heard it agreed vpon, that the Prince should woo Hero for himselfe, and having obtain'd her, give her to Count Claudio.

John. Come, come, let vs thither, this may prouc food to my displeasure, that young start-vp hath all the glorie of my overthrow: if I can crosse him any way, I bleeke my selfe every way, you are both sure, and will assist me?

Con. To the death my Lord.

John. Let vs to the great supper, their cheere is the greater that I am subdued, would the Cooke were of my minde: shall we goe prouc whats to be done?

Bor. We'l wait vpon your Lordship.

Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Leonato, his brother, his wife, Hero his daughter, and Beatrice his niece, and a kinsman.

Leonato. Was not Count John here at supper?

Brother. I saw him not.

Beatrice. How tartly that Gentleman looks, I never can see him, but I am heart-burn'd an houre after.

Hero. He is of a very melancholy disposition.

Beatrice. Hee were an excellant man that were made just in the mid-way betweene him and Benedicke, the one is too like an image and saies nothing, and the other too like my Ladies eldest sonne, euermore tatling

Leon. Then half signior Benedicke tongue: in Counte John's mouth, and half Count John's melancholy in Signior Benedicke face.

Beat. With a good legge, and a good foot vncle, and money enough in his purse, such a man would winne any woman in the world, if he could get her good will.

Leon. By my troth Neece, thou wilt neue get thee a husband, if thou be so shrewd of thy tongue.

Brother. Infaith shee's too curst.

Beat. Too curst is more then curst, I shall lessen Gods sending that way: for it is said, God sendes curst Cow short hornes, but to a Cow too curst he sendes none.

Leon. So, by being too curst, God will send you no hornes.

Beat. Iust, if he send me no husband, for the which blessing, I am at him vpon my knees every morning and euening: Lord, I could not endure a husband with a beard on his face, I had rather lie in the woollen.

Leonato. You may light vpon a husband that hath no beard.

Beatrice. What should I doe with him? dresse him in my apparell, and make him my waiting gentlewoman? he that hath a beard, is more then a youth: and he that hath no beard, is lesse then a man: and he that is more then a youth, is not for me: and he that is lesse then a man, I am not for him: therefore I will euen take sixepence in earnest of the Berrord, and leade his Apes into hell.

Leon. Well then, goe you into hell.

Beat. No, but to the gate, and there will the Deuill meete me like an old Cuckold with hornes on his head, and say get you to heauen Beatrice, get you to heauen, heere's no place for you maids, so deliuer I vp my Apes, and away to S. Peter: for the heauens, he shewes me where the Bachellers sit, and there lie we as merry as the day is long.

Brother. Well neece, I trust you will be rul'd by your father.

Beatrice. Yes faith, it is my cosens duetie to make curtsie, and say, as it please you: but yet for all that cosin, let him be a handsome fellow, or else make an other curtsie, and say, father, as it please me.

Leonato. Well neece, I hope to see you one day fitted with a husband.

Beatrice. Not till God make men of some other metall then earth, would it not grieue a woman to be ouermastred with a peece of valiant dust? to make account of her life to a clod of wayward marle? no vncle, ile nome: Adams sonnes are my brethren, and truly I hold it a sinne to match in my kinred.

Leon. Daughter, remember what I told you, if the Prince doe solicit you in that kinde, you know your answere.

Beatrice. The fault will be in the musicke cosin, if you be not wood in good time: if the Prince bee too importune, tell him here is measure in every thing, & so dance out the answer, for hearke me Hero, wooing, wedding, & repenting, is as a Scotch iigge, a measure, and a cinquepace: the first time is hot and hasty like a Scotch iigge (and full as fantasticall) the wedding mannerly modest, (as a measure) full of state & antichemery, and then comes repentance, and with his bad legs falls into the cinquepace faster and faster, till he sinkes into his grave.

Leonato.

Leonato. Coldn you apprehend passing strangely.

Beatrice. I have a good eye vackie, I can see a Church by daylight.

Leon. The maskers are entring brother, make good roome.

Enter Prince, Pedro, Claudio, and Benedicke, and Balthasar, or dumbe John, Musicks with a drum.

Pedro. Lady, will you walke about with your friend?

Hero. So you walke softly, and looke sweetly, and say nothing, I am yours for the walke, and especially when I walke away.

Pedro. With me in your company.

Hero. I may say so when I please.

Pedro. And when please you to say so?

Hero. When I like your favour, for God defend the Lute should be like the case.

Pedro. My visor is Philemons roofe, within the house is Love.

Hero. Why then your visor should be thatche.

Pedro. Speake low if you speake Love.

Bene. Well, I would you did like me

Marg. So would not I for your owne sake, for I have many ill qualities.

Bene. Which is one?

Marg. I say my prayers aloud.

Bene. I love you the better, the hearers may cry Amen.

Marg. God match me with a good dancer.

Balth. Amen.

Marg. And God keepe him out of my sight when the dancers dance: answer Clarke.

Balth. No more words the Clarke is answered.

Vrsula. I know you well enough, you are Signior Antonio.

Anth. At a word, I am not.

Vrsula. I know you by the waggling of your head.

Anth. To tell you true, I counterfeit him.

Vrsu. You could never doe him so ill well, unlesse you were the very man: here's his dry hand up & down, you are he, you are he.

Anth. At a word I am not.

Vrsula. Come, come, doe you thinke I doe not know you by your excellent wit? can verone hide a selfe? goe to, mumme, you are he, graces will appeare, and there's an end.

Bent. Will you not tell me who told you so?

Bene. No, you shall pardon me.

Bent. Nor will you not tell me who you are?

Bene. Not now.

Bent. That I was disdainfull, and that I had my good wit out of the hundred merry tales: well, this was Signior Benedicke that said so.

Bene. What's he?

Bent. I am sure you know him well enough.

Bene. Not I, believe me.

Bent. Did he never make you laugh?

Bene. I pray you what is he?

Bent. Why he is the Princes jester, a very dull foole, onely his gifts, in devising impossible slanders, none but Libertines delight in him, and the commendation is not in his witte, but in his villanie, for he both pleaseth men and angers them, and then they laugh at him, and beat him: I am sure he is in the Flesh, I would he had beaten dee one.

Bene. When I know the Gentleman, Ile tell him what you say.

Bene. Do, do, he'l but breake a comparison or two on me, which peradventure (not markt, or not laugh'd at) strikes him into melancholly, and then there's a Partridge wing saved, for the foole will eate no supper that night. We must follow the Leaders.

Bene. In every good thing.

Bene. Nay, if they lead to any ill, I will leave them at the next turning. Exeunt

Musicke for the dance.

John. Sure my brother is amorous on Hero, and hath withdrawne her father to breake with him about it: the Ladies follow her, and but one visor remaines.

Berachio. And that is Claudio, I know him by his bearing.

John. Are not you Signior Benedicke?

Clau. You know me well, I am he.

John. Signior, you are verie neere my Brother in his love, he is enamoured on Hero, I pray you dissuade him from her, she is no equall for his birth: you may do the part of an honest man in it.

Claudio. How know you he loves her?

John. I heard him sweare his affection.

Bar. So did I too, and he swore he would marrie her to night.

John. Come, let us to the banquet. Exeunt Clau.

Clau. Thus answer I in name of Benedicke,
But heare thou ill newes with the eares of Claudio:
'Tis certaine so, the Princewoes for himselfe:
Friendship is constant in all other things,
Save in the Office and affaires of love:
Therefore all hearts in love use their owne tongues.
Let every eye negotiate for itselfe,
And trust no Agent: for beauties is a witch,
Against whose charmes, faith melteth into blood:
This is an accident of hourely proofe,
Which I mistrusted not. Farewell therefore Hero.

Enter Benedicke.

Ben. Count Claudio.

Clau. Yea, the same.

Ben. Come, will you go with me?

Clau. Whither?

Ben. Even to the next Willow, about your own businesse, Count. What fashion will you weare the Garland off? About your neeke, like an Vsurers chaine? Or under your arme, like a Lieutenants scarfe? You must weare it one way, for the Prince hath got your Hero.

Clau. I wish him joy of her.

Ben. Why that's spoken like an honest Drouier, so they sell Bullocks: but did you thinke the Prince would have served you thus?

Clau. I pray you leave me.

Ben. Ho now you strike like the blindman, 'twas the boy that stole your meate, and you'l beat the post.

Clau. If it will not be, Ile leave you. Exit

Ben. Alas poore hurt fowle, now will he creepe into sedges: But that my Ladie Beatrice should know me, & not know me: the Princes foole! Hah? It may be I goe under that title, because I am merie: yea but so I am apt to do my selfe wrong: I am not so reputed, it is the base (though bitter) disposition of Beatrice, that put's the world into her person, and so gives me out: well, Ile be revenged as I may.

Enter the Prince.

Pedro. Now Signior, where's the Count, did you see him?

Bene. Troth my Lord, I haue played the part of Lady Fame. I found him heere as melancholy as a Lodge in a Warren, I told him, and I thinke, told him true, that your grace had got the will of this young Lady. and I offered him my company to a willow tree, either to make him a garland, as being forsaken, or to binde him a rod, as being worthy to be whipt.

Pedro. To be whipt, what's his fault?

Bene. The flat transgression of a Schoole-boy, who being euer-loyed with finding a birds nest, shewes it his companion, and he steales it.

Pedro. Wilt thou make a trust, a transgression? the transgression is in the stealer.

Ben. Yet it had not beene amiss the rod had beene made, and the garland too, for the garland he might haue worne himselfe, and the rod bee might haue bestowed on you, who (as I take it) haue stolne his birds nest.

Pedro. I will but teach them to sing, and restore them to the owner.

Bene. If their singing answer your saying, by my faith you say honestly.

Pedro. The Lady Beatrice hath a quarrell to you, the Gentleman that danst with her, told her shee is much wrong'd by you.

Bene. O she misuide me past the endurance of a block: an oake but with one greene leafe on it, would haue answered her: my very visor began to assume life, and scold with her: shee told mee, not thinking I had beene my selfe, that I was the Princes Iester, and that I was duller than a great thaw, huddling iest vpon iest, with such impossible conuiance vpon me, that I stood like a man at a marke, with a whole army shooting at me: shee speakes poynyards, and every word stabbes: if her breath were as terrible as termination, there were no living neere her, she would infect to the north starre: I would not marry her, though shee were indowed with all that Adam had left him before he transgrest, shee would haue made Hercules haue turned spit, yea, and haue cleft his club to make the fire too: come, talke not of her, you shall finde her the infernall Ate in good apparell. I would to God some scholler would conjure her, for certainely while shee is heere, a man may liue as quiet in hell, as in a sanctuary, and people sinne vpon purpose, because they would goe thither, so indeed all disquiet, horror, and perturbation follows her.

Enter Claudio and Beatrice, Leonato, Hero.

Pedro. Looke heere she comes.

Bene. Will your Grace command mee any service to the worlds end? I will goe on the slightest arrand now to the Antypodes that you can deuise to send me on: I will fetch you a tooth-picker now from the farthest inch of Asia: bring you the length of Prester Iohns foot: fetch you a hayre off the great Cham's beard: doe you any embassage to the Pigmies, rather than hold three words conference, with this Harpy: you haue no employment for me?

Pedro. None, but to desire your good company.

Bene. O God sir, heeres a dish I loue not, I cannot indure this Lady tongue. Exit.

Pedr. Come Lady, come, you haue lost the heart of Signior Benedicke.

Beatr. Indeed my Lord, hee lent it me a while, and I gaue him vse for it, a double heart for a single one, marry once before he wonne it of me, with false dice, therefore your Grace may well say I haue lost it.

Pedro. You haue put him downe Lady, you haue put him downe.

Beat. So I would not he should do me, my Lord, least I should prouoke the mother of fooles: I haue brought Count Claudio, whom you sent me to seeke.

Pedro. Why how now Count, wherfore are you sad?

Claud. Not sad my Lord.

Pedro. How then? sicke?

Claud. Neither, my Lord.

Beat. The Count is neither sad, nor sicke, nor merry, nor well: but ciuill Count, ciuill as an Orange, and something of a iealous complexion.

Pedro. I faith Lady, I thinke your blazon to be true, though Ile be sworne, if hee be so, his conceit is false: heere Claudio, I haue wooed in thy name, and faire Hero is won, I haue broke with her father, and his good will obtained, name the day of marriage, and God giue thee ioy.

Leona. Count, take of me my daughter, and with her my fortunes: his grace hath made the match, & all grace say, Amen to it.

Beatr. Speake Count, tis your Qu.

Claud. Silence is the perfectest Herault of ioy. I were but little happy if I could say, how much? Lady, as you are mine, I am yours, I giue away my selfe for you, and dost vpon the exchange.

Beat. Speake cosin, or (if you cannot) stop his mouth with a kisse, and let not him speake neither.

Pedro. In faith Lady you haue a merry heart.

Beatr. Yes my Lord I thanke it, poore fools it keepes on the windy side of Care, my cousin tells him in his eare that he is in my heart.

Claud. And so she doth cousin.

Beat. Good Lord for alliance: thus goes every one to the world but I, and I am sun-burn'd, I may sit in a corner and cry, heigh ho for a husband.

Pedro. Lady Beatrice, I will get you one.

Beat. I would rather haue one of your fathers getting: hath your Grace ne're a brother like you? your father got excellent husbands, if a maid could come by them.

Prince. Will you haue me? Lady.

Beat. No, my Lord, vnlesse I might haue another for working-dayes, your Grace is too costly to weare euerie day: but I beseech your Grace pardon mee, I was borne to speake all mirth, and no matter.

Prince. Your silence most offends me, and to be merry, best becomes you, for out of question, you were born in a merry howre.

Beat. No sure my Lord, my Mother cried, but then there was a starre danst, and vnder that was I borne. cousins God giue you ioy.

Leonato. Neece, will you looke to those things I told you of?

Beat. I cry you mercy Vncle, by your Graces pardon.

Exit Beatrice.

Prince. By my troth a pleasant spirited Lady.

Leon. There's little of the melancholy element in her my Lord, she is never sad, but when she sleepes, and not euer sad then, for I haue heard my daughter say, she hath often dreamt of vnhappinesse, and wakt her selfe with laughing.

Pedro. She cannot indure to heare tell of a husband.

Leonato. O, by no meanes, she mocks all her wooers out of suite.

Prince. She were an excellent wife for Benedick.

Leonato. O Lord, my Lord, if they were but a weeke married, married, they would talke themselues madde.

Prince. Counte Claudio, when mean you to goe to Church?

Clau. To morrow my Lord, Time goes on crutches, till Loue haue all his rites.

Leonato. Not till monday, my deare sonne, which is hence a lust seuen night, and a time too briefe too, to haue all things answer minde.

Prince. Come, you shake the head at so long a breathing, but I warrant thee Claudio, the time shall not goe dully by vs, I will in the interim, vndertake one of Hercules labors, which is, to bring Signior Benedicke and the Lady Beatrice into a mountaine of affection, th'one with th'other, I would faine haue it a match, and I doubt not but to fashion it, if you three will but minister such assistance as I shall giue you direction.

Leonato. My Lord, I am for you, though it cost me ten nights watchings.

Claud. And I my Lord.

Prin. And you to gentle Hero?

Hero. I will doe my modest office, my Lord, to helpe my cosin to a good husband.

Prin. And Beatrice is not the vnhopefullest husband that I know: thus farre can I praise him, hee is of a noble straine, of approued valour, and confirm'd honesty, I will teach you how to humour your cosin, that shee shall fall in loue with Benedicke, and I, with your two helpes, will so practise on Benedicke, that in despight of his quicke wit, and his quiddie sportmocke, hee shall fall in loue with Beatrice: if wee can doe this, Cupid is no longer an Archer, his glory shall be ours, for wee are the onely loue-gods, goe in with me, and I will tell you my drift. Exit.

Enter Iohn and Borachio.

Iob. It is so, the Count Claudio shal marry the daughter of Leonato.

Bora. Yea my Lord, but I can crosse it.

Iohn. Any bane, any cross, any impediment, will be medicinable to me, I am sicke in displeasure to him, and whatsoever comes athwart his affection, ranges euenly with mine, how canst thou cross this marriage?

Bor. Not honestly my Lord, but so couertly, that no dishonesty shall appeare in me.

Iohn. Shew me briefly how.

Bor. I thinke I told your Lordship a yeare since, how much I am in the fauour of Margaret, the waiting gentlewoman to Hero.

Iohn. I remember.

Bor. I can at any vnseasonable instant of the night, appoint her to look out at her Ladies chamber window.

Iohn. What life is in that, to be the death of this marriage?

Bor. The poyson of that lies in you to temper, goe you to the Prince your brother, spare not to tell him, that he hath wronged his Honor in marrying the renowned Claudio, whose estimation do you mightily hold vp, to a contaminated stale, such a one as Hero.

Iohn. What proofe shall I make of that?

Bor. Proofe enough, to mislead the Prince, to vexe Claudio, to vndue Hero, and kill Leonato, looke you for any other issue?

Iohn. Only to despight them, I will endeauour any thing.

Bor. Goe then, finde me a meete howre, to draw on Pedro and the Count Claudio alone, tell them that you know that Hero loues me, intend a kinde of zeale both to the Prince and Claudio (as in a loue of your brothers honor who hath made this match) and his friends reputation, who is thus like to be cosen'd with the semblance of a maid, that you haue discouer'd thus: they will scarcely believe this without triall: offer them instances which shall bearе no lesse likelihood, than to see mee at her chamber window, heare me call Margaret, Hero; heare Margaret termе me Claudio, and bring them to see this the very night before the intended wedding, for in the meane time, I will so fashion the matter, that Hero shall be absent, and there shall appeare such seeming truths of Heroes disloyaltie, that iealousie shall be cal'd assurance, and all the preparation ouerthrowne.

Iohn. Grow this to what aduerse issue it can, I will put it in practise: be cunning in the working this, and thy fee is a thousand ducates.

Bor. Be thou constant in the accusation, and my cunning shall not shame me.

Iohn. I will presently goe learne their day of marriage. Exit.

Enter Benedicke alone.

Bene. Boy.

Boy. Signior.

Bene. In my chamber window lies a booke, bring it hither to me in the orchard.

Boy. I am heere already sir. Exit.

Bene. I know that, but I would haue thee hence, and heere again. I doe much wonder, that one man seeing how much another man is a foole, when he dedicates his behaueiours to loue, will after hee hath laught at such shallow follies in others, become the argument of his owne scorne, by falling in loue, & such a man is Claudio. I haue known when there was no musicke with him but the drum and the fife, and now had hee rather heare the tabor and the pipe: I haue knowne when he would haue walkt ten mile afoot, to see a good armor, and now will he lie ten nights awake carving the fashion of a new doblet: he was wont to speake plaine, & to the purpose (like an honest man & a souldier) and now is he turn'd orthography, his words are a very fantastical banquet, iust so many strange dishes: may I be so conuerted, & see with these eyes? I cannot tell, I thinke not: I will not bee sworne, but loue may transforme me to an oyster, but I'le take my oath on it, till he haue made an oyster of me, he shall never make me such a foole: one woman is faire, yet I am well: another is wise, yet I am well: another vertuous, yet I am well: but till all graces be in one woman, one woman shall not come in my grace: rich shee shall be, that's certaine: wise, or I'le none: vertuous, or I'le never cheapen her: faire, or I'le never looke on her: milde, or come not neere me: Noble, or not for an Angell: of good discourse: an excellent Musitian, and her haire shal be of what colour it please God, hah! the Prince and Monsiour Loue, I will hide me in the Arbor.

Enter Prince, Leonato, Claudio, and Iacke Wilson.

Prin. Come, shall we heare this musicke?

Claud. Yea my good Lord: how still the euening is,
As husht on purpose to grace harmonie.

Prin. See you where Benedicke hath hid himselfe?

Clau. O very well my Lord: the musicke ended,
We'll fit the kid-fox with a penny worth.

Prince. Come Balthasar, we'll heare that song again.

Balth. O good my Lord, taxe not so bad a voyce,
To slander musicke any more then once.

Prin. It is the witnesse still of excellency,

To

To slander Musicke any more then once.

Prince. It is the witnesse still of excellencie,
To put a strange face on his owne perfection,
I pray thee sing, and let me woe no more.

Balth. Because you talke of wooing, I will sing,
Since many a wooer doth commence his suit,
To her he thinkes not worthy, yet he wooes,
Yet shall he sweare he loues.

Prince. Nay prey thee cease,
Or if thou wilt hold longer argument,
Doe it in notes.

Balth. Note this before my notes,
There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

Prince. Why these are very crotchets that he speaks,
Note notes forsooth, and nothing.

Bene. Now diuine sire, now is his soule ransoms, is it not strange that sheepes gins should hale soules out of mens bodies? well, a horse for my money when all's done.

The Song.

Sigh no more Ladies, sigh no more,
Men were deceiuers ever,
One foote in Sea, and one on shore,
To one thing constant never,
Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonnie,
Conuerting all your sounds of woe,
Into hey nonny nonny.

Sing no more ditties, sing no mo,
Of dumps so dull and heavy,
The fraud of men were ever so,
Since summer first was leavy,
Then sigh not so, &c.

Prince. By my troth a good song.

Balth. And an ill singer, my Lord.

Prince. Ha, no, no faith, thou singst well enough for a shift.

Ben. And he had been a dog that should howle thus, they would haue hang'd him, and I prey God his bad voyce bode no mischiefe. I had as liefe haue heard the night-raven, come what plague could haue come after it.

Prince. Yea marry, dost thou heare Balthasar? I prey thee get vs some excellent musick: for to morrow night we would haue it at the Lady Heroes chamber window.

Balth. The best I can, my Lord. Exit Balthasar.

Prince. Do so, farewell. Come hither Leonato, what was it you told me of to day, that your Niece Beatrice was in loue with signior Benedicke?

Cla. O I, stalke on, stalke on, the fowle sits. I did neuer thinke that Lady would haue loued any man.

Leon. No, nor I neither, but most wonderful, that she should so dote on Signior Benedicke, whom shee hath in all outward behaviours seemed ever to abhorre.

Bene. Is't possible? sits the wind in that corner?

Leo. By my troth my Lord, I cannot tell what to thinke of it, but that she loues him with an inraged affection, it is past the infinite of thought.

Prince. May be she doth but counterfeit.

Claud. Faith like enough.

Leon. O God! counterfeit? there was never counterfeit of passion, came so neere the life of passion as she discouers it.

Prince. Why what effects of passion shewes she?

Claud. Baire the hooke well, this fish will bite.

Leon. What effects my Lord? shee will sit you, you heard my daughter tell you how.

Claud. She did indeed.

Prin. How, how I pray you? you amaze me, I would haue thought her spirit had beene inuincible against all assaults of affection.

Leo. I would haue sworne it had my Lord, especially against Benedicke.

Bene. I should thinke this a gull, but that the white-bearded fellow speakes it: knauery cannot sure hide himselfe in such reuerence.

Claud. He hath tane th' infection, hold it vp.

Prince. Hath shee made her affection known to Benedicke?

Leonato. No, and sweares she neuer will, that's her torment.

Claud. 'Tis true indeed, so your daughter saies: shall I, saies she, that haue so oft encountred him with scorne, write to him that I loue him?

Leo. This saies shee now when shee is beginning to write to him, for shee'll be vp twenty times a night, and there will she sit in her smocke, till shee haue writ a sheet of paper: my daughter tells vs all.

Clau. Now you talke of a sheet of paper, I remember a pretty iest your daughter told vs of.

Leon. O when she had writ it, & was reading it ouer, she found Benedicke and Beatrice betweene the sheets.

Clau. That.

Leon. O she tore the letter into a thousand halfpence, raild at her self, that she should be so immodest to write, to one that shee knew would flout her: I measure him, saies she, by my owne spirit, for I should flout him if hee writ to me, yea though I loue him, I should.

Clau. Then downe vpon her knees she falls, weepes, sobs, beates her heart, teares her hayre, prayes, curses, O sweet Benedicke, God giue me patience.

Leon. She doth indeed, my daughter saies so, and the extasie hath so much ouerborne her, that my daughter is sometime afeard she will doe a desperate out-rage to her selfe, it is very true.

Prince. It were good that Benedicke knew of it by some other, if she will not discouer it.

Clau. To what end? he would but make a sport of it, and torment the poore Lady worse.

Prin. And he should, it were an alms to hang him, shee's an excellent sweet Lady, and (out of all suspition,) she is vertuous.

Claudio. And she is exceeding wise.

Prince. In every thing, but in louing Benedicke.

Leon. O my Lord, wisedome and blood combating in so tender a body, we haue ten proofes to one, that blood hath the victory, I am sorry for her, as I haue just cause being her Vncle, and her Guardian.

Prince. I would shee had bestowed this dotage on me, I would haue daft all other respects, and made her half my selfe: I prey you tell Benedicke of it, and hearke what he will say.

Leon. Were it good thinke you?

Clau. Hero thinkes surely she will die, for she saies she will die, if he loue her not, and shee will die ere shee make her loue knowne, and she will die if hee woo her, rather then shee will bate one breath of her accustomed crossnesse.

Prin. She doth well, if she should make tender of her loue, lame, 'tis very possible he'l scorne it, for the man (as you know all) hath a contemptible spirit.

Clau. He is a very proper man.

Prin. He hath indeed a good outward happines.

Clau. Fore God, and in my minde very wise.

Prin. He doth indeed shew some sparkes that are like wit.

Leon. And I take him to be valiant.

Prin. As Hector, I assure you, and in the managing of quarrels you may see he is wise, for either he avoydes them with great discretion, or undertakes them with a Christian-like feare.

Leon. If he doe feare God, a must necessarilie keepe peace, if he breake the peace, he ought to enter into a quarrell with feare and trembling

Prin. And so will he doe, for the man doth feare God, howsoever it seemes not in him, by some large jeasts he will make: well, I am sorry for your niece, shall we goe for Benedicke, and tell him of her love.

Claud. Never tell him, my Lord, let her weare it out with good counsell.

Leon. Nay that's impossible, she may weare her heart out first.

Prin. Well, we will heare further of it by your daughter, let it coole the while, I love Benedicke well, and I could wish he would modestly examine himselfe, to see how much he is vnworthy to have so good a Lady.

Leon. My Lord, will you walke? dinner is ready.

Clau. If he do not dote on her vpon this, I wil never trust my expectation.

Prin. Let there be the same Net spread for her, and that must your daughter and her gentlewoman carry: the sport will be, when they hold one an opinion of another dotage, and no such matter, that's the Scene that I would see, which will be merely a dumbe shew: let vs send her to call him into dinner. Exeunt.

Bene. This can be no trickle, the conference was sadly borne, they have the truth of this from Hero, they seeme to pitie the Lady: it seemes her affections have the full bent: love me? why it must be requited: I heare how I am cenſur'd, they say I will bear my selfe proudly, if I perceive the love come from her: they say too, that she will rather die than give any signe of affection: I did never thinke to marry, I must not seeme proud, happy are they that heare their detractions, and can put them to mending: they say the Lady is fitire, 'tis a truth, I can bear them witnesse: and virtuous, tis so, I cannot reprooue it, and wise, but for loving me, by my troth it is no addition to her witte, nor no great argument of her folly; for I will be horribly in love with her, I may chance have some odde quirkes and remnants of witte broken on me, because I heare rail'd so long against marriage: but doth not the appetite alter? a man loves the meat in his youth, that he cannot indure in his age. Shall quips and sentences, and these paper bullets of the braine awe a man from the careere of his humour? No, the world must be peopled. When I said I would die a batcheler, I did not think I should live till I were married, here comes Beatrice: by this day, she's a faire Lady, I doe spie some marks of love in her.

Enter Beatrice

Bene. Against my will I am sent to bid you come in to dinner.

Bea. Faire Beatrice, I thanke you for your paines.

Bea. I tooke no more paines for those thanks, than you take paines to thanke me, if it had been painefull, I would not have come.

Bene. You take pleasure then in the message

Bea. Yes just so much as you may take vpon a knife's point, and choake a daw withall: you have no stomacke signior, fare you well. Exit.

Bene. Ha, against my will I am sure to bid you come into dinner: there's a double meaning in that: I tooke no more paines for those thanks, than you tooke paines to thanke me, that's as much as to say, any paines that I take for you is as easie as thanks: if I do not take pitty of her I am a villaine, if I doe not love her I am a Iew, I will goe get her picture. Exit.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Hero and two Gentlewomen, Margaret, and Vrsula.

Hero. Good Margaret runne thee to the parlour,
There shalt thou finde my Cosin Beatrice,
Proposing with the Prince and Claudio,
Whisper her eare, and tell her I and Vrsula,
Walke in the Orchard, and our whole discourse
Is all of her, say that thou over-heard'st vs,
And bid her steale into the pleached bower,
Where hony-suckles ripened by the sunne,
Forbid the sunne to enter: like princesses,
Made proud by Princes, that advance their pride,
Against that power that bred it, there will she hide her
To listen our purpose, this is thy office,
Beare thee well in it, and leave vs alone.

Marg. Ile make her come I warrant you presently.

Hero. Now Vrsula, when Beatrice doth come,
As we do trace this alley vp and downe,
Our talke must onely be of Benedicke,
When I doe name him, let it be thy part,
To praise him more than ever man did merit,
My talke to thee must be how Benedicke
Is sicke in love with Beatrice: of this matter,
Is little Cupids crafty arrow made,
That onely wounds by heare-say: now begin,

Enter Beatrice.

For looke where Beatrice like a Lapwing runs
Close by the ground, to heare our conference.

Vrs. The pleasant'st angling is to see the fish
Cut with her golden oares the silver streame,
And greedily devoure the treacherous baite:
So angle we for Beatrice, who even now,
Is couched in the wood-bine coverture,
Feare you not my part of the Dialogue.

Her. Then go we neare her that her eare loose nothing,
Of the false sweete baite that we lay for it:
No trusty Vrsula, she is too disdainfull,
I know her spirits are as coy and wilde,
As Haggards of the rocke.

Vrsula. But are you sure,
That Benedicke loves Beatrice so intirely?

Her. So saies the Prince, and my new trothed Lord.

Vrs. And did they bid you tell her of it, Madam?

Her. They did intreate me to acquaint her of it,
But I perswaded them, if they lov'd Benedicke,

To wish him wrastle with affection,
And never to let Beatrice know of it.
Vrsula. Why did you so, doth not the Gentleman
Deserue as full as fortunate a bed,
As ever Beatrice shall couch vpon?
Hero. O God of loue! I know he doth deserue,
As much as may be yeelded to a man.
But Nature never fram'd a woman's heart,
Of prowder stuffe then that of Beatrice:
Disdaine and Scorne ride sparkling in her eyes,
Misprizing what they looke on, and her wit
Values it selfe so highly, that to her
All matter else seemes weake: she cannot loue,
Nor take no shape nor proiect of affection,
She is so selfe indeared.
Vrsula. Sure I thinke so,
And therefore certainely it were not good
She knew his loue, lest she make sport at it.
Hero. Why you speake truth, I never yet saw man,
How wise, how noble, yong, how rarely featur'd,
But she would spell him backward: if faire fac'd,
She would sweare the gentleman should be her sister:
If blacke, why Nature drawing of an antiche,
Made a foule blot: if tall, a launce ill headed:
If low, an agot very vildlie cut:
If speaking, why a vane blowne with all windes.
If silent, why a blocke moued with none
So turnes she every man the wrong side out,
And never gives to Truth and Vertue, that
Which simplenesse and merit purchaseth.
Vrsu. Sure, sure, such carping is not commendable.
Hero. No, not to be so odde, and from all fashions,
As Beatrice is, cannot be commendable,
But who dare tell her so? if I should speake,
She would mocke me into ayre, O she would laugh me
Out of my selfe, presse me to death with wit,
Therefore let Benedicke like couered fire,
Consume away in sighes, waste inwardly:
It were a better death, to die with mockes,
Which is as bad as die with tickling.
Vrsu. Yet tell her of it heare what shee will say.
Hero. No, rather I will goe to Benedicke,
And counsaile him to fight against his passion,
And truly I'le deuise some honest slanders,
To staine my cosin with, one doth not know,
How much an ill word may imposon liking.
Vrsu. O doe not doe your cosin such a wrong,
She cannot be so much without true iudgement,
Having so swift and excellent a wit
As she is prisde to haue, as to refuse
So rare a Gentleman as signior Benedicke.
Hero. He is the onely man of Italy,
Alwaies excepted, my deare Claudio.
Vrsu. I pray you be not angry with me, Madame,
Speaking my fancy: Signior Benedicke,
For shape, for bearing argument and valour,
Goes formost in report through Italy.
Hero. Indeed he hath an excellent good name.
Vrsu. His excellence did earne it ere he had it:
When ere you married Madame?
Hero. Why euerie day to morrow, come goeme,
I'le shew thee some attires, and haue thy counsell,
Which is the best to furnish me to morrow.
Vrsu. She's tane I warrant you,
We haue caught her Madame?
Hero. If it prouse so, then loving goes by haps,
Some Cupid kills with arrowes, some with traps. Exeu.
Bea. What fire is in mine eares? can this be true?
Stand I condemn'd for pride and scorne so much?
Contempt, farewell, and maiden pride, adieu,
No glory lives behinde the backe of such.
And Benedicke, loue on, I will requite thee,
Taming my wilde heart to thy loving hand:
If thou dost loue, my kindenesse shall incite thee
To binde our loues vp in a holy band.
For others say thou dost deserue, and I
Believe it better then reportingly. Exit.

Enter Prince, Claudio, Benedicke, and Leonato.

Prince. I doe but stay till your marriage be consummate, and then go I toward Arragon.
Clau. I'le bring you thither my Lord, if you'l vouchsafe me.
Prin. Nay, that would be as great a soyle in the new gloss of your marriage, as to shew a childe his new coat and forbid him to weare it. I will onely bee bold with Benedicke for his companie, for from the crowne of his head, to the sole of his foot, he is all mirth, he hath twice or thrice cut Cupids bow-string, and the little hang-man dare not shoot at him, he hath a heart as sound as a bell, and his tongue is the clapper, for what his heart thinkes, his tongue speakes.
Bene. Gallants, I am not as I haue bin.
Leo. So say I, methinkes you are sadder
Claud. I hope he be in loue.
Prin. Hang him truant, there's no true drop of blood in him to be truly touche with loue, if he be sad, he wants money.
Bene. I haue the tooth-ach.
Prin. Draw it.
Bene. Hang it.
Claud. You must hang it first, and draw it afterwards.
Prin. What? sigh for the tooth-ach.
Leon. Where is but a humour or a worme.
Bene. Well, every one cannot master a griefe, but bee that has it.
Clau. Yet say I, he is in loue.
Prin. There is no appearance of fancie in him, vnlesse it be a fancy that he hath to strange disguises, as to bee a Dutchman to day, a Frenchman to morrow: vnlesse hee haue a fancy to this foolery, as it appeares hee hath, hee is no fools for fancy, as you would haue it to appeare he is.
Clau. If he be not in loue with some woman, there is no beleeuing old signes, a brushes his hat a mornings, What should that bode?
Prin. Hath any man seene him at the Barbers?
Clau. No, but the Barbers man hath beene seen with him, and the olde ornament of his cheeke hath already stuft tennis balls.
Leon. Indeed he looks yonger then he did, by the loss of a beard.
Prin. Nay a rubs himselfe with Cluk, can you smell him out by that?
Clau. That's as much as to say, the sweet youth's in loue.
Prin. The greatest note of it is his melancholy
Clau. And when was he wont to wash his face?
Prin. Yea, or to paint himselfe? for the which I heare what they say of him.
Clau. Nay, but his iesting spirit, which is now crept into a lute-string, and now gouern'd by stops.

Prin. Indeed that tels a heavy tale for him: conclude, he is in love.

Clau. Nay, but I know who loues him.

Prince. That would I know too, I warrant one that knowes him not.

Cla. Yes, and his ill conditions, and in despight of all, dies for him

Prin. Shee shall be buried with her face vpwards.

Bene. Yet is this no charme for the tooth-ake, old signior, walke aside with mee, I haue studied eight or nine wise words to speake to you, which these hobby-horses must not heare.

Prin. For my life to breake with him about Beatrice.

Clau. 'Tis euen so, Hero and Margaret haue by this played their parts with Beatrice, and then the two Beares will not bite one another when they meete.

Enter Iohn the Bastard.

Bast. My Lord and brother, God saue you.

Prin. Good den brother.

Bast. If your leisure serd, I would speake with you.

Prince. In priuate?

Bast. If it please you, yet Count Claudio may heare, for what I would speake of, concernes him.

Prin What's the matter?

Bastu. Means your Lordship to be married to morrow?

Prin. You know he does.

Bast. I know not that when he knowes what I know.

Clau. If there be any impediment, I pray you discouer it.

Bast You may think I loue you not, let that appeare hereafter, and aymse better at me by that I now will manifest, for my brother (I thinke, he holds you well, and in dearenesse of heart) hath holpe to effect your ensuing marriage: surely suit ill spent, and labour ill bestowed.

Prin. Why, what's the matter?

Bastard. I came hither to tell you, and circumstances shortned, (for she hath beene too long a talking of) the Lady is disloyall.

Clau. Who Hero?

Bast. Even shee, Leonatos Hero, your Hero, every mans Hero.

Clau. Disloyall?

Bast. The word is too good to paint out her wickednesse, I could say she were worse, thinke you of a worse title, and I will fit her to it: wonder not till further warrant: goe but with mee to night, you shal see her chamber window entered, euen the night before her weddding day, if you loue her, then to morrow wed her: But it would better fit your honour to change your minde.

Claud. May this be so?

Prince. I will not thinke it.

Bast. If you dare not trust that you see, confesse not that you know: if you will follow mee, I will shew you enough, and when you haue seene more, & heard more, proceed accordingly.

Clau. If I see any thing to night, why I should not marry her to morrow in the congregation, where I should wedde, there will I shame her.

Prin. And as I wooed for thee to obtaine her, I will ioyne with thee to disgrace her.

Bast. I will disparage her no further, till you are my witnesses, beare it coldly but till night, and let the issue shew it selfe

Prin. O day vnconstantly tossed!

Claud. O mischiefe strangelie thwarting!

Bastard. O plague right well preuented! so will you say, when you haue seene the sequele. Exeu.

Enter Dogberry and his compartner with the watch.

Dog. Are you good men and true?

Verg. Yes, or else it were pitty but they should suffer salueation body and soule.

Dogb. Nay, that were a punishment too good for them, if they should haue any allegiance in them, being chosen for the Princes watch.

Verges. Well, giue them their charge, neighbour Dogberry.

Dog. First, who thinke you the most desartlesse man to be Constable?

Watch. 1 Hugh Ote-cake sir, or George Sea-coale, for they can write and reade.

Dogb. Come hither neighbour Sea-coale, God hath blest you with a good name: to be a wel-fauoured man, is the gift of Fortune, but to write and reade, comes by Nature.

Watch 2. Both which Master Constable

Dogb. You haue: I know it would be your answere well, for your fauour sir, why giue God thankes, & make no boast of it, and for your writing and reading, let that appeare when there is no need of such vanity, you are thought heere to be the most sensleesse and fit man for the Constable of the watch: therefore heare you the charge: this is your charge: You shall comprehend all vagrom men, you are to bid any man stand in the Princes name.

Watch 2. How if a will not stand?

Dogb. Why then take no note of him, but let him go, and presently call the rest of the Watch together, and thanke God you are ridde of a knaue.

Verges. If he will not stand when he is bidden, he is none of the Princes subiects.

Dogb. True, and they are to meddle with none but the Princes subiects: you shall also make no noise in the streetes: for, for the Watch to babble and talke, is most tollerable, and not to be endured.

Watch. We will rather sleepe than talke, wee know what belongs to a Watch.

Dog. Why you speake like an ancient and most quiet watchman, for I cannot see how sleeping should offend: only haue a care that your bills be not stolne: well, you are to call at all the Alehouses, and bid them that are drunke get them to bed.

Watch. How if they will not?

Dogb. Why then let them alone till they are sober, if they make you not then the better answere, you may say, they are not the men you tooke them for.

Watch. Well sir.

Dogb. If you meet a theefe, you may suspect him, by vertue of your office, to be no true man: and for such kinde of men, the lesse you meddle or make with them, why the more is for your honesty.

Watch. If we know him to be a thiefe, shall wee not lay hands on him.

Dogb. Truly by your office you may, but I think they that touch pitch will be defil'd: the most peaceable way for you, if you doe take a theefe, is, to let him shew himselfe what he is, and steale out of your company.

Ver. You haue bin alwaies call'd a merciful man partner.

Dog. Truely I would not hang a dog by my will, much more a man who hath any honestie in him.

Verges. If you heare a child crie in the night you must call to the nurse, and bid her still it.

Watch. How if the nurse be asleepe and will not heare vs?

Dog. Why then depart in peace, and let the childe wake her with crying, for the ewe that will not heare her Lambe when it baes, will neuer answere a calfe when he bleates.

Verges. Tis verie true.

Dog. This is the end of the charge: you constable are to present the Princes owne person, if you meete the Prince in the night, you may staie him.

Verges. Nay birladie that I thinke a cannot.

Dog. Fiue shillings to one on't with anie man that knowes the Statues, he may staie him, marrie not without the prince be willing, for indeed the watch ought to offend no man, and it is an offence to stay a man against his will.

Verges. Birladie I thinke it be so.

Dog. Ha, ah ha, well masters good night, and there be anie matter of weight chances, call vp me, keepe your fellowes counsaile, and your owne, and good night, come neighbour.

Watch. Well masters, we heare our charge, let vs go sit here vpon the Church bench till two, and then all to bed.

Dog. One word more, honest neighbors. I pray you watch about signior Leonatos doore, for the wedding being there to morrow, there is a great coyle to night, adieu, be vigilant I beseech you. Exeunt.

Enter Borachio and Conrade.

Bor What, Conrade?

Watch. Peace, stir not.

Bor. Conrade I say.

Con. Here man, I am at thy elbow.

Bor. Mas and my elbow itcht, I thought there would a scabbe follow.

Con. I will owe thee an answere for that, and now forward with thy tale.

Bor. Stand thee close then vnder this penthouse, for it drizzels raine, and I will, like a true drunkard, vtter all to thee.

Watch. Some treason masters, yet stand close.

Bor. Therefore know, I haue earned of Don Iohn a thousand Ducates.

Con. Is it possible that anie villanie should be so deare?

Bor. Thou should'st rather aske if it were possible anie villanie should be so rich? for when rich villains haue needs of poore ones, poore ones may make what price they will.

Con. I wonder at it.

Bor. That shewes thou art vnconfirm'd, thou knowest that the fashion of a doublet, or a hat, or a cloake, is nothing to a man.

Con. Yes, it is apparell.

Bor. I meane the fashion.

Con. Yes the fashion is the fashion.

Bor. Tush, I may as well say the foole's the foole, but seest thou not what a deformed theefe this fashion is?

Watch. I know that deformed, a has bin a vile theefe, this vii. yeares, a goes vp and downe like a gentle man: I remember his name.

Bor. Did'st thou not heare some bodie?

Con. No, 'twas the vaine on the house.

Bor See'st thou not (I say) what a deformed thiefe this fashion is, how giddily a turnes about all the Hot-bloods, betweene foureteene & fiue & thirtie, sometimes fashioning them like Pharaohs souldiours in the rechie painting, sometime like god Bels priests in the old Church window, sometime like the shaueu Hercules in the smircht worm-eaten tapestrie, where his cod-peece seemes as massie as his club.

Con. All this I see, and see that the fashion weares out more apparrell then the man; but art not thou thy selfe giddie with the fashion too that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?

Bor. Not so neither, but know that I haue to night wooed Margaret the Lady Hero's gentle-woman, by the name of Hero, she leanes me out at her mistris chamber-window, bids me a thousand times good night: I tell this tale vildly. I should first tell thee how the Prince Claudio and my Master planted, and placed, and possessed by my Master Don Iohn, saw a far off in the Orchard this amiable incounter.

Con. And thought thy Margaret was Hero?

Bor. Two of them did, the Prince and Claudio, but the diuell my Master knew she was Margaret and partly by his oathes, which first possest them, partly by the darke night which did deceiue them, but chiefely, by my villanie, which did confirme any slander that Don Iohn had made, away vvent Claudio enraged, swore he would meete her as he was apointed next morning at the Temple, and there, before the whole congregation shame her with what he saw o're night, and send her home againe without a husband.

Watch. 1. We charge you in the Princes name stand.

Watch. 2. Call vp the right master Constable, we haue here recouered the most dangerous peece of lechery, that euer was knowne in the Common-wealth.

Watch. 1. And one Deformed is one of them. I know him, a weares a locke.

Con. Masters, masters.

Watch. 2. Youle be made bring deformed forth I warrant you.

Con. Masters, neuer speake, we charge you, let vs obey you to goe with vs.

Bor. We are like to proue a goodly commoditie, being taken vp of these mens bils.

Con. A commoditie in question I warrant you, come we'le obey you. Exeunt.

Enter Hero, and Margaret, and Vrsula.

Hero. Good Vrsula wake my cosin Beatrice, and desire her to rise.

Vrsu. I will Lady.

Her And bid her come hither.

Vrs. Well.

Mar. Troth I thinke your other rebato were better.

Bero. No pray thee good Mag, Ile weare this.

Marg. By my troth's not so good, and I warrant your cosin will say so.

Bero. My cosin's a foole, and thou art another, ile weare none but this.

Mar. I like the new tire within excellently, if the haire were a thought browner: and your gown's a most rare fashion yfaith, I saw the Dutchesse of Mallanes gowne that they praise so.

Bero. O that exceedes they say.

Mar. By my troth's but a night-gowne in respect of yours, cloth a gold and cuts, and lac'd with siluer, set with pearles, downe sleeues, side sleeues, and skirts, round vnderborn with a blewish tinsel, but for a fine quaint graceful and excellent fashion, yours is worth ten on't.

Bero. God

Hero. God give mee joy to weare it, for my heart is exceeding heavy.

Marga. 'Twill be heavier soone, by the weight of a man.

Hero. Fie upon thee, art not asham'd?

Marg. Of what Lady? of speaking honourably? is not marriage honourable in a beggar? is not your Lord honourable without marriage? I thinke you would have me say, saving your reverence a husband: and bad thinking does not wrest true speaking, Ile offend no body, is there any harme in the heavier for a husband? none I think, and it be the right husband, and the right wife, otherwise 'tis light and not heavy, ask my Lady Beatrice else, here she comes.

Enter Beatrice.

Hero. Good morrow Coze.

Bea. Good morrow sweet Hero.

Hero. Why how now? do you speake in the sick tune?

Bea. I am out of all other tune, me thinkes.

Mar. Clapes into Light a loue, (that goes without a burden,) do you sing it and Ile dance it.

Bea. Ye Light a loue with your heeles, then if your husband have stables enough, you'll looke he shall lacke no barnes.

Mar. O illegitimate construction! I scorne that with my heeles.

Bea. 'Tis almost five a clocke cosin, 'tis time you were ready, by my troth I am exceeding ill, hey ho.

Mar. For a husband, a horse, or a husband?

Bea. For the letter that begins them all, H.

Mar. Well, and you be not turn'd Turke, there's no more sayling by the starre.

Bea. What means the foole trow?

Mar. Nothing I, but God send every one their hearts desire.

Hero. These gloves the Count sent mee, they are an excellent perfume.

Bea. I am stuft cosin, I cannot smell.

Mar. A maid and stuft! there's goodly catching of colds.

Bea. O God helpe me, God help me, how long haue you profest apprehension?

Mar. Ever since you left it, doth not my wit become me rarely?

Bea. It is not seene enough, you should weare it in your cap, by my troth I am sicke.

Mar. Get you some of this distill'd carduus benedictus and lay it to your heart, it is the onely thing for a qualm.

Hero. There thou prickst her with a thistell.

Bea. Benedictus, why benedictus? you haue some moall in this benedictus.

Mar. Moall? no by my troth, I haue no moall meaning, I meant plaine holy thistell, you may thinke perchance that I thinke you are in loue, nay birlady I am not such a foole to thinke what I list, nor I list not to thinke what I can, nor indeed I cannot thinke, if I would thinke my hart out of thinking, that you are in loue, or that you will be in loue, or that you can be in loue: yet Benedick was such another, and now is he become a man, he swore he would never marry, and yet now in despight of his heart he eates his meat without grudging, and how you may be converted I know not, but me thinkes you looke with your eies as other women doe.

Bea. What pace is this that thy tongue keepes.

Mar. Not a false gallop.

Enter Vrsula.

Vrsula. Madam, withdraw, the Prince, the Count, signior Benedick, Don John, and all the gallants of the towne are come to fetch you to Church.

Hero. Helpe to dresse mee good coze, good Meg, good Vrsula.

Enter Leonato, and the Constable, and the Headborough.

Leonato. What would you with mee, honest neighbour?

Const. Dog. Mary sir I would have some confidence with you, that decerneth you nearely.

Leon. Briefe I pray you, for you see it is a busie time with me.

Const. Dog. Mary this it is sir.

Headb. Yes in truth it is sir.

Leon. What is it my good friends?

Con. Do. Goodman Verges sir speakes a little of the matter, an old man sir, and his wits are not so blunt, as God helpe I would desire they were, but in faith honest as the skin between his browes.

Head. Yes I thank God, I am as honest as any man living, that is an old man, and no honester then I.

Con. Dog. Comparisons are odorous, palabras, neighbour Verges.

Leon. Neighbours, you are tedious.

Con. Dog. It pleases your worship to say so, but we are the poore Dukes officers, but truely for mine owne part, if I were as tedious as a King I could finde in my heart to bestow it all of your worship.

Leon. All thy tediousnesse on me, ah?

Const. Dog. Yes, and 'twere a thousand times more than 'tis, for I heare as good exclamation on your Worship as of any man in the Citie, and though I bee but a poore man, I am glad to heare it.

Head. And so am I.

Leon. I would faine know what you haue to say.

Head. Marry sir our watch to night, excepting your worships presence, haue taine a couple of as arrant knaves as any in Messina.

Con. Dog. A good old man sir, hee will be talking as they say, when the age is in the wit is out, God helpe vs, it is a world to see: well said yfaith neighbour Verges, well, God's a good man, and two men ride of a horse, one must ride behinde, an honest soule yfaith sir, by my troth he is, as ever broke bread, but God is to bee worshipt, all men are not alike, alas good neighbour.

Leon. Indeed neighbour he comes too short of you.

Con. Do. Gifts that God gives.

Leon. I must leave you.

Con. Dog. One word sir, our watch sir haue indeede comprehended two aspitious persons, & we would haue them this morning examined before your worship.

Leon. Take their examination your selfe, and bring it me, I am now in great haste, as may appeare vnto you.

Const. It shall be suffiguance (Exit.

Leon. Drinke some wine ere you goe: fare you well.

Messinger. My Lord, they stay for you to giue your daughter to her husband.

Leon. Ile wait vpon them, I am ready.

Dogb. Goe good partner, goe get you to Francis Seacoale, bid him bring his pen and inke horne to the Gaole: we are now to examine those men.

Verges. And we must doe it wisely.

Dogb. We will spare for no witte I warrant you: here, heere's that shall driue some of them to a non-come, only get the learned writer to set downe our excommunication, and meet me at the Iaile. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Prince, Bastard, Leonato, Frier, Claudio, Benedicke, Hero, and Beatrice.

Leonato. Come Frier Francis, be briefe, onely to the plaine forme of marriage, and you shall recount their particular duties afterwards.

Fran. You come hither, my Lord, to marry this Lady.

Clau. No.

Leo. To be married to her: Frier, you come to marrie her.

Fran. Lady, you come hither to be married to this Count.

Hero. I doe.

Frier. If either of you know any inward impediment why you should not be conioyned, I charge you on your soules to vtter it.

Claud. Know you aught, Hero?

Hero. None my Lord.

Frier. Know you aught, Count?

Leon. I dare make his answer, None.

Clau. O what men dare do! what men may do! what men daily do!

Bene. How now! interiections? why then, some be of laughing, as ha, ha, he.

Clau. Stand thee by Frier, father, by your leaue.
Will you with free and vnconstrained soule
Giue me this maid your daughter?

Leon. As freely sonne as God did giue her me.

Cla. And what haue I to giue you back, whose worth
May counterpoise this rich and precious gift?

Prin. Nothing, vnlesse you render her againe.

Clau. Sweet Prince, you learn me noble thankfulnes:
There Leonato, take her backe againe.
Giue not this rotten Orenge to your friend,
Shee's but the signe and semblance of her honour:
Behold how like a maid she blushes heere!
O what authoritie and shew of truth
Can cunning sinne couer it selfe withall!
Comes not that blood, as modest euidence,
To witnesse simple Vertue? would you not swore
All you that see her, that she were a maide,
By these exterior shewes? But she is none:
She knowes the heat of a luxurious bed:
Her blush is guiltinesse, not modestie.

Leonato. What doe you mean, my Lord?

Clau. Not to be married,
Not to knit my soule to an approued wanton.

Leon. Deere my Lord, if you in your owne proofe,
Haue vanquisht the resistance of her youth,
And made defeat of her virginitie. (bar,

Clau. I know what you would say: if I haue knowne
You will say, she did embrace me as a husband,
And so extenuate the forehand sinne: No Leonato
I never tempted her with word too large,
But as a brother to his sister, shewed
Bashfull sincerities and comely loue.

Hero. And seem'd I ever otherwise to you?

Clau. Out on thee seeming, I will write against it.
You seeme to me as Diane in her Orbe,
As chaste as is the budde ere it be blowne:
But you are more intemperate in your blood,
Then Venus, or those pampered animalls,
That rage in sauage sensualitie.

Hero. Is my Lord well, that he doth speake so wide?

Leon. Sweete Prince, why speake not you?

Prin. What should I speake?
I stand dishonour'd that haue gone about,
To linke my deare friend to a common stale.

Leon. Are these things spoken, or doe I but dreame?

Bast. Sir, they are spoken, and these things are true.

Bene. This looks not like a nuptiall.

Hero. True, O God!

Clau. Leonato, stand I here?
Is this the Prince? is this the Princes brother?
Is this face Heroes? are our eies our owne?

Leon. All this is so, but what of this my Lord?

Clau. Let me but moue one question to your daugh-
And by that fatherly and kindly power, (ter,
That you haue in her, bid her answer truly.

Leo I charge thee doe, as thou art my childe.

Hero. O God defend me how am I beset,
What kinde of catechizing call you this?

Clau. To make you answer truly to your name.

Hero. Is it not Hero? who can blot that name
With any iust reproach?

Claud. Marry that can Hero,
Hero it selfe can blot out Heroes vertue.
What man was he, talkt with you yesternight,
Out at your window betwixt twelue and one?
Now if you are a maid, answer to this.

Hero. I talkt with no man at that howre my Lord.

Prince. Why then you are no maiden. Leonato,
I am sorry you must heare: vpon mine honor,
My selfe, my brother, and this grieued Count
Did see her, heare her, at that howre last night,
Talke with a ruffian at her chamber window,
Who hath indeed most like a liberall villaine,
Confest the vile encounters they haue had
A thousand times in secret.

John. Fie, fie, they are not to be named my Lord,
Not to be spoken of,
There is not chastitie enough in language,
Without offence to vtter them: thus pretty Lady
I am sorry for thy much misgouernement.

Claud. O Hero! what a Hero hadst thou beene
If half thy outward graces had beene placed
About thy thoughts and counsailes of thy heart?
But fare thee well, most foule, most faire, farewell
Thou pure impiety, and impious purritie,
For thee Ile locke vp all the gates of Loue,
And on my eie-lids shall Conieture hang,
To turne all beauty into thoughts of harme,
And neuer shall it more be gracious.

Leon. Hath no mans dagger here a point for me?

Bene. Why how now cosin, wherfore sink you downe?

Bast. Come, let vs go: these things come thus to light,
Smother her spirits vp.

Bene. How doth the Lady?

Bene. Dead I thinke, help vncle,
Hero, why Hero Vncle, Signor Benedicke, Frier.

Leonato. O Fate! take not away thy heauy hand.
Death is the fairest couer for her shame
That may be wisht for.

Bene. How

Bene. How now cosin Hero?

Fri. Haue comfort Ladie.

Leon. Dost thou looke vp?

Friar. Yea, wherefore should she not?

Leon. Wherfore? Why doth not every earthly thing
Cry shame vpon her? Could she heere denie
The florie that is printed in her blood?
Do not liue Hero, do not ope thine eyes:
For did I thinke thou wouldst not quickly die,
Thought I thy spirits were stronger then thy shames,
My selfe would on the reward of reproaches
Strike at thy life. Grieu'd I, I had but one?
Chud I, for that at frugal Nature's frame?
O one too much by thee: why had I one?
Why ever wast thou louelie in my eies?
Why had I not with charitable hand
Took vp a beggars issue at my gates,
Who staered thus, and mir'd with infamie,
I might haue said, no part of it is mine:
This shame derriues it selfe from vnknowne loines,
But mine, and mine I lou'd, and mine I prais'd,
And mine that I was proud on mine so much,
That I my selfe. was to my selfe not mine:
Valuing of her, why she, O she is falne
Into a pit of Inke, that the wide sea
Hath drops too few to wash her cleane againe,
And salt too little, which may season give
To her foule tainted flesh.

Ben. Sir, sir, be patient: for my part, I am so attired in wonder, I know not what to say.

Bea. O cosin my foole my cosin is belied.

Ben. Ladie, were you her bedfellow last night?

Bea. No truly: not although vntill last night,
I haue this twelue month bin her bedfellow.

Leon. Confirm'd, confirm'd, O that is stronger made
Which was before barr'd vp with ribs of iron
Would the Princes lie, and Claudio lie,
Who lou'd her so, that speaking of her foulnesse,
Wash'd it with teares? Hence from her, let her die.

Fri. Heare me a little, for I haue only bene silent so long, and given way vnto this course of fortune, by noting of the Ladie, I haue markt.
A thousand blushing apparitions,
To start into her face, a thousand innocent shames,
In Angel whitenesse beare away those blushes,
And in her eie there hath appear'd a fire
To burne the errors that these Princes hold
Against her maiden truth. Call me a foole,
Trust not my reading, nor my obseruations,
Which with experimental seale doth warrant
The tenure of my booke: trust not my age,
My reuerence, calling, nor diuinitie,
If this sweet Ladie lye not guiltlesse heere,
Vnder some biting error.

Leon. Friar, it cannot be:
Thou seest that all the Grace that she hath lost,
Is, that she will not adde to her damnation,
A sinne of periury, she not denies it:
Why seek'st thou then to couer with excuse,
That which appeares in proper nakednesse?

Fri. Ladie, what man is he you are accus'd of?

Hero. They know that do accuse me, I know none:
If I know more of any man alive
Than that which maiden modestie doth warrant,
Let all my sinnes lacke mercy. O my Father,
Prouse you that any man with me conuerst,
At hours vnmeete, or that I yesternight
Maintain'd the change of words with any creature,
Refuse me, hate me, torture me to death.

Fri. There is some strange misprision in the Princes.

Ben. Two of them haue the verie bent of honor,
And if their wisdomes be misled in this:
The practise of it lines in John the bastard,
Whose spirits toile in frame of villanies.

Leo. I know not: If they speake but truth of her,
These hands shall teare her: If they wrong her honour,
The proudest of them shall wel heare of it.
Time hath not yet so dried this blood of mine,
Nor age so eate vp my inuention,
Nor Fortune made such hauocke of my means,
Nor my bad life reft me so much of friends,
But they shall finde, awak'd in such a kinde,
Both strength of limbe, and policie of minde,
Ability in meanes, and choise of friends,
To quite me of them throughly.

Fri. Pause awhile:
And let my counsell sway you in this case,
Your daughter heere the Princesse (left for dead)
Let her awhile be secretly kept in,
And publish it, that she is dead indeed:
Maintaine a mourning ostentation,
And on your Families old monument,
Hang mournfull Epitaphes, and do all rites,
That appertaine vnto a buriall.

Leon. What shall become of this? What will this do?

Fri. Marry this wel carried, shall on her behalfe,
Change slander to remorse, that is some good,
But not for that dreame I on this strange course,
But on this trauaile looke for greater birth:
She dying, as it must be so maintain'd,
Vpon the instant that she was accus'd,
Shal be lamented, pitied, and excus'd
Of every hearer: for it so falls out,
That what we haue, we prize not to the worth,
Whiles we enioy it; but being lock'd and lost,
Why then we rack the value, then we finde
The vertue that possession would not shew vs
Whiles it was ours, so will it fare with Claudio:
When he shal heare she dyed vpon his words,
Th'Idea of her life shal sweetly creepe
Into his study of imagination,
And every louely Organ of her life,
Shall come apparel'd in more precious habite:
More moving delicate, and ful of life,
Into the eye and prospect of his soule
Then when she liu'd indeed: then shal he mourne,
If ever Loue had interest in his Liuer,
And wish he had not so accused her:
No, though he thought his accusation true:
Let this be so, and doubt not but success
Wil fashion the euent in better shape,
Then I can lay it downe in likelihood.
But if all aymes but this be leuell'd false,
The supposition of the Ladies death,
Will quench the wonder of her infamie.
And if it sort not well, you may conceale her,
As best befits her wounded reputation,
In some reclusive and religious life,
Out of all eyes, tongues, minds and injuries.

Bene. Signior Leonato, let the Frier aduise you,
And though you know my inwardnesse and loue
Is very much vnto the Prince and Claudio,

Yet

Yet, by mine honor, I will deale in this,
As secretly and iustlie, as your soule
Should wish your bodie.

Leon. Being that I flow in greefe,
The smallest twine may lead me.

Prior. 'Tis well consented, presently away,
For to strange sores, strangely they straine the cure.
Come Lady, die to live, this wedding day
Perhaps is but prolong'd, haue patience & endure. Exit

Bene. Lady Beatrice, haue you wept all this while?

Beat. Yea, and I will weepe a while longer.

Bene. I will not desire that.

Beat. You haue no reason, I doe it freely.

Bene. Surelie I do beleeue your fair cosin is wrong'd.

Beat. Ah, how much might the man deserue of mee that would right her!

Bene. Is there any way to shew such friendship?

Beat. A verie euen way, but no such friend.

Bene. May a man doe it?

Beat. It is a mans office, but not yours.

Bene. I doe loue nothing in the world so well as you, is not that strange?

Beat. As strange as the thing I know not, it were as possible for me to say, I loued nothing so well as you, but beleeue me not, and yet I lie not, I confesse nothing, nor I deny nothing, I am sorry for my cosin.

Bene. By my sword Beatrice thou lou'st me.

Beat. Doe not sweare by it and eat it.

Bene. I will sweare by it that you loue mee, and I will make him eat it that sayes I loue not you.

Beat. Will you not eat your word?

Bene. With no sawce that can be deuised to it. I protest I loue thee.

Beat. Why then God forgiue me.

Bene. What offence sweet Beatrice?

Beat. You haue stayed me in a happy houre, I was about to protest I loued you.

Bene. And doe it with all thy heart.

Beat. I loue you with so much of my heart, that none is left to protest.

Bened. Come, bid me doe any thing for thee.

Beat. Kill Claudio.

Bene. Ha, not for the wide world.

Beat. You kill me to denie, farewell.

Bene. Tarrie sweet Beatrice.

Beat. I am gone, though I am heere, there is no loue in you, nay I pray you let me go.

Bene. Beatrice.

Beat. Infaith I will goe.

Bene. We'll be friends first

Beat. You dare easier be friends with mee, than fight with mine enemy.

Bene. Is Claudio thine enemie?

Beat. Is a not approued in the height a villaine, that hath slandered, scorned, dishonoured my kinswoman? O that I were a man! what, beare her in hand vntill they come to take hands, and then with publike accusation vncouered slander, vnmittigated rancour? O God that I were a man! I would eat his heart in the market-place.

Bene. Heare me Beatrice.

Beat. Talke with a man out at a window, a proper saying.

Bene. Nay but Beatrice.

Beat. Sweet Hero, she is wrong'd, shee is slandered, she is vndone.

Bene. Beat?

Beat. Princes and Counties! surelie a Princely testimonie, a goodly Count, Counfect, a sweet Gallant surelie. O that I were a man for his sake! or that I had any friend would be a man for my sake. But manhood is melted into curtsies, valour into complement, and men are onelie turned into tongue, and trim ones too: he is now as valiant as Hercules, that only tells a lie, and sweares it: I cannot be a man with wishing, therfore I will die a woman with grieuing.

Bene. Tarry good Beatrice, by this hand I loue thee.

Beat. Vse it for my loue some other way then swearing by it.

Bened. Thinke you in your soule the Count Claudio hath wrong'd Hero?

Beat. Yea, as sure as I haue a thought, or a soule.

Bene. Enough, I am engage de, I will challenge him, I will kisse your hand, and so leaue you: by this hand Claudio shall render me a deere account: as you heare of me, so thinke of me: goe comfort your cosin, I must say she is dead, and so farewell.

Enter the Constables, Borachio, and the Towne Clerke in gowns.

Keeper. Is our whole dissembly appeard?

Cowley. O a stoole and a cushion for the Sexton.

Sexton. Which be the malefactors?

Andrew. Marry that am I, and my partner.

Cowley. Nay that's certaine, we haue the exhibition to examine.

Sexton. But which are the offenders that are to be examined, let them come before master Constable.

Kemp. Yea marry, let them come before mee, what is your name, friend?

Bor. Borachio.

Kem. Pray write downe Borachio. Yours sirra.

Con. I am a Gentleman sir, and my name is Conrade.

Kem. Write downe Master gentlemen Conrade: masters, doe you serue God: masters, it is proued already that you are little better than false knaues, and it will goe neere to be thought so shortly, how answer you for your selues?

Con. Marry sir, we say we are none.

Kemp. A marueilous witty fellow I assure you, but I will goe about with him: come you hither sirra, a word in your eare sir, I say to you, it is thought you are false knaues.

Bor. Sir, I say to you, we are none.

Kemp. Well, stand aside, 'fore God they are both in a tale: haue you writ downe that they are none?

Sext. Master Constable, you goe not the way to examine, you must call forth the watch that are their accusers.

Kemp. Yea marry, that's the eftest way, let the watch come forth: masters, I charge you in the Princes name, accuse these men.

Watch 1. This man said sir, that Don Iohn the Princes brother was a villaine.

Kemp. Write down, Prince Iohn a villaine: why this is flat periurie, to call a Princes brother villaine.

Bora. Master Constable.

Kemp. Pray thee fellow peace, I do not like thy looke I promise thee.

Sexton. What heard you him say else?

Watch 2. Marry that he had received a thousand Dukacts of Don Iohn, for accusing the Lady Hero wrongfully.

Kem.

Kemp. Flat Burglarie as ever was committed.
Cons. Yea by th'mass that it is.
Sexton. What else fellow?
Watch 1. And that Count Claudio did meane vpon his words, to disgrace Hero before the whole assembly, and not marry her.
Kemp. O villaine! thou wilt be condemn'd into everlasting redemption for this.
Sexton. What else?
Watch. This is all.
Sexton. And this is more masters then you can deny. Prince John is this morning secretly stolne away: Hero was in this manner accus'd, in this very manner refus'd, and vpon the griefe of this suddainly died: Master Constable, let these men be bound, and brought to Leonato, I will goe before, and shew him their examination.
Cons. Come, let them be opinion'd.
Sex. Let them be in the hands of Coxcombe.
Kem. Gods my life, where's the Sexton? let him write downe the Princes Officer Coxcombe: come, bind them thou naughty varlet.
Conr. Away, you are an asse, you are an asse.
Kemp. Dost thou not suspect my place? dost thou not suspect my years? O that he were heere to write mee downe an asse! but masters, remember that I am an asse: though it be not written downe, yet forget not I I am an asse: No thou villaine, thy art full of pietie as shall be prov'd vpon thee by good witnesse. I am a wise fellow, and which is more, an officer, and which is more, a householder, and which is more, as pretty a peece of flesh as any in Messina, and one that knowes the Law, goe to, & a rich fellow enough, goe to, and a fellow that hath had losses, and one that hath two gowns, and every thing handsome about him: bring him away: O that I had been writ downe an asse! Exit

Actus Quintus.

Enter Leonato and his brother.

Brother. If you goe on thus, you will kill your selfe,
And 'tis not wisdome thus to second griefe,
Against your selfe.
Leon. I pray thee cease thy counsaile,
Which falls into mine eares as profitlesse,
As water in a sieve: give me no counsaile,
Nor let no comforter delight mine eare,
But such a one whose wrongs doth suit with mine.
Bring me a father that so lov'd his childe,
Whose hope of her is ouer-whelmed like mine,
And bid him speake of patience,
Measure his woe the length and breadth of mine,
And let it answere every straine for straine,
As thus for thee, and such a griefe for such,
In every lineament, branch, shape, and forme:
Which a one will smile and stroke his beard,
And sorrow, wagge, cry hem, when he should groane.
Patch griefe with proverbs, make misfortune drunke,
With candle-wasters: bring him yet to me,
And I of him will gather patience:
But there is no such man, for brother, man
Can counsaile, and speake comfort to that griefe,
Which they themselves not feele, but taste it,
Their counsaile turnes to passion, which before,
Would give preceptiall medicine to rage,
Fetter strong madnesse in a silken thred,
Charme ache with ayre, and agony with words,
No, no, 'tis all mens office, to speake patience
To those that wring vnder the load of sorrow:
But no mans vertue nor sufficiencie
To be so morall, when he shall endure
The like himselfe: therefore give me no counsaile,
My griefs cry lowder then advertisement.
Broth. Therein do men from children nothing differ.
Leonato. I pray thee peace, I will be flesh and bloud,
For there was never yet Philosopher,
That could endure the tooth-ake patiently,
How ever they have writ the stile of gods,
And made a push at chance and sufferance.
Brother. Yet bend not all the harme vpon your selfe,
Make those that doe offend you, suffer too.
Leon. There thou speak'st reason, nay I will doe so,
My soule doth tell me, Hero is belied,
And that shall Claudio know, so shall the Prince,
And all of them that thus dishonour her.

Enter Prince and Claudio.

Bro. Here comes the Prince and Claudio hastily.
Prin. Good den, good den.
Clau. Good day to both of you.
Leon. Heare you my Lords?
Prin. We have some haste Leonato.
Leo. Some haste my Lord! well, fare you well my Lord,
Are you so hasty now? well, all is one.
Prin. Nay, do not quarrell with vs, good old man
Bro. If he could rite himselfe with quarrelling,
Some of vs would lie low.
Claud. Who wrongs him?
Leon. Marry thy dost wrong me, thou dissembler, thou:
Nay, never lay thy hand vpon thy sword,
I feare thee not.
Claud. Marry he threw my hand,
If it should give your age such cause of feare,
In faith my hand meane nothing to my sword.
Leonato. Tush, tush, man, never fleere and jest at me,
I speake not like a dotard, nor a foole,
As vnder priviledge of age to bragge,
What I have done being yong, or what would doe,
Were I not old, know Claudio to thy head,
Thou hast so wrong'd my innocent childe and me,
That I am forc'd to lay my reverence by,
And with grey haires and bruise of many dates,
Doe challenge thee to triall of a man,
I say thou hast belied mine innocent childe
Thy slander hath gone through and through her heart,
And she lies buried with her ancestors:
O in a tombe where never scandall slept,
Save this of hers, fram'd by thy villanie.
Claud. My villany?
Leonato. Thine Claudio, thine I say.
Prin. You say not right old man.
Leon. My Lord, my Lord,
I'le prove it on his body if he dare,
Despight his nice fence, and his active practise,
His May of youth, and bloome of lustihood
Claud. Away, I will not have to do with you.
Leo. Canst thou so daffe me? thou hast kild my child,
If thou kilst me, boy, thou shalt kill a man.
Bro. He shall kill two of vs, and men indeed,
But that's no matter, let him kill one first:

Win me and weare me, let him answere me,
Come follow me boy, come sir boy, come follow me
Sir boy, ile whip you from your foyning fence,
Nay, as I am a gentleman, I will.

Leon. Brother.

Bro. Content your selfe, God knowes I lou'd my neece,
And she is dead, slander'd to death by villaines,
That dare as well answer a man indeede,
As I dare take a serpent by the tongue,
Boyes, apes, braggarts, Iackes, milke-sops.

Leon Brother Anthony.

Bro. Hold you content, what man I know them, yea
And what they weigh, even to the vtmost scruple,
Scambling, out-faring, fashion-monging boyes,
That lye, and cog and flout, deprave, and slander,
Goe antiquely and show outward hidiousnesse,
And speake of halfe a dozen dang'rous words,
How they might hurt their enemies, if they durst,
And this is all.

Leon. But brother Anthonie,

Ant. Come, tis no matter,
Do not you meddle, let me deale in this.

Pri. Gentlemen both, we will not wake your patience
My heart is sorry for your daughters death:
But on my honour she was charg'd with nothing
But what was true, and very full of proofe.

Leon. My Lord, my Lord.

Prin. I will not heare you

Enter Benedicke.

Leo. No come brother, away, I will be heard.

Exeunt ambo.

Bro. And shall, or some of vs will smart for it.

Prin. See, see, here comes the man we went to seeke.

Clau. Now signior, what newes?

Ben. Good day my Lord.

Prin. Welcome signior, you are almost come to part almost a fray.

Clau. We had litt to haue had out two noses sniape off with two old men without teeth.

Prin. Leonato and his brother, what think'st thou? had wee fought, I doubt we should haue beene too young for them.

Ben. In a false quarrell there is no true valour, I came to seeke you both.

Clau. We haue beene vp and downe to seeke thee, for we are high proofe melancholly, and would faine haue it beaten away, wilt thou vse thy wit?

Ben. It is in my scabbard, shall I draw it?

Prin. Doest thou weare thy wit by thy side?

Clau. Never any did so, though very many haue been beside their wit, I will bid thee draw, as we do the minstrels, draw to pleasure vs.

Prin. As I am an honest man he lookes pale, art thou sicke, or angrie?

Clau. What, courage man: what though care kill'd a cat, thou hast mettle enough in thee to kill care.

Ben. Sir, I shall meete your wit in the carreere, and you charge it against me, I pray you choose another subiect.

Clau. Nay then give him another staffe, this last was broke cross.

Prin. By this light, he changes more and more, I thinke he be angrie indeede.

Clau. If he be he knowes how to turne his girdle.

Ben. Shall I speake a word in your eare?

Clau. God blesse me from a challenge.

Ben. You are a villaine, I lest not, I will make it good how you dare, with what you dare, and when you dare: do me right, or I will protest your cowardise: you haue kill'd a sweete Ladie, and her death shall fall heauie on you, let me heare from you.

Clau. Well, I will meete you, so I may haue good cheare.

Prin. What, a feast, a feast?

Clau. I faith I thank him, he hath bid me to a calues head and a Capon, the which if I doe not carue most curiously, say my knife's naught, shall I not finde a woodcocke too?

Ben. Sir, your wit ambles well, it goes easily.

Prin. Ile tell thee how Beatrice prais'd thy wit the other day: I said thou hadst a fine wit: true saies she, a fine little one: no said I, a great wit. right saies shee, a great grosse one: nay said I, a good wit: iust said she, it hurts no body: nay said I, the gentleman is wise: certain said she, a wise gentleman: nay said I, he hath the tongues: that I believe said shee, for hee swore a thing to me on munday night, which he forswore on tuesday morning: there's a double tongue, there's two tongues: thus did shee an howre together transshape thy particular vertues, yet at last she concluded with a sigh, thou wast the proprest man in Italie.

Claud. For the which she wept heartily, and said shee car'd not.

Prin. Yea that she did, but yet for all that, and if shee did not hate him deadlie, shee would loue him dearely, the old mans daughter told vs all.

Clau. All, all, and moreover, God saw him when he was hid in the garden.

Prin. But when shall we set the savage Bulls hornes on the sensible *Benedick*s head?

Clau. Yea and text vnder-neath, heere dwells Benedick the married man.

Ben. Fare you well, Boy, you know my minde, I will leave you now to your gossip-like humor, you breake iests as braggards do their blades, which God be thanked hurt not: my Lord, for your manie courtesies I thank you, I must discontinue your companie, your brother the Bastard is fled from Messina: you haue among you, kill'd a sweet and innocent Ladie: for my Lord Lacheberd there, he and I shall meete, and till then peace be with him.

Prin. He is in earnest.

Clau. In most profound earnest, and I'le warrant you, for the loue of Beatrice.

Prin. And hath challeng'd thee.

Clau. Most sincerely.

Prin. What a pretie thing man is, when he goes in his doublet and hose, and leaues off his wit.

Enter Constable, Comrade, and Borachio.

Clau. He is then a Giant to an Ape, but then is an Ape a Doctor to such a man.

Prin. But soft you, let me be, pluche vp my heart, and be sad, did he not say my brother was fled?

Const. Come you sir, if iustice cannot tame you, shee shall ne're weigh more reasons in her ballance, nay, and you be a cursing hypocrite once, you must be look'd on.

Prin. How now, two of my brothers men bound? Borachio one.

Clau. Harken after their offence my Lord.

Prin. Officers, what offence haue these men done?

Con. Marrie

Conf. Marie sir, they haue committed false report, moreouer they haue spoken vntruths, secondarily they are slanders, sixt and lastly, they haue belyed a Ladie, thirdly, they haue verified vniust things, and to conclude they are lying knaues.

Prin. First I aske thee what they haue done, thirdlie I aske thee what's their offence, sixt and lastlie why they are committed, and to conclude, what you lay to their charge.

Clau. Rightlie reasoned, and in his owne division, and by my troth there's one meaning well suited.

Prin. Who haue you offended masters, that you are thus bound to your answer? this learned Constable is too cunning to be vnderstood, what's your offence?

Bor. Sweete Prince, let me go no farther to mine answere: do you heare me, and let this Count kill me: I haue deceiued euen your verie eies: what your wisedomes could not discouer, these shallow fooles haue brought to light, who in the night overheard me confessing to this man, how Don John your brother incensed me to slander the Ladie Hero, how you were brought into the Orchard, and Iow me court Margaret in Hero's garments, how you disgrac'd her when you should marie her: my villanie they haue vpon record, which I had rather seale with my death, then repeate ouer to my shame: the Ladie is dead vpon mine and my masters false accusation: and briefelie, I desire nothing but the reward of a villaine.

Prin. Runs not this speech like iron through your blood?

Clau. I haue drunke poison whiles he vtter'd it.

Pedr. But did my Brother set thee on to this?

Bor. Yea, and paid me richly for the practise of it.

Prin. He is compos'd and stam'd at vnacharie,
And sled he is vpon this villanie.

Clau. Sweete Hero, now thy image doth appeare
In the rare semblance that I lou'd it first.

Conf. Come, bring away the plaintiffes, by this time our Sexton hath reformed Signior Leonato of the matter: remembers, do not forget to specifie when time & place shall serue, that I am an Asse.

Con. 2. Here, here comes master Signior Leonato, and the Sexton too.

Enter Leonato.

Leon. Which is the villaine? let me see his eies,
That when I note another man like him,
I may auoide him: which of these is he?

Bor. If you vouchsafe know your vnwrongs, looke on me.

Leon. Art thou thou the slaue that with thy breath hast killd mine innocent childe?

Bor. Yea, euen I alone.

Leon. No, not so villaine, thou beliest thy selfe,
Here stand a peire of honourable men,
A third is fled that had a hand in it:
I thanke you Princes for my daughters death,
Record it with your high and worthie deedes,
'Twas bravely done, if you bethinke you of it.

Clau. I know not how to pay your patience,
Yet I must speake, choose your reuenge your selfe,
Impose me to what penance your inuention
Can lay vpon my sinne, you sinn'd I not,
But in mistaking.

Prin. By my soule nor I,
And yet to satisfie this good old man,
I would bend vnder any heauie waight,
That he shall enioyne me to.

Leon. I cannot bid you bid my daughter liue,
That were impossible, but I praie you both,
Possesse the people in Messina here,
How innocent she died, and if your loue
Can labour aught in sad inuention,
Hang her an epitaph vpon her toomb,
And sing it to her bones, sing it to night:
To morrow morning come you to my house,
And since you could not be my sonne in law,
Be yet my Nephew: my brother hath a daughter,
Almost the copie of my childe that's dead,
And she alone is heire to both of vs,
Giue her the right you should haue giu'n her cosin,
And so dies my reuenge.

Clau. O noble sir!
Your courtkindnesse doth wring teares from me,
I do embrace your offer, and dispose
For henceforth of poore Claudio.

Leon. To morrow then I will expect your comming,
To night I take my leaue, this naughtie man
Shall face to face be brought to Margaret,
Who I believe was packt in all this wrong,
Hired to it by your brother.

Bor. No by my soule she was not,
Nor knew not what she did when she spoke to me,
But alwaies hath bin iust and vertuous,
In anie thing that I do know by her.

Conf. Moreouer sir, which indeede is not vnder white and black, this plaintiffe here, the offendour did call me asse, I beseech you let it be remembered in his punishment, and also the watch heard them talke of one Deformed, they say he weares a key in his eare and a lock hanging by it, and borrowes money in God's name, the which he hath vs'd so long, and never paied, that now men grow hard-hearted and will lend nothing for Gods sake: praie you examine him vpon that point.

Leon. I thanke thee for thy care and honest paines.

Conf. Your worship speakes like a most thankefull and reuerend youth, and I praise God for you.

Leon. There's for thy paines.

Conf. God saue the foundation.

Leon. Goe, I discharge thee of thy prisoner, and I thanke thee.

Conf. I leaue an arrant knaue with your worship, which I beseech your worship to correct yourselfe, for the example of others: God keepe your worship, I wish your worship well, God restore you to health, I humbile giue you leaue to depart, and if a merie meeting may be wishe, God prohibite it: come neighbour.

Leon. Vntill to morrow morning, Lords, farewell.

Exeunt.

Bene. Farewell my Lords, we looke for you to morrow.

Prin. We will not faile.

Clau. To night ile mourne with Hero.

Leon. Bring you these fellowes on, we'l talke with Margaret, how her acquaintance grew with this lewd fellow. Exeunt.

Enter Benedick and Margaret.

Ben. Praie thee sweete Mistris Margaret, deserue well at my hands, by helping me to the speech of Beatrice.

Mar. Will

Mar. Will you then write me a Sonnet in praise of my beautie?

Bene. In so high a stile Margaret, that no man living shall come over it, for in most comely truth thou deseruest it.

Mar. To whose man shall I come ouer it, why, shall I always keepe below staires?

Bene. Thy wit is as quicke as the grey-hounds mouth, it catches.

Mar. And yours, as blunt as the Fencers foiles, which hits, but hurt not.

Bene. A most manly wit Margaret, it will not hurt a woman: and so I pray thee call Beatrice, I giue thee the bucklers.

Mar. Giue vs the swords, wee haue bucklers of our owne.

Bene. If you vse them Margaret, you must put in the pikes with a vice, and they are dangerous weapons for Maides.

Mar. Well, I will call Beatrice to you, who I thinke hath legges. Exit Margarite.

Ben. And therefore will come. The God of loue that sits aboue, and knowes me, and knowes me, how pittifull I deserue. I meane in singing, but in louing, Leander the good swimmer, Troilous the first imploier of pandars, and a whole boobe full of these quondam carpet-mongers, whose name yet runne smoothly in the euen rode of a blanke verse, why they were never so truely turned ouer and ouer as my poore selfe in loue: marrie I cannot shew it rime, I haue tried, I can finde out no rime to Ladie but babie, an innocent rime: for scoorne, horne, a hard rime: for schoole foole, a babling rime: verie ominous endings, no, I was not borne vnder a rhyming Planet, for I cannot woo in festiuall terames:

Enter Beatrice.

Sweete Beatrice would'st thou come when I cal'd thee?

Beat. Yea Signior, and depart when you bid me.

Bene. O stay but till then.

Beat. Then, is spoken: fare you well now, and yet ere I goe, let me goe with that I came, which is, with knowing what hath past betweene you and Claudio.

Bene. Onely foule words, and thereupon I will kisse thee.

Beat. Foule words is but foule wind, and foule wind is but foule breath, and foule breath is noisome, therefore I will depart vnkist.

Bene. Thou hast frighted the word out of his right sence, so forcible is thy wit, but I must tell thee plainely, Claudio vndergoes my challenge, and either I must shortly heare from him, or I will subscribe him a coward, and I pray thee now tell me, for which of my bad parts didst thou first fall in loue with me?

Beat. For them all together, which maintain'd so politique a state of evill, that they will not admit any good part to intermingle with them: but for which of my good parts did you first suffer loue for me?

Bene. Suffer loue! a good epithite, I do suffer loue indeede, for I loue thee against my will.

Beat. In spight of your heart I think, alas poore heart, If you spight it for my sake, I will spight it for yours, for I will never loue that which my friend hates.

Bene. Thou and I are too wise to woo peaceable.

Beat. It appeares not in this confession, there's not one wise man among twentie that will praise himselfe.

Bene. An old, an old instance Beatrice, that lu'd in the time of good neighbours, if a man doe not erect in this age his owne tombe ere he dies, hee shall liue no longer in monument, then the Bels ring, & the Widdow weepes.

Beat. And how long is that thinke you

Ben. Question, why an hower in clamour and a quarter in rhewme, therfore is it most expedient for the wise, if Don worme (his conscience) finde no impediment to the contrarie, to be the trumpet of his owne vertues, as I am to my selfe so much for praising my selfe, who I my selfe will beare witnesse is praise worthie, and now tell me, how doth your cosin?

Beat. Verie ill.

Bene. And how doe you?

Beat. Verie ill too.

Enter Vrsula.

Bene. Serue God, loue me, and mend, there will I leaue you too, for here comes one in haste.

Vrs. Madam, you must come to your Vncle, yonders old coile at home, it is prooued my Ladie Hero hath bin falsely accused, the Prince and Claudio mightilie abused, and Don John is the author of all, who is fled and gone: will you come presentlie?

Beat. Will you go heare this newes Signior?

Bene. I will liue in thy heart, die in thy lap, and be buried in thy eies: and moreouer, I will goe with thee to thy Vncles. Exeunt.

Enter Claudio, Prince, and three or foure with Tapers.

Clau. Is this the monument of Leonato?

Lord. It is my Lord. Epitaph.

Done to death by slanderous tongues,
Was the Hero that here lies:
Death in guerdon of her wrong,
Gives her fame which never dies:
So the life that died with shame,
Lives in death with glorious fame.
Hang thee there vpon the tombe,
Praising her when I am dombe.

Clau. Now music sound & sing your solemne hymne

Song.

Pardon goddesse of the night,
Those that slew thy virgin knight,
For the which with songs of woe,
Round about her tombe they goe:
Midnight assist our moane, help vs to sigh and groane.
Heavily, heavily.
Graves yawne and yelde your dead,
Till death be vttered,
Heavenly, heavenly.

(this night.

Lo. Now vnto thy bones good night, yeerely will I do

Prin. Good morrow masters, put your Torches out,
The wolues haue preied, and looke, the gentle day
Before the wheeles of Phœbus, round about
Dapples the drowsie East with spots of grey:
Thanks to you all, and leaue vs, fare you well.

Clau. Good morrow masters, each his seuerall way.

Prin. Come let vs hence, and put on other weedes,
And then to Leonatos we will goe.

Clau. And Hymen now with luckier issue speeds,

Then

Then this for whom we rendred vp this woe. Exeunt.

Enter Leonato, Bene. Marg. Vrsula, old man, Frier, Hero.

Frier. Did I not tell you she was innocent?

Leo. So are the Prince and Claudio who accus'd her,
Vpon the error that you heard debated:
But Margaret was in some fault for this,
Although against her will as it appeares,
In the true course of all the question.

Old. Well, I am glad that all things sort so well.

Bene. And so am I, being else by faith enforc'd
To call young Claudio to a reckoning for it.

Leo. Well daughter, and you gentlewomen all,
Withdraw into a chamber by your selves,
And when I send for you, come hither mask'd:
The Prince and Claudio promis'd by this houre
To visit me, you know your office Brother,
You must be father to your brothers daughter,
And give her to young Claudio. Exeunt Ladies.

Old. Which I will doe with confirm'd countenance.

Bene. Frier, I must intreat your paines, I thinke.

Frier. To doe what Signior?

Bene. To bindo me, or vndoe me, one of them:
Signior Leonato, truth it is good Signior,
Your neece regards me with an eye of fauour.

Leo. That eye my daughter lent her, 'tis most true.

Bene. And I doe with an eye of loue requite her.

Leo. The sight whereof I thinke you had from me,
From Claudio, and the Prince, but what's your will?

Bene. Your answer sir is Enigmatical,
But for my will, my will is, your good will
May stand with ours, this day to be conioyn'd,
In the state of honourable marriage,
In which (good Frier) I shall desire your helpe.

Leo. My heart is with your liking.

Frier. And my helpe.

Enter Prince and Claudio, with attendants.

Pri. Good morrow to this faire assembly.

Leo. Good morrow Prince, good morrow Claudio:
We heere attend you, are you yet determin'd,
To day to marry with my brothers daughter?

Claud. I'le hold my minde were she an Ethiope.

Leo. Call her forth brother, heres the Frier ready.

Pri. Good morrow Benedick, why what's the matter?
That you heere such a Febrisartic face,
So full of frost, of storme, and cloudinesse.

Claud. I thinke he thinkes vpon the sauage bull:
Tush, fears not man, we'll tip thy homes with gold,
And all Europe shall reioyce at thee,
As once Europa did at lusty Iove,
When he would play the noble beast in loue.

Bene. Bull Iove sir, had an amiable low,
And some such strange bull leapt your fathers Cow,
A gre a Calfe in that same noble feat,
Much like to you, for you haue iust his bleat.

Enter brother, Hero, Beatrice, Margaret, Vrsula.

Cla. For this I owe you: here comes other reckonings.
Which is the Lady I must seize vpon?

Leo. This same is she, and I doe giue you her.

Cla. Why then she's mine, sweet let me see your face.

Leo. No that you shal not, till you take her hand,
Before this Frier, and swearе to marry her.

Cla. Giue me your hand before this holy Frier,
I am your husband if you like of me.

Hero. And when I liu'd I was your other wife,
And when you lou'd, you were my other husband.

Cla. Another Hero?

Hero. Nothing certainer.
One Hero died, but I doe liue,
And surely as I liue, I am a maid.

Pri. The former Hero, Hero that is dead.

Leo. Shee died my Lord, but whiles her slander liu'd

Frier. All this amazement can I qualifie,
When after that the holy rites are ended,
I'le tell you largely of faire Heroes death:
Meane time let wonder seeme familiar,
And to the chappell let vs presently.

Ben. Soft and faire Frier, which is Beatrice?

Beat. I answer to that name, what is your will?

Bene. Doe not you loue me?

Beat. Why no, no more then reason.

Bene. Why then your Vncle, and the Prince, & Claudio, haue beene deceiued, they swore you did.

Beat. Doe not you loue mee?

Bene. Troth no, no more then reason.

Beat. Why then my Cosin Margaret and Vrsula
Are much deceiu'd, for they did sweare you did.

Bene. They swore you were almost sicke for me.

Beat. They swore you were wel-nye dead for me.

Bene. 'Tis no matter, then you doe not loue me?

Beat. No truly, but in friendly recompence.

Leo. Come Cosin, I am sure you loue the gentleman.

Clau. And I'le be sworne vpon't, that he loues her,
For here's a paper written in his hand,
A halting sonnet of his owne pure braine,
Fashioned to Beatrice.

Hero. And heere's another,
Writ in my cosins hand, stolne from her pocket
Containing her affection vnto Benedick.

Bene. A miracle, here's our owne hands against our hearts: come I will haue thee, but by this light I take thee for pitie.

Beat. I would not deny you, but by this good day, I yeeld vpon great perswasion, & partly to saue your life, for I was told, you were in a consumption

Leo. Peace I will stop your mouth.

Pri. How doest thou Benedick the married man?

Bene. I'le tell thee what Prince; a College of wittcrackers cannot flout me out of my humour, dost thou think I care for a Satyre or an Epigram? no, if a man will be beaten with brames, a shall weare nothing handsome about him: in brieffe, since I do purpose to marry, I will thinke nothing to any purpose that the world can say against it, and therefore never flout at me, for I haue said against it: for man is a giddy thing, and this is my conclusion: for thy part Claudio, I did thinke to haue beaten thee, but in that thou art like to be my kinsman, liue vnbruis'd, and love my cousin.

Cla. I had well hop'd thou wouldst haue denied Beatrice, that I might haue cudgel'd thee out of thy single life, to make thee a double dealer, which out of question thou wilt be, if my Cousin do not loothe exceeding meerely to thee.

Bene. Come, come, we are friends, let's haue a dance ere we are married, that we may lighten our own hearts, and our wiues heeles.

Leo. We'll haue dancing afterward.

Bene. First, of my word, therfore play musick. Prince, thou art sad, get thee a wife, get thee a wife, there is no staff more reuerend then one tipt with horn. Enter Mess.

Messen. My Lord, your brother Iohn is tane in flight,
And brought with armed men backe to Messina.

Bene. Thinke not on him till to morrow, I'le deuise thee brauе punishments for him: strike vp Pipers. Dance.

L FINIS.

Loues Labour's lost.

Actus primus.

Enter Ferdinand King of Nauarre, Berowne, Longauill, and Dumaine.

Ferdinand.

LEt Fame, that all hunt after in their liues,
Liue registred vpon our brazen Tombes,
And then grace vs in the disgrace of death.
when spight of cormorant deuouring Time,
Th endeuour of this present breath may buy:
That honour which shall bate his scythes keene edge,
And make vs heyres of all eternitie
Therefore braue Conquerours, for so you are,
That warre against your owne affections,
And the huge Armie of the worlds desires.
Our late edict shall strongly stand in force,
Nauar shall be the wonder of the world.
Our Court shall be a little Achademe,
Still and contemplatiue in liuing Art
You three, Berowne, Dumaine, and Longauill,
Haue sworne for three yeeres terme, to liue with me:
My fellow Schollers, and to keepe those statutes
That are recorded in this seedule heere.
Your oathes are past, and now subscribe your names:
That his owne hand may strike his honour downe,
That violates the smallest branch herein:
If you are arm'd to doe, as sworne to do,
Subscribe to your deepe oathes, and keepe it to.

Longauill. I am resolu'd, 'tis but a three yeeres fast:
The minde shall banquet, though the body pine,
Fat paunches haue leane pates: and dainty bits,
Make rich the ribs, but bankerout the wits.

Dumaine. My louing Lord, Dumaine is mortified,
The grosser manner of these worlds delights,
He throwes vpon the grosse worlds baser slaues:
To loue, to wealth, to pompe, I pine and die,
With all these living in Philosophie.

Berowne. I can but say their protestation over,
So much, deare Liege, I haue alredy sworne,
That is, to liue and study heere three yeeres.
But there are other strict obseruances:
As not to see a woman in that terme,
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
And one day in a weeke to touch no foode:
And but one meale on every day beside:
The which I hope is not enrolled there
And then to sleepe but three hours in the night,
And not be seene to winke of all the day,
When I was wont to thinke no harme all night,
And make a darke night too of halfe the day:
Which I hope well is not enrolled there.
O, these are barren tasks, too hard to keepe,
Not to see Ladies, study, fast, not sleepe.

Ferd. Your oath is past, to passe away from these.

Berow. Let me say no my Liedge, and if you please,
I onely swore to study with your grace,
And stay here in your Court for three yeeres space.

Longa. You swore to that Berowne, and to the rest.

Berow. By yea and nay sir, then I swore in iest.
What is the end of study, let me know?

Fer. Why that to know which else wee should not know.

Ber. Things hid & bard (you meane) fro common sense.

Ferd. I, that is studies god-like recompence.

Ber. Come on then, I will sweare to studie so,
To know the thing I am forbid to know:
As thus, to study where I well may dine,
When I fast expressly am forbid.
Or studie where to meet some Mistresse fine,
When Mistresses from common sense are hid.
Or having sworne too hard a keeping oath,
Studie to breake it, and not breake my troth.
If studies gaine be thus, and this be so,
Studie knowes that which yet it doth not know,
Sweare me to this, and I will neer say no

Ferd. These be the stops that hinder studie quite,
And traine our intellects to vaine delight.

Ber. Why? all delights are vaine, and that most vaine
Which with paine purchas'd, doth inherit paine,
As painefully to poare vpon a Booke,
To seeke the light of truth, while truth the while
Doth falsely blinde the eye-sight of his looke:
Light seeking light, doth light of light beguile:
So ere you finde where light in darknesse lies,
Your light growes darke by losing of your eyes.
Studie me how to please the eye indeede,
By fixing it vpon a fairer eye,
Who dazling so, that eye shall be his head,
And giue him light that it was blinded by.
Studie is like the heauens glorious Sunne,
That will not be deepe search'd with saucy looke:
Small haue continuall plodders ever wonne,
Save base authoritie from others Bookes.
These earthly Godfathers of heauens lights,
That giue a name to every fixed Starre,
Haue no more profit of their shining nights,
Then those that walke and wot not what they are.
Too much to know, is to know nought but fame:
And every Godfather can giue a name.

Fer. How well hee's read, to reason against reading.

Dum.

Dum. Proceeded well, to ſtop all good proceeding.
Lon. Hee weedes the corne, and ſtill lets grow the weeding.
Ber. The Spring is neare when greene geeſe are a breeding.
Dum. How followes that?
Ber. Fit in his place and time.
Dum. In reaſon nothing.
Ber. Something then in rime.
Ferd. Berowne is like an enemeie ſleeping Froſt,
That bites the firſt borne infants of the Spring.
Ber. Well, ſay I am, why ſhould proud Summer boaſt,
Before the Birds haue any cauſe to ſing?
Why ſhould I joy in any abortiue birth?
At Chriſtmas I no more deſire a Roſe,
Then wiſh a Snow in Maiues new fringed ſhowers
But like of each thing that in ſeaſon growes.
So you to ſtudie now it is too late,
That were to clymbe ore the houſe to vnlocke the gate.
Fer. Well, ſit you out: go home Berowne: adieu.
Ber. No my good Lord, I haue ſworn to ſtay with you.
And though I haue for barbariſme ſpoke more,
Then for that Angell knowledge you can ſay,
Yet confident Ile keepe what I haue ſworne,
And bide the penance of each three yeares day.
Giue me the paper, let me reade the ſame,
And to the ſtrictheſt decrees Ile write my name.
Fer. How well this yeelding reſcues thee from ſhame.
Ber. Item. That no woman ſhall come within a mile of my Court
Hath this bin proclaimed?
Lon. Foure dayes ago.
Ber. Let's ſee the penaltie.
On paine of loſing her tongue.
Who deuiſ'd this penaltie?
Lon. Marry that did I
Ber. Sweete Lord, and why?
Lon. To fright them hence with that dread penaltie,
A dangerous law againſt gentilitie.
Item, If any man be ſeene to talke with a woman within the terme of three yeares, he ſhall endure ſuch publique ſhame as the reſt of the Court ſhall poſſibly deuiſe.
Ber. This Article my Liedge your ſelfe muſt breake,
For well you know here comes in Embaſſie
The French Kings daughter, with your ſelfe to ſpeake:
A Maide of grace and complete maieſtie,
About ſurrender vp of Aquitaine.
To her decrepit, ſicke, and bed-rid Father
Therefore this Article is made in vaine,
Or vainly comes th'admired Princeſſe hither.
Fer. What ſay you Lords?
Why, this was quite forgot
Ber. So Studie euermore is ouerſhot,
While it doth ſtudy to haue what it would,
It doth forget to doe the thing it ſhould:
And when it hath the thing it hunteth moſt,
'Tis moe at townes with fire, ſo wan, ſo loſt.
Fer. We muſt of force diſpence with this Decree,
She muſt lye here on mere neceſſitie.
Ber. Neceſſity will make vs all forſworne
Three thouſand times within this three yeares ſpace:
For every man with his affects is borne,
Not by might maſtred, but by ſpeciall grace.
If I breake faith, this word ſhall breake for me,
I am forſworne on meere neceſſitie.
So to the Lawes at large I write my name,
And he that breakes them in the leaſt degree,
Stands in attainder of eternall ſhame.
Suggeſtions are to others as to me:
But I believe although I ſeeme ſo loth,
I am the laſt that will laſt keepe his oth.
But is there no quicke recreation granted?
Fer. I that there is, our Court you know is haunted
With a refined traueller of Spaine,
A man in all the worlds new faſhion planted,
That hath a mint of phraſes in his braine:
One, who the muſicke of his owne vaine tongue,
Doth ravith like inchanting harmonie:
A man of complements whom right and wrong
Haue choſe as vmpire of their mutinie.
This childe of fancie that Armado hight,
For interim to our ſtudies ſhall relate,
In high-borne words the worth of many a Knight.
From taxes Spaine loſt in the worlds debate.
How you delight my Lords, I know not I,
But I protect I loue to heare him lie,
And I will vſe him for my Muſicke.
Ber. Armado is a moſt illuſtrious wight,
A man of fire, new words, faſhions owne Knight.
Lon. Coſtard ſhe ſwoine and he, ſhall be our ſport,
And ſo to ſtudie, three yeares is but ſhort.

Enter a Conſtable with Coſtard with a Letter

Conſ. Which is the Dukes owne perſon.
Ber. This fellow, What would'ſt?
Con. I my ſelfe reprehend his owne perſon, for I am his graces Thorborough: But I would ſee his own perſon in flеſh and blood.
Ber. This is he.
Con. Signeur Arme, Arme commends you:
There's villanie abroad, this letter will tell you more.
Clow. Sir the Contempts thereof are as touching me.
Fer. A letter from the magnificent Armado.
Ber. How low ſoever the matter, I hope in God for high words.
Lon. A high hope for a low heauen, God grant vs patience.
Ber. To heare, or forbeare hearing.
Lon. To heare meekely ſir, and to laugh moderately, or to forbeare both.
Ber. Well ſir, be it as the ſtile ſhall giue vs cauſe to clime in the merrineſſe.
Clo. The matter is to me ſir, as concerning Iaquenetta. The manner of it is, I was taken with the manner.
Ber. In what manner?
Clo. In manner and forme following ſir all thoſe three. I was ſeene with her in the Manor houſe, ſitting with her vpon the Forme, and taken following her into the Parke: which put to gether, is in manner and forme following. Now ſir for the manner; It is the manner of a man to ſpeake to a woman, for the forme in ſome ſorme.
Ber. For the following ſir.
Clo. As it ſhall follow in my correction, and God defend the right.
Fer. Will you heare this Letter with attention?
Ber. As we would heare an Oracle.
Clo. Such is the ſimplicitie of man to harken after the flеſh.

Ferdinand.

Great Dumaine, the Welkins Viceregent, and sole dominator of Nauar, my soules earths God, and bodies fostring patrone:

Cost. Not a word of Costard yet.

Ferd. So it is.

Cost. It may be so: but if he say it is so, he is in telling true: but so.

Ferd. Peace,

Clow. Be to me, and every man that dares not fight.

Ferd. No words,

Clow. Of other mens secrets I beseech you.

Ferd. So it is besieged with sable coloured melancholie, I did commaund the blacke oppressing humour to the most wholesome Physicke of thy health-giuing eyre: And as I am a Gentleman, betooke my selfe to walke: the time When? about the first houre, when birds had more greefe, birds had perke, and men fell downe to that nourishment which is called supper: So much for the time When. Now for the ground Which? which I meane I walkt vpon, it is ycleped, Thy Parke. Then for the place Where? where I meane I did encounter that obscene and most preposterous event that draweth from my snow-white pen the ebon coloured Inke. which here thou viewest, beholdest, surueyest, or seest But to the place Where? It standeth North North-east and by East from the West corner of thy curious knotted garden: There did I see that low spirited Swaine, that base Minow of thy mirth, (Clow Me?) that vnlettered small knowing soule, (Clow Me?) that shallow vessell (Clow. Still me?) which as I remember, hight Costard, (Clow. O me) sorted and comforted contrary to thy established proclaimed Edict and Continent, Canons: Which with, I with, but with this I passion to say wherewith:

Clo. With a Wench.

Ferd. With a child of our Grandmother Eue, a female; or for thy more sweet vnderstanding a woman: him, I (as my ever esteemed duties pricke me on) haue sent to thee, to receiue the meed of punishment by thy sweet Graces Officer Anthony Dull, a man of good repute, carriage, bearing, & estimation.

Anth. Me, an't shall please you? I am Anthony Dull.

Ferd. For Iequenetta (so is the weaker vessell called) which I apprehended with the aforesaid Swaine, I keepe her as a vessell of thy Loues sute, and shall as the loaf of thy sweet notice, bring her to triall. Thine in all complements of deuoted and heart-burning heat of duie,

Don Adriano de Armado.

Ber. This is not so well as I looked for, but the best that ever I heard.

Pri I the best, for the worst But sirra, What say you to this?

Clo. Sir I confesse the Wench.

Pri. Did you heare the Proclamation?

Clo. I doe confesse much of the hearing it, but little of the marking of it.

Pri. It was proclaimed a yeeres imprisonment to bee taken with a Wench.

Clow I was taken with none sir, I was taken with a Damosell.

Pri. Well, it was proclaimed Damosell.

Clo. This was no Damosell neyther sir, shee was a Virgin.

Pri It is so varried to, for it was proclaimed Virgin.

Clo. If it were, I denie her Virginitie: I was taken with a Maide.

Pri. This Maid will not serue your turne sir.

Clo. This Maide will serue my turne sir.

Kin. Sir I will pronounce your sentence: You shall fast a Weeke with Bronne and water.

Clo. I had rather pray a Moneth with Mutton and Porridge.

Kin And Don Armado shall be your keeper.
My Lord Berowne, see him deliuer'd ore,
And goe we Lords to put in practice that,
Which each to other hath so strongly sworne.

Bero. He lay my head to any good mans hat,
These paches and lawes will proue an idle scorne
Sirra, come on.

Clo. I suffer for the truth sir: for true is it, I was taken with Iaquenetta, and Iaquenetta is a true girle, and therefore welcome the sowre cup of prosperitie, affliction may one day smile againe, and vntill then sit downe sorrow. Exeu.

Enter Armado and Mathias Page.

Arma. Boy, What signe is it when a man of great spirit growes melancholy?

Boy. A great signe sir, that he will looke sad.

Brag. Why? sadnesse is one and the selfe-same thing, deare imps.

Boy. No no, O Lord sir no.

Brag. How canst thou part sadnesse and melancholy my tender Iuuenall?

Boy. By a familiar demonstration of the working, my tough signeur..

Brag. Why tough signeur? Why tough signeur?

Boy Why tender Iuuenall? Why tender Iuuenall?

Brag. I spoke it tender Iuuenall, as a congruent apotheson. appertaining to thy young dates, which we may nominate tender.

Boy. And I tough signeur, as an appertinent title to your olde time, which we may name tough.

Brag. Pretty and apt.

Boy. How mean you sir, I pretty, and my saying apt? or I apt, and my saying prettie?

Brag. Thou pretty because little.

Boy. Little pretty, because little; wherefore apt?

Brag And therefore apt, because quicke.

Boy. Speake you this in my praise Master?

Brag. In thy condigne praise.

Boy. I will praise an Eele with the same praise.

Brag. What? that an Eele is ingenious.

Boy. That an Eeele is quicke.

Brag. I doe say thou art quicke in answeres. Thou hast'st my blood.

Boy. I am answer'd sir.

Brag. I loue not to be crost. (him.

Boy. He speakes the mere contrary, crosses loue not

Br. I haue promis'd to study iij. yeeres with the Duke.

Boy. You may doe it in an houre sir.

Brag. Impossible.

Boy. How many is one thrice told?

Bra. I am ill at reckoning, it fits the spirit of a Tapster.

Boy. You are a gentleman and a gamester sir.

Brag. I confesse both, they are both the vantish of a complest man.

Boy. Then I am sure you know how much the gross summe of deuiseace amounts to.

Brag. It doth amount to one more than two.

Boy. Which the base vulgar call three.

Br. True. Boy. Why sir is this such a peece of study? Now here's three studied, ere you'll thrice wink, it how easie it is to put yeres to the word three, and study three yeeres in two words, the dancing horse will tell you.

Brag. A most fine Figure.

Boy. To prouue you Cypher.

Brag. I will hereupon confesse I am in loue: and as it is base for a Souldier to loue; so am I in loue with a base wench. If drawing my sword against the humour of affection, would deliuer mee from the reprobate thought of it, I would take Desire prisoner, and ransome him to any French Courtier for a new deuis'd curtsie. I think scorne to sigh, me thinks I should out-sweare Cupid. Comfort me Boy, What great men haue beene in loue?

Boy. Hercules Master.

Brag. Most sweete Hercules: more authority deare Boy, name more; and sweet my childe let them be men of good repute and carriage.

Boy. Sampson Master, he was a man of good carriage, great carriage: for hee carried the Towne-gates on his backe like a Porter, and he was in loue.

Brag. O well-knit Sampson, strong ioynted Sampson; I doe excell thee in my rapier as much as thou didst mee in carrying gates. I am in loue too. Who was Sampsons loue my deare Moth?

Boy. A Women, Master.

Brag. Of what complexion.

Boy. Of all the foure, or the three, or the two, or one of the foure.

Brag. Tell me precisely of what complexion?

Boy Of the sea-water Greene sir.

Brag. Is that one of the foure complexions?

Boy. As I haue read sir, and the best of them too.

Brag. Greene indeed is the colour of Louers: but to haue a Loue of that colour, methinkes Sampson had small reason for it. He surely affected her for her wit.

Boy. It was so sir, for she had a greene wit.

Brag. My Loue is most immaculate white and red.

Boy. Most immaculate thoughts Master, are mask'd vnder such colours.

Brag. Define, define, well educated infant.

Boy. My fathers witte, and my mothers tongue assist mee.

Brag. Sweet inuocation of a childe, most pretty and pathetical.

Boy. If she be made of white and red,
Her faults will nere be knowne:
For blush-in cheekes by faults are bred,
And feares by pale white showne:
Then if she feare, or be to blame,
By this you shall not know,
For still her cheekes possesse the same,
Which nature she doth owe:

A dangerous time mustar against the reason of white and redde.

Brag. Is there not a ballet Boy, of the King and the Begger?

Boy. The world was very guilty of such a Ballet some three ages since, but I thinke now 'tis not to be found: or if it were, it would neither serue for the writing, nor the tune.

Brag. I will haue that subiect newly writ ore, that I may example my digression by some mighty president. Boy, I doe loue that Countrey girle that I tooke in the Parke with the rationall hinde Costard; she deserues well.

Boy To bee whip'd: and yet a better loue then my Master.

Brag. Sing Boy, my spirit grows heauy in loue.

Boy. And that's great marrell, louing a light wench.

Brag. I say sing.

Boy. Forbeare till this company be past.

Enter Clowne, Constable, and Wench.

Const. Sir, the Dukes pleasure, is that you keepe Costard safe, and you must let him take no delight, nor no penance, but he must fast three daies a weeke: for this Damsell, I must keepe her at the Parke, shee is alowd for the Day-woman. Fare you well. Exit.

Brag. I do betray my selfe with blushing: Maide.

Maid. Man.

Brag. I wil visit thee at the Lodge.

Maid. That's here by

Brag. I know where it is situate.

Mai. Lord how wise you are!

Brag. I will tell thee wonders.

Mai. With what face?

Brag. I loue thee.

Mai. So I heard you say.

Brag. And so farewell.

Mai. Faire weather after you.

Clo. Come Iaquenetta, away. Exeunt.

Brag. Villaine, thou shalt fast for thy offences ere thou be pardoned.

Clo. Well sir, I hope when I doe it, I shall doe it on a full stomacke.

Brag. Thou shalt be heauily punished.

Clo. I am more bound to you then your fellowes, for they are but lightly rewarded.

Clo. Take away this villaine, shut him vp.

Boy. Come you transgressing slaue, away.

Clow. Let mee not bee pent vp sir, I will fast being loose.

Boy. No sir, that were fast and loose: thou shalt to prison.

Clow. Well, if ever I do see the merry dayes of desolation that I haue seene, some shall see.

Boy. What shall some see?

Clow. Nay nothing, Master Moth, but what they looke vpon. It is not for prisoners to be silent in their words, and therefore I will say nothing: I thanke God, I haue as little patience as another man, and therefore I can be quiet. Exit.

Brag. I doe affect the very ground (which is base, where her shoe (which is baser) guided by her foote (which is basest) doth tread. I shall be forsworn (which is a great argument of falshood) if I loue. And how can that be true loue, which is falsly attempted? Loue is a familiar, Loue is a Diuell. There is no euill Angell but Loue, yet Sampson was so tempted, and he had an excellent strength: Yet Salomon so seduced, and hee had a very good witte. Cupids But shaft is too hard for Hercules Clubbe, and therefore too much odds for a Spanniards Rapier: The first and second cause will not serue my turne: the Passado hee respects not, the Duello he regards not; his disgrace is to be called Boy, but his glorie is to subdue men. Adue Valour, rust Rapier, bee still Drum, for your manager is in loue; yea hee loueth. Assist me some extemporall god of Rime, for I am sure I shall turne Sonnet. Deuise Wit, write Pen, for I am for whole volumes in folio. Exit.

Finis Actus Primus

Actus Secunda.

Enter the Princesse of France, with three attending Ladies and three Lords.

Boyet. Now Madam summon vp your dearest spirits
Consider who the King your fathers sends
To whom he sends, and what's his Embassie
Your selfe, held precious in the worlds esteeme,
To parler with the sole inheritour
Of all perfections that a man may owe,
Matchlesse Nauarre, the plea of no lesse weight
Then Aquitaine, a Dowrie for a Queene,
Be now as prodigall of all deare grace,
As Nature was in making Graces deare,
When she did starue the generall world beside,
And prodigally gaue them all to you.
Queen. Good L. Boyet, my beauty though but mean,
Needs not the painted flourish of your praise
Beauty is bought by iudgement of the eye,
Not vttred by base sale of chapmens tongues:
I am lesse proud to heare you tell my worth,
Then you much willing to be counted wise,
In spending your wit in the praise of mine.
But now to taske the tasker, good Boyet,
Prin. You are not ignorant all-telling fame
Doth noyse abroad Nauarre hath made a vow,
Till painefull studie shall out-weare three yeares,
No woman may approach his silent Court:
Therefore tis meeteth it a needfull course,
Before we enter his forbidden gates,
To know his pleasure, and in that behalfe
Bold of your worthinesse, we single you,
As our best mouing faire soliciter:
Tell him, the daughter of the King of France,
On serious businesse craving quicke dispatch,
Importunes personall conference with his grace
Haste, signifie so much while we attend,
Like humble vising'd suters his high will.
Boy. Proud of imployment, willingly I goe Exit.
Prin. All pride is willing pride, and yours is so.
Who are the Votaries my loving Lords, that are vow-fellowes with this vertuous Duke?
Lor. Longauill is one.
Prince. Know you the man?
1 Lady. I know him Madame at a marriage feast,
Betweene L. Perigort and the beautious heire
Of Iaques Fauconbridge solemnized.
In Normandie saw I this Longauill,
A man of soueraigne parts he is esteem'd:
Well fitted in Arts, glorious in Armes:
Nothing becomes him ill that he would well.
The only soyle of his faire vertues glosse,
If vertues glosse will staine with any soile,
Is a sharp wit match'd with too blunt a Will.
Whose edge hath power to cut whose will still wills,
It should none spare that come within his power.
Prin. Some merry mocking Lord belike, is so?
Lad. 1. They say so most, that most his humors know.
Prin. Such short lin'd wits do wisher as they grow.
Who are the rest?
2. Lad. The yong Dumaine, a well accomplisht youth,
Of all that Vertue loue, for Vertue loued.
Most power to doe most harme, least knowing ill:
For he hath wit to make an ill shape good,
And shape to win grace though she had no wit.
I saw him at the Duke Alançons once,
And much too little of that good I saw,
Is my report to his great worthinesse.
Rosa. Another of these Students at that time,
Was there with him, as I haue heard a truth.
Berowne they call him, but a merrier man,
Within the limit of becoming mirth,
I never spent an houres talke withall.
His eye begets occasion for his wit,
For every obiect that the one doth catch
The other turnes to a mirth-mouing iest.
Which his faire tongue (conceits expositor)
Delivers in such apt and gracious words,
That aged eares play treuant at his tales,
And yonger hearings are quite rauisshed.
So sweet and voluble is his discourse
Prin. God blesse my Ladies, are they all in loue?
That every one her owne hath garnisshed,
With such bedecking ornaments of praise
Ma. Heere comes Boyet

Enter Boyet.

Prin. Now, what admittance Lord?
Boyet. Nauarre had notice of your faire approach,
And he and his competitors in oath,
Were all addrest to meete you gentle Lady
Before I came: Marrie thus much I haue learnt,
He rather meanes to lodge you in the field,
Like one that comes heere to besiege his Court,
Then seeke a dispensation for his oath:
To let you enter his vnpeopled house.

Enter Nauarr, Longauill, Dumaine, and Berowne.

Heere comes Nauarr
Nau. Faire Princesse, welcom to the Court of Nauarr
Prin. Faire I giue you backe againe, and welcome I haue not yet: the roofe of this Court is too high to bee yours, and welcome to the wide fields, too base to be mine.
Nau. You shall be welcome Madam to my Court.
Prin. I wil be welcome then, Conduct me thither.
Nau. Heare me deare Lady, I haue sworne an oath.
Prin. Our Lady helpe my Lord, he'll be forsworne.
Nau. Not for the world faire Madam, by my will.
Prin. Why, will shall breake it will, and nothing els
Nau. Your Ladiship is ignorant what it is.
Prin. Were my Lord so, his ignorance were wise,
Where now his knowledge must prove ignorance.
I heare your grace hath sworne out Housekeeping:
Tis deadly sinne to keepe that oath my Lord,
And sinne to breake it:
But pardon me, I am too sodaine bold,
To teach a Teacher ill beseemeth me.
Vouchsafe to read the purpose of my comming,
And sodainly resolue me in my suite.
Nau. Madam, I will, if sodainly I may.
Prin. You will the sooner that I were away,
For you'll proue perior'd if you make me stay.
Berow. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?
Rosa. Did not I dance with you in Brabant once?

Ber. I know you did.
Rosa. How needlesse was it then to ask the question?
Ber. You must not be so quicke.
Rosa. 'Tis long of you y spur me with such questions.
Ber. Your wit's too hot, it speeds too fast, 'twill tire.
Rosa. Not till it leave the Rider in the mire.
Ber. What time a day?
Rosa. The howre that fooles should aske.
Ber. Now fairre befall your maske.
Rosa. Faire fall the face it covers.
Ber. And send you many lovers.
Rosa. Amen, so you banoue.
Ber. Nay then will I be gone.
Kin. Madame, your father heere doth intimate,
The paiment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
Being but th one halfe, of an entire summe,
Disbursed by my father in his warres.
But say that he, or we, as neither have
Receiu'd that summe; yet there remaines vnpaid
A hundred thousand more: in surety of the which,
One part of Aquitaine is bound to vs,
Although not valued to the moneys worth.
If then the King your father will restore
But that one halfe which is vnsatisfied,
We will give vp our right in Aquitaine,
And hold fast friendship with his Maiestie:
But that it seemes he little purposeth,
For here he doth demand to have repaie,
An hundred thousand Crownes, and not demands
One paiment of a hundred thousand Crownes,
To have his title lost in Aquitaine.
Which we much rather had depart withall,
And have the money by our father lent,
Than Aquitaine, so gaelded as it is.
Dearre Princesse, were not his requests so farre
From reasons yeilding, your faire selfe should make
A yeilding 'gainst some reason in my breast,
And goe well satisfied to France again.
Prin. You doe the King my Father too much wrong,
And wrong the reputation of your name,
In so enforcing to confesse receyt
Of that which hath so faithfully beene paid.
Kin. I doe protest I never heard of it,
And if you prove it, I'le repay it backe,
Or yeeld vp Aquitaine.
Prin. We arrest your word:
Boyet, you can produce acquaintances
For such a summe, from special Officers,
Of Charles his Father.
Kin. Satisfie me so.
Boyet. So please your Grace, the packet is not come
Where that and other specialties are bound,
To morrow you shall haue a sight of them.
Kin. It shall suffice me; at which interview,
All liberall reason would I yeeld vnto:
Meane time, receiue such welcome at my hand,
As Honour, without breach of Honour may
Make tender of, to thy true worthinesse.
You may not come faire Princesse in my gates,
But here without you shall be so receiu'd,
As you shall deeme your selfe lodg'd in my heart,
Though so denie'd farther harbour in my house:
Your own good thoughts excuse me, and farewell,
To morrow we shall visit you againe.
Prin. Sweet health & faire desires consort your grace.
Kin. Thy own wish wish I thee, in every place. Exit.

Boy. Lady, I will commend you to my owne heart.
La. Ro. Pray you doe my commendations,
I would be glad to see it.
Boy. I would you heard it grone.
La. Ro. Is the soule sicke?.
Boy. Sicke at the heart.
La. Ro. Alacke, let it blood.
Boy. Would that doe it good?
La. Ro. My Phisicke saies I.
Boy. Will you prick't with your eye.
La. Ro. No poyet, with my knife.
Boy. Now God save thy life.
La. Ro. And yours from long living.
Ber. I cannot stay thanks-giving. Exit.

Enter Dumaine.

Dum. Sir, I pray you a word: What Lady is that same?
Boy. The heere of Alanson, Rosaline her name.
Dum. A gallant Lady, Monsier fare you well.
Long. I beseech you a word what is she in the white?
Boy. A woman sometimes, if you saw her in the light.
Long. Perchance light in the light: I desire her name
Boy. Shee hath but one for her selfe,
To desire that were a shame.
Long. Pray you sir, whose daughter?
Boy. Her Mothers, I haue heard.
Long. Gods blessing a your beard.
Boy. Good sir be not offended,
Shee is an heyre of Faukonbridge.
Long. Nay, my choller is ended:
Shee is a most sweet Lady. Exit Long.
Boy. Not vnlike sir, that may be.

Enter Berowne.

Ber. What's her name in the cap.
Boy. Katherine by good hap.
Ber. Is she wedded, or no.
Boy. To her will sir, or so.
Ber. You are welcome sir, adiew.
Boy. Fare well to me sir, and welcome to you: Exit.
La. Ma. That last is Berowne, the mery mad-cap Lord.
Not a word with him, but a iest.
Boy. And every iest but a word.
Pri. It was well done of you to take him at his word.
Boy. I was as willing to grapple, as he was to board
La. Ma. Two hot Sheepes marie:
And wherefore not Ships? (lips.
Boy. No Sheepe (sweet Lamb) vnlesse we feed on your
La. You Sheep & I pasture: shall that finish the iest?
Boy. So you grant pasture for me.
La. Not so gentle beast.
My lips are no Common, though seuerall they be.
Bo. Belonging to whom?
La. To my fortunes and me.
Prin. Good wits will be iangling but gentles agree.
This civill warre of wits were much better vsed
On Navar and his bookemen, for heere 'tis abus'd.
Bo. If my obseruation (which very seldome lies
By the hearts still rhetoricke, disclosed with eyes)
Deceiue me not now, Navar is infected.
Prin. With what?
Bo. With that which we Loueers intitle affected.
Prin. Your reason.
Bo. Why all his behaviours doe make their retire,
To the court of his eye, peeping thorough desire.
His heart like an Agot with your print impressed,

Proud

Proud with his formes, in his eie pride expressed.
His tongue all impatient to speake and not see,
Did stumble with haste in his eie-sight to be,
All senses to that sence did make their repaire,
To feele onely looking on faireſt of faire:
Me thought all his senses were lockt in his eye,
As Iewels in Christall for some Prince to buy. (gift,
Who tendring their own worth from whence they were
Did point out to buy them along as you past.
His faces owne margent did coate such seazes,
That all eyes saw his eies inchanted with gazes.
Ile giue you Aquitaine, and all that is his,
And you giue him for my sake, but one loving Kisse.

Prin. Come to our Pauilion, Boyet is disposde.

Bro. But to speak that in words, which his eie hath dis-
I onelie have made a mouth of his eie, (clos'd.
By adding a tongue, which I know will not lie.

Lad.Ro. Thou art an old Loue-monger, and speakest skilfully.

Lad.Ma. He is Cupids Grandfather, and learnes news of him.

Lad.2. Then was Venus like her mother, for her father is but grim.

Boy. Do you heare my mad wenches?

La.1. No.

Boy. What then, do you see?

Lad.2. I, our way to be gone.

Boy. You are too hard for me. Exeunt omnes.

Actus Tertius.

Enter Braggart and Boy.

Song.

Bra. Warble childe, make passionate my sense of hearing.

Boy. Concelued.

Brag. Sweete Ayre, go tenderness of yeares: take this Key, giue enlargement to the swaine, bring him festinatly hither: I must imploy him in a letter to my Loue.

Boy. Will you win your loue with a French braule?

Bra. How mean'ſt thou, brauling in French?

Boy. No my complex master, but to ligge off a tune at the tongues end, canaries to it with the feete, humour it with turning vp your eie: sigh a note and sing a note, sometime through the throate: if you swallowed loue with singing, loue sometime through: nose as if you sneeze vp loue by smelling loue with your hat penthouse-like ore the shop of your eies, with your armes crost on your thinbellie doublet, like a Rabbet on a spit, or your hands in your pockets, like a man after the old painting, and keepe not too long in one tune, but a snip and away: these are complements, these are humours, these betraie nice wenches that would be betrayed without these, and make them men of note: do you note men that most are affected to these?

Brag. How hast thou purchased this experience?

Boy. By my penne of obseruation.

Brag. But O, but O.

Boy. The Hobbie-horse is forgot.

Bra. Call ſt thou my loue Hobbi-horse.

Boy. No Master, the Hobbie-horse is but a Colt, and and your Loue perhaps, a Hacknie:

But haue you forgot your Loue?

Brag. Almost I had.

Boy. Negligent student, learne her by heart.

Brag. By heart, and in heart Boy.

Boy. And out of heart Master: all those three I will prouo.

Brag. What wilt thou prouo?

Boy. A man, if I liue (and this) by, in, and without, upon the instant: by heart you loue her, because your heart cannot come by her: in heart you loue her, because your heart is in loue with her: and out of heart you loue her, being out of heart that you cannot enioy her.

Brag. I am all these three.

Boy. And three times as much more, and yet nothing at all.

Brag. Fetch hither the Swaine, he must carrie mee a letter.

Boy. A message well simpathis'd, a Horse to be ambassadour for an Asse.

Brag. Ha, ha, What saist thou?

Boy. Marrie sir, you must send the Asse vpon the Horse, for he is verie slow gaited: but I goe.

Brag. The way is but short, away.

Boy. As swift as Lead sir.

Brag. Thy meaning prettie ingenious, is not Lead a metrall heauie, dull, and slow?

Boy. Minimum honest Master, or rather Master not

Brag. I say Lead is slow.

Boy. You are too swift sir to say so.
Is that Lead slow which is fir'd from a Gunne?

Brag. Sweete smoke of Rhetoriks,
He reputes me a Cannon, and the Bullet that's he:
I shoote thee at the Swaine.

Boy. Thump then, and I flee.

Bra. A most acute Iuuenall, voluble and free of grace,
By thy fauour sweet Welkin, I must sigh in thy face.
Most rude melancholie, Valour gives thee place.
My Herald is return'd.

Enter Page and Clowne.

Pag. A wonder Master, here's a Costard broken in a shin.

Ar. Some enigma, some riddle, come, thy Lenuoy begin.

Cla. No egma, no riddle, no lenuoy, no salue, in thee male sir. Or sir, Plantan, a plaine Plantan: no lenuoy, no lenuoy, no Salue sir, but a Plantan.

Ar. By vertue thou inforcest laughter, thy silly thought, my spleene, the heaving of my lungs prouoke me to ridiculous smyling: O pardon me my stars, doth the inconsiderate take salue for lenuoy, and the word lenuoy for a salue?

Pag. Doe the wise thinke them other, is not lenuoy a salue? (plaine.

Ar. No Page, it is an epilogue or discourse to make
Some obscure precedence that hath before bin saine
Now will I begin your morrall, and do you follow with my lenuoy.
The Fox, the Ape, and the Humble-Bee,
Were still at odds, being but three.
Arm. Vntill the Goose came out of doore,
Staying the odds by adding foure.
Pag. A good Lenuoy, ending in the Goose: would you desire more?

Cla. The Boy hath sold him a bargaine, a Goose, that's flat

Sir, your penny-worth is good, and your Goose be fat
To sell a bargaine well is as cunning as fast and loose:
Let me see a fat Lenuoy, I that's a fat Goose.

Ar. Come hither, come hither:
How did this argument begin?

Boy. By saying that a Costard was broken in a shin.
Then cal'd you for the Lenuoy

Clow. True, and I for a Plantan:
Thus came your argument in
Then the Boyes fat Lenuoy, the Goose that you bought,
And he ended the market.

Ar. But tell me: How was there a Costard broken in a shin?

Pag. I will tell you sensibly.

Clow. Thou hast no feeling of it Moth,
I will speake that Lenuoy.
I Costard running out, that was safely within,
Fell ouer the threshold, and broke my shin.

Arm. We will take no more of this matter.

Clow. Till there be more matter in the shin.

Arm. Sirra Costard, I will infranchise thee.

Clow. O, marrie me to one Frances, I smell some Lenuoy, some Goose in this.

Arm. By my sweete soule, I meane, setting thee at libertie, Enfreedoming thy person: thou wert emured, restrained, captiuated, bound.

Clow. True, true, and now you will be my purgation, and let me loose.

Arm. I giue thee thy libertie, set thee from durance, and in lieu thereof, impose on thee nothing but this: Bear this significant to the countrey Maide Iaquenetta: there is remuneration, for the best ward of mine honours is rewarding my dependants. Moth, follow.

Pag. Like the sequell I.
Signeur Costard adieu. Exit.

Clow. My sweete ounce of mans flesh, my in-coue Iew. Now will I looke to his remuneration.
Remuneration, O, that's the Latine word for three-farthings: Three-farthings remuneration, What's the price of this yonder? I, Leo, He giue you a remuneration: Why? It carries it remuneration: Why? It is a fairer name than a French-Crowne. I will never buy and sell out of this word.

Enter Berowne.

Ber. O my good knaue Costard, exceedingly well met.

Clow. Pray you sir, How much Carnation Ribbon may a man buy for a remuneration?

Ber. What is a remuneration?

Cost. Marrie sir, halfe pennie farthing.

Ber. O, Why then threefarthings worth of Silke.

Cost. I thanke your worship, God be wy you.

Ber. O stay slaue, I must employ thee:
As thou wilt win my fauour, good my knaue,
Doe one thing for me that I shall intreate.

Clow. When would you haue it done sir?

Ber. O this after-noone.

Clo. Well, I will doe it sir: Fare you well.

Ber. O thou knowest not what it is.

Clo. I shall know sir, when I haue done it.

Ber. Why villaine thou must know first.

Clo. I will come to your worship to morrow morning.

Ber. It must be done this after-noone.
Harke slaue, it is but this:
The Princesse comes to hunt here in the Parke,
And in her traine there is a gentle Ladie:
When tongues speak sweetly, then they name her name,
And Rosaline they call her, aske for her:
And to her white hand see thou do commend
This seal'd-vp counsaile. There's thy guerdon: goe.

Clo. Gardon, O sweete gardon, better than remuneration, a leuenpence-farthing better: most sweete gardon. I will doe it sir in print: gardon, remuneration. Exit.

Ber. O, and I forsooth in loue,
I that haue beene loue's whip?
A very Beadle to a humorous sigh: A Criticke,
Nay, a night-watch Constable,
A domineering pedant ore the Boy,
Then whom no mortall so magnificent.
This wimpled, whyning, purblinde wayward Boy,
This signior Iunior gyant dawfe, don Cupid,
Regent of Loue-rimes, Lord of folded armes,
Th'annointed soueraigne of sighes and groanes:
Liedge of all loyterers and malecontents:
Dread Prince of Plackets, King of Codpeeces.
Sole Emperator and great generall
Of trotting Parrators (O my little heart.)
And I to be a Corporall of his field,
And wear his colours like a Tumblers hoope.
What? I loue, I sue, I seeke a wife,
A woman that is like a Germane Cloake,
Still a repairing: ever out of frame,
And never going a right, being a Watch:
But being watcht, that is and spill goe right.
Nay, to be perwade, which is worst of all.
And among three, to loue the worst of all,
A whitly wanton, with a velvet brow,
With two pitch balls stucke in her face for eyes.
I, and by heaven, one that will doe the deede,
Though Argus were her Eunuch and her garde
And I to sigh for her, to watch for her,
To pray for her, go to it is a plagne
That Cupid will impose for my neglect,
Of his almighty dreadfull little might.
Well, I will loue, write, sigh, pray, shaue, grone,
Some men must loue my Lady, and some lone.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Princesse, a Forrester, her Ladies, and her Lords.

Pr. Was that the King that spurd his horse so hard,
Against the steepe vprising of the hill?

Boy. I know not, but I thinke it was not he.

Pr. Who ere a man, a shew'd a mourning minde:
Well Lords, to day we shall haue our dispatch,
On Saturday we will returne to Frances.
Then Forrester my friend, Where is the Bush
That we must stand and play the murtherer in?

For. Hereby vpon the edge of yonder Coppice,
A Stand where you may make the fairest shoote.

Pr. I thanke my beautie, I am faire that shoote,
And therupon thou speak'st the fairest shoote.

For. Pardon me Madam, for I meant not so.

Pr. What, what? First praise me, & then again say no,
O short liu'd pride. Not fair? alacke for woe

For. Yes

For. Yes Madam faire.

Qu. Nay,never paint me now,
Where faire is not,praise cannot mend the brow.
Here (good my glasse) take this for telling true:
Faire payment for foule words,is more then due.

For. Nothing but faire is that which you inherite.

Qu. See,see,my beautie will be saue'd by merit.
O heresie in faire,fit for these dayes,
A giving hand,though foule,shall haue faire praise.
But come,the Bow: Now Mercie goes to kill,
And shooting well,is then accounted ill:
Thus will I saue my credit in the shoote,
Not wounding,pittie would not let me do't:
If wounding, then it was to shew my skill,
That more for praise,then purpose meant to kill.
And out of question,so it is sometimes:
Glory growes guiltie of detested crimes,
When for Fames sake,for praise an outward part,
We bend to that,the working of the hart.
As I for praise alone now seeke to spill
The poore Deeres blood,that my heart meanes no ill.

Boy. Do not curst wiues hold that selfe-soueraignetie
Onely for praise sake,when they striue to be Lords ore their Lords?

Qu. Onely for praise,and praise we may afford,
To any Lady that subdewes a Lord.

Enter Clowne.

Boy. Here comes a member of the common-wealth.

Clo. God dig-you-den all,pray you which is the head Lady?

Qu. Thou shalt know her fellow,by the rest that haue no heads.

Clo. Which is the greatest Lady,the highest?

Qu. The thickest,and the tallest.

Clo. The thickest,& the tallest: it is so,truth is truth.
And your waste Mistris, were as slender as my wit,
One a these Maides girdles for your waste should be fit.
Are not you the chiefe woman?You are the thickest here?

Qu. What's your will sir? What's your will?

Clo. I haue a Letter from Monsier Berowne,
To one Lady Rosaline.

Qu O thy letter,thy letter:He's a good friend of mine.
Stand a side good bearer.

Boyet, you can carue,
Breake vp this Capon.

Boyet. I am bound to serue.
This Letter is mistoole: it importeth none here:
It is writ to Iaquenetta.

Qu. We will reade it,I sweare.
Breake the necke of the Waxe,and every one giue eare.

Boyet reades.

BY heauen,that thou art faire, is most infallible: true that thou art beauteous, truth is selfe that thou art louely: more faire then faire,beautifull then beautious, truer then truth it selfe: haue commiseration on thy heroicall Vassall. The magnanimous and most illustrate King Cophetua set eie vpon the pernicious and indubitate Beggar Zenelophon: and he it was that might rightly say,Veni, vidi, vici: Which to annothanize in the vulgar, O base and obscure vulgar; videlicet, He came, See,and ouercame: hee came one; see, two; ouercame three. Who came? the King. Why did he come? to see. Why did he see? to ouercome. To whom came he? to the Begger. What saw he? the Begger. Who ouercame he? the Begger. The conclusion is victorie: On whose side? the King: the captiue is inricht: On whose side? the Beggers. The catastrophe is a Nuptiall: on whose side? the Kings: no,on both in one,or one in both. I am the King (for so stands the comparison) thou the Begger, for so witnesseth thy lowlinesse. Shall I commaund thy loue? I may. Shall I enforce thy loue? I could. Shall I entreate thy loue? I will. What, shalt thou exchange for ragges, roabes: for tittles tiales, for thy selfe mee. Thus expecting thy reply, I prophane my lips on thy foote, my eyes on thy picture, and my heart on thy euerie part.

Thiue in the dearest designe of industrie,

Don Adriano de Armacho.

Thus dost thou heare the Nemean Lion roare,
Gainst thee thou Lambe, that standest as his pray:
Submissiue fall his princely feete before,
And he from forrage will incline to play.
But if thou strive (poore soule) what art thou then?
Foode for his rage, repastture for his den.

Qu. What plume of feathers is hee that indited this Letter? What veine? What Wethercocke? Did you euer heare better?

Boy. I am much deceiued,but I remember the stile.

Qu. Else your memorie is bad, going ore it erewhile.

Boy. This Armado is a Spanard that keeps here in court
A Phantasime,a Monarcho,and one that makes sport
To the Prince and his Booke-mates.

Qu Thou fellow, a word.
Who gaue thee this Letter?

Clow. I told you,my Lord.

Qu. To whom should st thou giue it?

Clo. From my Lord to my Lady.

Qu. From which Lord,to which Lady?

Clo. From my Lord Berowne,a good master of mine,
To a Lady of France, that he call'd Rosaline.

Qu. Thou hast mistaken his letter. Come Lords away.
Here sweete, put vp this, 'twill be thine another day.

Exeunt.

Boy. Who is the shooter? Who is the shooter?

Rosa. Shall I teach you to know.

Boy. I my continent of beautie.

Rosa. Why she that beares the Bow. Finely put off.

Boy. My Lady goes to kill horses, but if thou marrie,
Hang me by the necke,if horses that yeare miscarrie.
Finely put on.

Rosa. Well then,I am the shooter.

Boy. And who is your Deare?

Rosa. If we choose by the horses,your selfe come nee neere. Finely put on indeede.

Maria. You still wrangle with her Boyet, and shee strikes at the brow.

Boyet. But she her selfe is hit lower:
Haue I hit her now.

Rosa. Shall I come vpon thee with an old saying,that was a man when King Pippin of France was a little boy,as touching the hit it.

Boyet. So I may answere thee with one as old that was a woman when Queene Guinuer of Britaine was a little wench, as touching the hit it.

Rosa. Thou

Boy. Thou canst not hit it, hit it, hit it,
Thou must not hit it my good man.
Boy. I cannot, cannot, cannot:
And I cannot, another can. Exit.
Cla. By my troth most pleasant, how both did fit it.
Mar. A marke marueilous well shot, for they both did hit.
Boy. A mark, O marke but that marke: a marke saies my Lady.
Let the mark haue a pricke in't, to meet at, if it may be.
Mar. Wide a'th bow hand, yfaith your hand is out.
Cla. Indeede a'must shoote nearer, or heele ne're hit the clout.
Boy. And if my hand be out, then belike your hand is in.
Cla. Then will shee get the vpshoot by cleaving the pin.
Ma. Come, come, you talke greasily, your lips grow foule
Cla. She's too hard for you at pricks, sir challenge her to boule.
Boy. I feare too much rubbing: good night my good Owle.
Cla. By my soule a Swaine, a most simple Clowne.
Lord, Lord, how the Ladies and I haue pit him downe.
O my troth most sweete iests, most incomparable vulgar wit,
When it comes so smoothly off, so obscenely, as it were, so fit.
Armathwait ath to the side, O a most dainty man.
To see him walke before a Lady, and to beare her Fan.
To see him kisse his hand, and how most sweetly a will sweare:
And his Page mother side, that handfull of wit,
Ah heauens, it is most pethetically nit.
Souns, souns. Exunt.

Shoote within.

Enter Dull, Holofernes, the Pedant and Nathaniel.

Nat. Very reuerent sport truely, and done in the testimony of a good conscience.
Ped. The Deere was (as you know) sanguis in blood, ripe as a Pomewater, who now hangeth like a Iewell in the eare of Cœlo the skie; the welkin the heauen, and anon falleth like a Crab on the face of Terra, the soyle, the land, the earth.
Curat. Nath. Truely M. Holofernes, the epythithes are sweetly varied like a scholler at the least: but for I assure ye, it was a Bucke of the first head.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, haud credo.
Dul. 'Twas not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Most barberous intimation: yet a kinde of insinuation, as it were in via, in way of explication facere: as it were replication, or rather ostendere, to show as it were his inclination after his vnrefined, vnpolished, vneducated, vnpraunced, vntrained, or rather vnlettered, or rather vnconfirmed fashion, to insert againe my haud credo for a Deere.
Dul. I said the Deere was not a haud credo, 'twas a Pricket.
Hol. Twice sod simplicitie, bis coctus, O thou monster Ignorance, how deformed dost thou looke.
Nath. Sir hee hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a booke.
He hath not eate paper as it were:
He hath not drunke inke.
His intellect is not replenished, hee is onely an animall onely sensible in the duller parts: and such barren plants are set before vs, that we thankfull should be: which we taste and feeling, are for those parts that doe fructifie in vs more then he.
For as it would ill become me to be vaine, indiscreet, or a foole;
So were there a patch set on Learning, to see him in a Schoole.
But omne bene say I, being of an old Fathers minde,
Many can brooke the weather, that loue not the winde.
Dul. You two are book-men: Can you tell by your wits, What was a month old at Cains birth, that's not fiue weekes old as yet?
Hol. Dilitissima goodman Dull, dilitissima goodman Dull.
Dul. What is dilitissima?
Nath. A title to Phebe, to Luna, to the Moone.
Hol. The Moone was a month old when Adam was no more, (scare.
And wroughs not to fiue-weekes when he came to fiue-
Th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. 'Tis true indeede, the Collusion holds in the Exchange.
Hol. God comfort thy capacity, I say th'allusion holds in the Exchange.
Dul. And I say the polusion holds in the Exchange: for the Moone is never but a month old: and I say beside that, twas a Pricket that the Princesse kill'd.
Hol. Sir Nathaniel, will you heare an extemporall Epytaph on the death of the Deare, and to humour the ignorant call d the Deare, the Princesse kill'd a Pricket.
Nath. Perge, good M. Holofernes, perge, so it shall please you to abrogate scurilitie.
Hol. I will something affect the letter, for it argues facilitie.

The preyfull Princesse pierst and pricke
a pretty pleasing Pricket,
Some say a Sore, but not a sore,
till now made sore with shooting
The Dogges did yell, put all to Sore,
then Sorell iumps from thicket:
Or Pricket-sore, or else Sorell,
the people fall a hooting.
If Sore be sore, then all to Sore,
makes fifticie sores O sorell:
Of one sore I am hundred made by adding but one more L.

Nath. A rare talent.
Dul. If a talent be a claw, looke how he clawes him with a talent.
Nath. This is a gift that I haue simple: simple, a foolish extrauagant spirit, full of formes, figures, shapes, obiects, Ideas, apprehensions, motions, reuolutions. These are begot in the ventricle of memorie, nourisht in the wombe of pismaker, and deliuered vpon the mellowing of occasion: but the gift is good in those in whom it is acute, and I am thankfull for it.
Hol. Sir, I praise the Lord for you, and so may my parishioners, for their Sonnes are well tutor'd by you, and their Daughters profit very greatly vnder you: you are a good member of the common-wealth.
Nath. Mehercle, If their Sonnes be ingenuous, they shall shall want no instruction: If their Daughters be capable, I will put it to them. But Vir sapit qui pauca loquitur, a foule Feminine saluteth vs.

Enter Iaquenetta and the Clowne.

Iaq. God giue you good morrow M. Parson.

Nath. Master Parson, quasi Pers-on? And if one should be pierc'd, Which is the one?

Clo. Marry M. Schoolemaster, he that is likest to a hogshead.

Nath. Of piercing a Hogshead, a good lettar of conceit in a mapheof Earth, Fire enough for a Pint, Pesele enough for a Swine: 'tis pretie, it is well.

Iaq. Good Master Parson be so good as reade me this Letter, it was giuen me by Costard, and sent me from Don Armado: I beseech you reade it.

Nath. Fauis peruer gallet, quando pecus omnis fub umbra ruminat, and so forth. Ah good old Mantuan, I may speake of thee as the traueiler doth of Venice, venetia, venetia, qui non te vnoit, non te perpetit. Old Mantuan, old Mantuan. Who vnderstandeth thee not, ve re fol la mi fa: Vnder pardon sir, What are the contents? or rather as Horace says in his, What my soule verses.

Bil. I sir, and very learned.

Nath. Let me heare a staffe, a stanze, a verse, Lege domine.

If Loue make me forswore, how shall I sweare to loue?
Ah neuer faith could hold, if not to beautie vowed.
Though to my selfe forswore, to thee I'le faithfull prouse.
Those thoughts to me were Oaks, to thee like Osiers bowed.
Studie his byas leaues, and makes his booke thine eyes.
Where all those pleasures liue, that Art would comprehend.
If knowledge be the marke, to know thee shall suffice.
Well learned is that tongue, that well can thee commend.
All ignorant that soule, that sees thee without wonder.
Which is to me some praise, that I thy parts admire;
Thy eye Ioue lightning beares, thy voyce his dreadfull thunder.
Which not to anger bent, is musique, and sweet fire.
Celestiall as thou art, Oh pardon loue this wrong,
That sings heauens praise, with such an earthly tongue.

Ped. You finde not the apostrophes, and so miss the accent. Let me superuise the canzonet.

Nath. Here are only numbers ratified, but for the elegancy, facility, & golden cadence of poesie caret: Ouidius Naso was the man. And why so deed Naso, but for smelling out the odoriferous flowers of fancy? the ierkes of inuention imitarie is nothing: So doth the Hound his master, the Ape his keeper, the tired Horse his rider: But Damosella virgo, Was this directed to you?

Iaq. I sir from one mounsier Berowne, one of the strange Queenes Lords.

Nath. I will ouerglance the superscript.

To the snow-white hand of the most beauteous Lady Rosaline.

I will looke again on the intellect of the Letter, for the nomination of the partie written to the person written vnto.

Your Ladyships in all desired employment, Berowne.

Per. Sir Holofernes, this Berowne is one of the Vowaries with the King, and here he hath framed a Letter to a sequent of the stranger Queenes: which accidentally, or by the way of progression, had miscarried. Trip and go my sweete, deliuer this Paper into the hand of the King, it may concerne much: stay not thy compliment, I forgiue thy duetie, adue.

Maid. Good Costard go with me:
Sir Costard some your life.

Cost. Haue with thee my girle. Exit.

Hol. Sir you haue done this in the feare of God very religiously: and as a certaine Father saith

Ped. Sir tell not me of the Father, I do feare colourable colours. But to returne to the Verses, Did they please you sir Nathaniel?

Nath. Marueilous well for the pen.

Ped. I do dine to day at the fathers of a certaine Pupill of mine, where if (being repaid) it shall please you to gratifie the table with a Grace, I will on my priuiledge I haue with the parents of the foresaid Childe or Pupill, vndertake your bien venuto, where I will prouo those Verses to be very vnlearned, neithe fauouring of Poetrie, Wit, nor Inuention. I beseech your Societie.

Nat. And thanke you too: for societie (saith the text) is the happinesse of life.

Ped. And certes the text most infallibly concludes it. Sir I do inuite you too, you shall not say me nay: pauca verba.

Away, the gentles are at their game, and we will to our recreation. Exeunt.

Enter Berowne with a Paper in his hand, alone.

Ber. The King he is hunting the Deare,
I am coursing my selfe.

They haue pitcht a Toyle, I am toyling in a pytch, pitch that defiles; defile, a foule word: Well, set thee downe sorrow; for so they say the foole said, and so say I, and I the foole: Well proued wit. By the Lord this Loue is as mad as Aiax, it kils sheepe, it kils mee, I a sheepe: Well proued again o my side. I will not loue; If I do hang me: yefaith I will not. O but her eye: by this light, but for her eye, I would not loue her; yes, for her two eyes. Well, I doe nothing in the world but lye, and lye in my throate. By heauen I doe loue, and it hath taught mee to Rime, and to be melancholie: and heere is part of my Rime, and heere my melancholie. Well, she hath one a my Sonnets already, the Clowne beare it, the Foole sent it, and the Lady hath it: sweet Clowne, sweeter Foole, sweetest Lady. By the world, I would not care a pin, if the other three were in. Here comes one with a paper, God giue him grace to groane.

He stands aside. The King entreth.

Kin. Ay mee!

Ber. Shot by heauen: proceede sweet Cupid, thou hast thumpt him with thy Bird-bolt vnder the left pap: I faith secrets.

King. So sweete a kisse the golden Sunne giues not,
To those fresh morning drops vpon the Rose,
As thy eye beames, when their fresh rayse haue smot.
The night of dew that on my cheeks downe flowes.
Nor shines the siluer Moone one halfe so bright,
Through the transparant bosome of the deepe,
As doth thy face through teares of mine giue light:
Thou shin'st in every teare that I doe weepe,
No drop, but as a Coach doth carry thee:
So ridest thou triumphing in my woe.
Do but behold the teares that swell in me,
And they thy glory through my griefe will show:

But

But doe not lose thy faith, then thou with teares
My teares for gladnesse, and still make me weepe.
O Queene of Queenes, how farre doeth thou excell,
No thought can think, nor tongue of mortall tell.
How shall she know my griefes? I'le drop the paper.
Sweet louers shunde folly. Who is he comes heere?

Enter Longauill. The King steps aside.

What Longauill, and reading: listen eare.

Bir. Now in thy likenesse, one more foole appeare.

Long. Ay me, I am forsworne.

Bir. Why he comes in like a periure, wearing papers.

Long. In loue I hope, sweet fellowship in shame.

Bir. One drunkard loues another of the same.

Lon. Am I the first? haue beene periur'd so? (know,

Bir. I could put thee in comfort, not by two that I

Thou maist the triumphery, the corner cap of fooldlie,
The shape of Loues Tiburne, that hangs vp simplicitie.

Lon. I feare these stubborn lines lack power to mouse.
O sweet Maria, Empresse of my Loue,
These numbers will I teare, and write in prose.

Bir. O Rimes are gards on wanton Cupids hose,
Disfigure not his Shop.

Lon. This same shall goe. He reades the Sonnet.

Did not the heauenly Rhetoricke of thine eye,
Gainst whom the world cannot hold argument,
Perswade my heart to this false perjurie?
Vowes for thee broke deserue not punishment.
A Woman I forswore, but I will proue,
Thou being a Goddesse, I forsweare not thee.
My Vow was earthly, thou a heauenly Loue,
Thy grace being gain'd, cures all disgrace in me.
Vowes are but breath, and breath a vapour is.
Then thou fair Sun, which on my earth dost shine,
Exhale this vapor-vow, in thee it is:
If broken then, it is no fault of mine:
If by me broke, What fooles is not so wise
To loose an oath, to win a Paradise?

Bir. This is the liuer vrine, which makes flesh a deiry.
A greene Goose, a Goddesse, pure pure Idolatry.
God amend vs, God amend, we are much out o'th'way.

Enter Dumaine.

Lon. By whom shall I send this (company?) Stay.

Bero. All hid, all hid, an old infant play.
Like a demie God, here sit I in the skie,
And wretched fooles secrets heedfully oes-eye.
More Sacks to the mill. O heauens I haue my wish,
Dumaine transform'd, foure Woodcocks in a dish.

Dum. O most diuine Kate.

Bero. O most prophane coxcombe.

Dum. By heauen the wonder of a mortall eye.

Bero. By earth she is not corporall, there you lye.

Dum. Her Amber haires for foule hath amber coted.

Bir. An Amber coloured Raven was well noted.

Dum. As vpright as the Cedar.

Bir. Scoope I say her shoulder is with-child.

Dum. As fairre as day.

Bir. I ay some dayes, but then no sunne must shine.

Dum. O that I had my wish?

Lon. And I had mine.

Kin. And mine too good Lord.

Bir. Amen, so I had mine: Is not that a good word?

Dum. I would forget her, but a Feuer she
Raigneth in my blood, and will remembred be.

Bir. A Feuer in your blood, why then incision
Would let her out in Sawcers, sweet misprision.

Dum. Once more I'le read the Ode that I haue writ.

Bir. Once more I'le marke how Loue can vary Wit.

Dumaine reades his Sonnet.

On a day, alack the day:
Loue, whose Month is every May,
Spied a blossome passing faire
Playing in the wanton aire.
Through the Velure, leaues the winde,
All vnseene, can passage finde.
That the Louer sicke to death,
Wish himselfe the heauens breath.
Aye (quoth he) thy cheeks may blame,
Aye, would I might triumph so.
But alackly my hand is sworne,
Nare to pluck thee from thy throne:
Vow alackly for youth vnmeete,
You'l so soil it to pluck a sweet.
Doe not call it sinne in me,
That I am forsworne for thee.
Thee for whom Iou would swearre,
Iuno but an Aethiop were,
And deny himselfe for Ioue.
Turning mortall for thy Loue.

This will I send, and something else more plaine.
That shall expresse my true-loues fasting paine.
O would the King, Berowne and Longauill,
Were Lovers too, ill to example ill,
Would from my forehead wipe a periur'd note:
For none offend, where all alike doe doote.

Lon. Dumaine, thy Loue is farre from charitie,
That in Louers griefe desir'st societie:
You may looke pale, but I should blush I know,
To be ore-heard, and taken napping so.

Kin. Come sir, you blush: as his, your case is such,
You chide at him, offending twice as much.
You doe not loue Maria? Longauill,
Did never Sonnet for her sake compile;
Nor never lay his wreathed armes athwart
His louing bosome, to keepe downe his heart.
I haue beene closely shrowded in this bush,
And marke you both, and for you both did blush.
I heard your guilty Rimes, of seru'd your fashion:
Saw sighes reeke from you, noted well your passion.
Aye me, says one! O Ioue, the other cries!
On her haires were Gold, Christall the others eyes:
You would for Paradise breake Faith and troth,
And Ioue for your Loue would infringe an oath.
What will Berowne say when that he shall heare
Faith infringed, which such zeale did sweare.
How will he scorne? how will he spend his wit?
How will he triumph, leape, and laugh at it?
For all the wealth that euer I did see,
I would not haue him know so much by me.

Bero. Now step I forth to whip hypocrisie.
Ah good my Liedge, I pray thee pardon me.
Good heart, What grace hast thou thus to reprooue
These wormes for loiting, that art most in loue?
Your eyes doe make no couches in your teares.
There is no certaine Princesse that appeares.
You'll not be periur'd, 'tis a hateful thing:
Tush, none but Minstrels like of Sonnetting.
But are you not asham'd? nay, are you not

All three of you, to be thus much o're shot?
You found his Moth, the King your Moth did see:
But I a Beame doe finde in each of three.
O what a Scene of fool'ry haue I seene,
Of sighes, of groanes, of sorrow, and of teeme:
O me, with what strict patience haue I sat,
To see a King transformed to a Gnat?
To see great Hercules whipping a Gigge,
And profound Salomon tuning a Iygge?
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boyes,
And Crotchety Tymon laugh at idle toyes.
Where lies thy griefe? O tell me good Dumaine;
And gentle Longauill, where lies thy paine?
And where my Liedges? all about the breft:
A Candle hoe!
Kin. Too bitter is thy left.
Are wee betrayed thus to thy ouer-view?
Ber. Not you by me, but I betrayed to you.
I that am honeft, I that hold it finne
To breake the vow I am ingaged in.
I am betrayed by keeping company
With men, like men of inconftancie.
When fhall you fee me write a thing in rime?
Or groane for Ioane? or fpend a minutes time,
In pruning me, when fhall you heare that I will praife a hand, a foot, a face, an eye: a gate, a fiture, a brow, a breft,
a waifte, a legge, a limme.
Kin. Soft, Whither a-way fo fift?
A true man, or a theefe, that gallops fo.
Ber. I poft from Loue, good Loue let me go

Enter Lagaruette and Clowne.

Iaq. God bleffe the King.
Kin. What Prefent haft thou there?
Cla. Some certaine treafon.
Kin. What makes treafon heere?
Cla. Nay it makes nothing for.
Kin. If it marre nothing neither,
The treafon and you goe in peace away together
Iaq. I befeech your Grace let this Letter be read,
Our perfon mis-doubts it: it was treafon he faid.
Kin. Berowne, read it ouer. He reades the Letter.
Kin. Where hadft thou it?
Iaq. Of Coftard.
King. Where hadft thou it?
Cof. Of Don Adramadio, Don Adramadio.
Kin. How now, what is in you? why doft thou tere it?
Ber. A toy my Liedge, a toy: your grace needes not feare it.
Long. It did moue him to paffion, and therefore let's heare it.
Dum. It is Berowns writing, and heere is his name.
Ber. Ah you whoreffon loggerhead, you were borne to doe me fheame.
Guilty my Lord, guilty: I confeffe, I confeffe.
Kin. What?
Ber. That you three fooles, lackt mee foole, to make vp the meffe.
He, he, and you: and you my Liedge, and I.
Are picke-purfes in Loue, and we deferue to die.
O difmiffe this audience, and I fhall tell you more.
Dum. Now the number is euen
Berow True true, we are fowre: will thefe Turtles be gone?
Kin. Hence firs, away.
Cla. Walk afide the true folke, & let the traytors ftay.

Ber. Sweet Lords, fweet Lovers, O let vs imbrace,
As true we are as flefh and blood can be,
The Sea will ebbe and flow, heauen will fhew his face:
Young blood doth not obey an old decree.
We cannot crofle the caufe why we are borne:
Therefore of all hands muft we be forfworne.
King. What, did thefe rent lines fhew fome loue of thine? (Rofaline,
Ber. Did they, quoth you? Who fees the heauenly
That, like a rude and fauage man of Inde.)
At the firft opening of the gorgeous Eaft,
Bowes not his vaffall head, and ftrooken blinde,
Kiffes the bafe ground with obedient breaft
What peremptory Eagle-fighted eye
Dares looke vpon the heauen of her brow,
That is not blinded by her maieftie?
Kin. What zeale, what furie, hath infpir'd thee now?
My Loue (her Miftres) is a gracious Moone,
Shee (an attending Starre) ftarce feene a light.
Ber. My eyes are then no eyes, nor I Berowne
O, but for my Loue, day would turne to night,
Of all complexions the cal'd foueraignty,
Doe meet as at a faire in her fhire cheeke,
Where feuerall Worthies make one dignity,
Where nothing wants, that want it felfe doth feeke.
Lend me the flourifh of all gentle tongues,
Fie painted Rethoricke, O fhe needs it not,
To things of fale, a fellers praife belongs:
She paffes praife, then praife too fhort doth blot.
A withered Hermite, fiuefcore winters worne,
Might fhake off fiftie, looking in her eye:
Beauty doth varnifh Age, as if new borne,
And giues the Crutch the Cradles infancie.
O 'tis the Sunne that maketh all things fhine.
King. By heauen, thy Loue is blacke as Ebonie.
Berow. Is Ebonie like her? O word diuine?
A wife of fuch wood were felicitie.
O who can giue an oth? Where is a booke?
That I may fweare Beauty doth beauty lacke,
If that fhe learne not of her eye to looke:
No face is faire that is not full fo blacke.
Kin. O paradoxe, Blacke is the badge of hell,
The hue of dungeons, and the Schoole of night.
And beauties creft becomes the heauens well.
Ber. Diuels fooneft tempt resembling fpirits of light.
O if in blacke my Ladies browes be deckt,
It mournes, that painting vfurping haire
Should rauifh doters with a falfe afpect:
And therfore is fhe borne to make blacke, faire.
Her fauour turnes the fafhion of the dayes,
For nature blood is counted painting now:
And therefore red that would auoyd difpraife,
Paints it felfe blacke, to imitate her brow.
Dum. To look like her are Chimney-fweepers blacke.
Lon. And fince her time, are Colliers counted bright.
King. And Æthiops of their fweet complexion crake.
Dum. Dark needs no Candles now, for dark is light.
Ber. Your miftreffes dare neuer come in raine,
For feare their colours fhould be waffhe away.
Kin. 'Twere good yours did: for fir to tell you plaine.
Ile finde a fairer face not wafht to day.
Ber. Ile proue her faire, or talke till doomes-day here.
Lon. No Diuell will fright thee then fo much as fheer.
Dume. I never knew man hold vile ftuffe fo deare.
Lon. Looke, heer's thy loue, my foot and her face fee.
Ber. O if the ftreets were paued with thine eyes,

Her

Her feet were much too dainty for such tread.
Dum. O vile, then as she goes what vpward lyes?
The street should see as she walk'd ouer head.
Kin. But what of this, are we not all in loue?
Ber. O nothing so sure, and thereby all forsworne.
Kin. Then leaue this chat, & good Berowne now proue
Our loosing lawfull, and our faith not torne.
Dum. Marie there, some flattery for this euill.
Long. O some authority how to proceed,
Some tricks, some quillets, how to cheat the diuell.
Dum. Some salue for periurie.
Ber. O 'tis more than needs.
Haue at you then affections men at armes,
Consider what you first did sweare vnto:
To fast, to study, and to see no woman:
Flat treason against the Kingly state of youth.
Say, Can you fast? your stomacks are too young:
And abstinence ingenders maladies.
And where that you haue vow'd to studie (Lords)
In that each of you haue forsworne his Booke.
Can you still dreame and pore, and thereon looke.
For when would you my Lord, or you, or you,
Haue found the ground of studies excellence,
Without the beauty of a womans face?
From womens eyes this doctrine I deriue,
They are the Ground, the Bookes, the Achademe,
From whence doth spring the true Promethean fire.
Why, vniuersall plodding poysons vp
The nimble spirits in the arteries,
As motion and long during action tyres
The sinnowy vigour of the traueller.
Now for not looking on a womans face,
You haue in that forsworne the vse of eyes:
And studie too, the causer of your vow.
For where is any Author in the world,
Teaches such beauty as a womans eye:
Learning is but an adiunct to our selfe,
And where we are, our Learning likewise is:
Then when our selues we see in Ladies eyes,
With our selues.
Do we not likewise see our learning there?
O we haue made a Vow to studie, Lords,
And in that vow we haue forsworne our Bookes:
For when would you (my Liege) or you, or you?
In leaden contemplation haue found out
Such fiery Numbers as the prompting eyes,
Of beauties tutors haue inrich'd you with:
Other slow Arts intirely keepe the braine:
And therefore finding barraine practizers,
Scarce shew a harueft of their heavy toyle.
But Loue first learned in a Ladies eyes,
Liues not alone immured in the braine:
But with the motion of all elements.
Courses as swift as thought in every power,
And gives to every power a double power,
Above their functions and their offices.
It adds a precious seeing to the eye:
A Louers eyes will gaze an Eagle blinde.
A Louers ear will heare the lowest sound
When the suspicious head of theft is stoop.
Loues feeling is more soft and sensible,
Than are the tender hornes of Cockled Snayles.
Loues tongue proues daintie, Barbrow grosse in tatte,
For Valour, is not Loue a Hercules?
Still climing trees in the Hesperides
Subtill as Sphinx, as fierce and wakefull,
As bright Apollo: Lute, strung with his haire.
And when Loue speakes, the voyce of all the Gods,
Make heauen drowsie with the harmonie.
Never durst Poet touch a pen to write,
Vntill his Inke were temper'd with Loues sighes:
O then his lines would rauish sauage eares,
And plant in Tyrants milde humilitie.
From womens eyes this doctrine I deriue
They sparkle still the right promethean fire,
They are the Bookes, the Arts, the Achademes,
That shew, containe, and nourish all the world.
Else none at all in ought proues excellent.
Then fooles you were these women to forsweare:
Or keeping what is sworne, you will proue fooles,
For Wisdomes sake, a word that all men loue:
Or for Loues sake, a word that loues all men.
Or for Mens sake, the author of these Women.
Or Womens sake, by whom women are Men.
Let's once loose our oathes to finde our selues,
Or else we loose our selues, to keepe our oathes:
It is religion to be thus forsworne.
For Charity it selfe fulfills the Law:
And who can seuer loue from Charity.
Kin. Saint Cupid then, and Souldiers to the field.
Ber. Aduance your Standards, & vpon them Lords.
Pell, mell, downe with them: but be first aduis'd,
In conflict that you get the Sunne of them.
Long. Now to plaine dealing. Lay these glozes by,
Shall we resolue to woe these girles of France?
Kin. And winne them too, therefore let vs deuise,
Some entertainment for them in their Tents.
Ber. First from the Park let vs conduct them thither,
Then homeward every man attach the hand
Of his faire Mistresse, in the afternoone
We will with some strange pastime solace them:
Such as the shortnesse of the time can shape,
For Masks, Dances, Masques, and merry houres,
Fore-runne faire Loue, strewing her way with flowres.
Kin. Away, away, no time shall be omitted,
That will be time, and may by vs be fitted.
Ber. Alone, alone sowed Cockell, reap'd no Corne,
And Iustice alwaies whirles in equall measure:
Light Wenches may proue plagues to men forsworne,
If so, our Copper buyes no better treasure. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Pedant, Curate and Dull.

Pedant. Satis quid sufficit.
Curat. I praise God for you sir, your reasons at dinner haue been sharpe & sententious: pleasant without scurrility, witty without affection, audacious without impudency, learned without opinion, and strange without heresie: I did conuerse this quandam day with a companion of the kings, who is intituled, nominated, or called, Don Adriano de Armatho.
Ped. Novo hominem tanquam te, His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptorie: his tongue filed, his eye ambitious, his gait maiestical, and his general behaviour vaine ridiculous, and thrasonicall. He is too picked, too spruce, too affected, too odde, as it were, too peregrinate, as I may call it

Curat. A most singular and choise Epithet,

Draw out his Table-booke.

Peda. He draweth out the thread of his verbositie, finer then the staple of his argument. I abhor such phanaticall phantasims, such insociable and poyntedeuise compositions, such rackers of orthographie, as to speake dout fine, when he should say doubt; det, when he should pronounce debt; d e b t, not detta: calepeth a Calf, Caufe: ceiling, ceiling: neighbour vocatur nebour; neigh abbreuiated ne: this is abhominable, which he would call abhominable: it insinuateth me of insanie: ne intelligis domine, to make frantickes, lunaticks?

Curat. Laudo, bene intelligo.

Peda. Bonus bonus fac bonus prestigiator, a little scratch, 'twill serue.

Enter Dragon, Boy.

Curat. Videes ue quis venit?

Peda. Video, & gaudeo.

Drag. Chirra.

Peda. Quare Chirra, not Sirra?

Drag. Men of peace well incountered.

Ped. Most millitarie sir salutation.

Boy. They haue been at a great feast of Languages, and stolne the scraps.

Clow. O they haue lin'd long on the alms-basket of words! I marueill thy M. hath not eaten thee for a word, for thou art not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus: Thou art easier swallowed then a flapdragon.

Page. Peace, the peale begins.

Drag. Monsier, are you not lettered?

Page. Yes, yes, he teaches boyes the Horne-booke: What is Ab spelld backward with the horn on his head?

Peda. Ba, pecorum with a horne added.

Pag. Ba most sooty Sheepe, with a horne: you hearse his learning.

Peda. Quis quis, thou Consonant?

Pag. The last of the five Vowels if Y can repeat them, or the fift if I.

Peda. I will repeat them: a e I.

Pag. The Sheepe, the other two concludes it o u.

Drag. Now by the salt wave of the mediterranium, sweet touch, a quicke vene we of wit, snip snap, quick & home, it reioyceth my intellect, true wit.

Page. Offered by a childe to an olde man: which is wit-old.

Peda. What is the figure? What is the figure?

Page. Hornes.

Peda. Thou disputes like an Infant: goe whip thy Gigge.

Pag. Lend me your Horne to make one, and I will whip about your Infamie cum cita a gigge of a Cuckolds horne.

Clow. And I had but one penny in the world, thou shouldst haue it to buy Ginger bread: Hold, there is the very Remuneration I had of thy Master, thou halfpenny purse of wit, thou Pidgeon-egg of discretion. O & the heauens were so pleased, that thou wert but my Bastard, What a ioyfull father wouldst thou make me? Goe to, thou hast it ad dunghil, at the fingers ends, as they say.

Peda. Oh I smell false Latine, dunghil for vnguem.

Drag. Arse-metrecondulce, we will bee singled from the barbarous. Do you not educate youth at the Charge-house on the top of the Mountaine?

Peda Or Mons the hill.

Drag. At your sweet pleasure, for the Mountaine.

Peda. I doe sans question.

Bra. Sir, it is the Kings most sweet pleasure and affection, to congratulate the Princesse at her Pauilion, in the posteriori of this day, which the rude multitude call the after-noone.

Ped. The posterior of the day, most generous sir, is liable, congruent, and measurable for the after-noone: the word is well cald, chose, sweet, and apt I doe assure you sir, I doe assure.

Drag. Sir, the King is a noble Gentleman, and my familiar, I doe assure ye very good friend: for what is inward between vs, let it passe. I doe beseech thee remember thy curtesie. I beseech thee apparell thy head: and among other importunate & most serious designes, and of great import indeed too: but let that passe, for I must tell thee it will please his Grace (by the world) sometime to leane vpon my poore shoulder, and with his royall finger thus dallie with my excrement, with my mustachio: but sweet heart let that passe. By the world I recount no fable, some certaine speciall honours it pleaseth his greatnesse to impart to Armado a Souldier, a man of trauell, that hath seene the world: but let that passe; the very all of all is but sweet heart, I do implore secrecie, that the King would haue mee present the Princesse (sweet chucke) with some delightful ostentation, or show, or pageant, or antricke, or fire-worke: Now, vnderstanding that the Curate and your sweet self are good at such eruptions, and sodaine breaking out of myrth (as it were) I haue acquainted you withall, to the end to crane your assistance.

Peda. Sir, you shall present before her the Nine Worthies. Sir Holofernes, as concerning some entertainment of time, some show in the posterior of this day, to bee rendred by our assistance the Kings command: and this most gallant, illustrate and learned Gentleman, before the Princesse: I say none so fit as to present the Nine Worthies.

Curat. Where will you finde men worthy enough to present them?

Peda. Iosua, your selfe: my selfe, and this gallant gentleman Iudas Machabeus: this Swaine (because of his great limme or ioynt) shall passe Pompey the great, the Page Hercules.

Drag. Pardon sir, error: He is not quantitie enough for that Worthies thumb, hee is not so big as the end of his Club.

Peda. Shall I haue audience? he shall present Hercules in minoritie: his ouer and ouer shall bee strangling a Snake; and I will haue an Apologie for that purpose.

Pag. An excellent device: so if any of the audience hisse, you may cry, Well done Hercules, now thou crushest the Snake; that is the way to make an offence gracious, though few haue the grace to doe it.

Drag. For the rest of the Worthies?

Peda. I will play three my selfe.

Pag. Thrice worthy Gentleman.

Drag. Shall I tell you a thing?

Peda. We attend.

Drag. We will haue, if this fadge not, an Antique. I beseech you follow.

Ped. Via good-man Dull, thou hast spoken no word all this while.

Dull. Nor vnderstood none neither sir.

Ped. Alone, we will employ thee.

Dull. Ile make one in a dance, or so: or I will play

on

on the tabor to the Worthies, & let them dance the hey.

Pol. Most Dull, honest Dull, to our sport away. Exeu.

Enter Ladies.

Qu. Sweet hearts we shall be rich ere we depart,
If fairings come thus plentifully in.
A Lady wal'd about with Diamonds: Look you, what I haue from the loiting King.

Ros. Madam, came nothing else along with that?

Qu. Nothing but this: yes as much loue in Rime,
As would be cram'd vp in a sheet of paper
Writ on both sides the loafe, margens and all,
That he was faine to seale on Cupids name.

Ros. That was the way to make his god-head wax:
For he hath beene five thousand yeares a Boy.

Kath. I, and a shrewd vnhappy gallowes too.

Ros. You'll nere be friends with him, a kild your sister.

Kath. He made her melancholy, sad, and heavy, and so she died: had she beene Light like you, of such a merrie nimble stirring spirit she might a bin a Grandam ere she died. And so may you: For a light heart lives long.

Ros. What's your darke meaning mouse, of this light word?

Ka. A light condition in a beauty darke.

Ros. We need more light to finde your meaning out

Ka. You'll marre the light by taking it in snuffe:
Therefore I'le darkely end the argument.

Ros. Look what you doe, you doe it ful i'th darke.

Ka. So do not you, for you are a light Wench.

Ros. Indeed I weigh not you, and therefore light.

Ka. You weigh me not, O that's you care not for me.

Ros. Great reason: for past care, is still past cure.

Qu. Well bandied both, a set of Wit well played.
But Rosaline, you haue a Fauour too?
Who sent it? and what is it?

Ros. I would you knew.
And if my face were but as faire as yours,
My Fauour were as great, be witnesse this.
Nay, I haue Verses too, I thanks Berowne,
The numbers true, and were the numbring too
I were the fairest goddesse on the ground.
I am compar'd to twenty thousand faires.
O he hath drawne my picture in his letter

Qu. Any thing like?

Ros. Much in the letters, nothing in the praise

Qu. Beautous as Inke: a good conclusion.

Ka. Faire as text B, in a Cappie booke.

Ros. Were pamphs. How? Let me not die your debtor,
My red Dominicall, my golden letter.
O that your face were full of O's.

Qu. A Pox of that iest, and I beshrew all Shrowes.
But Katherine, what was sent to you
From fair Dumaine?

Ka. Madame, this Glouc.

Qu. Did he not send you twaine:

Ka. Yes Madame: and moreouer,
Some thousand Verses of a faithfull Louer.
A huge translation of hypocrisie,
Vilely compiled, profound simplicitie.

Mar. This, and these Pearls, to me sent Longauile.
The Letter is too long by halfe a mile.

Qu. I think no less: Dost thou with in heare
The Chaine were longer, and the Letter short.

Mar. Lay I would these hands might never part.

Qua. We are wise girles to mocke our Louers so.

Ros. They are worse fooles to purchase mocking so.
That same Berowne I'le torture ere I goe.
O that I knew he were but in by th'weake,
How I would make him fawne, and begge, and seeke,
And wait the season, and observe the times,
And spend his prodigall wits in bootless rimes,
And shape his seruice wholly to my desires,
And make him proud to make me proud that iests.
So perseuere I'lle would I o'erlooy his state,
That he should be my foole, and I his fate.

Qu. None are so surely caught, when they are catcht,
As Wit turn'd foole, folly in Wisdome hatch'd:
Hath wisdome warrant, and the helpe of Schoole,
And Wits owne grace to grace a learned Foole?

Ros. The blood of youth burns not with such excesse,
As gramitie remoke to wantons be.

Mar. Folly in Fooles beares not so strong a note,
As fool'ry in the Wise, when Wit doth dote:
Since all the power thereof he doth apply,
To prouse by Wit, worth in simplicitie.

Enter Boyet.

Qu. Heere comes Boyet, and mirth in his face.

Boy. O I am stab'd with laughter, Where's her Grace?

Qu. Thy newes Boyet?

Boy. Prepare Madame, prepare,
Arme Wenches arme, incounters mounted are,
Against your Peace, Loue doth approach, disguis'd:
Armed in arguments, you'll be surpris'd.
Muster your Wits, stand in your owne defence,
Or hide your heads like Cowards, and flie hence.

Qu. Saint Dennis to S, Cupid: What are they,
That charge their breath against vs? Say scout say.

Boy. Vnder the coole shade of a Sicamore,
I thought to close mine eyes some halfe an houre:
When lo to interrupt my purpos'd rest,
Toward that shade I might behold addrest,
The King and his companions: warely
I stole into a neighbour thicket by,
And ouer-heard, what you shall ouer-heare:
That by and by disguis'd they will be heere.
Their Herald is a pretty knauish Page:
That well by heart hath con'd his embassage,
Action and accent did they teach him there.
Thus must thou speake, and thus thy body beare.
And ever and anon they made a doubt,
Presence maiestiall would put him out:
For quoth the King, an Angell shalt thou see:
Yet feare not thou, but speake audaciously.
The Boy reply'd, An Angell is not euill:
I should haue fear'd her, had she beene a deuill.
With that all laugh'd, and clap'd him on the shoulder,
Making the bold wagg by their praises bolder.
One rub'd his elbow thus, and fleer'd, and swore,
A better speech was never spoke before
Another with his finger and his thumb,
Cry'd via, we will doe't, come what will come.
The third he caper'd and cried, All goes well.
The fourth turn'd on the toe, and downe he fell:
With that they all did tumble on the ground,
With such a zelous laughter so profound,
That in this spleene ridiculous appears,
To checke their folly passions solemne teares.

Qua. But what, but what, come they to visit vs?

Boy. They do, they do; and are apparel'd thus,
Like Muscouites, or Russians, as I guesse.
Their purpose is to parlee, to court, and dance,

And every one his Loue-feast will advance,
Vnto his seuerall Mistresse: which they'll know
By fauours seuerall, which they did bestow.

Quene. And will they so? the Gallants shall be tasks:
For Ladies; we will every one be maskt,
And not a man of them shall haue the grace
Despight of suite, to see a Ladies face.
Hold Rosaline, this Fauour thou shalt weare,
And then the King will court thee for his Deare:
Hold, take thou this my sweet, and giue me thine,
So shall Berowne take me for Rosaline.
And change your Fauours too, so shall your Loues
Woo contrary, deceiu'd by these removes.

Rosa. Come on then, weare the fauours most in sight.

Kath. But in this changing, What is your intent?

Quene. The effect of my intent is to crosse theirs:
They do it but in mocking merriment,
And mocke for mocke is onely my intent.
Their seuerall counsels they vnbosome shall,
To Loues mistooke, and so be mockt withall.
Vpon the next occasion that we meete,
With Visages displayd to talke and greete.

Bof. But shall we dance, if they desire vs too't?

Quen. No, to the death we will not moue a foot,
Nor to their pen'd speech render we no grace:
But while 'tis spoke, each turne away his face.

Boy. Why that contempt will kill the keepers heart,
And quite diuorce his memory from his part

Quen. Therefore I doe it, and I make no doubt,
The rest will ere come in, if he be out.
Theres no such sport, as sport by sport orethrown:
To make theirs ours, and ours none but our owne.
So shall we stay mocking intended game,
And they well mockt, depart away with shame. Sound.

Boy. The Trumpet sounds, be maskt, the maskers come

Enter Black moores with musicke, the Boy with a speech, and the rest of the Lords disguised

Page. All hails, the richest Beauties on the earth.

Ber. Beauties no richer then rich Taffata.

Pag. A holy parcell of the fairest dames that euer turn'd their backes to mortall views:

The Ladies turne their backes to him.

Ber. Their eyes villaine, their eyes.

Pag. That euer turn'd their eyes to mortall views:
Out

Boy. True, out indeed

Pag. Out of your fauours heauenly spirits vouchsafe
Not to behold

Ber. Once to behold, rogue

Pag Once to behold with your Sunne beamed eyes,
With your Sunne beamed eyes.

Boy. They will not answer to that Epythet,
You were best call it Daughter beamed eyes

Pag They do not marke me, and that brings me out.

Ber. Is this your perfectnesse? be gon you rogue.

Rosa. What would these strangers?
Know their minds Boyet.
If they doe speake our language, 'tis our will
That some plaine man recount their purposes.
Know what they would?

Boyet What would you with the Princes?

Ber. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Ros. What would they, say they?

Boy. Nothing but peace, and gentle visitation.

Rosa. Why that they haue, and bid them so be gon.

Boy. She saies you haue it, and you may be gon.

Kin. Say to her we haue measur'd many miles,
To tread a Measure with you on the grasse.

Boy. They say that they haue measur'd many a mile,
To tread a Measure with you on this grasse

Rosa. It is not so. Aske them how many inches
Is in one mile? If they haue measur'd many,
The measure then of one is easlie told.

Boy. If to come hither, you haue measur'd miles,
And many miles: the Princesse bids you tell,
How many inches doth fill vp one mile?

Ber. Tell her we measure them by weary steps.

Boy. She hears her selfe

Rosa. How many weary steps,
Of many weary miles you haue ore-gone,
Are numbred in the trauell of one mile?

Ber. We number nothing that we spend for you,
Our duie is so rich, so infinite,
That we may doe it still without accompt.
Vouchsafe to shew the sunshine of your face,
That we (like sauages) may worship it.

Rosa. My face is but a Moone and clouded too.

Kin. Blessed are clouds, to doe as such clouds do.
Vouchsafe bright Moone, and these thy stars to shine,
(Those clouds remoued) vpon our watery eyne.

Rosa. O vaine peticioner, beg a greater matter,
Thou now requests but Moonesshine in the water.

Kin. Then in our measure, vouchsafe but one change.
Thou bidst me begge, this begging is not strange.

Rosa. Play musicke then: nay you must doe it soone.
Not yet no dance: thus change: like the Moone.

Kin. Will you not dance? How come you thus estranged?

Rosa. You tooke the Moone at full, but now shee's changed?

Kin. Yet still she is the Moone, and I the Man.

Rosa. The musick playes, vouchsafe some motion to it: Our eares vouchsafe it.

Kin. But your legges should doe it.

Ros. Since you are strangers, & come here by chance.
We'll not be nice, take hands, we will not dance.

Kin. Why take you hands then?

Rosa. Onelie to part friends.
Curtise sweet hearts, and so the Measure ends.

Kin. More measure of this measure be not nice.

Rosa. We can afford no more at such a price.

Kin. Prise your selues: What buyes your companie?

Rosa. Your absence onelie

Kin. That can never be.

Rosa. Then cannot we be bought: and so adue,
Twice to your Visore, and halfe once to you.

Kin. If you denie to dance, let's hold more chat.

Ros. In priuate then.

Kin. I am best pleas'd with that.

Bo. White handed Mistris, one sweet word with thee.

Qu. Hony, and Milke, and Sugar: there is three.

Ber. Nay then two treyes, an if you grow so nice
Metheglin, Wort, and Mallaby; well runne dice:
There's halfe a dozen sweets.

Qu. Seuenth sweet adue, since you can cogg,
Ile play no more with you.

Ber. One word in secret.

Qu. Let it not be sweet.

Ber Thou greeu'st my gall.

Qu. Gall, bitter.
Ber. Therefore meete.
Du. Will you vouchsafe with me to change a word?
Mar. Name it.
Dum. Faire Ladie:
Mar. Say you so? Faire Lord:
Take you that for your faire Lady.
Du. Please it you,
As much in priuate, and I'le bid adieu.
Mar. What, was your vizard made without a tong?
Long. I know the reason Ladie why you aske.
Mar. O for your reason, quickly sir, I long.
Long. You haue a double tongue within your mask.
And would afford my speechlesse vizard halfe.
Mar. Veale quoth the Dutch-man: is not Veale a Calfe?
Long. A Calfe faire Ladie?
Mar. No, a faire Lord Calfe.
Long. Let's part the word.
Mar. No, I'le not be your halfe:
Take all and weane it, it may proue an Oxe.
Long. Looke how you but your selfe in these sharpe mockes.
Will you giue hornes chast Ladie? Do not so.
Mar. Then die a Calfe before your horns do grow.
Lon. One word in priuate with you ere I die.
Mar. Bleat softly then, the Butcher heares you cry.
Boyet. The tongues of mocking wenches are as keen
As is the Razors edge, inuisible:
Cutting a smaller haire then may be seene,
Aboue the sense of sense so sensible:
Seemeth their conference, their conceits haue wings,
Fiester then arrows, bullets wind, thought, swifter things.
Rosa. Not one word more my maides, breake off, breake off.
Ber. By heauen, all dre bezzen with pure scoffe.
King. Farewell madde Wenches, you haue simple wits. Exeunt.
Qu. Twentie adieus my frozen Muscouits.
Are these the breed of wits so wondred at?
Boyet. Tapers they are, with your sweete breathes puff one.
Rosa. Well-liking wits they haue, grosse, grosse, fat, fat.
Qu. O pouertie in wit, kingly poore flout.
Will they not (thinke you) hang themselues to night?
Or ever but in vizards shew their faces:
This pert Berowne was out of countenance quite.
Rosa. They were all in lamentable cases.
The King was weeping ripe for a good word.
Qu. Berowne did swearе himselfe out of all suite.
Mar. Dumaine was at my seruice, and his sword:
No point (quoth I:) my seruant straight was mute.
Ka. Lord Longauill said I came o're his heart:
And trow you what he call'd me?
Qu. Qualme perhaps.
Ka. Yes in good faith.
Qu. Go sicknesse as thou art.
Ros. Well, better wits haue worne plain statute caps,
But vvil you heare; the King is my loue sworne.
Qu. And quicke Berowne hath plighted faith to me.
Ka. And Long auill was for my seruice borne.
Mar. Dumaine is mine as sure as barke on tree.
Boyet. Madam, and pretie mistresses giue eare,
Immediately they will again be heere
In their owne shapes: for it can never be,
They will digest this harsh indignitie.
Qu. Will they returne?
Boy. They will they will, God knowes,
And leaps for loy, though they are lame with blowes:
Therefore change Fauours, and when they repaire,
Blow like sweet Roses, in this summer aire.
Qu. How blow? how blow? Speake to bee vnderstood.
Boy. Faire Ladies maskt, are Roses in their bud:
Dismaskt, their damaske sweet commixture showne,
Are Angels vailing clouds, or Roses blowne.
Qu. Auaunt perplexitie: What shall vve do,
If they returne in their owne shapes to woo?
Rosa. Good Madam, if by me you'l be aduis'd,
Let's mocke them still as well knowne as disguis'd:
Let vs complaine to them what fooles were heare,
Disguis'd like Muscouites in shapelesse geare:
And wonder what they were, and to what end
Their shallow showes, and Prologue vilde pen'd:
And their rough carriage so ridiculous,
Should be presented at our Tent to vs.
Boyet. Ladies, withdraw: the gallants are at hand.
Qu. Whip to our Tents, as Roes runnes ore Land.
Exeunt.

Enter the King and the rest.

King. Faire fie, God saue you. Where's the Princesse?
Boy. Gone to her Tent.
Please it your Maiestie command me any seruice to her?
King. That she vouchsafe me audience for one word.
Boy. I will, and so will she, I know my Lord. Exit.
Ber. This fellow pickes vp wit as Pigeons pease,
And vtters it again, when Ioue doth please.
He is Wits Pedler, and retailes his Wares,
At Wakes, and Wassels, Meetings, Markets, Faires.
And we that sell by grosse, the Lord doth know,
Haue not the grace to grace it with such show.
This Gallant pins the Wenches on his sleeue.
Had he bin Adam, he had tempted Eue.
He can carue too, and lispe: Why this is he,
That kift away his hand in courtesie.
This is the Ape of Forme, Monsieur the nice,
That when he plaies at Tables, chides the Dice
In honorable termes: Nay he can sing
A meane most meanly, and in Vshering
Mend him who can: the Ladies call him sweete.
The staires as he treads on them kisse his feete.
This is the flower that smiles on euerie one,
To shew his teeth as white as Whales bone.
And consciences that will not die in debt,
Pay him the dutie of honie-tongued Boyet.
King. A blister on his sweet tongue with my heart,
That put Armadoes Page out of his part.

Enter the Ladies.

Ber. See where it comes. Behauiour what wer't thou,
Till this madman shew'd thee? And what art thou now?
King. All haile sweet Madame, and faire time of day.
Qu. Faire in all Haile is foule, as I conceiue.
King. Construe my speeches better, if you may.
Qu. Then wish me better, I wil giue you leaue.
King. We came to visit you, and purpose now
To leade you to our Court, vouchsafe it then.
Qu. This field shal hold me, and so hold your vow:
Nor God, nor I, delights in periur'd men.
King. Rebuke me not for that which you prouoke:
The

The vertue of your eie must breake my oth.
Qu. You nickname vertue: vice you should haue spoke:
For vertues office neuer breakes men troth.
Now by my maiden honor, yet as pure
As the vnsallied Lilly, I protest,
A world of torments though I should endure,
I would not yeeld to be your houses guest:
So much I hate a breaking cause to be
Of heauenly oaths, vow'd with integritie.
Kin. O you haue lis'd in desolation heere,
Vnseene, vnrefined, much to our shame.
Qu. Not so my Lord, it is not so I sweare,
We haue had pastimes heere, and pleasant game.
A messe of Russians left vs but of late.
Kin. How Madam? Russians?
Qu. I in truth, my Lord.
Trim gallants, full of Courtship and of state.
Rosa. Madam speake true. It is not so my Lord:
My Ladie (to the manner of the daies)
In curtesie giues vndeseruing praise.
We foure indeed confronted were with foure
In Russian habit: Heere they stayed an houre,
And talk'd space. and in that houre (my Lord)
They did not bless vs with one happy word.
I dare not call them fooles; but this I thinke,
When they are thirsty, fooles would faine haue drinke.
Ber. This iest is drie to me. Gentle sweete,
Your wits makes wise things foolish when we greete
With eies best seeing, heauens fiery eie:
By light we loose light; your capacitie
Is of that nature, that to your huge store,
Wise things seeme foolish, and rich things but poore.
Ros. This proues you wise and rich: for in my eie
Ber. I am a foole, and full of poueritie.
Ros. But that you take what doth to you belong,
It were a fault to snatch words from my tongue.
Ber. O, I am yours and all that I possesse.
Ros. All the foole mine.
Ber. I cannot giue you lesse.
Ros. Which of the Visards what is that you wore?
Ber. Where? when? What Visard?
Why demand you this?
Ros. There, then, that vizard, that superfluous case,
That hid the worse, and shew'd the better face.
Kin. We are discried,
They'l mocke vs now downeright.
Du. Let vs confesse, and turne it to a iest.
Qu. Amaz'd my Lord? Why lookes your Highnes sadde?
Rosa Helpe hold his browes, he'l sound: why looke you pale?
Sea-sicke I thinke comming from Muscouie.
Ber. Thus poure the stars down plagues for perjury.
Can any face of brasse hold longer out?
Heere stand I, Ladie dart thy skill at me,
Bruise me with scorne, confound me with a flout.
Thrust thy sharpe wit quite through my ignorance
Cut me to peeces with thy keene conceit:
And I will wish thee never more to dance,
Nor never more in Russian habit waite.
O! never will I trust to speeches pen'd,
Nor to the motion of a Schoole-boies tongue
Nor never come in vizard to my friend,
Nor woo in rime like a blind-harpers songuc,
Taffata phrases, silken termes precise,
Three-pil'd Hyperboles, spruce affection;
Figures pedanticall, these summer flies,
Haue blowne me full of maggot ostentation
I do forswere them, and I heere protest,
By this white Gloue (how white the hand God knows)
Henceforth my woing minde shall be expressed
In russet yeas, and honest kersie noes.
And to begin Wench, so God helpe me law,
My loue to thee is sound sans cracke or flaw
Rosa. Sans, sans, I pray you.
Ber. Yet I haue a tricke
Of the old rage: beare with me, I am sicke.
Ile leaue it by degrees: soft, let vs see,
Write Lord haue mercie on vs. on those three,
They are infected, in their hearts it lies
They haue the plague, and caught it of your eyes:
These Lords are visited, you are not free:
For the Lords tokens on you do I see.
Qu. No, they are free that gaue these tokens to vs.
Ber. Our states are forfeit, seeke not to vndo vs.
Ros. It is not so; for how can this be true.
That you stand forfeit, being those that sue
Ber. Peace, for I will not haue to do with you.
Ros. Not shall not, if I do as I intend.
Ber. Speake for your selues. my wit is at an end.
King. Teach vs sweete Madame, for our rude transgression, some saire excuse.
Qu. The fairest is confession.
Were you not heere but euen now, disguis'd?
Kin. Madam, I was.
Qu. And were you well aduis'd?
Kin. I was faire Madam.
Qu. When you then were heere,
What did you whisper in your Ladies eare?
King. That more then all the world I did respect her
Qu. When shee shall challenge this, you will reiect her
King. Vpon mine Honor no.
Qu. Peace peace, forbeare:
your oath once broke, you force not to forswere.
King. Despise me when I breake this oath of mine.
Qu. I will, and therefore keepe it. Rosaline,
What did the Russian whisper in your eare?
Ros Madam, he swore that he did hold me deare
As precious eye-sight, and did value me
Aboue this World: adding thereto moreouer,
That he vvould Wed me, or else die my Loiter.
Qu. God graue thee ioy of him: the Noble Lord
Most honorably doth vphold his word.
King. What meane you Madame?
By my life, my troth,
I never swore this Ladie such an oath.
Ros. By heauen you did; and to confirme it plaine,
you gaue me this: But take it sir againe.
King. My faith and this, the Princesse I did giue,
I knew her by this Iewell on her sleeue.
Qu. Pardon me sir, this Iewell did she weare,
And Lord Berowne (I thanke him) is my deare
What? Will you haue me, or your Pearle againe?
Ber. Neither of either, I remit both twaine.
I see the tricke on't: Heere was a conseiue,
Knowing aforehand of our merriment,
To dash it like a Christmas Comedie.
Some carry-tale, some please-man, some slight Zanie,
Some mumble-news, some trencher-knight, some Dick
That smiles his cheeke in yeares and knowes the trick
To make my Lady laugh, when shes dispos'd:

Told

Told our intents before: which once disclos'd,
The Ladies did change Fauours, and then we Following the signes, woo'd but the signe of she.
Now to our perisarie, to adde more terror,
We are againe forsworne in will and error.
Much vpon this tis: and might not you
Forestall our sport, to make vs thus vnsure?
Do not you know my Ladies foot by th squier?
And laugh vpon the apple of her eie?
And stand betweene her backe sir, and the fire,
Holding a trencher, iesting merrilie?
You put our Page out: go, you are alowd.
Die when you will, a smocke shall be your shrowd.
You lere vpon me, do you? There's an eie
Wounds like a Leaden sword.

Boy. Full merrily hath this brane manager, this carreere bene run.

Ber. Loe, he is tilting straighe. Peace, I haue done.

Enter Clowne.

Welcome pure wit, thou part'st a faire fray.

Clo. O Lord sir, they would kno,
Whether the three worthies shall come in, or no.

Ber. What, are there but three?

Clo. No sir, but it is vara fine,
For euerie one pursents three.

Ber. And three times thrice is nine.

Clo. Not so sir, vnder correction sir, I hope it is not so. You cannot beg vs sir, I can assure you sir, we know what we know: I hope for three times thrice sir.

Ber. Is not nine.

Clo. Vnder correction sir, wee know where-vntill it doth amoune.

Ber. By Iouie, I alwaies tooke three threes for nine.

Clow. O Lord sir, it were pittie you should get your liuing by reckning sir.

Ber. How much is it?

Clo. O Lord sir, the partiet themselues, the actors sir will shew where-vntill it doth amount: for mine owne part, I am (as they say, but to perfect one man in one poore man) Pompion the great sir.

Ber. Art thou one of the Worthies?

Clo. It pleased them to thinke me worthie of Pompey the great: for mine owne part, I know not the degree of the Worthie, but I am to stand for him.

Ber. Go, bid them prepare. Exit.

Clo. We will turne it finely off sir, we will take some care.

King. Berowne, they will shame vs:
Let them not approach.

Ber. We are shame-proofe my Lord: and 'tis some policie, to haue one shew worse then the Kings and his companie.

Kin. I say they shall not come.

Qu. Nay my good Lord, let me o're-rule you now;
That sport best pleases, that doth least know how.
Where Zeale strives to content, and the contents
Dies in the Zeale of that which it presents:
Their fors see confounded, makes most forme in mirth,
When great things labouring perish in their birth.

Ber. A right description of our sport my Lord,

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Annoleated, I implore so much expence of thy royall sweet breath, as will vtter a brace of words.

Qu. Doth this man serue God?

Ber. Why aske you?

Qu. He speak's not like a man of God's making.

Brag. That's all one my faire sweet honie Monarch: For I protest, the Schoolmaster is exceeding fantastical: Too too vaine, too too vaine. But we will put it (as they say) to Fortuna delgatur, I wish you the peace of minde most royall cupplement.

King. Here is like to be a good presence of Worthies; He presents Hector of Troy, the Swaine Pompey the great, the Parish Curate Alexander, Armadoes Page Hercules, the Pedant Iudas Machabeus: And if these foure Worthies in their first shew thriue, these foure will change habites, and present the other fiue.

Ber. There is fiue in the first shew.

Kin. You are deceiued, tis not so.

Ber. The Pedant, the Braggart, the Hedge-Priest, the Foole, and the Boy,
Abate throw at Novum, and the whole world againe,
Cannot pricke out fiue such, take each one in's vaine.

Kin. The ship is vnder saile, and here shes comes amain.

Enter Pompey.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Ber. You he, you are not he.

Clo. I Pompey am.

Boy. With Libbards head on knee.

Ber. Well said old mocker,
I must needs be friends with thee.

Clo. I Pompey am, Pompey surnam'd the big.

Du. The great.

Clo. It is great sir: Pompey surnam'd the great:
That oft in field, with Targe and Shield,
did make my foe to sweat:
And trauelling along this coast, I here am come by chance,
And lay my Armes before the legs of this sweet Lasse of France.
If your Ladiship would say thankes Pompey, I had done.

La. Great thankes great Pompey

Clo. Tis not so much worth: but I hope I was perfect. I made a little fault in great.

Ber. My hat to a halfe-penie, Pompey prooues the best Worthie.

Enter Curtiz for Alexander.

Curs. when in the world I liu'd, I was the worldes Commander:
By East, West, North, & South, I spred my conquering wingde
My Scutcheon plaine declares that I am Alisander.

Boie. Your nose saies no, you are not;
For it stands too right.

Ber. Your nose smels no, in this most tender smelling Knight.

Qu. The Conqueror is dismaid:
Proceede good Alexander.

Cur. When in the world I lived, I was the worlde Commander.

Boie. Most true, 'tis right: you were so Alisander.

Ber. Pompey the great.

Clo. your seruant and Costard.

Ber. Take away the Conqueror, take away Alisander

Clo. O sir, you haue ouer throwne Alisander the conqueror: you will be scrap'd out of the painted cloth for this.

this: your Lion that holds his Pollax sitting on a close stoole, will be given to Aiax. He will be the ninth worthie. A Conqueror, and affraid to speake? Runne away for shame Alisander There an't shall please you: a foolish milde man, an honest man, looke you, & soon dasht He is a marvellous good neighbour insooth, and a verie good Bowler. but for Alisander, alas you see, how 'tis a little ass-parted But there are Worthies a comming, will speake their minde in some other sort Exeu Ca.

Qu. Stand aside good Pompey.

Enter Pedant for Iudas, and the Boy for Hercules.

Ped. Great Hercules is presented by this Imp,
Whose Club kil'd Cerberus that three-headed Canus,
And when he was a babe, a childe, a shrimpe,
Thus did he strangle Serpents in his Manus:
Quoniam, he seemeth in minoritie,
Ergo, I come with this Apologie.
Keepe some state in thy exit, and vanish. Exit Boy

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. A Iudas?

Ped. Not Iscariot sir.
Iudas I am, ycliped Machabeus.

Dum. Iudas Machabeus clipt, is plaine Iudas.

Ber. A kissing traitor. How art thou prou'd Iudas?

Ped. Iudas I am.

Dum. The more shame for you Iudas.

Ped. What mean you sir?

Boy. To make Iudas hang himselfe.

Ped. Begin sir, you are my elder.

Ber. Well follow'd, Iudas was hang'd on an Elder.

Ped. I will not be put out of countenance.

Ber. Because thou hast no face.

Ped. What is this?

Boy. A Citterne head.

Dum. The head of a bodkin.

Ber. A deaths face in a ring

Lon. The face of an old Roman coine, scarce seene

Boy. The pummell of Caesar's Faulchion.

Dum. The carv'd-bone face on a Flaske.

Ber. S. Georges halfe cheeke in a brooch.

Dum. I, and in a brooch of Lead.

Ber. I, and worne in the cap of a Tooth-drawer
And now forward, for we have put thee in countenance

Ped. You have put me out of countenance.

Ber. False, we have given thee faces.

Ped. But you have out-face'd them all.

Ber. And thou wer't a Lion, we would do so.

Boy. Therefore as he is, an Asse, let him go:
And so adieu sweet Iude. Nay, why dost thou stay?

Dum. For the latter end of his name.

Ber. For the Asse to the Iude: give it him. Iud-as away.

Ped. This is not generous, not gentle, not humble.

Boy. A light for monsieur Iudas, it growes darke, he may stumble.

Qu. Alas poore Machabeus, how hath hee beene baited.

Enter Braggart.

Ber. Hide thy head Achilles, heere comes Hector in Armes.

Dum. Though my mockes come home by me, I will now be merie.

King Hector was but a Troyan in respect of this.

Boy. But is this Hector?

King. I thinke Hector was not so cleane timber'd

Lon. His legge is too big for Hector.

Dum. More Calfe certaine

Boy. No, he is best indued in the small.

Ber This cannot be Hector.

Dum He's a God or a Painter, for he makes faces.

Brag The Armipotent Mars, of Lances the almighty,
gave Hector a gift

Dum. A gilt Nutmegge.

Ber. A Lemmon.

Lon. Stucke with Cloues.

Dum. No clouen.

Brag. The Armipotent Mars of Lances the almighty,
Gave Hector a gift, the heire of Ilion,
A man so breathed, that certaine he would fight, yea
From morne till night, out of his Pauilion
I am that Flower

Dum. That Mint

Long. That Cullombine.

Brag Sweet Lord Longauil reine thy tongue

Lon. I must rather give it the reine for it runnes against Hector

Dum. I, and Hector's a Grey-hound

Brag. The sweet War-man is dead and rotten,
Sweet chuckes, beat not the bones of the buried
But I will forward with my deuice;
Sweet Royaltie bestow on me the sence of hearing.

Berowne steppes forth.

Qu. Speake braue Hector, we are much delighted

Brag. I do adore thy sweet Graces slipper.

Boy. Loues her by the foot.

Dum He may not by the yard

Brag. This Hector farre surmounted Hannibal.
The partie is gone.

Clo. Fellow Hector, she is gone; she is two monethes on her way.

Brag. What meanest thou?

Clo. Faith vnleesse you play the honest Troyan, the poore Wench is cast away: she's quick, she child brags in her belly already: 'tis yours.

Brag. Dost thou infamonize me among Potentates? Thou shalt die.

Clo. Then shall Hector be whipt for Iaquenetta that is quicke by him, and hang'd for Pompey, that is dead by him.

Dum. Most rare Pompey.

Boy. Renowned Pompey

Ber. Greater then great, great, great, great Pompey. Pompey the huge.

Dum Hector trembles.

Ber. Pompey is moued, more Ases more Ases stirre them, or stirre them on.

Dum. Hector will challenge him.

Ber. I, if a'haue no more man's blood in's belly, then will sup a Flea.

Brag. By the North-pole I do challenge thee

Clo. I wil not fight with a pole like a Northern man; I'le slash, I'le do it by the sword: I pray you let mee borrow my Armes againe.

Dum. Roome for the incensed Worthies.

Clo. I'le do it in my shirt

Dum Most resolute Pompey.

Page. Master, let me take you a button hole lower. Do you not see Pompey is vncasing for the combat: what mean

mence you? you will lose your reputation.

Brag. Gentlemen and Souldiers pardon me, I will not combat in my shirt.

Du. You may not deuie it, Pompey hath made the challenge.

Brag. Sweet bloods, I both may, and will.

Ber. What reason haue you for't?

Brag. The naked truth of it is, I haue no shirt, I go woolward for penance.

Ber. True, and it was inioyned him in Rome for want of Linnen: since when, He be sworne he wore none, but a dishclout of Iaquenetta, and that hee weares next his heart for a fauour.

Enter a Messenger, Monsieur Mercade.

Mer. God saue you Madame.

Qu. Welcome Mercade, but that thou interrupt'st our merriment.

Mer. I am sorrie Madam, for the newes I bring is heauie in my tongue. The King your father

Qu. Dead for my life.

Mer. Even so: My tale is told.

Ber. Worthies away, the Scene begins to cloud.

Brag. For mine owne part, I breath free breath: I haue seene the day of wrong, through the little hole of discretion, and I will right my selfe like a Souldier.

Exeunt Worthies

Kin. How fare's your Maiestie?

Qu. Boyet prepaire, I will away to night.

Kin. Madame not so, I do beseech you stay.

Qu. Prepare I say. I thanke you gracious Lords For all your faire endeuours and entreats: Out of a new sad-soule, that you vouchsafe, In your rich wisedome to excuse, or hide, The liberall opposition of our spirits, If ouer-boldly we haue borne our selues, In the conuerse of breath (your gentlenesse Was guilty of it.) Farewell worthie Lord: A heauie heart beares not a humble tongue. Excuse me so, coming so short of thanks, For my great suite, so easily obtain'd.

Kin. The extreme parts of time, extremelie formes All causes to the purpose of his speed: And often at his verie loose decides That, which long processe could not arbitrate. And though the mourning brow of progenie Forbid the smiling courtesie of Loue: The holy suite which fainst it would conuince, Yet since loues argument was first on foote, Let not the cloud of sorrow iustle it From what it purpos'd: since to wailе friends lost, Is not by much so wholsome profitable, As to reioyce at friends but newly found.

Qu. I vnderstand you not, my griefes are double.

Ber. Honest plain words, best pierce the ears of griefe And by these badges vnderstand the King. For your faire sakes haue we neglected time, Plaid foule play with our oathes: your beautie Ladies Hath much deformed vs, fashioning our humors Even to the opposed end of our intents. And what in vs hath seem'd ridiculous: As Loue is full of vnbefitting straines, All wanonnes a childe, skipping and vaine, Form'd by the eie, and therefore like the eie. Full of strayng shapes, of habits, and of formes Varying in subiects as the eie doth roule, To euerie varied obiect in his glance: Which parti-coated presence of loose loue Put on by vs, if in your heauenly eies, Haue misbeseem'd our oathes and greuiches. Those heauenlie eies that looke into these faults Suggested vs to make: therefore Ladies Our loue being yours, the error that Loue makes Is likewise yours. We to our selues prouefalse, By being once false, for euer to be true To those that make vs both, faire Ladies you. And euen that falsehood in it selfe a sinne, Thus purifies it selfe, and turnes to grace.

Qu. We haue receiu'd your Letters, full of Loue: Your Fauours, the Ambassadors of Loue. And in our maiden counsaile rated them At courtship, pleasant iest, and courtesie, As bombast and as lining to the time: But more deuout than these are our respects Haue we not beene, and therefore met your loues In their owne fashion, like a merriment.

Du. Our letters Madam, shew'd much more than iest

Lon. So did our lookes.

Ros. We did not coat them so.

Kin. Now at the latest minute of the houre, Grant vs your loues.

Qu. A time me thinkes too short, To make a world-without-end bargaine in; No, no my Lord, your Grace is perur'd much, Full of deare guiltinesse, and therefore this: If for my Loue (as there is no such cause) You will do ought, this shall you do for me. Your oth I will not trust: but go with speed To some forlorne and naked Hermitage, Remote from all the pleasures of the world: There stay, until the twelue Celestiall Signes Haue brought about their annuall reckoning. If this austere insociable life, Change not your offer made in heate of blood: If frosts, and fasts, hard lodging, and thin weeds Nip not the gaudie blossomes of your Loue, But that it bearе this triall, and last loue: Then at the expiration of the yeare, Come challenge me, challenge me by these desiers, And by this Virgin palme, now kissing thine, I will be thine: and till that instant shut My wofull selfe vp in a mourning house, Raining the teares of lamentation, For the remembrance of my Fathers death. If this thou do deuie, let our hands part, Neither intitled in the others heart.

Kin. If this or more than this, I would denie, To flatter vp these powers of mine with rest, The sodaine hand of death close vp mine eie. Hence euer then, my heart is in thy brest.

Ber. And what to me my Loue? and what to me?

Ros. You must bepurged too, your sins are rack'd. You are attaint with faults and periurie: Therefore if you my fauor meane to get, A twelue-month shall you spend, and never rest, But seeke the weerie beds of people sicke.

Du. But what to me my loue? but what to me?

Kat. A wife? a beard, faire health, and honestie, With three-fold loue, I wish you all these three.

Du. O shall I say, I thanke you gentle wife?

Kat. Not so my Lord, a twelue-month and a day,

Ile marke no words that smoothfac'd wooers say.
Come when the King doth to my Ladie come:
Then if I haue much loue, Ile giue you some.
Dum. Ile serue thee true and faithfully till then.
Kath. Yet sweare not, least ye be forswome agen.
Lon. What saies Maria?
Mari. As the twelue months end,
Ile change my blacke Gowne, for a faithfull friend.
Lon. Ile stay with patience: but the time is long.
Mari. The liker you, few taller are so yong.
Ber. Studies my Ladie? Mistresse, looke on me,
Behold the window of my heart, mine eie:
What humble suite attends thy answer there,
Impose some seruice on me for my loue.
Ros. Oft haue I heard of you my Lord Berowne,
Before I saw you: and the worlds large tongue
Proclaimes you for a man replete with mockes,
Full of comparisons, and wounding flouts:
Which you on all estates will execute,
That lie within the mercie of your wit.
To weed this Wormewood from your fruitfull braine,
And therewithall to win me, if you please,
Without the which I cannot to be won:
You shall this twelue month terme from day to day,
Visite the speechless sicke, and still conuerse
With groaning wretches: and your taske shall be,
With all the fierce endeuour of your wit,
To enforce the pained impotent to smile.
Ber. To mouse wilde laughter in the throate of death?
It cannot be, it is impossible.
Mirth cannot mouse a soule in agonie.
Ros. Why that's the way to choke a gibing spirit,
Whose influence is begot of that loose grace,
Which shallow laughing hearers giue to fooles:
A iest's prosperitie, lies in the eare
Of him that hears it, never in the tongue
Of him that makes it: then, if sickly eares,
Deaft with the clamors of their owne dearе groanes,
Will hear your idle scornes, continue then,
And I will haue you, and that fault withall.
But if they will not throw away that spirit,
And I shal finde you empty of that fault,
Right ioyfull of your reformation.
Ber. A twelue month? Well: befall what will befall,
Ile iest a twelue month in an Hospitall.
Qu. I sweet my Lord, and so I take my leaue.
King. No Madam, we will bring you on your way.
Ber. Our wooing doth not end like an old Play:
Iacke hath not Gill: these Ladies courtesie
Might wel haue made our sport a Comedie.
Kin. Come sir, it wants a twelue month and a day,
And then 'twill end.
Ber. That's too long for a play.

Enter Braggart.

Brag. Sweet Maiesty vouchsafe me.
Qu. Was not that Hector?
Dum. The worthie Knight of Troy.
Brag. I wil kisse thy royal finger, and take leaue.
I am a Votarie, I haue vow'd to Iaquenetta to holde the Plough for her sweet loue three yeares. But most esteemed greatnesse, will you heare the Dialogue that the two Learned men haue compiled, in praise of the Owle and the Cuckow? It should haue followed in the end of our show.
Kin. Call them forth quickly, we will do so.
Brag. Holla, Approach.

Enter all.

This side is Hiems, Winter.
This Ver, the Spring: the one maintained by the Owle,
Th'other by the Cuckow.
Ver, begin.

The Song.

When Daisies pied, and Violets blew,
And Cuckow-buds of yellow hew:
And Ladie-smocks all siluer white,
Do paint the Medowes with delight.
The Cuckow then on euerie tree,
Mockes married men, for thus sings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare,
Vnpleasing to a married eare.

When Shepheards pipe on Oaten straws,
And merrie Larkes are Ploughmens clocks:
When Turtles tread, and Rookes and Dawes,
And Maidens bleach their summer smocks:
The Cuckow then on euerie tree
Mockes married men; for thus sings he,
Cuckow.
Cuckow, Cuckow: O word of feare.
Vnpleasing to a married eare.

Winter.

When Icicles hang by the wall,
And Dicke the Shepheard blowes his nails;
And Tom beares Logges into the hall,
And Milke comes frozen home in pails:
When blood is nipt, and waies be foule,
Then nightly sings the staring Owle
Tu-whit to-who.
A merrie note,
While greasie Iane doth keale the pot.

When all aloud the winde doth blow,
And coffing drowne the Parsons saw:
And birds sit brooding in the snow,
And Marians nose looks red and raw:
When roasted Crabs hisse in the bowle,
Then nightly sings the staring Owle,
Tu-whit to who:
A merrie note,
While greasie Iane doth keale the pot.

Brag. The Words of Mercurie,
Are harsh after the songs of Apollo:
You that way; we this way.

Exeunt omnes.

FINIS.

A MIDSOMMER Nights Dreame.

Actus primus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, with others

Theseus.

NOw faire Hippolita, our nuptiall houre
Drawes on apace: foure happy daies bring in Another Moon: but oh, me thinkes, how slow
This old Moon wanes; She lingers my desires
Like to a Step-dame, or a Dowager,
Long withering out a yong mans reuennew.
Hip. Foure daies will quickly steep themselues in nights
Foure nights will quickly dreame away the time:
And then the Moone, like to a siluer bow,
Now bent in heauen, shall behold the night
Of our solemnities.
The. Go Philostrate,
Stirre vp the Athenian youth to merriments,
Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth,
Turne melancholy forth to Funerals:
The pale companion is not for our pompe,
Hippolita, I woo'd thee with my sword,
And wonne thy loue, doing thee injuries.
But I will wed thee in another key,
With pompe, with triumph, and with reuelling.

Enter Egeus and his daughter Hermia, Lysander, and Demetrius.

Ege. Happy be Theseus, our renowned Duke.
The. Thanks good Egeus: what's the news with thee?
Ege. Full of vexation, come I, with complaint
Against my childe, my daughter Hermia.
Stand forth Demetrius.
My Noble Lord,
This man hath my consent to marrie her.
Stand forth Lysander
And my gracious Duke,
This man hath bewitch'd the bosome of my childe.
Thou, thou Lysander, thou hast given her rimes,
And interchang'd loue-tokens with my childe:
Thou hast by Moone-light at her window sung,
With feining voice, verses of feigning loue,
And stolne the impression of her fantasie,
With bracelets of thy haire, rings, gawdies, conceits,
Knacks, trifles, Nose-gaies, sweet meats (messengers
Of strong prevailment in vnhardned youth)
With cunning hast thou filch'd my daughters heart,
Turn'd her obedience (which is due to me)
To stubborne harshnesse. And my gracious Duke,
Be it so she will not here before your Grace,
Consent to marrie with Demetrius,
I beg the ancient priuiledge of Athens;
As she is mine, I may dispose of her;
Which shall be either to this Gentleman,
Or to her death, according to our Law,
Immediately prouided in that case.
The. What say you Hermia? be aduis'd faire Maide
To you your Father should be as a God;
One that compos'd your beauties; yea and one
To whom you are but as a forme in wax
By him imprinted: and within his power,
To leaue the figure, or disfigure it:
Demetrius is a worthy Gentleman.
Her. So is Lysander.
The. In himselfe he is.
But in this kinde, wanting your fathers voyce.
The other must be held the worthier.
Her. I would my father look'd but with my eyes.
The. Rather your eies must with his iudgment looke.
Her. I do entreat your Grace to pardon me
I know not by what power I am made bold,
Nor how it may concerne my modestie
In such a presence here to plead my thoughts:
But I beseech your Grace, that I may know
The worst that may befall me in this case,
If I refuse to wed Demetrius.
The. Either to dye the death, or to abiure
For ever the society of men.
Therefore faire Hermia question your desires,
Know of your youth, examine well your blood,
Whether (if you yeeld not to your fathers choice)
You can endure the liuerie of a Nunne,
For aye to be in shady Cloister mew'd,
To liue a barren sister all your life,
Chanting faint hymnes to the cold fruitlesse Moone,
Thrice blessed they that master so their blood,
To vndergo such maiden pilgrimage,
But earthlier happie is the Rose distil'd,
Then that which withering on the virgin thorne,
Growes, liues, and dies, in single blessednesse.

Her. So will I grow, so live, so die my Lord,
Ere I will yeeld my virgin Patent vp
Vnto his Lordship, whose vnwished yoake,
My soule consents not to giue soueraignty.

The. Take time to pause, and by the next new Moon
The sealing day betwixt my loue and me,
For everlasting bond of fellowship:
Vpon that day either prepare to dye,
For disobedience to your fathers will,
Or else to wed Demetrius as hee would,
Or on Diamas Altar to protest
For ele, austerity, and single life.

Dem. Relent sweet Hermia, and Lysander, yeelde
Thy crazed title to my certaine right.

Lys. You haue her fathers loue, Demetrius:
Let me haue Hermia's: do you marry him.

Egeus. Scornfull Lysander, true, he hath my Loue;
And what is mine, my loue shall render him.
And she is mine, and all my right of her,
I do estate vnto Demetrius.

Lys. I am my Lord, as well deriu'd as he,
As well possest: my loue is more then his:
My fortunes every way as fairely reach'd
(If not with vantage) as Demetrius:
And (which is more then all these boasts can be)
I am belou'd of beauteous Hermia.
Why should not I then prosecute my right?
Demetrius, I'le conuoch it to his head,
Made loue to Nedar's daughter, Helena,
And won her soule: and she (sweet Ladie) dotes,
Deuoutly dotes, dotes in Idolatry,
Vpon this spotted and inconstant man.

The. I must confesse, that I haue heard so much,
And with Demetrius thought to have spoke thereof:
But being ouer-full of self-affaires,
My minde did lose it. But Demetrius come,
And come Egeus, you shall go with me,
I haue some priuate schooling for you both.
For you faire Hermia, looke you arme your selfe,
To fit your fancies to your Fathers will;
Or else the Law of Athens yeelds you vp
(Which by no meanes we may extenuate)
To death, or to a vow of single life.
Come my Hippolita, what cheere my loue?
Demetrius and Egeus go along:
I must imploy you in some business
Against our nuptiall, and conferre with you
Of something, nearely that concernes your selues.

Ege. With duetie and desire we follow you. Exeunt

Manet Lysander and Hermia.

Lys. How now my loue? Why is your cheek so pale?
How chance the Roses there do fade so fast?

Her. Belike for want of raine, which I could well
Beteeme them, from the tempest of mine eyes

Lys. For ought that ever I could reade,
Could ever heare by tale or historie,
The course of true loue never did run smooth,
But either it was different in blood.

Her. O cross! too high to be enthral'd to loue.

Lys. Or else misgrafted, in respect of yeares

Her. O spight! too old to be ingag'd to young

Lys. Or else stood vpon the choise of merit.

Her. O hell! to choose loue by another eie.

Lys. Or if there were a sympathie in choise,
Warre, death, or sicknesse, did lay siege to it,
Making it momentarie, as a sound:
Swift as a shadow, short as any dreame,
Brieffe as the lightning in the collied night,
That (in a spleene) vnfolds both heaven and earth:
And ere a man hath power to say, behold,
The iawes of darknesse do deuoure it vp:
So quick-bright things come to confusion

Her. If then true Louers haue been ever crost,
It stands as an edict in destinie:
Then let vs teach our triall patience,
Because it is a customarie crosse,
As due to loue, as thoughts, and dreames, and sighes,
Wishes and teares; poore Fancies followers.

Lys. A good persuasion; therefore hearke me Hermia,
I haue a Widdow Aunt, a dowager,
Of great reuenew, and she hath no childe,
From Athens is her house remou'd seuen leagues,
And she respects me, as her onely sonne:
There gentle Hermia, may I marrie thee,
And to that place, the sharpe Athenian Law
Cannot pursue vs. If thou lou'st me, then
Steale forth thy fathers house to morrow night
And in the wood, a league without the towne,
(Where I did meete thee once with Helena,
To do obseruance for a morne of May)
There will I stay for thee

Her. My good Lysander,
I sweare to thee, by Cupids strongest bow,
By his best arrow with the golden head,
By the simplicitie of Venus Doues,
By that which knitteth soules, and prospers loue,
And by that fire which burn'd the Carthage Queene,
When the false Troyan vnder saile was seene,
By all the vowes that ever men haue broke,
(In number more than ever women spoke)
In that same place thou hast appointed me,
To morrow truly will I meete with thee.

Lys. Keepe promise loue. looke here comes Helena.

Enter Helena.

Her. God speede faire Helena, whither away?

Hel. Call you me faire? that faire againe vnsay,
Demetrius loues you faire: O happie faire!
Your eyes are loadstarres, and your tongues sweet ayre
More ranisshe then Larke to shepheards eare,
When whaete is greene, when hawthorne buds appeare,
Sicknesse is catching: O were fauor so,
Your words I catch, faire Hermia ere I go,
My eare should catch your voice, my eye, your eye,
My tongue should catch your tongues sweet melodie,
Were the world mine, Demetrius being bated,
The rest I'le give to be to you translated
O teach me how you looke, and with what art
you sway the motion of Demetrius hart.

Her. I frowne vpon him, yet he loues me still.

Hel. O that your frownes would teach my smiles such skill.

Her. I give him curses, yet he gives me loue.

Hel. O that my prayers could such affection moue.

Her. The more I hate, the more he followes me.

Hel. The more I loue, the more he hateth me.

Her. His fault is Helena is none of mine

Hel. None but your beauty, would that fault were mine

Her. Take comfort; he no more shall see my face,
Lysander and my selfe will flie this place.
Before the time I did Lysander see,
Seem'd Athens like a Paradise to mee.

O then, what graces in my Loue do dwell,
That he hath turn'd a heauen into hell.

Lys. Helen, to you our minds we will vnfold,
To morrow night, when Phebe doth behold
Her siluer visage, in the watry glasse,
Decking with liquid pearle, the bladed grasse
(A time that Louers flightes doth still conceale)
Through Athens gates, haue we deuis'd to steale.

Her. And in the wood, where often you and I,
Vpon faint Primrose beds, were wont to lye,
Emptying our bosomes, of their counsell swell:
There my Lysander, and my selfe shall meete,
And thence from Athens turne away our eyes
To seeke new friends and strange companions.
Farwell sweet play-fellow, pray thou for vs,
And good luck grant thee thy Demetrius.
Keepe word Lysander we must starue our sight,
From louers foods, till morrow deepe midnight.

Exit Hermia.

Lys. I will my Hermia. Helena adieu,
As you on him, Demetrius dotes on you. Exit Lysander.

Hele. How happy some, are otherwhile can be?
Through Athens I am thought as faire as she.
But what of that? Demetrius thinkes not so:
He will not know, what all, but he doth know,
And as he errs, doting on Hermia's eyes;
So I, admiring of his qualities:
Things base and vilde, holding no quantity.
Loue can transpose to forme and dignity,
Loue looke not with the eyes, but with the minde,
And therefore is wing'd Cupid painted blinde.
Nor hath loues minde of any iudgement taste:
Wings and no eyes, figure, vnheedy haste.
And therefore is Loue said to be a childe,
Because in choise he is often beguil'd,
As waggish boyes in game themselues forswere;
So the boy Loue is periur'd every where.
For ere Demetrius looke on Hermia's eyne,
He hail'd downe oathes that he was only mine.
And when this Haile some heat from Hermia felt,
So he dissolu'd, and showres of oathes did melt.
I will goe tell him of faire Hermia's flight:
Then to the wood will he, to morrow night
Pursue her; and for his intelligence,
If I haue thankes, it is a deere expence:
But herein meane I to enrich my paine,
To haue his sight thither, and backe againe. Exit.

Enter Quince the Carpenter, Snug the Ioyner, Bottome the Weaver, Flute the bellowes-mender, Snout the Tinker, and Starueling the Taylor.

Quin. Is all our company here?

Bot. You were best to call them generally, man by man, according to the scrip.

Quin. Here is the scrowle of every mans name, which is thought fit through all Athens, to play in our Enterlude before the Duke and the Duchess, on his wedding day at night.

Bot. First, good Peter Quince, say what the play treats on: then read the names of the Actors: and so grow on to a point.

Quin. Marry our play is the most lamentable Comedy, and most cruell death of Pyramus and Thisbe.

Bot. A very good peece of worke I assure you, and a merry. Now good Peter Quince, call forth your Actors by the scrowle. Masters spread your selues.

Quince. Answere as I call you. Nick Bottome the Weaver.

Bottome. Ready; name what part I am for, and proceed.

Quince. You Nicke Bottome are set downe for Pyramus.

Bot. What is Pyramus, a louer, or a tyrant?

Quin. A Louer that kills himselfe most gallantly for loue.

Bot. That will aske some teares in the true performing of it: if I do it, let the audience looke to their eies: I will moue stormes; I will condole in some measure. To the rest yet, my chiefe humour is for a tyrant. I could play Ercles rarely, or a part to teare a Cat in, to make all split the raging Rocks, and shiuering shocks shall breake the locks of prison gates, and Phibbus carre shall shine from farre, and make and mar the foolish Fates. This was lofty. Now name the rest of the Players. This is Ercles vaine, a tyrants vaine: a louer is more condoling.

Quin. Francis Flute the Bellowes-mender.

Flu. Here Peter Quince.

Quin. You must take Thisbie on you.

Flut. What is Thisbie, a wandring Knight?

Quin. It is the Lady that Pyramus must loue.

Flut. Nay faith, let not mee play a woman, I haue a beard comming.

Qui. That's all one, you shall play it in a Maske, and you may speake as small as you will.

Bot. And I may hide my face, let me play Thisbie too: I'le speake in a monstrous little voyce; Thisne, Thisne, ah Pyramus my louer deare, thy Thisbie deare, and Lady deare.

Quin. No no, you must play Pyramus, and Flute, you Thisby.

Bot. Well, proceed.

Qu. Robin Starueling the Taylor.

Star. Here Peter Quince.

Quince. Robin Starueling, you must play Thisbies mother?

Tom Snout, the Tinker.

Snout. Here Peter Quince.

Quin. You, Pyramus father; my self, Thisbies father; Snugge the Ioyner, you the Lyons part: and I hope there is a play fitted.

Snug. Haue you the Lions part written? pray you if be, giue it me, for I am slow of studie.

Quin. You may doe it extemporie, for it is nothing but roaring.

Bot. Let mee play the Lyon too, I will roare that I will doe any mans heart good to heare me. I will roare, that I will make the Duke say, Let him roare againe, let him roare against.

Quin. If you should doe it too terrible, you would fright the Duchesse and the Ladies, that they would shriike, and that were enough to hang vs all.

All. That would hang vs every mothers sonne.

Bottome. I graunt you friends, if that you should fright the Ladies out of their Wittes, they would haue no more discretion but to hang vs: but I will aggrauate my voyce so, that I will roare you as gently as any sucking Doue; I will roare and 'twere any Nightingale.

Quin. You can play no part but Pyramus, for Pyra- man is a sweet-fac'd man, a proper man as one shall see in a summers day; a most louely Gentleman-like man, therfore you must needs play Pyramus.

Bot. Well, I will vndertake it. What beard were I best to play it in?

Quin. Why, what you will.

Bot. I will discharge it, in either your straw-colour beard, your orange tawnie beard, your purple in graine beard, or your French-crowne colour'd beard, your perfect yellow.

Quin. Some of your French Crownes haue no haire at all, and then you will play bare-fac'd. But masters here are your parts, and I am to intreat you, request you, and desire you, to con them by to morrow night: and meet me in the palace wood, a mile without the Towne, by Moone-light, there we will rehearse: for if we meete in the Citie, we shalbe dog'd with company, and our deuises knowne. In the meane time, I wil draw a bil of properties, such as our play wants. I pray you faile me not.

Bottom. We will meete, and there we may rehearse more obscenely and courageously. Take paines, be perfect, adieu.

Quin. At the Dukes oake we meete.

Bot. Enough, hold or cut bow-strings. Exeunt

Actus Secundus.

Enter a Fairie at one doore, and Robin good-fellow at another.

Rob. How now spirit, whether wander you?

Fai. Ouer hil, ouer dale, through bush, through briar,
Ouer parke, ouer pale, through flood, through fire,
I do wander euerie where, swifter then ♀ Moones sphere;
And I serue the Fairy Queene, to dew her orbs vpon the (green.
The Cowslips tall, her pensioners bee,
In their gold coats, spots you see,
Those be Rubies, Fairie fauors,
In those freckles, liue their fauors,
I must go seeke some dew drops heere,
And hang a pearle in euery cowslips eare.
Farewell thou Lob of spirits, I'le be gon,
Our Queene and all her Elues come heere anon.

Rob. The King doth keepe his Reuels here to night,
Take heed the Queene come not within his sight,
For Oberon is passing fell and wrath,
Because that she, as her attendant, hath
A louely boy stolne from an Indian King,
She neuer had so sweet a changeling,
And iealous Oberon would haue the childe
Knight of his traine, to trace the Forrests wilde.
But she (perforce) with holds the loued boy,
Crownes him with flowers, and makes him all her ioy.
And now they never meete in grouc, or greene,
By fountaine cleere, or spangled star-light sheene,
But they do square, that all their Elues for feare
Creepe into Acorne cups and hide them there.

Fai. Either I mistake your shape and making quite,
Or else you are that shrew'd and knauish spirit
Cal'd Robin Good-fellow. Are you not hee,
That frights the maidens of the Villagree,
Skim milke, and sometimes labour in the querne,
And bootlesse make the breathlesse housewife cherne,
And sometime make the drinke to beare no barme,
Mislead night-wanderers, laughing at their harme,
Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puche,
You do their worke, and they shall haue good luche.
Are not you he?

Rob. Thou speak'st aright;
I am that merrie wanderer of the night:
I iest to Oberon, and make him smile,
When I a fat and beane-fed horse beguile,
Neighing in likenesse of a filly foale,
And sometime lurke I in a Gossips bole,
In very likenesse of a roasted crab:
And when she drinkes, against her lips I bob,
And on her withered dewlop poure the Ale.
The wisest Aunt telling the saddest tale,
Sometime for three-foot stoole, mistaketh me,
Then slip I from her bum, downe topples she,
And tailour cries, and falls into a coffe.
And then the whole quire hold their hips, and loffe,
And waxen in their mirth, and neeze, and sweare,
A merrier houre yvas neuer wasted there.
But room Fairy, heere comes Oberon

Fai. And heere my Mistris:
Would that he were gone.

Enter the King of Fairies at one doore with his traine, and the Queene at another with hers.

Ob. Ill met by Moone-light,
Proud Tytania.

Qu. What, iealous Oberon? Fairy skip hence.
I haue forsworne his bed and companie.

Ob. Tarrie rash Wanton; am not I thy Lord?

Qu. Then I must be thy Lady: but I know
When thou wast stolne away from Fairy Land,
And in the shape of Corin, sate all day,
Playing on pipes of Corne, and versing loue
To amorous Phillida. Why art thou heere
Come from the farthest steepe of India?
But that forsooth the bouncing Amazon
Your buskin'd Mistresse, and your Warrior loue,
To Theseus must be Wedded; and you come,
To giue their bed ioy and prosperitie.

Ob. How canst thou thus for shame Tytania,
Glance at my credite, with Hippolita?
Knowing I know thy loue to Theseus?
Didst thou not leade him through the glimmering night
From Perigenia, whom he ramished?
And make him with faire Eagles breake his faith
With Ariadne, and Antiopa?

Qu. These are the forgeries of iealousie,
And euer since the middle Summers spring
Met we on hil, in dale, forrest, or mead,
By paued fountaine, or by rushie brooke,
Or in the beached margent of the sea,
To dance our ringlets to the whistling Winde,
But with thy brauls thou hast disturb'd our sport.
Therefore the Winds, piping to vs in vaine,
As in reuenge, haue suck'd vp from the sea
Contagious fogges: Which falling in the Land,
Hath euerie petty Riuer made so proud,
That they haue ouer-borne their Continents
The Ox hath therefore stretch'd his yoake in vaine,
The Ploughman lost his sweat, and the greene Corne
Hath rotted, ere his youth attain'd a beard:
The fold stands empty in the drowned field,
And Crowes are fatted with the murrion flocke,

The

The nine mens Morris is fild vp with mud,
And the quaint Mazes in the wanton greene,
For lacke of tread are vndistinguishable.
The humane mortals want their winter heere,
No night is now with hymne or carroll blest;
Therefore the Moone (the gouernesse of floods)
Pale in her anger, washes all the aire;
That Rheumaticke diseases doe abound.
And through this distemperature, we see
The seasons alter; hoared headed frosts
Fell in the fresh lap of the crimson Rose,
And on old Hyems chinne and Icie crowne,
An odorous Chaplet of sweet Sommer buds!
Is as in mockry set. The Spring, the Sommer,
The childing Autumne, angry Winter change
Their wonted Liueries, and the mazed worlde,
By their increase, now knowes not which is which:
And this same progeny of euills,
Comes from our debate, from our dissention,
We are their parents and originall.

Obe. Do you amend it then, it lies in you,
Why should Titania crosse her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my Henchman

Ob. Set your heart at rest.
The Fairy land buyes not the childe of me,
His mother was a Votresse of my Order,
And in the spiced Indian aire, by night
Full often hath she gossipt by my side,
And sat with me on Neptunes yellow sande,
Marking th embarked traders on the flood,
When we have laught to see the sailes conceiue,
And grow big bellied with the wanton winde:
Which she with pretty and with swimming gate,
Following (her wombe then rich with my yong squire)
Would imitate, and sail vpon the Land,
To fetch me trifles, and returne againe,
As from a voyage, rich with merchandize.
But she being mortall, of that boy did die,
And for her sake I doe rear vp her boy,
And for her sake I will not part with him.

Ob. How long within this wood intend you stay

Tit. Perchance till after Theseus wedding day.
If you will patiently dance in our Round,
And see our Moone-light rewels, goe with vs;
If not, shun me and I will spare your haunts.

Ob. Give me that boy and I will goe with thee.

Tit. Not for thy Fairy Kingdome Fairies away:
We shall chide downe right, if I longer stay. Exeunt.

Ob. Well, go thy way, thou shalt not from this grove,
Till I torment thee for this iniury.
My gentle Puck come hither; thou remembrest
Since once I sat vpon a promontory
And heard a Mearemaide on a Dolphins backe
Vttering such dulcet and harmonious breath,
That the rude sea grew stilll at her song.
And certaine starres shot madly from their Spheares,
To heare the Sea maids musicke.

Puck. I remember.

Ob. That very time I saw (but thou couldst not)
Flying betweene the cold Moone and the earth,
Cupid all armd; a certaine aime he tooke
At a faire Vestall, throned by the West,
And loos'd his loue-shaft smartly from his bow
As it should pierce a hundred thousand hearts,
But I saw the young Cupids fiery shaft
Quench'd in the chaste beames of the watry Moone;
And the imperiall Votresse passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy free.
Yet markt I where the bolt of Cupid fell.
It fell vpon a little westerne flower;
Before, milke-white; now purple with loues wound,
And maidens call it, Loue in idlenesse.
Fetch me that flower; the herb I shew'd thee once,
The iuyce of it, on sleeping eye-lids laid,
Will make or man or woman madly dote
Vpon the next liue creature that it sees.
Fetch me this herbe, and be thou heere againe,
Ere the Leuiathan can swim a league.

Puck. I'le put a girdle about the earth, in forty minutes.

Obe. Having once this iuyce,
I'le watch Titania, when she is asleepe,
And drop the liquor of it in her eyes
The next thing when she waking looks vpon,
(Be it on Lyon, Beare, or Wolfe or Bull,
On meddling Monkey, or on busie Ape)
Shee shall pursue it, with the soule of loue.
And ere I take this charme off from her sight,
(As I can take it with another herbe)
I'le make her render vp her Page to me.
But who comes heere? I am invisible,
And I will ouer-heare their conference.

Enter Demetrius, Helena following him

Dem. I loue thee not, therefore pursue me not,
Where is Lysander, and faire Hermia?
The one I'le slay, the other slayeth me.
Thou toldst me they were stolne into this wood;
And heere am I, and wood within this wood,
Because I cannot meet my Hermia.
Hence, get thee gone, and follow me no more.

Hel. You draw me, you hard-hearted Adamant,
But yet you draw not Iron, for my heart
Is true as steele. Leaue you your power to draw,
And I shall haue no power to follow you.

Dem. Do I entice you? do I speake you faire?
Or rather doe I not in plainest truth,
Tell you I doe not, nor I cannot loue you?

Hel. And even for that doe I loue thee the more;
I am your spaniell, and Demetrius,
The more you beat me, I will fawne on you.
Vse me but as your spaniell; spurne me, strike me,
Neglect me, lose me; onely giue me leaue
(Vnworthy as I am) to follow you.
What worse place can I beg in your loue,
(And yet a place of high respect with me)
Then to be vsed as you doe your dogge.

Dem. Tempt not too much the hatred of my spirit,
For I am sicke when I do looke on thee.

Hel. And I am sicke when I looke not on you.

Dem. You doe impeach your modesty too much,
To leaue the Citty, and commit your selfe
Into the hands of one that loues you not,
To trust the opportunity of night,
And the iniuriousnesse of a desert place,
With the rich worth of your virginity.

Hel. Your vertue is my priuiledge: for that
It is not night when I doe see your face.
Therefore I thinke I am not in the night,
Nor doth this wood lacke worlds of company,

For you in my respect are all the world.
Then how can it be said I am alone,
When all the world is here to looke on me?
Dem. I'le run from thee, and hide me in the brakes,
And leave thee to the mercy of wilde beasts.
Hel. The wildest hath not such a heart as you;
Runne when you will, the story shall be chang'd:
Apollo flies, and Daphne holds the chase;
The Doue persues the Griffin, the milde Hinde
Makes speed to catch the Tyger. Bootlesse speede,
When cowardise persues, and valour flies.
Demet. I will not stay thy questions, let me go;
Or if thou follow me, doe not believe,
But I shall doe thee mischiefe in the wood.
Hel. I, in the Temple in the Towne, and Field
You doe me mischiefe. Fye Demetrius,
Your wrongs doe set a scandell on my sexe:
We cannot fight for loue, as men may doe;
We should be woo'd, and were not made to woo.
I follow thee, and make a heauen of hell,
To die vpon the hand I loue so well. Exit.
Ob. Fare thee well Nymph, ere he do leaue this grouse,
Thou shalt flie him, and he shall seeke thy loue.
Hast thou the flower there? Welcome wanderer.

Enter Pucke.

Puck. I, there it is
Ob. I pray thee give it me.
I know a banke where the wilde time blowes,
Where Oxlips and the nodding Violet growes,
Quite ouer-cannopied with luscious woodbine,
With sweet muske roses, and with Eglantine;
There sleepes Tytania, sometime of the night,
Lul'd in these flowers, with dances and delight.
And there the snake throwes her enammel'd skinne,
Weed wide enough to rap a Fairy in.
And with the juyce of this I'le streake her eyes,
And make her full of hatefull fantasies.
Take thou some of it, and seek through this grouse;
A sweet Athenian Lady is in loue
With a disdainefull youth: anoint his eyes,
But doe it when the next thing he espies,
May be the Lady. Thou shalt know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on.
Effect it with some care, that he may prouse
More fond on her, then she vpon her loue;
And looke thou meet me ere the first Cocke crow.
Pu. Feare not my Lord, your seruant shall do so. Exit.

Enter Queene of Fairies, with her traine

Queen. Come, now a Roundell, and a Fairy song;
Then for the third part of a minute hence,
Some to kill Cankers in the musk rose buds,
Some warre with Reremise, for their leathern wings,
To make my small Elues coates, and some keepe backe
The clamorous Owle that nightly hoots and wonders
At our quaint spirits: Sing me now asleepe.
Then to your offices, and let me rest.

Fairies Sing.

You spotted Snakes with double tongue,
Thorny Hedgehogges be not seene,
Newts and blinde worms do no wrong,
Come not neere our Fairy Queene.
Philomele with melodie,
Sing in your sweet Lullaby,
Lulla, lulla, lullaby, lulla, lulla, lullaby,
Never harme, nor spell, nor charme,
Come our louely Lady nye.
So good night with Lullaby.
2. Fairy. Weaueing Spiders come not heere,
Hence you long leg'd Spinners, heere.
Beetles blacke approach not neere;
Worme nor Snayle doe no offence.
Philomele with melodie, &c.
1. Fairy. Hence away, now all is well;
One aloofe, stand Centinell. Shee sleepes

Enter Oberon.

Ober. What thou seest when thou dost wake,
Doe it for thy true Loue take:
Loue and languish for his sake.
Be it Ounce, or Cattee, or Beare,
Pard, or Boare with bristled haire,
In thy eye that shall appeare,
When thou wak'st, it is thy deare,
Wake when some vile thing is neare.

Enter Lisander and Hermia.

Lis. Faire loue, you faint with wandring in ſ woods
And to speake troth I haue forgot our way:
We'll rest vs Hermia, if you thinke it good,
And tarry for the comfort of the day.
Her. Be it so Lysander; finde you out a bed,
For I vpon this banke will rest my head.
Lys. One turfe shall serue as pillow for vs both,
One heart, one bed, two bosomes, and one troth.
Her. Nay good Lysander, for my sake my deere
Lie further off yet, doe not lie so neere
Lys. O take the sence sweet, of my innocence,
Loue takes the meaning, in loues conference,
I mean that my heart vnto yours is knit,
So that but one heart can you make of it.
Two bosomes interchanged with an oath,
So then two bosomes, and a single troth.
Then by your side, no bed-roome me deny,
For lying so, Hermia, I doe not lye.
Her. Lysander riddles very prettily;
Now much beshrew my manners and my pride,
If Hermia meant to say, Lysander lied.
But gentle friend, for loue and courtesie
Lie further off, in humane modesty,
Such separation, as may well be said,
Becomes a vertuous bachelour, and a maide,
So far be distant, and good night sweet friend;
Thy loue ne'ere alter, till thy sweet life end.
Lys. Amen, amen, to that faire prayer, say I,
And then end life, when I end loyalty:
Heere is my bed, sleepe giue thee all his rest.
Her. With half that wish, the wishers eyes be prest
Enter Pucke They sleepe.
Puck. Through the Forrest haue I gone,
But Athenian finde I none,
One whose eyes I might approue
This flowers force in stirring loue.
Night and silence: who is heere?
Weedes of Athens he doth weare:
This is he (my master said)
Despised the Athenian maide:
And heere the maiden sleeping sound,

On

On the dauke and dusty ground
Pretty soule, she durst not lye
Neere this lacke-loue, this kill-curtesie.
Choriſe, vpon thy eyes I throw
All the power this charme doth owe:
When thou wak'ſt, let loue forbid
Sleepe his ſeate on thy eye-lid.
So awake when I am gone:
For I muſt now to Oberon. Exit.

Enter Demetrius and Helena running.

Hel. Stay, though thou kill me, ſweete Demetrius
Dem. I charge thee hence, and do not haunt me thus.
Hel. O wilt thou darkling leaue me? do not ſo.
Dem. Stay on thy paine, I alone will goe.
Exit Demetrius
Hel. O I am out of breath, in this fond chace,
The more my prayer, the leſſer is my grace.
Happy is Hermia, wherſoeere ſhe lies;
For ſhe hath bleſſed and attractive eyes.
How came her eyes ſo bright? Not with ſalt teares.
If ſo, my eyes are oftner waſhe then hers.
No, no, I am as vgly as a Beare;
For beaſts that meete me, runne away for feare,
Therefore no marvaile, though Demetrius
Doe as a monſter, flie my preſence thus.
What wicked and diſſembling glaſſe of mine,
Made me compare with Hermia ſphery eyne?
But who is here? Lyſander on the ground;
Deade or aſleepe? I ſee no blood, no wound,
Lyſander, if you liue, good ſir awake.
Lyſ. And run through fire I will for thy ſweet ſake.
Transparent Helena, nature her ſhewes art,
That through thy boſome makes me ſee thy heart.
Where is Demetrius? oh how fit a word
Is that vile name, to periſh on my ſword!
Hel. Do not ſay ſo Lyſander, ſay not ſo:
What though he loue your Hermia? Lord, what though?
Yet Hermia ſtill loues you; then be content.
Lyſ. Content with Hermia? No, I do repent
The tedious minutes I with her haue ſpent.
Not Hermia, but Helena now I loue;
Who will not change a Rauen for a Doue?
The will of man is by his reaſon ſway'd:
And reaſon ſaies you are the worthier Maide.
Things growing are not ripe vntill their ſeaſon;
So I being yong, till now ripe not to reaſon,
And touching now the point of humane skill,
Reaſon becomes the Marſhall to my will,
And leades me to your eyes, where I o'erlooke
Loues ſtories, written in Loues richeſt booke.
Hel. Wherefore was I to this keene mockery borne?
When at your hands did I deſerue this ſcorne?
Iſt not enough, iſt not enough, yong man,
That I did never, no nor neuer can,
Deſerue a ſweete look'e from Demetrius eye,
But you muſt flout my inſufficiency?
Good troth you do me wrong (good-ſooth you do)
In ſuch diſdainfull manner, me to woo.
But fare you well; perforce I muſt confeſſe,
I thought you Lord of more true gentleneſſe.
Oh, that a Lady of one man refus'd,
Should of another therefore be abus'd Exit.
Lyſ. She ſees not Hermia: Hermia ſleepe thou there,
And never may'ſt thou come Lyſander neere;
For as a ſurfeit of the ſweeteſt things
The deepeſt loathing to the ſtomacke brings.
Or as the herefies that men do leaue,
Are hated moſt of thoſe that did deceiue.
So thou, my ſurfeit, and my herefie,
Of all be hated; but the moſt of me;
And all my powers addreſſe your loue and ruight,
To honour Helen, and to be her Knight. Exit.
Her. Helpe me Lyſander, helpe me; do thy beſt
To pluck this crawling ſerpent from my breſt.
Aye me, for pity; what a dreame was here?
Lyſander looke, how I do quake with feare:
Me-thought a ſerpent eate my heart away,
And yet ſat ſmiling as his cruell prey.
Lyſander, what remoou'd? Lyſander, Lord,
What, out of hearing, gone? No ſound, no word?
Alacke where are you? ſpeake and if you heare;
Speake of all loues; I ſound almoſt with feare.
No, then I well perceiue you are not nye,
Either death or you I'le finde immediately. Exu.

Actus Tertius.

Enter the Clowns.

Bot. Are we all met?
Quin. Pat, pat, and here's a marvailous conuenient place for our rehearſall. This greene plot ſhall be our ſtage, this hawthorne brake our tyring houſe, and we will do it in action, as we will do it before the Duke.
Bot. Peter quince?
Peter. What ſaiſt thou, bully Bottome?
Bot. There are things in this Comedy of Pyramus and Thisby, that will never please. Firſt Pyramus muſt draw a ſword to kill himſelfe; which the Ladies cannot abide. How anſwere you that?
Snout. Berlaken, a parlous feare.
Star. I beleeue we muſt leaue the killing out, when all is done.
Bot. Not a whit, I haue a device to make all well. Write me a Prologue, and let the Prologue ſeeme to ſay, we will do no harme with our ſwords, and that Pyramus is not kill'd indeede: and for the more better aſſurance, tell them, that I Pyramus am not Pyramus, but Bottome the Weaver; this will put them out of feare.
Quin. Well, we will haue ſuch a Prologue, and it ſhall be written in eight and ſixe.
Bot. No, make it two more, let it be written in eight and eight.
Snout. Will not the Ladies be afear'd of the Lyon?
Star. I feare it, I promiſe you.
Bot. Maſters, you ought to conſider with your ſelues, to bring in (God ſhield vs) a Lyon among Ladies, is a moſt dreadfull thing. For there is not a more fearefull wilde foule than your Lyon liuing: and wee ought to looke to it.
Snout. Therefore another Prologue muſt tell he is not a Lyon.
Bot. Nay, you muſt name his name, and halfe his face muſt be ſeene through the Lyons necke, and he himſelfe muſt ſpeake through, ſaying thus, or to the ſame defect; Ladies, or faire Ladies, I would wiſh you, or I would request

request you, or I would entreat you, not to feare, not to tremble: my life for yours. If you think I come hither as a Lion, it were pitty of my life: No, I am no such thing, I am a man as other men are; and there indeed let him name his name, and tell him plainly he is Snug the joyner.

Dyn. Well, it shall be so; but there is two hard things, that is, to bring the Moone-light into a chamber: for you know, Pyramus and Thisby meete by Moone-light.

Sn. Doth the Moone shine that night we play our play?

Bot. A Calender, a Calender, looke in the Almanack, finde out Moone-shine, finde out Moone-shine.

Enter Pyrr.

Quin. Yes, it doth shine that night.

Bot. Why then may you leave a casement of the great chamber window (where we play) open, and the Moone may shine in at the casement.

Quin. Ay, or else one must come in with a bush of thorns and a lanthorne, and say he comes to disfigure, or to present the person of Moone-shine. Then there is another thing, we must have a wall in the great Chamber: for Pyramus and Thisby (saies the story) did talke through the chinke of a wall.

Sn. You can never bring in a wall. What say you Bottome?

Bot. Some man or other must present wall, and let him have some Plaster, or some Lome, or some rough cast about him, to signifie wall; or let him hold his fingers thus; and through that cranny, shall Pyramus and Thisby whisper.

Quin. If that may be, then all is well. Come, sit downe every mother sonne, and rehearse your parts. Pyramus, you begin; when you have spoken your speech, enter into that Brake, and so every one according to his cue.

Enter Robin.

Rob. What hempen home-spuns have we swaggering here,
So neere the Cradle of the Fairie Queene?
What, a Play toward? Ile be an auditor,
An Actor too perhaps, if I see cause.

Quin. Speake Pyramus. Thisby stand forth.

Pyr. Thisby, the flowers of odious savours sweete.

Quin. Odours, odours.

Pyr. Odours savours sweete,
So hath thy breath, my dearest Thisby deare.
But hark, a voyce: stay thou but here a while,
And by and by I will to thee appeare. Exit Pyr.

Puck. A stranger Pyramus, then ere plaid here.

Thys. Must I speake now?

Pet. I marry must you. For you must understand he goes but to see a noyse that he heard, and is to come againe.

Thys. Most radiant Pyramus, most Lilly white of hue,
Of colour like the red rose on triumphant bryer,
Most brisky Iuvenall, and eke most lovely Iew,
As true as trust horse, that yet would never tyre,
Ile meete thee Pyramus, at Ninnus toombe.

Pet. Ninus toombe man: why, you must not speake that yet; that you answere to Pyramus. you speake all your part at once, cues and all. Pyramus enter, your cue is past; it is never tyre.

Thys. O, as true as trust horse, that yet would never tyre:

Pyr. If I were faire, Thisby I were only thine.

Pur. O monstrous. O strange. We are haunted; pray masters, fly masters, helpe.

The Clowns all Exit.

Puck. Ile follow you, Ile leade you about a Round,
Through bogge, through bush, through brake, through bryer,
Sometime a horse Ile be, sometime a hound: (bryer,
A bogge, a headlesse beare, sometime a fire,
And neigh, and barke, and grunt, and roare, and burne,
Like horse, hound, hog, beare, fire, at every turne. Exit.

Enter Pyramus with the Asse head.

Bot. Why do they run away? This is a knavery of them to make me afeard. Enter Sonet.

Sn. O Bottom, thou art chang'd; What do I see on thee?

Bot. What do you see? You see an Asse-head of your owne, do you?

Enter Peter Quince.

Pet. Bless thee Bottome, bless thee; thou art translated. Exit.

Bot. I see their knavery: this is to make an asse of me, to fright me if they could; but I will not stirre from this place, do what they can. I will walke up and downe here, and I will sing that they shall heare I am not afraid.

The Woosell cocke, so blacke of hew,
With Orenge-tawny bill.
The Throstle, with his note so true,
The Wren and little quill.

Tyta. What Angell wakes me from my flowery bed?

Bot. The Finch, the Sparrow, and the Larke,
The plaine song Cuckow gray;
Whose note full many a man doth marke,
And dares not answere, nay.
For indeede, who would set his wit to so foolish a bird?
Who would give a bird the lye, though he cry Cuckow, never so?

Tyta. I pray thee gentle mortall, sing againe.
Mine eare is much enamored of thy note;
On the first view to say, to sweare I love thee.
So is mine eye enthralled to thy shape.
And thy faire vertues force (perforce) doth move me.

Bot. Me-thinks mistresse, you should have little reason for that: and yet to say the truth, reason and love keepe little company together, now-adayes. The more the pitie, that some honest neighbours will not make them friends. Nay, I can gloske upon occasion.

Tyta. Thou art as wise, as thou art beautifull.

Bot. Not so neither: but if I had wit enough to get out of this wood, I have enough to serve mine owne turne.

Tyta. Out of this wood, do not desire to goe,
Thou shalt remaine here, whether thou wilt or no.
I am a spirit of no common rate:
The Summer still doth tend upon my state,
And I doe love thee; therefore goe with me,
Ile give thee Fairies to attend on thee;
And they shall fetch thee Iewels from the deepe,
And sing, while thou on pressed flowers dost sleepe
And I will purge thy mortall grossenesse so,
That thou shalt like an aire spirit go.

Enter Pease-blossome, Cobweb, Moth, Mustardseede, and foure Fairies.

Pea. Ready, and Ready, and I, and I. Where shall we go?

Tyta. Be

Tita. Be kinde and courteous to this Gentleman,
Hop in his walkes, and gambole in his eies,
Feede him with Apricocks, and Dewberries,
With purple Grapes, greene Figs, and Mulberries,
The honie-bags steale from the humble Bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighes,
And light them at the fiery-Glow-wormes eyes,
To have my love to bed, and to arise:
And pluche the wings from painted Butterflies,
To fan the Moone-beames from his sleeping eies
Nod to him Elues, and doe him curtesies.

1. Fai. Haile mortall, haile.

2. Fai. Haile.

3. Fai. Haile.

Bot. I cry your worships mercy hartily; I beseech your worships name.

Cob. Cobweb.

Bot. I shall desire you of more acquaintance, good Master Cobweb. if I cut my finger, I shall make bold with you.
Your name honest Gentleman?

Peas. Pease blossome.

Bot. I pray you commend mee to mistresse Squash, your mother, and to master Peascod your father. Good master Pease-blossome, I shall desire of you more acquaintance too. Your name I beseech you sir?

Mus. Mustard-seede.

Peas. Pease-blossome.

Bot. Good master Mustard seede, I know your patience well: that same cowardly gyant-like Oxe beefe hath deuoured many a gentleman of your house. I promise you, your kindred hath made my eyes water ere now. I desire you more acquaintance, good Master Mustard-seede.

Tita. Come waite vpon him, lead him to my bower.
The Moone me-thinks, lookes with a watrie eie,
And when she weepes, weepe euerie little flower,
Lamenting some enforced chastitie.
Tye vp my loueres tongue, bring him silently. Exeunt.

Enter King of Pharies, solus.

Ob. I wonder if Titania be awak't;
Then what it was that next came in her eye,
Which she must dote on, in extremitie.

Enter Puck.

Here comes my messenger: how now mad spirit,
What night-rule now about this gaunted groue?

Puck. My Mistris with a monster is in loue,
Neere to her close and consecrated bower,
While she was in her dull and sleeping hower,
A crew of patches, rude Mechanicals,
That worke for bread vpon Athenian stale,
Were met together to rehearse a Play,
Intended for great Theseus nuptiall day:
The shallowest thick-skin of that barren sort,
Who Pyramus presented, in their sport,
Forsooke his Scene, and entred in a brake,
When I did him at this advantage take,
An Asses nole I fixed on his head.
Anon his Thisbie must be answered,
And forth my Mimmick comes: when they him spie,
As Wilde-geese, that the creeping Fowler eye,
Or russed-pated choughes, many in sort
(Rising and cawing at the guns report)
Sever themselves, and madly sweepe the sky:
So at his sight, away his fellowes fye,
And at our stampe, here ore and ore one falls;
He murther cries, and helpe from Athens calls.
Their sense thus weake, lost with their feares thus strong,
Made senseless things begin to do them wrong.
For briars and thornes at their apparell snatch,
Some sleeves, some hats, from yeelders all things catch,
I led them on in this distracted feare,
And left sweete Pyramus translated there:
When in that moment (so it came to passe)
Titania waked, and straightaway lou'd an Asse.

Ob. This fals out better then I could deuise:
But hast thou yet latche the Athenians eyes,
With loue iuyce, as I did bid thee doe?

Iob. I tooke him sleeping (that is finisht
And the Athenian woman by his side,
That when he wak't, of force she must be eyde.

Enter Demetrius and Hermia.

Ob. Stand close, this is the same Athenian.

Rob. This is the woman, but not this the man.

Dem. O why rebuke you him that loues you so?
Lay breath so bitter on your bitter foe.

Her. Now I but chide, but I should vse thee worse.
For thou (I feare) hast given me cause to curse,
If thou hast slaine Lysander in his sleepe,
Being one shooes in blood, plunge in the deepe, and kill me too:
The Sunne was not so true vnto the day,
As he to me. Would he have stolen away,
From sleeping Hermia? I'le believe as soone
This whole earth may be bord, and that the Moone
May through the Center creepe, and so displease
Her brothers noontide, with th' Antipodes.
It cannot be but thou hast murdred him,
So should a murtherer looke, so dead, so grim.

Dem. So should the murderer looke, and so should I,
Pierst through the heart with your stearne cruelty.
Yet you the murderer looks as bright as cleare,
As yonder Venus in her glimmering sphearе.

Her. What's this to my Lysander? where is he?
Ah good Demetrius, wilt thou give him me?

Dem. I'de rather give his carkasse to my hounds.

Her. Out dog, out cur thou driu'st me past the bounds
Of maidens patience. Hast thou slaine him then?
Henceforth be never numbred among men.
Oh, once tell true, even for my sake,
Durst thou a looke vpon him, being awake?
And hast thou kill'd him sleeping? O brauе touch:
Could not a worme, an Adder do so much?
An Adder did it: for with doubler tongue
Then thine (thou serpent) never Adder stung.

Dem. You spend your passion on a misprised mood,
I am not guiltie of Lysanders blood:
Nor is he dead for ought that I can tell.

Her. I pray thee tell me then that he is well.

Dem. And if I could, what should I get therefore?

Her. A priuiledge, never to see me more;
And from thy hated presence part I: see me no more
Whether he be dead or no. Exit.

Dem. There is no following her in this fierce vaine,
Here therefore for a while I will remaine.
So sorrowes heauinesse doth heauier grow:
For debt that bankrout slip doth sorrow owe,
Which now in some slight measure it will pay,

If for his tender here I make some stay. Lie down.
Ob. What hast thou done? Thou hast mistaken quite
And laid the loue iuyce on some true loues sight:
Of thy misprision, must perforce ensue
Some true loue turn'd, and not a false turn'd true.
Rob. Then fate ore-rules, that one man holding troth,
A million faile, confounding oath on oath.
Ob. About the wood, goe swifter then the winde,
And Helena of Athens looke thou finde.
All fancy sicke she is, and pale of cheere,
With sighes of loue, that costs the fresh blood deare.
By some illusion see thou bring her heere,
Ile charme his eyes against she doth appeare.
Robin. I go, I go, looke how I goe,
Swifter then arrow from the Tartars bowe. Exit.
Ob. Flower of this purple die,
Hit with Cupids archery,
Sinke in apple of his eye,
When his loue he doth espie,
Let her shine as gloriously
As the Venus of the sky.
When thou wak'st if she be by,
Beg of her for remedy.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Captaine of our Fairy band,
Helena is heere at hand,
And the youth, mistooke by me,
Pleading for a Louers fee.
Shall we their fond Pageant see?
Lord, what fooles these mortals be!
Ob. Stand aside: the noyse they make,
Will cause Demetrius to awake.
Puck. Then will two at once woo one,
That must needs be sport alone:
And those things doe bee please me,
That befall preposterously

Enter Lysander and Helena.

Lys. Why should you think I should woo in scorn?
Scorne and derision never comes in teares:
Looke when I vow I weepe; and vowes so borne,
In their nativity all truth appeares.
How can these things in me, seeme scorne to you?
Bearing the badge of faith to prove them true.
Hel. You doe advance your cunning more & more,
When truth kils truth, O diuelish holy fray!
These vowes are Hermias. Will you giue her ore?
Weigh each with oath, and you will nothing weigh.
Your vowes to her, and me, (put in two scales)
Will even weigh, and both as light as tales.
Lys. I had no iudgement, when to her I swore.
Hel. Nor none in my minde, now you giue her ore.
Lys. Demetrius loues her, and he loues not you. Aside.
Dem. O Helen, goddesse, nimph, perfect, diuine,
To what my loue, shall I compare thine eyne.
Christall is muddy. O how ripe in show,
Thy lips, those killing cherries, tempting grow!
That pure congealed white, high Taurus snow,
Fan'd with the Easterne winde, turnes to a crow,
When thou holdst vp thy hand. O let me kisse
That Princesse of pure white, this seale of blisse.
Hel. O spighe! O hell! I see you are all bent
To set against me, for your merriment:
If you were civill, and knew curtesie,
You would not doe me thus much iniury.
Can you not hate me, as I know you doe,
But you must joyne in soules to mocke me so?
If you are men, as men you are in show,
You would not vse a gentle Lady so;
To vow, and sweare, and superpraise my parts,
When I am sure you hate me with your hearts.
You both are Riuals, and loue Hermia;
And now both Riuals to mocke Helena.
A trim exploit, a manly enterprize,
To conjure teares vp in a poore maids eyes,
With your derision; none of noble sort,
Would so offend a Virgin, and extort
A poore soules patience, all to make you sport.
Lys. You are vnkind Demetrius; be not so,
For you loue Hermia; this you know I know;
And here with all good will, with all my heart,
In Hermias loue I yeeld you vp my part;
And your of Helena, to me bequeath,
Whom I do loue, and will do to my death.
Hel. Never did mockers waste more idle breath.
Dem. Lysander, keep thy Hermia, I will none:
If ever I loue'd her, all that loue is gone.
My heart to her, but as guest-wise sojourn'd,
And now to Helen it is home return'd,
There to remaine.
Lys. It is not so.
De. Disparage not the faith thou dost not know,
Lest to thy peril thou abide it deare.
Looke where thy Loue comes, yonder is thy deare.

Enter Hermia.

Her. Dark night, that from the eye his function takes,
The care more quicke of apprehension makes
Wherein it doth impaire the seeing sense,
It paies the hearing double recompence.
Thou art not by mine eye, Lysander found,
Mine eare (I thanke it) brought me to thee sound.
But why vnkindly didst thou leaue me so? (to go?
Lysan. Why should her stay whom Loue doth presse
Her. What loue could presse Lysander from my side?
Lys. Lysanders loue (that would not let him bide)
Faire Helena; who more engilds the night,
Then all you fiery oes, and eies of light.
Why seest'st thou me? Could not this make thee know,
The hate I bare thee, made me leaue thee so?
Her. You speake not as you thinke; it cannot be.
Hel. Loe, she is one of this confederacy,
Now I perceiue they haue conioyn'd all three,
To fashion this false sport in spight of me.
Iniurious Hermia, most vngratefull maid,
Haue you conspir'd, haue you with these contriu'd
To baite me, with this foule derision?
Is all the counsell that we two haue shar'd,
The sisters vowes, the houres that we haue spent,
When wee haue chid the hasty footed time,
For parting vs; O, is all forgot?
All schooledaies friendship, childhood innocence?
We Hermia, like two Artificiall gods,
Haue with our needles, created both one flower,
Both on one sampler, sitting on one cushion,
Both warbling of one song, both in one key;
As if our hands, our sides, voices, and minds
Had beene incorporate. So we grew together,
Like to a double cherry, seeming parted,
But yet a union in partition,

Two

Two lonely berries moulded on one stem,
So with two seeming bodies, but one heart,
Two of the first life coates in Heraldry,
Due but to one and crowned with one crest.
And will you rent our ancient loue asunder,
To joyne with men in scorning your poore friend?
It is not friendly, 'tis not maidenly.
Our sexe as well as I, may chide you for it,
Though I alone doe feele the iniurie.
Her. I am amazed at your passionate words,
I scorne you not; It seemes that you scorne me.
Hel. Haue you not set Lysander, as in scorne
To follow me, and praise my eies and face?
And made your other loue, Demetrius
(Who euen but now did spurne me with his foote)
To call me goddesse, nimph, diuine, and rare,
Precious, celestiall? Wherefore speakes he this
To her he hates? And wherefore doth Lysander
Deniе your loue (so rich within his soule)
And tender me (forsooth) affection,
But by your setting on, by your consent?
What though I be not so in grace as you,
So hung vpon with loue, so fortunate?
(But miserable most, so loue vnlou'd)
This you should pitie, rather then despise.
Her. I vnderstand not what you meane by this.
Hel. I, doe, persiste, counterfeit sad lookes,
Make mouthes vpon me when I turne my backe,
Winke each at other, hold the sweete iest vp:
This sport well carried, shall be chronicled.
If you haue any pitie, grace, or manners,
You would not make me such an argument:
But fare ye well, 'tis partly mine owne fault,
Which death or absence soone shall remedie.
Lys. Stay gentle Helena, heare my excuse,
My loue, my life, my soule, faire Helena.
Hel. O excellent!
Her. Sweete, do not scorn her so.
Dem. If she cannot entreate, I can compell.
Lys. Thou canst compell, no more then she entreate.
Thy threats haue no more strength then her weak praise.
Helena, I loue thee, by my life I doe;
I sweare by that which I will lose for thee,
To prouе him false, that sayes I loue thee not.
Dem. I say, I loue thee more then he can do.
Lys. If thou say so, withdraw, and prouе it too.
Dem. Quickly, come.
Her. Lysander, whereto tends all this?
Lys. Away, you Ethiope.
Dem. No, no, Sir, seeme to breake loose;
Take on as you would follow,
But yet come not: you are a tame man, go.
Lys. Hang off thou cat, thou burr; vile thing let loose,
Or I will shake thee from me like a serpent.
Her Why are you growne so rude?
What change is this sweete Loue?
Lys. Thy loue? out tawny Tartar, out;
Out loathed medicine; O hated poison hence.
Her. Do you not iest?
Hel. Yes sooth, and so do you.
Lys. Demetrius: I will keepe my word with thee.
Dem. I would I had your bond, for I perceiue
A weake bond holds you; I'le not trust your word.
Lys. What, should I hurt her, strike her, kill her dead?
Although I hate her, I'le not harme her so.
Her. What, can you do me greater harme then hate?
Hate me, wherefore? O me, what newes my Loue?
Am not I Hermia? Are not you Lysander?
I am as faire now, as I was ere while.
Since night you loued me; yet since night you left me.
Why then you left me (O the gods forbid
In earnest, shall I say?
Lys. I, by my life;
And never did desire to see thee more.
Therefore be out of hope, of question, of doubt;
Be certaine, nothing truer: 'tis no iest,
That I do hate thee, and loue Helena.
Her. O me, you iugler, you canker blossome,
You theefe of loue; What, haue you come by night,
And stolne my loues heart from him?
Hel. Fine yfaith:
Haue you no modesty, no maiden shame,
No touch of bashfulnesse? What, will you tearе
Impatient answers from my gentle tongue?
Fie, fie, you counterfeit, you puppet, you.
Her Puppet? why so? I, that way goes the game.
Now I perceiue that she hath made compare
Betweene our statures, she hath vrg'd her height,
And with her personage, her tall personage,
Her height (forsooth) she hath preuail'd with him.
And are you growne so high in his esteeme,
Because I am so dwarfish, and so low?
How low am I, thou painted May-pole? Speake,
How low am I? I am not yet so low,
But that my nailes can reach vnto thine eyes.
Hel. I pray you though you mocke me, gentlemen,
Let her not hurt me; I was never curst:
I haue no gift at all in shrewishnesse;
I am a right maide for my cowardise;
Let her not strike me: you perhaps may think,
Because she is something lower then my selfe,
That I can match her.
Her. Lower? harke again.
Hel. Good Hermia, do not be so bitter with me.
I euermore did loue you Hermia,
Did ever keepe your counsels, never wronged you,
Save that in loue vnto Demetrius,
I told him of your stealth vnto this wood.
He followed you, for loue I followed him,
But he hath chid me hence, and threatned me
To strike me, spurne me, nay to kill me too;
And now, so you will let me quiet go,
To Athens will I beare my folly backe,
And follow you no further. Let me go,
You see how simple, and how fond I am.
Her. Why get you gone: who is that hinders you?
Hel. A foolish heart, that I leaue here behinde.
Her. What, with Lysander?
Her. With Demetrius.
Lys. Be not afraid, she shall not harme thee Helena.
Dem. No fear, she shall not, though you take her part.
Hel. O when she's angry, she is keene and shrewd,
She was a vixen when she went to schoole,
And though she be but little, she is fierce.
Her. Little again? Nothing but low and little?
Why will you suffer her to flouts me thus?
Let me come to her.
Lys. Get you gone you dwarfe,
You minimus, of hindring knot-grass made,
You bead, you acorne.
Dem. You are too officious,
In her behalfe that scornes your seruices.

Let

Let her alone, speake not of Helena,
Take not her part. For if thou dost intend
Never so little shew of loue to her,
Thou shalt abide it.

Lys. Now she holds me not,
Now follow if thou dar'st, to try whose right,
Of thine or mine is most in Helena.

Dem. Follow? Nay, I'le goe with thee cheeke by iowle. Exit Lysander and Demetrius.

Her. You Mistris, all this coyle is long of you.
Nay, goe not backe.

Hel. I will not trust you I,
Nor longer stay in your curst companie.
Your hands than mine, are quicker for a frey,
My legs are longer though to runne away.

Enter Oberon and Puck.

Ob. This is thy negligence, still thou mistak'st,
Or else committ'st thy knaueries wilfully.

Puck. Believe me, King of shadowes, I mistooke,
Did not you tell me, I should know the man,
By the Athenian garments he hath on?
And so farre blameless proues my enterprize,
That I haue nointed an Athenians eies,
And so farre am I glad, it so did sort,
As this their iangling I esteeme a sport.

Ob. Thou seest these Louers seeke a place to fight,
Hie therefore Robin, ouercast the night,
The starrie Welkin couer thou anon,
With drooping fogge as blacke as Acheron,
And lead these testie Rivals so astray,
As one come not within anothers way.
Like to Lysander, sometime frame thy tongue,
Then stirre Demetrius vp with bitter wrong;
And sometime raile thou like Demetrius;
And from each other looke thou lead them thus,
Till ore their browes, death-counterfeiting, sleepe
With leaden legs, and Battle-wings doth creepe;
Then crush this herbe into Lysander's eie,
Whose liquor hath this vertuous propertie,
To take from thence all error, with his might,
And make his eie-balls role with wonted sight.
When they next wake, all this derision
Shall seeme a dreame, and fruitlesse vision,
And backe to Athens shall the Louers wend
With league, whose date till death shall neuer end.
Whiles I in this affaire do thee imply,
I'le to my Queene, and beg her Indian Boy;
And then I will her charmed eie release
From monsters view, and all things shall be peace.

Puck. My Fairie Lord, this must be done with haste,
For night-swift Dragons cut the Clouds full fast,
And yonder shines Aurora harbinger
At whose approach Ghosts wandring here and there,
Troope home to Church-yards; damned spirits all,
That in crosse-waies and floods haue burial,
Already to their wormie beds are gone;
For feare lest day should looke their shames vpon,
They wilfully themselues exile from light,
And must for aye consort with blacke browd night.

Ob. But we are spirits of another sort:
I, with the mornings loue haue oft made sport,
And like a Forrester, the groues may tread,
Even till the Eastern gate all fiery red,
Opening on Neptune, with faire blessed beames,
Turnes into yellow gold, his salt greene streames.
But notwithstanding haste, make no delay
We may effect this business, yet ere day.

Puck. Vp and downe, vp and downe, I will leade them vp and downe: I am fear'd in field and towne.
Goblin, lead them vp and downe: here comes one.

Enter Lysander.

Lys. Where art thou, proud Demetrius?
Speake thou now.

Rob. Here villaine, drawne & readie. Where art thou?

Lys. I will be with thee straight.

Rob. Follow me then to plainer ground.

Enter Demetrius.

Dem. Lysander, speake againe;
Thou runaway, thou coward, art thou fled?
Speake in some bush: Where dost thou hide thy head?

Rob. Thou coward, art thou bragging to the stars,
Telling the bushes that thou look'st for wars,
And wilt not come? Come recreant, come thou childe,
I'le whip thee with a rod. He is defil'd
That draws a sword on thee.

Dem. Yea, art thou there?

Rob. Follow my voice, we'l try no manhood here. Exit.

Lys. He goes before me, and still dares me on,
When I come where he cals, then he's gone.
The villaine is much lighter heel'd than I:
I followed fast, but faster he did flye; Stifling places.
That fallen am I in darke uneuen way,
And here wil rest me. Come thou gentle day: lye down.
For if but once thou shew me thy grey light,
I'le finde Demetrius, and reuenge this spight.

Enter Robin and Demetrius.

Rob. Ho, ho, ho; coward, why com'st thou not?

Dem. Abide me, if thou dar'st. For well I wot,
Thou runst before me, shifting every place,
And dar'st not stand, nor looke me in the face.
Where art thou?

Rob. Come hither, I am here.

Dem. Nay then thou mock'st me; thou shalt buy this deere,
If euer I thy face by day-light see.
Now goe thy way: faintnesse constraineth me,
To measure out my length on this cold bed,
By dawes approach looke to be visited.

Enter Helena.

Hel. O weary night, O long and tedious night,
Abate thy houres, shine comforts from the East,
That I may backe to Athens by day-light,
From these that my poore companie detest;
And sleepe that sometime shuts vp sorrowes eie,
Steale me a while from mine owne companie. Sleeps.

Rob. Yet but three? Come one more,
Two of both kinds makes vp foure.
Here she comes, curst and sad,
Cupid is a knauish lad,

Enter Hermia.

Thus to make poore females mad.

Her. Never so weariе never so in woe,
Bedabbled with the dew, and torne with briers,
I can no further crawle, no further goe;
My legs can keepe no pace with my desires.
Here will I rest me till the breake of day.
Heauens shield Lysander, if they meane a fray.

Rob. On the ground sleepe sound,
I'le apply your eie gentle louer, remedy.
When thou wak'st, thou tak'st
True delight in the sight of thy former Ladies eye,

And

And the Country Proverb knowne,
That every man should take his owne,
In your waking shall be showne.
Iacke shall have Iill, nought shall goe ill,
The man shall have his Mare againe, and all shall bee well.

They sleepe all the Act.

Actus Quartus.

Enter Queene of Fairies, and Clowne, and Fairies, and the King behinde them.

Tita. Come, sit thee downe vpon this flowry bed,
While I thy amiable cheekes doe coy,
And stickle musk roses in thy sleeke smoothe head,
And kisse thy faire large eares, my gentle ioy.
Clow. Where's Pease blossome?
Peas. Ready
Clow. Scratch my head, Pease-blossome. Where's Mounsieur Cobweb.
Cob. Ready.
Clowne. Mounsieur Cobweb, good Mounsier get your weapons in your hand, & kill me a red hipt humble-Bee, on the top of a thistle; and good Mounsieur bring mee the hony bag. Doe not fret your selfe too much in the action, Mounsieur; and good Mounsieur have a care the hony bag breake not, I would be loth to have you overflowne with a hony-bag signiour. Where's Mounsieur Mustardseed?
Must. Ready.
Clo. Give me your neafe, Mounsieur Mustardseed. Pray you leave your courtesie good Mounsieur.
Must. What's your will?
Clo. Nothing good Mounsieur, but to help Cavalery Cobweb to scratch. I must to the Barbers Mounsieur, for me-thinkes I am marvellous hairy about the face. And I am such a tender asse, if my haire do but tickle me, I must scratch.
Tita. What, wilt thou heare some musicke, my sweet loue.
Clow. I have a reasonable good eare in musicke. Let vs heare the tongs and the bones.

Musicke Tongs, Rurall Musicke.

Tita. Or say sweete Loue, what thou desirest to eat.
Clowne. Truly a peeck of Provender; I could munch your good dry Oates. Me-thinkes I have a great desire to a bottle of hay: good hay, sweete hay hath no fellow.
Tita. I have a venturous Fairy,
That shall seeke the Squirrels hoard,
And fetch thee new Nuts.
Clowne. I had rather have a handfull or two of dried peese. But I prey you let none of your people stirre me, I have an exposition of sleepe come vpon me.
Tita. Sleepe thou, and I will winde thee in my arms,
Fairies be gone, and be alwaies away.
So doth the woodbine, the sweet Honisuckle,
Gently entwist; the female Ivy so
Enrings the barky fingers of the Elme.
O how I loue thee! how I doote on thee!

Enter Robin goodfellow and Oberon.

Ob. Welcome good Robin:
Seest thou this sweet sight?
Her dotage now I doe begin to pitty.
For meeting her of late behinde the wood,
Seeking sweet savors for this hatefull foole,
I did vpbraid her, and fall out with her.
For she his hairy temples then had rounded,
With coronet of fresh and fragrant flowers.
And that same dew which somtime on the buds,
Was wont to swell like round and orient pearles;
Stood now within the pretty flouriets eyes,
Like teares that did their owne disgrace bewaile.
When I had at my pleasure taunted her,
And she in milde termes beg'd my patience,
I then did aske of her, her changeling childe,
Which straight she gave me, and her Fairy sent
To beare him to my Bower in Fairy Land.
And now I have the Boy, I will vndoe
This hatefull imperfection of her eyes.
And gentle Puck, take this transformed scalpe,
From off the head of this Athenian swaine;
That he awaking when the other doe,
May all to Athens backe againe repaire,
And thinke no more of this nights accidents.
But as the fierce vexation of a dreame.
But first I will release the Fairy Queene.

Be thou as thou wast wont to be;
See as thou wast wont to see.
Dians bud, or Cupids flower,
Hath such force and blessed power

Now my Titania wake you my sweet Queene.
Tita. My Oberon, what visions have I seene!
Me-thought I was enamoured of an Asse.
Ob. There lies your loue.
Tita. How came these things to passe?
Oh, how mine eyes doth loath this visage now!
Ob. Silence a while. Robin take off his head:
Titania, musick call, and strike more dead
Then common sleepe; of all these, fine the sense
Tita. Musicke, ho musicke, such as charmeth sleepe.

Musick still.

Rob. When thou wak'st, with thine owne fooles eyes peepe. (me
Ob Sound musick; come my Queen, take hands with
And rocke the ground whereon these sleepers be
Now thou and I are new in amity,
And will to morrow midnight, solemnly
Dance in Duke Theseus house triumphantly,
And blesse it to all faire posterity.
There shall the paires of faithfull Lovers be
Wedded, with Theseus, all in iollity.
Rob. Faire King attend, and marke,
I doe heare the morning Larke.
Ob. Then my Queene in silence sad,
Trip we after the nights shade;
We the Globe can compasse soone,
Swifter then the wandering Moone
Tita. Come my Lord, and in our flight,
Tell me how it came this night,
That I sleeping heere was found,

Sleepers Lye still.

With theie mortals on the ground. Exeunt.

Winde Horns.

Enter Thesius, Egeus, Hippolita and all his traine.

Thes. Goe one of you, finde out the Forrester,
For now our observation is perform'd;
And since we have the vaward of the day,
My Loue shall heare the musicke of my hounds.
Vncouple in the Western valley, let them goe;
Dispatch I say, and finde the Forrester.
We will faire Queene, vp to the Mountaines top.
And marke the musicall confusion
Of hounds and eccho in conuunction.

Hip. I was with Hercules and Cadmus once,
When in a wood of Crete they bayed the Beare
With hounds of Sparta; never did I heare
Such gallant chiding. For besides the groues,
The skies, the fountaines, every region neere,
Seeme all one mutuall cry. I never heard
So musicall a discord, such sweet thunder.

Thes. My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kinde,
So flew'd, so sanded, and their heads are hung
With eares that sweepe away the morning dew,
Crooke kneed, and dew-lapt, like Thessalian Bulls,
Slow in pursuit, but match'd in mouth like bells,
Each vnder each. A cry more tuneable
Was neuer hallowed to, nor cheer'd with horne,
In Crete, in Sparta, nor in Thessaly;
Judge when you heare. But soft, what nimphs are these?

Egeus. My Lord, this is my daughter here asleepe,
And this Lysander, this Demetrius is,
This Helena, olde Nedars Helena,
I wonder of this being heere together.

Thes. No doubt they rose vp early, to observe
The right of May; and hearing our intent,
Came heere in grace of our solemnity.
But speake Egeus, is not this the day
That Hermia should give answer of her choice?

Egeus. It is, my Lord.

Thes. Goe bid the huntsmen wake them with their horne.

Horns and shey wake.

Shout within, they all start vp.

Thes. Good morrow friends: Saint Valentine is past,
Begin these wood birds, but to couple now?

Lys. Pardon my Lord.

Thes. I pray you all stand vp.
I know you two are Rivall enemies.
How comes this gentle concord in the world,
That hatred is so far from jealousie,
To sleepe by hate, and feare no enmity.

Lys. My Lord, I shall reply amazedly,
Half sleepe, half waking. But as yet, I swearre,
I cannot truly say how I came heere.
But as I thinke (for truly would I speake)
And now I doe bethinke me, so it is;
I came with Hermia hither. Our intent
Was to be gone from Athens, where we might be Without the peril of the Athenian Law.

Ege. Enough, enough, my Lord; you have enough;
I beg the Law, the Law, vpon his head:
They would have stolne away, they would Demetrius,
Thereby to have defeated you and me:
You of your wife, and me of my consent;
Of my consent, that she should be your wife.

Dem. My Lord, faire Helen told me of their stealth,
Of this their purpose hither, to this wood,
And I in furie hither followed them;
Faire Helena, in fancy followed me.
But my good Lord, I wot not by what power,
(But by some power it is) my loue
To Hermia (melted as the snow)
Seems to me now as the remembrance of an idle gauds,
Which in my childehood I did dote vpon:
And all the faith, the vertue of my heart,
The obiect and the pleasure of mine eye,
Is onely Helena. To her, my Lord,
Was I betroth'd, ere I saw Hermia,
But like a sicknesse did I loath this food,
But as in health, come to my naturall taste,
Now doe I wish it, loue it, long for it,
And will for euermore be true to it.

Thes. Faire Louers, you are fortunately met;
Of this discourse we shall heare more anon.
Egeus, I will ouer-beare your will;
For in the Temple, by and by with vs,
These couples shall eternally be knit.
And for the morning now is something worne,
Our purpos'd hunting shall be set aside.
Away, with vs to Athens; three and three,
We'll hold a feast in great solemnitie.
Come Hippolita. Exit Duke and Lords.

Dem. These things seeme small & vndistinguishable,
Like farre off mountaines turned into Clouds.

Her. Me-thinks I see these things with parted eye,
When every things seemes double.

Hel. So me-thinkes:
And I haue found Demetrius, like a jewell,
Mine owne, and not mine owne.

Dem. It seemes to mee,
That yet we sleepe, we dreame. Do not you thinke,
The Duke was heere, and bid vs follow him?

Her. Yes, and my Father.

Hel. And Hippolita.

Lys. And he bid vs follow to the Temple.

Dem. Why then we are awake; lets follow him, and by the way let vs recount our dreames.

Bottome wakes. Exit Louers.

Cho. When my cue comes, call me, and I will answer.
My next is, most faire Pirramus. Hey ho Peter Quince?
Flute the bellowes-mender? Snout the tinker? Starueling?
Gods my life! Stolne hence, and left me asleepe: I haue had a most rare vision. I had a dreame, past the wit of man, to say, what dreame it was. Man is but an Asse, if he goe about to expound this dreame. Me-thought I was, there is no man can tell what. Me-thought I was,
and me-thought I had. But man is but a patch'd foole, if he will offer to say, what me-thought I had. The eye of man hath not heard, the eare of man hath not seen, mans hand is not able to taste, his tongue to conceiue, nor his heart to report, what my dreame was. I will get *Peter
Quince* to write a ballet of this dreame, it shall be called Bottomes Dream, because it hath no bottome; and I will sing it in the latter end of a play, before the Duke. Peradventure, to make it the more gracious, I shall sing it at her death. Exit.

Enter Quince, Flute, Thisbie, Snout, and Starueling

Quin. Have you sent to Bottomes house? Is he come home yet?

Starv. He cannot be heard of. Out of doubt he is transported.

Thes. If

Thef. If he come not, then the play is mar'd. It goes not forward, doth it?

Quin. It is not possible: you have not a man in all Athens, able to discharge Piramus but he.

Thef. No he hath simply the best wit of any handycraft man in Athens.

Quin. Yea, and the best person too, and he is a very Paramour, for a sweet voyce.

Thef. You must say, Paragon. A Paramour is (God bless vs) a thing of nought.

Enter Sang the Iower.

Sang. Masters, the Duke is comming from the Temple, and there is two or three Lords & Ladies more married: If our sport had gone forward, we had all bin made men.

Thef. O sweet bully Bottom: thus hath he lost sixpence a day, during his life; he could not have scaped sixpence a day. And the Duke had not given him sixpence a day for playing Piramus, I'le be hang'd. He would have deserued it. Sixpence a day in Piramus, or nothing.

Enter Bottome.

Bot. Where are these Lads? Where are these hearts?

Quin. Bottome, ô most courageous day! O most happie houre!

Bot. Masters, I am to discourse wonders; but ask me not what. For if I tell you, I am no true Athenian. I will tell you every thing as it fell out.

Qu. Let vs heare, sweet Bottome.

Bot. Not a word of me: all that I will tell you, is, that the Duke hath dined. Get your apparell together, good strings to your beards, new ribbands to your pumps, meete presently at the Palace, every man looke o're his part: for the short and the long is, our play is preferred: In any case let Thisby haue cleane linnen; and let not him that playes the Lion, paire his nailes, for they shall hang out for the Lions clawes. And most dearе Actors, eate no Onions, nor Garlicke; for wee are to vtter sweete breath, and I doe not doubt but to heare them say, it is a sweet Comedy. No more words: away, go away.

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Theseus, Hippolita, Egeus and his Lords.

Hip. Tis strange my Theseus, y these louers speake of.

The. More strange then true. I never may beleeue
These antiqueke fables, nor these Fairy toyes,
Lovers and mad men haue such seething braines,
Such shaping phantasies, that apprehend more
Then coole reason ever comprehends.
The Lunaticke, the Louer, and the Poet,
Are of imagination all compact.
One sees more diuels then vaste hell can hold;
That is the mad man. The Louer, all as frauticke,
Sees Helens beauty in a brow of Egipt.
The Poets eye in a fine frenzy rolling, doth glance
From heaven to earth, from earth to heaven.
And as imagination bodies forth the forms of things
Vnknowne; the Poets pen turnes them to shapes,
And gives to aire nothing, a locall habitation,
And a name. Such tricks hath strong imagination,
That if it would but apprehend some ioy,
It comprehends some bringer of that ioy.
Or in the night, imagining some feare,
How easie is a bush supposed a Beare?

Hip. But all the storie of the night told ouer,
And all their minds transfigur'd so together,
More witnesseth than fancies images,
And growes to something of great constancie;
But howsoever, strange, and admirable.

Enter louers, Lysander, Demetrius, Hermia, and Helena.

The. Heere come the louers, full of ioy and mirth:
Ioy, gentle friends, ioy and fresh dayes
Of loue accompany your hearts.

Lys. More then to vs, waite in your royall walkes, your board, your bed.

The. Come now, what masques, what dances shall we haue,
To weare away this long age of three houres,
Between our after supper, and bed-time?
Where is our vsuall manager of mirth?
What Reuels are in hand? Is there no play,
To ease the anguish of a torturing houre?
Call Egeus.

Ege. Heere mighty Theseus.

The. Say, what abridgement haue you for this euening?
What masque? What musicke? How shall we beguile
The lazie time, if not with some delight?

Ege. There is a breefe how many sports are riſet
Make choise of which your Highnesse will see first.

Lys. The battell with the Centaures to be sung
By an Athenian Eunuch, to the Harpe.

The. We'l none of that. That haue I told my Loue
In glory of my kinsman Hercules.

Lys. The riot of the tipsie Bachanals,
Tearing the Thracian singer, in their rage?

The. That is an old device, and it was plaid
When I from Thebes came last a Conqueror.

Lys. The thrice three Muses, mourning for the death of learning, late deceast in beggerie.

The. That is some Satire keene and critically,
Not sorting with a nuptiall ceremonie.

Lys. A tedious breefe Scene of yong Piramus,
And his loue Thisby; very tragicall mirth.

The. Merry and tragicall? Tedious, and briefe? That is, hot Ice, and wondrous strange snow. How shall wee finde the concord of this discord?

Ege. A play there is, my Lord, some ten words long,
Which is as breefe, as I haue knowne a play;
But by ten words, my Lord, it is too long;
Which makes it tedious. For in all the play,
There is not one word apt, one Player fitted.
And tragicall my noble Lord it is: for Piramus
Therein doth kill himselfe. Which when I saw
Rehearst, I must confesse, made mine eyes water:
But more merrie teares, the passion of loud laughter
Never shed.

Thef. What are they that do play it?

Ege. Hard handed men, that worke in Athens heere,
Which never labour'd in their minds till now;
And now haue toyled their vnbreathed memories
With this same play, against your nuptiall.

The. And we will heare it.

Phi. No, my noble Lord, it is not for you. I haue heard
It ouer, and it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Vnlesse you can finde sport in their intents,
Extremely stretcht, and cond with cruell paine,
To doe you seruice.

Thes. I will heare that play. For neuer any thing
Can be amisse, when simplenesse and duty tender it.
Goe bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.

Hip. I loue not to see wretchednesse orcharged;
And duty in his service perishing.

Thes. Why gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He saies, they can doe nothing in this kinde.

Thes. The kinder we, to giue them thanks for nothing
Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake;
And what poorednesse cannot doe, noble respect
Takes it in might, not merit.
Where I haue come, great Clearkes haue purposed
To greete me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I haue seene them shiuer and looke pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practis'd accents in their feares,
And in conclusion, dumbly haue broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me sweete,
Out of this silence yet, I pick'd a welcome:
And in the modesty of fearefull duty,
I read as much, as from the rattling tongue
Of saucy and audacious eloquence.
Loue therefore, and tongue-tide simplicity,
In least, speake most, to my capacity.

Egeus. So please your Grace, the Prologue is addrest.

Duke. Let him approach. Flor. Trump.

Enter the Prologue. Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should thinke, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To shew our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in despight.
We do not come, as minding to content you.
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not here. That you should here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their show,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Thes. This fellow doth not stand vpon points.

Lys. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knowes not the stop. A good moral my Lord. It is not enough to speake, but to speake true.

Hip. Indeed he hath plaid on his Prologue, like a childe on a Recorder, a sound, but not in gouernment.

Thes. His speech was like a tangled chaine: nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Tawyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus and Thisby, Wall, Moone-shine, and Lyon.

Prol. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plaine.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certaine.
This man, with lyme and rough-cast, doth present
Wall, that vile wall, which did these louers sunder:
And through walls chink (poor soules) they are content
To whisper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man, with Lanthorne, dog, and bush of thorne,
Presenteth moone-shine. For if you will know,
By moone-shine did these Louers thinke no scorne
To meet at Ninus toombe, there, there to woo:
This grizy beast (which Lyon hight by name)
The trusty Thisby, comming first by night,
Did scare away, or rather did affright:
And as she fled, her mantle she did fall;
Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did staine.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And finds his Thisbies Mantle slaine;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade,
He brauely breacht his boiling bloudy breast.
And Thisby, tarrying in Mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lyon, Moone-shine, Wall, and Louers twaine,
At large discourse, while here they doe remaine.

Exit all but Wall.

Thes. I wonder if the Lion be to speake.

Dem. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Asses doe.

Exit Lyon, Thisbie, and Moonshine.

Wall. In this same Interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Snout (by name) present a wall:
And such a wall, as I would haue you think,
That had in it a crannied hole or chinke:
Through which the Louers, Pyramus and Thisbie
Did whisper often, very secretly.
This loome, this rough-cast, and this stone doth shew,
That I am that same Wall, the truth is so.
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearefull Louers are to whisper.

Thes. Would you desire Lime and Haire to speake better?

Dem. It is the wittiest partition, that euer I heard discourse, my Lord.

Thes. Pyramus drawes neere the Wall. Silence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pyr. O grim look't night, O night with hue so blacke,
O night, which euer art, when day is not:
O night, O night, alacke, alacke, alacke,
I feare my Thisbies promise is forgot.
And thou O wall, thou sweet and louely wall,
That stands betweene her fathers ground and mine,
Thou wall, O wall, O sweet and louely wall,
Shew me thy chinke, to blinke through with mine eine.
Thankes courteous wall. Ioue shield thee well for this.
But what see I? No Thisbie doe I see.
O vnkind wall, through whom I see no blisse,
Curst be thy stones for thus deceiuing me.

Thes. The wall methinkes being sensible, should curse again.

Pyr. No in truth sir, he should not. Deceiuing me,
Is Thisbies cue: she is to enter, and I am to spy
Her through the wall. You shall see it will fall.

Enter Thisbie.

Pat as I told you; yonder she comes.

This. O wall, full often hast thou heard my moanes,
For parting my faire Pyramus, and me.
My cherry lips haue often kist thy stones;
Thy stones with Lime and Haire knit vp in thee.

Pyra. I see a voyce; now will I to the chinke,
To spy and I can heare my Thisbies face. Thisbie?

This. My Loue thou art, my Loue I thinke.

Pyr. Thinke what thou wilt, I am thy Louers grace,
And like Limander am I trusty still.

This. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.

Pyr. Not Shafalus to Procrus, was so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pir. O kiſſe me through the hole of this vile wall.
Thiſ. I kiſſe the wals hole, not your lips at all.
Pir. Wilt thou at Ninnies tombe meete me ſtraight way?
Thiſ. Tide life, tide death, I come without delay.
Wall. Thus have I Wall, my part diſcharged ſo;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.
Du. Now is the murall downe betweene the two Neighbors.
Dem. No remedie my Lord, when Walls are ſo willfull, to heare without warning.
Dut. This is the fillieſt ſtuffe that ere I heard.
Du. The beſt in this kind are but ſhadowes, and the worſt are no worſe, if imagination amend them.
Dut. It muſt be your imagination then, & not theirs.
Duke. If we imagine no worſe of them then they of themſelves, they may paſſe for excellent men. Here com two noble beaſts, in a man and a Lion.

Enter Lyon and Moone-ſhine.

Lyon. You Ladies, you (whoſe gentle hearts do feare
The ſmalleſt monſtrous mouſe that creeps on floore)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble heere,
When Lion rough in wildeſt rage doth roare.
Then know that I, one Snug the joyner am
A Lion fell, nor elſe no Lions dam:
For if I ſhould as Lion come in ſtrife
Into this place, 'twere pitie of my life.
Du. A verie gentle beaſt, and of a good conſcience.
Dem. The verie beſt at a beaſt, my Lord, I ever I ſaw.
Lſ. This Lion is a verie Fox for his valor.
Du. True, and a Gooſe for his diſcretion.
Dem. Not ſo my Lord: for his valor cannot carrie his diſcretion, and the Fox carries the Gooſe.
Du. His diſcretion I am ſure cannot carrie his valor: for the Gooſe carries not the Fox. It is well; leave it to his diſcretion, and let vs hearken to the Moone.
Moon. This Lanthorne doth the horned Moone preſent.
Dr. He ſhould haue worne the hornes on his head.
Du. Hee is no crecent, and his hornes are inuiſible, within the circumference.
Moon. This lanthorne doth the horned Moone preſent: My ſelfe, the man i'th Moone doth ſeeme to be.
Du. This is the groſſeſt error of all the reſt; the man ſhould be put into the Lanthorne. How is it els the man i'th Moone?
Dem. He dares not come there for the candle.
For you ſee, it is already in ſnuffe.
Dut. I am weeryie of this Moone; would he would change.
Du. It appeares by his ſmall light of diſcretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courteſie, in all reaſon, we muſt ſtay the time.
Lſ. Proceed Moone.
Moon. All that I haue to ſay, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moone; I, the man in the Moone; this thorne bush, my thorne bush; and this dog, my dog.
Dem. Why all theſe ſhould be in the Lanthorne for they are in the Moone. But ſilence, heere comes Thiſby.

Enter Thiſby.

Thiſ. This is old Ninnies tombe: where is my loue?
Lyon. Oh.
The Lion roares, Thiſby runs off.
Dem. Well roar'd Lion.
Du. Well run Thiſby.
Dut. Well ſhone Moone
Truly the Moone ſhines with a good grace
Du. Wel moouz'd Lion.
Dem. And then came Piramus.
Lſ. And ſo the Lion vaniſhe.

Enter Piramus.

Pyr. Sweet Moone, I thank thee for thy ſunny beames,
I thanke thee Moone, for ſhining now ſo bright:
For by thy gracious, golden, glittering beames,
I truſt to taſte of true'l Thiſbies ſight.
But ſtay: O ſpight! but marke, poore Knight,
What dreadful dole is heere?
Eyes do you ſee! How can it be.
O dainty Ducke: O Deere:
Thy mantle good; what ſtained with blood!
Approch you Furies fell:
O Fates! come, come: Cut thred and thrum,
Quaile, crush, conclude, and quell.
Du. This paſſion, and the death of a deare friend,
Would go neere to make a man looke ſad.
Dut. Beſhrew my heart, but I pitie the man.
Pir. O wherefore Nature, did'ſt thou Lions frame?
Since Lion vilde hath heere deflour'd my deere:
Which is: no, no, which was the faireſt Dame
That liu'd, that lou'd, that lik'd, that look'd with cheere.
Come teares, confound: Out ſword, and wound
The pap of Piramus:
I, that left pap, where heart doth hop;
Thus dye I, thus, thus, thus.
Now am I dead, now am I fled, my ſoule is in the ſky,
Tongue loſe thy light, Moone take thy flight,
Now dye, dye, dye, dye, dye.
Dem. No Die, but an ace for him; for he is but one.
Lſ. Leſſe than an ace man. For he is dead, he is nothing.
Du. With the helpe of a Surgeon, he might yet recouer, and proue an Aſſe.
Dut. How chance Moone-ſhine is gone before?
Thiſby comes backe, and findes her Louer.

Enter Thiſby.

Duke. She will finde him by ſtarre-light.
Heere ſhe comes, and her paſſion ends the play.
Dut. Me thinkes ſhee ſhould not vſe a long one for ſuch a Piramus: I hope ſhe will be breefe.
Dem. A Moth will turne the ballance, which Piramus which Thiſby is the better. (eyes.
Lſ. She hath eyed him already, with thoſe ſweete
Dem. And thus ſhe means, videlicet.
This. Aſleepe my Loue? What, dead my Doue?
O Piramus arise:
Speake, Speake. Quite dumbe? Dead, dead? A tombe
Muſt couer thy ſweet eyes.
Theſe Lilly Lips, this cherry noſe,
Theſe yellow Cowſlip cheekes
Are gone, are gone: Louers make mone:
His eyes were greene as Leekes.
O ſiſters three, come, come to mee,
With hands as pale as Milke,
Lay them in gore, ſince you haue ſhore
With ſhears, his thred of ſilke.
Tongue not a word: Come trudy ſwood:
Come blade, my breaſt imbrue:

And farwell friends, thus Thisbie ends;
Adieu, adieu, adieu.

Duke. Moon-shine & Lion are left to burie the dead.

Dem. I, and Wall too.

Bot. No, I assure you, the wall is downe, that parted their Fathers. Will it please you to see the Epilogue, or to heare a Bergomask dance, between two of our company?

Duke. No Epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse. Never excuse; for when the players are all dead, there need none to be blamed. Marry, if he that writ it had plaid Pyramus, and hung himselfe in Thisbies garter, it would have beene a fine Tragedy: and so it is truely, and very notably discharg'd. But come, your Bergomaske; let your Epilogue alone.
The iron tongue of midnight hath old twelue.
Louers to bed, 'tis almost Fairy time,
I feare we shall out-sleepe the coming morne,
As much as we this night haue ouer-watcht.
This palpable grosse play hath well beguil'd
The heavy gate of night. Sweet friends to bed.
A fortnight hold we this solemnity.
In nightly Reuels; and new iollitie. Exeunt.

Enter Puck.

Puck. Now the hungry Lyons roare,
And the Wolfe beholds the Moone:
Whilest the heavy ploughman snoore,
All with weary task fore-done.
Now the wasted brands do glow,
Whil'st the scritch-owle, scritching loud,
Put the wretch that lies in woe,
In remembrance of a shroud.
Now it is the time of night,
That the graues, all gaping wide,
Every one lets forth his sprigh,
In the Church-way paths to glide.
And we Fairies, that do runne,
By the triple Hecates teame,
From the presence of the Sunne,
Following darke-nesse like a dreame,
Now are frolicke; not a Mouse
Shall disturbe this hallowed house.
I am sent with broome before,
To sweep the dust behinde the doore.

Enter King and Queene of Fairies, with their traine.

Ob. Through the house give glimmering light,
By the dead and drowsie fire,
Euerie Elfe and Fairie sprighr,
Hop as light as bird from briar,
And this Dirty after me, sing and dance it trippingly.

Tita. First rehearse this song by rote,
To each word a warbling note.
Hand in hand, with Fairie grace,
Will we sing and blesse this place.

The Song.

Now until the breake of day,
Through this house each Fairy stray.
To the best Bride-bed will we,
which by us shall blessed be:
And the issue there create,
Ever shall be fortunate:
So shall all the couples three,
Ever true in loving be:
And the blotted Natures hand,
Shall not in their issue stand.
Never mole, hare lip, nor scare,
Nor mark prodigious, such as are Desired in Nature,
Shall come to their children be.
With this field dew consecrate,
Every Fairy take his gate,
And each seuer all chamber blesse,
Through this Palace with sweet peace,
Ever shall in safety rest,
And the owner of it blest.
Trip away, make no stay;
Meet me all by breake of day.

Robin. If we shadowes have offended,
Thinke but this (and all is mended)
That you haue but slumbred here,
While these visions did appeare.
And this weake and idle theame,
No more yeelding but a dreame,
Gentles, doe not reprehend.
If you pardon, we will mend.
And as I am an honest Puck,
If we haue vnearned luck,
Now to scape the Serpents tongue,
We will make amends ere long:
Else the Puck a lyre call.
So good night vnto you all.
Give me your hands, if we be friends,
And Robin shall restore amends.

FINIS.

The Merchant of Venice.

Actus primus.

Enter Anthonio, Salerino, and Salanio.

Anthonio.

IN sooth I know not why I am so sad,
It wearies me: you say it wearies you;
But how I caught it, found it, or came by it,
What stuffe 'tis made of, whereof it is borne,
I am to learne: and such a Want-wit sadnesse makes of
mee,
That I have much ado to know my selfe.
Sal. Your minde is tossing on the Ocean
There where your Argosies with portly saile
Like Signiors and rich Burgers on the flood,
Or as it were the Pageanes of the sea,
Do ouer-peere the petite Traffiquers
That curtsie to them, do them reuerence
As they flye by them with their woouen wings.
Salar. Believe me sir, had I such venture forth,
The better part of my affections, would
Be with my hopes abroad. I should be still
Plucking the grasse to know where sits the winde,
Peering in Maps for ports, and peers, and roades:
And every obiect that might make me feare
Misfortune to my ventures, out of doubt
Would make me sad.
Sal. My winde cooling my broth,
Would blow me to an Ague, when I thought
What harme a winde too great might doe at sea.
I should not see the sandie hour-glasse runne,
But I should thinke of shallows, and of flats,
And see my wealthy Andrew docks in sand,
Vailing her high top lower then her ribs
To kisse her buriall; should I goe to Church
And see the holy edifice of stone,
And not bethinke me straight of dangerous rocks,
Which touching but my gentle Vessels side
Would scatter all her spices on the streame,
Enrobe the roaring waters with my silkes,
And in a word, but even now worth this,
And now worth nothing. Shall I haue the thought
To thinke on this, and shall I lacke the thought
That such a thing bechance'd would make me sad?
But tell not me, I know Anthonio
Is sad to thinke vpon his merchandize.
Anth. Believe me no, I thanke my fortune for it,
My ventures are not in one bottome trusted,
Nor to one place; nor is my whole estate
Vpon the fortune of this present yeere:
Therefore my merchandize makes me not sad.
Sala. Why then you are in loue.
Anth. Fie, fie.
Sala. Not in loue neither: then let vs say you are sad
Because you are not merry; and 'twere as easie
For you to laugh and leape, and say you are merry
Because you are not sad. Now by two-headed Iaunus,
Nature hath fram'd strange fellowes in her time:
Some that will euermore peepe through their eyes,
And laugh like Parrots at a bag-piper,
And other of such vineger aspect,
That they'll not shew their teeth in way of smile,
Though Nestor sweare the iest be laughable.

Enter Bassanio, Lorenzo, and Gratiano.

Sala. Heere comes Bassanio,
Your most noble Kinsman,
Gratiano, and Lorenzo. Fareywell,
We leaue you now with better company.
Sala. I would haue staid till I had made you merry,
If worthier friends had not preuented me.
Ant. Your worth is very deere in my regard.
I take it your owne busines calls on you,
And you embrace th'occasion to depart.
Sal. Good morrow my good Lords.
Bass. Good signiors both, when shall we laugh? say, when?
You grow exceeding strange: must it be so?
Sal. We'll make our leysures to attend on yours.
Exeunt Salerino, and Salanio.
Lor. My Lord Bassanio, since you haue found Anthonio
We two will leaue you, but at dinner time
I pray you haue in minde where we must meete.
Bass. I will not faile you.
Gra. You looke not well signior Anthonio,
You haue too much respect vpon the world:
They loose it that doe buy it with much care,
Believe me you are marvellously chang'd.
Ant. I hold the world but as the world Gratiano,
A stage, where every man must play a part,
And mine a sad one.
Gra. Let me play the foole,
With mirth and laughter let old wrinckles come;
And let my Liuer rather heate with wine,
Then my heart coole with mortifying groanes
Why should a man whose blood is warme within,
Sit like his Grandsire, cut in Alablaster?
Sleepe when he wakes? and creep into the Iaundice

By

By being peruisht? I tell thee what Anthonio,
I loue thee, and it is my loue that speakes:
There are a sort of men, whose visages
Do cream and mantle like a standing pond,
And do a willfull stillnesse entertaine,
With purpose to be dreſt in an opinion
Of wisedome, gravity, profound conceit,
As who should say, I am sir an Oracle,
And when I ope my lips, let no dogge barke.
O my Anthonio, I do know of these
That therefore onely are reputed wise,
For saying nothing; when I am very sure
If they should speake, would almost damn those eares
Which hearing them would call their brothers fooles:
Ile tell thee more of this another time.
But ſish not with this melancholly baite
For this fonde Gudgin, this opinion:
Come good Lorenzo, fareywell a while,
Ile end my exhortation after dinner.

Lor. Well, we will leaue you then till dinner time.
I must be one of these same dumbe wise men,
For Gratiano never let's me speake.

Gra. Well, keepe me company but two yeares mo,
Thou shalt not know the sound of thine owne tongue.

Ant. Fare you well, Ile grow a talker for this gearе.

Gra. Thankes ifaith, for silence is onely commendable
In a neate tongue dri'd, and a maid not vendable. Exeu.

Ant. It is that any thing now.

Baſ. Gratiano speakes an infinite deale of nothing, more then any man in all Venice, his reasons are two graines of wheate hid in two bushels of chaffe: you shall seeke all day ere you finde them, & when you haue them they are not worth the search.

An. Well: tel me now, what Lady is the same
To whom you swore a secret Pilgrimage
That you to day promis'd to tel me of?

Baſ. Tis not vnknowne to you Anthonio
How much I haue disabled mine estate,
By something shewing a more swelling port
Then my faint meanes would grant continuance:
Nor do I now make mone to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate, but my chiefe care
Is to come fairely off from the great debts
Wherein my time something too prodigall
Hath left me gag'd: to you Anthonio
I owe the most in money, and in loue,
And from your loue I haue a warrantie
To vnburthen all my plots and purposes,
How to get cleere of all the debts I owe.

An. I prey you good Baſſanio let me know it,
And if it stand as you your selfe still do,
Within the eye of honour, be assur'd
My purse, my person, my extremest meanes
Lye all vnlock'd to your occasions.

Baſ. In my schoole dayes, when I had lost one shaft
I shot his fellow of the selfesame flight
The selfesame way, with more advised watch
To finde the other forth, and by adventuring both,
I oft found both. I vrge this child-hoode proofe,
Because what followes is pure innocence.
I owe you much, and like a willfull youth,
That which I owe is lost: but if you please
To shoote another arrow that selfe way
Which you did shoot the first, I do not doubt,
As I will watch the ayme: Or to finde both,
Or bring your latter hazard backe againe,
And thankfully rest debtor for the first.

An. You know me well, and herein spend but time
To winde about my loue with circumstance,
And out of doubt you doe more wrong
In making question of my vttermost
Then if you had made waste of all I haue:
Then doe but say to me what I should doe
That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest vnto it: therefore speake.

Baſ. In Belmont is a Lady richly left,
And she is faire, and fairer then that word,
Of wondrous vertues, sometimes from her eyes
I did receiue faire speechleſſe messages:
Her name is Porsia, nothing vnderualued
To Cato's daughter, Brutus Porsia,
Nor is the wide world ignorant of her worth,
For the foure winds blow in from every coast
Renowned suitors, and her sunny locks
Hang on her temples like a golden fleece,
Which makes her seat of Belmont Colchos strand,
And many Iasons come in quest of her.
O my Anthonio, had I but the meanes
To hold a rivall place with one of them,
I haue a minde presages me such thriſt,
That I should questionleſſe be fortunate.

Anth. Thou knowest that all my fortunes are at sea,
Neither haue I money, nor commodity
To raise a present summe, therefore goe forth
Try what my credit can in Venice doe,
That shall be rackt even to the vttermost,
To furnish thee to Belmont to faire Porsia.
Goe presently enquire, and so will I
Where money is, and I no question make
To haue it of my trust, or for my sake. Exeunt.

Enter Porsia with her waiting women Nerissa.

Porsia. By my troth Nerissa, my little body is a weariie of this great world.

Ner. You would be sweet Madam, if your miseries were in the same abundance as your good fortunes are:
and yet for aught I see, they are as sicke that surfeit with too much, as they that starue with nothing; it is no smal happinesse therefore to bee seated in the mean, superfluitie comes sooner by white haires, but competence liues longer.

Porsia. Good sentences, and well pronounc'd.

Ner. They would be better if well followed.

Porsia. If to doe were as easie as to know what were good to doe, Chappels had beene Churches, and poore mens cottages Princes Pallaces: it is a good Diuine that followes his owne instructions; I can easier teach twenti ie what were good to be done, then be one of the twenti ie to follow mine owne teaching: the braine may deuise lawes for the blood, but a hot temper leapes ore a colde decree, such a hare is madnesse the youth, to skip ore the meshes of good counsaile the cripple: but this reason is not in fashion to choose me a husband: O me,
the word choose, I may neither choose whom I would,
nor refuse whom I dislike, so is the will of a liuing daughter curb'd by the will of a dead father: it is not hard Nerissa, that I cannot choose one, nor refuse none.

Ner. Your father was ever vertuous, and holy men at their death haue good inspirations, therefore the lotterie that he hath deuised in these three chests of gold, siluer, and leade, whereof who choose his meaning, choose

choose you, will no doubt never be chosen by any rightly, but one who you shall rightly know: but what warrant is there in your affection towards any of these Princely suitors that are already come?

Por. I pray thee over-name them, and as thou namest them, I will describe them, and according to my description lend at my affection.

Ner. First there is the Neopolitane Prince.

Por. That's a colt indeede, for he doth nothing but talke of his horse, and he makes it a great appropriation to his owne good parts that he can shoo him himselfe: I am much afeard my Ladie his mother plaid false with a Smyth.

Ner. Then is there the Countie Palentine.

Por. He doth nothing but frowne (as who should say, and you will not have me, choose: he heares merrie tales and smiles not, I feare hee will prove the weeping Philosopher when he growes old, being so full of unmanerly sadnesse in his youth.) I had rather to be married to a deaths head with a bone in her mouth, then to either of these: God defend me from these two.

Ner. How say you by the French Lord, Monsiur Le Bonne?

Por. God made him, and therefore let him passe for a man, in truth I know it is a sinne to be a mocker, but he, why he hath a horse better than the Neopolitan, a better bad habite of frowning than the Count Palentine, he is every man in no man, if a Traffell sing, he fals straight a capering, he will fence with his own shadow. If I should marry him, I should marry twenty husbands: If he would despise me, I would forgive him, for if he love me to madnesse, I should never requite him.

Ner. What say you then to Faconbridge, the young Baron of England?

Por. You know I say nothing to him, for he understands not me, nor I him: he hath neither Latine, French, nor Italian, and you will come into the Court & sweare that I have a poore pennie-worth in the English. he is a proper mans picture, but alas who can converse with a dumbe show? how odly he is suited, I thinke he bought his doublet in Italie, his round hose in France, his bonnet in Germanie, and his behaviour every where.

Ner. What thinke you of the other Lord his neighbour?

Por. That he hath a neighbourly charitie in him, for he borrowed a boxe of the ear of the Englishman, and swore he would pay him againe when hee was able: I thinke the Frenchman became his surtie, and scald under for another.

Ner. How like you the young German, the Duke of Saxonies Nephew?

Por. Very vildely in the morning when hee is sober, and most vildely in the afternoone when hee is drunke: when he is best, he is a little worse than a man, and when he is worst, he is little better than a beast: and the worst fall that ever fell, I hope I shall make shift to goe without him.

Ner. If he should offer to choose, and choose the right Casket, you should refuse to performe your Fathers will, if you should refuse to accept him.

Por. Therefore for feare of the worst, I pray thee set a deepe glasse of Reinish wine on the contrary Casket, for if the divell be within, and that temptation without, I know he will choose it. I will doe any thing Nerrisso ere I will be married to a sponge.

Ner. You maude not feare Lady the having any of these Lords, they have acquainted me with their determinations, which is indeede to returne to their home, and to trouble you with no more suite, vnlesse you may be won by some other sort then your Fathers imposition, depending on the Caskets.

Por. If I live to be as olde as Sibille, I will dye as chaste as Diana vnlesse I be obtained by the manner of my Fathers will: I am glad this parcell of wooers are so reasonable, for there is not one among them but I doote on his verie absence: and I wish them a faire departure.

Ner. Doe you not remember Ladie in your Fathers time, a Venecian, a Scholler and a Souldior that came hither in companie of the Marquesse of Montferrat?

Por. Yes, yes, it was Bassanio, as I thinke, so was hee call'd.

Ner. True Madam, hee of all the men that ever my foolish eyes look'd vpon, was the best deserving a faire Lady.

Por. I remember him well, and I remember him worthy of thy praise.

Enter a Seruingman.

Ser. The foure Strangers seeke you Madam to take their leave: and there is a fore-runner come from a fift, the Prince of Aderon, who brings word the Prince his Maister will be here to night.

Por. If I could bid the fift welcome with so good heart as I can bid the other foure farewell; I should be glad of his approach: if he have the condition of a Saint, and the complexion of a diuell, I had rather hee should shrive me than wiue me. Come Nerrisso, sirra go before; whiles wee shut the gate vpon one wooer, another knocks at the doore. Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio with Shylocke the Iew.

Shy. Three thousand ducates, well.

Bas. I for three months.

Shy For three months, well.

Bas. For the which, as I told you, Anthonio shall be bound.

Shy. Anthonio shall become bound, well.

Bas. May you sted me? Will you pleasure me? Shall I know your answere

Shy. Three thousand ducats for three months, and Anthonio bound.

Bas. Your answere to that.

Shy. Anthonio is a good man.

Bas. Have you heard any imputacion to the contrary.

Shy. Ho no, no, no, no: my meaning in saying he is a good man, is to have you vnderstand me that he is sufficient, yet his meanes are in supposition: he hath an Argosie bound to Tripolis, another to the Indies, I understand moreouer vpon the Rialto, he hath a third at Mexico, a fourth for England, and other ventures hee hath squandred abroad, but ships are but boards, Saylors but men, there be land rats, and water rats, water theeves, and land theeves, I meane Pyrates, and there is the perrill of waters, winds, and rocks: the man is notwithstanding sufficient, three thousand ducats, I thinke I may take his bond.

Bas. Be assured you may.

Iew. I will be assured I may: and that I may be assured, I will bethinke me, may I speake with Anthonio?

Bass. If it please you to dine with vs.

Iew. Yes, to smell porke, to eate of the habitation which your Prophet the Nazerite conjured the diuell into: I will buy with you, sell with you, talke with you, walke with you, and so following: but I will not eate with you, drinke with you, nor pray with you. What newes on the Ryalto, who is he comes here?

Enter Anthonio

Bass. This is signior Anthonio.

Iew. How like a fawning publican he lookes.
I hate him for he is a Christian:
But more, for that in low simplicitie
He lends out money gratis, and brings downe
The rate of vsance here with vs in Venice.
If I can catch him once vpon the hip,
I will feede fat the ancient grudge I beare him.
He hates our sacred Nation, and he railes
Euen there where Merchants most doe congregate
On me, my bargaines, and my well-worne thrift,
Which he cals interest: Cursed be my Tribe
If I forgiue him.

Bass. Shylock, doe you heare.

Shy. I am debating of my present store,
And by the neere gesse of my memorie
I cannot instantly raise vp the grosse
Of full three thousand ducats: what of that?
Tubal a wealthy Hebrew of my Tribe
Will furnish me, but soft, how many months
Doe you desire? Rest you faire good signior,
Your worship was the last man in our mouthes.

Ant. Shylocke, albeit I neither lend nor borrow
By taking, nor by giving of excesse,
Yet to supply the ripe wants of my friend,
Ile breake a custome: is he yet possest
How much he would?

Shy. I, I, three thousand ducats.

Ant. And for three months.

Shy. I had forgot, three months, you told me to.
Well then, your bond: and let me see, but heare you,
Me thoughts you said, you neither lend nor borrow
Vpon aduantage.

Ant. I doe neuer vse it.

Shy. When Iacob graz'd his Vncle Labans sheepe,
This Iacob from our holy Abram was
(As his wise mother wrought in his behalfe)
The third possessor; I, he was the third.

Ant. And what of him, did he take interest?

Shy. No, not take interest, not as you would say
Directly interest, marke what Iacob did,
When Laban and himselfe were compromyz'd
That all the eanelings which were streakt and pied
Should fall as Iacobs hire, the Ewes being rauche,
In end of Autumne turned to the Rammes,
And when the worke of generation was
Betweene these woolly breeders in the act,
The skilfull shepheard pil'd me certaine wands,
And in the doeing of the deede of kinde,
He stucke them vp before the fulsome Ewes,
Who then conceiuing, did in eaning time
Fall party-colour'd lambs, and those were Iacobs.
This was a way to thriue, and he was blest:
And thrift is blessing if men steale it not.

Ant. This was a venture sir that Iacob serv'd for,
A thing not in his power to bring to passe,
But sway'd and fashion'd by the hand of heauen.
Was this inserted to make interest good?
Or is your gold and siluer Ewes and Rams?

Shy. I cannot tell, I make it breede as fast,
But note me signior.

Ant. Marke you this Bassanio,
The diuell can cite Scripture for his purpose,
An euill soule producing holy wittnesse,
Is like a villaine with a smiling cheeke,
A goodly apple rotten at the heart.
O what a goodly outside falsehood hath.

Shy. Three thousand ducats, 'tis a good round sum.
Three months from twelue, then let me see the rate.

Ant. Well Shylocke, shall we be beholding to you?

Shy. Signior Anthonio, many a time and oft
In the Rydto you haue rated me
About my monies and my vsances:
Still haue I borne it with a patient shrug,
(For sufferance is the badge of all our Tribe.)
You call me misbeleuer, cut-throate dog,
And spet vpon my Iewish gaberdine,
And all for vse of that which is mine owne.
Well then, it now appeares you neede my helpe:
Goe to then, you come to me, and you say,
Shylocke, we would haue moneyes, you say so:
You that did voide your rume vpon my beard,
And foote me as you spurne a stranger curre
Ouer your threshold, moneyes is your suite.
What should I say to you? Should I not say,
Hath a dog money? Is it possible
A curre should lend three thousand ducats? or Shall I bend low, and in a bond-mans key
With bated breath, and whispring humblenesse,
Say this: Faire sir, you spet on me on Wednesday last;
You spurn'd me such a day; another time
You call me dog: and for these courtesies
Ile lend you thus much moneyes.

Ant. I am as like to call thee so againe,
To spet on thee againe, to spurne thee too.
If thou wilt lend the money, lend it not
As to thy friends, for when did friendship take
A breede of barraine metall of his friend?
But lend it rather to thine enemie,
Who if he breake, thou maist with better face
Exact the penalties.

Shy. Why looke you how you storme,
I would be friends with you, and haue your loue,
Forget the shames that you haue staind me with,
Supplie your present wants, and take no doite
Of vsance for my moneyes, and yeale not heare me,
This is kinde I offer.

Bass. This were kindnesse.

Shy. This kindnesse will I shoue,
Goe with me to a Notarie, seale me there
Your single bond, and in a merrie sport
If you repaie me not on such a day,
In such a place, such sum or sums as are
Expreft in the condition, let the forfeite
Be nominated for an equall pound
Of your faire flesh, to be cut off and taken
In what part of your bodie it pleaseth me.

Ant. Content in faith, Ile seale to such a bond,
And say there is much kindnesse in the Iew.

Bass. You

Bass. You shall not seale to such a bond for me,
Ile rather dwell in my necessitie.
Ant. Why feare not man, I will not forfaite it,
Within these two months, that's a month before
This bond expires, I doe expect returne
Of thrice three times the valew of this bond.
Shy. O father Abram, what these Christians are,
Whose owne hard dealings teaches them suspect
The thoughts of others: Praie you tell me this,
If he should breake his daie, what should I gaine
By the exaction of the forfeiture?
A pound of mans flesh taken from a man,
Is not so estimable, profitable neither
As flesh of Mutons, Beefes, or Goates, I say
To buy his fauour, I extend this friendship,
If he will take it, so: if not adiew,
And for my loue I praie you wrong me not.
Ant. Yes Shylocke, I will seale vnto this bond.
Shy. Then meete me forthwith at the Notaries,
Gine him direction for this merrie bond,
And I will goe and purse the ducats straite.
See to my house left in the fearefull gard
Of an vnthriftie knaue: and presentlie
Ile be with you. Exit.
Ant. Hie thee gentle Iew. This Hebrew will turne
Christian, he growes kinde.
Bass. I like not faire termes, and a villaines minde.
Ant. Come on, in this there can be no dismaie,
My Shippes come home a month before the daie.
Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter Morocho a tawnie Moore all in white, and three or foure followers accordingly, with Portia, Nerrissa, and their traine. Flo. Cornets.

Mor. Mislike me not for my complexion,
The shadowed liuerie of the burnished sunne,
To whom I am a neighbour, and neere bred.
Bring me the fairest creature North-ward borne,
Where Phebus fire scarce thawes the yficles,
And let vs make incision for your loue,
To prouе whose blood is reddest, his or mine.
I tell thee Ladie this aspect of mine
Hath feared the valiant, (by my loue I sweare)
The best regarded Virgins of our Clyme
Haue lost'd it too: I would not change this hue,
Except to steale your thoughts my gentle Queene.
Por. In termes of choise I am not solie led
By nice direction of a maidens eies:
Besides, the lottrie of my destenie
Bars me the right of voluntarie choosing:
But if my Father had not scanted me,
And hedg'd me by his wit to yeelde my selfe
His wife, who wins me by that meanes I told you,
Your selfe (renowned Prince) then stood as faire
As any comer I haue look'd on yet
For my affection.
Mor. Even for that I thanke you,
Therefore I prey you leade me to the Caskets
To trie my fortune: By this Symitare
That slew the Sophie, and a Persian Prince
That won three fields of Sulk an Solymen,
I would ore-stare the fiercest eies that looke:
Out-braue the heart most daring on the earth:
Pluckе the yong suckling Cubs from the fiue Beare,
Yea, mocke the Lion when he rores for prey
To win the Ladie. But alas, the while
If Hercules and Lychas plaie at dice
Which is the better man, the greater throw
May turne by fortune from the weaker hand:
So is Alcides beaten by his rage,
And so may I, blinde fortune leading me
Misse that which one vnworthier may attaine,
And die with grieuing.
Por. You must take your chance,
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or sweare before you choose, if you choose wrong
Neuer to speake to Ladie afterward
In way of marriage, therefore be aduis'd.
Mor. Not will not, come bring me vnto my chance.
Por. First forward to the temple, after dinner
Your hazard shall be made.
Mor. Good fortune then, Cornets.
To make me blest or cursed'st among men, Exeunt.

Enter the Clowne alone.

Clo. Certainely, my conscience will serue me to run from this Iew my Maister: the fiend is at mine elbow, and tempts me, saying to me, Iobbe, Launcelot Iobbe, good Launcelot, or good Iobbe, or good Launcelot Iobbe, vse your legs, take the start, run awaie: my conscience saies no; take heede honest Launcelot, take heed honest Iobbe, or as afore-said honest Launcelot Iobbe, doe not runne, scorne running with thy heeles; well, the most coragious fiend bids me packe, fie saies the fiend, away saies the fiend, for the heauens rouse vp a braue minde saies the fiend, and run; well, my conscience hanging about the necke of my heart, saies verie wisely to me: my honest friend Launcelot, being an honest mans sonne, or rather an honest womans sonne, for indeede my Father did something smack, something grow too; he had a kinde of taste; wel, my conscience saies Launcelot bouge not, bouge saies the fiend, bouge not saies my conscience, conscience say I you counsaile well, fiend say I you counsaile well, to be rul'd by my conscience I should stay with the Iew my Maister, (who God blesse the marke) is a kinde of diuell; and to run away from the Iew I should be ruled by the fiend, who saiing your reuerence is the diuell himselfe: certainely the Iew is the verie diuell incarnation, and in my conscience, my conscience is a kinde of hard conscience, to offer to counsaile me to stay with the Iew; the fiend giues the more friendly counsaile: I will runne fiend, my heeles are at your commandement, I will runne.

Enter old Gobbo with a Basket.

Gob. Maister young-man, you I praie you, which is the waie to Maister Iewes?
Lau. O heauens, this is my true begotten Father, who being more then sand-blinde, high gravel blinde, knows me not, I will trie confusions with him.
Gob. Maister young Gentleman, I praie you which is the waie to Maister Iewes.
Lau. Turne vpon your right hand at the next turning ning, but at the next turning of all on your left; marie at the verie next turning, turne of no hand, but turn down indirectlie to the Iewes house.

Gob. Be Gods sonnes 'twill be a hard waie to hit, can you tell me whether one Launcelot that dwels with him, dwell with him or no.

Laun. Talke you of yong Master Launcelot, marke me now, now will I raise the waters; talke you of yong Master Launcelot?

Gob. No Maister sir, but a poore mans sonne, his Father though I say't is an honest exceeding poore man, and God be thanked well to liue.

Laun Well, let his Father be what a will, wee talke of yong Master Launcelot

Gob. Your worships friend and Launcelot

Laun. But I praie you ergo old man, ergo I beseech you, talke you of yong Master Launcelot

Gob. Of Launcelot, an please your maistership.

Laun. Ergo Master Launcelot talke not of master Launcelot Father, for the young gentleman according to fates and destinies, and such odde sayings, the sisters three, & such branches of learning, is indeede deceased, or as you would say in plaine termes, gone to heaven.

Gob. Marrie God forbid, the boy was the verie staffe of my age, my verie prop.

Laun Do I look like a cudgell or a hovell-post, a staffe or a prop: doe you know me Father.

Gob Alacke the day. I know you not yong Gentleman, but I praie you tell me, is my boy God rest his soule alive or dead.

Laun. Doe you not know me Father.

Gob. Alacke sir I am sand blinde, I know you not.

Laun. Nay, indeede if you had your eies you might faile of the knowing me: it is a wise Father that knowes his owne childe. Well, old man, I will tell you newes of your son, give me your blessing, truth will come to light, murder cannot be hid long, a mans sonne may, but in the end truth will out.

Gob Praie you sir stand vp, I am sure you are not Launcelot my boy.

Laun Praie you let's haue no more fooling about it, but give mee your blessing: I am Launcelot your boy that was, your sonne that is, your childe that shall be.

Gob. I cannot thinke you are my sonne.

Laun. I know not what I shall thinke of that: but I am Launcelot the Iewes man, and I am sure Margery your wife is my mother.

Gob. Her name is Margery indeede. He be sworne if thou be Launcelot, thou art mine owne flesh and blood: Lord worship might he be, what a beard hast thou got; thou hast gotmore haire on thy chin, then Dobbin my phiphorse has on his taile

Laun It should seeme then that Dobbins taile growes backeward. I am sure he had more haire of his taile then I haue of my face when I last saw him.

Gob. Lord how art thou chang'd: how doest thou and thy Master agree, I haue brought him a present; how greet you now?

Laun. Well, well, but for mine owne part, as I haue set vp my rest to runaweie, so I will not rest till I haue run some ground: my Master's a verie Iew, give him a present, give him a halter, I am famisht in his seruice. You may tell everie finger I haue with my ribs: Father I am glad you are come, give me your present to one Master Bassanio, who indeede gives rare new Liueries, if I serue not him, I will run as far as God has any ground. O rare fortune, here comes the man, to him Father, for I am a Iew if I serue the Iew anie longer

Enter Bassanio with a follower or two

Bas. You may doe so, but let it be so hasted that supper be readie at the farthest by fiue of the clocke: see these Letters delivered, put the Liueries to making, and desire Gratiano to come anone to my lodging.

Laun. To him Father.

Gob. God blesse your worship

Bas. Gramercie, would'st thou ought with me.

Gob Here's my sonne sir, a poore boy.

Laun. Not a poore boy sir, but the rich Iewes man that would sir as my Father shall specifie

Gob. He hath a great infection sir, as one would say to serue.

Laun. Indeede the short and the long is, I serue the Iew, and have a desire as my Father shall specifie

Gob. His Master and he (saving your worships reuerence) are scarce cater cousins

Laun. To be briefe, the verie truth is, that the Iew having done me wrong, doth cause me as my Father being I hope an old man shall frutifie vnto you

Gob. I haue here a dish of Doues that I would bestow vpon your worship, and my suite is.

Laun. In verie briefe, the suite is impertinent to my selfe, as your worship shall know by this honest old man, and though I say it, though old man, yet poore man my Father

Bas. One speake for both, what would you?

Laun Serue you sir.

Gob That is the verie defect of the matter sir.

Bas. I know thee well, thou hast obtain'd thy suite, Shylocke thy Maister spoke with me this day, And hath preferr'd thee, if it be preferrment To leaue a rich Iewes seruice, to become The follower of so poore a Gentleman.

Clo. The old proverbe is verie well parted betwene my Master Shylocke and you sir, you haue the grace of God sir, and he hath enough.

Bas. I haue speak't it well; go Father with thy Son, Take leaue of thy old Master, and enquire My lodging out, give him a Liuerie More garded then his fellowes: see it done.

Clo. Father no, I cannot get a seruice, no, I haue ere a tongue in my head, well: if anie man in Italie haue a fairer table which doth offer to sweare vpon a booke, I shall have good fortune; goe too, here's a simple line of life, here's a small trifle of wives, alas, fifteene wives is nothing, a leaven widdowes and nine maides is a simple comming in for one man, and then to scape drowning thrice, and to be in perill of my life with the edge of a featherbed, here are simple scapes: well, if Fortune be a woman, she's a good wench for this gere: Father come, Ile take my leaue of the Iew in the twinkling.

Exit Clowne.

Bas. I prie thee good Leonardo thinke on this, These things being bought and orderly bestowed Returne in haste, for I doe feast to night My best esteemed acquaintance, hie thee goe

Leon. My best endeuors shall be done herein. Exit Le.

Enter Gratiano.

Gra. Where's your Maister.

Leon. Yonder.

Lor. Yonder sir he walkes.
Gra. Signior Bassanio.
Bas. Gratiano.
Gra. I haue a suite to you.
Bas. You haue obtain'd it.
Gra. You must not deniе me, I must goe with you to Belmont.
Bas. Why then you must: but hearе thee Gratiano,
Thou art too wilde, too rude, and bold of voyce,
Parts that becomes thee happily enough,
And in such eyes as ours appeare not faults;
But where they are not knowne, why there they show
Something too liberall, pray thee take paine
To allay with some cold drops of modestie
Thy skipping spirit, lest through thy wilde behaviour
I be misconstrued in the place I goe to,
And loose my hopes.
Gra. Signior Bassanio, heare me,
If I doe not put on a sober habite,
Talke with respect, and sweare but now and than,
Weare prayer bookes in my pocket, looke demurely,
Nay more, while grace is saying hood mine eyes
Thus with my hat, and sigh and say Amen:
Vse all the obseruance of ciuilitie
Like one well studied in a sad ostent
To please his Grandam, never trust me more.
Bas. Well, we shall see your bearing
Gra. Nay but I bare to night, you shall not gage me
By what we doe to night.
Bas. No that were pitie,
I would intreate you rather to put on
Your boldest suite of mirth, for we haue friends
That purpose merriment: but fare you well,
I haue some business.
Gra. And I must to Lorenzo and the rest,
But we will visite you at supper time. Exeunt.

Enter Iessica and the Clowne.

Ies. I am sorry thou wilt leaue my Father so,
Our house is hell, and thou a merrie diuell
Did'st rob it of some taste of tediousnesse;
But fare thee well, there is a ducat for thee,
And Launcelot, soone at supper shalt thou see
Lorenzo, who is thy new Maisters guest,
Giue him this Letter, doe it secretly,
And so farewell: I would not haue my Father
See me talke with thee.
Clo. Adieu, teares exhibit my tongue, most beautifull Pagan, most sweete Iew, if a Christian doe not play the knaue and get thee, I am much deceiued; but adieu, these foolish drops doe somewhat drowne my manly spirit: adieu. Exit
Ies. Farewell good Launcelot
Alacke, what heinous sinne is it in me
To be ashamed to be my Fathers childe,
But though I am a daughter to his blood,
I am not to his manners: O Lorenzo,
If thou keepe promise I shall end this strife,
Become a Christian, and thy loving wife Exit.

Enter Gratiano, Lorenzo, Slarino, and Salanio

Lor. Nay, we will slinke away in supper time,
Disguise vs at my lodging, and returne all in an houre.
Gra. We haue not made good preparation.
Sal. We haue not spoke vs yet of Torch-bearers.
Sol. 'Tis vile, vnlesse it may be quaintly ordered,
And better in my minde not vndertooke.
Lor. 'Tis now but foure of clock, we haue two houres
To furnish vs; friend Launcelot what's the newes.
Enter Launcelot with a Letter.
Lan. And it shall please you to breake vp this, shall it seeme to signifie.
Lor. I know the hand, in faith 'tis a faire hand
And whiter than the paper it writ on,
I the faire hand that writ.
Gra. Loue newes in faith.
Lan. By your leaue sir
Lor. Whither goest thou?
Lan. Marry sir to bid my old Master the Iew to sup to night with my new Master the Christian.
Lor. Hold here, take this, tell gentle Iessica
I will not faile her, speake it priuately;
Go Gentlemen, will you prepare you for this Maske to night,
I am prouided of a Torch-bearer. Exit. Clowne.
Sal. I marry,'tis be gone about it straite.
Sol. And so will I.
Lor. Meete me and Gratiano at Gratiano's lodging
Some houre hence.
Sol. 'Tis good we do so. Exit.
Gra. Was not that Letter from faire Iessica?
Lor. I must needes tell thee all, she hath directed
How I shall take her from her Fathers house,
What gold and iewels she is furnisht with,
What Pages faire she hath in readinesse.
If ere the Iew her Father come to heauen,
It will be for his gentle daughters sake;
And never dare misfortune crosse her foote,
Vnlesse she doe it vnder this excuse,
That she is issue to a faithlesse Iew:
Come goe with me, peruse this as thou goest,
Faire Iessica shall be my Torch-bearer Exit.

Enter Iew, and his man that was the Clowne.

Iew. Well, thou shalt see, thy eyes shall be thy iudge,
The difference of old Shylocke and Bassanio;
What Iessica, thou shalt not gormandize
As thou hast done with me: what Iessica?
And sleepe, and snore, and rend apparell out.
Why Iessica I say
Clo. Why Iessica.
Shy. Who bids thee call? I do not bid thee call.
Clo. Your worship was wont to tell me
I could doe nothing without bidding.
Enter Iessica.
Ies. Call you? what is your will?
Shy. I am bid forth to supper Iessica,
There are my Keyes: but wherefore should I go?
I am not bid for loue, they flatter me,
But yet I'le goe in hate, to feede vpon
The prodigall Christian. Iessica my girle,
Looke to my house, I am right loath to goe,
There is some ill a brewing towards my rest,
For I did dreame of money bags to night.
Clo. I beseech you sir goe, my yong Master
Doth expect your reproach.
Shy. So doe I his.
Clo. And they haue conspired together. I will not say you shall see a Maske, but if you doe, then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a bleeding on blacke monday last, at six a clocke ith morning, falling out that yeere on ashwensday was foure yeere in th'afternoone

Sly. What are these masks? heare you me Iessica,
Lock vp my doores, and when you heare the drum
And the vile squeaking of the wry-neckt Fife,
Clamber not you vp to the casements then,
Nor thrust your head into the publique streete
To gaze on Christian fooles with varnisht faces:
But stop my houses eares, I meane my casements,
Let not the sound of shallow fopperie enter
My sober house. By Iacob's staffe I sweare,
I haue no minde of feasting forth to night:
But I will goe: goe you before me sirra,
Say I will come.

Clo. I will goe before sir
Mistris looke out at window for all this;
There will come a Christian by,
Will be worth a Iewes eye.

Sly. What saies that foole of Hagars off-spring?
ha.

Ies. His words were farewell mistris, nothing else.

Sly. The patch is kinde enough, but a huge feeder:
Snaile-slow in profit, but he sleepes by day
More then the wilde-cat: drones hiue not with me,
Therefore I part with him, and part with him
To one that I would haue him helpe to waste
His borrowed purse. Well Iessica goe in,
Perhaps I will returne immediately;
Doe as I bid you, shut doores after you, fast bind, fast
finde,
A proueerbe never stale in thriftie minde. Exeu.

Ies. Farewell, and if my fortune be not crost,
I haue a Father, you a daughter lost. Exit.

Enter the Maskers, Gratiano and Salino.

Gra. This is the penthouse vnder which Lorenzo
Desired vs to make a stand.

Sal. His hoore is almost past.

Gra. And it is meritable he out-dwels his houre,
For louers ever run before the clocke.

Sal. O ten times faster Venus Pidgions flye
To seale, loues bonds new made, then they are wont
To keepe obliged faith vnforfaited.

Gra. That ever holds, who riseth from a feast
With that keene appetite that he sits downe?
Where is the horse that doth vntreed again
His tedious measures with the vnbated fire,
That he did pace them first: all things that are,
Are with more spirit chased than enioy'd.
How like a yonger or a prodigall
The skarfed barke puts from her native bay,
Hadg'd and embraced by the strumpet winde!
How like a prodigall doth she returne
With ouer-whter'd ribs and ragged sailes,
Leane, rent, and beggar'd by the strumpet winde?

Enter Lorenzo.

Salino. Heere comes Lorenzo, more of this hereafter.

Lor. Sweete friends, your patience for my long abode,
Not I, but my affaires haue made you wait:
When you shall please to play the theeues for wiues
Ile watch as long for you then: approach
Here dwels my father Iew. Hoe, who's within?

Iessica aboue.

Ies. Who are you? tell me for more certainty,
Albeit I'le sweare that I do know your tongue.

Lor. Lorenzo, and thy Loue.

Ies. Lorenzo certaine, and my loue indeed,
For whom loue I so much? and show who knowes
But you Lorenzo, whether I am yours?

Lor. Heauen and thy thoughts are witness thet thou art.

Ies. Heere, catch this casket, it is worth the paines,
I am glad 'tis night, you do not looke on me,
For I am much asham'd of my exchange:
But loue is blinde, and louers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselues commit,
For if they could, Cupid himselfe would blush
To see me thus transformed to a boy.

Lor. Descend, for you must be my torch-bearer.

Ies. What, must I hold a Candle to my shames?
They in themselues goodsooth are too too light.
Why, 'tis an office of discouery Loue,
And I should be obscure'd.

Lor. So you are sweet,
Even in the louely garnish of a boy: but come at once,
For the close night doth play the run-away,
And we are staid for at Bassanio's feast.

Ies. I will make fast the doores and guild my selfe
With some more ducats, and be with you straight.

Gra. Now by my hood, a gentle, and no Iew.

Lor. Beffrew me but I loue her heartily.
For she is wise, if I can iudge of her,
And faire she is, if that mine eyes be true,
And true she is, as she hath prou'd her selfe:
And therefore like her selfe, wise, faire, and true,
Shall she be placed in my constant soule.

Enter Iessica.

What, art thou come? on gentlemen, away,
Our masking mates by this time for vs stay. Exit.

Enter Anthonio.

Ant. Who's there?

Gra. Signior Anthonio?

Ant. Fie, fie, Gratiano, where are all the rest?
'Tis nine a clocke, our friends all stay for you,
No masks to night, the winde is come about,
Bassanio presently will goe aboard,
I haue sent twenty out to seeke for you.

Gra. I am glad on't. I desire no more delight
Then to be vnder saile, and gone to night. Exeunt.

Enter Portia with Morocho, and both their traines.

Por. Goe, drawe aside the curtaines, and discouer
The seuerall Caskets to this noble Prince:
Now make your choyse.

Mor. The first of gold, who this inscription beares,
Who chooseth me, shall gaine what men desire.
The second siluer, which this promise carries
Who chooseth me, shall get as much as he deserues.
This third, dull lead, with warning all as blunt,
Who chooseth me, must give and hazard all he hath,
How shall I know if I doe choose the right?

Por. The

How shall I know if I doe choose the right.

Por. The one of them containes my picture Prince,
If you choose that, then I am yours withall.

Mor. Some God direct my judgement, let me see,
I will survey the inscriptions, backe againe:
What says this leaden casket?
Who choosseth me, must give and hazard all he hath.
Must give, for what? for lead, hazard for lead?
This casket threatens men that hazard all
Doe it in hope of fair advantages:
A golden mind stoopes not to showes of dross,
Ile then not give nor hazard aught for lead.
What says the Silver with her virgin hue?
Who choosseth me, shall get as much as he deserves.
As much as he deserves; pause there Morocho,
And weigh thy value with an even hand,
If thou best rated by thy estimation
Thou doost deserve enough, and yet enough
May not extend so farre as to the Ladie:
And yet to be afeard of my deserving.
Were but a weake disabling of my selfe.
As much as I deserve, why that's the Lady.
I doe in birth deserve her, and in fortunes,
In graces, and in qualities of breeding:
But more than these, in love I doe deserve.
What if I strai'd no farther, but chose here?
Let's see once more this saying grau'd in gold.
Who choosseth me shall gaine what many men desire:
Why that's the Lady, all the world desires her:
From the foure corners of the earth they come
To kisse this shrine, this mortall breathing Saint.
The Hircanian deserts, and the vaste wildes
Of wide Arabia are as throughfares now
For Princes to come view faire Portia.
The wateryie Kingdome, whose ambitious head
Spits in the face of heaven, is no barre
To stop the forraine spirits, but they come
As ore a brooke to see faire Portia.
One of these three containes her heavenly picture.
Is't like that Lead containes her? twere damnation
To think so base a thought, it were too grosse
To rib her sarecloath in the obscure grave:
Or shall I think in Silver she's immur'd
Being ten times undervalued to tride gold;
O sinfull thought, never so rich a Iem
Was set in worse than gold! They have in England
A coyne that bears the figure of an Angell
Stampt in gold, but that's insculpt upon:
But here an Angell in a golden bed
Lies all within. Deliver me the key:
Here doe I choose, and thrive I as I may.

Por. There take it Prince, and if my forme lye there
Then I am yours.

Mor. O hell! what have we here, a carrion death,
Within whose emptie eye there is a written scroule;
Ile reade the writing.

All that glisters is not gold,
Often have you heard that told;
Many a man his life hath sold
But my outside to behold;
Gilded timber doe worms infold:
Had you beene as wise as bold,
Young as bloude, in judgement old,
Your answere had not beene inscroll,
Farewelle, your suite is cold.

Mor. Cold indeede, and labour lost,
Then farewell heate, and welcome frost:
Portia adew, I have too grieu'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus loosers part. Exit.

Por. A gentle riddance: draw the curtaines, go.
Let all of his complexion choose me so. Exeunt.

Enter Salarino and Solanio.

Flo. Cornets.

Sol. Why man I saw Bassanio under sayle,
With him is Gratiano gone along;
And in their ship I am sure Lorenzo is not.

Sol. The villaine Iew with outcries raisd the Duke.
Who went with him to search Bassanios ship.

Sol. He comes too late, the ship was vodersaile;
But there the Duke was given to understand
That in a Gondilo were seene together
Lorenzo and his amorous Iessica.
Besides, Anthonio certified the Duke
They were not with Bassanio in his ship.

Sol. I never heard a passion so confused.
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,
As the dogge Iew did utter in the streets;
My daughter, O my ducats, O my daughter,
Fled with a Christian, O my Christian ducats
Iustice, the law, my ducats, and my daughter;
A sealed bag, two sealed bags of ducats,
Of double ducats, stolne from me by my daughter.
And jewels, two stones, two rich and precious stones,
Stolne by my daughter: iustice, finde the girle,
She hath the stones upon her, and the ducats.

Sol. Why all the boyes in Venice follow him,
Crying his stones, his daughter, and his ducats.

Sol. Let good Anthonio looke he keepe his day
Or he shall pay for this

Sol. Marry well remembred,
I reason'd with a Frenchman yesterday,
Who told me, in the narrow seas that part
The French and English, there miscarried
A vessell of our countrey richly fraught:
I thought upon Anthonio when he told me,
And wishe in silence that it were not his.

Sol. Ye were best to tell Anthonio what you heare.
Yet doe not suddainely, for it may grieve him.

Sol. A kinder Gentleman treads not the earth,
I saw Bassanio and Anthonio part,
Bassanio told him he would make some speede
Of his returne: he answered, doe not so,
Slubber not business for my sake Bassanio,
But stay the very riping of the time,
And for the Iewes bond which he hath of me,
Let it not enter in your minde of loue:
Be merry, and imploy your chiefest thoughts
To courtship, and such faire ostents of loue
As shall conveniently become you there;
And even there his eye being big with teares,
Turning his face, he put his hand behinde him,
And with affection wondrous sensible
He wrung Bassanios hand, and so they parted.

Sol. I thinke he onely loves the world for him,
I pray thee let vs goe and finde him out
And quicken his embraced heaviness
With some delight or other.

Sol. Doe we so. Exeunt.

Enter Nerissa and a Seruitore.

Ner. Quick, quick I pray thee, draw the curtain straite,

The Prince of Arragon hath ta'ne his oath,
And comes to his election presently.

Enter Arragon, his traine, and Portia.
Flo. Cornets.

Por. Behold, there stand the caskets noble Prince,
If you choose that wherein I am contain'd,
Straight shall our nuptiall rights be solemnis'd:
But if thou faile, without more speech my Lord,
You must be gone from hence immediately.

Ar. I am enjoyned by oath to observe three things:
First, never to vnfold to any one
Which casket 'twas I chose; next, if I faile
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maide in way of marriage:
Lastly, if I doe faile in fortune of my choyse,
Immediately to leave you, and be gone.

Por. To these iniunctions every one doth sweare
That comes to hazard for my worthlesse selfe.

Ar. And so have I addressed me, fortune now
To my hearts hope: gold, siluer, and base lead.
Who chooseth me must giue and hazard all he hath.
You shall looke fairer ere I giue or hazard.
What saies the golden chest, ha, let me see:
Who chooseth me, shall gaine what many men desire:
What many men desire, that many may be meant
By the foole multitude that choose by show,
Not learning more then the fond eye doth teach,
Which pries not to th'interior, but like the Martlet
Builds in the weather on the outward wall,
Even in the force and rode of casualtie.
I will not choose what many men desire,
Because I will not iumpe with common spirits,
And rankle me with the barbarous multitudes.
Why then to thee thou Siluer treasure house,
Tell me once more, what title thou dost beare;
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserues:
And well said too; for who shall goe about
To cozen Fortune, and be honourable
Without the stampe of merrit, let none presume
To weare an vnderserued dignitie:
O that estates, degrees, and offices,
Were not deriu'd corruptly, and that clear honour
Were purchast by the merrit of the wearer;
How many then should couer that stand bare?
How many be commanded that commaud?
How much low pleasantry would then be gleaned
From the true seede of honor? And how much honor
Pickt from the chaffe and ruine of the times,
To be new vamplist: Well, but to my choise.
Who chooseth me shall get as much as he deserues.
I will assume desert; giue me a key for this,
And instantly vnlocke my fortunes here.

Por. Too long a pause for that which you finde there.

Ar. What's here, the portrait of a blinking idiot
Presenting me a scedule, I will reade it:
How much vnlike art thou to Portia?
How much vnlike my hopes and my deseruings?
Who chooseth me, shall haue as much as he deserues.
Did I deserue no more then a fooles head,
Is that my prize, are my deserts no better?

Por. To offend and iudge are distinct offices,
And of opposed natures.

Ar. What is here?

The fire seuen times tried this,
Seuen times tried that iudgement is,
That dwell where shee is seuen,
Some there be that shadowes kisse,
Such haue but a shadowes blisse:
There be fooles alive iwis
Siluer'd o're, and so was this:
Take what wife you will to bed,
I will ever be your head:
So be gone, you are sped.

Ar. Still more foole I shall appeare
By the time I linger here,
With one fooles head I came to woo,
But I goe away with two.
Sweet adieu, Ile keepe my oath,
Patiently to beare my wroath.

Por. Thus hath the candle sing'd the moath:
O these deliberate fooles when they doe choose,
They haue the wisdome by their wit to loose.

Ner. The ancient saying is no heresie,
Hanging and wiuing goes by destinie.

Por. Come draw the curtaine Nerrisa.

Enter Messenger.

Mes. Where is thy Lady?

Por. Here, what would my Lord?

Mes. Madam, there is a-lighted at your gate
A young Venetian, one that comes before
To signifie th'approaching of his Lord,
From whom he bringeth sensible regrects;
To wit (besides commends and courteous breath)
Gifts of rich value; yet I haue not seene
So likely an Embassador of loue.
A day in Aprill never came so sweete
To show how costly Sommer was at hand,
As this fore-spurrer comes before his Lord.

Por. No more I pray thee, I am halfe a-feard
Thou wilt say anone he is some kin to thee,
Thou spend'st such high-day wit in praising him:
Come, come Nerrissa, for I long to see
Quicke Cupids Post, that comes so mannerly.

Ner. Bassanio Lord, loue if thy will it be. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius

Enter Solanio and Salerino.

Sol. Now, what newes on the Ryalto?

Sal. Why yet it liues there vncheckt, that Antonio hath a ship of rich lading wrecht on the narrow Seas; the Goodwins I thinke they call the place, a very dangerous flat, and fatall, where the carcasses of many a tall ship, lye buried, as they say, if my gossips report be an honest woman of her word.

Sol. I would she were as lying a gossip in that, as ever knapt Ginger, or made her neighbours believe she wept for the death of a third husband: but it is true, without any slips of prolixity, or crossing the plaine high-way of talke, that the good Antonio, the honest Antonio, o that I had a title good enough to keepe his name company!

Sal. Come, the full stop.

Sal. Ha, what sayest thou, why the end is, he hath lost a ship.

Sal. I would it might prouse the end of his losses.

Sal. Let me say Amen betimes, least the diuell crosse my prayer, for here he comes in the likenes of a Iew. How now Shylock, what newes among the Merchants?

Enter Shylock.

Shy. You knew none so well, none so well as you, of my daughters flight.

Sal. That's certaine, I for my part knew the Tailor that made the wings she flew withall.

Sol. And Shylock for his own part knew the bird was fledg'd, and then it is the complexion of them all to leaue the dam.

Shy. She is damn'd for it.

Sal. That's certaine, if the diuell may be her Iudge.

Shy. My owne flesh and blood to rebell.

Sol. Out vpon it old carrion, rebels it at these yeeres.

Shy. I say my daughter is my flesh and blood.

Sal. There is more difference betweene thy flesh and hers, then betweene Iet and Iuorie, more betweene your bloods, then there is betweene red wine and rennish: but tell vs, doe you heare whether Anthonio haue had any loss at Sea or no?

Shy. There I haue another bad match, a bankrout, a prodigall, who dare scarce shew his head on the Ryalto, a beggar that was vsd to come so smug vpon the Mart: let him look to his bond, he was wont to call me Vsurer, let him looke to his bond, he was wont to lend money for a Christian courtesie, let him looke to his bond.

Sal. Why I am sure if he forfeite, thou wilt not take his flesh, what's that good for?

Shy. To bait fish withall, if it will feede nothing else, it will feede my reuenge; he hath disgrac'd me, and hindred me halfe a million, laugh'd at my losses, mockt at my gaines, scorned my Nation, thwarted my bargaines, cooled my friends, heated mine enemies, and what's the reason? I am a Iew: Hath not a Iew eyes? hath not a Iew hands, organs, dimentions, senses, affections, passions, fed with the same foode, hurt with the same weapons, subiect to the same diseases, healed by the same meanes, warmed and cooled by the same Winter and Sommer as a Christian is? if you prick vs doe we not bleede? if you tickle vs, doe we not laugh? if you poison vs doe we not die? and if you wrong vs shall we not reuenge? if we are like you in the rest, we will resemble you in that. If a Iew wrong a Christian, what is his humility, reuenge? If a Christian wrong a Iew, what should his sufferance be by Christian example, why reuenge? The villainie you teach me I will execute, and it shall goe hard but I will better the instruction.

Enter a man from Anthonio.

Gentlemen, my master Anthonio is at his house, and desires to speake with you both.

Sal. We haue been vp and downe to seeke him.

Enter Tubell.

Sol. Here comes another of the Tribe, a third cannot be matche, vnlesse the diuell himselfe curse Iew.

Exeunt Gentlemen.

Shy. How now Tubell, what newes from Genoua? hast thou found my daughter?

Tub. I often came where I did heare of her, but cannot finde her.

Shy. Why there, there, there, there, a diamond gone cost me two thousand ducats in Frankford, the curse never fell vpon our Nation till now, I never felt it till now, two thousand ducats in that, and other precious, precious iewels: I would my daughter were dead at my foot, and the iewels in her eare: would she were hearse at my foote, and the ducats in her coffin: no newes of them, why so? and I know not how much is spent in the search: why thou losse vpon losse; the theefe gone with so much, and so much to finde the theefe, and no satisfaction, no reuenge, nor no ill luck stirring but what lights a my shoulders, no sighes but a my breathing, no teares but a my shedding.

Tub. Yes, other men haue ill luck too, Anthonio as I heard in Genoua?

Shy. What, what, what, ill luck, ill luck.

Tub. Hath an Argosie cast away comming from Tripolis.

Shy. I thanke God, I thanke God, is it true, is it true?

Tub. I spake with some of the Saylers that escaped the wracke.

Shy. I thanke thee good Tubell, good newes, good newes: ha, ha, here in Genoua.

Tub. Your daughter spent in Genoua, as I heard, one night fourescore ducats.

Shy. Thou stick'st a dagger in me, I shall never see my gold againe, fourescore ducats at a sitting, fourescore ducats.

Tub. There came diuers of Anthonio creditors in my company to Venice, that sweare he cannot choose but breake.

Shy. I am very glad of it. Ile plague him, Ile torture him, I am glad of it.

Tub. One of them shewed me a ring that he had of your daughter for a Monkie.

Shy. Out vpon her, thou torturest me Tubell, it was my Turkies, I had it of Leah when I was a Bachelor: I would not haue giuen it for a wilderness of Monkies.

Tub. But Anthonio is certainely vndone.

Shy. Nay, that's true, that's very true, goe Tubell, fee me an Officer, bespeake him a fortnight before, I will haue the heart of him if he forfeit, for were he out of Venice, I can make what merchandize I will: goe Tubell, and meete me at our Sinagogue, goe good Tubell, at our Sinagogue Tubell.

Exeunt.

Enter Bassanio, Portia, Gratiano, and all their traine.

Por. I pray you tarrie, pause a day or two
Before you hazard, for in choosing wrong
I loose your companie; therefore forbeare a while,
There's something tells me (but it is not loue)
I would not loose you, and you know your selfe,
Hate counselles not in such a quaintie;
But least you should not vnderstand me well,
And yet a maiden hath no tongue, but thought,
I would detaine you here some month or two
Before you venture for me. I could teach you
How to choose right, but then I am forsworne,
So will I neuer be, so may you misse me,
But if you doe, you'le make me wish a sinne,
That I had beene forswome: Beshrow your eyes,
They haue o're-look'd me and deuided me,
One halfe of me is yours, the other halfe yours,
Mine owne I would say: but of mine then yours,
And so all yours; O these naughtie times
Puts bars betweene the owners and their rights,
And so though yours, not yours (prouse it so)
Let Fortune goe to hell for it, not I.
I speake too long, but 'tis to peize the time,
To ich it, and to draw it out in length,
To stay you from election.

Bas. Let me choose,
For as I am, I live upon the racke.
Por. Vpon the racke Bassanio, then confesse
What treason there is mingled with your loue.
Bas. None but that vglie treason of mistrust,
Which makes me feare the enioying of my loue:
There may as well be amitie and life,
Tweene snow and fire, as treason and my loue.
Por. I, but I feare you speake vpon the racke,
Where men enforced doth speake any thing.
Bas. Promise me life, and ile confesse the truth.
Por. Well then, confesse and liue.
Bas. Confesse and loue
Had beene the verie sum of my confession:
O happie torment, when my torturer
Doth teach me answers for deliuerance:
But let me to my fortune and the caskets.
Por. Away then, I am lockt in one of them,
If you doe loue me, you will finde me out.
Nerryssa and the rest, stand all aloofe,
Let musicke sound while he doth make his choise,
Then if he loose he makes a Swan-like end,
Fading in musique. Thus the comparison
May stand more proper, my eye shall be the stream
And watrie death-bed for him: he may win,
And what is musique then? Then musique is
Even as the flourish, when true subiects bowe
To a new crowned Monarch: Such is it,
As are those dulcet sounds in breake of day,
That creepe into the dreaming bride-groomes eare,
And summon him to marriage. Now he goes
With no lesse presence, but with much more loue
Then yong Alcides, when he did redeeme
The virgine tribute, paied by howling Troy
To the Sea-monster: I stand for sacrifice,
The rest aloofe are the Dardanian wiues:
With bleared visages come forth to view
The issue of th'exploit: Goe Hercules,
Liue thou, I liue with much more dismay
I view the fight, then thou that mak'st the fray.

Here Musicke.

A Song the whilst Bassanio commentes on the Caskets to himselfe.

Tell me where is fancie bred,
Or in the heart, or in the head:
How begot, how nourished. Replie replie.
It is engendred in the eyes,
With gazing fed, and Fancie dies,
In the cradle where it lies:
Let vs all ring Fancies knell.
Ile begin it.
Ding dong bell.
All. Ding, dong, bell.

Bas. So may the outward showes be least themselues
The world is still deceiu'd with ornament.
In Law, what Plea so tainted and corrupt,
But being season'd with a gracious voice,
Obscures the show of euill? In Religion,
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bleesse it, and approue it with a text.
Hiding the grossenesse with faire ornament:
There is no vice so simple, but assumes
Some marke of vertue on his outward parts;
How manie cowards, whose hearts are all as false
As stayers of sand, weare yet vpon their chins
The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
Who inward searche, haue liuers white as milke,
And these assume but valors excrement,
To render them redoubted. Looke on beautie,
And you shall see 'tis purchast by the weight,
Which therein works a miracle in nature,
Making them lightest that weare most of it:
So are those crisped snaky golden locks
Which makes such wanton gambols with the winde
Vpon supposed fairenesse, often knowne
To be the dowrie of a second head,
The scull that bred them in the Sepulcher.
Thus ornament is but the guiled shore
To a most dangerous sea: the beautious scarfe
Veiling an Indian beautie; In a word,
The seeming truth which cunning times put on
To intrap the wisest. Therefore thou gaudie gold,
Hard food for Midas, I will none of thee,
Nor none of thee thou pale and common drudge
Tweene man and man: but thou, thou meager lead
Which rather threatnest then dost promise ought,
Thy paleness moues me more then eloquence,
And here choose I, ioy be the consequence.
Por. How all the other passions fleet to aire,
As doubtfull thoughts, and rash imbrac'd despaire:
And shuddring feare, and greene-eyed iealousie.
O loue be moderate, allay thy extasie,
In measure raine thy ioy, scant this excesse,
I feele too much thy blessing, make it lesse,
For feare I surfeit.
Bas. What finde I here?
Faire Portia counterfeit. What demie God
Hath come so neere creation? moue these eies?
Or whether riding on the bals of mine
Seeme they in motion? Here are seuer'd lips
Parted with sugar breath, so sweet a barre
Should sunder such sweet friends: here in her haires
The Painter plaies the Spider, and hath woven
A golden mesh t'intrap the hearts of men
Faster then gnats in cobwebs: but her eies,
How could he see to doe them? having made one,
Me thinkes it should haue power to steale both his
And leaue it selfe vnfurnisht: Yet looke how farre
The substance of my praise doth wrong this shadow
In vnderprising it, so farre this shadow
Doth limpe behinde the substance. Here's the scroule,
The contenues, and summaries of my fortune.

You that choose not by the view
Chances as fare, and choose as true.
Since this fortune falls to you,
Be content, and seeke no new.
If you be well pleas'd with this,
And hold your fortune for your blisse,
Turne you where your Lady is,
And claime her with a louing kisse.

Bas. A gentle scroule: Faire Lady, by your leaue,
I come by note to giue, and to receiue,
Like one of two contending in a prize
That thinks he hath done well in peoples eies:
Hearing applause and vniuersall shout,
Giddie in spirit, still gazing in a doubt
Whether those peales of praise be his or no.

So

So thrice fair Lady stand I even so,
As doubtfull whether what I see be true,
Vntill confirm'd, sign'd, ratified by you.

Por. You see my Lord Bassanio where I stand,
Such as I am; though for my selfe alone
I would not be ambitious in my wish,
To wish my selfe much better, yet for you,
I would be trebled twenty times my selfe,
A thousand times more faire, ten thousand times
More rich, that only to stand high in your account,
I might in vertues, beauties, liuings, friends,
Exceed account: but the full summe of me
Is sum of nothing: which to terme in grosse,
Is an vnlessoned girle, vnschool'd, vnpractis'd.
Happy in this, she is not yet so old
But she may learne: happier then this,
She is not bred so dull but she can learne;
Happiest of all, is that her gentle spirit
Commits it selfe to yours to be directed,
As from her Lord, her Governour, her King.
My selfe, and what is mine, to you and yours
Is now conserred. But now I was the Lord
Of this faire mansion, master of my seruants,
Queene o'er my selfe: and even now, but now,
This house, these seruants, and this same my selfe
Are yours, my Lord, I giue them with this ring,
Which when you part from, loose, or give away,
Let it presage the ruine of your loue,
And be my vantage to exclaime on you.

Bass. Madam, you haue bereft me of all words,
Onely my blood speakes to you in my veines,
And there is such confusion in my powers,
As after some oration fearefully spoke
By a beloued Prince, there doth appeare
Among the buzzing pleased multitude,
Where every something being blent together,
Turnes to a wilde of nothing, saue of Ioy
Expressd, and not expressd: but when this ring
Parts from this finger, then parts life from hence,
O then be bold to say Bassanio's dead.

Ner. My Lord and Lady, it is now our time
That haue stood by and seene our wishes prosper,
To cry good ioy, good ioy my Lord and Lady.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio, and my gentle Lady,
I wish you all the ioy that you can wish:
For I am sure you can wish none from me:
And when your Honours meane to solemnize
The bargaine of your faith: I doe beseech you
Even at that time I may be married too.

Bass. With all my heart, so thou canst get a wife.

Gra. I thanke your Lordship, you gaue got me one.
My eyes my Lord can looke as swift as yours:
You saw the mistres, I beheld the maid:
You lou'd, I lou'd for intermission,
No more pertaines to me my Lord then you;
Your fortune stood vpon the caskets there,
And so did mine too, as the matter falls:
For wooing heere vntill I swet againe,
And swearing till my very rough was dry
With oathes of loue, at last, if promise last,
I got a promise of this faire one heere
To haue her loue: provided that your fortune
Atchieu'd her mistresse.

Por. Is this true Nerrissa?

Ner. Madam it is so, so you stand pleas'd withall.

Bass. And doe you Gratiano mean good faith?

Gra. Yes faith my Lord.

Bass. Our feast shall be much honoured in your marriage.

Gra. We'le play with them the first boy for a thousand ducats.

Ner. What and stake downe?

Gra. No, we shal ne're win at that sport, and stake downe.
But who comes heere? Lorenzo and his Infidell?
What and my old Venetian friend Salerio?

Enter Lorenzo, Iessica, and Salerio.

Bass. Lorenzo and Salerio, welcome hether,
If that the youth of my new interest heere
Haue power to bid you welcome: by your leaue
I bid my verie friends and Countrimen
Sweet Portia welcome.

Por. So do I my Lord, they are intirely welcome.

Lor. I thanke your honor; for my part my Lord,
My purpose was not to haue seene you heere,
But meeting with Salerio by the way,
He did intreate me past all saying nay
To come with him along.

Sal. I did my Lord,
And I haue reason for it, Signior Antonio
Commends him to you.

Bass. Ere I ope his Letter
I pray you tell me how my good friend doth.

Sal. Not ficke my Lord, vnlesse it be in minde,
Nor well, vnlesse in minde: his Letter there
Will shew you his estate.

Opens the Letter.

Gra. Nerrissa, cheere your stranger, bid her welcom.
Your hand Salerio, what's the newes from Venice?
How doth that royal Merchant good Antonio?
I know he will be glad of our sucesse,
We are the Iasons, we haue won the fleece.

Sal. I would you had won the fleece that hee hath lost.

Por. There are some shrewd contents in yond same Paper,
That steales the colour from Bassanio cheeke,
Some deere friend dead, else nothing in the world
Could turne so much the constitution
Of any constant man. What, worse and worse?
With leaue Bassanio I am halfe your selfe,
And I must freely haue the halfe of any thing
That this same paper brings you.

Bass. O sweet Portia,
Heere are a few of the vnpleasant'st words
That ever blotted paper. Gentle Ladie
When I did first impart my loue to you,
I freely told you all the wealth I had
Ran in my veines: I was a Gentleman,
And then I told you true: and yet deere Ladie,
Rating my selfe at nothing, you shall see
How much I was a Braggart, when I told you
My state was nothing, I should then haue told you
That I was worse then nothing: for indeede
I haue ingag'd my selfe to a deere friend,
Ingag'd my friend to his meere enemie
To feede my meanes. Heere is a Letter Ladie,
The paper as the bodie of my friend,
And euerie word in it a gaping wound
Issuing life blood. But is it true Salerio,

Hath

Hath all his ventures faild, what not one hit,
From Tripolis, from Mexico and England,
From Lisbon, Barbary, and India,
And not one vessell scape the dreadfull touch
Of Merchant-marring rocks?
Sal. Not one my Lord.
Besides, it should appeare, that if he had
The present money to discharge the Iew,
He would not take it: never did I know
A creature that did bare the shape of man
So keene and greedy to confound a man.
He plyes the Duke at morning and at night,
And doth impeach the freedome of the State
If they deny him iustice. Twenty Merchants,
The Duke himselfe, and the Magnificoes
Of greatest port haue all perswaded with him,
But none can drive him from the enuious plea
Of forfeiture, of iustice, and his bond.
Iess. When I was with him, I haue heard him sweare
To Tubal and to Chus, his Counsell-men,
That he would rather haue Antonio's flesh,
Then twenty times the value of the summe
That he did owe him: and I know my Lord,
If law, authoritie, and power denie not,
It will goe hard with poore Antonio.
Por. Is it your deere friend that is thus in trouble?
Bas. The dearest friend to me, the kindest man,
The best condition'd, and vnwearied spirit
In doing curtesies: and one in whom
The ancient Romane honour more appeares
Then any that draws breath in Italie.
Por. What summe owes he the Iew?
Bas. For me three thousand ducats.
Por. What, no more?
Pay him six thousand, and deface the bond:
Double six thousand, and then treble thee,
Before a friend of this description
Shall lose a haire through Bassanio's fault.
First goe with me to Church, and call me wife,
And then away to Venice to your friend.
For never shall you lie by Portias side
With an vnquiet soule. You shall haue gold
To pay the petty debt twenty times ouer.
When it is payd, bring your true friend along.
My maid Nerissa, and my selfe meane time
Will liue as maids and widdowes; come away,
For you shall hence vpon your wedding day:
Bid your friends welcome, show a merry cheere,
Since you are deere bought, I will loue you deere.
But let me heare the letter of your friend.

Sweet Bassanio, my ships haue all miscarried, my Creditors grow cruell, my estate is very low, my bond to the Iew is forfeit, and since in paying it, it is impossible I should liue, all debts are cleard between you and I, if I might see you at my death: notwithstanding, vse your pleasure, if your loue doe not perswade you to come, let not my letter.

Por. O loue! dispach all busines and be gone.
Bas. Since I haue your good leaue to goe away,
I will make haste; but till I come again,
No bed shall ere be guilty of my stay,
Nor rest be interposer twixt vs twaine. Exeunt.

Enter the Iew, and Solanio, and Anthonio, and the Iaylor.

Iew. Iaylor, looke to him, tell not me of mercy,
This is the foole that lends out money gratis.
Iaylor, looke to him.
Ant. Heare me yet good Shylock,
Iew. Ile haue my bond, speake not against my bond,
I haue sworne an oath that I will haue my bond:
Thou call'dst me dog before thou hadst a cause,
But since I am a dog, beware my phangs,
The Duke shall grant me iustice, I do wonder
Thou naughty Iaylor, that thou art so fond
To come abroad with him at his request.
Ant. I pray thee heare me speake.
Iew. Ile heare my bond, I will not heare thee speake,
Ile haue my bond, and therefore speake no more.
Ile not be made a soft and dull ey'd foole,
To shake the head, relent, and sigh, and yeild
To Christian intercessors: follow not,
Ile heare no speaking, I will haue my bond Exit Iew
Sal. It is the most impenetrable cur
That euer kept with men.
Ant. Let him alone,
Ile follow him no more with bootlesse prayers:
He seekes my life, his reason well I know;
I oft deliuer'd from his forfeitures
Many that haue at times made moane to me,
Therefore he hates me.
Sol. I am sure the Duke will never grant
this forfeiture to hold.
An. The Duke cannot deny the course of law
For the commoditie that strangers haue
With vs in Venice, if it be denied,
Will much impeach the iustice of the State,
Since that the trade and profit of the city
Consisteth of all Nations. Therefore goe,
These greefes and losses haue so bated me,
That I shall hardly spare a pound of flesh
To morrow, to my bloody Creditor.
Well Iaylor, on, pray God Bassanio come
To see me pay his debt, and then I care not. Exeunt.

Enter Portia, Nerissa, Lorenzo, Iessica, and a man of Portias.

Lor. Madam, although I speake it in your presence,
You haue a noble and a true conceit
Of god-like amity, which appeares most strongly
In bearing thus the absence of your Lord.
But if you knew to whom you shew this honour,
How true a Gentleman you send releeue,
How deere a louer of my Lord your husband,
I know you would be prouder of the worke
Then customary bounty can enforce you.
Por. I never did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now: for in companions
That do conuerse and waste the time together,
Whose soules doe beare an egal yoke of loue,
There must be needes a like proportion
Of lyniaments, of manners, and of spirit;
Which makes me thinke that this Anthonio
Being the bosome louer of my Lord,
Must needs be like my Lord. If it be so,
How little is the cost I haue bestowed
In purchasing the semblance of my soule:
From out the state of hellish cruelty,
This comes too neere the praising of my selfe,
Therefore no more of it: heare other things
Lorenzo I commit into your hands,

The

The husbandry and manage of my house,
Vntill my Lords returne; for mine owne part
I haue toward heauen breath'd a secret vow,
To liue in prayer and contemplation,
Onely attended by Nerrissa here,
Vntill her husband and my Lords returne:
There is a monastery two miles off,
And there we will abide. I doe desire you
Not to denie this imposition,
The which my loue and some necessity
Now layes vpon you.

Lorenz. Madame, with all my heart,
I shall obey you in all fair commands.

Por. My people doe already know my minde,
And will acknowledge you and Iessica
In place of Lord Bassano and my selfe.
So fair you well till we shall meete againe.

Lor. Faire thoughts & happy houres attend on you.

Ies. I wish your Ladiship all hearts content.

Por. I thanke you for your wish, and am well pleas'd
To wish it backe on you: fare you well Iessica. Exeunt.
Now Balthasar, as I haue ever found thee honest true,
So let me finde thee still: take this same letter,
And vse thou all the endeauor of a man,
In speed to Mantua, see thou render this
Into my cosins hand, Doctor Belario,
And looke what notes and garments he doth giue thee,
Bring them I pray thee with imagin'd speed
Vnto the Traiect, to the common Ferrie
Which trades to Venice; waste no time in words,
But get thee gone, I shall be there before thee.

Balth. Madam, I goe with all conuenient speed.

Por. Come on Nerrissa, I haue worke in hand
That you yet know not of; we'll see our husbands
Before they thinke of vs?

Nerrissa. Shall they see vs?

Porcia. They shall Nerrissa: but in such a habit,
That they shall thinke we are accomplished
With that we lacke; I'le hold thee any wager
When we are both accoutered like yong men,
I'le prouse the prettier fellow of the two,
And weare my dagger with the brauer grace,
And speake betweene the change of man and boy,
With a reede voyce, and turne two mincing steps
Into a manly stride; and speake of frayes
Like a fine bragging youth: and tell quaint lyes
How honourable Ladies sought my loue,
Which I denying, they fell sicke and died.
I could not doe withall: then I'le repent,
And wish for all that, that I had not kil'd them;
And twenty of these puney lies I'le tell,
That men shall sweare I haue discontinued schoole
Aboue a twelue moneth: I haue within my minde
A thousand raw tricks of these bragging Iacks,
Which I will practise.

Nerris. Why, shall wee become to men?

Porcia. Fie, what a questions that?
If thou wert nere a lewd interpreter:
But come. I'le tell thee all my whole deuice
When I am in my coach, which stayes for vs
At the Parke gate; and therefore haste away,
For we must measure twenty miles to day. Exeunt.

Enter Clowne and Iessica.

Clown. Yes truly; for looke you, the sinnes of the Father are to be laid vpon the children, therefore I promise you, I feare you, I was alwaies plaine with you, and so now I speake my agitation of the matter: therfore be of good cheere, for truly I thinke you are damn'd, there is but one hope in it that can doe you any good, and that is but a kinde of bastard hope neither.

Iessica. And what hope is that I pray thee?

Clow. Marrie you may partlie hope that your father got you not, that you are not the Iewes daughter.

Ies. That were a kinde of bastard hope indeed, so the sins of my mother should be visited vpon me.

Clow. Truly then I feare you are damned both by father and mother: thus when I shun Scilla your father, I fall into Charibda your mother; well, you are gone both waies.

Ies. I shall be sau'd by my husband, he hath made me a Christian.

Clow. Truly the more to blame he, we were Christians enow before, e'ne as many as could well liue one by another: this making of Christians will raise the price of Hogs, if wee grow all to be porke-eaters, wee shall not shortlie haue a rasher on the coales for money.

Enter Lorenzo.

Ies. I'le tell my husband Lancelot what you say, heere he comes.

Loren. I shall grow iealous of you shortly Lancelot, if you thus get my wife into corners?

Ies. Nay, you need not feare vs Lorenzo, Lancelot and I are out, he tells me flatly there is no mercy for mee in heauen, because I am a Iewes daughter: and hee saies you are no good member of the commonwealth, for in conuerting Iewes to Christians, you raise the price of Porke.

Loren. I shall answere that better to the Commonwealth, than you can the getting vp of the Negroes belly: the Moore is with childe by you Lancelot?

Clow. It is much that the Moore should be more then reason: but if she be lesse then an honest woman, shee is indeed more then I tooke her for.

Loren. How euerie foole can play vpon the word, I thinke the best grace of witte will shortly turne into silence, and discourse grow commendable in none onely but Parrots: goe in sirra, bid them prepare for dinner?

Clow. That is done sir, they haue all stomacks?

Loren. Goodly Lord, what a wittie-sninpper are you, then bid them prepare dinner

Clow. That is done too sir, onely couer is the word

Loren. Will you couer then sir?

Clow. Not so sir neither, I know my duty.

Loren. Yet more quarrelling with occasion, wilt thou shew the whole wealth of thy wit in an instant; I pray thee vnderstand a plaine man in his plaine meaning: goe to thy fellowes, bid them couer the table, serue in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Clow. For the table sir, it shall be seru'd in, for the meat sir, it shall bee couered, for your comming in to dinner sir, why let it be as humors and conceits shall gouerne. Exit Clowne.

Lor. O dearе discretion, how his words are suited,
The foole hath planted in his memory
An Armie of good words, and I doe know
A many fooles that stand in better place,
Garnisht like him, that for a tricksie word
Defie the matter: how cheer'st thou Iessica,
And now good sweet say thy opinion,

How

How doſt thou like the Lord Baſſanio's wife?
Ioſſ. Paſt all expreſſing, it is very meete
The Lord Baſſanio liue an vpright life
For hauing ſuch a bleſſing in his Lady,
He findes the loyes of heauen heere on earth,
And if on earth he doe not meane it, it
Is reaſon he ſhould never come to heauen?
Why, if two gods ſhould play ſome heauenly match,
And on the wager lay two earthly women,
And Portia one: there muſt be ſomething elſe
Pauned with the other, for the poore rude world
Hath not her fellow.
Lorenzo. Even ſuch a husband
Haſt thou of me, as ſhe is for a wife.
Ioſſ. Nay, but aske my opinion to of that?
Lor. I will anone, firſt let vs goe to dinner?
Ioſſ. Nay, let me preiſe you while I haue a ſtomache?
Lor. No pray thee, let it ſerue for table talke,
Then how ſoon ere thou ſpeakſt 'mong other things,
I ſhall digeſt it?
Ioſſ. Well, Ile ſet you forth. Exeunt

Actus Quartus.

Enter the Duke, the Magnificoes, Anthonio, Baſſanio, and Gratiano.

Duke. What, is Anthonio heere?
Ant. Ready, ſo pleaſe your grace?
Duke. I am ſorry for thee, thou art come to anſwere
A ſtonie aduerſary, an inhumane wretch,
Vncapable of pitty, voyd, and empty
From any dram of mercie.
Ant. I haue heard
Your Grace hath tane great pames to qualiſie
His rigorous courſe: but ſince he ſtands obdurate,
And that no lawful meanes can carre me
Out of his enmies reach, I do oppoſe
My patience to his fury, and am arm'd
To ſuffer with a quietneſſe of ſpirit,
The very tiranny and rage of his.
Du. Go one and cal the Iew into the Court.
Sal. He is ready at the doore, he comes my Lord.

Enter Shylocke.

Du. Make roome, and let him ſtand before our face.
Shylocke the world thinkes, and I thinke ſo to
That thou but leadeſt this fashion of thy mallice
To the laſt houre of act, and then 'tis thought
Thou'lt ſhew thy mercy and remorſe more ſtrange,
Than is thy ſtrange apparant cruelty;
And where thou now exact'ſt the penalty,
Which is a pound of this poore Merchants flеſh,
Thou wilt not only loofe the forfeiture,
But touch'd with humane gentleneſſe and loue:
Forgiue a moytie of the principall,
Glancing an eye of pitty on his loſſes
That haue of late ſo hudled on his backe,
Enow to preſſe a royall Merchant downe;
And pluckе commiſeration of his ſtate
From braſſe boſomes, and rough hearts of flint,
From ſtubborne Turkes and Tartars never trained
To offices of tender curteſie,
We all expect a gentle anſwer Iew?
Iew. I have poſſeſt your grace of what I purpoſe,
And by our holy Sabbath haue I ſworne
To haue the due and forfeit of my bond.
If you denie it, let the danger light
Vpon your Charter, and your Cities freedome.
You'l aske me why I rather chooſe to haue
A weight of carrion flеſh, then to receiue
Three thouſand Ducats? He not anſwer that:
But ſay it is my humor; Is it anſwered?
What if my houſe be troubled with a Rat,
And I be pleas'd to giue ten thouſand Ducates
To haue it bain'd? What, are you anſwer'd yet?
Some men there are loue not a gaping Pigge:
Some that are mad, if they behold a Cat:
And others, when the bag-pipe ſings i'th noſe,
Cannot containe their Vrine for affection.
Maſters of paſſion ſwayes it to the moode
Of what it likes or loaths, now for your anſwer:
As there is no firme reaſon to be rendred
Why he cannot abide a gaping Pigge?
Why he a harmleſſe neceſſarie Cat?
Why he a woollen bag-pipe: but of force
Muſt yeeld to ſuch inuitable ſhame,
As to offend himſelfe being offended:
So can I giue no reaſon, nor I will not,
More then a lodg'd hate, and a certaine loathing
I beare Anthonio, that I follow thus
A loofing ſuite againſt him? Are you anſwered?
Baſſ. This is no anſwer thou vnfeeling man,
To excuſe the current of thy cruelty.
Iew. I am not bound to pleaſe thee with my anſwer.
Baſſ. Do all men kill the things they do not loue?
Iew. Hates any man the thing he would not kill?
Baſſ. Euerie offence is not a hate at firſt.
Iew. What wouldſt thou haue a Serpent ſting thee twice?
Ant. I pray you thinke you queſtion with the Iew:
You may as well go ſtand vpon the beach,
And bid the maine flood bate his vſuall height,
Or euen as well vſe queſtion with the Wolfe,
The Ewe bleate for the Lambe:
You may as well forbid the Mountaine Pines
To wagge their high tops, and to make no noiſe
When they are fretted with the guſts of heauen:
You may as well do any thing moſt hard,
As ſeeke to ſoften that, then which what harder?
His Iewiſh heart. Therefore I do beſeech you
Make no more offers, vſe no farther meanes,
But with all briefe and plaine conuenience
Let me haue iudgement, and the Iew his will.
Baſſ. For thy three thouſand Ducates heereis ſix.
Iew. If euerie Ducat in ſixe thouſand Ducates
Were in ſixe parts, and every part a Ducate,
I would not draw them, I would haue my bond?
Du. How ſhalt thou hope for mercie, rendring none?
Iew. What iudgement ſhall I dread doing no wrong?
You haue among you many a purchaſt ſlaue,
Which like your Aſſes, and your Dogs and Mules,
You vſe in abiect and in ſlauiſh parts,
Becauſe you bought them. Shall I ſay to you,
Let them be free, marrie them to your heires?
Why ſwette they vnder burthens? Let their beds
Be made as ſoft as yours: and let their pallats
Be ſeaſon'd with ſuch Viands: you will anſwer

The

The stuiers are ours. So do I answer you.
The pound of flesh which I demand of him
Is dearely bought, 'tis mine, and I will haue it.
If you deny me; fie vpon your Law,
There is no force in the decrees of Venice;
I stand for iudgement, answer, Shall I haue it?

Du. Vpon my power I may dismisse this Court,
Vnlesse Bellario a learned Doctor,
Whom I haue sent for to determine this,
Come heere to day.

Sal. My Lord, heere stayes without
A Messenger with Letters from the Doctor,
New come from Padua.

Du. Bring vs the Letters, Call the Messengers.

Bas. Good cheere Anthonio. What man, courage yet:
The Iew shall haue my flesh, blood, bones, and all,
Ere thou shalt loose for me one drop of blood.

Ant. I am a tainted Weather of the flocke,
Meetest for death, the weakest kinde of fruite
Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me;
You cannot better be employ'd Bassanio,
Then to liue still, and write mine Epitaph.

Enter Nerissa.

Du. Came you from Padua from Bellario?

Ner. From both.
My Lord Bellario greets your Grace.

Bas. Why dost thou whet thy knife so earnestly?

Iew. To cut the forfeiture from that bankrout there.

Gra. Not on thy sole: but on thy soule harsh Iew
Thou mak'st thy knife keene: but no mettall can,
No, not the hangmans Axe beare halfe the keennesse
Of thy sharpe enuy. Can no prayers pierce thee?

Iew. No, none that thou hast wit enough to make.

Gra. O be thou damn'd, inexecrable dogge,
And for thy life let Iustice be accus'd:
Thou almost mak'st me wauer in my faith;
To hold opinion with Pythagoras,
That soules of Animals infuse themselues
Into the trunkes of men. Thy currish spirit
Gouern'd a Wolfe, who hang'd for humane slaughter,
Euen from the gallowes did his fell soule fleet;
And whil'st thou layest in thy vnhallowed dam,
Infus'd it selfe in thee: For thy desires
Are Wolfish, bloody, starn'd, and rauenous.

Iew. Till thou canst raile the seale from off my bond
Thou but offend'st thy Lungs to speake so loud:
Repaire thy wit good youth, or it will fall
To endlesse ruine. I stand heere for Law.

Du. This Letter from Bellario doth commend
A young and Learned Doctor in our Court;
Where is he?

Ner. He attendeth heere hard by
To know your answer, whether you'l admit him.

Du. With all my heart. Some three or foure of you
Go giue him curteous conduct to this place,
Meane time the Court shall heare Bellarios Letter.

YOur Grace shall vnderstand, that at the receiue of your Letter I am very sicke: but in the instant that your messenger came, in louing visitation, was with me a young Doctor of Rome, his name is Balthasar: I acquainted him with the cause in Controuersie, between the Iew and Anthonio the Merchant: we turn'd ore many Bookes together: he is furnished with my opinion, which better'd with his own learning, the greatnesse whereof I cannot enough commend, comes with him at my importunity, to fill vp your Graces request in my stead. I beseech you, let his lacke of years be no impediment to let him lacke a reuerend estimation: for I never knew so young a body, with so old a head. I leaue him to your gracious acceptance, whose trial shall better publish his commendation.

Enter Portia for Balthazar

Duke. You heare the learn'd Bellario what he writes,
And heere (I take it) is the Doctor come.
Giue me your hand: Came you from old Bellario?

Por. I did my Lord.

Du. You are welcome: take your place;
Are you acquainted with the difference
That holds this present question in the Court.

Por. I am enformed throughly of the cause
Which is the Merchant heere? and which the Iew?

Du. Anthonio and old Shylocke, both stand forth.

Por. Is your name Shylocke?

Iew. Shylocke is my name.

Por. Of a strange nature is the suite you follow,
Yet in such rule, that the Venetian Law
Cannot impugne you as you do proceed.
You stand within his danger, do you not?

Ant. I, so he sayes.

Por. Do you confesse the bond?

Ant. I do.

Por. Then must the Iew be merciful.

Iew. On what compulsion must I? Tell me that.

Por The quaiity of mercy is not strain'd,
It droppeth as the gentle raine from heauen
Vpon the place beneath. It is twice blest,
It blesseth him that giues, and him that takes,
'Tis mightiest in the mightiest, it becomes
The thronED Monarch better then his Crowne.
His Scepter shewes the force of temporall power,
The attribute to awe and Maiestie,
Wherein doth sit the dread and feare of Kings:
But mercy is aboue this sceptred sway,
It is enthroned in the hearts of Kings,
It is an attribute to God himselfe;
And earthly power doth then shew likest Gods
When mercie seasons Iustice. Therefore Iew,
Though Iustice be thy plea, consider this.
That in the course of Iustice, none of vs
Should see saluation: we do pray for mercie,
And that same prayer, doth teach vs all to render
The deeds of mercie. I haue spoke thus much
To mitigate the Iustice of thy plea:
Which if thou follow, this strict course of Venice
Must needes giue sentence 'gainst the Merchant there.

Shy. My deeds vpon my head, I craue the Law,
The penaltie and forfeite of my bond.

Por. Is he not able to discharge the money

Bas. Yes, heere I tender it for him in the Court
Yea, twice the summe, if that will not suffice,
I will be bound to pay it ten times ore,
On forfeit of my hands, my head, my heart
If this will not suffice, it must appeare
That malice beares downe truth. And I beseech you
Wrest once the Law to your authority,
To do a great right, do a little wrong,
And curbe this cruell diuell of his will.

Por. It must not be, there is no power in Venice
Can alter a decree established:
Twill be recorded for a Precident,

And

And many an error by the same example,
Will rush into the state: It cannot be.
Iew. A Daniel come to iudgement, yea a Daniel.
O wise young Iudge, how do I honour thee.
Por. I pray you let me looke vpon the bond.
Iew. Heere 'tis most reuerend Doctor, heere it is.
Por. Shylocke, there's thrice thy monie offered thee.
Shy An oath, an oath, I haue an oath in heauen:
Shall I lay periurie vpon my soule?
No not for Venice.
Por. Why this bond is forfeit.
And lawfully by this the Iew may claime
A pound of flesh, to be by him cut off
Neerest the Merchants heart; be merciffull,
Take thrice thy money, bid me teare the bond
Iew When it is paid according to the tenure.
It doth appeare you are a worthy Iudge
you know the Law, your exposition
Hath beene most sound. I charge you by the Law,
Whereof you are a well-deseruing pillar,
Proceede to iudgement: By my soule I sweare,
There is no power in the tongue of man
To alter me: I stay heere on my bond.
An. Most heartily I do beseech the Court
To giue the iudgement.
Por. Why then thus it is:
you must prepare your bosome for his knife.
Iew O noble Iudge, O excellent yong man.
Por. For the intent and purpose of the Law
Hath full relation to the penalte,
Which heere appeareth due vpon the bond.
Iew. 'Tis very true: O wise and vpright Iudge,
How much more elder art thou than thy lookes?
Por. Therefore lay bare your bosome.
Iew. I, his breft,
So says the bond, doth it not noble Iudge?
Neerest his heart, those are the very words.
Por It is so: Are there ballance heere to weigh the flesh?
Iew. I haue them ready.
Por. Haue by some Surgeon Shylock on your charge
To stop his wounds, leaft he should bleede to death.
Iew It is not nominated in the bond?
Por It is not so expreft: but what of that?
Twere good you do so much for charitie.
Iew. I cannot finde it, 'tis not in the bond.
Por. Come Merchant, haue you any thing to say?
Ant. But little: I am arm'd and well prepar'd.
Giue me your hand Bassanio, fare you well.
Greeue not that I am fallne to this for you:
For heerein fortune shewes her selfe more kinde
Then is her custome. It is still her vse
To let the wretched man out-liue his wealth,
To view with hollow eye, and wrinkled brow
An age of poueryy. From which lingring penance
Of such miserie, doth she cut me off:
Commend me to your honourable Wife,
Tell her the processe of Anthonio's end:
Say how I lou'd you; speake me fare in death:
And when the tale is told, bid her be iudge,
Whether Bassanio had not once a Loue:
Repent not you that you shall loose your friend,
And he repents not that he payes your debt.
For if the Iew do cut but deepe enough,
Ile pay it instantly, with all my heart.
Bas. Anthonio, I am married to a wife,
Which is as deare to me as life is selfe,
But life is selfe, my wife, and all the world,
Are not with me esteem'd aboue thy life.
I would loose all, I sacrifice them all
Heere to this diuell, to deliuer you
Por Your wife would giue you little thanks for that
If she were by to heare you make the offer.
Gra. I haue a wife whom I protest I loue,
I would she were in heauen, so she could
Intreat some power to change this currish Iew.
Ner 'Tis well you offer it behinde her backe,
The wish would make else an vnquiet house. (ter
Iew. These be the Christian husbands: I haue a daugh-
Would any of the stocke of Barrabas
Had beene her husband, rather then a Christian.
We trifle time, I pray thee pursue sentence.
Por. A pound of that same marchants flesh is thine,
The Court awards it, and the law doth giue it.
Iew Most righteous Iudge.
Por. And you must cut this flesh from off his breast.
The Law allowes it, and the Court awards it.
Iew. Most learned Iudge, a sentence, come prepare.
Por. Tarry a little, there is something else,
This bond doth giue thee heere no iot of blood,
The words expressly are a pound of flesh:
Then take thy bond, take thou thy pound of flesh,
But in the cutting it, if thou dost shed
One drop of Christian blood, thy lands and goods
Are by the Lawes of Venice confiscate
Vnto the state of Venice.
Gra. O vpright Iudge,
Marke Iew, o learned Iudge.
Shy Is that the law
Por. Thy selfe shall see the Act:
For as thou vrgest iustice, be assur'd
Thou shalt haue iustice more then thou desirest.
Gra. O learned Iudge. mark Iew, a learned Iudge.
Iew. I take this offer then, pay the bond thrice,
And let the Christian goe
Bass. Heere is the money.
Por. Soft, the Iew shall haue all iustice, soft, no haste,
He shall haue nothing but the penalty.
Gra. O Iew, an vpright Iudge, a learned Iudge.
Por. Therefore prepare thee to cut off the flesh,
Shed thou no blood, nor cut thou lesse nor more
But just a pound of flesh: if thou tak'st more
Or lesse then a iust pound, be it so much
As makes it light or heauy in the substance,
Or the deuision of the twentieth part
Of one poore scruple, nay if the scale doe turne
But in the estimation of a hayre,
Thou dieft, and all thy goods are confiscate.
Gra A second Daniel, a Daniel Iew,
Now infidell I haue thee on the hip.
Por. Why doth the Iew pause, take thy forfeiture.
Shy. Giue me my principall, and let me goe.
Bass. I haue it ready for thee, heere it is.
Por. He hath refus'd it in the open Court,
He shall haue merely iustice and his bond.
Gra. A Daniel still say I, a second Daniel,
I thanke thee Iew for teaching me that word.
Shy Shall I not haue barely my principall?
Por. Thou shalt haue nothing but the forfeiture,
To be taken so as thy perill Iew.
Shy. Why then the Deuill giue him good of it
Ile stay no longer question.

Por. Tarry

Por. Tury Iew,
The Law hath yet another hold on you.
It is enacted in the Lawes of Venice,
If it be proued against an Alien,
That by direct, or indirect attempts
He seeke the life of any Citizen,
The party gainst the which he doth contriue,
Shall seeze one halfe his goods, the other halfe
Comes to the priuie coffer of the State,
And the offenders life lies in the mercy
Of the Duke onely, gainst all other voice.
In which predicament I say thou standst:
For it appeares by manifest proceeding,
That indirectly, and directly too:
Thou hast contriu'd against the very life
Of the defendant: and thou hast incur'd
The danger formerly by mentioned.
Downe therefore, and beg mercy of the Duke.
Gra. Beg that thou maist haue leaue to hang thy selfe,
And yet thy wealth being forfeit to the State,
Thou hast not left the value of a cord,
Therefore thou must be hang'd at the States charge.
Duke. That thou shalt see the difference of our spirit,
I pardon thee thy life before thou aske it:
For halfe thy wealth, it is Antonio's,
The other halfe comes to the generall State,
Which humblenesse may driue vnto a fine.
Por. I for the State, not for Antonio.
Shy. Nay, take my life and all, pardon not that,
You take my house, when you do take the prop
That doth sustaine my house: you take my life
When you doe take the meanes whereby I liue.
Por What mercy can you render him Antonio?
Gra. A halter gratis, nothing else for Gods sake
Ant. So please my Lord the Duke, and all the Court
To quit the fine for one halfe of his goods,
I am content: so he will let me haue
The other halfe in vse, to render it
Vpon his death, vnto the Gentleman
That lately stole his daughter.
Two things prouided more, that for this fauour
He presently become a Christian:
The other, that he doe record a gift
Heere in the Court of all he dies possest
Vnto his sonne Lorenzo, and his daughter.
Duke. He shall doe this, or else I doe recant
The pardon that I late pronounced heere.
Por. Art thou contented Iew? what dost thou say?
Shy. I am content.
Por. Clerke, draw a deed of gift.
Shy. I pray you giue me leaue to goe from hence,
I am not well, send the deed after me.
And I will signe it.
Duke. Get thee gone, but doe it.
Gra. In christening thou shalt haue two godfathers,
Had I been iudge, thou shouldst haue had ten more,
To bring thee to the gallowes, not to the font. Exit.
Du. Sir I intreat you with me home to dinner.
Por. I humbly doe desire your Grace of pardon,
I must away this night toward Padua,
And it is meere I presently set forth.
Duke. I am sorry that your leysure serues you not:
Antonio, gratifie this gentleman,
For in my minde you are much bound to him.
Exit Duke and his traine.
Bass. Most worthy gentleman, I and my friend
Haue by your wisedome beene this day acquitted
Of grieuous penalties, in lieu whereof,
Three thousand Ducats doe vnto the Iew
We freely cope your courteous paines withall.
Ant. And stand indebted ouer and aboue
In loue and seruice to you euermore.
Por. He is well paid that is well satisfied,
And I deliuering you, am satisfied,
And therein doe account my selfe well paid,
My minde was neuer yet more mercenarie.
I pray you know me when we meete againe,
I will you well, and so I take my leaue.
Bass. Deare sir, of force I must attempt you further,
Take some remembrance of vs as a tribute,
Not as fee: grant me two things, I pray you
Not to denie me, and to pardon me.
Por. You presse mee farre, and therefore I will yeeld,
Giue me your gloues, I'le weare them for your sake,
And for your loue I'le take this ring from you,
Doe not draw back your hand, I'le take no more,
And you in loue shall not deny me this?
Bass. This ring good sir, alas it is a trifle,
I will not shame my selfe to giue you this.
Por. I will haue nothing else but onely this,
And now methinkes I haue a minde to it.
Bass There's more depends on this then on the valew,
The dearest ring in Venice will I giue you,
And find it out by proclamation,
Onely for this I pray you pardon me.
Por. I see sir you are liberall in offers,
You taught me first to beg, and now me thinkes
You teach me how a beggar should be answer'd,
Bass. Good sir, this ring was giuen me by my wife,
And when she put it on, she made me vow
That I should neither sell, nor giue, nor lose it.
Por. That scuse serues many men to saue their gifts,
And if your wife be not a mad woman,
And know how well I haue deserued this ring,
Shee would not hold out enemy for euer
For giuing it to me: well, peace be with you. Exeunt.
Ant. My L. Bassanio, let him haue the ring,
Let his deseruings and my loue withall
Be valued against your wiues commandement.
Bass. Goe Gratiano, run and ouer-take him,
Giue him the ring, and bring him if thou canst
Vnto Antonio's house, away, make haste. Exit Grati.
Come, you and I will thither presently,
And in the morning early will we both
Flie toward Belmont, come Antonio. Exeunt.

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. Enquire the Iewes house out, giue him this deed,
And let him signe it, we'l away to night,
And be a day before our husbands home:
This deed will be well welcome to Lorenzo.
Enter Gratiano.
Gra. Faire sir, you are well ore-taken:
My L. Bassanio vpon more aduice,
Hath sent you heere this ring, and doth intreat
Your company at dinner.
Por. That cannot be;
His ring I doe accept most thankfully
And so I pray you tell him: furthermore,
I pray you shew my youth old Shylocke's house.
Gra. That will I doe.
Ner. Sir, I would speake with you:

Ile see if I can get my husbands ring
Which I did make him sweare to keepe for ever
Por. Thou maist I warrant, we shal have old swearing
That they did give the rings away to men;
But were out-face them, and out-sweare them to:
Away, make haste, thou know st where I will tarry.
Ner. Come good sir, will you shew me to this house.
Exeunt.

Actus Quintus.

Enter Lorenzo and Iessica.

Lor. The moone shines bright. In such a night as this,
When the sweet winde did gently kisse the trees,
And they did make no noyse, in such a night
Troylus me thinkes mounted the Troian walls,
And sigh'd his soule toward the Grecian tents
Where Cressid lay that night.
Ios. In such a night
Did Thisbe fearefully ore-trip the dewe,
And saw the Lyons shadow ere himselfe.
And ranne dismayed away
Lorenz. In such a night
Stood Dido with a Willow in her hand
Vpon the wilde sea banks, and wafi her Loue
To come again to Carthage
Ios. In such a night
Medea gathered the enchanted herbs
That did renew old Eson.
Lorenz. In such a night
Did Iessica steale from the wealthy Iewe,
And with an Vnthrift Loue did runne from Venice,
As farre as Belmont.
Ios. In such a night
Did young Lorenzo sweare he lou'd her well,
Stealing her soule with many vowes of faith
And nere a true one.
Lorenz. In such a night
Did pretty Iessica (like a little shrew)
Slander her Loue, and he forgaue it her.
Ios. I would out-night you did no body come:
But harke, I heare the footing of a man.

Enter Messenger.

Lor. Who comes so fast in silence of the night?
Mes. A friend. (friend?
Lorenz. A friend, what friend? your name I pray you
Mes. Stephano is my name, and I bring word
My Mistresse will before the breake of day
Be heere at Belmont, she doth stray about
By holy crosses where she kneeles and prayes
For happy wedlocke houres.
Lorenz. Who comes with her?
Mes. None but a holy Hermit and her maid:
I pray you is my Master yet return'd?
Lorenz. He is not, nor we haue not heard from him,
But goe we in I pray thee Iessica,
And ceremoniously let vs vs prepare
Some welcome for the Mistresse of the house,

Enter Clowne.

Clo. Sola, sola. wo ha ho, sola, sola.
Lorenz. Who calls?
Clo. Sola, did you see M. Lorenzo, & M. Lorenzo, sola,
Lor. Leave hollowing man, heere. (sola,
Clo. Sola, where, where?
Lor. Heere?
Clo. Tel him ther's a Post come from my Master, with his horne full of good newes, my Master will be here ere morning sweet soule.
Lorenz. Let's in, and there expect their comming.
And yet no matter: why should we goe in?
My friend Stephano, signifie pray you
Within the house, your Mistresse is at hand,
And bring your musique sooth into the ayre.
How sweet the moone-light sleepes vpon this banke,
Heere will we sit, and let the sounds of musicke
Creepe in our eares soft stillnes, and the night
Become the tutches of sweet harmonie:
Sit Iessica, looke how the floore of heauen
Is thicke inlayed with patterne of bright gold,
There's not the smallest orbe which thou beholdst
But in his motion like an Angell sings,
Still quiring to the young eyed Cherubins;
Such harmonie is in immortall soules,
But whilst this muddy vesture of decay
Doth grosse close in it, we cannot heare it:
Come hoe, and wake Diana with a hymne,
With sweetest tutches pearce your Mistresse eare,
And draw her home with musicke.
Iess. I am never merry when I heare sweet musique
Play musicke.
Lor. The reason is, your spirits are attentive:
For doe but note a wilde and wanton heard
Or race of youthful and vnhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds, bellowing and neighing loud,
Which is the hot condition of their blood,
If they but heare perchance a trumpet sound,
Or any ayre of musicke touch their eares,
You shall perceiue them make a mutuall stand,
Their savage eyes turn'd to a modest gaze,
By the sweet power of musicke: therefore the Poet
Did faine that Orpheus drew trees, stones, and floods.
Since nought so stockish, hard, and full of rage,
But musicke for time doth change his nature,
The man that hath no musicke in himselfe,
Nor is not moued with concord of sweet sounds,
Is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoyles,
The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
And his affections darke as Erebus,
Let no such man be trusted: marke the musicke

Enter Portia and Nerrissa.

Por. That light we see is burning in my hall:
How far that little candell throwes his beames,
So shines a good deed in a naughty world. (shine?
Ner. When the moone shone we did not see the can
Por. So doth the greater glory dim the lesse,
A subtituite shines brightly as a King
Vntill a King be by, and then his state
Empties it selfe, as doth an inland brooke
Into the maine of waters: musique, harke. Musicke
Ner. It is your musicke Madame of the house
Por. Nothing is good I see without respect,
Methinkes it sounds much sweeter then by day?
Ner. Silence bestowes that vertue on it Madam
Por. The Crow doth sing as sweetly as the larke
When

When neither I attended: and I thinke
The Nightingale if she should sing by day
When every Goose is cackling, would be thought
No better a Musitian than the Wren:
How many things by season, season'd are
To their right praise, and true perfection:
Peace, how the Moone sleepes with Endimion,
And would not be awak'd

Musicke ceases.

Lor. That is the voice,
Or I am much deceiu'd of Portia.

Por. He knowes me as the blinde man knowes the Cuckow by the bad voice?

Lor. Deere Lady welcome home.

Por. We have been praying for our husbands welfare
Which speed we hope the better for our words,
Are they return'd?

Lor. Madam, they are not yet:
But there is come a Messenger before
To signifie their comming.

Por. Go in Nerrissa,
Giue order to my seruants, that they take
No note at all of our being absent hence,
Nor you Lorenzo, Iessica nor you.

A Tucke sounds.

Lor. Your husband is at hand, I heare his Trumpet,
We are no tell-tales Madam, feare you not.

Por. This night methinkes is but the daylight sicke,
It lookes a little paler, 'tis a day,
Such as the day is, when the Sun is hid.

Enter Bassanio, Antonio, Gratiano, and their Followers.

Bas. We should hold day with the Antipodes,
If you would walke in absence of the sunne.

Por. Let me giue light, but let me not be light,
For a light wife doth make a heauie husband,
And never be Bassanio so for me,
But God sort all: you are welcome home my Lord.

Bas. I thanke you Madam, giue welcome to my friend
This is the man, this is Antonio,
To whom I am so infinitely bound.

Por. You should in all sence be much bound to him,
For as I heare he was much bound for you.

Ant. No more then I am well acquitted of.

Por. Sir, you are verie welcome to our house:
It must appeare in other writes then words,
Therefore I feare this breathing curtesie.

Gra. By yonder Moone I sweare you do me wrong,
In faith I gaue it to the Iudges Clerke,
Would he were gelt that had it for my part,
Since you do take it Loue so much at hart.

Por. A quarrel hoe already, what's the matter?

Gra. About a hoope of Gold, a paltry Ring
That she did giue me, whose Poesie was
For all the world like Cutlers Poetry
Vpon a knife; Loue me, and leaue me not.

Ner. What talke you of the Poesie or the valew:
You swore to me when I did giue it you,
That you would weare it til the houre of death,
And that it should lye with you in your graue,
Though not for me, yet for your vehement oaths,
You should haue beene respective and haue kept it.
Gaue it a Iudges Clearke: but wel I know
The Clearke will nere weare haire on's face that had it.

Gra. He will, and if he liue to be a man.

Nerrissa. I, if a Woman liue to be a man.

Gra. Now by this hand I gaue it to a youth,
A kinde of boy, a little scrubbed boy,
No higher than thy selfe, the Iudges Clearke,
A prating boy that begg'd it as a Fee,
I could not for my heart deny it him.

Por. You were too blame, I must be plaine with you
To part so slightly with your wiues first gift,
A thing stucke on with oathes vpon your finger,
And so riueted with faith vnto your flesh.
I gaue my Loue a Ring, and made him sweare
Never to part with it, and here he stands:
I dare be sworne for him, he would not leaue it,
Nor pluck it from his finger, for the wealth
That the world masters. Now in faith Gratiano,
You giue your wife too vnkinde a cause of greefe,
And 'twere to me I should be mad at it.

Bas. Why I were best to cut my left hand off,
And sweare I lost the Ring defending it.

Gra. My Lord Bassanio gaue his Ring away
Vnto the Iudge that beg'd it, and indeede
Deseru'd it too: and then the Boy his Clearke
That tooke some paines in writing, he begg'd mine,
And neyther man nor master would take ought
But the two Rings.

Por. What Ring gaue you my Lord?
Not that I hope which you receiu'd of me.

Bas. If I could add a lie vnto a fault,
I would deny it: but you see my finger
Hath not the Ring vpon it, it is gone.

Por. Even so void is your false heart of truth,
By heauen I wil nere come in your bed
Vntil I see the Ring.

Ner. Nor I in yours, til I againe see mine.

Bas. Sweet Portia,
If you did know to whom I gaue the Ring,
If you did know for whom I gaue the Ring,
And would conceiue for what I gaue the Ring,
And how vnwillingly I left the Ring,
When nought would be accepted but the Ring,
You would abate the strength of your displeasure?

Por. If you had knowne the vertue of the Ring,
Or halfe her worthinesse that gaue the Ring,
Or your owne honour to containe the Ring,
You would not then haue parted with the Ring:
What man is there so much vnreasonable,
If you had pleas'd to haue defended it
With any termes of Zeale: wanted the modestie
To vrge the thing held as a ceremonie:
Nerrissa teaches me what to believe,
Ile die for't, but some Woman had the Ring?

Bas. No by mine honor Madam, by my soule
No Woman had it, but a civill Doctor,
Which did refuse three thousand Ducates of me,
And beg'd the Ring; the which I did denie him,
And suffer'd him to go displeas'd away:
Euen he that had held vp the verie life
Of my deere friend. What should I say sweete Lady?
I was inforc'd to send it after him,
I was beset with shame and curtesie,
My honor would not let ingratitude
So much besmeare it. Pardon me good Lady,
And by these blessed Candles of the night,
Had you bene there, I thinke you would haue beg'd
The Ring of me, to giue the worthie Doctor?

Por. Let not that Doctor ere come neere my house,
Since he hath got the iewell that I loued,
And that which you did sweare to keepe for me,
I will become as liberall as you,
Ile not deny him any thing I haue,
No, not my body, nor my husbands bed:
Know him I shall, I am well sure of it.
Lie not a night from home. Watch me like Argos,
If you doe not, if I be left alone,
Now by mine honour which is yet mine owne,
Ile haue the Doctor for my bedfellow.

Nerrissa. And I his Clarke: therefore be well aduis'd
How you doe leane me to mine owne protection.

Gra. Well, doe you so: let not me take him then,
For if I doe, ile mar the yong Clarks pen.

Ant. I am th'vnhappy subiect of these quarrels.

Por. Sir, grieue not you,
You are welcome notwithstanding.

Bas. Portia, forgiue me this enforced wrong,
And in the hearing of these manie friends
I sweare to thee, euen by thine owne faire eyes
Wherein I see my selfe

Por. Marke you but that?
In both my eyes he doubly sees himselfe:
In each eye one, sweare by your double selfe,
And there's an oath of credit

Bas. Nay, but heare me.
Pardon this fault, and by my soule I sweare
I never more will breake an oath with thee.

Anth. I once did lend my bodie for thy wealth,
Which but for him that had your husbands ring
Had quite miscarried. I dare be bound againe,
My soule vpon the forfeit, that your Lord
Will never more breake faith aduisedlie

Por. Then you shall be his suretie: giue him this,
And bid him keepe it better then the other.

Ant. Heere Lord Bassanio, swear to keep this ring.

Bas. By heauen it is the same I gaue the Doctor

Por. I had it of him: pardon Bassanio,
For by this ring the Doctor lay with me.

Ner. And pardon me my gentle Gratiano,
For that same scrubbed boy the Doctors Clarke
In lieu of this, last night did lye with me

Gra. Why this is like the mending of high wayes
In Sommer, where the wayes are faire enough.
What, are we Cuckolds ere we haue deseru'd it.

Por. Speake not so grossly, you are all amaz'd:
Heere is a letter, reade it at your leysure.
It comes from Padua from Bellario,
There you shall finde that Portia was the Doctor,
Nerrissa there her Clarke. Lorenzo heere
Shall witnesse I set forth as soone as you,
And but ere'a now return'd: I haue not yet
Entred my house. Anthonio you are welcome,
And I haue better newes in store for you
Then you expect: vnseale this letter soone,
There you shall finde three of your Argosies
Are richly come to harbour sodainlie.
You shall not know by what strange accident
I chanced on this letter.

Anth. I am dumbe.

Bas. Were you the Doctor, and I knew you not?

Gra. Were you the Clark that is to make me cuckold.

Ner. I, but the Clark that never meanes to doe it,
Vnlesse he liue vntill he be a man.

Bas. (Sweet Doctor) you shall be my bedfellow.
When I am absent, then lie with my wife.

An. (Sweet Ladie) you haue giuen me life & liuing;
For heere I reade for certaine that my ships
Are safelie come to Rode.

Por. How now Lorenzo?
My Clerke hath some good comforts to for you

Ner. I, and I ile giue them him without a fee
There doe I giue to you and Iessica
From the rich Iewe, a speciall deed of gift
After his death, of all he dies possess'd of.

Lorn. Faire Ladies you drop Manna in the way
Of starued people.

Por. It is almost morning,
And yet I am sure you are not satisfied
Of these events at full. Let vs goe in,
And charge vs there vpon intergatories,
And we will answer all things faithfully.

Gra. Let it be so, the first intergatory
That my Nerrissa shall be sworne on, is,
Whether till the next night she had rather stay,
Or goe to bed, now being two houres to day.
But were the day come, I should wish it darke,
Till I were couching with the Doctors Clarke.
Well, while I liue, Ile feare no other thing
So sore, as keeping safe Nerrissa ring.

Exeunt.

FINIS.

As you Like it.

Actus primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orlando.

AS I remember Adam, it was vpon this fashion bequeathed me by will, but poore a thousand Crownes, and as thou saist, charged my brother on his blessing to breed mee well: and there begins my sadnesse: My brother Iaques he keepes at schoole, and report speakes goldenly of his profit: for my part, he keepes me rustically at home, or (to speak more properly) stayes me here at home vnkept: for call you that keeping for a gentleman of my birth, that differs not from the stalling of an Oxe? his horses are bred better, for besides that they are faire with their feeding, they are taught their manage, and to that end Riders dearely hir'd: but I (his brother) gaine nothing vnder him but growth, for the which his Animals on his dunghills are as much bound to him as I: besides this nothing that he so plentifully gives me, the something that nature gaue mee, his countenance seemes to take from me: hee lets mee feede with his Hindes, barres mee the place of a brother, and as much as in him lies, mines my gentility with my education. This is it Adam that grieues me, and the spirit of my Father, which I thinke is within mee, begins to mutinie against this seruitude. I will no longer endure it, though yet I know no wise remedy how to auoid it.

Enter Oliver.

Adam. Yonder comes my Master, your brother.

Orlan. Goe a-port Adam, and thou shalt heare how he will shake me vp.

Oli. Now Sir, what make you heere?

Orl. Nothing: I am not taught to make any thing.

Oli. What mar you then sir?

Orl. Marry sir, I am helping you to mar that which God made, a poore vnworthy brother of yours with idlenesse.

Oliver. Marry sir be better employed, and be naught a while.

Orlan. Shall I keepe your hogs, and eat huskes with them? what prodigall portion haue I spent, that I should come to such penury?

Oli. Know yed where you are sir?

Orl. O sir, very well: here in your Orchard.

Oli. Know you before whom sir?

Orl. I, better then him I am before knowes mee: I know you are my eldest brother, and in the gentle condition of blood you should so know me: the courtesie of nations allowes you my better, in that you are the first borne, but the same tradition takes not away my blood, were there twenty brothers betwixt vs: I haue as much of my father in mee, as you, albeit I confesse your comming before me is nearer to his reuerence.

Oli. What Boy. (this.

Orl. Come, come elder brother, you are too yong in

Oli. Wilt thou lay hands on me villaine?

Orl. I am no villaine: I am the yongest sonne of Sir Rowland de Boys, he was my father, and he is thrice a villaine that says such a father begot villaines: were thou not my brother, I would not take this hand from thy throat, till this other had pull'd out thy tongue for saying so, thou hast rail'd on thy selfe.

Adam. Sweet Masters bee patient, for your Fathers remembrance, be at accord.

Oli. Let me goe I say.

Orl. I will not till I please: you shall heare mee: my father charg'd you in his will to giue me good education: you haue train'd me like a peasant, obscuring and hiding from me all gentleman-like qualities: the spirit of my father growes strong in mee, and I will no longer endure it: therefore allow me such exercises as may become a gentleman, or giue mee the poore allottery my father left me by testament, with that I will goe buy my fortunes.

Oli. And what wilt thou do? beg when that is spent? Well sir, get you in. I will not long be troubled with you: you shall haue some part of your will, I pray you leaue me.

Orl. I will no further offend you, than becomes mee for my good.

Oli. Get you with him, you olde dogge.

Adam. Is old dogge my reward: most true, I haue lost my teeth in your seruice: God be with my olde master, he would not haue spoke such a word. Ex. Orl. Ad.

Oli. Is it euen so, begin you to grow vpon me? I will physicke your rankenesse, and yet giue no thousand crownes neyther: holla Dennis

Enter Dennis.

Den. Calls your worship?

Oli. Was not Charles the Dukes Wrestler heere to speake with me?

Den. So please you, he is heere at the doore, and importunes accesse to you.

Oli. Call him in: 'twill be a good way: and to morrow the wrastling is.

Enter Charles.

Cha. Good morrow to your worship.

Oli. Good Mounsier Charles: what's the new newes at the new Court?

Charles. There's no newes at the Court Sir, but the olde newes: that is, the old Duke is banished by his yonger brother the new Duke, and three or foure louing

Lords haue put themselues into voluntary exile with him, whose lands and reuenues enrich the new Duke, therefore he gaues them good leaue to wander

Oli Can you tell if Rosalind the Dukes daughter bee banished with her Father?

Cha. O no; for the Dukes daughter her Cosen so loues her, being euer from their Cradles bred together, that her would haue followed her exile, or haue died to stay behind her; she is at the Court, and no lesse beloued of her Vncle, then his owne daughter, and neuer two Ladies loued as they doe.

Oli. Where will the old Duke liue?

Cha. They say hee is already in the Forrest of Ardan, and a many merry men with him; and there they liue like the old Robin Hood of England: they say many yong Gentlemen flocke to him every day, and fleet the time carelessly as they did in the golden world

Oli. What, you wrastle to morrow before the new Duke.

Cha. Marry doe I sir. and I came to acquaint you with a matter: I am giuen sir secretly to vnderstand, that your younger brother Orlando hath a disposition to come in disguis'd against mee to try a fall: to morrow sir I wrastle for my credit, and hee that escapes me without some broken limbe, shall acquit him well: your brother is but young and tender. and for your loue I would bee loth to foyle him, as I must for my owne honour if hee come in: therefore out of my loue to you, I came hither to acquaint you withall, that either you might stay him from his intendement, or brooke such disgrace well as he shall runne into, in that it is a thing of his owne search, and altogether against my will.

Oli. Charles, I thanke thee for thy loue to me, which thou shalt finde I will most kindly requite: I had my selfe notice of my Brothers purpose herein, and haue by vnder-hand meanes laboured to dissuade him from it; but he is resolute. Ile tell thee Charles, it is the stubbornest yong fellow of France, full of ambition, an enuious emulator of every mans good parts, a secret & villanous contriuer against mee his naturall brother: therefore vse thy discretion, I had as liefe thou didst breake his necke as his finger. And thou wert best looke to't; for if thou dost him any slight disgrace, or if hee doe not mightilie grace himselfe on thee, hee will practise against thee by poyson, entrap thee by some treacherous deuise, and neuer leaue thee till he hath tane thy life by some indirect meanes or other: for I assure thee, (and almost with teares I speake it) there is not one so young, and so villanous this day liuing. I speake but brotherly of him, but should I anathomize him to thee, as hee is, I must blush, and weepe, and thou must looke pale and wonder.

Cha. I am heartily glad I came hither to you: if hee come to morrow, Ile giue him his payment: if euer hee goe alone againe, Ile neuer wrastle for prize more: and so God keepe your worship. Exit.

Farewell good Charles. Now will I stirre this Gamester: I hope I shall see an end of him; for my soule (yet I know not why) hates nothing more then he: yet hee's gentle, neuer schoot'd, and yet learned, full of noble deuise, of all sorts enchantingly beloued, and indeed so much in the heart of the world, and especially of my owne people, who best know him, that I am altogether misprised: but it shall not be so long, this wrastler shall cleare all: nothing remaines, but that I kindle the boy thither, which now Ile goe about. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia.

Cel. I pray thee Rosalind, sweet my Coz, be merry.

Ros. Deere Celia; I show more mirth then I am mistresse of, and would you yet were merrier: vnlesse you could teach me to forget a banished father, you must not learne mee how to remember any extraordinary pleasure.

Cel. Herein I see thou lou'st mee not with the full weight that I loue thee; if my Vncle thy banished father had banished thy Vncle the Duke my Father, so thou hadst beene still with mee, I could haue taught my loue o take thy father for mine; so would'st thou, if the truth of thy loue to me were so righteously temper'd, as mine is to thee

Ros. Well, I will forget the condition of my estate, to reioyce in yours

Cel. You know my Father hath no childe, but I, nor none is like to haue; and truely when he dies, thou shalt be his heire; for what hee hath taken away from thy father perforce, I will render thee againe in affection: by mine honor I will, and when I breake that oath, let mee turne monster: therefore my sweet Rosa, my deare Rosa, be merry

Ros. From henceforth I will Coz, and deuise sports: let me see, what thinke you of falling in Loue?

Cel. Marry I prethee doe, to make sport withall: but loue no man in good earnest, nor no further in sport neyther, then with safety of a pure blush, thou maist in honor come off againe.

Ros. What shall be our sport then?

Cel. Let vs sit and mocke the good housewife Fortune from her wheele, that her gifts may henceforth bee bestowed equally.

Ros. I would wee could doe so: for her benefits are mightily misplaced, and the bountifull blinde woman doth most mistake in her gifts to women.

Cel. 'Tis true, for those that she makes faire, she scarce makes honest, & those that she makes honest, she makes very illfauouredly

Ros. Nay now thou goest from Fortunes office to Natures: Fortune reigneth in gifts of the world, not in the lineaments of Nature.

Enter Clown

Cel. No; when Nature hath made a faire creature, may shee not by Fortune fall into the fire? though nature hath given vs wit to flout at Fortune, hath not Fortune sent in this foole to cut off the argument?

Ros. Indeed there is fortune too hard for nature, when fortune makes natures naturall, the cutter off of natures witte.

Cel. Peradventure this is not Fortunes work neither, but Natures, who perceiueth our naturall wits too dull to reason of such goddesses, hath sent this Naturall for our whetstone. for alwaies the dulnesse of the foole, is the whetstone of the wits. How now Witte, whether wander you?

Clow. Mistresse, you must come away to your father.

Cel. Were you made the messenger?

Clo. No by mine honor, but I was bid to come for you

Ros.

Ros. Where learned you that oath foole?

Clo. Of a certaine Knight, that swore by his Honour they were good Pan-cakes, and swore by his Honor the Mustard was naught: Now I'le stand to it, the Pancakes were naught, and the Mustard was good, and yet was not the Knight forsworne.

Cel. How prove you that in the great heape of your knowledge?

Ros. I marry, now vnruzzle your wisedome.

Clo. Stand you both forth now: stroke your chinnes, and swore by your beards that I am a knaue.

Cel. By our beards (if we had them) thou art.

Clo. By my knauerie (if I had it) then I were: but if you sweare by that that is not, you are not forsworn: no more was this knight swearing by his Honor, for he never had ane; or if he had, he had sworne it away, before ever he saw those Pancakes, or that Mustard.

Cel. Prethee, who is't that thou means?

Clo. One that old Frederick your Father loues.

Ros. My Fathers loue is enough to honor him enough; speake no more of him, you'l be whipt for taxation one of these daies.

Clo. The more pitie that fooles may not speak wisely, what Wiseman do foolishly.

Cel. By my troth thou sayest true: For, since the little wit that fooles haue was silenced, the little foolerie that wise men haue makes a great shew; Heere comes Monsieur the Beau.

Enter le Beau.

Ros. With his mouth full of newes.

Cel. Which he will put on vs, as Pigeons feed their young.

Ros. Then shal we be newes-cram'd.

Cel. All the better: we shalbe the more Marketable. Bonne-our Monsieur le Beau, what's the newes?

Le Beau. Faire Princesse, you haue lost much good sport.

Cel. Sport: of what colour?

Le Beau. What colour Madame? How shall I answer you?

Ros. As wit and fortune will.

Clo. Or as the destinies decrees.

Cel. Well said, that was laid on with a trowell.

Clo. Nay, if I keepe not my ranke.

Ros. Thou loosest thy old smell.

Le Beau. You amaze me Ladies: I would haue told you of good wrastling, which you haue lost the sight of.

Ros. Yet tell vs the manner of the Wrastling.

Le Beau. I wil tell you the beginning: and if it please your Ladiships, you may see the end, for the best is yet to doe, and heere where you are, they are comming to performe it.

Cel. Well, the beginning that is dead and buried.

Le Beau. There comes an old man, and his three sons.

Cel. I could match this beginning with an old tale.

Le Beau. Three proper yoong men, of excellent growth and prescence.

Ros. With bils on their neckes: Be it knowne vnto all men by these presents.

Le Beau. The eldest of the three, wrastled with Charles the Dukes Wrastler, which Charles in a moment threw him, and broke three of his ribbes, that there is little hope of life in him: So he serv'd the second, and so the third: yonder they lie, the poore old man their Father, making such pittiful dole ouer them, that all the beholders take his part with weeping.

Ros. Alas

Clo. But what is the sport Monsieur, that the Ladies haue lost?

Le Beau. Why this that I speake of

Clo. Thus men may grow wiser every day. It is the first time that ever I heard breaking of ribbes was sport for Ladies.

Cel. Or I, I promise thee.

Ros. But is there any else longs to see this broken Musicke in his sides? Is there yet another dooles vpon rib-breaking? Shall we see this wrastling Cosin?

Le Beau. You must if you stay heere, for heere is the place appointed for the wrastling, and they are ready to performe it.

Cel. Yonder sure they are comming Let vs now stay and see it.

Flourish. Enter Duke, Lords, Orlando, Charles, and Attendants.

Duke. Come on, since the youth will not be intreated His owne peril on his forwardnesse.

Ros. Is yonder the man?

Le Beau. Even he, Madam.

Cel. Alas, he is too yong: yet he looks successfully

Du. How now daughter, and Cousin:
Are you crept hither to see the wrastling?

Ros. I my Liege, so please you giue vs leaue.

Du. You wil take little delight in it, I can tell you there is such odds in the man: In pitie of the challengers youth, I would faine dissuade him, but he will not bee entreated. Speake to him Ladies, see if you can moouе him.

Cel. Call him hether good Monsieuer Le Beau.

Duke. Do so: I'le not be by.

Le Beau. Monsieur the Challenger, the Princesse cals for you.

Orl. I attend them with all respect and duty

Ros. Young man, haue you challeng'd Charles the Wrastler?

Orl. No faire Princesse: he is the generall challenger, I come but in as others do, to try with him the strength of my youth

Cel. Yong Gentleman, your spirits are too bold for your yeares: you haue seene cruell proofe of this mans strength, if you saw your selfe with your eies, or knew your selfe with your iudgment, the feare of your aduenture would counsel you to a more equall enterprise. We pray you for your owne sake to embrace your own safetie, and giue ouer this attempt.

Ros. Do yong Sir, your reputation shall not therefore be misprised: we wil make it our suite to the Duke, that the wrastling might not go forward.

Orl. I beseech you, punish mee not with your harde thoughts, wherein I confesse me much guilty to denie so faire and excellent Ladies any thing. But let your faire eies, and gentle wishes go with mee to my triall; wherein if I bee foil'd, there is but one sham'd that was never gracious: if kil'd, but one dead that is willing to be so: I shall do my friends no wrong, for I haue none to lament me: the world no iniurie, for in it I haue nothing: onely in the world I fil vp a place, which may bee better supplied, when I haue made it empty.

Ros. The little strength that I haue, I would it were with you.

Cel

Cel. And mine to eke out hers.

Ros. Fare you well: praie heauen I be deceiu'd in you.

Cel. Your hearts desires be with you.

Char. Come, where is this yong gallant, that is so desirous to lie with his mother earth?

Orl. Readie Sir, but his will hath in it a more modest working.

Duke. You shall trie but one fall.

Cha. No, I warrant your Grace you shall not entreat him to a second, that haue so mightilie perswaded him from a first.

Orl. You meane to mocke me after: you should not haue mockt me before: but come your waies.

Ros. Now Hercules, be thy speede yong man.

Cel. I would I were inuisible, to catch the strong fellow by the legge Wrastle

Ros. Oh excellent yong man.

Cel. If I had a thunderbolt in mine eie, I can tell who should downe. Shout

Duke. No more, no more.

Orl. Yes I beseech your Grace, I am not yet well breath'd.

Duke. How do'st thou Charles?

Le Beu. He cannot speake my Lord.

Duke. Beare him awaie:
What is thy name yong man?

Orl. Orlando my Liege, the yongest sonne of Sir Roland de Boys.

Duke. I would thou hadst beene son to some man else,
The world esteem'd thy father honourable,
But I did finde him still mine enemie:
Thou should'st haue better pleas'd me with this deede,
Hadst thou descended from another house
But fare thee well, thou art a gallant youth,
I would thou had'st told me of another Father.

Exit Duke.

Cel. Were I my Father (Coze) would I do this?

Orl. I am more proud to be Sir Roland. sonne,
His yongest sonne, and would not change that calling
To be adopted heire to Frederick

Ros. My Father lou'd Sir Roland as his soule,
And all the world was of my Fathers minde.
Had I before knowne this yong man his sonne,
I should haue giuen him teares vnto entreaties,
Ere he should thus haue ventur'd.

Cel. Gentle Cosen,
Let vs goe thanke him, and encourage him.
My Fathers rough and enuious disposition
Sticks me at heart: Sir, you haue well deseru'd,
If you doe keepe your promises in loue;
But iustly as you haue exceeded all promise,
Your Mistris shall be happie

Ros. Gentleman,
Weare this for me: one out of suites with fortune
That could giue more, but that her hand lacks meanes.
Shall we goe Coze?

Cel. I: fare you well faire Gentleman.

Orl. Can I not say, I thanke you? My better parts
Are all throwne downe, and that which here stands vp
Is but a quintine, a meere liuelesse blocke.

Ros. He cals vs back: my pride fell with my fortunes,
Ile aske him what he would: Did you call Sir?
Sir, you haue wrastled well and ouerthrowne
More then your enemies

Cel. Will you goe Coze?

Ros. Haue with you: fare you well Exit.

Orl. What passion hangs these weights vpō my tong?
I cannot speake to her, yet she vrg'd conference.

Enter Le Beu.

O poore Orlando! thou art ouerthrowne
Or Charles, or something weaker masters thee.

Le Beu. Good Sir, I do in friendship counsaile you
To leaue this place; Albeit you haue deseru'd
High commendation, true applause, and loue;
Yet sich is now the Dukes condition,
That he misconsters all that you haue done:
The Duke is humorous, what he is indeede
More suites you to conceiue, then I to speake of.

Orl. I thanke you Sir; and pray you tell me this,
Which of the two was daughter of the Duke,
That here was at the Wrastling?

Le Beu. Neither his daughter, if we iudge by manners,
But yet indeede the taller is his daughter,
The other is daughter to the banish'd Duke,
And here detain'd by her vsurping Vncle
To keepe his daughter companie, whose loues
Are deeter then the naturall bond of Sisters.
But I can tell you, that of late this Duke
Hath tane displeasure 'gainst his gentle Neece,
Grounded vpon no other argument,
But that the people praise her for her vertues,
And pittie her, for her good Fathers sake;
And on my life his malice 'gainst the Lady
Will sodainly breake forth: Sir, fare you well,
Hereafter in a better world then this,
I shall desire more loue and knowledge of you.

Orl. I rest much bounden to you: fare you well.
Thus must I from the smoake into the smother,
From tyrant Duke, vnto a tyrant Brother.
But heauenly Rosaline. Exit

Scena Tertius.

Enter Celia and Rosaline

Cel. Why Cosen why Rosaline: Cupid haue mercie,
Not a word?

Ros. Not one to throw at a dog.

Cel. No, thy words are too precious to be cast away vpon curs, throw some of them at me; come lame me with reasons.

Ros. Then there were two Cosens laid vp, when the one should be lam'd with reasons, and the other mad without any.

Cel. But is all this for your Father?

Ros. No, some of it is for my childes Father: Oh how full of briers is this working day world.

Cel. They are but burs, Cosen, throwne vpon thee in holiday foolerie, if we walke not in the trodden paths our very petty-coates will catch them.

Ros. I could shake them off my coate, these burs are in my heart.

Cel. Hem them away.

Ros. I would try if I could cry hem, and haue him.

Cel. Come, come, wrastle with thy affections

Ros. O they take the part of a better wrastler then my selfe.

Cel. O, a good wish vpon you: you will trie in time in disgrace of a fall: but turning these tells out of service, let vs talke in good earnest: Is it possible on such a sodaine, you should fall into so strong a liking with old Sir Rowland yongest sonne?

Ros. The Duke my Father lou'd his Father deerelie.

Cel. Doth it therefore ensue that you should loue his Sonne deerelie? By this kinde of chase, I should hate him, for my father hated his father deerely; yet I hate not Orlando.

Ros. No faith, hate him not for my sake.

Cel. Why should I not? doth he not deserue well?

Enter Duke with Lords.

Ros. Let me loue him for that, and do you loue him Because I doe. Looke, here comes the Duke.

Cel. With his eies full of anger.

Duke. Mistris, dispatch you with your safest haste, And get you from our Court.

Ros. Me Vncle.

Duke. You Coſen,
Within these ten dates it that thou beest found So neere our publike Court as twentie miles, Thou dest for it.

Ros. I doe beseech your Grace Let me the knowledge of my fault beare with me: If with my selfe I hold intelligence, Or haue acquaintance with mine owne desires, If that I doe not dreame, or be not frantickе, (As I doe trust I am not) then deere Vncle, Never so much as in a thought vnborne, Did I offend your highnesse.

Duke. Thus doe all Traitors, If their purgation did consist in words, They are as innocent as grace it selfe; Let it suffice thee that I trust thee not

Ros. Yet your mistrust cannot make me a Traitor; Tell me wherein the likelihoods depends?

Duke. Thou art thy Fathers daughter, there's enough.

Ros. So was I when your highnesse took his Dukedome, So was I when your highnesse banisht him; Treason is not inherited my Lord, Or if we did derine it from our friends, What a that to me, my Father was no Traitor, Then good my Leige, mistake me not so much, To think my poueritie is treacherous.

Cel. Deere Soueraigne heare me speake.

Duke. I Celia, we staid her for your sake, Else had she with her Father rang'd along.

Cel. I did not then intreat to haue her stay, It was your pleasure, and your owne remorse, I was too yong that time to value her, But now I know her: if she be a Traitor, Why so am I: we still haue slept together, Rose at an instant, learn'd, plaid, eate together, And wherefoere we went, like Iuno Swans, Still we went coupled and inseperable.

Duke. She is too subtile for thee, and her smoothness, Her vertie silence, and per patience, Speake to the people, and they pitie her: Thou art a foole, shewbe thee of thy name, And thou wilt shew more bright, & seem more vertuous When she is gone: then open not thy lips Firme, and irrevocable is my doombe, Which I haue pass'd vpon her, she is banish'd.

Cel. Pronounce that sentence then on me my Leige, I cannot liue out of her companie.

Duke. You are a foole: you Neice prouide your selfe, If you out-stay the time, vpon mine honor, And in the greeuoustie of my word you die.

Exit Duke, &c.

Cel. O my poore Rosalinde, whether wilt thou goe? Wilt thou change Fathers? I will giue thee mine: I charge thee be not thou more grieu'd then I am.

Ros. I haue more cause.

Cel. Thou hast not Coſen, Prethee be cherrefull; know'st thou not the Duke Hath banish'd me his daughter?

Ros. That he hath not

Cel. No, hath not? Rosalind lacks then the loue Which teacheth thee that thou and I am one, Shall we be sundred? shall we part sweete girle? No, let my Father seeke another heire: Therefore deuise with me how we may flie Whether to goe, and what to beare with vs, And doe not seeke to take your change vpon you, To beare your griefes your selfe, and leaue me out For by this heauen, now as our sorrowes pale; Say what thou canst, Ile goe along with thee.

Ros. Why, whether shall we goe?

Cel. To seeke my Vncle in the Forrest of Ardine

Ros. Alas, what danger will it be to vs, (Maidens as we are) to travell forth so faire? Beautie prouoketh theeues sooner then gold.

Cel. Ile put my selfe in poore and mean attire, And with a kinde of vmber smirch my face, The like doe you, so shall we passe along, And never stir assailants.

Ros. Were it not better, Because that I am more then common tall, That I did suite me all poines like a man, A gallant curtelax vpon my thigh, A boore-speare in my hand, and in my heart Lye there what hidden woman feare there will, We'le haue a swaggering and a vrestlinge outside, As manie other mannish cowards haue, That doe outface it with their semblances.

Cel. What shall I call thee when thou art a man?

Ros. Ile haue no worse a name then Iouis owne Page, And therefore looke you call me Ganimed. But what will you be call'd?

Cel. Something that hath a reference to my state: No longer Celia, but Aliena.

Ros. But Coſen, what if we assaid to steale The clownish Foole out of your Fathers Court: Would he not be a comfort to our travaile?

Cel. He'le goe along ore the wide world with me, Leaue me alone to woe him; Let's away And get our Iewels and our wealth together, Deuise the fittest time, and safest way To hide vs from pursuite that will be made After my flight: now goe in we consute To liberties, and not to banishment. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke Senior: Amyens, and two or three Lords like Foresters.

Duke Sen. Now my Coe-mates, and brothers in exile: Hath not old custome made this lifemore sweete

Then

Then that of painted pompe? Are not these woods
More free from perill then the enuious Court?
Heere feele we not the penaltie of Adam,
The seasons difference, as the Icie phange
And churlish chiding of the winters winde,
Which when it bites and blowes vpon my body
Euen till I shrinke with cold, I smile, and say
This is no flattery: these are counsellors
That feelingly perswade me what I am:
Sweet are the vses of aduersitie
Which like the toad, ougly and venemous,
Weares yet a precious Iewell in his head:
And this our life exempt from publike haunt,
Findes tongues in trees, bookes in the running brooks,
Sermons in stones, and good in every thing.

Amiens. I would not change it, happy is your Grace
That can translate the stubbornesse of fortune
Into so quiet and so sweet a stile.

Duke Sen. Come, shall we goe and kill vs venison?
And yet it iskes me the poore dapled fooles
Being native Burgers of this desert City,
Should in their owne confines with forked heads
Heave their round haunches gaard.

1. Lord. Indeed my Lord
The melancholy Iaques grieues at that,
And in that kinde swears you doe more vsurpe
Then doth your brother that hath banish'd you.
To day my Lord of Amiens, and my selfe,
Did steale behinde him as he lay along
Vnder an oake, whose antique roote peepes out
Vpon the brooke that brawles along this wood,
To the which place a poore sequestred Stag
That from the Hunters aime had tane a hurt,
Did come to languish; and indeed my Lord
The wretched animall heau'd forth such groanes
That their discharge did stretch his leatherne coat
Almost to bursting, and the big round teares
Cours'd one another downe his innocent note
In pitteous chase: and thus the hauie foole,
Much marked of the melancholie Iaques,
Stood on th' extremest verge of the swift brooke,
Augmenting it with teares.

Duke Sen. But what said Iaques?
Did he not moralize this spectacle?

1. Lord. O yes, into a thousand similes.
First, for his weeping into the needlesse streame;
Poore Deere quoth he, thou mak'st a testament
As worldlings doe giving thy sum of more
To that which had too much: then being there alone,
Left and abandoned of his velvet friend;
'Tis right quoth he, thus misterie doth part
The Fluxe of companie: anon a careless Heard
Full of the pasture, iumps along by him
And never stayes to greet him. I quoth Iaques,
Sweepe on you fat and greazie Citizens,
'Tis iust the fashion; wherefore doe you looke
Vpon that poore and broken bankrupt there?
Thus most instructively he preceeth through
The body of Countrie, Citie, Court,
Yea, and of this our life, swearing that we
Are meere vsurpers, tyrants, and what's worse
To fright the Animals, and to kill them vp
In their assign'd and native dwelling place.

D. Sen. And did you leaue him in this contemplation?

2. Lord. We did my Lord, weeping and commenting Vpon the sobbing Deere.

Duke Sen. Show me the place,
I loue to cope him in these sullen fits,
For then he's full of matter.

1. Lor. Ile bring you to him straite. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Duke, with Lords.

Duke. Can it be possible that no man saw them?
It cannot be, some villaines of my Court
Are of consent and sufferance in this.

1. Lo. I cannot heare of any that did see her.
The Ladies her attendants of her chamber
Saw her a bed, and in the morning early,
They found the bed vntreaded of their Mistris.

2. Lor. My Lord, the roynish Clown, at whom so
Your Grace was wont to laugh is also missing.
Hisperia the Princesse Gentlewoman
Confesses that she secretly ore-heard
Your daughter and her Cosen much commend
The parts and graces of the Wrastler
That did but lately foile the sinowie Charles,
And she beleeues where euer they are gone
That youth is surely in their compaine.

Duke. Send to his brother, fetch that gallant hither.
If he be absent, bring his Brother to me,
I'le make him finde him: do this sodainly;
And let not search and inquisition quaile,
To bring againe these foolish runaways. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Orlando and Adam.

Orl. Who's there?

Ad. What my yong Master, oh my gentle master,
Oh my sweet master, O you memorie
Of old Sir Rowland; why, what make you here?
Why are you vertuous? Why do people loue you?
And wherefore are you gentle, strong, and valiant?
Why would you be so fond to ouercome
The bonnie priser of the humorous Duke?
Your praise is come too swiftly home before you.
Know you not Master, to seeme kinde of men,
Their graces serue them but as enemies,
No more doe yours: your vertues gentle Master
Are sanctified and holy traitors to you.
Oh what a world is this, when what is comely
Enuenoms him that bears it?

Orl. Why, what's the matter?

Ad. O vnhappie youth,
Come not within these doores: within this roofe
The enemie of all your graces liues
Your brother, no, no brother, yet the sonne
(Yet not the son, I will not call him son)
Of him I was about to call his Father,
Hath heard your praises, and this night he meanes,
To burne the lodging where you vse to lye,
And you within it: if he faile of that

He

He will haue other meanes to eat you oft,
I ouerheard him: and his practises:
This is no place, this house is but a butcherie,
Abhorre it, feare it, doe not enter it.
Ad. Why whether Adam would'st thou haue me gott
Ad. No matter whether, so you come not here.
Orl. What, would'st thou haue me goth beg my food,
Or with a base and boistrous Sword enforce
A theeuish liuing on the common rode?
This I must do, or know not what to do:
Yet this I will not do, do how I can,
I rather will subiect me to the malice
Of a diuerted blood, and bloudie brother.
Ad. But do not so: I haue fiue hundred Crownes,
The thriftie hire I saued vnder your Father,
Which I did store to be my poorer Nurse,
When seruice should in my old limbs lie lame,
And vnregarded age in corners throwne,
Take that, and he that doth the Rauens feede,
Yea prouidently caters for the Sparrow,
Be comfort to my age: here is the gold,
All this I giue you, let me be your seruant,
Though I looke old, yet I am strong and lustie;
For in my youth I never did apply
Hot, and rebellious liquors in my blood,
Nor did not with vnbashfull forehead woe,
The meanes of weaknesse and debilitie,
Therefore my age is as a lusty winter,
Frostie, but kindely; let me goe with you,
Ile doe the seruice of a younger man
In all your business and necessities.
Orl. Oh good old man, how well in thee appeares
The constant seruice of the antique world,
When seruice sweate for duties, not for meedes:
Thou art not for the fashion of these times,
Where none will sweate, but for promotion,
And hauing that do chouke their seruice vp,
Euen with the hauing, it is not so with thee:
But poore old man, thou prun'st a rotten tree,
That cannot so much as a blossome yeelde,
In lieu of all thy paines and husbandrie,
But come thy waies, wee'le goe along together,
And ere we haue thy youthfull wages spent,
We'le light vpon some setled low content.
Ad. Master goe on, and I will follow thee
To the last gaspe with truth and loyaltie,
From seuentie yeares, till now almost fourescore
Here liued I, but now liue here no more
At seuenteene yeares, many their fortunes seeke
But at fourescore, it is too late a weeke,
Yet fortune cannot recompence me better
Then to die well, and not my Masters debter. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Rosaline for Ganymed, Celia for Aliena, and Clowne, alias Touchstone.

Ros. O Iupiter, how merry are my spirits?
Clo I care not for my spirits, if my legges were not weary.
Ros. I could finde in my heart to disgrace my mans apparell, and to cry like a woman: but I must comfort the weaker vessell, as doublet and hose ought to show itselfe courageous to petty-coate; therefore courage, good Aliena.
Cel. I pray you bearе with me, I cannot goe no further.
Clo. For my part, I had rather bearе with you, then bearе you: yet I should bearе no crosse if I did bearе you, for I thinke you haue no money in your purse.
Ros. Well, this is the Forrest of Arden.
Clo. I, now am I in Arden, the more foole I, when I was at home I was in a better place, but Travellers must be content.

Enter Corin and Siluius.

Ros. I, be so good Touchstone: Look you, who comes here, a young man and an old in solemne talke.
Cor. That is the way to make her scorne you still.
Sil. Oh Corin, that thou knew'st how I do loue her.
Cor. I partly guesse: for I haue lou'd ere now.
Sil. No Corin, being old, thou canst not guesse,
Though in thy youth thou wast as true a louer
As ever sigh'd vpon a midnight pillow:
But if thy loue were ever like to mine,
As sure I thinke did never man loue so:
How many actions most ridiculous,
Hast thou beene drawne to by thy fancie?
Cor. Into a thousand that I haue forgotten.
Sil. Oh thou didst then never loue so hartily
If thou remembrest not the slightest folly,
That ever loue did make thee run into,
Thou hast not lou'd.
Or if thou hast not sat as I doe now,
Wearing thy hearer in thy Mistris praise,
Thou hast not lou'd.
Or if thou hast not broke from companie,
Abruptly as my passion now makes me,
Thou hast not lou'd.
O Phebe, Phebe, Phebe. Exit.
Ros. Alas poore Shepheard searching of they wound,
I haue by hard aduenture found mine owne.
Clo. And I mine: I remember when I was in loue, I broke my sword vpon a stone, and bid him take that for comming a night to Iane Smile, and I remember the kissing of her batler, and the Cowes dugs that her prettie chopt hands had milk'd; and I remember the wooing of a peascod instead of her, from whom I tooke two cods, and giuing her them againe, said with weeping teares, weare these for my sake: wee that are true Lovers, runne into strange capers; but as all is mortall in nature, so is all nature in loue, mortall in folly.
Ros. Thou speak'st wiser then thou art ware of.
Clo. Nay, I shall nere be ware of mine owne wit, till I breake my shins against it.
Ros. Ioue, Ioue, this Shepherds passion,
Is much vpon my fashion.
Clo. And mine, but it growes something stale with mee.
Cel. I pray you, one of you question yon'd man,
If he for gold will giue vs any foode,
I faint almost to death.
Clo. Holla; you Clowne.
Ros. Peace foole, he's not thy kinsman.
Cor. Who cals?
Clo. Your betters Sir.
Cor. Else are they very wretched.

Ros. Peace

Ros. Peace I say; good euen to your friend.
Cor. And to you gentle Sir, and to you all.
Ros. I prethee Shepheard, if that loue or gold
Can in this desert place buy entertainment,
Bring vs where we may rest our selues, and feed:
Here's a yong maid with travaile much oppressed,
And faints for succour.
Cor. Faire Sir, I pittie her,
And wish for her sake more then for mine owne,
My fortunes were more able to releeue her:
But I am shepheard to another man,
And do not heere the Fleeces that I graze:
My master is of churlish disposition,
And little weenes to finde the way to heauen
By doing deeds of hospitalitie.
Besides his Coate, his Flocks, and bounds of feede
Are now on sale, and our sheep-cote now
By reason of his absence there is nothing
That you will feed on: but what is, come see,
And in my voice most welcome shall you be
Ros. What is he that shall buy his flocke and pasture?
Cor. That yong Swaine that you saw heere but ere-while,
That little cares for buying any thing.
Ros. I pray thee, if it stand with honestie,
Buy thou the Cottage, pasture, and the flocke,
And thou shalt haue to pay for it of vs.
Cel. And we will mend thy wages:
I like this place, and willingly could
Waste my time in it.
Cor. Assuredly the thing is to be sold:
Go with me, if you like vpon report,
The soile, the profit, and this kinde of life,
I will your very faithfull Feeder be,
And buy it with your Gold right sodainly. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter, Amyens, Iaques, & others.

Song.

Vnder the greene wood tree,
who loues to lye with mee,
And turne his merrie Note,
vnto the sweet Birds throte
Come hither, come hither, come hither.
Heere shall he see no enemie,
But Winter and rough Weather.

Iaq. More, more, I pre thee more.
Amy. It will make you melancholly Monsieur Iaques
Iaq. I thanke it: More, I prethee more,
I can suckle melancholly out of a song,
As a Weazel suckes eggs: More, I pre'thee more.
Amy. My voice is ragged. I know I cannot please you.
Iaq. I do not desire you to please me,
I do desire you to sing:
Come, more. another stanzo: Call you'em stanzo's.
Amy. What you wil Monsieur Iaques.
Iaq. Nay, I care not for their names, they owe mee nothing. Will you sing?
Amy. More at your request, then to please my selfe.
Iaq. Well then, if euer I thanke any man, I'le thanke you: but that they cal complement is like th'encounter of two dog-Apes. And when a man thankes me hartily, me thinkes I haue gitten him a peuse, and he renders me the beggerly thankes. Come sing; and you that wil not hold your tongues.
Amy. Wel, I'le end the song. Sirs, couer the while, the Duke wil drinke vnder this tree; he hath bin all this day to looke you.
Iaq. And I haue bin all this day to auoid him.
He is too disputeable for my companie:
I thinke of as many matters as he, but I giue
Heauen thankes, and make no beast of them.
Come, warble, come

Song. All together heere.

Who doth ambitious shunne,
and loues to lye i'th Sunne
Seeking the food he eates,
and pleas'd with what he gets:
Come hither, come hither, come hither,
Heere shall he see, &c.

Iaq. I'le giue you a verse to this note,
That I made yesterday in despight of my Inuention.
Amy. And I'le sing it.
Amy. Thus it goes.

If it do come to pass, that any man turne Asse.
Leaning his wealth and ease,
A stubborne will to please,
Ducdame ducdame, ducdame:
Heere shall he see, gresse fooles as he,
And if he will come to me.

Amy. What's that Ducdame?
Iaq. 'Tis a Greeke inuocation to call fools into a circle. I'le go sleepe if I can: if I cannot, I'le rayle against all the first borne of Egypt.
Amy. And I'le go seeke the Duke,
His banket is prepar'd. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Orlando, & Adam.

Adam. Deere Master, I can go no further:
O I die for food. Heere lie I downe,
And measure out my grave. Farwel kinde master.
Orl. Why how now Adam? No greater heart in thee:
Liue a little, comfort a little, cheere thy selfe a little.
If this vncouth Forrest yeeld any thing sauage,
I wil either be food for it, or bring it for foode to thee
Thy conceite is nearer death, then thy powers.
For my sake be comfortable, hold death a while
At the armes end: I wil heere be with thee presently,
And if I bring thee not something to eate,
I wil giue thee leaue to die: but if thou dieft
Before I come, thou art a mocker of my labor.
Wel said, thou look'st cheerely,
And I'le be with thee quickly: yet thou liest
In the bleake aire. Come, I wil beare thee
To some shelter, and thou shalt not die
For lacke of a dinner,
If there liue any thing in this Desert.
Cheerely good Adam. Exeunt

Scena

Scena Septima.

Enter Duke Sen. & Lord, like Out-lawes.

Du. Sen. I thinke he be transform'd into a beast,
For I can no where finde him, like a man.

1 Lord. My Lord, he is but euen now gone hence,
Heere was he merry, hearing of a Song.

Du Sen. If the compact of iarres, grow Musicall,
We shall haue shortly discord in the Spheares:
Go seeke him, tell him I would speake with him.

Enter Iaques.

1 Lord. He saues my labor by his owne approach.

Du. Sen. Why how now Monsieur, what a life is this
That your poore friends must woe your companie,
What, you looke merrily.

Iaq A Foole, a foole: I met a foole i'th Forrest,
A motley Foole (a miserable world:)
As I do liue by foode, I met a foole,
Who laid him downe, and bask'd him in the Sun,
And rail'd on Lady Fortune in good termes,
In good set termes, and yet a motley foole.
Good morrow foole (quoth I:) no Sir, quoth he,
Call me not foole, till heauen hath sent me fortune,
And then he drew a dial from his poake,
And looking on it, with lacke-lustre eye,
Sayes, very wisely, it is ten a clocke:
Thus we may see (quoth he) how the world wagges:
'Tis but an houre agoe, since it was nine,
And after one houre more, twill be eleuen,
And so from houre to houre, we ripe, and ripe,
And then from houre to houre, we rot, and rot,
And thereby hangs a tale. When I did heare
The motley Foole, thus morall on the time,
My Lungs began to crow like Chantieleere,
That Fooles should be so deepe contemplative:
And I did laugh, sans intermission
An houre by his dial Oh noble foole,
A worthy foole. Motley's the onely weare.

Du. Sen. What foole is this?

Iaq O worthie Foole. One that hath bin a Courtier
And sayes, if Ladies be but yong, and faire,
They haue the gift to know it: and in his braue,
Which is as dry as the remainder bisket
After a voyage: He hath strange places cram'd
With obseruation, the which he vents
In mangled formes. O that I were a foole,
I am ambitious for a motley coat.

Du. Sen. Thou shalt haue one.

Iaq. It is my onely suite,
Prouided that you weed your better iudgements
Of all opinion that growes ranke in them,
That I am wise. I must haue liberty
Withall, as large a Charter as the winde,
To blow on whom I please, for so fooles haue:
And they that are most galled with my folly,
They most must laugh. And why sir must they so?
The why is plaine, as way to Parish Church:
Hee, that a Foole doth very wisely hit,
Doth very foolishly, although he smart
Seeme senselesse of the bob. If not,
The Wise-mans folly is anatomiz'd
Even by the squandring glances of the foole.
Inuest me in my motley: Giue me leaue
To speake my minde, and I will through and through
Cleanse the foule bodie of th'infected world,
If they will patiently receiue my medicine.

Du. Sen. Fie on thee. I can tell what thou wouldst do

Iaq. What, for a Counter, would I do, but good?

Du. Sen. Most mischeeuous foule sin, in chiding sin:
For thou thy selfe hast beene a Libertine,
As sensuall as the brutish sting itselfe,
And all th'imbossed sores, and headed euils,
That thou with license of free foot hast caught,
Would'st thou disgorge into the generall world

Iaq Why who cries out on pride,
That can therein taxe any priuate party:
Doth it not flow as hugely as the Sea,
Till that the weariе verie means do ebbe.
What woman in the Citie do I name,
When that I say the City woman beares
The cost of Princes on vnworthy shoulders?
Who can come in, and say that I meane her,
When such a one as shee, such is her neighbor?
Or what is he of basest function,
That sayes his brauerie is not on my cost,
Thinking that I meane him, but therein suites
His folly to the mettle of my speech,
There then, how then, what then, let me see wherein
My tongue hath wrong'd him: if it do him right,
Then he hath wrong'd himselfe: if he be free,
why then my taxing like a wild-goose flies
Vnclaim'd of any man But who come here?

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Forbeare, and eate no more.

Iaq. Why I haue eate none yet.

Orl. Not shalt not, till necessity be seru'd.

Iaq. Of what kinde should this Cocke come of?

Du. Sen. Art thou thus bolden'd man by thy distress?
Or else a rude despiser of good manners,
That in ciuility thou seem'st so empty?

Orl. You touch'd my veine at first, the thorny point
Of bare distresse, hath tane from me the shew
Of smooth ciuility: yet am I in-land bred,
And know some nourture. But forbeare, I say,
He dies that touches any of this fruite,
Till I, and my affaires are answered.

Iaq. And you will not be answer'd with reason,
I must dye.

Du. Sen What would you haue?
Your gentlenesse shall force, more then your force
Moue vs to gentlenesse.

Orl. I almost die for food, and let me haue it.

Du. Sen. Sit downe, and feed, & welcom to our table

Orl. Speake you so gently? Pardon me I pray you,
I thought that all things had bin sauage heere,
And therefore put I on the countenance
Of sterne command ment. But what ere you are
That in this desert inaccessible,
Vnder the shade of melancholly boughes,
Loose, and neglect the creeping hours of time:
If ever you haue look'd on better dayes:
If euer been where bels haue knoll'd to Church:
If euer fate as any good mans feast:
If euer from your eye-lids wip'd a teare,
And know what 'tis to pitie, and be pitied:
Let gentlenesse my strong enforcement be,
In the which hope, I blush, and hide my Sword

Du. Sen. True is it, that we haue seene better dayes
And haue with holy bell bin knowld to Church,
And sat at good mens feasts, and wip'd our eies
Of drops, that sacred pity hath engendred:
And therefore fit you downe in gentlenesse,
And take vpon command, what helpe we haue
That to your wanting may be ministred.

Orl. Then but forbeare your food a little while:
Whiles (like a Doe) I go to finde my Fawne,
And giue it food. There is an old poore man,
Who after me, hath many a weary steppe
Limpt in pure loue: till he be first suffic'd,
Oppresst with two weake euils, age, and hunger,
I will not touch a bit.

Duke Sen. Go finde him out,
And we will nothing waste till you returne.

Orl. I thanke ye, and be blest for your good comfort.

Du Sen. Thou seest, we are not all alone vnhappie:
This wide and vniuersall Theater
Presents more woefull Pageants then the Scenae
Wherein we play in.

Ia. All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women, meerely Players;
They haue their Exits and their Entrances,
And one man in his time playes many parts,
His Acts being seuen ages. At first the Infant,
Mewling, and puking in the Nurses armes
Then, the whining Schoole-boy with his Satchell
And shining morning face, creeping like snaile
Vnwillingly to schoole. And then the Louer,
Sighing like Furnace, with a wofull ballad
Made to his Mistresse eye-brow. Then, a Soldier,
Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the Pard,
Iealous in honor, sodaine, and quicke in quarrell,
Seeking the bubble Reputation
Euen in the Cannons mouth: And then, the Iustice,
In faire round belly, with good Capon lin'd,
With eyes seuere, and beard of formall cut,
Full of wise sawes, and moderne instances,
And so he playes his part. The sixt age shifts
Into the leane and slipper'd Pantaloone,
With spectacles on nose, and pouch on side,
His youthfull hose well saue'd, a world too wide,
For his shrunke shanke, and his bigge manly voice,
Turning againe toward childish trebble pipes,
And whistles in his sound. Last Scene of all,
That ends this strange euentfull historie,
Is second childishnesse, and meere oblivion,
Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans euery thing.

Enter Orlando with Adam.

Du Sen. Welcome: set downe your venerable burthen, and let him feede.

Orl. I thanke you most for him.

Ad. So had you neede,
I scarce can speake to thanke you for my selfe.

Du. Sen. Welcome, fall too: I wil not trouble you,
As yet to question you about your fortunes:
Giue vs some Musicke, and good Cozen, sing.

Song.

'Blow, blow, thou winter winde,
Thou art not so vnkinde, as mans ingratitude
Thy tooth is not so keene, because thou art not seene, although thy breath be rude.
Heigh ho, sing heigh ho, vnto the greene holly,
Most friendship, is feigning; most Loueing, meere folly:
The heigh ho, the holly,
This Life is most iolly

Freeze, freeze, thou bitter skie that dost not bite so nigh
as benefits forgot
Though thou the waters warpe, thy sting is not so sharpe, as friend remembred not
Heigh ho sing, &c

Duke Sen. If that you were the good Sir Rowlands son,
As you haue whisper'd faithfully you were,
And as mine eye doth his effigies witnesse,
Most truly limn'd, and liuing in your face,
Be truly welcome hither: I am the Duke
That lou'd your Father, the residue of your fortune,
Go to my Cave, and tell mee. Good old man,
Thou art right welcome, as thy masters is
Support him by the arme: giue me your hand,
And let me all your fortunes vnderstand. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Duke, Lords, & Oliuer.

Du. Not see him since? Sir, sir, that cannot be:
But were I not the better part made mercie,
I should not seeke an absent argument
Of my reuenge, thou present: but looke to it,
Finde out thy brother wherefoere he is,
Seeke him with Candle: bring him dead, or liuing
Within this twelue month, or turne thou no more
To seeke a liuing in our Territorie.
Thy Lands and all things that thou dost call thine,
Worth seizure, do we seize into our hands,
Till thou canst quit thee by thy brothers mouth,
Of what we thinke against thee.

Ol. Oh that your Highnesse knew my heart in this:
I never lou'd my brother in my life.

Duke. More villaine thou. Well push him out of doores
And let my officers of such a nature
Make an extent vpon his house and Lands
Do this expediently, and turne him going. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Orlando.

Orl. Hang there my verse, in witnesse of my loue,
And thou thrice crowned Queene of night survey
With thy chaste eye, from thy pale sphearе above
Thy Huntresse name, that my full life doth sway.
O Rosalind, these Trees shall be my Bookes,
And in their barkes my thoughts Ile charracter,
That euerie eye, which in this Forrest lookes,
Shall see thy vertue witnest euery where
Run, run Orlando, carue on every Tree,
The faire, the chaste, and vnexpressiue shee. Exit

Enter Corin & Clowne.

Co. And how like you this shepherds life Mr Touchstone?

Clow. Truely Shepheard, in respect of it selfe, it is a good life; but in respect that it is a shepheards life, it is naught. In respect that it is solitary, I like it verie well: but in respect that it is priuate, it is a very vild life. Now in respect it is in the fields, it pleaseth me well: but in respect it is not in the Court, it is tedious. As it is a spare life (looke you) it fits my humor well: but as there is no more plenties in it, it goes much against my stomacke. Has't any Philosophie in thee shepheard?

Cor. No more, but that I know the more one sickens, the worse at ease he is: and that hee that wants money, meanes, and content, is without three good friends. That the propertie of raine is to wet, and fire to burne: That good pasture makes fat sheepe: and that a great cause of the night, is lacke of the Sunne: That hee that hath lean and no wit by Nature, nor Art, may complaine of good breeding, or comes of a very dull kindred.

Clo. Such a one is a naturall Philosopher Was't ever in Court, Shepheard?

Cor. No truly.

Clo. Then thou art damn'd.

Cor. Nay, I hope.

Clo. Truly thou art damn'd, like an ill roasted Egge, all on one side.

Cor. For not being at Court? your reason.

Clo. Why, if thou never wast at Court, thou never saw'st good manners: if thou never saw'st good manners, then thy manners must be wicked, and wickednes is sin, and sinne is damnation: Thou art in a parlous state shepheard.

Cor. Not a whit Touchstone, those that are good manners at the Court, are as ridiculous in the Countrey, as the behaviour of the Countrie is most mockeable at the Court. You told me, you salute not at the Court, but you kisse your hands; that courtesie would be vnclean if Courtiers were shepherds.

Clo. Instance, briefly: come, instance.

Cor. Why we are still handling our Ewes, and their Fels you know are greasie.

Clo. Why do not your Courtiers hands sweate? and is not the grease of a Mutton, as wholesome as the sweat of a man? Shallow, shallow: A better instance I say: Come.

Cor. Besides, our hands are hard.

Clo. Your lips wil feele them the sooner. Shallow again: a more sounder instance, come.

Cor. And they are often tarr'd ouer, with the surgery of our sheepe: and would you have vs kisse Tarre? The Courtiers hands are perfum'd with Cives.

Clo. Most shallow man: Thou wormes meate in respect of a good peece of flesh indeed: learne of the wise and perpend: Civet is of a baser birth then Tarre, the verie vncleanly flux of a Cat. Mend the instance Shepheard.

Cor. You haue too Courtly a wit, for me, Ile rest.

Clo. Wilt thou rest damn'd? God helpe thee shallow man: God make incision in thee, thou art raw.

Cor. Sir, I am a true Labourer, I earne that I eate: get that I weare; owe no man hate, enuie no mans happinesse: glad of other mans good content with my harme: and the greatest of my pride, is to see my Ewes graze, & my Lambes suckle.

Clo. That is another simple sinne in you, to bring the Ewes and the Rammes together, and to offer to get your liuing, by the copulation of Cattle, to be bawd to a Bell-wether, and to betray a flee-Lambe of a twelue-month to a crooked-pated olde Cuckoldly Ramme, out of all reasonable match. If thou bee'st not damn'd for this, the diuell himselfe will haue no shepherds, I cannot see else how thou shouldst scape.

Cor. Here comes young Mr Ganimed, my new Mistrisses Brother.

Enter Rosalind.

Ros. From the east to westerne Ind,
no iewel is like Rosalinde,
Her worth being mounted on the winde,
through all the world bears Rosalinde.
All the pilleares fairest Lande,
are but blacke to Rosalinde:
Let no face bee kept in mind,
but the faire of Rosalinde.

Clo. Ile rime you so, eight yeares together; dinners, and suppers, and sleeping hours excepted: it is the right Butter-womens ranke to Market.

Ros. Out Foole.

Clo. For a taste.

If a Hart doe lacke a Hinde,
Let him seeke out Rosalinde:
If the Cat will after kinde,
so be sure will Rosalinde:
Winter garments must be linde,
so must slender Rosalinde:
They that reap must sheafe and binde,
then to cart with Rosalinde.
Sweetest nut, hath sourest rinde,
such a nut is Rosalinde.
He that sweetest rose will finde,
must finde Loue prickes, & Rosalinde.

This is the verie false gallop of Verses, why doe you infect your selfe with them?

Ros. Peace, here comes my sister reading, stand aside.

Cel. Why should this Desert bee,
for it is vnpeopled? No:
Tongues I'le hang on euerie tree,
that shall ciuill sayings show.
Some, how briefe the Life of man runs his erring pilgrimage,
That the stretching of a span, buckles in his sommes of age
Some of violated vowes,
twixt the soules of friend, and friends:
But vpon the fairest boweres,
or at euerie sentence end;
Will I Rosalinda write,
teaching all that reade, to know
The quintessence of euerie sprite,
heauen would in little show.
Therefore heauen Nature charg'd,
that one body should be fill'd
With all Graces wide enlarg'd, nature presently distill'd

Helene cheeke, but not his heart,
Cleopatra's Maiestie;
Attalanta's better part,
sad Lucrecia's Modestie.
Thus Rosalinde of many parts,
by Heauenly Synode was deuis'd,
Of many faces, eyes, and hearts,
to haue the touches dearest priz'd.
Heauen would that shee these gifts should haue,
and I to live and die her slaue.

Ros. O most gentle Iupiter, what tedious homilie of Loue haue you wearied your parishioners withall, and neuer cri'de, haue patience good people.

Cel. How now backe friends: Shepheard, go off a little: go with him sirrah.

Clo. Come Shepheard, let vs make an honorable retreit, though not with bagge and baggage, yet with scrip and scrippage. Exeu.

Cel. Didst thou heare these verses?

Ros. O yes, I heard them all, and more too, for some of them had in them more feete then the Verses would beare.

Cel. That's no matter: the feet might beare § verses.

Ros. I, but the feet were lame, and could not beare themselues without the verse, and therefore stood lamely in the verse.

Cel. But didst thou heare without wondering, how thy name should be hang'd and carued vpon these trees?

Ros. I was seuen of the nine dayes out of the wonder, before you came: for looke here what I found on a Palme tree; I was neuer so berim'd since Pythagoras time that I was an Irish Rat, which I can hardly remember.

Cel. Tro you, who hath done this?

Ros. Is it a man?

Cel. And a chaine that you once wore about his neck: change you colour?

Ros. I pre'thee who?

Cel. O Lord, Lord, it is a hard matter for friends to meete; but Mountaines may bee remoued with Earthquakes, and so encounter.

Ros. Nay, but who is it?

Cel. Is it possible?

Ros. Nay, I pre'thee now, with most petitionary vehemence, tell me who it is.

Cel. O wonderfull, wonderfull, and most wonderfull wonderfull, and yet againe wonderful, and after that out of all hooping.

Ros. Good my complection, dost thou think though I am caparison'd like a man, I haue a doublet and hose in my disposition? One inch of delay more, is a South-sea of discouerie. I pre'thee tell me, who is it quickely, and speake apace: I would thou couldst stammer, that thou might'st powre this conceal'd man out of thy mouth, as Wine comes out of a narrow-mouth'd bottle: either too much at once, or none at all. I pre'thee take the Cocke out of thy mouth, that I may drinke thy tydings.

Cel. So you may put a man in your belly.

Ros. Is he of Gods making? What manner of man? Is his head worth a hat? Or his chin worth a beard?

Cel. Nay, he hath but a little beard.

Ros. Why God will send more, if the man will bee thankful: let me stay the growth of his beard, if thou delay me not the knowledge of his chin.

Cel. It is yong Orlando, that tripe vp the Wrestlers heeles, and your heart, both in an instant.

Ros. Nay, but the diuell take mocking: speake sadde brow, and true maid

Cel. I'faith (Coz) tis he.

Ros. Orlando?

Cel. Orlando.

Ros. Alas the day, what shall I do with my doublet & hose? What did he when thou saw'st him? What saydst he? How look'd he? Wherein went he? What makes hee heere? Did he aske for me? Where remaines he? How parted he with thee? And when shalt thou see him againe? Answer me in one word.

Cel. You must borrow me Gargantuas mouth first: 'tis a Word too great for any mouth of this Ages size, to say I and no, to these particulars, is more than to answer in a Catechisme.

Ros. But doth he know that I am in this Forrest, and in mans apparell? Looks he as freshly, as he did the day he Wrastled?

Cel. It is as easie to count Atomies as to resolue the propositions of a Louer: but take a taste of my finding him, and tellith it with good obseruance. I found him vnder a tree like a drop'd Acorne.

Ros. It may well be cal'd loues tree, when it droppes forth fruite.

Cel. Giue me audience, good Madam.

Ros. Proceed.

Cel. There lay hee stretch'd along like a Wounded knight.

Ros. Though it be pittie to see such a sight, it well becomes the ground.

Cel. Cry holla, to thy tongue, I prethee: it curdles vnseasonably. He was furnish'd like a Hunter.

Ros. O ominous, he comes to kill my Hart.

Cel. I would sing my song without a burthen, thou bring'st me out of tune.

Ros. Do you not know I am a woman, when I thinke, I must speake: sweet, say on.

Enter Orlando & Iaques.

Cel. You bring me out. Soft, comes he not heere?

Ros. 'Tis he, slinke by, and note him.

Iaq I thanke you for your company, but good faith I had as liefe haue beene my selfe alone.

Orl. And so had I: but yet for fashion sake I thanke you too, for your societie.

Iaq. God buy you, let's meet as little as we can.

Orl. I do desire we may be better strangers.

Iaq. I pray you marre no more trees with Writing Loue-songs in their barkes.

Orl. I pray you marre no moe of my verses with reading them ill-fauouredly.

Iaq. Rosalinde's is your loues name? Orl. Yes, Iaqs.

Iaq. I do not like her name.

Orl. There was no thought of pleasing you when she was christen'd.

Iaq. What stature is she of?

Orl. Iust as high as my heart.

Iaq. You are ful of pretty answers: haue you not bin acquainted with goldsmiths wiues, & cond the out of rings?

Orl. Not so: but I answer you right painted cloath, from whence you haue studied your questions.

Iaq. You haue a nimble wit; I thinke twas made of Atalanta's heeles. Will you sitte downe with me, and wee two, will raile against our Mistris the world, and all our miserie.

Orl. I wil chide no breather in the world but my selfe, against against whom I know most faults.

Iaq. The worst fault you have, is to be in loue.

Orl. 'Tis a fault I will not change, for your best vertue: I am weare of you.

Iaq. By my troth, I was seeking for a Foole, when I found you.

Orl. He is drown'd in the brooke, looke but in, and you shall see him.

Iaq. There I shal see mine owne figure

Orl. Which I take to be either a foole, or a Cipher.

Iaq. Ile tarie no longer with you, farewell good signior Loue.

Orl. I am glad of your departure: Adieu good Monsieur Melancholly.

Ros. I will speake to him like a saucie Lacky, and vnder that habit play the knaue with him, do you hear Forester.

Orl. Verie wel, what would you? (

Ros. I pray you, what i'ſt a clocke?

Orl. You should aske me what time o'day: there's no clocke in the Forrest.

Ros. Then there is no true Louer in the Forrest, else sighing euerie minute and groaning euerie houre would detect the lazie foot of time, as wel as a clocke

Orl. And why not the swift foote of time? Had not that bin as proper?

Ros. By no meanes sir; Time trauels in diuers paces, with diuers persons: Ile tel you who Time ambles withall, who Time trots withal, who Time gallops withal, and who he stands stil withall.

Orl. I prethee, who doth he trot withal?

Ros. Marry he trots hard with a yong maid, between the contract of her marriage, and the day it is solemnizde: if the interim be but a seennight, Times pace is so hard, that it seemes the length of seuen yeare.

Orl. Who ambles Time withal?

Ros. With a Priest that lacks Latine, and a rich man that hath not the Gowt: for the one sleepes easily because he cannot study, and the other lives merrily because he feeles no paine: the one lacking the burthen of leame and wrathful Leamings the other knowing no burthen of heauie tedious penurie. These Time ambles withal.

Orl. Who doth he gallop withal?

Ros. With a theefe to the gallowes: for though hee go as softly as foot can fall, he thinkes himselfe too soon there.

Orl. Who stayes it still withal?

Ros. With Lawiers in the vacation: for they sleepe between Terme and Terme, and then they perceiue not how time moues.

Orl. Where dwel you pretie youth?

Ros. With this Shepheardesse my sister: here in the skirts of the Forrest, like fringe vpon a petticoat.

Orl. Are you natiue of this place?

Ros. As the Conie that you see dwell where shee is kindled.

Orl. Your accent is something finer, then you could purchase in so remoued a dwelling

Ros. I haue bin told so of many: but indeed, an olde religious Vncle of mine taught me to speake, who was in his youth an inland man, one that knew Courtship too well: for there he fel in loue. I haue heard him read many Lectures against it, and I thanke God, I am not a Woman to be touch'd with so many giddie offences as hee hath generally tax'd their whole sex withal.

Orl. Can you remember any of the principall euils, that he laid to the charge of women?

Ros. There were none principal, they were all like one another, as halfe pence are, euerie one fault seeming monstrous, til his fellow-fault came to match it.

Orl. I prethee recount some of them.

Ros. No: I will not cast away my physick, but on those that are sicke. There is a man haunts the Forrest, that abuses our yong plants with carving Rosalinde on their barkes; hangs Odes vpon Hawthornes, and Elegies on brambles; all (forsooth) defying the name of Rosalinde. If I could meet that Fancie-monger, I would give him some good counsel, for he seemes to haue the Quotidian of Loue vpon him.

Orl. I am he that is so Loue-shak'd, I pray you tel me your remedie.

Ros. There is none of my Vncles markes vpon you: he taught me how to know a man in loue: in which cage of rushes, I am sure you are not prisoner.

Orl. What were his markes?

Ros. A leane cheeke, which you haue not: a blew eie and sunken, which you haue not: an vnquestionable spirit, which you haue not: a beard neglected, which you haue not: (but I pardon you for that, for simply your hauing in beard, is a yonger brothers reuenew) then your hose should be vngartes'd, your bonnet vnbanded, your sleeue vnbutton'd, your shoe vnti'de, and euerie thing about you, demonstrating a careleſse desolation: but you are no such man; you are rather point deuice in your accoustrements, as louing your selfe, then seeming the Louer of any other. (I Loue.

Orl. Faire youth, I would I could make thee beleeue

Ros. Me beleeue it? You may aſſoone make her that you Loue beleeue it, which I warrant she is apter to do then to confesse she does: that is one of the points, in the which women still giue the lie to their consciences. But in good sooth, are you he that hangs the verses on the Trees, wherein Rosalind is so admired?

Orl. I swear to thee youth, by the white hand of Rosalind, I am that he, that vnfortunate he.

Ros. But are you so much in loue, as your rimes speak?

Orl. Neither rime nor reason can expresse how much.

Ros. Loue is merrely a madneſse, and I tel you, deserues as wel a darke house, and a whip, as madmen do: and the reason why they are not so punish'd and cured, is that the Lunacie is so ordinarie, that the whippers are in loue too: yet I profesſe curing it by counsel.

Orl. Did you euer cure any so?

Ros. Yes one, and in this manner. Hee was to imagine me his Loue, his Mistris: and I sit him euerie day to woe me At which time would I, being but a moonish youth, grieue, be effeminate, changeable, longing, and liking, proud, fantastical, apish, shallow, inconstant, full of teares, full of smiles; for euerie passion something, and for no passion truly any thing, as boyes and women are for the most part, cattle of this colour: would now like him, now loath him: then entertaine him, then forswear him: now weepe for him, then spit at him; that I drawe my Suitor from his mad humor of loue, to a liuing humor of madnes, & was to forsweare the full stream of y world, and to liue in a nooke merely Monastick: and thus I cur'd him, and this way will I take vpon mee to wash your Liuer as cleane as a sound sheepes heart, that there shal not be one spot of Loue in't.

Orl. I would not be cured, youth.

Ros. I would cure you, if you would but call me Rosalind, and come euerie day to my Coat, and woe me.

Orlan. Now by the faith of my loue, I will; Tel me where it is.

Ros. Go with me to it, and Ile shew it you: and by the way, you shal tell me where in the Forrest you live: Wil you go?

Orl. With all my heart, good youth.

Ros. Nay, you must call mee Rosalind: Come sister, will you go? Exeunt.

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Clowne, Audrey, & Iaques.

Clo Come apace good Audrey, I will fetch vp your Goates, Audrey: and how Audrey am I the man yet? Doth my simple feature content you?

Aud. Your features, Lord warrant vs: what features?

Clo. I am heere with thee, and thy Goats, as the most capricious Poet honest Ouid was among the Gothes.

Iaq. O knowledge ill inhabited, worse then Ioue in a thatch'd house.

Clo. When a mans verses cannot be vnderstood, nor a mans good wit seconded with the forward childe, vnderstanding: it strikes a man more dead then a great reckoning in a little roome: truly, I would the Gods hadde made thee poeticall.

Aud. I do not know what Poetical is: is it honest in deed and word: is it a true thing?

Clo. No truelie: for the truest poetrie is the most faining, and Lovers are given to Poetrie: and what they sweare in Poetrie, may be said as Lovers, they do feigne.

Aud. Do you wish then that the Gods had made me Poeticall?

Clow. I do truly: for thou swear'st to me thou art honest: Now if thou wert a Poet, I might haue some hope thou didst feigne.

Aud. Would you not haue me honest?

Clo. No truly, vnlesse thou were hard fauour'd: for honestie coupled to beauty, is to haue Honie a sawce to Sugar.

A materiall foole.

Aud. Well, I am not faire, and therefore I pray the Gods make me honest.

Clo. Truly, and to cast away honestie vppon a foule slut, were to put good meate into an vncleane dish.

Aud. I am not a slut, though I thanke the Goddes I am foule.

Clo. Well, praised be the Gods, for thy foulnesse; sluttishnesse may come hereafter. But be it, as it may bee, I wil marrie thee: and to that end, I haue bin with Sir Oliuer Mar-text, the Vicar of the next village, who hath promis'd to meete me in this place of the Forrest, and to couple vs.

Iaq. I would faine see this meeting.

Aud. Wel, the Gods giue vs ioy.

Clo. Amen. A man may if he were of a fearful heart stagger in this attempt: for heere wee haue no Temple but the wood, no assembly but horne-beasts. But what though? Courage. As hornes are odious, they are necessarie. It is said, many a man knowes no end of his goods; right: Many a man has good Hornes, and knowes no end of them. Well, that is the dowrie of his wife, 'tis none of his owne getting: hornes, even so poore men alone: No, no, the noblest Deere hath them as huge as the Rascall: Is the single man therefore blessed? No, as a wall'd Towne is more worthier then a village, so is the forehead of a married man, more honourable then the bare brow of a Batchelier: and by how much defence is better then no skill, by so much is a horne more precious then to want.

Enter Sir Oliuer Mar-text.

Heere comes Sir Oliuer: Sir Oliuer Mar-text you are wel met. Will you dispatch vs heere vnder this tree, or shal we go with you to your Chappell?

Ol. Is there none heere to giue the women?

Clo. I wil not take her on guift of any man.

Ol. Truly she must be giuen, or the marriage is not lawfull.

Iaq. Proceed, proceede: Ile giue her.

Clo. Good euen good Mr what ye call't: how do you Sir, you are verie well met: goddild you for your last companie, I am verie glad to see you, euen a toy in hand heere Sir: Nay, prey be couer'd.

Iaq. Will you be married, Motley?

Clo. As the Oxe hath his bow sir, the horse his curb, and the Falcon her bels, so man hath his desires, and as Pigeons bill, so wedlocke would be nibling.

Iaq. And wil you (being a man of your breeding) be married vnder a bush like a begger? Get you to church, and haue a good Priest that can tel you what marriage is, this fellow wil bet ioyne you together, as they ioyne Wainscot, then one of you wil prone a shrunke pannell, and like greene timber, warpe, warpe.

Clo. I am not in the minde, but I were better to be married of him then of another, for he is not like to marrie me well: and not being wel married, it wil be a good excuse for me hereafter, to leaue my wife.

Iaq. Goe thou with me,
And let me counsel thee.

Ol. Come sweete Audrey,
We must be married, or we must live in bawdry:
Farewel good Mr Oliuer: Not O sweet Oliuer, O braue Oliuer leaue me not behind thee: But winde away, begone I say, I wil not to wedding with thee.

Ol. 'Tis no matter; Ne've a fantastical knaue of them all shal flout me out of my calling. Exeunt

Scœna Quarta.

Enter Rosalind & Celia.

Ros. Never talke to me, I wil weepe.

Cel. Do I prethee, but yet haue the grace to consider, that teares do not become a man.

Ros. But haue I not cause to weepe?

Cel. As good cause as one would desire,
Therefore weepe.

Ros. His very haire
Is of the dissembling colour.

Cel. Something browner then Iudasses:
Marrie his kisses are Iudasses owne children.

Ros. I'faith his haire is of a good colour.

Cel. An excellent colour:
Your Chestnut was ever the onely colour:

Ros. And his kissing is as full of sanctitie,
As the touch of holy bread.

Cel.

Cel. Her hath bought a paire of cast lips of Diana: a Nun of winters sisterhood kisses not more religiously, the very ye of chastity is in them

Ros. But why did hee sweare hee would come this morning, and comes not?

Cel. Nay certainly there is no truth in him.

Ros. Doe you thinke so?

Cel. Yes, I thinke he is not a pickt purse, nor a horse-stealer, but for his verity in loue, I doe thinke him as concaue as a couered goblet, or a Worme-eaten nut.

Ros. Not true in loue?

Cel. Yes, when he is in, but I thinke he is not in.

Ros. You haue heard him sweare downright he was.

Cel. Was, is not is: besides, the oath of Louer is no stronger then the word of a Tapster, they are both the confirmer of false reckonings, he attends here in the forest on the Duke your father.

Ros. I met the Duke yesterday, and had much question with him: he asks me of what parentage I was; I told him of as good as he, so he laugh'd and let mee goe. But what talke wee of Fathers, when there is such a man as Orlando?

Cel. O that's a brauе man, hee writes brauе verses, speakes brauе words, sweares brauе oathes, and breakes them bravely, quite traiters athwart the heart of his loiter, as a paiseley Tilter, y spurs his horse but on one side, breakes his staffe like a noble goose; but all's brauе that youth mounts, and folly guides: who comes here?

Enter Corin.

Corin. Mistrisse and Master, you haue oft enquired
After the Shepheard that complain'd of loue,
Who you saw sitting by me on the Turph,
Praising the proud disdainfull Shepherdesse
That was his Mistresse.

Cel. Well: and what of him?

Cor. If you will see a pageant truely plaid
Betweene the pale complexion of true Loue,
And the red glowe of scorne and proud disdaine,
Goe hence a little, and I shall conduct you
If you will marke it.

Ros. O come, let vs remoue,
The sight of Louers feedeth those in loue:
Being vs to this sight, and you shall say
Ile prouе a busie actor in their play. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Siluius and Phebe.

Sil. Sweet Phebe doe not scorne me, do not Phebe
Say that you loue me not, but say not so
In bitternesse; the common executioner
Whose heart th'accustom'd sight of death makes hard
Falls not the axe vpon the humbled neck,
But first begs pardon: will you sterner be
Than he that dies and liues by bloody drops?

Enter Rosalind, Celia, and Corin.

Phe. I would not be thy executioner,
I fly thee, for I would not injure thee:
Thou tellest me there is murder in mine eye,
'Tis pretty feare, and very probable,
That eyes that are the frailest, and feblest things,
Who shut their coward gates on atomyes,
Should be called tyrants, butchers, murtherers.
Now I doe frowne on thee with all my heart,
And if mine eyes can wound, now let them kill thee:
Now counterfeit to swound, why now fall downe,
Or if thou canst not. oh for shame, for shame,
Lye not, to say mine eyes are murtherers:
Now shew the wound mine eye hath made in thee,
Scratch thee but with a pin, and there remaines
Some scarre of it: Leane vpon a rush
The Cicatrice and capable impressure
Thy palme some moment keepes: but now mine eyes
Which I haue darted at thee, hurt thee not,
Nor I am sure there is no force in eyes
That can doe hurt.

Sil. O deere Phebe,
If ever (as that ever may be neere)
You meet in some fresh cheeke the power of fancie,
Then shall you know the wounds inuisible
That Loues keene arrows make.

Phe. But till that time
Come not thou neere me: and when that time comes,
Afflict me with thy mockes, pitty me not,
As till that time I shall not pitty thee.

Ros. And why I pray you? who might be your mother
That you insult, exult, and all at once
Over the wretched? what though you haue no beauty
As by my faith, I see no more in you
Then without Candle may goe darke to bed:
Must you be therefore proud and pitilesse?
Why what meanes this? why do you looke on me?
I see no more in you then in the ordinary
Of Natures sale-worke? 'ods my little life,
I thinke she meanes to tangle my eies too:
No faith proud Mistresse, hope not after it,
'Tis not your inkie browes, your black silke haire,
Your bugle eye-balls, nor your cheeke of creame
That can enchant my spirits to your worship:
You foolish Shepheard, wherefore do you follow her
Like foggy South, puffing with winde and raine,
You are a thousand times a properer man
Then she a woman. 'Tis such fooles as you
That makes the world full of ill-fauoured children:
'Tis not her glasse, but you that flatters her,
And out of you she sees her selfe more proper
Then any of her lineaments can show her:
But Mistris, know your selfe, downe on your knees
And thanke heaven, fasting, for a good mans loue;
For I must tell you friendly in your eare,
Sell when you can, you are not for all markets:
Cry the man mercy, loue him, take his offer,
Foule is most foule, being foule to be a scoffer
So take her to thee Shepheard, fare you well.

Phe. Sweet youth, I pray you chide a yere together,
I had rather here you chide, then this man woo.

Ros. Hees falne in loue with your foulnesse, & shee'll
Fall in loue with my anger. If it be so, as fast
As she answeres thee with frowning looke, ile sauce
Her with bitter words: why looke you so vpon me?

Phe. For no ill will I beare you.

Ros. I pray you do not fall in loue with mee,
For I am falser then vowes made in wine:
Besides, I like you not: if you will know my house,
'Tis at the tuft of Olives, here hard by:
Will you goe Sister? Shepheard ply her hard:

Come

Come Sister: Shepheardesse, looke on him better
And be not proud, though all the world could see,
None could be so abus'd in sight as hee.
Come, to our flocke. Exit.

Phe. Dead Shepheard, now I find thy saw of might,
Who ever lov'd, that lov'd not at first sight?

Sil. Sweet Phebe.

Phe. Hah: what saist thou Siluius?

Sil. Sweet Phebe pitty me.

Phe. Why I am sorry for thee gentle Siluius.

Sil. Where ever sorrow is, reliefe would be:
If you doe sorrow at my griefe in loue,
By giuing loue your sorrow, and my griefe
Were both extermin'd.

Phe. Thou hast my loue, is not that neighbourly?

Sil. I would haue you.

Phe. Why that were controuersie:
Siluius, the time was, that I hated thee;
And yet it is not, that I beare thee loue,
But since that thou canst talke of loue so well,
Thy company, which erst was irksome to me
I will endure; and Ile employ thee too:
But doe not looke for further recompence
Then thine owne gladnesse, that thou art employd.

Sil. So holy, and so perfect is my loue,
And I in such a pouerty of grace,
That I shall thinke it a most plenteous crop
To gleane the broken eares after the man
That the maine harueſt reapes: loose now and then
A scattred smile, and that Ile liue vpon. (while?

Phe. Knowst thou the youth that spoke to me ere-

Sil. Not very well, but I haue met him oft,
And he hath bought the Cottage and the bounds
That the old Carlot once was Master of.

Phe. Thinke not I loue him, though I ask for him,
'Tis but a peeuish boy, yet he talkes well,
But what care I for words? yet words do well
When he that speakes them pleases those that heare:
It is a pretty youth, not very prettie,
But sure hee's proud, and yet his pride becomes him:
Hee'll make a proper man: the best thing in him
Is his complexion: and faster then his tongue
Did make offence, his eye did heale it vp:
He is not very tall, yet for his yeeres hee's tall:
His leg is but so so, and yet 'tis well:
There was a pretty redness in his lip
A little riper, and more lustie red
Then that mixt in his cheeke: 'twas iust the difference
Betwixt the constant red, and mingled Damaske.
Therebe some women Siluius, had they mark'd him
In parcells as I did, would haue gone neere
To fall in loue with him: but for my part
I loue him not, nor hate him not: and yet,
Haue more cause to hate him then to loue him,
For what had he to doe to chide at me?
He said mine eyes were black, and my haire blacke,
And now I am remembred, scorn'd at me:
I marueil why I answer'd not againe,
But that's all one: omitance is no quittance:
Ile write to him a very taunting Letter,
And thou shalt beare it, wilt thou Siluius?

Sil. Phebe, with all my heart.

Phe. Ile write it strait:
The matter's in my head, and in my heart,
I will be bitter with him, and passing short;
Goe with me Siluius. Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Rosalind, and Celia, and Iaques.

Iaq. I prethee, pretty youth, let me better acquainted with thee.

Ros. They say you are a melancholly fellow.

Iaq. I am so: I doe loue it better then laughing.

Ros. Those that are in extremity of either, are abhominable fellowes, and betray themselues to every moderne censure, worse then drunkards.

Iaq. Why, 'tis good to be sad and say nothing.

Ros. Why then 'tis good to be a poste.

Iaq. I haue neither the Schollers melancholy, which is emulation: nor the Musitians, which is fantastical; nor the Courtiers, which is proud: nor the Souldiers, which is ambitious: nor the Lawiers, which is politick: nor the Ladies, which is nice, nor the Louers, which is all these: but it is a melancholy of mine owne, compounded of many simples, extracted from many obiects, and indeed the sundrie contemplation of my travels, in which by often rumination, wraps me in a most humorous sadnesse.

Ros. A Traueller: by my faith you haue great reason to be sad: I feare you haue sold your owne Lands, to see other mens; then to haue seene much, and to haue nothing, is to haue rich eyes and poore hands.

Iaq. Yes, I haue gain'd my experience.

Enter Orlando.

Ros. And your experience makes you sad: I had rather haue a foole to make me merrie, then experience to make me sad, and to traueile for it too.

Orl. Good day, and happinesse, deere Rosalind.

Iaq. Nay then God buy you, and you talke in blanke verse.

Ros. Farewell Monsieur Traueller: look you lispe, and weare strange suites; disable all the benefits of your owne Countrie: be out of loue with your nativitie, and almost chide God for making you that countenance you are; or I will scarce think you haue swam in a Gondello. Why how now Orlando, where haue you bin all this while? you a louer? and you serue me such another trick, never come in my sight more.

Orl. My faire Rosalind, I come within an houre of my promise.

Ros. Breake an houres promise in loue? hee that will diuide a minute into a thousand parts, and breake but a part of the thousand part of a minute in the affairs of loue, it may be said of him that Cupid hath clapt him o'th' shoulder, but Ile warrant him heart hole.

Orl. Pardon me deere Rosalind.

Ros. Nay, and you be so tardie, come no more in my sight, I had as liefe be woo'd of a Snaile.

Orl. Of a Snaile?

Ros. I, of a Snaile: for though he comes slowly, hee carries his house on his head; a better iointure I thinke then you make a woman: besides, he brings his destinie with him.

Orl. What's that:

Ros. Why horns: w'ich as youare faine to be beholding to your wives for: but he comes armed in his fortune, and prevents the slander of his wife.

Orl. Verrue

Orl. Vertue is no horne-maker: and my Rosalind is vertuous.

Ros. And I am your Rosalind.

Cel. It pleases him to call you so: but he hath a Rosalind of a better leere then you.

Ros. Come, woo me, woo me: for now I am in a holy-day humor, and like enough to consent: What would you say to me now, and I were your verie, verie Rosalind?

Orl. I would kisse before I spoke.

Ros. Nay, you were better speake first, and when you were gravel'd, for lacke of matter, you might take occasion to kisse: verie good Orators when they are out, they will spit, and for lovers, lacking (God warne vs) matter, the cleanliest shift is to kisse.

Orl. How if the kisse be denide?

Ros. Then she puts you to entreatie, and there begins new matter.

Orl. Who could be out, being before his beloved Mistris?

Ros. Marrie that should you if I were your Mistris, or I should thinke my honestie rather then my wit.

Orl. What, of my suite?

Ros. Not out of your apparell, and yet out of your suite:

Am not I your Rosalind?

Orl. I take some joy to say you are, because I would be talking of her.

Ros. Well, in her person, I say I will not have you.

Orl. Then in mine owne person, I die.

Ros. No faith, die by Attorney: the poore world is almost six thousand yeeres old, and in all this time there was not anie man died in his owne person (videlicet) in a loue cause: Troilus had his braines dash'd out with a Grecian club, yet he did what he could to die before, and he is one of the patternes of loue. Leander, he would have lin'd manie a faire yeere though Hero had turn'd Nun; if it had not bin for a hot Midsomer-night, for (good youth) he went but forth to wash him in the Hellespont, and being taken with the cramp, was drown'd, and the foolish Chronoclers of that age, found it was Hero of Cestos. But these are all lies, men have died from time to time, and wormes have eaten them, but not for loue.

Orl. I would not have my right Rosalind of this mind, for I protest her frowne might kill me.

Ros. By this hand, it will not kill a flie: but come, now I will be your Rosalind in a more comming-on disposition: and ask me what you will, I will grant it.

Orl. Then loue me Rosalind.

Ros. Yes faith will I, Fridaies and Saterdaies, and all.

Orl. And wilt thou haue me?

Ros. I, and twentie such.

Orl. What saiest thou?

Ros. Are you not good?

Orl. I hope so

Rosalind. Why then, can one desire too much of a good thing: Come sister, you shall be the Priest, and marrie vs: give me your hand Orlando: What doe you say sister?

Orl. Pray thee marrie vs.

Cel. I cannot say the words.

Ros. You must begin, will you Orlando.

Cel. Goe too: wil you Orlando, haue to wife this Rosalind:

Orl. I will.

Ros. I, but when?

Orl. Why now, as fast as she can marrie vs.

Ros. Then you must say, I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Orl. I take thee Rosalind for wife.

Ros. I might ask you for your Commission,

But I doe take thee Orlando for my husband: there is a girle goes before the Priest, and certainely a Womans thought runs before her actions.

Orl. So do all thoughts, they are wing'd.

Ros. Now tell me how long you would have her, after you have possest her?

Orl. For ever, and a day.

Ros. Say a day, without the ever: no, no Orlando, men are Aprill when they woe, December when they wed: Maides are May when they are maides, but the sky changes when they are wives: I will bee more iealous of thee, then a Barbary cocke-pidgeon ouer his hen, more clamorous then a Parrat against rainc, more new-fangled then an ape, more giddy in my desires, then a monkey: I will weepe for nothing, like Diana in the Fountaine, & I wil do that when you are disposed to be merry: I will laugh like a Hyen, and that when thou art inclin'd to sleepe.

Orl. But will my Rosalind doe so?

Ros. By my life, she will doe as I doe.

Orl. O but she is wise.

Ros. Or else shee could not haue the wit to doe this: the wiser, the waywarder: make the doores vpon a woman wit, and it will out at the casement: shut that, and 'twill out at the key-hole: stop that, 'twill flie with the smoake out at the chimney.

Orl. A man that had a wife with such a wit, he might say, wit whether wil't?

Ros. Nay, you might keepe that check for it, till you met your wives wit going to your neighbours bed.

Orl. And what wit could wit haue, to excuse that?

Ros. Marry to say, she came to seeke you there: you shall never take her without her answer, vnless you take her without her tongue: O that woman that cannot make her fault her husbands occasion, let her never make her childe her selfe, for she will breed it like a foole.

Orl. For these two houres Rosalinde, I wil leaue thee.

Ros. Alas, deere loue, I cannot lacke thee two houres.

Orl. I must attend the Duke at dinner, by two a clock I will be with thee againe.

Ros. I, goe your waies, goe your waies: I knew what you would proue, my friends told mee as much, and I thought no lesse: that flattering tongue of yours wonne me: 'tis but one cast away, and so come death: two o'clocke is your howre.

Orl. I, sweet Rosalind.

Ros. By my troth, and in good earnest, and so God mend mee, and by all pretty oathes that are not dangerous, if you breake one iot of your promise, or come one minute behinde your houre, I will think you the most pathetical! breake-promise, and the most hollow lover, and the most vnworthy of her you call Rosalinde, that may bee chosen out of the grosse band of the vnfaithfull: therefore beware my censure, and keep your promise.

Orl. With no lesse religion, than if thou wert indeed my Rosalind: so adieu.

Ros. Well, Time is the olde Iustice that examines all such offenders, and let time try: adieu. Exit.

Cel. You have simply misse'd our sexe in your loue-prate:

prate: we must haue your doublet and hose plaine ouer your head, and shew the world what the bird hath done to her owne neast.

Ros. O coz, coz, coz: my pretty little coz, that thou didst know how many fathome deepe I am in loue: but it cannot bee sounded: my affection hath an vnknowne bottome, like the Bay of Portugall.

Cel. Or rather bottomlesse, that as fast as you poure affection in, it runs out.

Ros. No, that same wicked bastard of Venus, that was begot of thought, conceiu'd of spleene, and borne of madnesse, that blinde rascally boy, that abuses euery ones eyes, because his owne are out, let him be iudge, how deepe I am in loue: ile tell thee Aliena, I cannot be out of the sight of Orlando: Ile goe finde a shadow, and sigh till he come.

Cel. And Ile sleepe. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Iaques and Lords, Forresters.

Iaq. Which is he that killed the Deare?

Lord. Sir, it was I.

Iaq. Let's present him to the Duke like a Romane Conqueror, and it would doe well to set the Deares horns vpon his head, for a branch of victory; haue you no song Forrester for this purpose?

Lord. Yes Sir.

Iaq. Sing it: 'tis no matter how it bee in tune, so it make noyse enough.

Musicke, Song.

What shall he haue that killd the Deare?
His Leather skin, and horns to weare:
Then sing him home, the rest shall beare this burthen;
Take thee no scorne to weare the horne,
It was a crest ere thou wast borne,
Thy fathers father wore it,
And thy father bore it.
The horne, the horne, the lusty horne,
Is not a thing to laugh to scorne. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Rosalind and Celia.

Ros. How say you now, is it not past two a clock? And heere much Orlando.

Cel. I warrant you, with pure loue, & troubled brain,

Enter Siluius.

He hath t'ane his bow and arrowes, and is gone forth
To sleepe: looke who comes heere.

Sil. My errand is to you, faire youth,
My gentle Phebe did bid me giue you this:
I know not the contents, but as I guesse
By the sterne brow, and waspish action
Which she did vse, as she was writing of it,
It beares an angry tenure; pardon me,
I am but as a guiltlesse messenger.

Ros. Patience her selfe would startle at this letter,
And play the swaggerer, beare this, beare all:
Shee saies I am not faire, that I lacke manners,
She calls me proud, and that she could not loue me
Were man as rare as Phenix: od's my will,
Her loue is not the Hare that I doe hunt,
Why writes she so to me? well Shepheard well,
This is a Letter of your owne deuice.

Sil. No, I protest, I know not the contents,
Phebe did write it.

Ros. Come, come, you are a foole,
And turn'd into the extremity of loue
I saw her hand, she has a leathern hand,
A freestone coloured hand: I verily did thinke
That her old gloues were on, but twas her hands:
She has a huswives hand, but that's no matter:
I say she neuer did inuent this letter,
This is a mans inuention, and his hand.

Sil. Sure it is hers.

Ros. Why, tis a boysterous and a cruell stile,
A stile for challengers: why, she defies me,
Like Turke to Christian: vvomens gentle brosne
Could not drop forth such giant rude inuention,
Such Ethiop vvords, blacker in their effect
Then in their countenance: vvill you heare the letter?

Sil. So please you, for I never heard it yet:
Yet heard too much of Phebes cruelty.

Ros. She Phebes me: marke how the tyrant vvriteth.
Read. Art thou god, to Shepherd turn'd?
That a maiden's heart hath burn'd.
Can a vvoman rate thus?

Sil. Call you this railing?

Ros. Read. Why, thy godhead laid apart,
Warr'st thou with a woman's heart?
Did you ever heare such railing?
Whiles the eye of man did woo me,
That could do no vengeance to me.
Meaning me a beast.
If the scorne of your bright eine
Haue power to raise such loue in mine,
Alacke, in me, what strange effect
Would they worke in milde aspect?
Whiles you chid me, I did loue,
How then might your prayers moue?
He that brings this loue to thee,
Little knowes this Loue in me:
And by how much she strouer
Whether that thy youth and kinde
Will the faithfull offer take
Of me, and all that I can make,
Or else by him my loue deny,
And then Ile studie how to die.

Sil. Call you this chiding?

Cel. Alas poore Shepheard.

Ros. Doe you pitty him? No, he deserues no pitty: wilt thou loue such a woman? what to make thee an instrument, and play false strains vpon thee? not to be endur'd. Well, goe your way to her; (for I see Loue hath made thee a tame snake) and say this to her; That if she loue me, I charge her to loue thee: if she will not, I will never haue her, vnlesse thou intreat for her: if you bee a true louer hence, and not a word; for here comes more company. Exit Sil.

Enter Oliuer.

Oliu. Good morrow, faire ones: pray you, (if you know)
Where in the Purlews of this Forrest, stands

A sheep-cote, fenc'd about with Olive-trees.

Cel. West of this place, down in the neighbor bottom
The rankes of Oziers, by the murmuring streame
Left on your right hand, brings you to the place:
But at this houre, the house doth keepe it selfe,
There's none within.

Oli. If this an eye may profit by a tongue,
Then should I know you by description,
Such garments, and such yeeres: the boy is fairo,
Of femall fauour, and bestowes himselfe
Like a ripe sister: the woman low
And browner then her brother: are not you
The owner of the house I did enquire for?

Cel. It is no boast, being ask'd, to say we are.

Oli. Orlando doth commend him to you both,
And to that youth he calls his Rosalind,
He sends this bloody napkin; are you he?

Ros. I am: what must we vnderstand by this?

Oli. Some of my shame, if you will know of me
What man I am, and how, and why, and where
This handkercher was stain'd.

Cel. I pray you tell it.

Oli. When last the young Orlando parted from you,
He left a promise to returne again
Within an houre, and pacing through the Forrest,
Chewing the food of sweet and bitter fancie,
Lo: what befell: he threw his eye aside,
And marke what obiect did present it selfe
Vnder an old Oake, whose boughs were mos'd with age
And high top, bald with drie antiquitie:
A wretched ragged man, ore-growne with haire
Lay sleeping on his back; about his necke
A greene and guilded snake had wreath'd it selfe,
Who with her head, nimble in threats approach'd
The opening of his mouth: but suddainly
Seeing Orlando, it vnlink'd it selfe,
And with indented glides, did slip away
Into a bush, vnder which bushes shade
A Lyonesse, with vdders all drawne drie,
Lay couching head on ground, with catlike watch
When that the sleeping man should stirre; for 'tis
The royall disposition of that beast
To prey on nothing, that doth seeme as dead:
This seene, Orlando did approach the man,
And found it was his brother, his elder brother.

Cel. O I have heard him speake of that same brother,
And he did render him the most vnnaturall
That liu'd amongst men.

Oli. And well he might so doe,
For well I know he was vnnaturall.

Ros. But to Orlando: did he leaue him there
Food to the suck'd and hungry Lyonnesse?

Oli. Twice did he turne his backe, and purpos'd so:
But kindnesse, nobler ever then reuenge,
And Nature stronger then his just occasion,
Made him give battell to the Lyonnesse:
Who quickly fell before him, in which hurtling
From miserable slumber I awaked.

Cel. Are you his brother?

Ros. Was't you he rescu'd?

Cel. Was't you that did so oft contrive to kill him?

Oli. 'Twas I: but 'tis not I: I doe not shame
To tell you what I was, since my conversion
So sweetly tastes, being the thing I am.

Ros. But for the bloody napkin?

Oli. By and by:
When from the first to last betwixt vs two,
Teares our recountments had most kindely bath'd,
As how I came into that Desert place.
I briefe, he led me to the gentle Duke,
Who gave me fresh array, and entertainment,
Committing me vnto my brothers loue,
Who led me instantly vnto his Cave,
There stripe himselfe, and heere vpon his arme
The Lyonnesse had torne some flesh away,
Which all this while had bled; and now he fainted,
And ere I came in fainting vpon Rosalinde.
Briefe, I recouer'd him, bound vp his wound,
And after some small space, being strong at heart,
He sent me hither, stranger as I am
To tell this story, that you might excuse
His broken promise, and to give this napkin
Died in this bloud, vnto the Shepheard youth,
That he in sport doth call his Rosalind

Cel. Why how now Ganimed, sweet Ganimed.

Oli. Many will swoon when they do look on bloud.

Cel. There is more in it; Cosen Ganimed.

Oli. Looke, he recouers.

Ros. I would I were at home.

Cel. We'll lead you thither:
I pray you will you take him by the arme.

Oli. Be of good cheere youth: you a man?
You lacke a mans heart.

Ros. I doe so, I confesse it:
Ah, sirs, a body would thinke this was well counterfeited. I pray you tell your brother how well I counterfeited: heigh-ho.

Oli. This was not counterfeit, there is too great testimony in your complexion, that it was a passion of earnest.

Ros. Counterfeit, I assure you.

Oli. Well then, take a good heart, and counterfeit to be a man.

Ros. So I doe: but yfaith, I should have beene a woman by right

Cel. Come, you looke paler and paler: pray you draw homewards: good sir, goe with vs.

Oli. That will I: for I must beare answere backe
How you excuse my brother, Rosalind.

Ros. I shall deuise something: but I pray you commend my counterfeiting to him: will you goe?

Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clown and Audrie

Clow. We shall finde a time Audrie, patience gentle Audrie.

Aud. Faith the Priest was good enough, for all the olde gentlemans saying.

Clow. A most wicked Sir Oliuer, Audrie, a most vile Martext. But Audrie, there is a youth heere in the Forrest layes claime to you.

Aud. I, I know who 'tis: he hath no interest in mee in the world: here comes the man you mean

Enter William.

Clo. It is meat and drinke to me to see a Clowne, by my my troth, we that have good wits, have much to answer for: we shall be flouting: we cannot hold.

Wil. Good e'en Audrey.

Aud. God ye good e'en William.

Wil. And good e'en to you Sir.

Clo. Good e'en gentle friend. Cover thy head, cover thy head: Nay prithee be cover'd. How olde are you Friend?

Wil. Five and twentie Sir.

Clo. A ripe age: Is thy name William?

Wil. William, sir.

Clo. A faire name. Wa's't borne i'th Forrest heere?

Wil. I sir, I thanke God.

Clo. Thanke God: A good answer: Art rich?

Wil. Faith sir, so, so.

Clo. So, so, is good, very good, very excellent good: and yet it is not, it is but so, so: Art thou wise?

Wil. I sir, I have a prettie wit.

Clo. Why, thou saist well. I do now remember a saying: The Foole doth thinke he is wise, but the wiseman knowes himselfe to be a Foole. The Heathen Philosopher, when he had a desire to eate a Grape, would open his lips when he put it into his mouth, meaning thereby, that Grapes were made to eate, and lippes to open. You do love this maid?

Wil. I do sir.

Clo. Give me your hand: Art thou Learned?

Wil. No sir.

Clo. Then learne this of me, To have, is to have. For it is a figure in Rhetoricke, that drink being pour'd out of a cup into a glasse, by filling the one, doth empty the other. For all your Writers do consent, that ipse is he: now you are not ipse, for I am he.

Wil. Which he sir?

Clo. He sir, that must marrie this woman. Therefore you Clowne, abandon: which is in the vulgar, leave the societie: which in the boorish, is companie, of this female: which in the common, is woman: which together, is, abandon the society of this Female, or Clowne thou perishest: or to thy better understanding, diest; or (to wit) I kill thee, make thee away, translate thy life into death, thy libertie into bondage: I will deale in poyson with thee, or in bastinado, or in steele: I will bandy with thee in faction, I will o'er-run thee with policie: I will kill thee a hundred and fifty wayes, therefore tremble and depart.

Aud. Do good William.

Wil. God rest you merry sir. Exit

Enter Corin.

Cor. Our Master and Mistresse seekes you: come away, away.

Clo. Trip Audrey, trip Audrey, I attend, I attend. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Orlando & Oliver.

Orl. Is't possible, that on so little acquaintance you should like her? that, but seeing, you should love her? And loving woo? and wooing, she should grant? And will you persever to enjoy her?

Oli. Neither call the giddinesse of it in question, the poverty of her, the small acquaintance, my sodaine wooing, nor sodaine consenting: but say with me, I love Aliena: say with her, that she loves me; consent with both, that we may enjoy each other: it shall be to your good: for my fathers house, and all the revenew, that was old Sir Rowlands will I estate upon you, and here live and die a Shepherd.

Enter Rosalind.

Orl. You have my consent.
Let your Wedding be to morrow: thither will I
Invite the Duke, and all's contented followers:
Go you, and prepare Aliena; for looke you,
Heere comes my Rosalinde.

Ros. God save you brother.

Oli. And you faire sister.

Ros. Oh my deere Orlando, how it grieves me to see thee weare thy heart in a scarfe.

Orl. It is my arme.

Ros. I thought thy heart had beene wounded with the clawes of a Lion.

Orl. Wounded it is, but with the eyes of a Lady.

Ros. Did your brother tell you how I counterfeyted to sound, when he shew'd me your handkercher?

Orl. I, and greater wonders then that.

Ros. O, I know where you are: nay, tis true: there was never any thing so sodaine, but the fight of two Rammes, and Cæsars Thrasonicall bragge of I came, saw, and overcame. For your brother, and my sister, no sooner met, but they look'd: no sooner look'd, but they lou'd; no sooner lou'd, but they sigh'd: no sooner sigh'd but they ask'd one another the reason; no sooner knew the reason, but they sought the remedie: and in these degrees, have they made a paire of staires to marriage, which they will climbe incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage; they are in the verie wrath of love, and they will together. Clubbes cannot part them.

Orl. They shall be married to morrow: and I will bid the Duke to the Nuptiall. But O, how bitter a thing it is, to looke into happines through another mans eyes: by so much the more shall I to morrow be at the height of heart heaviness, by how much I shall think my brother happie, in having what he wishes for.

Ros. Why then to morrow, I cannot serve your turne for Rosalind?

Orl. I can live no longer by thinking.

Ros. I will weare you then no longer with idle talking. Know of me then (for now I speake to some purpose) that I know you are a Gentleman of good conceit: I speake not this, that you should bear a good opinion of my knowledge: insomuch (I say) I know you are neither do I labor for a greater esteeme than may in some little measure draw a beleefe from you, to do your selfe good, and not to grace me. Believe then, if you please, that I can do strange things: I have since I was three yeare old conversed with a Magician, most profound in his Art, and yet not damnable. If you do love Rosalinde so neere the hart, as your gesture cries it out: when your brother marries Aliena, shall you marry her. I know to what straights of Fortune she is driven, and it is not impossible to me, if it appeare not inconvenient to you, to set her before your eyes to morrow humane as she is, and without any danger.

Orl. Speak'st thou in sober meanings?

Ros. By my life I do, which I tender dearly, though I say I am a Magician: Therefore put you in your best array, bid your friends: for if you will be married to morrow, you shall: and to Rosalind if you will.

Enter Siluius & Phebe.

Looke, here comes a Louer of mine, and a louer of hers.

Phe. Youth, you haue done me much vngentlenesse,
To shew the letter that I writ to you.

Ros. I care not if I haue: it is my studie
To seeme despightfull and vngentle to you:
you are there followed by a faithful shepheard,
Looke vpon him, loue him: he worships you.

Phe. Good shepheard, tell this youth what 'tis to loue

Sil. It is to be all made of sighes and teares,
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymed.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no women.

Sil. It is to be all made of faith and seruice,
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And I for Ganymed.

Orl. And I for Rosalind.

Ros. And I for no woman.

Sil. It is to be all made of fantasie,
All made of passion, and all made of wishes,
All adoration, duetie, and obseruance,
All humblenesse, all patience, and impatience,
All purritie, all trial, all obseruance:
And so am I for Phebe.

Phe. And so am I for Ganymed.

Orl. And so am I for Rosalind.

Ros. And so am I for no women.

Phe. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Sil. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Orl. If this be so, why blame you me to loue you?

Ros. Why do you speake too, Why blame you me to loue you.

Orl. To her, that is not here, nor doth not hearc.

Ros. Pray you no more of this, 'tis like the howling of Irish Wolues against the Moone: I will helpe you if I can: I would loue you if I could: To morrow meet me all together: I wil marrie you, if ever I marrie Woman, and I'le be married to morrow: I will satisfie you, if ever I satisfi'd man, and you shall bee married to morrow. I wil contente you, if what pleases you contents you, and you shal be married to morrow: As you loue Rosalind meet, as you loue Phebe meet, and as I loue no women, I'le meet: so fare you wel: I haue left you commands.

Sil. I'le not faile, if I liue.

Phe. Nor I.

Orl. Nor I. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Clowne and Audrey.

Clo. To morrow is the ioyfull day Audrey, to morrow will we be married.

Aud. I do desire it with all my hearts: and I hope it is no dishonest desire, to desire to be a women of y world? Here come two of the banish'd Dukes Pages.

Enter two Pages.

1. Pa. We'l met honest Gentlemen.

Clo. By my troth well met. come, sit, sit, and a song.

2. Pa. We are for you, sit i'th middle.

1. Pa. Shal we clap into't roundly, without hawking, or spitting, or saying we are hoarse, which are the only prologues to a bad voice.

2. Pa. I faith, y'faith, and both in a tune like two gipsies on a horse.

Song.

It was a Louer, and his lasse,
With a hey, and a ho, and a hey nonino.
That o'er the greene corne feild did passe,
In the springe time, the only pretty ring time.
When Birds do sing, hey ding a ding, ding.
Sweet Louers loue the springe,
And therefore take the present time.
With a hey, & a ho, and a hey nonino,
For loue is crowned with the prime,
In springe time, &c.

Between the acres of the Rie,
With a hey, and a ho, & a hey nonino:
These pretie Country folke would lie.
In springe time, &c.

This Carroll they began that houre,
With a hey and a ho, & a hey nonino:
How that a life was but a Flower,
In springe time, &c.

Clo. Truly yong Gentlemen, though there was no great matter in the ditie, yet y note was very vntuneable

1. Pa. you are deceiu'd Sir, we kept time, we lost not our time.

Clo. By my troth yes: I count it but time lost to heare such a foolish song. God buy you, and God mend your voices. Come Audrey. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke Senior, Amyens, Iaques, Orlan. do, Oliuer, Celia.

Du. Sen. Dost thou believe Orlando, that the boy
Can do all this that he hath promised?

Orl. I sometimes do believe, and sometimes do not,
As those that feare they hope, and know they feare.

Enter Rosalinde, Siluius, & Phebe.

Ros. Patience once more, whiles our compact is vrg'd:
You say, if I bring in your Rosalinde,
You will bestow her on Orlando here?

Du. Se. That would I, had I kingdoms to giue with her.

Ros. And you say you will haue her, when I bring her?

Orl. That would I, were I of all kingdomes King.

Ros. You say, you'l marrie me, if I be willing.

Phe. That will I, should I die the houre after.

Ros. But if you do refuse to marrie me,
You'l giue your selfe to this most faithfull Shepheard.

Phe. So is the bargaine.

Ros. You say that you'l haue Phebe if she will.

Sil. Though to haue her and death, were both one thing.

Ros. I haue promis'd to make all this matter euen:
Keepe you your word, O Duke, to giue your daughter,
You your Orlando, to receiue his daughter:
Keepe you your word Phebe, that you'l marrie me,
Or else refusing me to wed this shepheard:
Keepe your word Siluius, that you'l marrie her
If she refuse me, and from hence I go
To make these doubts all euen. Exeunt Ros. and Celia.

Du.Sen. I do remember in this shepheard boy,
Some liuely touches of my daughters fauour.

Orl. My Lord, the first time that I ever saw him,
Me thought he was a brother to your daughter:
But my good Lord, this Boy is Forrest borne,
And hath bin tutor'd in the rudiments
Of many desperate studies, by his vncle,
Whom he reports to be a great Magitian.

Enter Clowne and Audrey.

Obscured in the circle of this Forrest.

Iaq. There is sure another flood toward, and these couples are comming to the Arke. Here comes a payre of verie strange beasts, which in all tongues, are call'd Fooles.

Clo. Salutation and greeting to you all.

Iaq. Good my Lord, bid him welcome: This is the Motley-minded Gentleman, that I haue so often met in the Forrest: he hath bin a Courtier he sweares.

Clo. If any man doubt that, let him put me to my purgation, I haue trod a measure, I haue flattred a Lady, I haue bin politicke with my friend, smooth with mine enemie, I haue vndone three Tailors, I haue had foure quarrels, and like to haue fought one.

Iaq. And how was that ta'ne vp?

Clo. Faith we met, and found the quarrel was vpon the seuenth cause.

Iaq. How seuenth cause? Good my Lord, like this fellow.

Du.So. I like him very well.

Clo. God'ild you sir, I desire you of the like: I prease in heere sir, amongst the rest of the Country copulatiues to sweare, and to forswearе, according as marriage binds and blood breakes: a poore virgin sir, an il-fauor'd thing sir, but mine owne, a poore humour of mine sir, to take that that no man else will: rich honestie dwels like a miser sir, in a poore house, as your Pearle in your foule oyster.

Du.So. By my faith, he is very swift, and sententious

Clo. According to the fooles bolt sir, and such dulcet diseases.

Iaq. But for the seuenth cause. How did you finde the quarrell on the seuenth cause?

Clo. Vpon a lye, seuen times removed: (heere your bodie more seeming Audrey) as thus sir: I did dislike the cut of a certaine Courtiers beard: he sent me word, if I said his beard was not cut well, hee was in the minde it was: this is call'd the retort courteous. If I sent him word againe, it was not well cut, he wold send me word he cut it to please himselfe: this is call'd the quip modest. If again, it was not well cut, he disabled my iudgement: this is called, the reply churlish. If again it was not well cut, he would answer I spake not true: this is call'd the reproofe valiant. If again, it was not well cut, he wold say, I lie: this is call'd the counter-checke quarrelsome: and so to lye circumstantiall, and the lye direct.

Iaq. And how oft did you say his beard was not well cut?

Clo. I durst go no further then the lye circumstantials: nor he durst not giue me the lye direct: and so we measur'd swords, and parted.

Iaq. Can you nominate in order now, the degrees of the lye.

Clo. O sir, we quarrel in print, by the booke: as you haue bookes for good manners: I will name you the degrees. The first, the Retort courteous: the second, the Quip-modest: the third, the reply Churlish: the fourth, the Reproofe valiant: the fift, the Counterchecke quarrelsome: the fixt, the Lye with circumstance: the seuenth, the Lye direct: all these you may auoyd, but the Lye direct: and you may auoide that too, with an If. I knew when seuen Iustices could not take vp a Quarrell, but when the parties were met themselues, one of them thought but of an If; as if you saide so, then I saide so: and they shoote hands, and swore brothers. Your If, is the onely peace-maker: much vertue in if.

Iaq. Is not this a rare fellow my Lord? He's as good at any thing, and yet a foole.

Du.So. He vses his folly like a stalking-horse, and vnder the presentation of that he shoots his wit

Enter Hymen, Rosalind, and Celia.
Still Musicke.

Hymen. Then is there mirth in heauen,
When earthly things made euen
Atone together.
Good Duke receiue thy daughter,
Hymen from Heauen brought her,
Yes brought her hither.
That thou might'st ioyne his hand with his,
Whose heart within his bosome is.

Ros. To you I giue my selfe, for I am yours.
To you I giue my selfe, for I am yours.

Du.So. If there be truth in sight, you are my daughter.

Orl. If there be truth in sight, you are my Rosalind.

Phe. If sight & shape be true, why then my loue adieu

Ros. Ile haue no Father, if you be not he:
Ile haue no Husband, if you be not he:
Nor ne're wed woman, if you be not shee.

Hy. Peace ho: I barre confusion,
'Tis I must make conclusion
Of these most strange events:
Here's eight that must take hands,
To ioyne in Hymens bands,
If truth holds true contents.
You and you, no crosse shall part;
You and you, are hart in hart:
You, to his loue must accord,
Or haue a Woman to your Lord.
You and you, are sure together,
As the Winter to fowle Weather:
Whiles a Wedlocke Hymne we sing,
Feede your selues with questioning.
That reason, wonder may diminish
How thus we met, and these things finish.

Song.

Wedding is great Iunos crowne,
O blessed bond of board and bed:
'Tis Hymen peoples euery towne,
High wedlock then be honored:
Honor, high honor and renowne
To Hymen, God of euery Towne.

Du.Se. O my deere Neece, welcome thou art to me,
Even daughter welcome, in no lesse degree.

Phe.

Phe. I will not eate my word, now thou art mine,
Thy faith, my fancie to thee doth combine.

Enter Second Brother.

2.Bro. Let me have audience for a word or two:
I am the second sonne of old Sir Rowland,
That bring these tidings to this faire assembly.
Duke Frederick hearing how that every day
Men of great worth resorted to this forrest,
Addressed a mightie power, which were on foote
In his owne conduct, purposely to take
His brother here, and put him to the sword.
And to the skirts of this wilde Wood he came;
Where, meeting with an old Religious man,
After some question with him, was converted
Both from his enterprize, and from the world:
His crowne bequeathing to his banish'd Brother,
And all their Lands restor'd to him againe
That were with him exil'd. This to be true,
I do engage my life.

Du.Se. Welcome yong man:
Thou offer'st fairely to thy brothers wedding:
To one his lands withe-held, and to the other
A land as fetlie as large, a potent Dukedome.
First, in this Forrest, let vs do those ends
That here were well begun, and wel begot:
And after, every of this happie number
That have endur'd shrew'd daies, and nights with vs,
Shal share the good of our returned fortune,
According to the measure of their states.
Meane time, forget this new-fallen dignitie,
And fall into our Rustiche Revelrie:
Play Musicke, and you Brides and Bride-groomes all,
With measure heap'd in joy, to'th Measures fall.

Iaq. Sir, by your patience: if I heard you rightly,
The Duke hath put on a Religious life,
And throwne into neglect the pompous Court.

2.Bro. He hath.

Iaq. To him will I: out of these convertites,
There is much matter to be heard, and learn'd:
you to your former Honor, I bequeath your patience, and your vertue, well deserues it.
you to a love, that your true faith doth merit:
you to your land, and love, and great allies:
you to a long, and well-deserued bed:
And you to wrangling, for thy loving voyage
Is but for two moneths victuall'd: So to your pleasures,
I am for other, than for dancing measures.

Du.Se. Stay, Iaques, stay.

Iaq. To see no pastime, I: what you would have,
Ile stay to know, at your abandon'd cave. Exit.

Du.Se. Proceed, proceed: we'l begin these rights,
As we do trust, they'l end in true delights. Exit

Ros. It is not the fashion to see the Ladie the Epilogue: but it is no more vnhandsome, then to see the Lord the Prologue. If it be true, that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true, that a good play needes no Epilogue. Yet to good wine they do vse good bushes: and good playes proue the better by the helpe of good Epilogues: What a case am I in then, that am neither a good Epilogue, nor cannot insinuate with you in the behalfe of a good play? I am not furnish'd like a Begger, therefore to begge will not become mee. My way is to conture you, and Ile begin with the Women. I charge you (O women) for the love you beare to men, to like as much of this Play, as please you: And I charge you (O men) for the love you beare to women (as I perceiue by your simpering, none of you hates them) that betweene you, and the women, the play may please. If I were a Woman, I would kiss as many of you as had beards that pleas'd me, complexions that lik'd me, and breaths that I defi'de not: And I am sure, as many as have good beards, or good faces, or sweet breaths, will for my kind offer, when I make curt'sie, bid me farewell. Exit.

FINIS.

THE Taming of the Shrew.

Actus primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Beggar and Hostes, Christophero Sly.

Beggar.

Le pheeze you infaith.

Host. A paire of stockes you rogue.

Beg. Y'are a boggage, the Slies are no Rogues. Looke in the Chronicles, we came in with Richard Conqueror: therefore Panca pallabris, let the world slide: Sessa.

Host. You will not pay for the glasses you haue burst?

Beg. No, not a deniere: go by S. Ieronimo, goe to thy cold bed, and warme thee.

Host. I know my remedie, I must go fetch the Head-borough.

Beg. Third, or fourth, or fift Borough, I'le answere him by Law. I'le not budge an inch boy: Let him come, and kindly. Falls asleepe.

Wynde hornes. Enter a Lord from hunting, with his traine.

Lo. Huntsman I charge thee, tender wel my hounds,
Breach Merriman, the poore Curre is imbost,
And couple Clowder with the deepe-mouth'd brach,
Saw'st thou not boy how Siluer made it good
At the hedge corner, in the couldest fault,
I would not loose the dogge for twentie pound.

Huntsf. Why Belman is as good as he my Lord,
He cried vpon it at the meerest losse,
And twice to day pick'd out the dullest sense,
Trust me, I take him for the better dogge.

Lord. Thou art a Foole, if Eccho were as fleete,
I would esteeme him worth a dozen such.
But sup them well, and looke vnto them all,
To morrow I intend to hunt againe.

Huntsf. I will my Lord.

Lord. What's heere? One dead, or drunke? See doth he breath?

2. Hun. He breath's my Lord. Were he not warm'd with Ale, this were a bed but cold to sleep so soundly.

Lord. Oh monstrous beast, how like a swine he lyes.
Grim death, how foule and loathsome is thine image:
Sirs, I will practise on this drunken man
What thinke you, if he were conuey'd to bed,
Wrap'd in sweet cloathes: Rings put vpon his fingers:
A most delicious banquet by his bed,
And braue attendants neere him when he wakes,
Would not the begger then forget himselfe?

1. Hun. Beleeue me Lord, I thinke he cannot choose.

2. H. It would seem strange vnto him when he wak'd

Lord. Euen as a flatt'ring dreame, or worthles fancie.
Then take him vp, and manage well the iest:
Carrie him gently to my fairest Chamber,
And hang it round with all my wanton pictures:
Balme his foule head in warme distilled waters,
And burne sweet Wood to make the Lodging sweete:
Procure me Musicke readie when he wakes,
To make a dulcet and a heauenly sound:
And if he chance to speake, be readie straight
(And with a low submissiue reuerence)
Say, what is it your Honor will command:
Let one attend him with a siluer Bason
Full of Rose-water, and bestrew'd with Flowers.
Another beare the Ewer: the third a Diaper,
And say wilt please your Lordship coole your hands.
Some one be readie with a costly suite,
And aske him what apparrel he will weare:
Another tell him of his Hounds and Horse,
And that his Ladie mournes at his disease,
Perswade him that he hath bin Lunatycke,
And when he sayes he is, say that he dreames,
For he is nothing but a mightie Lord:
This do, and do it kindly, gentle sirs,
It will be pastime passing excellent,
If it be husbanded with modestie.

1. Huntsf. My Lord I warrant you we will play our part
As he shall thinke by our true diligence
He is no lesse then what we say he is.

Lord. Take him vp gently, and to bed with him,
And each one to his office when he wakes.

Sound trumpets.

Sirrah, go see what Trumpet 'tis that sound.
Belike some Noble Gentleman that meanes
(Travelling some iourney) to repose him heere.

Enter Seruingman.

How now? who is it?

Ser. An t please your Honor, Players
That offer seruice to your Lordship.

Enter Players.

Lord. Bid them come neere:
Now fellowes, you are welcome.

Players. We thanke your Honor

Lord. Do you intend to stay with me to night?

2. Player. So please your Lordshippe to accept our duetie.

Lord. With all my heart. This fellow I remember,
Since once he plaide a Farmers eldest sonne,
'Twas where you woo'd the Gentlewomen so well:
I haue forgot your name: but sure that part

Was aptly fitted, and naturally perform'd.

Sincklo. I thinke 'twas Soto that your honor meanes.

Lord. 'Tis verie true, thou diddst it excellent:
Well you are come to me in happie time,
The rather for I haue some sport in hand,
Wherein your cunning can assist me much.
There is a Lord will heare you play to night;
But I am doubtfull of your modesties,
Least (ouer-eying of his odde behaiour,
For yet his honor neuer heard a play)
You breake into some merrie passion,
And so offend him: for I tell you sirs,
If you should smile, he growes impatient.

Plai. Feare not my Lord, we can contain our selues,
Were he the verieest antickie in the world.

Lord. Go sirra, take them to the Butterie,
And giue them friendly welcome euerie one.
Let them want nothing that my house affoords.

Exit one with the Players.

Sirra go you to Bartholmew my Page,
And see him drest in all suites like a Ladie:
That done, conduct him to the drunkards chamber,
And call him Madam, do him obeisance:
Tell him from me (as he will win my loue)
He beare himselfe with honourable action,
Such as he hath obseru'd in noble Ladies
Vnto their Lords, by them accomplished,
Such duties to the drunkard let him do:
With soft low tongue, and lowly curtesie,
And say: What is't your Honor will commaud,
Wherein your Ladie, and your humble wife,
May shew her duties, and make knowne her loue.
And then with kinde embracements, tempting kisses,
And with deciining head into his bosome
Bid him shed teares, as being ouer-ioyed
To see her noble Lord restor'd to health,
Who for this seuen yeares hath esteemed him
No better then a poore and loathsome begger:
And if the boy haue not a woman's gift
To raine a shower of commanded teares,
An Onion will do well for such a shift,
Which in a Napkin (being close conuei'd)
Shall in despight enforce a waterie eie:
See this dispatch'd with all the haste thou canst,
Anon Ile giue thee more instructions.

Exit a seruingman.

I know the boy will wel vsurpe the grace,
Voice, gate, and action of a Gentlewoman:
I long to heare him call the drunkard husband,
And how my men will stay themselues from laughter,
When they do homage to this simple peasant,
Ile in to counsell them: haply my presence
May well abate the ouer-merrie spleene,
Which otherwise would grow into extremes.

Enter aloft the drunkard with attendants, some with apparel, Basin and Ewer, & other appurtenances, & Lord.

Beg. Por Gods sake a pot of small Ale.

1. Ser. Wilt please your Lord drink a cup of sacke?

2. Ser. Wilt please your Honor taste of these Conserues?

3. Ser. What raiment wil your honor weare to day.

Beg. I am Christophero Sly, call not mee Honour nor Lordship: I ne're drank sacke in my life: and if you giue me any Conserues, giue me conserues of Beefe: nere ask me what raiment Ile weare, for I haue no more doublets then backes; no more stockings then legges: nor no more shoes then feet, nay sometime more feete then shoes, or such shoes as my toes look through the ouer-leather.

Lord. Heauen cease this idle humor in your Honor.
Oh that a mightie man of such descent,
Of such possessions, and so high esteeme
Should be infused with so foule a spirit.

Beg. What would you make me mad? Am not I Christopher Sly, old Sies sonne of Burton-heach, by birth a Pedler, by education a Cardmaker, by transmutation a Beare-heard, and now by present profession a Tinker. Aske Marrian Hacket the fat Alewife of Wincot, if shee know me not: if she say I am not xviii.d. on the score for sheere Ale, score me vp for the lyingest knaue in Christen dome. What I am not bestraughte: here s———

3. Man. Oh this it is that makes your Ladie mourne.

2 Man. Oh this is it that makes your seruants droop.

Lord. Hence comes it, that your kindred shuns your
As beaten hence by your strange Lunacie. (house
Oh Noble Lord, bethinke thee of thy birth,
Call home thy ancient thoughts from banishment,
And banish hence these abiect lowlie dreames:
Looke how thy seruants do attend on thee,
Each in his office readie at thy becke.
Wilt thou haue Musicke? Harke Apollo plaies, Musick
And twenie caged Nightingales do sing.
Or wilt thou sleepe? We'l haue thee to a Couch,
Softer and sweeter then the lustfull bed
On purpose trim'd vp for Semiramis.
Say thou wilt walke: we wil bestrow the ground.
Or wilt thou ride? Thy horses shal be trap'd,
Their harnesse studded all with Gold and Pearle.
Dost thou loue hawking? Thou hast hawkes will soare
Aboue the morning Larke. Or wilt thou hunt,
Thy hounds shall make the Welkin answer them
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.

1 Man. Say thou wilt course, thy gray-hounds are as
As breathed Stags I fleeter then the Roe. (swift

2 M. Dost thou loue pictures? we wil fetch thee straits
Adonis painted by a running brooke,
And Cytherea all in sedges hid,
Which seeme to moue and wanton with her breath,
Euen as the waiuing sedges play with winde.

Lord. We'l shew thee Io, as she was a Maid,
And how she was beguiled and surpriz'd,
As liuelie painted, as the deede was done.

3. Man. Or Daphne roming through a thornie wood,
Scratching her legs, that one shal sweare she bleeds,
And at that sight shal sad Apollo weepe,
So workmanlie the blood and teares are drawne.

Lord. Thou art a Lord, and nothing but a Lord:
Thou hast a Ladie farre more Beautifull,
Then any woman in this waining age.

1 Man. And til the teares that she hath shed for thee,
Like enuious floods ore-run her louely face,
She was the fairest creature in the world,
And yet shee is inferiour to none.

Beg. Am I a Lord, and haue I such a Ladie?
Or do I dreame? Or haue I dream'd till now?
I do not sleepe: I see, I heare, I speake:
I smell sweet sauours, and I feele soft things:
Vpon my life I am a Lord indeede,
And not a Tinker, nor Christopher Sly.
Well, bring our Ladie hither to our sight,
And once againe a pot o'th smallest Ale.

2. Man. Wilt please your mightinesse to wash your hands:
Oh how we ioy to see your wit restor'd,
Oh that once more you knew but what you are:
These fifteene yeeres you haue bin in a dreame,
Or when you wak'd, so wak'd as if you slept.
Beg. These fifteene yeares, by my fay, a goodly nap,
But did I never speake of all that time
1 Man. Oh yes my Lord, but very idle words,
For though you lay heere in this goodlie chamber,
Yet would you say, ye were beaten out of doore,
And raile vpon the Hostesse of the house,
And say you would present her at the Leete,
Because she brought stone-iugs, and no seal'd quarts:
Sometimes you would call out for Cicely Hacket
Beg. I, the womans maide of the house.
3 man. Why for you know no house, nor no such maid
Nor no such men as you haue reckon'd vp,
As Stephen Slie, and old Iohn Naps of Greece,
And Peter Turph, and Henry Pimpernell,
And twenne more such names and men as these,
Which neuer were, nor no man euer saw.
Beg. Now Lord be thanked for my good amends.
All. Amen.

Enter Lady with Attendants.

Beg. I thanke thee, thou shalt not loose by it.
Lady. How fares my noble Lord?
Beg. Marrie I fare well, for heere is cheere enough
Where is my wife?
La. Heere noble Lord, what is thy will with her?
Beg. Are you my wife, and will not cal me husband?
My men should call me Lord, I am your good-man.
La. My husband and my Lord, my Lord and husband
I am your wife in all obedience.
Beg. I know it well, what must I call her?
Lord. Madam.
Beg. Alice Madam, or Ioan Madam?
Lord. Madam, and nothing else, so Lords cal Ladies
Beg. Madame wife, they say that I haue dream'd,
And slept aboue some fifteene yeare or more.
Lady. I, and the time seeme's thirty vnto me,
Being all this time abandon'd from your bed.
Beg. 'Tis much, seruants leaue me and her alone:
Madam vndresse you, and come now to bed
La. Thrice noble Lord, let me intreat of you
To pardon me yet for a night or two.
Or if not so, vntill the Sun be set.
For your Physitians haue expressely charg'd,
In perill to incurre your former malady,
That I should yet absent me from your bed:
I hope this reason stands for my excuse.
Beg. I, it stands so that I may hardly carry so long:
But I would be loth to fall into my dreames againe: I wil therefore tarrie in despight of the flesh & the blood

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Your Honors Players hearing your amendment,
Are come to play a pleasant Comedie,
For so your doctors held it very meete,
Seeing too much sadnesse hath congeal'd your blood,
And melancholly is the Nurse of frenzie,
Therefore they thought it good you heare a play,
And frame your minde to mirth and merriment,
Which barres a thousand harmes, and lengthens life.
Beg. Marrie I will let them play, it is not a Comontie, a Christmas gambold, or a tumbling tricke?
Lady. No my good Lord, it is more pleasing stuffe.
Beg. What, houshold stuffe.
Lady. It is a a kinde of history.
Beg. Well, we'l see't:
Come Madam wife sit by my side,
And let the world slip, we shall neve be younger.

Flourish. Enter Lucentio, and his man Tranio.

Luc. Tranio, since for the great desire I had
To see faire Padua, nurserie of Arts,
I am arriu'd for fruitfull Lombardie,
The pleasant garden of great Italy,
And by my fathers loue and leaue am arm'd
With his good will, and thy good companie.
My trustie seruant well approu'd in all,
Heere let vs breath, and haply institute
A course of Learning, and ingenious studies.
Pisa renowned for graue Citizens
Gaue me my being, and my father first
A Merchant of great Trafficke through the world
Vincentio's come of the Bentiuoli.
Vincentio's sonne, brough vp in Florence,
It shall become to serue all hopes conceiu'd
To decke his fortune with his vertuous deedes:
And therefore Tranio, for the time I studie,
Vertue and that part of Philosophie
Will I applie, that treats of happinesse,
By vertue specially to be atchieu'd.
Tell me thy minde, for I haue Pisa left,
And am to Padua come, as he that leaues
A shallow plash, to plunge him in the deepe,
And with saciettie seekes to quench his thirst.
Tra. Mi Pardonato, gentle master mine:
I am in all affected as your selfe,
Glad that you thus continue your resolue,
To suckle the sweets of sweete Philosophie.
Onely (good master) while we do admire
This vertue, and this morall discipline,
Let's be no Stoickes, nor no stockes I pray,
Or so deuote to Aristotles checkes
As Ouid, be an out-cast quite abiur'd:
Balke Lodgicke with acquaintance that you haue,
And practise Rhetoricke in your common talke,
Musicke and Poesie vse, to quicken you,
The Mathematicks, and the Metaphysicks
Fall to them as you finde your stomacke serues you.
No profit growes, where is no pleasure tane.
In briefe sir, studie what you most affect.
Luc. Gramercies Tranio, well dost thou aduise,
If Baptista thou wert come ashore,
We could at once put vs in readinesse,
And take a Lodging fit to entertaine
Such friends (as time) in Padua shall beget.
But stay a while, what companie is this?
Tra. Master some shew to welcome vs to Towne.

Enter Baptista with his two daughters, Katerina & Bianca, Gremio a Pantalone. Hortensio suitor to Bianca. Lucen. Tranio stand by

Bap. Gentlemen, importune me no further,
For how I firmly am resolu'd you know:
That is, not to bestow my yongest daughter,
Before I haue a husband for the elder:
If either of you both loue Katherine,

Because

Because I know you well, and love you well.
Leave shall you have to court her at your pleasure.
Gro. To cart her rather. She's too rough for mee.
There, there Hortensio. will you any Wife?
Kate. I prey you sir, is it your will
To make a stale of me amongst these mates?
Her. Mates maid, how mean you that?.
No mates for you,
Vnlesse you were of gentler milder mould.
Kate. Ifaith sir, you shall never neede to feare,
I wis it is not halfe way to her heart:
But if it were, doubt not, her care should be,
To combe your noddle with a three-legg'd stoole,
And paint your face, and vse you like a foole.
Her. From all such deuels, good Lord deliuer vs.
Gro. And me too good Lord.
Tra. Hushe master, heres some good pastime toward;
That wench is starke mad, or wonderfull froward
Lucen. But in the others silence do I see,
Maids milde behaviour and sobrietie.
Peace Tranio.
Tra. Well said Mr, mum, and gaze your fill
Bap. Gentlemen, that I may sooner make good
What I haue said, Bianca get you in.
And let it not displeasse thee good Bianca,
For I will loue thee nere the lesse my girle.
Kate. A pretty peate, it is best put finger in the eye, and she knew why.
Bian. Sister content you in my discontent.
Sir, to your pleasure humbly I subscribe:
My bookes and instruments shall be my companie,
On them to looke, and practise by my selfe.
Luc. Harke Tranio, thou maist heare Minerua speak.
Her. Signior Baptista, will you be so strange,
Sorrie am I that our good will effects
Bianca's greefe.
Gre. Why will you mew her vp
(Signior Baptista) for this fiend of hell,
And make her beare the penance of her tongue.
Bap. Gentlemen content ye: I am resolu'd:
Go in Bianca.
And for I know she taketh most delight
In Musicke, Instruments, and Poetry,
Schoolemasters will I keepe within my house,
Fit to instruct her youth. If you Hortensio,
Or signior Gremio you know any such,
Preferre them hither: for to cunning men,
I will be very kinde and liberall
To mine owne children, in good bringing vp,
And so farewell: Katherine you may stay,
For I haue more to commune with Bianca. Exit.
Kate. Why, and I trust I may go too, may I not?
What shall I be appointed houres, as though (Belike) I knew not what to take,
And what to leaue? Ha Exit
Gre. You may go to the diuels dam: your gifts are so good heere's none will holde you: Their loue is not so great Hortensio, but we may blow our nails together, and fast it fairely out. Our cakes dough on both sides.
Farewell: yet for the loue I beare my sweet Bianca, if I can by any meanes light on a fit man to teach her that wherein she delights, I will wish him to her father.
Her. So will I signior Gremio: but a word I prey:
Though the nature of our quarrell yet never brook'd parle, know now vpon advice, it toucheth vs both, that we may yet againe haue access to our faire Mistris, and be happie rivals in Bianca's loue, to labour and effect
one thing specially.
Gre. What's that I prey?
Her. Marrie sir to get a husband for her Sister.
Gre. A husband: a diuell.
Her. I say a husband.
Gre. I say, a diuell: Think'st thou Hortensio, though her father be verie rich, any man is so verie a fools to be married to hell?
Her. Tush Gremio: though it passe your patience & mine to endure her loud alarums, why man there bee good fellowes in the world, and a man could light on them, would take her with all faults, and money enough.
Gre. I cannot tell: but I had as lief take her dowrie with this condition; To be whipt at the high crosse euerie morning.
Her. Faith (as you say) there's small choise in rotten apples: but come, since this bar in law makes vs friends, it shall be so farre forth friendly maintain'd till by help-ping Baptista eldest daughter to a husband, we set his yongest free for a husband, and then have to't afresh:
Sweet Bianca, happy man be his dole: he that runnes fastest, gets the Ring: How say you signior Gremio?
Gre. I am agreed, and would I had given him the best horse in Padua to begin his woing that would thorroughly woe her, wed her, and bed her, and ridde the house of her. Come on.
Exeunt ambo. Manet Tranio and Lucentio
Tra. I prey sir tel me, is it possible
That loue should of a sodaine take such hold.
Luc. Oh Tranio, till I found it to be true,
I never thought it possible or likely.
But see, while idely I stood looking on,
I found the effect of Loue in idlenesse,
And now in plainenesse do confesse to thee
That art to me as secret and as deere
As Anna to the Queene of Carthage was.
Tranio I burne, I pine, I perish Tranio,
If I atchieue not this yong modest gyrle:
Counsaile me Tranio, for I know thou canst
Assist me Tranio, for I know thou wilt.
Tra. Master, it is no time to chide you now,
Affection is not rated from the heart:
If loue haue touch'd you, naught remaines but so,
Redime te captum quam queas minimo.
Luc Gramercies Lad: Go forward, this contents,
The rest wil comfort, for thy counsels sound.
Tra. Mastes, you look'd so longly on the maide.
Perhaps you mark'd not what's the pith of all.
Luc. Oh yes, I saw sweet beautie in her face,
Such as the daughter of Agenor had,
That made great Ioue to humble him to her hand,
When with his knees he kist the Cretan strond.
Tra. Saw you no more? Mark'd you not how his sister
Began to scold, and raise vp such a storme,
That mortal eares might hardly indure the din.
Luc. Tranio, I saw her coral lips to moue,
And with her breath she did perfume the ayre,
Sacred and sweet was all I saw in her.
Tra. Nay, then tis time to stirre him fro his trance:
I prey awake sir: if you loue the Maide,
Bend thoughts and wits to atchieue her. Thus it stands:
Her elder sister is so curst and shrew'd,
That til the Father rid his hands of her,
Master, your Loue must live a maide at home,
And therefore has he closely mew'd her vp,

Because

Because she will not be annoy'd with suters.

Luc. Ah Tranio, what a cruell Fathers he:
But art thou not aduis'd, he tooke some care
To get her cunning Schoolemasters to instruct her.

Tra. I marry am I sir, and now 'tis plotted.

Luc. I haue it Tranio.

Tra Master, for my hand
Both our inuentions meet and iumpe in one.

Luc. Tell me thine first

Tra. You will be schoole-master,
And vndertake the teaching of the maid:
That's your deuice.

Luc. It is: May it be done?

Tra. Not possible: for who shall beare your part,
And be in Padua heere Vincentio's sonne,
Keepe house, and ply his booke, welcome his friends,
Visit his Countrimen, and banquet them?

Luc. Basta, content thee: for I haue it full.
We haue not yet bin seene in any house,
Nor can we be distinguish'd by our faces,
For man or master: then it followes thus;
Thou shalt be master, Tranio in my sted:
Keepe house, and port, and seruants, as I should,
I will some other be, some Florentine,
Some Neapolitan, or meaner man of Pise.
'Tis hatch'd, and shall be so: Tranio at once
Vncase thee: take my Conlord hat and cloake,
When Biondello comes, he waites on thee,
But I will charme him first to keepe his tongue.

Tra. So had you neede:
In breefe Sir, sith it your pleasure is,
And I am tyed to be obedient,
For so your father charg'd me at our parting:
Be seruiceable to my sonne (quoth he)
Although I thinke 'twas in another sense,
I am content to bee Lucentio,
Because so well I loue Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio be so, because Lucentio loues.
And let me be a slaue, t'atchieue that maide.
Whose sodaine sight hath thral'd my wounded eye.

Enter Biondello.

Heere comes the rogue. Sirra, where haue you bin?

Bion. Where haue I beene? Nay how now, where are you? Maister, he's my fellow Tranio stolne your clothes, or you stolne his, or both? Pray what's the newes

Luc. Sirra come hither, 'tis no time to iest,
And therefore frame your manners to the time
Your fellow Tranio heere to saue my life,
Puts my apparrell, and my countenance on,
And I for my escape haue put on his:
For in a quarrell since I came a shore,
I kill'd a man, and feare I was descried:
Waite you on him, I charge you, as becomes:
While I make way from hence to saue my life:
You vnderstand me?

Bion. I sir, ne're a whit.

Luc. And not a iot of Tranio in your mouth,
Tranio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Bion. The better for him, would I were so too.

Tra. So could I 'faith boy, to haue the next wish after, that Lucentio indeede had Baptista yongest daughter. But sirra, not for my sake, but your masters, I aduise you vse your manners discreetly in all kind of companies: When I am alone, why then I am Tranio: but in all places else, your master Lucentio.

Luc. Tranio let's go:
One thing more rests, that thy selfe execute,
To make one among these wooers: if thou ask me why,
Sufficeth my reasons are both good and weighty.

Exeunt. The Presenters above speake.

1. Man. My Lord you nod, you do not minde the play.

Beg. Yes by Saint Anne do I, a good matter surely; Comes there any more of it?

Lady My Lord, 'tis but begun

Beg. 'Tis a verie excellent peece of worke, Madame Ladie: would 'twere done. They sit and marke.

Enter Petruchio, and his man Grumio

Petr. Verona, for a while I take my leaue,
To see my friends in Padua; but of all
My best beloued and approued friend
Hortensio: & I trow this is his house:
Heere sirra Grumio, knocke I say.

Gru. Knocke sir? whom should I knocke? Is there any man has rebus'd your worship?

Petr. Villaine I say knocke me heere soundly.

Gru. Knocke you heere sir? Why sir, what am I sir, that I should knocke you heere sir

Petr. Villaine I say, knocke me at this gate,
And rap me well, or Ile knocke your knaues pate

Gru. My Ma is growne quarrelsome:
I should knocke you first,
And then I know after who comes by the worst.

Petr. Will it not be?
'Faith sirrah, and you I not knocke, Ile ring it,
Ile trie how you can Sol, Fa, and sing it.

He rings him by the eares.

Gru. Helpe mistris helpe, my master is mad.

Petr. Now knocke when I bid you: sirrah villaine.

Enter Hortensio.

Hor. How now, what's the matter? My olde friend Grumio, and my good friend Petruchio? How do you all at Verona?

Petr. Signior Hortensio, come you to part the fray?
Contutto le cose tutte quanto humanitate. may I say.

Hor. Alla nostra casa bene venuto multo honorato signor mio Petruchio.
Rise Grumio rise, we will compound this quarrell

Gru. Nay 'tis no matter sir, what he leges in Latine. If this be not a lawfull cause for me to leaue his seruice, looke you sir. He bid me knocke him, & rap him soundly sir Well, was it fit for a seruant to vse his master so, being perhaps (for aught I see) two and thirty, a peeper out? Whom would to God I had well knocke at first, then had not Grumio come by the worst

Petr. A senceless villaine: good Hortensio,
I bad the rascall knocke vpon your gate,
And could not get him for my heart to do it.

Gru. Knocke at the gate? O heavens: spake you not these words plaine? Sirra, Knocke me heere: rappe me heere: knocke me well, and knocke me soundly? And come you now with knocking at the gate?

Petr. Sirra be gone, or talke not I aduise you.

Hor. Petruchio patience, I am Grumio: pledge
Why this a heauie chance twixt him and you,
Your ancient trustie pleasant seruant Grumio.
And tell me now (sweet friend) what happie gale
Blowes you to Padua heere, from old Verona?

Petr. Such winds as scatters youngmen through y world.

To

To seeke their fortunes farther then at home,
Where small experience growes but in a few.
Signior Hortensio, thus it stands with me,
Antonio my father is deceast,
And I have thrust my selfe into this maze,
Happily to wive and thrive, as best I may:
Crownes in my purse I have, and goods at home,
And so am come abroad to see the world.

Hor. Petruchio, shall I then come roundly to thee,
And wish thee to a shrew'd ill-fauour'd wife?
Thou'dst thanke me but a little for my counsell:
And yet I'le promise thee she shall be rich,
And very rich: but th'art too much my friend,
And I'le not wish thee to her.

Petr. Signior Hortensio, 'twixt such friends as we,
Few words suffice: and therefore, if thou know
One rich enough to be Petruchio's wife:
(As wealth is burthen of my wooing dance)
Be she as foule as was Florentius Love,
As old as Sibill, and as curst and shrew'd
As Socrates Zantippe, or a worse:
She moves me not, or not remoues at least
Affections edge in me. Were she is as rough
As are the swelling Adriatick seas.
I come to wive it wealthily in Padua:
If wealthily, then happily in Padua.

Gru. Nay looke you sir, hee tels you flatly what his minde is: why giue him Gold enough, and marrie him to a Puppet or an Aglet babie, or an old trot with ne're a tooth in her head, though she haue as manie diseases as two and fiftie horses. Why nothing comes amiss, so manie comes withall.

Hor. Petruchio, since we are steptthus farre in,
I will continue that I broach'd in iest,
I can Petruchio helpe thee to a wife
With wealth enough and yong and beautious,
Brought vp as best becomes a Gentlewoman.
Her onely fault, and that is faults enough,
Is, that she is intolerable curst,
And shrow'd, and froward, so beyond all measure,
That were my state farre worse then it is,
I would not wed her for a mine of Gold.

Petr. Hortensio peace: thou knowst not golds effect,
Tell me her fathers name, and 'tis enough:
For I will board her, though she chide as loud
As thunder, when the clouds in Autumne cracke.

Hor. Her father is Baptista Minola,
An affable and courteous Gentleman,
Her name is Katherina Minola,
Renown'd in Padua for her scolding tongue.

Petr. I know her father, though I know not her,
And he knew my deceased father well:
I will not sleepe Hortensio till I see her,
And therefore let me be thus bold with you,
To pass you ouer at this first encounter,
Vnlesse you wil accompanie me thither.

Gru. I pray you Sir let him go while the humor lasts. A my word, and she knew him as wel as I do, she would think a scolding would doe little good vpon him. Shee may perhaps call him halfe a score Knaues, or so: Why that's nothing; and he begin once, he'l raile in his rope tricks. I'le tell you what sir, and she stand him but a little, he wil throw a figure in her face, and so disfigure her with it, that shee shall haue no more eies to see withall than a Cat: you know him not sir.

Hor. Tarrie Petruchio, I must go with thee,
For in Baptista keepe my treasure is:
He hath the Iewel of my life in hold,
His yongest daughter, beautiful Bianca,
And her with-holds from me. Other more
Suiters to her, and riuals in my Loue:
Supposing it a thing impossible,
For those defects I haue before rehearst,
That euer Katherina wil be woo'd:
Therefore this order hath Baptista tane,
That none shal haue accesse vnto Bianca,
Til Katherine the Curst, haue got a husband.

Gru. Katherine the curst,
A title for a maide, of all titles the worst.

Hor. Now shal my friend Petruchio do me grace,
And offer me disguis'd in sober robes,
To old Baptista as a schoole-master
Well seene in Musicke, to instruct Bianca,
That so I may by this deuice at least
Haue leaue and leisure to make loue to her,
And vnsuspected court her by her selfe.

Enter Gremio and Lucentio disguised.

Gru. Heere's no knauerie. See, to beguile the olde-folkes, how the young folkes lay their heads together. Master, master, looke about you: Who goes there? ha.

Hor. Peace Grumio, it is the riuall of my Loue. Petruchio stand by a while.

Grumio. A proper stripling, and an amorous.

Gremio. O very well, I haue perus'd the note: Hearke you sir, I'le haue them verie fairely bound, All bookes of Loue, see that at any hand, And see you reade no other Lectures to her: You vnderstand me. Ouer and beside Signior Baptista liberalitie, I'le mend it with a Largesse. Take your paper too, And let me haue them verie wel perfum'd; For she is sweeter then perfume it selfe To whom they go to: what wil you reade to her.

Luc. What ere I reade to her, I'le plead for you, As for my patron, stand you so assur'd, As firmely as your selfe were still in place, Yea and perhaps with more successefull words Than you; vnlesse you were a scholler sir.

Gre. Oh this learning, what a thing it is.

Gru. Oh this Woodcocke, what an Asse it is.

Petru. Peace sirra.

Hor. Grumio mum: God saue you signior Gremio.

Gre. And you are wel met, Signior Hortensio.
Trow you whither I am going? To Baptista Minola,
I promist to enquire carefully
About a schoolemaster for the faire Bianca,
And by good fortune I haue lighted well
On this yong man: For learning and behauiour
Fit for her turne, well read in Poetrie
And other bookes, good ones, I warrant ye.

Hor. 'Tis well: and I haue met a Gentleman
Hath promist me to helpe one to another,
A fine Musitian to instruct our Mistris,
So shal I no whit be behinde in duie
To faire Bianca, so beloued of me.

Gre. Beloued of me, and that my deeds shal proue.

Gru. And that his bags shal proue.

Hor. Gremio, 'tis now no time to vent our loue,
Listen to me, and if you speake me faire,
I'le tel you newes indifferent good for either.
Heere is a Gentleman whom by chance I met

Vpon

Vpon agreement from vs to his liking,
Will vndertake to woo curst Katherine,
Yea, and to marrie her, if her dowrie please.
Gre. So said, so done, is well:
Hortensio, haue you told him all her faults?
Petr. I know she is an irkesome brawling scold:
If that be all Masters, I heare no harme.
Gre. No, sayst me so, friend? What Countreyman?
Petr. Borne in Verona, old Baptista sonne:
My father dead, my fortune liues for me,
And I do hope, good dayes and long, to see.
Gre. Oh sir, such a life with such a wife, were strange:
But if you haue a stomacke, too't a Gods name,
You shal haue me assisting you in all.
But wilt you woo this Wilde-cat?
Petr. Will I liue?
Gre. Wil he woo her? I: or I'le hang her.
Petr. Why came I hither, but to that intent?
Thinke you, a little dinne can daunt mine eares?
Haue I not in my time heard Lions rore?
Haue I not heard the sea, puft vp with winds,
Rage like an angry Boare, chafed with sweat?
Haue I not heard great Ordnance in the field?
And heauens Artillerie thunder in the skies?
Haue I not in a pitched battell heard
Loud larums, neighing steeds, & trumpets clangue?
And do you tell me of a womans tongue?
That gives not halfe so great a blow to heare,
As wil a Cheese-out in a Farmers fine.
Tush, tush, feare boyes with bugs.
Gre. For he feares none.
Gremio. Hortensio hearke:
This Gentleman is happily arriu'd,
My minde presumes for his owne good, and yours.
Hor. I promist we would be Contributors,
And bear his charge of wooing whatsoeve.
Gremio. And so we wil, prouided that he win her.
Gre. I would I were as sure of a good dinner.

Enter Tranio brauo, and Biondello.

Tra. Gentlemen God saue you. If I may be bold
Tell me I beseech you, which is the readiest way
To the house of Signior Baptista Minola?
Bion. He that has the two faire daughters: ist he you meane?
Tra. Euen he Biondello.
Gre. Hearke you sir, you meane not her to——
Tra. Perhaps him and her sir, what haue you to do?
Petr. Not her that chides sir, at any hand I pray.
Tranio. I loue no chiders sir: Biondello, let's away.
Luc Well begun Tranio.
Hor. Sir, a word ere you go:
Are you a suitor to the Maid you talke of, yea or no?
Tra. And if I be sir, is it any offence?
Gremio. No: if without more words you will get you hence.
Tra. Why sir, I pray are not the streets as free
For me, as for you?
Gre. But so is not she.
Tra. For what reason I beseech you.
Gre. For this reason if you'l kno,
That she's the choise loue of Signior Gremio.
Hor. That she's the chosen of signior Hortensio.
Tra. Softly my Masters: If you be Gentlemen
Do me this right: heare me with patience.
Baptista is a noble Gentleman,
To whom my Father is not all vnknowne,
And were his daughter fairer then she is,
She may more sutors haue, and me for one.
Faire Ladaus daughter had a thousand wooers,
Then well one more may faire Bianca haue;
And so she shall: Lucentio shal make one,
Though Paris came, in hope to speed alone.
Gre. What, this Gentleman will out-talke vs all.
Luc. Sir giue him head, I know he'l proue a Iade.
Petr. Hortensio, to what end are all these words?
Hor. Sir, let me be so bold as aske you,
Did you yet euer see Baptista daughter?
Tra. No sir, but heare I do that he hath two:
The one, as famous for a scolding tongue,
As is the other, for beauteous modestie.
Petr. Sir, sir, the first s for me, let her go by
Gre. Yea, leaue that labour to great Hercules,
And let it be more then Alcides twelue.
Petr. Sir vnderstand you this of me (insooth)
The yongest daughter whom you hearken for,
Her father keepes from all accesse of sutors
And will not promise her to any man,
Vntill the elder sister first be wed.
The yonger then is free, and not before.
Tranio. If it be so sir, that you are the man
Must stead vs all, and me amongst the rest:
And if you breake the ice, and do this seeke,
Atchieue the elder: set the yonger free,
For our accesse, whose hap shall be to haue her,
Wil not so graceless be, to be ingrate.
Hor. Sir you say wel, and wel you do conceiue.
And since you do professe to be a sutor,
You must as we do, gratifie this Gentleman,
To whom we all rest generally beholding.
Tranio. Sir, I shal not be slacke, in signe whereof,
Please ye we may contriue this afternoon,
And quaffe carouses to our Mistresse health,
And do as aduersaries do in law,
Strive mightily, but eate and drinke as friends.
Gre, Bion. Oh excellent motion: fellowes let's be gon
Hor. The motions good indeed, and be it so,
Petruchio, I shal be your Ben venuto. Exeunt

Enter Katherina and Bianca.

Bian. Good sister wrong me not, nor wrong your self,
To make a bondmaide and a slaue of me,
That I disdaine: but for these other goods,
Vnbinde my hands, I'le pall them off my selfe,
Yea all my raiment, to my petticoate,
Or what you will command me, wil I do,
So well I know my dutie to my elders.
Kate. Of all thy sutors heere I charge tel
Whom thou lou'st best: see thou dissemble not.
Bianca. Beleeue me sister, of all the men aliue,
I neuer yet beheld that speciall face,
Which I could fancie, more then any other.
Kate. Minion thou lyest: Is't not Hortensio?
Bian. If you affect him sister, heere I sweare
I'le plead for you my selfe, but you shal haue him.
Kate. Oh then belike you fancie riches more,
You wil haue Gremio to keepe you faire.
Bian. Is it for him you do enuie me so?
Nay then you iest, and now I wel perceiue
You haue but iested with me all this while:
I prethee sister Kate, vncie my hands.
Ka. If that be iest, then all the rest was so. Strikes her
Exeunt

Enter Baptista.

Bap. Why how now Dame, whence growes this insolence?
Bianca stand aside, poore gyrle she weepes:
Go ply thy Needle, meddle not with her
For shame thou Hilding of a diuellish spirit,
Why dost thou wrong her, that did ere wrong thee?
When did she crosse thee with a bitter word?

Kate. Her silence flouts me, and I'le be reuenge'd.
Flies after Bianca

Bap. What in my sight? Bianca get thee in. Exit.

Kate. What will you not suffer me: Nay now I see
She is your treasure, she must haue a husband,
I must dance bare-foot on her wedding day,
And for your loue to her, leade Apes in hell.
Talke not to me, I will go sit and weepe,
Till I can finde occasion of reuenge.

Bap. Was euer Gentleman thus greu'd as I
But who comes heere.

Enter Gremio, Lucentio, in the habit of a mean man, Petruchio with Tranio, with his boy bearing a Lute and Bookes.

Gre. Good morrow neighbour Baptista.

Bap. Good morrow neighbour Gremio: God saue you Gentlemen.

Pet. And you good sir: pray haue you not a daughter, cal'd Katerina, faire and vertuous.

Bap. I haue a daughter sir, cal'd Katerina.

Gre. You are too blunt, go to it orderly.

Pet. You wrong me signior Gremio, giue me leaue.
I am a Gentleman of Verona sir,
That hearing of her beauty, and her wit,
Her affability and bashfull modestie:
Her wondrous qualities, and milde behaviour
Am bold to shew my selfe a forward guest
Within your house, to make mine eye the witnesse
Of that report, which I so oft haue heard,
And for an entrance to my entertainment,
I do present you with a man of mine
Cunning in Musicke, and the Mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences,
Whereof I know she is not ignorant,
Accept of him, or else you do me wrong,
His name is Lato, borne in Mantua.

Bap. Y'are welcome sir, and he for your good sake.
But for my daughter Katerina, this I know,
She is not for your turne, the more my greefe.

Pet. I see you do not mean to part with her,
Or else you like not of my companie.

Bap. Mistake me not, I speake but as I finde,
Whence are you sir? What may I call your name.

Pet. Petruchio is my name, Antonio's sonne,
A man well knowne throughout all Italy

Bap. I know him well: you are welcome for his sake.

Gre. Saying your tale Petruchio, I pray let vs that are poore petitioners speake too: Baccare, you are marueylous forward

Pet. Oh, Pardon me signior Gremio, I would faine be doing.

Gre. I doubt it not sir. But you will curse
Your wooing neighbors: this is a gift
Very greefull, I am sure of it, to expresse
The like kindnesse my selfe, that haue beene
More kindely beholding to you then any:
Freely giue vnto this yong Scholler, that hath
Beene long studying at Rheims, as cunning
In Greeke, Latine, and other Languages,
As the other in Musicke and Mathematicks:
His name is Cambio: pray accept his seruice.

Bap. A thousand thankes signior Gremio:
Welcome good Cambio. But gentle sir,
Me thinkes you walke like a stranger,
May I be so bold, to know the cause of your comming

Tra. Pardon me sir, the boldnesse is mine owne,
That being a stranger in this Citie heere,
Do make my selfe a suitor to your daughter,
Vnto Bianca, faire and vertuous:
Nor is your firme resolue vnknowne to me,
In the preferment of the eldest sister.
This liberty is all that I request,
That vpon knowledge of my Parentage,
I may haue welcome amongst the rest that woo,
And free access and fauour as the rest.
And toward the education of your daughters:
I heere bestow a simple instrument,
And this small packet of Greeke and Latine bookes:
If you accept them, then their worth is great:

Bap. Lucentio is your name, of whence I pray.

Tra. Of Pisa sir, sonne to Vincentio

Bap. A mightie man of Pisa by report,
I know him well: you are verie welcome sir:
Take you the Lute, and you the set of bookes,
You shall go see your Pupils presently.
Holla, within.

Enter a Seruant.

Sirrah, leade these Gentlemen
To my daughters, and tell them both
These are their Tutors, bid them vse them well,
We will go walke a little in the Orchard,
And then to dinner: you are passing welcome,
And so I pray you all to thinke your selues.

Pet. Signior Baptista, my businesse asketh haste,
And euerie day I cannot come to woo,
You knew my father well, and in him me,
Left sole heire to all his Lands and goods,
Which I haue bettered rather then decreast,
Then tell me, if I get your daughters loue,
What dowrie shall I haue with her to wife.

Bap. After my death, the one halfe of my Lands,
And in possession twentie thousand Crownes.

Pet. And for that dowrie, I'le assure her of
Her widdow-hood, be it that she survive me
In all my Lands and Leases whatsoever,
Let specialties be therefore drawne betweene vs,
That couenants may be kept on either hand.

Bap. I, when the speciall thing is well obtain'd,
That is her loue: for that is all in all.

Pet. Why that is nothing: for I tell you father,
I am as peremptorie as she proud minded:
And where two raging fires meete together,
They do consume the thing that feedes their furie,
Though little fire growes great with little winde,
yet extreme gusts will blow out fire and all:
So I to her, and so she yeelds to me,
For I am rough, and woo not like a babe

Bap. Well maist thou woo, and happy be thy speed
But be thou armd for some vnhappie words.

Pet. I to the proofe, as Mountaines are for winds,
That shakes not, though they blow perpetually

Enter Hortensio with his head broke.

Bap. How now my friend, why dost thou looke so pale?

Hor. For feare I promise you, if I looke pale.

Bap. What, will my daughter prove a good Musitian?

Hor. I thinke she'l sooner prove a souldier,
Iron may hold with her, but never Lutes.

Bap. Why then thou canst not break her to the Lute?

Hor. Why no, for she hath broke the Lute to me:
I did but tell her she mistooke her frets,
And bow'd her hand to teach her fingering,
When (with a most impatient diuellish spirit)
Frets call you these? (quoth she) I'le fume with them:
And with that word she strooke me on the head,
And through the instrument my pate made way,
And there I stood amazed for a while,
As on a Pillorie, looking through the Lute,
While she did call me Rascall, Fidler;
And twangling Iacke, with twentie such vilde termes;
As had she studied to misvse me so.

Pet. Now by the world, it is a lusticie Wench,
I loue her tentimes more then ere I did,
Oh how I long to haue some chat with her.

Bap. Well go with me, and be not so discomfited.
Proceed in practise with my younger daughter,
She's apt to learne, and thankefull for good turnes:
Signior Petruchio, will you go with vs,
Or shall I send my daughter Kate to you.

Exit. Manet Petruchio.

Pet. I pray you do. I'le attend her heere,
And woo her with some spirit when she comes.
Say that she raile, why then I'le tell her plaine,
She sings as sweetly as a Nightinghale:
Say that she frowne, I'le say she lookes as cleere
As morning Roses newly washt with dew:
Say she be mute, and will not speake a word,
Then I'le commend her volubility,
And say she vttereth piercing eloquence.
If she do bid me packe, I'le giue her thanks,
As though she bid me stay by her a weeke:
If she denie to wed, I'le crave the day
When I shall aske the banes, and when be married.
But heere she comes, and now Petruchio speake.

Enter Katerina.

Good morrow Kate, for thats your name I heare.

Kate. Well haue you heard, but something hard of hearing:
They call me Katerine, that do talke of me.

Pet. You lye in faith, for you are call'd plaine Kate,
And bonny Kate, and sometimes Kate the curst:
But Kate, the prettiest Kate in Christendome,
Kate of Kate-hall, my super-dainte Kate,
For dainties are all Kates, and therefore Kate
Take this of me, Kate of my consolation,
Hearing thy mildnesse prais'd in every Towne,
Thy vertues spoke of, and thy beautie sounded,
Yet not so deeply as to thee belongs,
My selfe am moou'd to woo thee for my wife.

Kate. Mou'd, in good time, let him that mou'd you hither
Remoue you hence: I knew you at the first
You were a moueable.

Pet. Why, what's a moueable?

Kat. A loyn'd stoole.

Pet. Thou hast hit it: come sit on me.

Kate. Asses are made to beare, and so are you.

Pet. Women are made to beare, and so are you.

Kate. No such lade as you, if me you meane.

Pet. Alas good Kate, I will not burthen thee,
For knowing thee to be but yong and light.

Kate. Too light for such a swaine as you to catch,
And yet as heauie as my weight should be.

Pet. Should be, should: buzze.

Kate. Well tane, and like a buzzard.

Pet. Oh slow wing'd Turtle, shal a buzzard take thee?

Kat. I for a Turtle, as he takes a buzzard.

Pet. Come, come you Wespe, y'faith you are too angrie.

Kate. If I be waspish, best beware my sting.

Pet. My remedy is then to pluck it out.

Kate. I, if the foole could finde it where it lies.

Pet. Who knowes not where a Wespe does weare his sting? In his taile.

Kate. In his tongue?

Pet. Whose tongue.

Kate. Yours if you talke of tales, and so farewell.

Pet. What with my tongue in your taile.
Nay, come againe, good Kate, I am a Gentleman,

Kate. That I'le tria. she strikes him

Pet. I swearе I'le cuffe you, if you strike againe.

Kate. So may you loose your armes,
If you strike me, you are no Gentleman,
And if no Gentleman, why then no armes.

Pet. A Herald Kate? Oh put me in thy bookes.

Kate. What is your Crest, a Coxcombe?

Pet. A combleffe Cocke, so Kate will be my Hen.

Kate. No Cocke of mine, you crow too like a craven

Pet. Nay come Kate, come: you must not looke so sowre.

Kate. It is my fashion when I see a Crab.

Pet Why heere's no crab, and therefore looke not sowre.

Kate. There is, there is.

Pet. Then shew it me.

Kate. Had I a glasse, I would.

Pet. What, you meane my face.

Kate. Well aym'd of such a yong one.

Pet. Now by S. George I am too yong for you.

Kate. Yet you are wither'd.

Pet. 'Tis with cares.

Kate. I care not.

Pet. Nay heare you Kate. Infooth you scape not so.

Kate. I chafe you if I tarrie. Let me go.

Pet. No, not a whit, I finde you passing gentle:
'Twas told me you were rough, and coy, and sullen,
And now I finde report a very liar:
For thou art pleasant, gamesome, passing courteous,
But slow in speech: yet sweet as spring-time flowers.
Thou canst not frowne, thou canst not looke a sconce,
Nor bite the lip, as angry wenches will,
Nor hast thou pleasure to be crosse in talke:
But thou with mildnesse entertain'st thy wooers,
With gentle conference, soft, and affable.
Why does the world report that Kate doth limpe?
Oh sland'rous world: Kate like the hazle twig
Is straight, and slender, and as brown in hue
As hazle nuts, and sweeter than the kernels:
Oh let me see thee walke: thou dost not halt.

Kate. Go fooole, and whom thou keep'st commaund.

Pet. Did ever Dian so becomme a Grouie
As Kate this chamber with her princely gaie:
O be thou Dian, and let her be Kate,

And then let Kate be chaste, and Dian sportfull.
Kate. Where did you study all this goodly speech?
Petr. It is extempore, from my mother wit.
Kate. A witty mother, witless else her sonne.
Pet. Am I not wise?
Kat. Yes, keepe you warme.
Pet. Marry so I mean sweet Katherine in my bed:
And therefore setting all this chat aside,
Thus in plaine termes: your father hath consented
That you shall be my wife; your dowry greed on,
And will you, nill you, I will marry you.
Now Kate, I am a husband for your turne,
For by this light, whereby I see thy beauty,
Thy beauty that doth make me like thee well,
Thou must be married to no man but me.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio.

For I am he am borne to tame you Kate,
And bring you from a wilde Kate to a Kate
Conformable as other houshold Kates:
Heere comes your father, never make denyall,
I must, and will have Katherine to my wife. (daughter?
Bap. Now Signior Petruchio, how speed you with my
Pet. How but well sir how but well?
It were impossible I should speed amisse. (dumps?
Bap. Why how now daughter Katherine, in your
Kat. Call you me daughter? now I promise you
You have shewd a tender fatherly regard,
To wish me wed to one halfe Lunatiche,
A mad-cap ruffian, and a swearing Iacke,
That thinks no with oathes to face the matter out.
Pet. Father, 'tis thus, yourselfe and all the world
That talk'd of her, have talk'd amisse of her:
If she be curst, it is for policie,
For she's not froward, but modest as the Dove,
She is not hot, but temperate as the morne,
For patience shee will prove a second Griseld,
And Romane Lucrece for her chastitie:
And to conclude, we have greed so well together,
That upon sonday is the wedding day.
Kate. Ile see thee hang'd on sonday first. (first.
Gre. Hark Petruchio, she saies shee'll see thee hang'd
Tra. Is this your speeding? nay then godnight our part.
Pet. Be patient gentlemen, I choose her for my selfe,
If she and I be pleas'd, what's that to you?
'Tis bargain'd twixt vs twaine being alone,
That she shall still be curst in company.
Iesti you 'tis incredible to believe
How much she loves me: oh the kindest Kate,
She hung about my neckc, and kisse on kisse
Shee vs'd so fast, protesting oath on oath,
That in a twinke she won me to her love.
Oh you are novices, 'tis a world to see
How tame when men and women are alone,
A meacoche wretch can make the curstest shrew:
Give me thy hand Kate, I will vnto Venice
To buy apparell 'gainst the wedding day;
Provide the feast father, and bid the guests,
I will be sure my Katherine shall be fine.
Bap. I know not what to say, but give me your hands,
God send you joy, Petruchio, 'tis a match.
Gre. Tra. Amen say we, we will be witnesses.
Pet. Father, and wife, and gentlemen adieu,
I will to Venice, sonday comes apace,
We will have rings, and things, and fine array,
And kisse me Kate, we will be married a sonday.
Exit Petruchio and Katherine.
Gre. Was ever match clapt vp so suddenly?
Bap. Faith Gentlemen now I play a marchants part,
And venture madly on a desperate Mart.
Tra. Twas a commodity lay fretting by you,
I will bring you gaine, or perish on the seas.
Bap. The gaine I seeke, is quiet me the match.
Gre. No doubt but he hath got a quiet catch.
But now Baptista, to your younger daughter,
Now is the day we long have looked for,
I am your neighbour, and was suter first.
Tra. And I am one that love Bianca more
Then words can witnesse, or your thoughts can guesse.
Gre. Youngling thou canst not love so deare as I.
Tra. Gray-beard thy love doth freeze.
Gre. But thine doth fire,
Skipper stand backe, 'tis age that nourisheth.
Tra. But youth in Ladies eyes that florisheth.
Bap. Content you gentlemen, I will compound this strife
'Tis deeds must win the prize, and he of both
That can assure my daughter greatest dower,
Shall have my Bianca love.
Say signior Gremio, what can you assure her?
Gre. First, as you know, my house within the City
Is richly furnished with plate and gold,
Basons and ewers to lave her dainty hands:
My hangings all of tirian tapestry:
In iuory coffers I have stuft my crownes:
In Cypres chests my arras counterpoints,
Costly apparell, tents, and Canopies,
Fine Linnen, Turky cushions bost with pearle,
Vallens of Venice gold, in needle worke:
Pewter and brasse, and all things that belongs
To house or house-keeping: then at my farme
I have a hundred milch-kine to the pale,
Sixe-score fat Oxen standing in my stalls,
And all things answerable to this portion.
My selfe am strooke in yeeres I must confesse,
And if I die to morrow this is hers,
If whil'st I live she will be onely mine.
Tra. That only came well in: sir, list to me,
I am my fathers heyre and onely sonne,
If I may have your daughter to my wife,
Ile leave her houses three or foure as good
Within rich Pisa walls, as any one
Old Signior Gremio has in Padua,
Besides, two thousand Duckets by the yeere
Of fruitfull land, all which shall be her iointer.
What, have I pincht you Signior Gremio?
Gre. Two thousand Duckets by the yeere of land,
My Land amounts not to so much in all:
That she shall have, besides an Argosie
That now is lying in Marcellus roade:
What, have I choakt you with an Argosie?
Tra. Gremio, 'tis knowne my father hath no lesse
Then three great Argosies, besides two Galliasses
And twelve tite Galliles, these I will assure her,
And twice as much what ever thou offrest next.
Gre. Nay, I have offred all, I have no more,
And she can have no more then all I have,
If you like me, she shall have me and mine.
Tra. Why then the maid is mine from all the world
By your firme promise, Gremio is out vied.
Bap. I must confesse your offer is the best,
And let your father make her the assurance,

Shee is your owne, else you must pardon me:
If you should die before him, where's her dower?
Tra. That's but a cavill: he is olde, I young.
Gre. And may not yong men die as well as old?
Bap. Well gentlemen, I am thus resolu'd,
On sonday next, you know
My daughter Katherine is to be married:
Now on the sonday following, shall Bianca
Be Bride to you, if you make this assurance:
If not, to Signior Gremio:
And so I take my leave, and thanke you both. Exit.
Gre. A dieu good neighbour: now I feare thee not:
Sirra, yong gamester, your father were a foole
To give thee all, and in his wayning age
Set foot under thy table: tut, a toy,
An olde Italian fowle is not so kinde my boy. Exit.
Tra. A vengeance on your crafty withered hide,
Yet I have fac'd it with a card of ten:
'Tis in my head to doe my master good:
I see no reason but suppos'd Lucentio
Must get a father, call'd suppos'd Vincentio,
And that's a wonder: fathers commonly
Doe get their children: but in this case of woing,
A childe shall get a sire, if I faile not of my cunning. Exit.

Actus Tertia.

Enter Lucentio, Hortensio, and Bianca.

Luc. Fidler forbeare you grow too forward Sir,
Have you so soone forgot the entertainment
Her sister Katherine welcom'd you withall.
Hort. But wrangling pedant, this is
The patronesse of heavenly harmony:
Then give me leave to have prerogative,
And when in Musicke we have spent an houre,
Your Lecture shall have leisure for as much.
Luc. Preposterous Asse that never read so farre,
To know the cause why musicke was ordain'd:
Was it not to refresh the minde of man
After his studies, or his vsuall paine?
Then give me leave to read Philosophy,
And while I pause, serve in your harmony.
Hort. Sirra, I will not bearе these braves of thine.
Bianc. Why gentlemen, you doe me double wrong,
To strive for that which resteth in my choice:
I am no breeching scholler in the schooles,
I'le not be tied to hours, nor pointed times,
But learne my Lessons as I please my selfe,
And to cut off all strifes heere sit we downe,
Take you your instrument, play you the whiles,
His Lecture will be done ere you have tun'd.
Hort. You'll leave his Lecture when I am in tune?
Luc. That will be never, tune your instrument.
Bian. Where left we last?
Luc. Heere Madam: Hic ibat Simois, hic est Sigeia tellus, hic Stetit Priami regia Celsa senis.
Bian. Conster them.
Luc. Hic ibat, as I told you before, Simois, I am Lucentio, hic est, sonne vnto Vincentio of Pisa, Sigeia tellus, disguised thus to get your loue, hic Stetit, and that Lucentio that comes a wooing, priami, is my man Tranio, regia, bearing my port, celsa senis, that we might beguile the old Pant sleeuve.
Hort. Madam, my Instrument's in tune.
Bian. Let's heare, oh fie, the treble iarres.
Luc. Spit in the hole man, and tune again.
Bian. Now let mee see if I can conster it. Hic ibat Simois, I know you not, hic est Sigeia tellus, I trust you not, hic Stetit Priami, take heede he heare vs not, regia presume not, Celsa senis, despaire not.
Hort. Madam, tis now in tune.
Luc. All but the base.
Hort. The base is right, 'tis the base knaue that iars.
Luc. How fiery and forward our Pedant is,
Now for my life the knaue doth court my loue,
Pedascule, I'le watch you better yet:
In time I may believe, yet I mistrust.
Bian. Mistrust is not, for sure Aeacides
Was Ioue cald so from his grandfather.
Hort. I must believe my master, else I promise you,
I should be arguing still vpon that doubt,
But let it rest, now Latio to you:
Good master take it not vnkindly pray
That I have beene thus pleasant with you both.
Hort. You may go walk, and give me leave a while,
My Lessons make no musicke in three parts.
Luc. Are you so formall sir, well I must waite
And watch withall, for but I be deceiu'd,
Our fine Musitian groweth amorous.
Hor. Madam, before you touch the instrument,
To learne the order of my fingering,
I must begin with rudiments of Art,
To teach you gamouth in a briefer sort,
More pleasant, pithy, and effectuall,
Then hath beene taught by any of my trade,
And there it is in writing fairely drawne.
Bian. Why, I am past my gamouth long ago.
Hor. Yet read the gamouth of Hortensio.
Bian. Gamouth I am, the ground of all accord:
Ara, to plead Hortensio's passion:
Bemo, Bianca take him for thy Lord
Cfaut, that loues with all affection:
D solre, one Cliffe, two notes have I,
Elami, show pitty or I die.
Call you this gamouth? tut I like it not,
Old fashions please me best, I am not so nice
To charge true rules for old inuentions.
Enter a Messenger.
Nicky. Mistresse, your father prayes you leave your (books,
And helpe to dresse your sisters chamber vp,
You know to morrow is the wedding day.
Bian. Farewell sweet masters both, I must be gone.
Luc. Faith Mistresse then I have no cause to stay
Hor But I have cause to pry into this pedant,
Methinkes he looks as though he were in loue:
Yet if thy thoughts Bianca be so humble
To cast thy wandring eyes on every stale:
Seize thee that List, if once I finde thee ranging,
Hortensio will be quit with thee by changing. Exeu.

Enter Baptista, Gremio, Tranio, Katherine, Bianca, and others, attendants.

Bap. Signior Lucentio, this is the pointed day
That Katherine and Petruchio should be married,
And yet we heare not of our sonne in Law:
What will be said, what mockery will it be?
To want the Bride-groome when the Priest attends
To speake the ceremoniall rites of marriage?
What sales Lucentio to this shame of ours?

No

Kate. No thanks but mine, I meet forsooth be forst
To give my hand oppos'd against my heart
Vnto a mad-brain rudesby, full of spleene,
Who woo'd in haste, and means to wed at leysure:
I told you I, he was frantick foole,
Hiding his bitter iests in blunt behaviour,
And to be noted for a merry man;
Hee'l woo a thousand, point the day of marriage,
Make friends, invite, and proclaime the banes,
Yet never means to wed where he hath woo'd:
Now must the world point at poore Katherine,
And say, loe, there is mad Petruchio's wife
If he would please him come and marry her.

Tra. Patience good Katherine and Baptista too,
Vpon my life Petruchio means but well,
Whatever fortune stayes him from his word,
Though he be blunt, I know him passing wise
Though he be merry, yet withall he's honest.

Kate. Would Katherine had never seen him though. Exit weeping.

Bap. Goe girle, I cannot blame thee now to weepe,
For such an injurie would vexe a very saint,
Much more a shrew of impatient humour.

Enter Biondello.

Bion. Master, master, newes, and such newes as you never heard of.

Bap. Is it new and olde too? how may that be?

Bion. Why, is it not newes to heard of Petruchio's (comming?

Bap. Is he come?

Bion. Why no sir.

Bap. What then?

Bion. He is comming.

Bap. When will he be heere?

Bion. When he stands where I am, and sees you there.

Tra. But say, what to thine olde newes?

Bion. Why Petruchio is comming, in a new hat and an old ierkin, a pair of olde breeches thrice turn'd; a pair of boots that have beene candle-cases, one buckled, another lac'd: an olde rusty sword tane out of the Towne Armory, with a broken hilt, and chapelesse; with two broken points: his horse hip'd with an olde mothy saddle, and stirrops of no kindred: besides possest with the glanders, and like to mose in the chine, troubled with the Lampasse, infected with the fashions, full of Windegalls, sped with Spavins, rayed with the Yellowes, past cure of the Fives, starke spoyl'd with the Staggers, begnawne with the Bots, Waid in the backe, and shoulder-shotten, neere leg'd before, and with a halfe-cheeke Bitte, & a headfall of sheepes leather, which being restrain'd to keepe him from stumbling, hath been often burst, and now repaired with knots: one girth fixe times peec'd, and a womens Crupper of velure, which hath two letters for her name, fairely set down in studs, and here and there peec'd with packthred.

Bap. Who comes with him?

Bion. Oh sir, his Lackey, for all the world Caparison'd like the horse: with a linnen stock on one leg, and a kersey boot-hose on the other, gartered with a red and blew listes, an old hat, & the humor of forty fancies pricht in't for a feather: a monster, a very monster in apparell, & not like a Christian foot-boy, or a gentlemans Lacky.

Tra. Tis some od humor pricks him to this fashion,
Yet commonly he goes but meane apparel'd.

Bap. I am glad he's come howsoere he comes.

Bion. Why sir, he comes not.

Bap. Didst thou not say he comes?

Bion. Who, that Petruchio came?

Bap. I, that Petruchio came. (tacke.

Bion. No sir, I say his horse comes with him on his

Bap. Why that's all one.

Bion. Nay by S. Iaques, I hold you a penny, a horse and a man is more than one, and yet not many.

Enter Petruchio and Grumio.

Pet. Come, where be these gallants? who's at home

Bap. You are welcome sir.

Pet. And yet I come not well.

Bap. And yet you halt not.

Tra. Not so well apparell'd as I wish you were.

Pet. Were it better I should rush in thus:
But where is Kate? where is my lovely Bride?
How does my fathers gentles methinkes you frowne,
And wherefore gaze this goodly company,
As if they saw some wondrous monument,
Some Comet, or vnusuall prodigie?

Bap. Why sir, you know this is your wedding day
First were we sad, fearing you would not come,
Now sadder that you come so vnprovided:
Fie, doff this habit, shame to your estate,
An eye-sore to our solemne festivall.

Tra. And tell vs what occasion of import
Hath all so long detain'd you from your wife,
And sent you hither so vnlike your selfe?

Pet. Tedious it were to tell, and harsh to heare,
Sufficeth I am come to keepe my word,
Though in some part inforced to digresse,
Which at more leysure I will so excuse,
As you shall well be satisfied with all.
But where is Kate? I stay too long from her,
The morning weares, 'tis time we were at Church.

Tra. See not your Bride in these vnreuerent robes,
Goe to my chamber, put on clothes of mine.

Pet. Not I, believe me, thus I'le visit her.

Bap. But thus I trust you will not marry her. (words.

Pet. Good sooth even thus: therefore ha done with
To me she's married, not vnto my clothes:
Could I repaire what she will weare in me,
As I can change these poore accoutrements,
Twere well for Kate, and better for my selfe.
But what a fooles am I to chat with you,
When I should bid good morrow to my Bride?
And seale the title with a lovely kisse. Exit.

Tra. He hath some meaning in his mad attire,
We will perswade him be it possible,
To put on better ere he goe to Church.

Bap. I'le after him, and see the event of this. Exit.

Tra. But sir, Loue concerneth vs to adde
Her fathers liking, which to bring to passe
As before imparted to your worship,
I am to get a man what ere he be,
It skills not much, weele fit him to our turne,
And he shall be Vincentio of Pysa,
And make assurance heere in Padua
Of greater summes then I have promised,
So shall you quietly enioy your hope,
And marry sweet Bianca with consent.

Luc. Were it not that my fellow schoolemaster
Doth watch Bianca's steps so narrowly:
Twere good me-thinkes to steale our marriage,
Which once perform'd, let all the world say no,
I'le keepe mine owne despite of all the world.

Tra. That by degrees we meane to looke into,

And watch our vantage in this businesse,
We'll ouer-reach the grey-beard Gremio,
The narrow prying father Minola,
The quaint Musician, amorous Lucio,
All for my Masters sake Lucentio.

Enter Gremio.

Signior Gremio, came you from the Church?
Gre. As willingly as ere I came from schoole.
Tra. And is the Bride & Bridegroom coming home?
Gre. A bridegroome say you? 'tis a groome indeed,
A grumbling groome, and that the girle shall finde.
Tra. Curster then she, why 'tis impossible.
Gre. Why hee's a deuill, a deuill, a very fiend.
Tra. Why she's a deuill, a deuill, the deuils damme.
Gre. Tut, she's a Lambe, a Doue, a foole to him:
Ile tell you sir Lucentio; when the Priest
Should aske if Katherine should be his wife,
I, by gogs wounes quoth he, and swore so loud,
That all amaz'd the Priest let fall the booke,
And as he stoop'd againe to take it vp,
This mad-brain'd bridegroome tooke him such a cuffe,
That downe fell Priest and booke, and booke and Priest,
Now take them vp quoth he, if any list.
Tra. What said the wench when he rose againe?
Gre. Trembled and shooke: for why, he stamp'd and swore, as if the Vicar meant to cozen him: but after many ceremonies done, hee calls for wine, a health quoth he, as if he had beene aboard carowsing to his Mates after a storme, quaft off the Muscadell, and threw the sops all in the Sextons face: hauing no other reason, but that his beard grew thinne and hungerly, and seem'd to aske him sops as hee was drinking: This done, hee tooke the Bride about the necke, and kist her lips with such a clamorous smacke, that at the parting all the Church did eccho: and I seeing this, came thence for very shame, and after mee I know the rout is comming, such a mad marriage neuer was before: harke, harke, I heare the minstrels play. Musicke plays.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Bianca, Hortensio, Baptista.

Pet. Gentlemen & friends, I thank you for your paine,
I know you thinke to dine with me to day,
And haue prepar'd great store of wedding cheere,
But so it is, my haste doth call me hence,
And therefore heere I meane to take my leaue.
Bap. Is't possible you will away to night?
Pet. I must away to day before night come,
Make it no wonder: if you knew my businesse,
You would intreat me rather goe then stay:
And honest company, I thanke you all,
That haue beheld me giue away my selfe
To this most patient, sweet, and vertuous wife,
Dine with my father, drinke a health to me,
For I must hence, and farewell to you all.
Tra. Let vs intreat you stay till after dinner.
Pet. It may not be.
Gra. Let me intreat you,
Pet. It cannot be.
Kat. Let me intreat you.
Pet. I am content.
Kat. Are you content to stay?
Pet. I am content you shall entreat me stay,
But yet not stay, entreat me how you can.
Kat. Now if you loue me stay.
Pet. Grumio, my horse.
Gru. I sir, they be ready, the Oates haue eaten the horses.
Kate. Nay then,
Doe what thou canst, I will not goe to day,
No, not to morrow, not till I please my selfe,
The dore is open sir, there lies your
You may be iogging whiles your boots are greene:
For me, Ile not be gone till I please my selfe
'Tis like you'll proue a lolly surly groome,
That take it on you at the first so roundly.
Pet. O Kate content thee, prethee be not angry.
Kat. I will be angry, what hast thou to doe?
Father, be quiet, he shall stay my leisure.
Gru. I marry sir, now it begins to worke.
Kat. Gentlemen, forward to the bridall dinner,
I see a woman may be made a foole
If she had not a spirit to resist.
Pet. They shall goe forward Kate at thy commaund
Obey the Bride you that attend on her.
Goe to the feast, reuell and domineere,
Carowse full measure to her maiden-head,
Be madde and merry, or goe hang your selues:
But for my bonny Kate, she must with me:
Nay, looke not big, nor stampe, nor stare, nor fret,
I will be master of what is mine owne.
Shee is my goods, my chattels, she is my house,
My houshold-stuffe, my field, my barne,
My horse, my oxe, my asse, my any thing,
And heere she stands, touch her who euer dare,
Ile bring mine action on the proudest he
That stops my way in Padua: Grumio
Draw forth thy weapon, we are bets with theeues,
Rescue thy Mistresse if thou be a man:
Feare not sweet wench, they shall not touch thee Kate,
Ile buckler thee against a Million. Exeunt. P. Kat.
Bap. Nay, let them goe, a coeple of quiet ones. (ing
Gre. Went they not quickly, I should die with laugh-
Tra. Of all mad matches neuer was the like.
Luc. Mistresse, what's your opinion of your sister?
Bian. That being mad her selfe, she's madly mated.
Gre. I warrant him Petruchio is Kated.
Bap. Neighbours and friends, though Bride & Bride-groom wants
For to supply the places at the table, (groom wants
You know there wants no iunkets at the feast:
Lucentio, you shall supply the Bridegroomes place,
And let Bianca take her sisters roome.
Tra. Shall sweet Bianca practise how to bride it?
Bap. She shall Lucentio: come gentlemen lets goe. Exeunt.

Enter Grumio.

Gru: Fie, fie on all tired lades, on all mad Masters, & all foule wayes: was euer man so beaten? was euer man so raide? was euer man so weary? I am sent before to make a fire, and they are comming after to warme them: now were not I a little pot, & soone hot; my very lippes might freeze to my teeth, my tongue to the roofe of my mouth, my heart in my belly, ere I should come by a fire to thaw me, but I with blowing the fire shall warme my selfe: for considering the weather, a taller man then I will take cold. Holla, hoa Curtis.

Enter Curtis.

Curt. Who is that calls so coldly?
Gru. A piece of Ice: if thou doubt it, thou maist slide from my shoulder to my heele, with no greater greater a run but my head and my necke. A fire good Curtis.

Cur. Is my master and his wife comming Grumio?

Gru. Oh I Curtis I, and therefore fire, fire, cast on no water.

Cur. Is she so hot a shrew as she's reported.

Gru. She was good Curtis before this frost: but thou know'st winter tames man, woman, and beast: for it hath tam'd my old master, and my new mistris, and my selfe fellow Curtis.

Gru. Away you three inch foole, I am no beast.

Gru. Am I but three inches? Why thy horne is a foot and so long am I at the least. But wilt thou make a fire or shall I complaine on thee to our mistris, whose hand (she being now at hand) thou shalt soone feele, to thy cold comfort, for being slow in thy hot office.

Cur. I prethee good Grumio, tell me, how goes the world?

Gru. A cold world Curtis in every office but thine, & therefore fire: do thy duty, and haue thy duetie, for my Master and mistris are almost frozen to death.

Cur. There's fire readie, and therefore good Grumio the newes.

Gru. Why Iacke boy, ho boy, and as much newes as wilt thou.

Cur. Come, you are so full of conicatching.

Gru. Why therefore fire, for I haue caught extreme cold. Where's the Cooke, is supper ready, the house trim'd, rushes strew'd, cobwebs swept, the seruingmen in their new fustian, the white stockings, and every officer his wedding garment on? Be the Iacker faire within, the Gills faire without, the Carpets laide, and everie thing in order?

Cur. All readie: and therefore I prey thee newes.

Gru. First know my horse is tired, my master & mistris falne out. Cur. How?

Gru. Out of their saddles into the dirt, and thereby hangs a tale.

Cur. Let's he'r good Grumio.

Gru. Lend thine eare.

Cur. Heere.

Gru. There.

Cur. This 'tis to feele a tale, not to heare a tale

Gru. And therefore 'tis cal'd a sensible tale: and this Cuffe was but to knocke at your eare, and beseech listning: now I begin, Imprimis we came downe a fowle hill, my Master riding behinde my Mistris.

Cur. Both of one horse?

Gru. What's that to thee?

Cur. Why a horse.

Gru. Tell thou the tale: but hadst thou not crost me, thou shouldst haue heard how her horse fel, and she vnder her horse: thou shouldst haue heard in how miery a place, how she was bemoil'd, how hee left her with the horse vpon her, how he beat me because her horse stumbled, how she waded through the dirt to pluck him off me: how he swore, how she prai'd, that never prai'd before: how I cried, how the horses ranne away, how her bridle was burst: how I lost my crupper, with many things of worthy memorie, which now shall die in oblivion, and thou returne vnexperienc'd to thy graue.

Cur. By this reckning he is more shrew than she.

Gru. I, and that thou and the proudest of you all shall finde when he comes home. But what talke I of this? Call forth Nathanel, Ioseph, Nicholas, Philip, Walter, Sugersop and the rest: let their heads bee slickely comb'd, their blew coats brush'd, and their garters of an indifferent knit, let them curtsie with their left legges, and not presume to touch a haire of my Masters horse-taile, till they kisse their hands. Are they all readie?

Cur. They are.

Gru. Call them forth.

Cur. Do you heare ho? you must meete my maister to countenance my mistris.

Gru. Why she hath a face of her owne

Cur. Who knowes not that?

Gru. Thou it seemes, thou cals for company to countenance her.

Cur. I call them forth to credit her.

Enter foure or five seruingmen.

Gru. Why she comes to borrow nothing of them

Nat. Welcome home Grumio.

Phil. How now Grumio.

Ios. What Grumio.

Nick. Fellow Grumio.

Nat. How now old lad.

Gru. Welcome you: how now you: what you: fellow you: and thus much for greeting. Now my spruce companions, is all readie, and all things neate?

Nat. All things is readie, how neere is our master?

Gru. E'ne at hand, alighted by this: and therefore be neat——Cockes passion, silence, I heare my master

Enter Petruchio and Kate.

Pet. Where be these knaues? What no man at doore
To hold my stirrop, nor to take my horse?
Where is Nathaniel, Gregory, Philip.

All ser. Heere, heere sir, heere sir.

Pet. Heere sir, heere sir, heere sir, heere sir.
You logger-headed and vnpolisht groomes:
What? no attendance? no regard? no duetie?
Where is the foolish knaue I sent before?

Gru. Heere sir, as foolish as I was before.

Pet. You peasant, swaine, you horson male-horse drudge
Did I not bid thee meete me in the Parke,
And bring along these rascal knaues with thee?

Grumio. Nathaniels coate sir was not fully made,
And Gabrels pumpes were all vnpinkt i'th heele:
There was no Linke to colour Peters hat,
And Walters dagger was not come from sheathing:
There were none fine, but Adam, Rafe, and Gregory,
The rest were ragged, old, and beggerly,
Yet as they are, heere are they come to meete you

Pet. Go rascals, go, and fetch my supper in. Ex. Ser
Where is the life that late I led?
Where are those? Sit downe Kate,
And welcome. Soud, soud, soud, soud.

Enter seruants with supper.

Why when I say? Nay good sweete Kate be merrie.
Off with my boots, you rogues: you villaines, when?
It was the Friar of Orders grey,
As he forth walked on his way.
Out you rogue, you plucke my foote awrie,
Take that, and mend the plucking of the other.
Be merrie Kate: Some water heere: what hoa.

Enter one with water.

Where's my Spaniel Trolius? Sirra, get you hence,
And bid my cozen Ferdinand come hither:
One Kate that you must kisse, and be acquainted with.
Where are my Slippers? Shall I haue some water?
Come Kate and wash, & welcome heartily:
you horson villaine, will you let it fall?

Kate. Patience I pray you, 'twas a fault vnwilling.
Pet. A horson beetle-headed flap-ear'd knaue:
Come Kate sit downe, I know you haue a stomacke,
Will you giue thankes, sweete Kate, or else shall I?
What's this, Mutton?
1. Ser. I.
Pet. Who brought it?
Peter. I.
Pet. 'Tis burnt, and so is all the meate:
What dogges are these? Where is the rascall Cooke?
How durst you villaines bring it from the dresser
And seruе it thus to me that loue it not?
There, take it to you, trenchers, cups, and all:
You beedlesse iolt-heads, and vnmanner'd slaues.
What, do you grumble? I'le be with you straight
Kate. I pray you husband be not so disquiet,
The meate was well, if you were so contented.
Pet. I tell thee Kate, 'twas burnt and dried away,
And I expressly am forbid to touch it:
For it engenders choller, planteth anger,
And better 'twere that both of vs did fast
Since of our selues, our selues are cholleriche.
Then feede it with such ouen-rosted flesh:
Be patient, to morrow 't shalbe mended,
And for this night we'l fast for compasse.
Come I will bring thee to thy Bridall chamber. Exeunt.
Enter Seruants seuerally.
Nath. Peter dost euer see the like.
Peter. He kils her in her owne humor.
Grumio. Where is he?
Enter Curtis a Seruant.
Cur. In her chamber, making a sermon of continencie to her, and railes, and sweares, and rates, that shee (poore soule) knowes not which way to stand, to looke, to speake, and sits as one new-risen from a dreame. Away, away, for he is comming hither.
Enter Petruchio.
Pet. Thus haue I politickely begun my reigne,
And 'tis my hope to end successefully:
My Faulcon now is sharpe, and passing emptie,
And til she stoope, she must not be full gorg'd,
For then she never looks vpon her lure.
Another way I haue to man my Haggard,
To make her come, and know her Keepers call:
That is, to watch her, as we watch these Kites,
That baite, and beate, and will not be obedient.
She eate no meate to day, nor none shall eate.
Last night she slept not, nor to night she shall not:
As with the meate, some vnadeserued fault
I'le finde about the making of the bed,
And here I'le fling the pillow, there the bolster,
This way the Couerlet, another way the sheets:
I, and mid this hurlie I intend,
That all is done in reuerend care of her,
And in conclusion, she shal watch all night,
And if she chance to nod I'le raile and brawle,
And with the clamor keepe her still awake:
This is a way to kil a Wife with kindnesse,
And thus I'le curbe her mad and headstrong humor:
He that knowes better how to tame a shrew,
Now let him speake, 'tis charity to shew. Exit
Enter Tranio and Hortensio:
Tra. Is't possible friend Lisio, that mistris Bianca
Doth fancie any other but Lucentio,
I tell you sir, she beares me faire in hand.
Luc. Sir, to satisfie you in what I haue said,
Stand by, and marke the manner of his teaching.
Enter Bianca.
Hor. Now Mistris, profit you in what you reade?
Bian. What Master reade you first, resolue me that?
Hor. I reade, that I professe the Art to loue.
Bian. And may you prouе her Master of your Art.
Luc. While you sweet dearе prouе Mistresse of my heart.
Hor. Quicke proceeders marry, now tel me I pray, you that durst sweare that your mistris Bianca Lou'd me in the World so wel as Lucentio.
Tra. Oh despighteful Loue, vnconstant womankind, I tel thee Lisio this is wonderfull.
Hor. Mistake no more, I am not Lisio, Nor a Musician as I seeme to bee, But one that scorne to liue in this disguise, For such a one as leaues a Gentleman, And makes a God of such a Cullion; Know sir, that I am cal'd Hortensio.
Tra. Signior Hortensio, I haue often heard Of your entire affection to Bianca, And since mine eyes are witnesse of her lightnesse, I wil with you, if you be so contented, Forswearе Bianca, and her loue for euer.
Hor. See how they kisse and court: Signior Lucentio Heere is my hand, and heere I firmly vow Neuer to woo her more, but do forsweare her As one vnworthie all the former fauours That I haue fondly flatter'd them withall.
Tra. And heere I take the like vnfained oath, Never to marrie with her, though she would intreate, Fie on her, see how beastly she doth court him.
Hor. Would all the world but he had quite forsworn For me, that I may surely keepe mine oath I wil be married to a wealthy Widdow, Ere three dayes passe, which hath as long lou'd me, As I haue lou'd this proud disdainful Haggard, And so farewel signior Lucentio, Kindnesse in women, not their beauteous looks Shal win my loue, and so I take my leaue, In resolution, as I swore before.
Tra. Mistris Bianca, blesse you with such grace, As longeth to a Louers blessed case: Nay, I haue tane you napping gentle Loue, And haue forsworne you with Hortensio.
Bian. Tranio you iest, but haue you both forsworne mee?
Tra. Mistris we haue.
Luc. Then we are rid of Lisio.
Tra. I faith hee'l haue a lustie Widdow now, That shalbe woo'd, and wedded in a day.
Bian. God giue him ioy.
Tra. I, and hee'l tame her.
Bianca. He saies so Tranio.
Tra. Faith he is gone vnto the taming schoole.
Bian. The taming schoole: what is there such a place?
Tra. I mistris, and Petruchio is the master, That teacheth trickes eleuen and twentie long, To tame a shrew, and charme her chattering tongue.
Enter Biondello.
Bion. Oh Master, master I haue watcht so long, That I am dogge-weary, but at last I spied An ancient Angel comming downe the hill, Will serue the turne.
Tra. What is he Biondello?
Bio. Master, a Mercatante, or a pedante,

I

I know not what, but formall in apparell,
In gate and countenance surely like a Father.
Luc. And what of him Tranio?
Tra. If he be credulous, and trust my tale,
Ile make him glad to seeme Vincentio,
And give assurance to Baptista Minola,
As if he were the right Vincentio.
Pet. Take me your loue, and then let me alone.
Enter a Pedant.
Ped. God save you sir.
Tra. And you sir, you are welcome,
Travaile you farre on, or are you at the farthest?
Ped. Sir at the farthest for a weeke or two,
But then vp farther, and as farre as Rome,
And so to Tripolis, if God lend me life.
Tra. What Countreyman I pray?
Ped. Of Mantua.
Tra. Of Mantua Sir, marrie God forbid,
And come to Padua carelesse of your life.
Ped. My life sir? how I pray? for that goes hard.
Tra. 'Tis death for any one in Mantua
To come to Padua, know you not the cause?
Your ships are staid at Venice, and the Duke
For priuate quarrel 'twixt your Duke and him,
Hath publish'd and proclaim'd it openly:
'Tis verrie ile, but that you are but newly come,
you might haue heard it else proclaim'd about.
Ped. Alas sir, it is worse for me then so,
For I haue bills for money by exchange
From Florence, and must heere deliver them.
Tra. Wel sir, to do you courtesie,
This will I do, and this I will aduise you.
First tell me, haue you ever beene at Pisa?
Ped. I sir, in Pisa haue I often bin,
Pisa renowned for grave Citizens.
Tra. Among them know you one Vincentio?
Ped. I know him not, but I haue heard of him:
A Merchant of incomparable wealth.
Tra. He is my father sir, and sooth to say,
In countenance somewhat doth resemble you.
Bion. As much as an apple doth an oyster, & all one.
Tri. To save your life in this extremitie,
This fauor will do you for his sake,
And thinke it not the worst of all your fortunes,
That you are like to Sir Vincentio.
His name and credite shal you vndertake,
And in my house you shal be friendly lodg'd,
Looke that you take vpon you as you should,
you vnderstand me sir: so shal you stay
Til you haue done your business in the Citie:
If this be court'sie sir, accept of it.
Ped. Oh sir I do, and will repute you ever
The patron of my life and libertie.
Tra. Then go with me, to make the matter good,
This by the way I let you vnderstand,
My father is heere look'd for every day,
To passe assurance of a dowre in marriage
Twixt me, and one Baptista daughter heere:
In all these circumstances I'le instruct you,
Go with me to cloath you as becomes you. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Katherina and Grumio.

Gru. No, not forsooth I dare not for my life.
Ka. The more my wrong, the more his spite appeares.
What, did he marrie me to famish me?
Beggers that come vnto my fathers doore,
Vpon intreatie haue a present alms,
If not, elsewhere they meete with charitie:
But I, who never knew how to intreat,
Nor never needed that I should intreate,
Am starv'd for meter, giddie for lacke of sleepe:
With oathes kept waking, and with brawling fed,
And that which spightes me more then all these wants,
He does it vnder name of perfect loue:
As who should say, if I should sleepe or eate,
'Twere deadly sicknesse, or else present death.
I prethee go, and get me some repast,
I care not what, so it be holsome foode.
Gru. What say you to a Neats foote?
Kate. 'Tis passing good, I prethee let me haue it.
Gru. I feare it is too cholleric a meate.
How say you to a fat Tripe finely broy'd?
Kate. I like it well good Grumio fetch it me.
Gru. I cannot tell I feare 'tis choleric.
What say you to a peece of Beefe and Mustard?
Kate. A dish that I do loue to feede vpon.
Gru. I, but the Mustard is too hot a little.
Kate. Why then the Beefe, and let the Mustard rest.
Gru. Nay then I wil not, you shal haue the Mustard
Or else you get no beefe of Grumio.
Kate. Then both or one, or any thing thou wilt.
Gru. Why then the Mustard without the beefe.
Kate. Go get thee gone, thou false deluding slaue,
Beats him.
That feed'st me with the verie name of meate.
Sorrow on thee, and all the packe of you
That triumph thus vpon my misery:
Go get thee gone, I say.

Enter Petruchio, and Hortensio with meate.

Pet. How fares my Kate, what sweeting all a-moat?
Hor. Mistris, what cheere?
Kate. Faith as cold as can be.
Pet. Pluck vp thy spirits, looke cheerfully vpon me.
Heere Loue, thou feest how diligent I am,
To dresse thy meate my selfe, and bring it thee.
I am sure sweet Kate, this kindnesse merites thankes.
What, not a word? Nay then, thou lou'st it not:
And all my paines is sorted to no proofe.
Heere take away this dish.
Kate. I pray you let it stand.
Pet. The poorest seruice is repaid with thankes,
And so shall mine before you touch the meate.
Kate. I thanke you sir.
Hor. Signior Petruchio, fie you are too blame:
Come Mistris Kate, Ile beare you companie.
Pet. Eate it vp all Hortensio, if thou loues't mee:
Much good do it vnto thy gentle heart:
Kate eate apace; and now my honie Loue,
Will we returne vnto thy Fathers house,
And reuell it as brauely as the best.
With silken coats and caps, and golden Rings,
With Ruffes and Cuffes, and Fardingales, and things:
With Scarfes, and Fannes, & double change of brau'ry,
With Amber Bracelets, Beades, and all this knau'ry.
What hast thou din'd? The Tailor stales thy leasure,
To decke thy bodie with his ruffling treasure.
Enter Tailor.

Come

Come Tailor, let vs see these ornaments.

Enter Haberdasher.

Lay forth the gowne. What newes with you sir?

Fel. Heere is the cap your Worship did bespeake.

Pet. Why this was moulded on a porrenger,
A Velvet dish: fie, fie, 'tis lewd and filthy,
Why 'tis a cockle or a walnut-shell,
A knacke, a toy, a tricke, a babies cap:
Away with it, come let me haue a bigger.

Kate. Ile haue no bigger, this doth fit the time,
And Gentlewomen weare such caps as these

Pet. When you are gentle, you shall haue one too,
And not till then.

Hor. That will not be in haste.

Kate. Why sir I trust I may haue leaue to speake,
And speake I will. I am no childe, no babe,
Your betters haue indur'd me say my minde,
And if you cannot, best you stop your eares.
My tongue will tell the anger of my heart,
Or els my heart concealing it will breake,
And rather then it shall, I will be free,
Even to the vttermost as I please in words.

Pet. Why thou saist true, it is paltrie cap,
A custard coffen, a bauble, a silken pie,
I love thee well in that thou lik'st it not

Kate. Loue me, or loue me not, I like the cap,
And it I will haue, or I will haue none.

Pet. Thy gowne, why I a come Tailor let vs see't.
Oh mercie God, what masking stuffe is heere?
Whats that? a sleeue? 'tis like demi cannon,
What, vp and downe carv'd like an apple Tart?
Heere's snip, and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,
Like to a Censor in a barbers shoppe:
Why what a deuils name Tailor call'st thou this?

Hor. I see shees like to haue neither cap nor gowne.

Tai. You bid me make it orderlie and well,
According to the fashion, and the time.

Pet. Marrie and did: but if you be remembred,
I did not bid you marre it to the time
Go hop me ouer every kennell home,
For you shall hop without my custome sir:
Ile none of it; hence, make your best of it.

Kate. I neuer saw a better fashion'd gowne,
More quaint, more pleasing, nor more commendable:
Belike you meane to make a puppet of me.

Pet. Why true, he meanes to make a puppet of thee.

Tail. She saies your Worship meanes to make a puppet of her

Pet. Oh monstrous arrogance:
Thou lyest, thou thred, thou thimble,
Thou yard three quarters, halfe yard, quarter, nalle,
Thou Flea, thou Nit, thou winter cricket thou:
Brau'd in mine owne house with a skeine of thred:
Away thou Ragge, thou quantitie, thou remnant,
Or I shall so be-mete thee with thy yard,
As thou shalt thinke on prating whil'st thou liu'st:
I tell thee I, that thou hast marr'd her gowne.

Tail. Your worship is deceiu'd, the gowne is made,
Just as my master had direction:
Grumio gaue order how it should be done.

Gru. I gaue him no order, I gaue him the stuffe.

Tail. But how did you desire it should be made?

Gru. Marrie sir with needle and thred.

Tail. But did you not request to haue it cut?

Gru. Thou hast fac'd many things.

Tail. I haue.

Gru. Face not me: thou hast brau'd manie man-brouse not me; I will neither be fac'd nor brau'd. I say vnto thee, I bid thy Master cut out the gowne, but I did not bid him cut it to peeces. Ergo thou liest.

Tail. Why heere is the note of the fashion to testifie.

Pet. Reade it.

Gru. The note lies in's throate if he say I said so.

Tail. Imprimis, a loose bodied gowne.

Gru. Master, if ever I said loose-bodied gowne, sew me in the skirts of it, and beate me to death with a bot-
tome of browne thred: I said a gowne.

Pet. Proceede.

Tai. With a small compast cape.

Gru. I confesse the cape.

Tai. With a trunke sleeue.

Gru. I confesse two sleeues.

Tai. The sleeues curiously cut.

Pet. I there's the villaine.

Gru. Error i'th bill sir, error i'th bill? I commanded the sleeues should be cut out, and sew'd vp againe, and that Ile prove vpon thee, though thy little finger be armed in a thimble.

Tail. This is true that I say, and I had thee in place where thou shouldst know it.

Gru. I am for thee straight: take thou the bill, giue me thy mete-yard, and spare not me.

Hor. God-a-mercie Grumio, then he shall haue no odds.

Pet. Well sir in breefe, the gowne is not for me.

Gru. You are i'th right sir, 'tis for my mistris.

Pet. Go take it vp vnto thy masters vse.

Gru. Villaine, not for thy life: Take vp my Mistresse gowne for thy masters vse.

Pet. Why sir, what's your conceit in that?

Gru. Oh sir, the conceit is deeper then you think for.
Take vp my Mistris gowne to his masters vse.
Oh fie, fie, fie.

Pet. Hortensio, say thou wilt see the Tailor paide.
Go take it hence, be gone, and say no more.

Hor. Tailor, Ile pay thee for thy gowne to morrow,
Take no vnkindnesse of his hasty words:
Away I say, commend me to thy master. Exit Tail.

Pet. Well, come my Kate, we will vnto your father,
Even in these honest mean habiliments:
Our purses shall be proud, our garments poore:
For 'tis the minde that makes the bodie rich.
And as the Sunne breakes through the darkest clouds,
So honor peereth in the meanest habit.
What is the Iay more precious then the Larke?
Because his feathers are more beautifull.
Or is the Adder better then the Eele,
Because his painted skin contents the eye.
Oh no good Kate; neither art thou the worse
For this poore furniture, and meane array.
If thou accountest it shame, lay it on me,
And therefore frolicke, we will hence forthwith,
To feast and sport vs at thy fathers house,
Go call my men, and let vs straight to him,
And bring our horses vnto Long-lane end,
There wil we mount, and thither walke on foote,
Let's see, I thinke 'tis now some seuen a clocke,
And well we may come there by dinner time.

Kate. I dare assure you sir, 'tis almost two,
And 'twill be supper time ere you come there.

Pet. It shall be seuen ere I go to horse:
Looke what I speake, or do, or thinke to doe,

You

You are still crossing it, sirs let't alone,
I will not goe to day, and ere I doe,
It shall be what a clock I say it is.
Hor. Why so this gallant will command the sonne.

Enter Tranio, and the Pedant drest like Vincentio.

Tra. Sirs, this is the house, please it you that I call.
Ped. I what else, and but I be deceiued,
Signior Baptista may remember me
Neere twentie yeares a goe in Genoa.
Tra. Where we were lodgers, at the Pegasus,
Tis well, and hold your owne in any case
With such austeritie as longeth to a father.

Enter Biondello.

Ped. I warrant you: but sir here comes your boy,
Twere good he were school'd.
Tra. Feare you not him: sirra Biondello,
Now do your dutie throughtie I admire you:
Imagine 'twere the right Vincentio.
Bion. Tut, feare not me.
Tra. But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista.
Bion. I told him that your father was at Venice,
And that you look't for him this day in Padua.
Tra. Th'art a tall fellow, hold thee that to drinke.
Here comes Baptista: set your countenance sir.

Enter Baptista and Lucentio: Pedant bared and bare headed.

Tra. Signior Baptista you are happilie met:
Sir, this is the gentleman I told you of,
I pray you stand good father to me now,
Giue me Bianca for my patrimony.
Ped. Soft son: sir by your leaue, having com to Padua
To gather in some debts, my son Lucentio
Made me acquainted with a weighty cause
Of loue betweene your daughter and himselfe:
And for the good report I heare of you,
And for the loue he beareth to your daughter,
And she to him: to stay him not too long,
I am content in a good fathers care
To haue him matcht, and if you please to like
No worse then I, vpon some agreement
Me shall you finde readie and willing
With one consent to haue her so bestowed:
For curious I cannot be with you
Signior Baptista, of whom I heare so well.
Bap. Sir, pardon me in what I haue to say,
Your plainnesse and your shortnesse please me well:
Right true it is your sonne Lucentio here
Doth loue my daughter, and she loueth him,
Or both dissemble deeply their affections:
And therefore if you say no more then this,
That like a Father you will deale with him,
And pass my daughter a sufficient dower,
The match is made, and all is done,
Your sonne shall haue my daughter with consent.
Tra. I thanke you sir, where then doe you know best
We be affied and such assurance tane,
As shall with either parts agreement stand.
Bap. Not in my house Lucentio, for you know
Pitchers haue eares, and I haue manie seruants,
Besides old Gremio is hearkning still,
And happilie we might be interrupted.
Tra. Then at my lodging, and it like you,
There doth my father lie: and there this night
We'le pass the businesse priuately and well:
Send for your daughter by your seruant here,
My Boy shall fetch the Scriuener presently,
The worst is this that at so slender warning,
You are like to haue a thin and slender pittance.
Bap. It likes me well:
Cambio hie you home, and bid Bianca make her readie
straights:
And if you will tell what hath hapned,
Lucentio Father is arriued in Padua,
And how she's like to be Lucentio's wife.
Biond. I praise the gods she may withall my heart. Exit.
Tran. Dallie not with the gods, but get thee gone.

Enter Pater.

Signior Baptista, shall I leade the way,
We come, one messe is like to be your cheere,
Come sir, we will better it in Pisa.
Bap. I follow you. Exeunt.

Enter Lucentio and Biondello.

Bion. Cambio.
Luc. What saist thou Biondello.
Biond. You saw my Master winke and laugh vpon you?
Luc. Biondello, what of that?
Biond. Faith nothing: but has left mee here behinde to expound the meaning or morrall of his signes and tokens.
Luc. I pray thee moralize them.
Biond. Then thus: Baptista is safe talking with the deceiuing father of a deceitfull sonne.
Luc. And what of him?
Biond. His daughter is to be brought by you to the supper.
Luc. And then.
Bio. The old Priest at Saint Luke's Church is at your command at all houres.
Luc. And what of all this.
Bion I cannot tell, expect they are busied about a counterfeit assurance: take you assurance of her. Cum privilegio ad imprimendum solum, to th' Church take the Priest, Clarke, and some sufficient honest witnesses:
If this be not that you looke for, I haue no more to say,
But bid Bianca farewell for euer and a day.
Luc. Hear'st thou Biondello.
Biond. I cannot tarry: I knew a wench married in an afternoone as she went to the Garden for Parseley to stuffe a Rabit, and so may you sir: and so adew sir, my Master hath appointed me to goe to Saint Luke's to bid the Priest be readie to come against you come with your appendix. Exit.
Luc. I may and will, if she be so contented:
She will be pleas'd, then wherefore should I doubt:
Hap what hap may, I'le roundly goe about her:
It shall goe hard if Cambio goe without her. Exit.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Hortensio

Petr Come on a Gods name, once more toward our fathers:
Good Lord how bright and goodly shines the Moone.
Kate. The Moone, the Sunne: it is not Moonelight now.
Pet. I say it is the Moone that shines so bright.
Kate. I know it is the Sunne that shines so bright.
Pet. Now by my mothers sonne, and that's my selfe,
It

It shall be moone, or starre, or what I list,
Or ere I iourney to your Fathers house:
Goe on, and fetch our horses backe agame.
Euermore crost and crost, nothing but crost.

Hort. Say as he saies, or we shall neuer goe.

Kate. Forward I pray, since we haue come so farre,
And be it moone, or sunne, or what you please:
And if you please to call it a rush Candle,
Henceforth I vowe it shall be so for me.

Petr. I say it is the Moone.

Kate. I know it is the Moone.

Petr. Nay then you lye: it is the blessed Sunne.

Kate. Then God be blest, it is the blessed sun,
But sunne it is not, when you say it is not
And the Moone changes euen as your minde:
What you will haue it nam'd, euen that it is,
And so it shall be so for Katherine.

Hort. Petruchio, goe thy waies, the field is won

Petr. Well, forward, forward, thus the bowle should ran,
And not vnluckily against the Bias.
But soft, Company is comming here

Enter Vincentio.

Good morrow gentle Mistris, where away?
Tell me sweete Kate, and tell me truely too,
Hast thou beheld a fresher Gentlewoman?
Such warre of white and red within her cheekes:
What stars do spangle heauen with such beautie,
As those two eyes become that heauenly face?
Faire louely Maide, once more good day to thee:
Sweete Kate embrace her for her beauties sake.

Hort. A will make the man mad to make the woman of him.

Kate. Yong budding Virgin, faire, and fresh, & sweet,
Whether away, or whether is thy abode?
Happy the Parents of so faire a childe,
Happier the man whom fauourable stars
A lots thee for his louely bedfellow.

Petr. Why how now Kate, I hope thou art not mad,
This is a man old, wrinckled, faded, withered,
And not a Maiden, as thou saist he is.

Kate. Pardon old father my mistaking eyes,
That haue bin so bedazled with the sunne,
That euery thing I looke on seemeth greene:
Now I perceiue thou art a reuerent Father:
Pardon I pray thee for my mad mistaking.

Petr. Do good old grandsire, & withall make known
Which way thou trauellest, if along with vs,
We shall be ioyfull of thy companie.

Vin. Faire Sir, and you my merry Mistris,
That with your strange encounter much amaide me.
My name is call'd Vincentio, my dwelling Pisa,
And bound I am to Padua, there to visite
A sonne of mine, which long I haue not seene.

Petr. What is his name?

Vinc. Lucentio gentle sir

Petr. Happily met, the happier for thy sonne:
And now by Law, as well as reuerent age,
I may intitule thee my loueing Father,
The sister to my wife, this Gentlewoman,
Thy Sonne by this hath married: wonder not,
Nor be not grieued, she is of good esteeme,
Her dowrie wealthie, and of worthie birth,
Beside, so qualified, as may beseeme
The Spouse of any noble Gentleman:
Let me imbrace with old Vincentio,
And wander we to see thy honest sonne,
Who will of thy arriuall be full ioyous.

Vinc. But is this true, or is it else your pleasure,
Like pleasant trauellers to breake a Iest
Vpon the companie you ouertake?

Hort. I doe assure thee father so it is

Petr. Come goe along and see the truth hereof,
For our first merriment hath made thee iealous. Exeunt.

Hor. Well Petruchio, this has put me in heart;
Haue to my Widdow, and if she froward
Then hast thou taught Hortensio to be vntoward. Exit.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca, Gremio is out before.

Biond. Softly and swiftly sir, for the Priest is ready.

Luc. I flie Biondello; but they may chance to neede thee at home, therefore leaue vs. Exit.

Biond. Nay faith, Ile see the Church a your backe, and then come backe to my mistris as soone as I can

Gre. I marauile Cambio comes not all this while.

Enter Petruchio, Kate, Vincentio, Grumio with Attendants.

Petr. Sir heres the doore, this is Lucentio's house,
My Fathers beares more toward the Market-place,
Thither must I, and here I leaue you sir

Vin. You shall not choose but drinke before you go,
I think I shall command your welcome here;
And by all likelihood some cheere is toward Knock.

Grum. They're busie within, you were best knocke lowder.

Pedant looker out of the window.

Ped. What's he that knockes as he would beat downe the gate?

Vin. Is Signior Lucentio within sir?

Ped. He's within sir, but not to be spoken withall.

Vin. What if a man bring him a hundred pound or two to make merrie withall.

Ped. Keepe your hundred pounds to your selfe, he shall neede none so long as I liue.

Petr. Nay, I told you your sonne was well beloued in Padua: doe you heare sir, to leaue frriuolous circumstances, I pray you tell signior Lucentio that his Father is come from Pisa, and is here at the doore to speake with him

Ped. Thou liest his Father is come from Padua, and here looking out at the window.

Vin. Art thou his father?

Ped. I sir, so his mother saies, if I may believe her.

Petr. Why how now gentleman: why this is flat knauerie to take vpon you another mans name.

Ped. Lay hands on the villaine, I believe a meanes to coiem some bodie in this Citie vnder my countenance.

Enter Biondello.

Bio. I haue seene them in the Church together, God send 'em good shipping: but who is here? mine old Master Vincentio: now was we vndone and brought to nothing.

Vin. Come hither crackhempe

Bion. I hope I may choose Sir.

Vin. Come hither you rogue, what haue you forgot me?

Biond. Forgot you, no sir: I could not forget you, for I neuer saw you before in all my life.

Vin. What, you notorious villaine, didst thou neuer see thy Mistris father, Vincentio?

Bion. When

Bion. What my old worshipfull old master? yes marie sir see where he looks out of the window.

Vin. Is so indeede. He beates Bionello.

Bion. Helpe, helpe, helpe, here's a mad man will murder me.

Pedan. Helpe, sonne, helpe signior Baptista.

Petr. Pree the Kate let's stand aside and see the end of this controuersie.

Enter Pedant with seruants, Baptista, Tranio.

Tra. Sir, what are you that offer to beate my seruant?

Vin. What am I sir? nay what are you sir: oh immortall Goddes: oh fine villaine, a silken doublet, a velues hose, a scarlet cloake, and a copotaine hat: oh I am vndone. I am vndone: while I plaie the good husband at home, my sonne and my seruant spend all at the vniuersitie.

Tra. How now, what's the matter?

Bapt. What is the man lunaticke?

Tra. Sir, you seeme a sober ancient Gentleman by your habit: but your words shew you a mad man: why sir, what concues is you, if I weare Pearle and gold? I thank my good Father, I am able to maintaine it.

Vin. Thy father: oh villaine, he is a Saile-maker in Bergamo.

Bap. You mistake sir, you mistake sir, praie what do you thinke is his name?

Vin. His name, as if I knew not his name: I haue brought him vp euer since he was three yeeres old, and his name is Tranio.

Ped. Away, away mad asse, his name is Lucentio, and he maries coelis sonne and heire to the Lands of maisignior Vincentio.

Vin. Lucentio: oh he hath murdred his Master; laie hold on him I charge you in the Dukes name: oh my sonne, my sonne: tell me thou villaine, where is my son Lucentio?

Tra. Call forth an officer: Carrie this mad knaue to the Iaile: father Baptista, I charge you see that he be forth coming.

Vin. Carrie me to the Iaile?

Gre. Stay officer, he shall not go to prison.

Bap. Talke not signior Gremio: I saie he shall goe to prison.

Gre. Take heede signior Baptista, least you be conicatcht in this businesse: I dare sweare this is the right Vincentio.

Ped. Sweare if thou dar'st.

Gre. Naie, I dare not sweare it.

Tra. Then thou wert best saie that I am not Lucentio.

Gre. Yes, I know thee to be signior Lucentio.

Bap. Away with the dotard, to the Iaile with him.

Enter Biondello, Lucentio and Bianca.

Vin. Thee strangers may be haild and sluck'd: oh monstrous villaine.

Bion. Oh we are spoil'd, and yonder he is, deuie him, forswear him, or else we are all vndone.

Exeunt Biondello, Tranio and Pedant as fast as may be.

Luc. Pardon sweete father Kneele.

Vin. Liues my sweete sonne?

Bian. Pardon deere father.

Bap. How hast thou offended, where is Lucentio?

Luc. Here's Lucentio, right sonne to the right Vincentio,

That haue by marriage made thy daughter mine,
While counterfeit supposes blear'd thine eine.

Gre. Here's packing with a witnesse to deceiue

Vin. Where is that damned villaine Tranio,
That faed'd and braued me in this matter so?

Bap. Why, tell me is not this my Cambio?

Bian. Cambio is chang'd into Lucentio.

Luc. Loue wrought these miracles. Bianca's loue
Made me exchange my state with Tranio,
While he did beare my countenance in the towne,
And happilie I haue arriued at the last
Vnto the wished haueu of my blisse:
What Tranio did, my selfe enforst him to;
Then pardon him sweete Father for my sake.

Vin. I'le fix the villaine-nose that would haue me to the Iaile.

Bap. But doe you heare sir, haue you marrie daughter without asking my good will?

Vin. Feare not Baptista, we will content you, go but I will in to be reueng'd for this villaine.

Bap. And I to sound the depth of this knauerie.

Luc. Looke not pale Bianca, thy father will not fr

Exe

Gre. My cake is dong, hbut I'le in among the rest
Out of hope of all, but my share of the feast.

Kate. Husband let's follow, to see the end of this a

Petr. First kisse me Kate, and we will.

Kate. What in the midst of the streete?

Petr. What are thou ashaam'd of me?

Kate. No sir, God forbid, but ashaam d to kisse.

Petr. Why then let's home again: Come Sirra awaie.

Kate. Nay, I will giue thee a kisse, now praie
Loue staie.

Petr. Is not this well? come my sweete Kate.
Better once then never for never too late. Exe

Actus Quintus.

Enter Baptista, Vincentio, Gremio, the Pedant, Lucentio, Bianca, Tranio, Biondello, Grumio, and Widdow: The Seruingmen with Tranio bringing in a Banquet.

Luc. At last, though long, our iarring notes agre
And time it is when raging warre is come,
To smile at scapes and perils ouerblowne:
My faire Bianca bid my father welcome,
While I with selfesame kindnesse welcome thine:
Brother Petruchio, sister Katerina,
And thou Hortensio with thy louing Widdow:
Feast with the best, and welcome to my house,
My Banket is to close our stomakes vp
After our great good cheere: praie you sit downe,
For now we sit to chat as well as eate.

Petr. Nothing but sit and sit, and eate and eate.

Bap. Padua affords this kindnesse, sonne Petruchio

Petr. Padua affords nothing but what is kinde.

Hor. For both our sakes I would that word were tr

Pet. Now for my life Hortensio feares his Widow.

Wid. Then neuer trust me if I be afeard

Petr. You are verie sensible, and yet you missie a sence:
I meane Hortensio is afeard of you.

Wid. I

Wid. He that is giddie thinks the world turns round.
Petr. Roundlie replied.
Kat. Mistris, how mean you that?
Wid. Thus I conceiue by him.
Petr. Conceiues by me, how likes Hortensio that?
Hor. My Widdow sayes, thus she conceiues her tale.
Petr. Verie well mended; kisse him for that good Widdow.
Kat. He that is giddie thinkes the world turnes round,
I praie you tell me what you meant by that.
Wid. Your husband being troubled with a shrew,
Measures my husbands sorrow by his woe:
And now you know my meaning.
Kate. A verie meane meaning.
Wid. Right, I meane you.
Kat. And I am mene indeede, respecting you.
Petr. To her Kate
Hor. To her Widdow.
Petr. A hundred marks, my Kate does put her down
Hor. That's my office
Petr. Spoke like an Officer: ha to the lad.

Drinkes to Hortensio.

Bap. How likes Gremio these quicke witted folkes?
Gre. Believue me sir, they But together well.
Bian. Head, and but an hastie witted bodie,
Would say your Head and But were head and horne.
Vin. I Mistris Bride, hath that awakened you?
Bian. I, but not frighted me, therefore Ile sleepe again.
Petr. Nay that you shall not since you haue begun:
Haue at you for a better iest or too.
Bian. Am I your Bird, I meane to shift my bush,
And then pursue me as you draw your bow.
You are welcome all. Exit Bianca.
Petr. She hath prevented me, here signior Tranio,
This bird you aim'd at, though you hit her not,
Therefore a health to all that shot and mist.
Tri. Oh sir, Lucentio slipt me like his Grey-hound,
Which runs himselfe, and catches for his Master.
Petr. A good swift simile, but something currish.
Tra. 'Tis well sir that you hunted for your selfe:
'Tis thought your Deere does hold you at a bay.
Bap. Oh, oh Petruchio, Tranio hits you now.
Luc. I thanke thee for that gird good Tranio.
Hor. Confesse, confesse, hath he not hit you here?
Petr. A has a little gald me I confesse:
And as the Iest did glance awaie from me,
'Tis ten to one it maim'd you too our right.
Bap. Now in good sadnesse sonne Petruchio,
I thinke thou hast the verriest shrew of all.
Petr. Well, I say no: and therefore for assurance,
Let's each one send vnto his wife,
And he whose wife is most obedient,
To come at first when he doth send for her,
Shall win the wager which we will propose.
Hort. Content, what's the wager?
Luc. Twentie crownes.
Petr. Twentie crownes,
Ile venture so much of my Hawke or Hound,
But twentie times so much vpon my Wife.
Luc. A hundred then.
Hor. Content.
Petr. A match, 'tis done.
Hor. Who shall begin?
Luc. That will I.
Goe Biondello, bid your Mistris come to me.
Bio. Igoe. Exit.
Bap. Sonne, Ile be your halfe, Bianca comes.
Luc. Ile haue no halues: Ile beare it all my selfe.

Enter Biondello.

How now, what newes?
Bio. Sir, my Mistris sends you word
That she is busie, and she cannot come.
Petr. How? she's busie, and she cannot come: is that an answere?
Gre. I, and a kinde one too:
Praie God sir your wife send you not a worse.
Petr. I hope better.
Hor. Sirra Biondello, goe and intreate my wife to come to me forthwith. Exit. Bion.
Pet. Oh ho, intreate her, nay then shee must needes come.
Hor. I am affraid sir, doe what you can

Enter Biondello.

Yours will not be entreated: Now, where's my wife?
Bion. She sayes you haue some goodly Iest in hand,
She will not come: she bids you come to her.
Petr. Worse and worse, she will not come:
Oh vilde, intollerable, not to be indur'd:
Sirra Grumio, goe to your Mistris,
Say I command her come to me. Exit.
Hor. I know her answere.
Pet. What?
Hor. She will not.
Petr. The fouler fortune mine, and there an end.

Enter Katerina.

Bap. Now by my hollidam here comes Katerina.
Kat. What is your will sir, that you send for me?
Petr. Where is your sister, and Hortensio's wife?
Kate. They sit conferring by the Parlet fire.
Petr. Goe fetch them hither, if they deme to come,
Swinge me them soundly forth vnto their husbands:
Away I say, and bring them hither straight.
Luc. Here is a wonder, if you talke of a wonder.
Hor. And so it is: I wonder what it boads.
Petr. Marrie peace it boads, and loue, and quiet life,
An awfull rule, and right supremacie:
And to be short, what not, that's sweete and happie.
Bap. Now faire befall thee good Petruchio;
The wager thou hast won, and I will adde
Vnto their losses twentie thousand crownes,
Another dowrie to another daughter,
For she is chang'd as she had never bin.
Petr. Nay, I will win my wager better yet,
And show more signe of her obedience.
Her new built vertue and obedience.

Enter Kate, Bianca, and Widdow.

See where she comes, and brings your froward Wives
As prisoners to her womanlie perswasion
Katerine, that Cap of yours becomes you not,
Off with that bable, throw it vnderfoote.
Wid. Lord let me never haue a cause to sigh,
Till I be brought to such a fillie passe
Bian. Fie what a foolish duties call you this?
Luc. I would your duetie were as foolish too:
The wisdome of your duetie faire Bianca,
Hath cost me fiue hundred crownes since supper time.
Bian. The more foole you for laying on my duetie.
Pet. Katherine I charge thee tell these head-strong women, what duetie they doe owe their Lords and husbands.
Wid. Come,

Wid. Come, come, you mocking: we will haue no telling.

Pet. Come on I say, and first begin with her.

Wid. She shall not.

Pet. I say she shall, and first begin with her.

Kate. Fie, fie, vnkind thou threatning vnkinde brow,
And dart not scornefull glances from those eies,
To wound thy Lord, thy King, thy Gouernour.
It blots thy beautie, as frosts doe bite the Meads,
Confounds thy fame, as whirlewinds shake faire budds,
And in no sence is meete or amiable.
A woman mou'd, is like a fountaine troubled,
Muddie, ill seeming, thicke, bereft of beautie,
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsthe
Will deigne to sip, or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy Lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy soueraigne: One that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance. Commits his body
To painfull labour, both by sea and land:
To watch the night in stormes, the day in cold,
Whil'st thou ly'st warme at home, secure and safe.
And craues no other tribute at thy hands,
But loue, faire looks, and true obedience;
Too little payment for so great a debt.
Such duetie as the subiect owes the Prince,
Even such a woman oweth to her husband:
And when she is froward, peeuish, sullen, sowre,
And not obedient to his honest will,
What is she but a foule contending Rebell,
And graceless Traitor to her loving Lord?
I am asham'd that women are so simple,
To offer warre, where they should kneele for peace:
Or seeke for rule, supremacie, and sway,
When they are bound to serue, loue, and obey.
Why are our bodies soft, and weake, and smooth,
Vnapt to toyle and trouble in the world,
But that our soft conditions, and our harts,
Should well agree with our externall parts?
Come, come, you froward and vnable wormes,
My minde hath bin as bigge as one of yours,
My heart as great, my reason haplie more,
To bandie word for word, and frowne for frowne;
But now I see our Launces are but strawes:
Our strength as weake, our weakenesse past compare,
That seeming to be most, which we indeed least are.
Then vale your stomackes, for it is no boote,
And place your hands below your husbands foote:
In token of which duetie, if he pleaſe,
My hand is readie, may it do him ease.

Pet. Why there's a wench: Come on, and kisse mee Kate.

Luc. Well go thy waies olde Lad for thou shalt ha't.

Vin. Tis a good hearing, when children are toward.

Luc. But a harsh hearing, when women are froward.

Pet. Come Kate, wee'le to bed,
We three are married, but you two are sped.
Twas I wonne the wager, though you hit the white,
And being a winner, God gine you good night.

Exit Petruchio

Hortens. Now go thy wayes, thou hast tam'd a curst Shrew.

Luc. Tis a wonder, by your leaue, she will be tam'd so.

FINIS.

V v

ALL'S Well, that Ends Well.

Actus primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter young Bertram Count of Rossillion, his Mother, and Helena, Lord Lafew, all in blacke.

Mother.

IN delivering my sonne from me, I bury a second husband.

Ros. And I in going Madam, weep ore my fathers death anew; but I must attend his maiesties command, to whom I am now in Ward, evermore in subiection.

Laf. You shall find of the King a husband Madame, you hir a father. He that so generally is at all times good, must of necessitie hold his vertue to you, whose worthinesse would stirre it vp where it wanted rather then lack it where there is such abundance.

Mo. What hope is there of his Maiesties amendment?

Laf. He hath abandon'd his Phisitions Madam, vnder whose practises he hath persecuted time with hope, and finds no other aduantage in the processe, but onely the loosing of hope by time.

Mo. This yong Gentlewoman had a father, O that had, how sad a passage tis, whose skill was almost as great as his honestie, had it stretch'd so far, would haue made nature immortall, and death should haue play for lacke of worke. Would for the Kings sake hee were liuing, I thinke it would be the death of the Kings disease.

Laf. How call'd you the man you speake of Madam?

Mo. He was famous fir in his profession, and it was his great right to be so. Gerard de Narbon.

Laf. He was excellent indeed Madam, the King very lately spoke of him admiringly, and mourningly: hee was skilfull enough to haue liu'd still, if knowledge could be set vp against mortalitie.

Ros. What is it (my good Lord) the King languishes of?

Laf. A Fistula my Lord

Ros I heard not of it before

Laf. I would it were not notorious. Was this Gentlewoman the Daughter of Gerard de Narbon?

Mo. His sole childe my Lord, and bequeathed to my ouer looking. I haue those hopes of her good, that her education promises her dispositions shee inherits, which makes faire gifts fairer: for where an vncleane mind carries vertuous qualities, there commendations go with pitty, they are vertues and traitors too: in her they are the better for their simplenesse; she denies her honestie, and accheues her goodnesse.

Lafew. Your commendations Madam get from her teares.

Mo. 'Tis the best brine a Maiden can season her praise in. The remembrance of her father never approches her heart, but the tyranny of her sorrowes takes all liuelihood from her cheeke. No more of this Helena, go too, no more least it be rather thought you affect a sorrow, then to haue.

Hel. I doe affect a sorrow indeed, but I haue it too.

Laf. Moderate lamentation is the right of the dead, excessiue greefe the enemie to the liuing.

Mo. If the liuing be enemie to the greefe, the excesse makes it soone mortall

Ros. Maddam I desire your holie wishes

Laf. How vnderstand we that?

Mo. Be thou blest Bertram, and succeed thy father in manners as in shape: thy blood and vertue
Contend for Empire in thee, and thy goodnesse
Share with thy birth-right. Loue all, trust a few,
Doe wrong to none: be able for thine enemie
Rather in power then vse: and keepe thy friend
Vnder thy owne lifes key. Be checkt for silence,
But never tax'd for speech. What heauen more will,
That thee may furnish, and my prayers pluckc downe,
Fall on thy head. Farwell my Lord,
'Tis an vnseason'd Courtier, good my Lord
Aduise him.

Laf. He cannot want the best
That shall attend his loue.

Mo. Heauen blesse him: Farwell Bertram

Ro. The best wishes that can be forg'd in your thoghts be seruants to you: be comfortable to my mother, your Mistris, and make much of her.

Laf. Farewell prettie Lady, you must hold the credit of your father.

Hel. O were that all, I thinke not on my father,
And those great teares grace his remembrance more
Then those I shed for him. What was he like?
I haue forgott him. My imagination
Carries no fauour in't but Bertram,
I am vndone, there is no liuing, none,
If Bertram be away. 'Twere all one,
That I should loue a bright particuler starre,
And think to wed it, he is so aboue me
In his bright radience and coloterall light.

Must

Must I be comforted, not in his sphere;
Th'ambition in my loue thus plagues it selfe.
The hind that would be mated by the Lion
Must die for loue. 'Twas prettie, though a plague
To see him euerie houre to sit and draw
His arched browes, his hawking eie, his curles
In our hearts table: heart too capeable
Of euerie line and trait he of his sweet fauour.
But now he's gone, and my idolatrous fancie
Must sanctifie his Reliques. Who comes heere?

Enter Parrolles.

One that goes with him: I loue him for his sake,
And yet I know him a notorious Liar,
Thinke him a great way foole, fooe a coward,
Yet these fixt euills sit so fit in him,
That they take place, when Vertues steely bones
Looke bleake i'th cold wind: withall full oftt we she Cold wisedome waighting on superfluous follies.

Par. Save you faire Queene.

Hel. And you Monarch.

Par. No.

Hel. And no.

Par. Are you meditating on virginitie?

Hel. Ie you haue some stirre of soldier in you: Let mee aske you a question. Man is enemie to virginitie, how may we barricado it against him?

Par. Keepe him out.

Hel. But he assaules, and our virginitie though valiant, in the defence yet is weak: vnfold to vs some warlike resistance.

Par. There is none. Man setting downe before you, will vndermine you, and blow you vp.

Hel. Bleffe our poore Virginity from vnderminers and blowers vp. Is there no Military policy how Virgins might blow vp men?

Par. Virginity being blowne downe, Man will quicklier be blowne vp: marry in blowing him downe againe, with the breach your selues made, you lose your City. It is not politicke, in the Common-wealth of Nature, to preserue virginity. Losse of Virginitie, is rationall increase, and there was neuer Virgin got, till virginitie was first lost. That you were made of, is metall to make Virgins. Virginitie, by being once lost, may be ten times found: by being euer kept, it is euer lost: 'tis too cold a companion: Away with't.

Hel. I will stand for't a little, though therefore I die a Virgin.

Par. There's little can bee saide in't, 'tis against the rule of Nature. To speake on the part of virginitie, is to accuse your Mothers; which is most infallible disobedience. He that hangs himselfe is a Virgin: Virginitie murthers it selfe, and should be buried in highwayes out of all sanctified limits, as a desperate Offendresse against Nature. Virginitie breedes mites, much like a Cheese, consumes it selfe to the very paring, and so dies with feeding his owne stomacke. Besides, Virginitie is peeuish, proud, idle, made of self-loue, which is the most inhabited sinne in the Canon. Keepe it not, you cannot choose but loose by't. Out with't: within ten yeare it will make it selfe two, which is a goodly increase, and the principall it selfe not much the worse. Away with't.

Hel. How might one do fit, to loose it to her owne liking?

Par. Let mee see. Marry ill, to like him that ne'er it likes. 'Tis a commodity will lose the gloss with lying: The longer kept, the lesse worth: Off with't while 'tis vendible. Answer the time of request. Virginitie like an olde Courtier, weares her cap out of fashion, richly suited, but vnsuteable, just like the brooch & the tooth-pick, which were not now: your Date is better in your Pye and your Porridge, then in your cheeke: and your virginity, your old virginity, is like one of our French wither'd pears, it lookes ill, it eates drily, marry 'tis a wither'd peare: it was ponmerly better, marry yet 'tis a wither'd peare: Will you any thing with it?

Hel. Not my virginity yet:
There shall your Master haue a thousand loues,
A Mother, and a Mistresse, and a friend,
A Phœnix, Captaine, and an enemy,
A guide, a Goddesse, and a Soueraigne,
A Counsellor a Traitoresse, and a Deare:
His humble ambition, proud humilitie;
His iarring, concord: and his discord, dulcet:
His faith, his sweet disaster: with a world
Of pretty fond adoptious christendomes
That blinking Cupid gossips. Now shall he:
I know not what he shall, God send him well,
The Courts a learning place, and he is one.

Par. What one i'faith?

Hel. That I wish well. 'tis pitty,

Par. What's pitty?

Hel. That wishing well had not a body in't,
Which might be felt, that we the poorer borne,
Whose baser starres do shut vs vp in wishes,
Might with effects of them follow our friends,
And shew what we alone must thinke, which neuer
Returnes vs thankes.

Enter Page.

Pag. Monsieur Parrolles,
My Lord cals for you.

Par. Little Hellen farewell, if I can remember thee, I will thinke of thee at Court.

Hel. Monsieur Parrolles, you were borne vnder a charitable starre.

Par. Vnder Mars I.

Hel. I especially thinke, vnder Mars.

Par. Why vnder Mars?

Hel. The warres hath so kept you vnder, that you must needes be borne vnder Mars.

Par. When he was predominant.

Hel. When he was retrograde I thinke rather.

Par. Why thinke you so?

Hel. You go so much backward when you fight.

Par. That's for aduantage.

Hel. So is running away,
When feare proposes the safetie:
But the composition that your valour and feare makes in you, is a vertue of a good wing, and I like the weare well.

Parol. I am so full of businesses, I cannot answere thee acutely: I will returne perfect Courtier, in the which my instruction shall serue to naturalize thee, so thou will be capeable of a Courtiers councell, and vnderstand what aduice shall thrust vppon thee, else thou dieft in thine vnthankfulnes, and thine ignorance makes thee away, farewell: When thou hast leysure, say thy prayers: when thou hast none, remember thy Friends:

Get thee a good husband, and vse him as he sees thee:
So farewell.

Hel. Our remedies oft in our selues do lye,
Which we ascribe to heauen: the fated skye
Gives vs free scope, only doth backward pull
Our slow designes, when we our selues are dull.
What power is it, which mounts my loue so hye,
That makes me see, and cannot feede mine eye?
The mightiest space in fortune, Nature brings
To ioyne like, likes; and kisse like native things.
Impossible be strange attempts to those
That weigh their paines in sence, and do suppose
What hath beene, cannot be. Who ever strou
To shew her merit, that did misse her loue?
(The Kings disease) my project may deceiue me,
But my intents are fixt, and will not leaue me. Exit

Flourish Cornets.

Enter the King of France with Letters, and diuers Attendants.

King. The Florentines and Senoys are by th'eares,
Haue fought with equall fortune, and continue
A braueing warre.

1 Lo. G. So its reported sir.

King. Nay tis most credible, we heere receiue it,
A certaintie vouch'd from our Cosin Austria,
With caution, that the Florentine will moue vs
For speedie aydes; wherein our dearest friend
Prejudicates the business, and would seeme
To haue vs make denyall.

1. Lo. G His loue and wisedome
Approu'd so to your Maiesty, may pleade
For ampleſt credence.

King. He hath arm'd our answer,
And Florence is deni'de before he comes:
Yet for our Gentlemen that meane to see
The Tuscan seruice, freely haue they leaue
To stand on either part.

2. Lo. E It well may serue
A nurserie to our Gentrie, who are sicke
For breathing, and exploit.

King. What's he comes heere.

Enter Bertram, Lafew, and Parolles.

1 Lor. G. It is the Count Rosyll my good Lord,
Yong Bertram.

King. Youth, thou bear'st thy Fathers face,
Franke Nature rather curious then in haſt
Hath well compos'd thee. Thy Fathers morall parts
Maist thou inherit too: Welcome to Paris.

Ber. My thankes and duties are your Maieſties.

Kin. I would I had that corporall soundnesse now,
As when thy father, and my selfe, in friendſhip
First tride our souldierſhip. he did looke sarre
Into the seruice of the time, and was
Discipled of the braueſt. He lasted long,
But on vs both did haggiſh Age steale on,
And wore vs out of act: It much repaires me
To talke of your good father; in his youth
He had the wit, which I can well obserue
To day in our yong Lords. but they may ieſt
Till their owne scorne returne to them vnnoted
Ere they can hide their lenitie in honour:
So like a Courtier, contempt nor bitternesse
Were in his pride, or sharpneſſe; if they were,
His equall had awak'd them, and his honour
Clocke to it selfe, knew the true minute when
Exception bid him speake: and at this time
His tongue obey d his hand. Who were below him,
He vs'd as creatures of another place,
And bow'd his eminent top to their low ranks.
Making them proud of his humilitie,
In their poore praise he humbled: Such a man
Might be a copie to those younger times;
Which followed well, would demonstrate them now
But goers backward

Ber. His good remembrance sir
Lies richer in your thoughes, then on his tombes
So in approoſe lines not his Epitaph,
As in your royall speech

King. Would I were with him he would alwaies say,
(Me thinkes I heare him now) his plausiue words
He scatter'd not in eares, but grafted them
To grow there and to beare: Let me not liue,
This his good melancholly oft began
On the Catastrophe and heele of pastime
When it was out: Let me not liue (quoth hee)
After my flame lackes oyle, to be the snuffe
Of younger spirits, whose apprehensiue senses
All but new things disdaine; whose iudgements are
Meere fathers of their garments: whose constances
Expire before their fashions. this he wish'd.
I after him, do after him wish too:
Since I nor was not heere can bring home,
I quickly were dissolued from my liue
To giue some Labourers roome.

L. 2. E. You'r loued Sir,
They that least lend it you, shall lacke you first.

Kin. I fill a place I know't: how long ist Count
Since the Physitian at your fathers died?
He was much fam'd.

Ber. Some six moneths since my Lord

Kin. If he were liuing, I would try him yet.
Lend me an arme: the rest haue worne me out
With seuerall applications: Nature and sicknesse
Debate it at their leisure Welcome Count,
My sonne's no deerer.

Ber. Thanke your Maiesty. Exit

Flourish

Enter Countesse, Steward, and Clowne

Cou. I will now heare, what say you of this gentlewoman.

Ste. Maddam the care I haue had to euen your content, I wish might be found in the Kalender of my past endeuours, for then we wound our Modestie, and make foule the clearnesse of our deseruings, whenof our selues we publish them.

Cou. What doe's this knaue heere? Get you gone sirra: the complaints I haue heard of you I do not all beleeue, 'tis my slownesse that I doe not. For I know you lacke not folly to commit them, & haue ability enough to make such knaueries yours.

Clo. Tis not vnknown to you Madam, I am a poore fellow.

Cou. Well sir.

Clo. No maddam,
Tis not so well that I am poore, though music of

of the rich are damn'd, but if I may haue your Ladiships good will to goe to the world, Isbell the woman and w will doe as we may.

Cou. Wilt thou needes be a begger?

Clo. I doe beg your good will in this case.

Cou. In what case?

Clo. In Isbels case and mine owne: seruice is no heritage, and I think I shall never haue the blessing of God, till I haue issue a my bodie: for they say barnes are blessings.

Cou. Tell me thy reason why thou wilt marrie?

Clo. My poore bodie Madam requires it, I am driuen on by the flesh, and hee must needes goe that the diuell driues.

Cou. Is this all your worships reason?

Clo. Faith Madam I haue other holie reasons, such as they are.

Cou. May the world know them?

Clo. I haue beene Madam a wicked creature, as you and all flesh and blood are, and indeede I doe marrie that I may repent.

Cou. Thy marriage sooner then thy wickednesse

Clo. I am out a friends Madam, and I hope to haue friends for my wiues sake.

Cou. Such friends are thine enemies knaue.

Clo. Y'are shallow Madam in great friends, for the knaues come to doe that for me which I am a weaire of: he that eres my Land, spares my teame, and gives mee leaue to inne the crop. if I be his cuckold hee's my drudge; he that comforts my wife, is the cherisher of my flesh and blood; hee that cherishes my flesh and blood, loue my flesh and blood; he that loues my flesh and blood is my friend: ergo, he that kisses my wife is my friend: if men could be contented to be what they are, there were no feare in marriage, for yong Charbon the Puritan, and old Poysam the Papist, how somere their hearts are seuer'd in Religion, their heads are both one, they may ioule horns together like any Deere i'th Herd.

Cou. Wilt thou euer be a foule mouth'd and calumnious knaue?

Clo. A Prophet I Madam, and I speake the truth the next waie, for I the Ballad will repeate, which men full true shall finde, your marriage comes by destinie, your Cuckow sings by kinde.

Cou. Get you gone sir, Ile talke with you more anon.

Stew. May it please you Madam, that hee bid Hellen come to you, of her I am to speake.

Cou. Sirra tell my gentlewoman I would speake with her, Hellen I meane.

Clo. Wise this faire face the cause, quoth she,
Why the Grecians sacked Troy,
Fond done, done, fond was this King Priams ioy,
With that she sighed as she stood, but
And gaue this sentence then, among nine bad if one be good. among nine bad if one be good, there's yet one good in ten.

Cou. What, one good in tenne? you corrupt the song sirra.

Clo. One good woman in ten Madam, which is a purifying o'th' song: would God would serue the world so all the yeare, wood finde no fault with the tithe woman if I were the Parson, one in ten quoth a? and wer might haue a good woman borne but ore euerie blazing starre, or at an earthquake, 'twould mend the Lotterie well, a man may draw his heart out ere a plucke one.

Cou. You'le begone sir knaue, and doe as I command you?

Clo. That man should be at womens command, and yet no hurt done, though honestie be no Puritan, yet it will doe no hurt, it will weare the Surplis of humilitie ouer the blacke-Gowne of a bigge heart: I am going forsooth, the business is for Helen to come hither. Exit.

Cou. Well now.

Stew. I know Madam you loue your Gentlewoman intirely.

Cou. Faith I doe: her Father bequeath'd her to mee, and she her selfe without other aduantage, may lawfullie make title to as much loue as shee finds, there is more owing her then is paid, and more shall be paid her then shee'le demand.

Stew. Madam, I was verie late more neere her then I thinke shee wisht mee, alone shee was, and did communicate to her selfe her owne words to her owne eares, shee thought, I dare vowe for her, they touche not any stranger sence, her matter was, shee loued your Sonne; Fortune shee said was no goddesse, that had put such difference betwixt their two estates: I oue no god, that would not extend his mighe onesie, where qualities were leuell, Queene of Virgins, that would suffer her poore Knight surpris'd without reskue in the first assault or ransome afterward: This shee deliuer'd in the most bitter touch of sorrow that ere I heard Virgin exclaime in, which I held my duetie speedily to acquaint you withall, sithence in the losse that may happen, it concernes you something to know it.

Cou. You haue discherg'd this honestlie, keepe it to your selfe, many likelihoods inform'd mee of this before, which hang so tottring in the ballance, that I could neither beleeue nor misdoubt; praie you leaue mee, stall this in your bosome, and I thanke you for your honest care: I will speake with you further anon. Exit Steward.

Enter Hellen.

Old.Cou. Even so it was with me when I was yong:
If euer we are natures, these are ours, this thorne
Doth to our Rose of youth rightlie belong
Our blood to vs, this to our blood is borne.
It is the show, and seale of natures truth,
Where loues strong passion is impreft in youth,
By our remembrances of daies forgon,
Such were our faults, or then we thought them none,
Her eie is sicke on't, I obserue her now.

Hel. What is your pleasure Madam?

Ol.Cou. You know Hellen I am a mother to you.

Hel. Mine honorable Mistris

Ol.Cou. Nay a mother, why not a mother? when I sed a mother
Me thought you saw a serpent, what's in mother,
That you start at it? I say I am your mother,
And put you in the Catalogue of those
That were enwombed mine, 'tis often seene
Adoption striues with nature, and choise breede
A natiue slip to vs from forraine seedes:
You nere oppreft me with a mothers groane,
Yet I expresse to you a mothers care.
(Gods mercie maiden) doe it cord thy blood
To say I am thy mother? what's the matter,
That this distempered messenger of wet?

ne manie colour'd Iris rounds thine eye?
——— Why, that you are my daughter?
Hel. That I am not.
Old.Cou. I say I am your Mother.
Hel Pardon Madam.
The Count Rosillon cannot be my brother
I am from humble, he from honored name:
No note vpon my Parents, his all noble,
My Master, my deere Lord he is and I
His seruant liue, and will his vassall die:
He must not be my brother
Ol.Cou. Not I your Mother.
Hel. You are my mother Madam, would you were
So that my Lord your sonne were not my brother,
Indeede my mother, or were you both our mothers,
I care no more for, then I doe for heauen,
So I were not his sister, cane no other,
But I your daughter, he must be my brother.
Old.Cou Yes Helen, you might be my daughter in law,
God shield you meane it not, daughter and mother
So strue vpon your pulse; what pale agen?
My feare hath catcht your fondnesse! now I see
The mistrie of your loueliness, and finde
Your salt teares head, now to all sence 'tis grosse.
You loue my sonne, inuention is asham'd
Against the proclamation of thy passion
To say thou doest not: therefore tell me true,
But tell me then 'tis so, for looke, thy cheekes
Confesse it 'ton tooth to th'other, and thine eies
See it so grosely shewne in thy behaiours,
That in their kinde they speake it, onely sinne
And hellish obstinacie tye thy tongue
That truth should be suspected, speake, ist so?
If it be so, you haue wound a goodly clewe:
If it be not, forswear't how ere I charge thee,
As heauen shall worke in me for thine auaile
To tell me truelie.
Hel. Good Madam pardon me.
Cou. Do you loue my Sonne?
Hel. Your pardon noble Mistris
Cou. Loue you my Sonne?
Hel. Doe not you loue him Madam?
Cou. Goe not about; my loue hath in't a bond
Whereof the world takes note: Come, come, disclose.
The state of your affection, for your passions
Haue to the full appeach'd.
Hel Then I confesse
Here on my knee, before high heauen and you,
That before you, and next vnto high heauen, I loue your Sonne:
My friends were poore but honest, so's my loue:
Be not offended, for it hurts not him
That he is lou'd of me; I follow him not
By any token of presumptuous suite,
Nor would I have him, till I doe deserue him,
Yet neuer know how that desert should be:
I know I loue in vaine, strue against hope:
Yet in this captious, and intemble Sue.
I still poure in the waters of my loue
And lacke not to loose still; thus Indian like
Religious in mine error, I adore
The Sunne that lookes vpon his worthippers,
But knowes of him no more. My deerest Madam,
Let not your hate incounter with my loue,
For loving where you doe; but if your selfe,
Whose aged honor cites a vertuous youth,
Did ever, in so true a flame of liking,
Wish chastly, and loue dearely, that your Dian
Was both her selfe and loue, O then giue pitie
To her whose state is such, that cannot choose
But lend and giue where she is sure to loose;
That seekes not to finde that, her search implies,
But riddle like, lines sweetely where she dies.
Cou Had you not lately an intent, speake truely,
To goe to Paris?
Hel Madam I had.
Cou Wherefore? tell true.
Hel. I will tell truth by grace it selfe I sweare
You know my Father left me some prescriptions
Of rare and prou'd effects, such as his reading
And manifest experience, had collected
For generall soueraignetie. and that he will'd me
In heedefull'st reseruation to bestow them,
As notes, whose faculties inclusiue were,
More then they were in note: Amongst the rest,
There is a remedie, approu'd, set downe,
To cure the desperate languishings whereof
The King is render'd lost.
Cou This was your motiue for Paris, was it, speake?
Hel My Lord, your sonne, made me to think of this,
Else Paris, and the medicine, and the King,
Had from the conversation of my thoughts,
Happily beene absent then.
Cou But thinke you Helen,
If you should tender your supposed aide,
He would receiue it? He and his Phisitions
Are of a minde, he, that they cannot helpe him:
They, that they cannot helpe, how shall they credit
A poore vnlearned Virgin, when the Schooles
Embowel'd of their doctrine, haue left off
The danger to it selfe.
Hel. There's something in't
More then my Fathers skill, which was the great'st
Of his profession, that his good receipt,
Shall for my legacie be sanctified
By th'vnlucki'est stars in heauen, and would your honor
But giue me leaue to trie successe, I'de venture
The well lost life of mine, on his Graces cure,
By such a day, an houre.
Cou. Doo'st thou beleeue it?
Hel. I Madam knowingly.
Cou Why Helen thou shalt haue my leaue and loue,
Meanes and attendants, and my louing greetings
To those of mine in Court, Ile stare at home
And praise Gods blessing into thy attempt
Begon to morrow, and be sure of this,
What I can helpe thee to, thou shalt not misse Exeunt.

Actus Secundus.

Enter the King with diuers young Lords, taking leaue for the Florentine warre: Count, Rossillo, and Parrolles. Florish Cornets.

King. Farewell yong Lords, these warlike principles
Doe not throw from you, and you my Lords farewell.
Share the aduice betwixt you, if both gaine, all
The gift doth stretch in selfe as tis receiu'd,
And is enough for both
Lord.G. 'Tis our hope sir,

After

After well entred souldiers, to returne
And finde your grace in health.
King. No, no, it cannot be; and yet my heart
Will not confesse he owes the malladey
That doth my life besiege: farwell yong Lords,
Whether I liue or die, be you the sonnes
Of worthy French men: let higher Italy
(Those bated that inherit but the fall
Of the last Monarchy) see that you come
Not to woos honour, but to wed it, when
The braueest questant shrinkes: finde what you seeke,
That fameway cry you loud: I say farewell.
L.G. Health at your bidding serue your Maiesty.
King. Those girlos of Italy, take heed of them,
They say our French lacke language to deny
If they demand: be wary of being Captiues
Before you serue.
Bo. Our hearts receiue your warnings.
King. Farewell, come hether to me.
1. L.G. Oh my sweet Lord, you wil stay behind vs.
Par. 'Tis not his fault the spark.
2. L.L. Oh 'tis braue warres.
Par. Most admirable, I haue seene those warres.
Rossil. I am commanded here, and kept a coyle with,
Too young, and the next yeere, and 'tis too early.
Par. And thy minde stand too't boy,
Steale away bauely.
Rossil. I shal stay here the for-horse to a smocke,
Creeking my shooes on the plaine Masonry,
Till honour be bought vp, and no sword worne
But one to dance with: by heauen, Ile steale away.
1. L.G. There's honour in the theft.
Par. Commit it Count.
2. L.E. I am your accessary, and so farewell.
Ros. I grow to you, & our parting is a tortur'd body.
1. L.G. Farewell Captaine.
2. L.E. Sweet Mounsier Parolles.
Par. Noble Heroes; my sword and yours are kinne, good sparkes and lustrous, a word good mettals. You shall finde in the Regiment of the Spinij, one Captaine Spurio his sicatrice, with an Embleme of warre heere on his sinister cheeke; it was this very sword entrench'd it: say to him I liue, and obserue his reports for me.
L.G. We shall noble Captaine.
Par. Mars doate on you for his nouices, what will ye doe?
Ros. Stay the King.
Par. Vse a more spacious ceremonie to the Noble Lords, you haue restrain'd your selfe within the List of too cold an adieu: be more expressiue to them; for they weare themselues in the cap of the time, there do muster true gate; eat, speake, and moue vnder the influence of the most receiu'd starre, and though the deuill leade the measure, such are to be followed: after them, and take a more dilated farewell.
Ros. And I will doe so.
Par. Worthy fellowes, and like to prooue most sinewie sword-men. Exeunt.

Enter Lafew.

L.Laf. Pardon my Lord for mee and for my tidings.
King. Ile see thee to stand vp. (pardon,
L.Laf. Then here's a man stands that has brought his
I would you had kneel'd my Lord to aske me mercy,
And that at my bidding, you could so stand vp.
King. I would I had, so I had broke thy pate
And asks thee mercy for't.
Laf. Good faith a-crosse, but my good Lord 'tis thus,
Will you be cur'd of your infirmitie?
King. No.
Laf. O will you eate no grapes my royall fone?
Yes but you will, my noble grapes, and if
My royall fone could reach them: I haue seen a medicine
That's able to breath life into a stone,
Quickens a rocke, and make you dance Canari
With sprightly fire and motion, whose simple touch
Is powerfull to araise King Pippin, nay
To give great Charlemaine a pen in's hand
And write to her a loue-line.
King. What her is this?
Laf. Why doctor she: my Lord, there's one arriu'd,
If you will see her: now by my faith and honour,
If seriously I may conuay my thoughts
In this my light deliuerance, I haue spoke
With one, that in her sexe, her yeeres, profession,
Wisedome and constancy, hath amaz'd mee more
Then I dare blame my weaknesse: will you see her?
For that is her demand, and know her business?
That done, laugh well at me.
King. Now good Lafew,
Bring in the admission, that we with thee
May spend our wonder too, or take off thine
By wondring how thou tookst it.
Laf. Nay, Ile fit you,
And not be all day neither.
King. Thus he his speciall nothing ever prologues.
Laf. Nay, come your waies.

Enter Helen.

King. This haste hath wings indeed.
Laf. Nay, come your waies,
This is his Maiestie, say your minde to him,
A Traitor you doe looke like, but such traitors
His Maiesty seldome feares, I am Cressida Vncle,
That dare leaue two together, fare you well. Exit.
King. Now faire one, do's your busines follow vs?
Hel. I my good Lord,
Gerard de Narbon was my father,
In what he did professe, well found.
King. I knew him.
Hel. The rather will I spare my praises towards him,
Knowing him is enough: on's bed of death,
Many receits he gaue me, chiefest one,
Which as the dearest issue of his practice
And of his olde experience, th'onlie darling,
He bad me store vp, as a triple eye,
Safer then mine owne two: more dearer I haue so,
And bearing your high Maiestie is toucht
With that malignant cause, wherein the honour
Of my deare fathers gift, stands cheefe in power,
I come to tender it, and my appliance,
With all bound humblenesse.
King. We thanke you maiden,
But may not be so credulous of cure,
When our most learned Doctors leaue vs, and
The congregated Colledge haue concluded,
That labouring Art can never ransome nature
From her inaydible estate: I say we must not
So stoine our iudgement, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malladie
To empericks, or to disseuer so
Our great self-and our credit, to esteeme
A senselesse helpe, when helpe past sence we deeme.

Hel. My

Hel. My duetie then shall pay me for my paines:
I will no more enforce mine office on you,
Humbly intreating from your royall thoughts,
A modest one to bearе me backe againe.

King. I cannot giue thee lesse to be call'd grateful:
Thou thoughtst to helpe me, and such thankes I giue,
As one neere death to those that wish him liue:
But what at full I know, thou knowst no part,
I knowing all my perill, thou no Art.

Hel. What I can doe, can doe no hurt to try,
Since you setup your rest gainst remedie:
He that of greatest works is finisher,
Oft does them by the weakest minister:
So holy Writ, in babes hath iudgement showne,
When Iudges haue bin babes; great floods haue flowne
From simple sources: and great Seas haue dried
When Miracles haue by the great'st beene denied.
Oft expectation failes, and most oft there
Where most it promises: and oft it hits,
Where hope is coldest, and despaire most shifts.

King. I must not heare thee, fare thee wel kind maide
Thy paines not vs'd, must by thy selfe be paid,
Proffers not tooke, reape thanks for their reward.

Hel. Inspired Merit so by breath is barr'd,
It is not so with him that all things knowes
As 'tis with vs, that square our guesse by showes:
But most it is presumption in vs, when
The help of heauen we count the act of men.
Deare sir, to my endeauors giue consent,
Of heauen, not me, make an experiment.
I am not an Impostrue, that proclaime
My selfe against the leuill of mine aime,
But know I thinke, and thinke I know most sure,
My Art is not past power, nor you past cure.

King. Art thou so confident? Within what space
Hop'st thou my cure?

Hel. The greatest grace lending grace,
Ere twice the horses of the sunne shall bring
Their fiery torcher his diurnall ring,
Ere twice in murke and occidentall dampe
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd her sleepy Lampe:
Or foure and twenty times the Pylots glasse
Hath told the thieuish minutes, how they passe:
What is infirme, from your sound parts shall flie,
Health shall liue free, and sicknesse freely dye.

King. Vpon thy certainty and confidence,
What dar'st thou venture?

Hel. Taxe of impudence,
A strumpets boldnesse, a diuulged shame
Traduc'd by odious ballads: my maidens name
Seard otherwise, ne worse of worst extended
With vildest torture, let my life be ended.

Kin. Methinks in thee some blessed spirit doth speak
His powerfull sound, within an organ weake:
And what impossibility would slay
In common sence, sence saues another way:
Thy life is deare, for all that life can rate
Worth name of life, in thee hath estimate:
Youth, beauty, wisedome, courage, all
That happiness and prime, can happy call:
Thou this to hazard, needs must intimate
Skill infinite, or monstrous desperate,
Sweet prudtiffe, thy Physicke I will try,
That ministers thine owne death if I die.

Hel. If I breake time, or flinch in property
Of what I spake, vnpitied let me die,
And well deserv'd. not helping, death's my fee,
But if I helpe, what doe you promise me.

Kin. Make thy demand.

Hel. But will you make it euen?

Kin. I by my Sceptor, and my hopes of helpe.

Hel. Then shalt thou giue me with thy kingly hand
What husband in thy power I will command:
Exempted be from me the arrogance
To choose from forth the royall blood of France,
My low and humble name to propagate
With any branch or image of thy state:
But such a one thy vassall, whom I know
Is free for me to aske, thee to bestow.

Kin. Heere is my hand, the premises observ'd,
Thy will by my performance shall be serv'd:
So make the choice of thy owne time, for I
Thy resolv'd Patient, on thee still relye:
More should I question thee, and more I must,
Though more to know, could not be more to trust:
From whence thou cam'st, how tended on, but rest
Vnquestion'd welcome, and vndoubted blest.
Giue me some helpe heere hoa, if thou proceed,
As high as word, my deed shall match thy deed.

Flourish. Exit.

Enter Countesse and Clown.

Lady. Come on sir, I shall now put you to the height of your breeding.

Clown. I will show my selfe highly fed, and lowly taught, I know my business is but to the Court.

Lady. To the Court, why what place make you special, when you put off that with such contempt, but to the Court?

Clo. Truly Madam, if God haue lent a man any manners, hee may easilie put it off at Court: hee that cannot make a legge, put off's cap, kisse his hand, and say nothing, has neither legge, hands, lippe, nor cap; and indeed such a fellow, to say precisely, were not for the Court, but for me, I haue an answere will serue all men.

Lady. Marry that's a bountifull answere that fits all questions.

Clo. It is like a Barbers chaire that fits all buttocks, the pin buttocke, the quatch-buttocke, the brawn buttocke, or any buttocke.

Lady. Will your answere serue fit to all questions?

Clo. As fit as ten groats is for the hand of an Attorney, as your French Crowne for your taffety punke, as Tib's rash for Tom's forre-finger, as a pancake for Shrouetuesday, a Morris for May-day, as the nailе to his hole, the Cuckold to his horne, as a scolding quean to a wrangling knaue, as the Nuns lip to the Friers mouth, nay as the pudding to his skin.

Lady. Haue you, I say, an answere of such fitnesse for all questions?

Clo. From below your Duke, to beneath your Constable, it will fit any question.

Lady. It must be an answere of most monstrous size, that must fit all demands.

Clo. But a trifle neither in good faith, if the learned should speake truth of it: heere it is, and all that belongs to't. Aske mee if I am a Courtier, it shall doe you no harme to learne.

Lady. To be young againe if we could: I will bee a foole in question, hoping to bee the wiser by your answer.

Lady.

La. I pray you sir, are you a Courtier?

Clo. O Lord sir there's a simple putting off more, more, a hundred of them.

La. Sir I am a poore friend of yours, that loues you.

Clo. O Lord sir, thicke, thicke, spare not me.

La. I thinke sir, you can eate none of this homely meate.

Clo. O Lord sir; nay put me too't, I warrant you.

La. You were lately whipt sir as I thinke

Clo. O Lord sir, spare not me.

La. Doe you crie O Lord sir at your whipping, and spare not me? Indeed your O Lord sir, is very equent to your whipping: you would answere very well to a whipping if you were but bound too't.

Clo. I more had worse lucke in my life in my O Lord sir: I see things may serue long, but not serue euer.

La. I pray the noble husbande with the time, to entertaine it so merrily with a foole.

Clo. O Lord sir, why there's seruet well agen

La. And end sir to your businesse: giue Helen this, And vrge her to a present answer backe, Commend me to my kinsmen, and my sonne, This is not much.

Clo. Not much commendation to them.

La. Not much imployment for you, you vnderstand me.

Clo. Most fruitfully, I am there, before my legges.

La. Haste you agen. Exeunt

Enter Count, Lafew, and Parolles.

Ol.Laf. They say miracles are past, and we haue our Philosophicall persons, to make moderne and familiar things supernaturall and conceiteless. Hence is it, that we make trifles of terrours, enforcing our selues into seeming knowledge, when we should submit our selues to an vnknowne feare.

Par. Why 'tis the rarest argument of wonder, that hath shot out in our latter times.

Ref. And so 'tis.

Ol.Laf. To be relinquishe of the Artists.

Par. So I say both of Galen and Paracelsus.

Ol.Laf. Of all the learned and authenticke fellowes.

Par. Right so I say.

Ol.Laf. That gaue him out incureable.

Par. Why there 'tis, so say I too.

Ol.Laf. Not to be help'd.

Par. Right, as 'twere a man assur'd of a ——

Ol.Laf. Vncertaine life, and sure death.

Par. Iust, you say well: so would I haue said.

Ol.Laf. I may truly say, it is a nouelties to the world.

Par. It is indeede if you will haue it in shewing, you shall reade it in what do ye call there.

Ol.Laf. A shewing of a heauenly effect in an earthly Actor

Par. That's it, I would haue said, the verie same

Ol.Laf. Why your Dolphin is not lustier fore mee I speake in respect ——

Par. Nay 'tis strange, 'tis very strauge, that is the breefe and the tedious of it, and he's of a most facinerious spirit, that will not acknowledge it to be the ——

Ol.Laf. Very hand of heauen.

Par. I, so I say.

Ol.Laf. In a most weake ——

Par. And debile minister great power, great transcendence, which should indeede giue vs a further vse to be made, then alone the recou'ry of the king, as to bee

Ol.Laf. Generally thankfull.

Enter King, Helen, and attendants.

Par. I would haue said it, you say well: heere comes the King.

Ol.Laf. Lustique, as the Dutchman saies: He like a maide the Better whil'ft I haue a tooth in my head: why he's able to leade her a Corranto.

Par. Mor du vinegre, is not this Helen?

Ol.Laf. Fore God I thinke so.

King. Goe call before mee all the Lords in Court, Sit my preserues by thy patients side, And wish this healthfull hand whose benifite sauce Thou hast repeal'd, a second time receyue The confirmation of my promis'd guift, Which but attends thy naming.

Enter 3 or 4 Lords.

Faire Maide send forth thine eye, this youthfull parcell Of Noble Bachellors, stand at my bestowing, Ore whom both Soueraigne power, and fathers voice I haue to vse; thy franke election make, Thou hast power to choose, and they none to forsake.

Hel. To each of you, one faire and vertuous Mistris; Fall when loue please, marry to each but one.

Old Laf. I'de giue bay curtall, and his furniture My mouth no more were broken then these boyes, And writ as little beard

King. Peruse them well: Not one of those, but had a Noble father She addresses her to a Lord.

Hel. Gentlemen, heauen hath through me, restor'd the king to health.

All We vnderstand it, and thanke heauen for you.

Hel. I am a simple Maide, and therein weakliest That I protest, I simply am a Maide: Please it your Maiestie, I haue done already: The blushes in my cheekes thus whisper mee, We blush that thou shouldst choose, but be refused; Let the white death sit on thy cheeke for euer. We'l nere come there againe.

King Make choise and see, Who shuns thy loue, shuns all his loue in mee

Hel. Now Diana from thy Alter do I fly, And to imperiall loue, that God most high Do my sighes streame: Sir, wil you heare my faire?

1. Lo. And grant it.

Hel. Thankes sir, all the rest is mute

Ol.Laf. I had rather be in this choise, then throw Amef-ace for my life.

Hel The honor sir that flames in your faire eyes, Before I speake too threatningly replies: Loue make your fortunes twentie times aboue Her that so wishes, and her humble loue.

2. Lo. No better if you please

Hel. My wish receiue, Which great loue grant, and so I take my leaue.

Ol.Laf. Do all they deme her? And they were sons of mine, I'de haue them whip'd, or I would send them to'th Turke to make Eunuches of.

Hel Be not afraid that I your hand should take, Ile neuer do you wrong for your owne sake: Blessing vpon your vowes, and in your bed Finde fairer fortune, if you euer wed.

Old.Laf. These boyes are boyes of Ice, they'le none haue haue heere: sure they are bastards to the English, the French nere got em.

La. You are too young, too happie, and too good To make your selfe a sonne out of my blood.

4.Lord. Faire one, I thinke not so.

Ol.Lord There's one grape yet, I am sure thy father drunke wine. But if thou be'st not an asse, I am a youth of fourteene: I haue knowne thee already.

Hel. I dare not say I take you, but I giue Me and my seruice, ever whilst I liue Into your guiding power: This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take her shee's thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Leige? I shal beseech your highnes In such a busines, giue me leaue to vse The helpe of mine owne eies.

King. Know'st thou not Bertram what shee ha's done for me?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but never hope to know why I should marrie her.

King. Thou know'st shee ha's rais'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But followes it my Lord, to bring me downe Must answer for your raising? I knowe her well: Shee had her breeding at my fathers charge: A poore Physitians daughter my wife? Disdaine Rather corrupt me ever.

King. Tis onely title thou disdainst in her, the which I can build vp: strange is it that our bloods Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together, Would quite confound distinction: yet stands off In differences so mightie. If she bee All that is vertuous (save what thou dislik'st) A poore Phisitians daughter, thou dislik'st Of vertue for the name: but doe not so: From lowest place, whence vertuous things proceed, The place is dignified by th' doers deeds. Where great additions swell's, and vertue none, It is a dropsied honour. Good a lone, Is good without a name? Vileness is so: The propertie by what is is, should go, Not by the title. Shee is young, wise, faire, In these, to Nature shee's immediate heire: And these breed honour: that's honours scorne, Which challenges it selfe as honours borne, And is not like the sire: Honours thriue, When rather from our acts we them deriue Then our fore-goers: the meere words, a slaue Debosh'd on euerie tombe, on euerie graue: A lying Trophee, and as oft is dumbe, Where dust, and damn'd oblision is the Tombe. Of honour'd bones indeed, what should be saide? If thou canst like this creature, as a maide, I can create the rest: Vertue, and shee Is her owne dower: Honour and wealth, from me.

Ber. I cannot loue her, nor will strive to doo't.

King Thou wrong'st thy selfe, if thou should'st strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd my Lord, I'me glad: Let the rest go.

King. My Honor's at the stake, which to defeate I must produce my power. Heere, take her hand, Proud scornfull boy, vnworthie this good gift, That dost in vile misprision shackle vp My loue, and her desert: that canst not dreame, We poising vs in her defective scale, Shall weigh thee to the beame: That wilt not know, It is in Vs to plant thine Honour, where We please to haue it grow. Checke thy contempt: Obey Our will, which trauiles in thy good: Believe not thy disdaine, but presently Do thine owne fortunes that obedient right Which both thy duetie owes, and Our power claimes, Or I will throw thee from my care for ever Into the staggers, and the careless lapse Of youth and ignorance: both my reuenge and hate Loosing vpon thee, in the name of iustice, Without all tearmes of pitie. Speake, thine answer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord: for I submit My fancie to your eies, when I consider What great creation, and what dole of honour Flies where you bid it: I find that she which late Was in my Nobler thoughts, most base: is now The praised of the King, who so ennobled, Is as 'twere borne so.

King. Take her by the hand, And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise A counterpoise: If not to thy estate, A ballance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

Kin. Good fortune, and the fauour of the King Smile vpon this Contract: whose Ceremonie Shall seeme expedient on the new borne brieffe, And be perform'd to night: the solemne Feast Shall more attend vpon the coming space, Expecting absent friends. As thou lou'st her, Thy loue's to me Religious: else, do's erre. Exeunt

Parolles and Lafew stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you heare Monsieur? A word with you.

Par. Your pleasure sir.

Laf. Your Lord and Master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation? My Lord? my Master?

Laf. Ha: Is it not a Language I speake?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to bee vnderstoode without bloudie succeeding. My Master?

Laf. Are you Companion to the Count Rossillon?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts: to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man: Counts maister is of another stile.

Par. You are too old sir: Let it satisfie you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee sirrah, I write Man: to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did thinke thee for two ordinaries: to be a prettie wise fellow, thou didst make tolerable vent of thy trauell, it might passe: yet the scarfes and the bannerets about thee, did manifoldlie diffwade me from believing thee a vessell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I loose thee againe, I care not: yet thou good for nothing but taking vp, and that th' ouer scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the priuiledge of Antiquity vpon thee.

Laf. Do not plundge thy selfe too farre in anger, least thou hasten thy triall: which if, Lord have mercie on thee for a hen, so my good window of Lattice fare thee well, thy casement I needs not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you give me most egregious indignity.

Laf.

Laf. I wish all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I haue not my Lord deseru'd it.

Laf. Yet good faith, cu'ry dramme of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. Eath as soone as thou can'st, for thou hast to pull at a smacke o'th contrarie. If euer thou bee'st bound in thy skarfe and beaten, thou shall finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage, I haue a desire to holde my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell paines for thy sake, and my poore doing eternall: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will giue me leaue. Exit.

Par. Well, thou hast a sonne shall take this disgrace off me; scurvy, old, filthy, scurvy Lord: Well, I must be patient, there is no fettering of authority. Ile beate him (by my life) if I can meete him with any conuenience, and he were double and double a Lord. Ile haue no more pittie of his age then I would haue of——Ile beate him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafeu.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and masters married, there's newes for you: you haue a new Mistris.

Par. I most vnfainedly beseech your Lordshippe to make some reseruation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord. whom I serue aboue is my master.

Laf. Who? God.

Par. I sir.

Laf. The deuill he is, that's thy master. Why doest thou garter vp thy armes a this fashion? Dost mak hose of thy sleeues? Do other seruants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine Honor, if I were but two houres yonger, I'de beate thee: methink'st thou art a generall offence, and euery man should beate thee: I thinke thou wast created for men to breath themselues vpon thee.

Par. This is hard and vndeserued measure my Lord.

Laf. Go too sir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traueller: you are more saweie with Lordes and honourable personages, then the Commission of your birth and vertue gives you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knaue. I leaue you. Exit

Enter Count Rossillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be concea'd awhile.

Ros. Vnkane, and forfeited to cares for euer.

Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?

Rossil. Although before the solemne Priest I haue sworne, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what sweet heart?

Ros. O my Parrolles, they haue married me: Ile to the Tuscan warres, and never bed her

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits, The tread of a mans foot: too'th warres.

Ros. There's letters from my mother: What th'importe is, I know not yet.

Par. I that would be knowne: too'th warres my boy, too'th warres:

He weares his honor in a boxe vnseene,
That hugges his kickie wickie heere at home,
Spending his manlie marrow in her armes
Which should sustaine the bound and high curuet
Of Marses fierie steed: to other Regions,
France is a stable, wee that dwell in't Iades,
Therefore too'th warre.

Ros. It shall be so, Ile send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durst not speake. His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields
Where noble fellowes strike: Warres is no strife
To the darke house, and the detested wife.

Par. Will this Caprichio hold in thee, art sure?

Ros. Go with me to my chamber, and aduise me.
Ile send her straight away: To morrow,
Ile to the warres, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why these bals bound, ther's noise in it. Tis hard
A yong man married, is a man that's mard:
Therefore away, and leaue her bravely: go,
The King has done you wrong: but hush 'tis so. Exit

Enter Helena and Clowne.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is she well?

Clo. She is not well, but yet she has her health, she's very merrie, but yet she is not well: but thankes be giuen, she's very well, and wants nothing i'th world: but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be verie wel, what do's she ayle, that she's not verie well?

Clo. Truly she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heauen, whether God send her quickly: the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bleese you my fortunate Ladie.

Hel. I hope sir I haue your good will to haue mine owne good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to leade them on, and to keepe them on, haue them still. O my knaue, how do's my old Ladie?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why I say nothing.

Clo. Marry you are the wiser man: for many a mans tongue shakes out his masters vndoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to haue nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a verie little of nothing.

Par. Away, th'art a knaue.

Clo. You should haue said sir before a knaue, th'art a knaue, that's before me th art a knaue: this had beene truth sir.

Par. Go too, thou art a witie foole, I haue found thee.

Clo. Did you finde me in your selfe sir, or were you taught to finde me?

Clo. The search sir was profitable, and much Foole may you find in you, euen to the worlds pleasure, and the encrease of laughter.

Par. A good knaue ifaith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go awaie to night,

haue beere : sure they are bastards to the English, the French nere got em.

La. You are too young, too happie, and too good
To make your selfe a sonne out of my blood.

4.Lord. Faire one, I thinke not so.

Ol.Lord There's one grape yet, I am sure thy father drunke wine. But if thou be'ft not an asse, I am a youth of fourteene : I haue knowne thee already.

Hel. I dare not say I take you, but I giue
Me and my service, ever whilst I liue
Into your guiding power : This is the man.

King. Why then young Bertram take her shee's thy wife.

Ber. My wife my Leige? I shal beseech your highnes
In such a bosines, give me leaue to vse
The helpe of mine owne eies.

King. Know'ft thou not Bertram what shee ha's done for mee?

Ber. Yes my good Lord, but never hope to know why I should marrie her.

King. Thou know'ft shee ha's reis'd me from my sickly bed.

Ber. But followes it my Lord, to bring me downe
Must answer for your raising? I knowe her well:
Shee had her breeding at my fathers charge:
A poore Physitians daughter my wife? Disdaine
Rather corrupt me ever.

King. Tis onely title thou disdainst in her, the which
I can build vp : strange is it that our bloods
Of colour, weight, and heat, pour'd all together,
Would quite confound distinction: yet stande off
In differences so mightie. If she bee
All that is vertuous (save what thou dislik'ft)
A poore Phisitians daughter, thou dislik'ft
Of vertue for the name : but doe not so :
From lowest place, whence vertuous things proceed,
The place is dignified by th' doers deeds.
Where great additions swell's, and vertue none,
It is a dropsied honour. Good is one,
Is good without a name: Vilenesse is so :
The propertie by what is is, should go,
Not by the title. Shee is young, wise, faire,
In these, to Nature shee's immediate heire :
And these breed honour : that is honours scorne,
Which challenges it selfe as honours borne,
And is not like the fire : Honours thriue,
When rather from our acts we them deriue
Then our fore-goers : the meere words, a slaue
Debosh'd on everie tombe, on everie graue:
A lying Trophee, and as oft is dumbe,
Where dust, and damn'd oblivion is the Tombe.
Of honour'd bones indeed, what should be saide?
If thou canst like this creature, as a maide,
I can create the rest : Vertue, and shee
Is her owne dower : Honour and wealth, from mee.

Ber. I cannot loue her, nor will strive to doe't.

King. Thou wrong'ft thy selfe, if thou should'ft strive to choose.

Hel. That you are well restor'd my Lord, I'me glad:
Let the rest go.

King. My Honor's at the stake, which to defeate
I must produce my power. Heere, take her hand,
Proud scornfull boy, vnworthie this good gift,
That dost in vile misprision shackle vp
My loue, and her desert : that canst not dreame,
We poising vs in her defective scale,
Shall weigh thee to the beame : That wilt not know,
It is in Vs to plant thine Honour, where
We please to haue it grow. Checke thy contempt:
Obey Our will, which travailes in thy good:
Believe not thy disdaine, but presently
Do thine owne fortunes that obedient right
Which both thy dutie owes, and Our power claimes,
Or I will throw thee from my care for ever
Into the staggers, and the careless lapse
Of youth and ignorance : both my revenge and hate
Loosing vpon thee, in the name of iustice,
Without all remorse of pitie. Speake, thine answer.

Ber. Pardon my gracious Lord : for I submit
My fancie to your eies, when I consider
What great creation, and what dole of honour
Flies where you bid it : I finde that she which late
Was in my Nobler thoughts, most base : is now
The praised of the King, who so ennobled,
Is as 'twere borne so.

King. Take her by the hand,
And tell her she is thine: to whom I promise
A counterpoise : If not to thy estate,
A balance more replete.

Ber. I take her hand.

Kin. Good fortune, and the favour of the King
Smile vpon this Contract : whose Ceremonie
Shall seeme expedient on the new borne braide,
And be perform'd to night : the solemne Feast
Shall more attend vpon the coming space,
Expecting absent friends. As thou lou'ft her,
Thy loue's to me Religious : else, do's erre. Exeunt

Parolles and Lafew stay behind, commenting of this wedding.

Laf. Do you heare Monsieur? A word with you.

Par. Your pleasure sir.

Laf. Your Lord and Master did well to make his recantation.

Par. Recantation? My Lord? my Master?

Laf. Ist is not a Language I speake?

Par. A most harsh one, and not to bee vnderstoode without bloudie succeeding. My Master?

Laf. Are you Companion to the Count Rossillon?

Par. To any Count, to all Counts : to what is man.

Laf. To what is Counts man : Counts maister is of another stile.

Par. You are too old sir : Let it satisfie you, you are too old.

Laf. I must tell thee sirrah, I write Man : to which title age cannot bring thee.

Par. What I dare too well do, I dare not do.

Laf. I did thinke thee for two ordinaries : to be a prettie wise fellow, thou didst make tolerable vent of thy travell, it might passe : yet the scarfes and the bancrets about thee, did manifoldlie dissuade me from believing thee a vessell of too great a burthen. I have now found thee, when I loose thee againe, I care not: yet art thou good for nothing but taking vp, and that th' art scarce worth.

Par. Hadst thou not the priuiledge of Antiquity vpon thee.

Laf. Do not plaudge thy selfe too farre in anger, least thou hasten thy trauell : which if, Lord have mercie on thee for a hen, so my good window of Lattice fare thee well, thy casement I needs not open, for I look through thee. Give me thy hand.

Par. My Lord, you give me most egregious indignitie.

Laf.

Laf. I wish all my heart, and thou art worthy of it.

Par. I haue not my Lord deseru'd it.

Laf. Yes good faith, eu'ry dramme of it, and I will not bate thee a scruple.

Par. Well, I shall be wiser.

Laf. Eate as soone as thou can'st, for thou hast to pull at a smacke a'th contrarie. If euer thou bee'st bound in thy skarfe and beaten, thou shalt finde what it is to be proud of thy bondage, I haue a desire to bande my acquaintance with thee, or rather my knowledge, that I may say in the default, he is a man I know.

Par. My Lord you do me most insupportable vexation.

Laf. I would it were hell paines for thy sake, and my poore doing eternall: for doing I am past, as I will by thee, in what motion age will giue me leaue. Exit.

Par. Well, thou hast a sonne shall take this disgrace off me; scurui, old, filthy, scurui Lord: Well, I must be patient, there is no fettering of authority. Ile beate him (by my life) if I can meete him with any conuenience, and he were double and double a Lord. Ile haue no more pitie of his age then I would haue of——Ile beate him, and if I could but meet him agen.

Enter Lafew.

Laf. Sirra, your Lord and masters married, there's newes for you: you haue a new Mistris.

Par. I most vnfainedly beseech your Lordshippe to make some reseruation of your wrongs. He is my good Lord. whom I serue aboue is my master.

Laf. Who? God.

Par. I sir.

Laf. The deuill it is, that's thy master. Why doest thou garter vp thy armes a this fashion? Dost mak hose of thy sleeues? Do other seruants so? Thou wert best set thy lower part where thy nose stands. By mine Honor, if I were but two houres yonger, I'de beate thee: meethink'st thou art a generall offence, and every man shold beate thee: I thinke thou wast created for men to breath themselues vpon thee.

Par. This is hard and vndeserued measure my Lord.

Laf. Go too sir, you were beaten in Italy for picking a kernell out of a Pomgranat, you are a vagabond, and no true traueller: you are more saucie with Lordes and honourable personages, then the Commission of your birth and vertue giues you Heraldry. You are not worth another word, else I'de call you knaue. I leaue you. Exit

Enter Count Rossillion.

Par. Good, very good, it is so then: good, very good, let it be conceal'd awhile.

Ros. Vnbone, and forfeited to cares for euer.

Par. What's the matter sweet-heart?

Ros. Although before the solemne Priest I haue sworne, I will not bed her.

Par. What? what sweet heart?

Ros. O my Parrolles, they haue married me: Ile to the Tuscan warres, and neuer bed her.

Par. France is a dog-hole, and it no more merits, The tread of a mans foot: too'th warres.

Ros. There's letters from my mother: What th'importe is, I know not yet.

Par. I that would be known: too'th warres my boy, too'th warres:

He weares his honor in a boxe vnseene,
That hugges his kickie wickie heere at home,
Spending his manlie marrow in her armes
Which should sustaine the bound and high curuet
Of Marses fierie steed: to other Regions,
France is a stable, wee that dwell in't ladies,
Therefore too'th warre.

Ros. It shall be so, Ile send her to my house,
Acquaint my mother with my hate to her,
And wherefore I am fled: Write to the King
That which I durst not speake. His present gift
Shall furnish me to those Italian fields
Where noble fellowes strike: Warres is no strife
To the darke house, and the detected wife.

Par. Will this Caprichio hold in thee, art sure?

Ros. Go with me to my chamber, and aduise me.
Ile send her straight away: To morrow,
Ile to the warres, she to her single sorrow.

Par. Why these balls bound, there's noise in it. Tis hard
A yong man married, is a man that's mard:
Therefore away, and leaue her bravely: go,
The King he's done you wrong: but hush 'tis so. Exit

Enter Helena and Clowne.

Hel. My mother greets me kindly, is she well?

Clo. She is not well, but yet she has her health, she's very merrie, but yet she is not well: but thanks be giuen she's very well, and wants nothing i'th world: but yet she is not well.

Hel. If she be verie wel, what do's she ayle, that she's not verie well?

Clo. Truly she's very well indeed, but for two things.

Hel. What two things?

Clo. One, that she's not in heauen, whether God send her quickly: the other, that she's in earth, from whence God send her quickly.

Enter Parolles.

Par. Bless you my fortunate Ladie.

Hel. I hope sir I haue your good will to haue mine owne good fortune.

Par. You had my prayers to leade them on, and to keepe them on, haue them still. O my knaue, how do's my old Ladie?

Clo. So that you had her wrinkles, and I her money, I would she did as you say.

Par. Why I say nothing.

Clo. Marry you are the wiser man: for many a mans tongue shakes out his masters vndoing: to say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to haue nothing, is to be a great part of your title, which is within a verie little of nothing.

Par. Away, th'art a knaue.

Clo. You should haue said sir before a knaue, th'art a knaue, that's before me th art a knaue: this had beene truth sir.

Par. Go too, thou art a wittie foole, I haue found thee.

Clo. Did you finde me in your selfe sir, or were you taught to finde me?

Clo. The search sir was profitable, and much Foole may you find in you, euen to the worlds pleasure, and the encrease of laughter.

Par. A good knaue ifaith, and well fed.
Madam, my Lord will go away to night,

A verie serious business call's on him:
The great prerogative and rite of loue,
Which as your due time claimes, he do's acknowledge
But puts it off to a compell'd restraint:
Whose want, and whose delay, is strew'd with sweets
Which they distill now in the curbed time.
To make the comming hours orcflow with ioy,
And pleasure drowne the brim.

Hel. What's his will else?

Par. That you will take your instant leaue o'th king,
And make this haste as your owne good proceeding,
Strengthned with what Apologie you thinke
May make it probable neede.

Hel. What more commands hee?

Par. That hauing this obtain'd, you presentlie
Attend his further pleasure.

Hel. In every thing I waite vpon his will.

Par. I shall report it so. Exit Par.

Hell. I pray you come sirrah. Exit

Enter Lafeu and Bertram.

Laf. But I hope your Lordshippe thinkes not him a souldier.

Ber. Yes my Lord and of verie valiant approofe.

Laf. You haue it from his owne deliuerance.

Ber. And by other warranted testimonie.

Laf. Then my Dietl goes not true; I tooke this I aske for h beauty.

Ber. I do assure you my Lord he is very great in knowledge, and accordinglie valiant.

Laf. I haue then sinn'd against his experience, and transgreft against his valour, and my state that way is dangerous, since I cannot yet find in my heart to repent: Here he comes, I pray you make vs freinds, I will persue the matter.

Enter Parolles.

Par. These things shall be done sir.

Laf. Pray you sir whose his Tailor?

Par. Sir?

Laf. O I know him well, I sir, hee sets a good workeman, a verie good Tailor.

Ber. Is shee gone to the king?

Par. Shee is.

Ber. Will shee away to night?

Par. As you'le haue her.

Ber. I haue writ my letters, casketed my treasure,
Giuen order for our horses, and to night,
When I should take possession of the Bride,
And ere I doe begin.

Laf. A good Traueller is something at the latter end of a dinner, but on thee lies three thirds, and vses a known truth to passe a thousand nothings with, should bee once hard, and thrice beaten. God saue you Captaine.

Ber. Is there any vnkindnes betweene my Lord and you Monsieur?

Par. I know not how I haue deserued to run into my Lords displeasure.

Laf. You haue made shift to run into't, boots and spurres and all: like him that leapt into the Custard, and out of it you'le runne againe, rather then suffer question for your residence.

Ber. It may bee you haue mistaken him my Lord.

Laf. And shall doe so euer, though I tooke him at's prayers. Fare you well my Lord, and beleeue this of me, there can be no kernell in this light Nut: the soule of this man is his clothes: Trust him not in matter of heauie consequence: I haue kept of them tame, & know their natures. Farewell Mon sieur, I haue spoken better of you, then you haue or will to deserue at my hand, but we must do good against euill.

Par. An idle Lord, I sweare.

Ber. I thinke so.

Par. Why do you not know him?

Ber. Yes, I do know him well, and commen speech
Giues him a worthy pass. Heere comes my clog.

Enter Helena.

Hel. I haue sir as I was commanded from you
Spoke with the King, and haue procur'd his leaue
For present parting, onely he desires
Some priuate speech with you.

Ber. I shall obey his will.
You must not marueile Helen at my course,
Which holds not colour with the time, nor does
The ministration, and required office
On my particular. Prepar'd I was not
For such a businesse, therefore am I found
So much vnfeeled: This drives me to intreate you,
That presently you take your way for home,
And rather make then aske why I intreate you.
For my respects are better then they seeme,
And my appointments haue in them a needs
Greater then shewes it selfe at the first view,
To you that know them not. This to my mother,
'Twill be two dayes ere I shall see you, so
I leaue you to your wisedome.

Hel. Sir, I can nothing say,
But that I am your most obedient seruant.

Ber. Come, come, no more of that.

Hel. And euer shall
With true obseruance seeke to eeke out that
Wherein toward me my homely seruices haue faild
To equall my great fortune.

Ber. Let that goe: my haste is verie great. Farewell:
Hie home.

Hel. Pray for your pardon.

Ber. Well, what would you say?

Hel. I am not worthie of the wealth I owe,
Nor dare I say 'tis mine: and yet it is,
But like a timorous theeft, most faine would steale
What law does vouch mine owne.

Ber. What would you haue?

Hel. Something, and scarse so much: nothing indeed,
I would not tell you what I would my Lord: Faith yes,
Strangers and foes do sunder, and not kisse.

Ber. I pray you stay not, but in haste to horse.

Hel. I shall not breake your bidding, good my Lord.
Where are my other men? Monsieur, farewell. Exit

Ber. Go thou toward home, where I will never come,
Whilst I can shake my sword, or heare the drumme:
Away, and for our flight.

Par. Bravely, Coragio.

Actus Tertius.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, the two Frenchmen, with a troope of Souldiers.

Duke. So that from point to point, now haue you heard

The

The fundamentall reasons of this warre,
Whose great decision hath much blood let forth
And more thirsts after.

1. Lord. Holy seemes the quarrell
Vpon your Graces part: blacke and fearefull
On the opposer.

Duke. Therefore we marrule much our Cosin France
Would in so just a business, shut his bosome
Against our borrowing prayers.

French E. Good my Lord,
The reasons of our state I cannot yeelde,
But like a common and an outward man,
That the great figure of a Counsaile frames,
By sense vnable motion, therefore dare not Say what I thinke of it, since I haue found
My selfe in my incertaine grounds to faile,
As often as I guest.

Duke. Be it his pleasure.

Fren.G. But I am sure the younger of our nature,
That surfet on their ease, will day by day
Come heere for Physicke.

Duke. Welcome shall they bee:
And all the honors that can flye from vs,
Shall on them settle: you know your places well,
When better fall, for your auailes they fell,
To morrow to'th the field. Flourish.

Enter Countesse and Clowne.

Count. It hath happen'd all, as I would haue had it, saue that he comes not along with her.

Clo. By my troth I take my young Lord to be a verie melancholly man.

Count. By what obseruance I pray you.

Clo Why he will looke vppon his boote, and sing: mend the Ruffe and sing, aske questions and sing, picke his teeth, and sing: I know a man that had this tricke of melancholy sold a goodly Manor for a song.

Lad. Let me see what he writes, and when he meanes to come.

Clow. I haue no mande to Isbell since I was at Court. Our old Lings, and our Isbels a'th Country, are nothing like your old Ling and your Isbels a'th Court: the brains of my Cupid's knock'd out, and I beginne to loue, as an old man loues money, with no stomacke.

Lad. What haue we heere?

Clo. In that you haue there. exit

A Letter.

I haue sent you a daughter-in-Law, she hath recouered the King, and vndone me: I haue wedded her, not bedded her, and sworne to make the not eternall. You shall heare I am runne away, know it before the report come. If thou hardest enough in this world, I will hold a long distance. My duty to you. Your vnfortunate sonne, Bertram.

This is not well rash and vnbridled boy,
To fly the fauours of so good a King,
To pluck his indignation on thy head,
By the misprising of a Maide too vertuous
For the contempt of Empire.

Enter Clowne.

Clow. O Madam, yonder is heauie newes within betweene two souldiers, and my young Ladie.

La. What is the matter.

Clo. Nay there is some comfort in the newes, some comfort, your sonne will not be killd so soone as I thought he would.

La. Why should he be kill'd?

Clo. So say I Madame, if he runne away, as I heare he does, the danger is in standing too't, that's the losse of men, though it be the getting of children. Here they come will tell you more. For my part I onely heare your sonne was run away.

Enter Hellen and two Gentlemen.

French E. Save you good Madam.

Hel. Madam, my Lord is gone, for euer gone.

French G. Do not say so.

La. Thinke vpon patience, pray you Gentlemen,
I haue felt so many quirkes of ioy and greefe,
That the first face of neither on the start
Can woman me vnto't. Where is my sonne I pray you

Fren.G. Madam he's gone to serue the Duke of Florence,
We met him thitherward, for thence we came:
And after some dispatch in hand at Court,
Thither we bend againe.

Hel. Looke on his Letter Madam, here's my Passport.

When thou canst get the Ring vpon my finger, which never shall come off, and show me a childe begotten of thy bodie, that I am father to, then call me husband: but in such a (then) I write a Never.

This is a dreadfull sentence.

La. Brought you this Letter Gentlemen?

1.G. I Madam, and for the Contents sake are sorrie for our paines.

Old La. I prethee Ladie haue a better cheere,
If thou engrossest, all the greefes are thine,
Thou robst me of a moity: He was my sonne,
But I do wash his name out of my blood,
And thou art all my childe. Towards Florence is he?

Fren.G. I Madam.

La. And to be a souldier.

Fren.G. Such is his noble purpose, and believe't
The Duke will lay vpon him all the honor
That good conuenience claimes.

La. Returne you thither.

Fren.E. I Madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

Hel. Till I haue no wife, I haue nothing in France,
Tis bitter.

La. Finde you that there?

Hel. I Madame.

Fren.E. Tis but the boldnesse of his hand haply, which his heart was not consenting too.

Lad. Nothing in France, vntill he haue no wife:
There's nothing heere that is too good for him
But onely she, and she deserues a Lord
That twenty such rude boyes might tend vpon,
And call her hourely Mistris. Who was with him?

Fren.E. A seruant onely, and a Gentleman: which I haue sometime knowne.

La. Parolles was it not?

Fren.E. I my good Ladie, hee.

La. A verie tainted fellow, and full of wickednesse,
My sonne corrupts a well deriued nature
With his inducement.

Fren.E. Indeed good Ladie the fellow has a deale of that, too much, which holds him much to haue.

La. Y'are welcome Gentlemen, I will intreate you when you see my sonne, to tell him that his sword can neuer winne the honor that he loosses: more Ile intreate you you written to beareslong.

Fren.G. We serue you Madam in that and all your worthiest affaires.

La. Not so, but as we change our courtesies, Will you draw neere? Exit.

Hel. Till I haue no wife I haue nothing in France.
Nothing in France vntill he has no wife:
Thou shalt haue none Rossillion, none in France,
Then hast thou all again: poore Lord, is't I
That chase thee from thy Countrie, and expose
Those tender limbes of thine, to the event
Of the none-sparing warre? And is it I,
That driue thee from the sportiue Court, where thou
Wa's shot at with faire eyes, to be the marke
Of smokie Muskets? O you leaden messengers,
That ride vpon the violent speede of fire.
Fly with false ayme, moue the still-peering aire
That sings with piercing, do not touch my Lord:
Who euer shoots at him, I set him there.
Who euer charges on his forward breast
I am the Caitiffe that do hold him too't,
And though I kill him not, I am the cause
His death was so effected: Better 'twere
I met the ramine Lyon when he roar'd
With sharpe constraint of hunger: better 'twere,
That all the miseries which nature owes
Were mine at once. No come thou home Rossillion,
Whence honor but of danger winnes a scarre.
As oft it looses all. I will be gone:
My being heere it is, that holds thee hence,
Shall I stay heere to doo't? No, no, although
The eyre of Paradise did fan the house,
And Angles offic'd all: I will be gone,
That pittifull rumour may report my flight
To consolate thine eare. Come night, end day,
For with the darke (poore theefe) I'le steale away. Exit.

Flourish. Enter the Duke of Florence, Rossillion, drum and trumpets, soldiers, Parrolles.

Duke. The Generall of our horse thou art, and we Great in our hope, lay our best loue and credence
Vpon thy promising fortune.

Ber. Sir it is
A charge too heauy for my strength, but yet
We'l striue to beare it for your worthy sake,
To th'extreme edge of hazard.

Duke. Then go thou forth,
And fortune play vpon thy prosperous helme
As thy auspicious mistris.

Ber. This very day
Great Mars I put my selfe into thy file,
Make me but like my thoughts, and I shall prouе
A louer of thy drumme, hater of loue. Exeunt omnes

Enter Countesse & Steward.

La. Alas! and would you take the letter of her:
Might you not know she would do, as she has done,
By sending me a Letter. Read it again.

Letter.

I am S. Iaques Pilgrim, thither gone:
Ambitious loue hath so in me offended,
That barefoot plod I the cold ground vpon
With sainted vow my faults to haue amended.
Write, write, that from the bloodie course of warre
My dearest Master your deare sonne, may hie,
Blesse him at home in peace. Whilst I from farre,
His name with zealous fervour sanctifie:
His taken labours bid him me forgiue:
I his despightfull Iuno sent him forth,
From Courtly friends, with Camping foes to liue,
Where death and danger dogges the heeles of worth.
He is too good and faire for death, and mee,
Whom I my selfe embrace to set him free.

Ah what sharpe stings are in her mildest words?
Rynaldo, you did neuer lacke aduice so much,
As letting her passe so: had I spoke with her,
I could haue well diuerted her intents,
Which thus she hath preuented.

Ste. Pardon me Madam,
If I had given you this at ouer-night,
She might haue beene ore-tane: and yet she writes
Pursuite would be but vaine.

La. What Angell shall
Blesse this vnworthy husband, he cannot thriue,
Vnlesse her prayers, whom heauen delights to heare
And loues to grant, reprieue him from the wrath
Of greatest Iustice. Write, write Rynaldo,
To this vnworthy husband of his wife,
Let euerie word weigh heauie of her worth,
That he does weigh too light: my greatest greefe,
Though little he do feele it, set downe sharply.
Dispatch the most conuenient messenger,
When haply he shall heare that she is gone,
He will returne, and hope I may that shee
Hearing so much, will speede her foote againe,
Led hither by pure loue: which of them both
Is dearest to me, I haue no skill in sence
To make distinction. prouide this Messenger:
My heart is heauie, and mine age is weake,
Greefe would haue teares, and sorrow bids me speake.
Exeunt.

A Tucket afarre off.

Enter old Widdow of Florence, her daughter, Widdow and Mariana, with other Citizens.

Widdow. Nay come,
For if they do approach the City.
We shall loose all the sight.

Diana. They say, the French Count has done
Most honourable seruice.

Wid. It is reported,
That he has taken their great'st Commander,
And that with his owne hand he slew
The Dukes brother: we haue lost our labour,
They are gone a contrarie wayeharke,
you may know by their Trumpets.

Maria. Come let's returne againe,
And suffice our selues with the report of it
Well Diana, take heed of this French Earle,
The honor of a Maide is her name,
And no Legacie is so rich
As honestie.

Widdow I haue told my neighbour
How you haue beene solicited by a Gentleman
His Companion.

Mariana. I know that knaue, hang him, one Parolles, a filthy Officer he is in those suggestions for the young Earle, beware of them Diana; their promises, enticements, oathes, tokens, and all these engines of lust, are not the things they go vnder: many a maide hath beene seduced by them, and the miserie is example, that so terrible shewes in the wracke of maiden-hood, cannot for all that dissuade succession, but that they are limed with the twigges that threatens them. I hope I neede not to admire you further, but I hope your owne grace will keepe you where you are, though there were no further danger knowne, but the modestie which is so lost.

Dia. You shall not neede to feare me.

Enter Helena.

Wid. I hope so: looke here comes a pilgrim, I know she will lye at my house, thither they send one another, Ile question her. God save you pilgrim, whether are bound?

Hel. To S. Iaques le grand.
Where do the Palmers lodge, I do beseech you?

Wid. At the S. Francis heere beside the Port.

Hel. Is this the way? A march afarre.

Wid. I marrie is't. Harke you, they come this way:
If you will tarrie holy Pilgrime
But till the troopes come by,
I will conduct you where you shall be lodg'd,
The rather for I thinke I know your hostesse
As ample as my selfe.

Hel. Is it your selfe?

Wid. If you shall please so Pilgrime.

Hel. I thanke you, and will stay vpon your leisure.

Wid. you came I thinke from France?

Hel. I did so.

Wid. Heere you shall see a Countrieman of yours
That has done worthy seruice.

Hel. His name I pray you?

Dia. The Count Rossillion: know you such a one?

Hel. But by the ease that beares most nobly of him:
His face I know not.

Dia. What somere he is
He's beauty taken heere. He stole from France
As 'tis reported: for the King had married him
Against his liking. Thinke you it is so?

Hel. I surely meere the truth, I know his Lady.

Dia. There is a Gentleman that serues the Count,
Reports but courtesly of her.

Hel. What's his name?

Dia. Monsieur Parrolles.

Hel. Oh I beleeue with him,
In argument of praise, or to the worth
Of the great Count himselfe, she is too meane
To haue her name repeated, all her deserving
Is a seruant honestie, and that
I haue not heard examin'd.

Dian. Alas poore Ladie,
'Tis a hard bondage to become the wife
Of a detesting Lord.

Wid. I write good creature, wheresoere she is,
Her hart weighes sadly: this yong maid might do her
A shrewd turne if she pleas'd.

Hel. How do you meane?
May be the amorous Count solicites her
In the vnlawfull purpose.

Wid. He does indeede,
And brokes with all that can in such a suite
Corrupt the tender honour of a Maide:
But she is arm'd for him, and keepes her guard
In honestest defence.

Drumme and Colours.
Enter Count Rossillion, Parrolles, and the whole Armie.

Mar. The goddes forbid else.

Wid. So, now they come:
That is Antonio the Dukes eldest sonne,
That Espalus.

Hel. Which is the Frenchmen?

Dia. Hee,
That with the plume, 'tis a most gallant fellow,
I would he lou'd his wife: if he were honester
He were much goodlier. Is't not a handsom Gentleman

Hel. I like him well.

Di 'Tis pitty he is not honest: yonds that same knaue
That leades him to these places: were I his Ladie,
I would poison that vile Rascall.

Hel. Which is he?

Dia. That lacke an-apes with scarfes. Why is hee melancholly?

Hel. Perchance he's hurt i'th battaile.

Par. Loose our drum? Well.

Mar. He's shrewdly vext at something. Looke he has spyed vs.

Wid. Marrie hang you.

Mar. And your curtesie, for a ring-carrier. Exit.

Wid. The troope is past: Come pilgrim, I will bring you, Where you shall host: Of inuiryn'd penetents
There's foure or fiue, to great S. Iaques bound,
Already at my house.

Hel. I humbly thanke you:
Please it this Matron, and this gentle Maide
To eate with vs to night, the charge and thanking
Shall be for me, and to requite you further,
I will bestow some precepts of this Virgin.
Worthy the note.

Bath. We'l take your offer kindly. Exeunt.

Enter Count Rossillion and the Frenchmen, as at first.

Cap. E. Nay good my Lord put him too't: let him haue his way.

Cap. G. If your Lordshippe finde him not a Hilding, hold me no more in your respect.

Cap. E. On my life my Lord a bobble.

Ber. Do you thinke I am so farre
Deceiued in him.

Cap. E. Believe it my Lord, in mine owne direct knowledge, without any malice, but to speake of him as my kinsman, hee's a most notable Coward, an infinite and endlesse Lyar, an hourely promise-breaker, the owner of no one good qualitie, worthy your Lordships entertainment.

Cap G. It were fit you knew him, least reposing too farre in his vertue which he hath not, he might at some great and trustie businesse, in a maine danger, fayle you.

Ber. I would I knew in what particular action to try him.

Cap. G. None better then to let him fetch off his drummes, which you heare him so confidently vndertake to do.

C. E. I with a troop of Florentines will suddenly surprise prize him; such I will leave whom I am sure he knowes not from the enemie: wee will binde and hoodwinke him so, that he shall suppose no other but that he is carried into the Leaguer of the aduersaries, when we bring him to our owne tents: be but your Lordship present at his examination, if he do not for the promise of his life, and in the highest compulsion of base feare, offer to betray you, and deliuer all the intelligence in his power against you, and that with the diuine forfeite of his soule vpon oath, never trust my iudgement in anie thing.

Cap.G. O for the loue of laughter, let him fetch his drumme, he sayes he has a stratagem for't: when your Lordship sees the bottome of this successe in't, and to what metle this counterfeyt lump of ours will be melted if you giue him not Iohn drummes entertainement, your inclining cannot be remoued. Here he comes.

Enter Paroles.

Cap.E. O for the loue of laughter hinder not the honor of his designe, let him fetch off his drumme in any hand.

Ber. How now Monsieur? This drumme sticks sorrely in your disposition.

Cap.G. A pox on't, let it go, 'tis but a drumme.

Par. But a drumme: Is't but a drumme? A drum so lost. There was excellent command, to charge in with our horse vpon our owne wings, and to rend our owne souldiers.

Cap.G. That was not to be blam'd in the command of the seruice: it was a disaster of warre that Cæsar him selfe could not haue preuented, if he had beene there to command.

Ber. Well, wee cannot greatly condemne our successe: some dishonor wee had in the losse of that drum, but it is not to be recouered.

Par. It might haue beene recouered.

Ber. It might, but it is not now.

Par. It is to be recouered, but that the merit of seruice is seldome attributed to the true and exact performer, I would haue that drumme or another, or his tenent.

Ber. Why if you haue a stomacke, too't Monsieur: if you thinke your mysterie in stratagem, can bring this instrument of honour again into his native quarter, be magnanimious in the enterprize and go on, I wil grace the attempt for a worthy exploit: if you speede well in it, the Duke shall both speake of it, and extend to you what further becomes his greatnesse, even to the vtmost syllable of your worthinesse.

Par. By the hand of a souldier I will vndertake it.

Ber. But you must not now slumber in it.

Par. Ile about it this euening, and I will presently pen downe my dilemma's, encourage my selfe in my certaintie, put my selfe into my mortall preparation and by midnight looke to heare further from me.

Ber. May I bee bold to acquaint his grace you are gone about it.

Par. I know not what the successe wil be my Lord, but the attempt I vow.

Ber. I know th'art valiant,
And to the possibility of thy souldiership,
Will subscribe for thee: Farewell.

Par. I loue not many words. Exit

Cap.E. No more than a fish loues water. Is not this a strange fellow my Lord, that so confidently seemes to vndertake this business, which he knowes is not to be done, damnes himselfe to do, & dares better be damnd then to doo't.

Cap.G. You do not know him my Lord as we doe, certaine is it that he will steale himselfe into a man's fauour, and for a weeke escape a great deale of discouries, but when you finde him out, you haue him euer after.

Ber. Why do you thinke he will make no deede at all of this that so seriously he does addresse himselfe vnto?

Cap.E. None in the world, but returne with an inuention, and clap vpon you two or three probable lies: but we haue almost imbost him, you shall see his fall to night; for indeede he is not for your Lordshippes respect.

Cap.G. Wee'le make you some sport with the Fox ere we case him. He was first smok'd by the old Lord Lafew, when his disguise and he is parted, tell me what a sprat you shall finde him, which you shall see this verie night.

Cap.E. I must go looke my twigges,
He shall be caught.

Ber. Your brother he shall go along with me.

Cap.G. As't please your Lordship, Ile leaue you.

Ber. Now wil I lead you to the house, and shew you
The Lasse I spoke of.

Cap.E. But you say she's honest.

Ber. That's all the fault: I spoke with her but once,
And found her wondrous cold, but I sent to her
By this same Coxcombe that we haue i'th winde
Tokens and Letters, which she did reseind,
And this is all I haue done: She's a faire creature,
Will you go see her?

Cap.E. With all my heart my Lord. Exeunt

Enter Hellen, and Widdow.

Hel. If you will doubt me that I am not shee,
I know not how I shall assure you further,
But I shall loose the grounds I weeke vpon.

Wid. Though my estate be falne, I was well borne,
Nothing acquainted with these businesses,
And would not put my reputation now
In any staining act.

Hel. Nor would I wish you.
First giue me trust, the Count he is my husband,
And what to your sworne counsaile I haue spoken,
Is so from word to word: and then you cannot
By the good ayde that I of you shall borrow,
Erre in bestowing it.

Wid. I should beleeue you,
For you haue shew'd me that which well appeares
T'are great in fortune.

Hel. Take this purse of Gold,
And let me buy your friendly helpe thus farre,
Which I will ouer-pay, and pay againe
When I haue found it. The Count he woos your daughter,
Layes downe his wanton siedge before her beauty,
Resolues to carrie her: let her in fine consent
As wee'l direct her how 'tis best to beare it:
Now his important blood will naught deny,
That shee'l demand: a ring the Countie weares,
That downward hath succeeded in his house

From

From sonne to sonne, some foure or five discents,
Since the first father wore it. This Ring he holds
In most rich choice: yet in his idle fire,
To buy his will, it would not seeme too deere,
How ere repented after.

Wid. Now I see the bottome of your purpose.

Hel. You see it lawfull then, it is no more,
But that your daughter ere she seemes as wonne,
Desires this Ring; appoints him an encounter;
In fine, delivers me to fill the time,
Her selfe most chastly absent: after
To marry her, I'le adde three thousand Crownes
To what is past already.

Wid. I have yeelded.
Instruct my daughter how she shall persever,
That time and place with this deceite so lawfull
May prove coherent. Every night he comes
With Musickes of all sorts, and songs compos'd
To her unworthinesse: It nothing steeds vs
To chide him from our eeves, for he persists
As if his life lay on't.

Hel. Why then to night
Let vs assay our plot, which if it speed,
Is wicked meaning in a lawfull deede;
And lawfull meaning in a lawfull act,
Where both not sinne, and yet a sinfull fact.
But let's about it.

Actus Quartus.

Enter one of the Frenchmen, with five or six other souldiers in ambush.

1. Lord E. He can come no other way but by this hedge corner: when you sallie upon him, speake what terrible Language you will: though you understand it not your selves, no matter: for we must not seeme to understand him, unlesse some one among vs, whom wee must produce for an Interpreter.

1. Sol. Good Captaine, let me be th'Interpreter.

Lor. E. Art not acquainted with him? knowest he not thy voice?

1. Sol. No sir I warrant you.

Lo. E. But what linsie wolsy hast thou to speake to vs again.

1 Sol. E en such as you speake to me.

Lo. E. He must thinke vs some band of strangers, i'th adversaries entertainment. Now he hath a smacke of all neighbouring Languages: therefore we must every one be a man of his owne fancie, not to know what we speak one to another: so we seeme to know, is to know straight our purpose: Choughs language, gabble enough, and good enough. As for you interpreter, you must seeme very politicke. But couch hoa, heere hee comes, to beguile two hours in a sleepe, and then to returne & swear the lies he forges.

Enter Parrolles.

Par. Ten a clocke. Within these three houres 'twill be time enough to goe home. What shall I say I have done? It must bee a very plausive invention that carries it. They begiune to smoake mee, and disgraces have of late, knock'd too often at my doore: I finde my tongue is too foole-hardie, but my heart hath the feare of Mars before it, and of his creatures, not daring the reports of my tongue.

Lo. E. This is the first truth that ere thine own tongue was guiltie of.

Par. What the divell should move mee to undertake the recovery of this drumme, being not ignorant of the impossibility, and knowing I had no such purpose? I must give my selfe some hurts, and say I got them in exploit: yet slight ones will not carrie it. They will say, came you off with so little? And great ones I dare not give, wherefore what's the instance. Tongue, I must put you into a Butter-womens mouth, and buy my selfe another of Bajazeths Mule, if you prattle mee into these perilles.

Lo. E. Is it possible he should know what hee is, and be that he is

Par. I would the cutting of my garments wold serve the turne, or the breaking of my Spanish sword.

Lo. E. We cannot afford you so.

Par. Or the baring of my beard, and to say it was in stratagem.

Lo. E. 'Twould not do.

Par. Or to drowne my cloathes, and say I was stript.

Lo. E. Hardly serve.

Par. Though I swore I leapt from the window of the Citadell.

Lo. E. How deepe?

Par. Thirty fadome.

Lo. E. Three great oathes would scarse make that be believed.

Par. I would I had any drumme of the enemies, I would swear I recover'd it.

Lo. E. You shall heare one anon.

Par. A drumme now of the enemies.

Alarum within.

Lo. E. Throca movousus, cargo, cargo, cargo.

All. Cargo, cargo, cargo, villando par corbo, cargo.

Par. O ransome, ransome,
Do not hide mine eyes.

Inter. Boskos thromuldo boskos.

Par. I know you are the Muskos Regiment,
And I shall loose my life for want of language.
If there be heere German or Dane, Low Dutch,
Italian, or French, let him speake to me,
I'le discover that, which shal vndo the Florentine.

Int. Boskos vauvado, I understand thee, & can speake thy tongue: Kerelybonto sir, betake thee to thy faith, for seventeene poniards are at thy bosome.

Par. Oh.

Inter. Oh pray, pray, pray.
Manka revanto dulche.

Lo. E. Oscorbidulchos volivorco.

Int. The Generall is content to spare thee yet,
And hoodwinke as thou art, will leade thee on
To gather from thee. Haply thou mayst informe
Something to save thy life.

Par. O let me live,
And all the secrets of our campe I'le shew,
Their force, their purposes: Nay, I'le speake that,
Which you will wonder at.

Inter. But wilt thou faithfully?

Par. If I do not, damne me.

Inter. Acordo linta.
Come on, thou art granted space. Exit

A short Alarum within.

L.E. Go tell the Count Rossillion and my brother,
We haue caught the woodcocke, and will keepe him
Till we do heare from them. (muffled
Sol. Captaine I will.
L.E. A will betray vs all vnto our selues,
Informe on that.
Sol. So I will sir.
L.E. Till then Ile keepe him darke and safely locke. Exit

Enter Bertram, and the Maide called Diana.

Ber. They told me that your name was Fantyball.
Dia. No my good Lord, Diana.
Ber. Titled Goddesse,
And worth it with addition: but faire soule,
In your fine frame hath loue no qualitie?
If the quicke fire of youth light not your minde,
You are no Maiden but a monument
When you are dead you should be such a one
As you are now: for you are cold and sterne,
And now you should be as your mother was
When your sweet selfe w̄ was got.
Dia. She then was honest.
Ber. So should you be.
Dia. No:
My mother did but duties, such (my Lord)
As you owe to your wife.
Ber. No more a'that:
I prethee do not strive against my vowes:
I was compell'd to her, but I loue thee
By loues owne sweet constraint, and will for euer
Do thee all rights of seruice.
Dia. I so you serue vs
Till we serue you: But when you haue our Roses,
You barely leaue our thornes to pricke our selues,
And mocke vs with our barenesse.
Ber. How haue I sworne.
Dia. 'Tis not the many oathes that makes the truth
But the plaine single vow, that is vow'd true:
What is not holie, that we sweare not by,
But take the high st to witnesse: then pray you tell me.
If I should sweare by Ioues great attributes,
I lou'd you deerely, would you believe my oathes,
When I did loue you ill? This has no holding
To sweare by him whom I protest to loue
That I will worke against him. Therefore your oathes
Are words and poore conditions, but vnseal'd
At least in my opinion.
Ber. Change it, change it:
Be not so holy cruell: Loue is holie,
And my integritie ne're, know the crafts
That you do charge men with: Stand no more off,
But giue thy selfe vnto my sicke desires,
Who then recouers. Say thou art mine, and euer
My loue as it begunnes, shall so persever.
Dia. I see that men make ropes in such a scarre,
That we'l forsake our selues. Giue me that Ring.
Ber. Ile lend it thee my deere; but haue no power
To giue it from me.
Dia. Will you not my Lord?
Ber. It is an honour longing to our house,
Bequeathed downe from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquie i'th world,
In me to loose.
Dian. Mine Honors such a Ring,
My chastities the Iewell of our house,
Bequeathed downe from many Ancestors,
Which were the greatest obloquie i'th world,
In mee to loose. Thus your owne proper wisedome
Brings in the Champion honor on my part,
Against your vanine assault.
Ber. Heere, take my Ring.
My house, mine honor, yes my life be thine,
And Ile be bid by thee.
Dia. When midnight comes, knocke at my chamber window:
Ile order take, my mother shall not heare.
Now will I charge you in the band of truth,
When you haue conquer'd my yet maiden-bed,
Remaine there but an houre, nor speake to mee:
My reasons are most strong, and you shall know them,
When backe again this Ring shall be deliuer'd:
And on your finger in the night, Ile put
Another Ring, that what in time proceeds,
May token to the future, our past deeds.
Adieu till then, then faile not: you haue wonne
A wife of me, though there my hope be done.
Ber. A heauen on earth I haue won by wooing thee.
Dia. For which, liue long to thank both heauen & me,
You may so in the end.
My mother told me iust how he would woo,
As if she sate in's heart. She says, all men
Haue the like oathes: He had sworne to marrie me
When his wife's dead: therfore Ile lye with him
When I am buried. Since Frenchmen are so braide,
Marry that will, I liue and die a Maid:
Onely in this disguise, I think't no sinne,
To cosen him that would vniustly winne. Exit

Enter the two French Captaines, and some two or three Souldiours.

Cap.G. You haue not given him his mothers letter.
Cap.E. I haue deliu'red it an houre since, there is some thing in't that stings his nature: for on the reading it, he chang'd almost into another man.
Cap.G. He has much worthy blame laid vpon him, for shaking off so good a wife, and so sweet a Lady.
Cap.E. Especially, he hath incurred the everlasting displeasure of the King, who had even run'd his bounty to sing happinesse to him. I will tell you a thing, but you shall let it dwell darkly with you.
Cap.G. When you haue spoken it 'tis dead, and I am the grave of it.
Cap.E. He hath perverted a young Gentlewomen heere in Florence, of a most chaste renown, & this night he flesh'es his will in the spoyle of her honour: he hath given her his monumentall Ring, and thinkes himselfe made in the vnchaste composition.
Cap.G. Now God delay our rebellion as we are our selues, what things are we.
Cap.E. Merrely our owne traitours. And as in the common course of all treasons, we still see them reuenge themselues, till they attaine to their abhorr'd ends: so he that in this action contriues against his owne Nobility in his proper stream, ore-flowes himselfe.
Cap.G. Is it not meant damnable in vs, to be Trumpeters of our vnlawfull intents? We shall not then haue his company to night?
Cap.E. Not till o'er midnight: for he is dieted to his houre
Cap.G. That approaches speed: I would gladly haue him see his company anatomiz'd, that he might take a measure of his owne judgements, wherein so curiously he had set this counterfeit.

Cap.E. We will not meddle with him till he come; for his presence must be the whip of the other.

Cap.G. In the meane time, what heare you of these Warres?

Cap.E. I heare there is an overture of peace.

Cap.G. Nay, I assure you a peace concluded.

Cap.E. What will Count Rossillion do then? Will he travaile higher, or returne againe into France?

Cap.G. I perceiue by this demand, you are not altogether of his councell.

Cap.E. Let it be forbid sir, so should I bee a great deale of his act.

Cap.G. Sir, his wife some two months since fledde from his house, her pretence is a pilgrimage to Saint Iaques le grand; which holy vndertaking, with most austere sanctimonie she accomplisht: and there residing, the tendernesse of her Nature, became as a prey to her greefe: in fine, made a groane of her last breath, & now the singe in heauen.

Cap.E. How is this iustified?

Cap.G. The stronger part of it by her owne Letters, which makes her storie true, even to the poyne of her death: her death itselfe, which could not be her office to say, is come: was faithfully confirm'd by the Rector of the place.

Cap.E. Hath the Count all this intelligence?

Cap.G. I, and the particular confirmations, point from point, to the full arming of the verite

Cap.E. I am heartily sorrie that he'l bee glad de of this.

Cap.G. How mightily sometimes, we make vs comforts of our losses.

Cap.E. And how mightily some other times, wee drowne our gaine in teares, the great dignitie that his valour hath here acquir'd for him, shall at home be encountered with a shame as ample.

Cap.G. The webbe of our life, is of a mingled yarne, good and ill together: our vertues would bee proud, if our faults whipt them not, and our crimes would despaire if they were not cherish'd by our vertues.

Enter a Messenger.

How now? Where's your master?

Ser. He met the Duke in the street sir, of whom hee hath taken a solemne leaue: his Lordshippe will next morning for France. The Duke hath offered him Letters of commendations to the King.

Cap.E. They shall bee no more then needfull there, if they were more then they can commend.

Enter Count Rossillion.

Ber. They cannot be too sweete for the Kings tartnesse, here's his Lordship now. How now my Lord, is't not after midnight?

Ber. I haue this night dispatch'd sixteene businesses, a moneths length a peece, by an abstract of successe: I haue conged with the Duke, done my adieu with his nearest; buried a wife, mourn'd for her, writ to my Ladie mother, I am returning, entertain'd my Conuoy, & betweene these maine parcels of dispatch, affected many nicer needs: the last was the greatest, but that I haue not ended yet.

Cap.E. If the business bee of any difficulty, and this morning your departure hence, it requires haste of your Lordship.

Ber. I meane the business is not ended, as fearing to heare of it hereafter: but shall we heare this dialogue betweene the Foole and the Souldiour. Come, bring forth this counterfeit modale, has deeuis'd mee, like a double-meaning Prophesier.

Cap.E. Bring him forth, has sate i'th stocks all night poore gallant knaue.

Ber. No matter, his heeles haue deseru'd it, in vsurping his spurres so long. How does he carry himselfe?

Cap.E. I haue told your Lordship alreadie: The stocks carrie him. But to answer you as you would be vnderstood, he weepes like a wench that had shed her milke, he hath confest himselfe to Morgan, whom he supposes to be a Friar, fro the time of his remembrance to this very instant disaster of his setting i'th stocks: and what thinke you he hath confest?

Ber. Nothing of me, has'a?

Cap.E. His confession is taken, and it shall bee read to his face, if your Lordshippe be in't, as I believe you are, you must haue the patience to heare it.

Enter Parolles with his Interpreter.

Ber. A plague vpon him, muffled; he can say nothing of me: hush, hush.

Cap.G. Hoodman comes Portartarossa.

Inter. He calles for the torture, what will you say without em.

Par. I will confesse what I know without constraine, If ye pinch me like a Pasty, I can say no more.

Int. Bosko Chimurcho.

Cap. Boblibindo chicurmurco.

Int. You are a mercifull Generall: Our Generall bids you answer to what I shall aske you out of a Note.

Par. And truly, as I hope to liue.

Int. First demand of him, how many horse the Duke is strong What say you to that?

Par Fiue or six thousand, but very weake and vnseruiceable: the troopes are all scattered, and the Commanders verie poore rogues, vpon my reputation and credit, and as I hope to liue.

Int. Shall I set downe your answer so?

Par. Do, Ile take the Sacrament on't, how & which way you will: all's one to him.

Ber. What a past-saving slaue is this?

Cap.G Y'are deceiu'd my Lord, this is Mounsieur Parrolles the gallant militarist, that was his owne phrase that had the whole theorieke of warre in the knot of his scarfe, and the practise in the chape of his dagger.

Cap.E. I will neuer trust a man again, for keeping his sword cleane, nor beleeue he can haue everie thing in him, by wearing his apparrell neatly.

Int. Well, that's set downe.

Par. Fiue or six thousand horse I sed, I will say true, or thereabouts set downe, for Ile speake truth.

Cap.G He's verry neere the truth in this.

Ber. But I con him no thankes for't in the nature he deliuers it.

Par. Poore rogues, I pray you say.

Int. Well, that's set downe.

Par. I humbly thanke you sir, a truth's a truth, the Rogues are marauilous poore.

Interp. Demand of him of what strength they are a foot. What say you to that?

Par By my troth sir, if I were to liue this present houre, I will tell true. Let me see, Spurio a hundred & fifte fiftie, Sebastian so many, Corambus so many, Jaques so many: Guiltian, Cosmo, Lodowicke, and Gratij, two hundred fiftie each: Mine owne Company, Chatabler, Dumaine, Bentij, two hundred fiftie each: so that the muster file, rotten and sound, vppon my life amounts not to fifteene thousand pole, halfe of the which, dare not shake the snow from off their Cassockes, least they shake themselues to peeces.

Ber. What shall be done to him.

Cap.G. Nothing, but let him haue thankes. Demand of him my condition: and what credite I haue with the Duke.

Int. Well that's set downe: you shall demaund of him, whether one Captaine Dumaine bee i'th Campe, a Frenchman: what his reputation is with the Duke, what his valour, honestie, and expertnesse in warres: or whether he thinkes it were not possible with well-waighing summes of gold to corrupt him to a reuolt. What say you to this? What do you know of it?

Par. I beseech you let me answer to the particular of the interrogatories. Demand them singly.

Int. Do you know this Captaine Dumaine?

Par. I know him, a was a Botchers Prentice in Paris, from whence he was whipt for getting the Shrieues fool with childe, a dumbe innocent that could not say him nay.

Ber. Nay, by your leaue hold your hands, though I know his brains are forfeite to the next tile that fals.

Int. Well, is this Captaine in the Duke of Florences campe?

Par. Vpon my knowledge he is, and louse.

Cap.G. Nay looke not so vpon me: we shall heare of your Lord anon.

Int. What is his reputation with the Duke?

Par. The Duke knowes him for no other, but a poore Officer of mine, and writ to mee this other day, to turne him out a'th band. I thinke I haue his Letter in my pocket.

Int. Marry we'll search.

Par. In good sadnesse I do not know, either it is there, or it is vpon a file with the Dukes other Letters, in my Tent.

Int. Heere 'tis, heere's a paper, shall I reade it to you?

Par. I do not know if it be it or no.

Ber. Our Interpreter do's it well.

Cap.G. Excellently.

Int. Dian, the Counts a foole, and full of gold.

Par. That is not the Dukes letter sir: that is an aduertisement to a proper maide in Florence, one Diana, to take heede of the allurement of one Count Rossillion, a foolish idle boy: but for all that very ruttish. I pray you, sir put it vp againe.

Int. Nay, Ile reade it first by your fauour.

Par. My meaning in't I protest was very honest in the behalfe of the maid: for I knew the young Count to be a dangerous and lascitious boy, who is a whale to Virginity, and deuours vp all the fry it finds.

Ber. Damnable both-sides rogue.

Int. Let. When he sweares oathes, bid him drop gold, and take it:
After he scores, he never pays the score:
Half won is match well made: match ended well make it,
He ne'er pays after-debts, take it before,
And say a souldier (Dian) told thee this:
Men are to mell with, boys are not to kis.
For count of this, the Count's a Fooles I know it,
he pays before, but not when he does ow it.
Thine as he vow'd to thee in thine ear,
Parolles.

Ber. He shall be whipt through the Armie with this rime in's forehead.

Cap.E. This is your deuoted friend sir, the manifold Linguist, and the army-potent souldier

Ber. I could endure any thing before but a Cat, and now he's a Cat to me.

Int. I perceiue sir by your Generals looks, we shall be faine to hang you.

Par. My life sir in any case: Not that I am afraide to dye, but that my offences being many, I would repent out the remainder of Nature. Let me liue sir in a dungeon, i'th stocks, or any where, so I may liue.

Int. We'le see what may bee done, so you confesse freely: therefore once more to this Captaine Dumaine: you haue answer'd to his reputation with the Duke, and to his valour. What is his honestie?

Par. He will steale sir an Egge out of a Cloister: for rapes and rauishments he parallels Nessus. Hee professes not keeping of oaths, in breaking em he is stronger then Hercules. He will lye sir, with such volubilitie, that you would thinke truth were a foole: drunkennesse is his best vertue, for he will be swine-drunke, and in his sleepe he does little harme, saue to his bed-cloathes about him: but they know his conditions, and lay him in straw. I haue but little more to say sir of his honesty, he has euerie thing that an honest man should not haue; what an honest man should haue, he has nothing.

Cap.G. I begin to loue him for this.

Ber. For this description of thine honestie? A pox vpon him for me, he's more and more a Cat.

Int. What say you to his expertnesse in warre?

Par. Faith sir, has led the drumme before the English Tragedians: to belye him I will not, and more of his souldiership I know not, except in that Country, he had the honour to be the Officer at a place there called Mile-end, to instruct for the doubling of files. I would doe the man what honour I can, but of this I am not certaine.

Cap.G. He hath out-villain'd villanie so farre, that the rarities redeemes him.

Ber. A pox on him, he's a Cat still.

Int. His qualities being at this poore price, I needs not to aske you, if Gold will corrupt him to reuolt.

Par. Sir, for a Cardecue he will sell the fee-simple of his saluation, the inheritance of it, and cut th'intaile from all remainders, and a perpetuall succession for it perpetually.

Int. What's his Brother, the other Captain Dumaine?

Cap.E. Why do's he aske him of me?

Int. What's he?

Par. E'ne a Crow a'th same nest: not altogether so great as the first in goodnesse, but greater a great deale in euill. He excels his Brother for a coward, yet his Brother is reputed one of the best that is. In a retreate hee outrunnes any Lackey; marie in comming on, hee ha's the Crampe.

Int. If your life be saued, will you vndertake to betray the Florentine.

Par. I, and the Captaine of his horse, Count Rossillion.

Int. Ile whispar with the Generall, and know his pleasure.

Par. Ile no more drumming, a plague of all drummes, onely to seeme to deserue well, and to beguile the supposition

sition of that lascinious yong boy the Count, haue I run into this danger: yet who would haue suspected an ambush where I was taken?

Int. There is no remedy sir, but you must dye: the Generall sayes, you that haue so traitorously discouerd the secrets of your army, and made such pestiferous reports of men very nobly held, can serue the world for no honest vse: therefore you must dye. Come headsman, off with his head.

Par. O Lord sir let me liue, or let me see my death.

Int. That shall you, and take your leaue of all your friends:
So, looke about you, know you any heere?

Count. Good morrow noble Captaine

Lo.E. God blesse you Captaine Parolles.

Cap.G. God saue you noble Captaine.

Lo.E. Captain, what greeting will you to my Lord Lafew? I am for France.

Cap.G. Good Captaine will you giue me a Copy of the sonnet you writ to Diana in behalfe of the Count Rossillion, and I were not a verie Coward, I de compell it of you, but far you well Exeunt.

Int. You are vndone Captaine all but your scarfe, that has a knot on't yet.

Par. Who cannot be crush'd with a plot?

Inter. If you could finde out a Countrie where but women were that had receiued so much shame, you might begin an impudent Nation. Fare yee well sir, I am for France too, we shall speake of you there. Exit

Par. Yet am I thankfull: if my heart were great
'Twould burst at this: Captaine I'le be no more,
But I will eate, and drinke, and sleepe as soft
As Captaine shall. Simply the thing I am
Shall make me liue: who knowes himselfe a braggart
Let him feare this; for it will come to passe,
That every braggart shall be found an Asse.
Rust sword, coole blushes, and Parrolles liue
Safest in shame: being fool'd, by fool'rie thriue;
There's place and meanes for every man aliue.
I'le after them Exit.

Enter Helen, widdow, and Diana.

Hel. That you may well perceiue I haue not wrong'd you,
One of the greatest in the Christian world
Shall be my suretie: for whose throne 'tis needfull
Ere I can perfect mine intents, to kneele
Time was, I did him a desired office
Deere almost as his life, which gratitude
Through flintie Tartars bosome would peepe forth,
And answer thankes. I duly am inform'd,
His grace is at Marcelle, to which place
We haue conuenient conuoy: you must know
I am supposed dead, the Army breaking,
My husband hies him home, where heauen aydingly,
And by the leaue of my good Lord the King,
We'l be before our welcome.

Wid. Gentle Madam,
You never had a seruant to whose trust
Your busines was more welcome.

Hel. Nor your Mistris
Ever a friend, whose thoughts more truly labour
To recompence your loue: Doubt not but heauen
Hath brought me vp to be your daughters dower,
As it hath fated her to be my motiue
And helper to a husband. But O strange men,
That can such sweet vse make of what they hate,
When sawcie trusting of the cosin'd thoughts
Defiles the pitchy night, so lust doth play
With what it loathes, for that which is away,
But more of this hereafter: you Diana,
Vnder my poore instructions yet must suffer
Something in my behalfe.

Dia. Let death and honestie
Go with your impositions, I am yours
Vpon your will to suffer.

Hel. Yet I pray you:
But with the word the time will bring on summer,
When Briers shall haue leaues as well as thorns,
And be as sweet as sharpe: we must away,
Our Wagon is prepar'd, and time reuiues vs,
All's well that ends well, still the fines the Crowne;
What ere the course, the end is the renowne. Exeunt

Enter Clowne, old Lady, and Lafew.

Laf. No, no, no, your sonne was misled with a snipt taffata fellow there, whose villanous saffron would haue made all the vnbak'd and dowy youth of a nation in his colour: your daughter-in-law had beene alive at this houre, and your sonne heere at home, more edunce'd by the King, then by that red-tail'd humble Bee I speak of

La. I would I had not knowne him, it was the death of the most vertuous gentlewomen, that ever Nature had praise for creating. If she had partaken of my flesh and cost mee the deerest groanes of a mother, I could not haue owed her a more rooted loue.

Laf. 'Twas a good Lady, 'twas a good Lady. Wee may pieke a thousand sallets ere wee light on such another herbe.

Clo. Indeed sir she was the sweete Margerom of the sallet, or rather the herbe of grace.

Laf. They are not herbes you knaue, they are nose-herbes.

Clowne I am no great Nebuchadnezzar sir, I haue not much skill in grace.

Laf. Whether doest thou professe thy selfe, a knaue or a foole?

Clo. A foole sir at a womans seruice, and a knaue at a mans.

Laf. Your distinction.

Clo. I would cousen the man of his wife, and do his seruice.

Laf. So you were a knaue at his seruice indeed.

Clo. And I would give his wife my bauble sir to doe her seruice.

Laf. I will subscribe for thee, thou art both knaue and foole.

Clo. At your seruice.

Laf. No, no, no.

Clo. Why sir, if I cannot serue you, I can serue as great a prince as you are.

Laf. Whose that, a Frenchman?

Clo. Faith sir a has an English mainе, but his fisnomie is more hotter in France then there.

Laf. What prince is that?

Clo. The blacke prince sir, alias the prince of darknesse, alias the diuell.

Laf. Hold thee there's my purse, I giue thee not this to suggest thee from thy master thou talk'st off, serue him still.

Clow

Clo. I am a woodland fellow sir, that alwaies loued a great fire, and the master I speak of ever keeps a good fire, but sure he is the Prince of the world, let his Nobilitie remaine in's Court. I am for the house with the narrow gate, which I take to be too little for pompe to enter: some that humble themselues may, but the manie will be too chill and tender, and theyle bee for the flowrie way that leads to the broad gate, and the great fire.

Laf. Go thy waies, I begin to bee a wearie of thee, and I tell thee so before, because I would not fall out with thee. Go thy wayes, let my horses be wel look'd too without any trickes.

Clo. If I put any trickes vpon em sir, they shall bee ladies trickes, which are their owne right by the law of Nature. exit

Laf. A shrewd knaue and an vnhappie.

Lady. So a is. My Lord that's gone made himselfe much sport out of him, by his authoritie hee remaines heere, which he thinkes is a pattent for his sawcinesse, and indeede he has no pace, but runnes where he will.

Laf. I like him well, 'tis not amisse and I was about to tell you, since I heard of the good Ladies death, and that my Lord your sonne was vpon his returne home. I moued the King my master to speake in the behalfe of my daughter, which in the minoritie of them both, his Maiestie out of a selfe gracious remembrance did first propose, his Highnesse hath promis'd me to doe it, and to stoppe vp the displeasure he hath conceiued against your sonne, there is no fitter matter. How do's your Ladyship like it?

La. With verie much content my Lord, and I wish it happily effected.

Laf. His Highnesse comes post from Marcellus, of as able bodie as when he number'd thirty, a will be heere to morrow, or I am deceiu'd by him that in such intelligence hath seldome fail'd.

La It reioyces me, that I hope I shall see him ere I die. I haue letters that my sonne will be heere to night: I shall beseech your Lordship to remaine with me, till they meete together.

Laf. Madam, I was thinking with what manners I might safely be admitted

Lad. You needs but pleade your honourable priuiledge.

Laf. Ladie, of that I haue made a bold charter, but I thanke my God, it holds yet.

Enter Clowne

Clo. O Madam, yonders my Lord your sonne with a patch of velvet on's face, whether there bee a scar vnder't or no, the Velvet knowes, but 'tis a goodly patch of Velvet, his left cheeke is a cheeke of two pile and a halfe, but his right cheeke is worne bare.

Laf. A scarre nobly got,
Or a noble scarre, is a good liu'rie of honor.
So belike is that.

Clo. But it is your carbinado'd face

Laf. Let vs go see your sonne I pray you, I long to talke
With the yong noble souldier.

Clowne. 'Faith there's a dozen of em, with delicate fine hats, and most courteous feathers, which bow the head, and nod at euerie man.

Exeunt

Actus Quintus.

Enter Helen, Widdow, and Diana, with two Attendants

Hel. But this exceeding posting day and night
Must wear your spirits low, we cannot helpe it
But since you haue made the daies and nights as one,
To weare your gentle limbes in my affayres,
Be bold you do so grow in my requiall,
As nothing can vnroote you. In happie time,

Enter a gentle Astringer.

This man may helpe me to his Maiesties eare,
If he would spend his power. God save you sir.

Gent. And you.

Hel. Sir, I haue seene you in the Court of France.

Gent. I haue beene sometimes there.

Hel. I do presume sir, that you are not faine
From the report that goes vpon your goodnesse,
And therefore goaded with most sharpe occasions,
Which lay nice manners by, I put you to
The vse of your owne vertues, for the which
I shall continue thankefull.

Gent. What's your will?

Hel. That it will please you
To giue this poore petition to the King,
And ayde me with that store of power you haue
To come into his presence.

Gen. The Kings not heere.

Hel. Not heere sir?

Gen. Not indeed,
He hence remou'd last night, and with more haste
Then is his vse.

Wid. Lord how we loose our paines.

Hel. All's well that ends well yet,
Though time seeme so aduerse, and meanes vnfit:
I do beseech you, whither is he gone?

Gent. Marrie as I take it to Rossillion,
Whither I am going.

Hel. I do beseech you sir
Since you are like to see the King before me,
Commend the paper to his gracious hand,
Which I presume shall render you no blame,
But rather make you thanke your paines for it,
I will come after you with what good speede
Our meanes will make vs meanes.

Gent. This Ile do for you

Hel. And you shall finde your selfe to be well thanke what e're falles more We must to horse against, Go, go, prouide.

Enter Clowne and Parrolles.

Par. Good Mr Lauatch giue my Lord Lafew this letter, I haue ere now sir beene better knowne to you, when I haue held familiaritie with fresher cloathes: but I am now sir muddied in fortunes mood, and smell somewhat strong of her strong displeasure.

Clo. Truely, Fortunes displeasure is but sluttish if it smell so strongly as thou speak'st of: I will henceforth eate no Fish of Fortunes butt'ring. Pre thee stow the winde.

Par. Nay you needs not to stop your nose sir: I spake but by a Metaphor

Clo. Indeed sir, if your Metaphor stinke, I will stop my nose, or against any mans Metaphor. Pre thee get thee further.

Par.

Par. Pray you sir deliuer me this paper.

Clo. Foh, pesthee stand away: a paper from fortunes close-stoole, to giue to a Nobleman. Looke here he comes himselfe.

Enter Lafew.

Clo. Here it is a purre of Fortunes sir, or of Fortunes Cat, but not a Musicat, that ha's falne into the vnclean fish-pond of her displeasure, and as he sayes is muddied withall. Pray you sir, vse the Carpe as you may, for he looke's like a poore decayed, ingenious, foolish, rascally knaue. I doe pitie his distresse in my smiles of comfort, and leaue him to your Lordship.

Par. My Lord I am a man whom fortune hath cruelly scratch'd.

Laf. And what would you haue me to doe? 'Tis too late to paire her nailes now. Wherein haue you played the knaue with fortune that she should scratch you, who of her selfe is a good Lady, and would not haue knaues thriue long vnder? There's a Cardecue for you: Let the Iustices make you and fortune friends; I am for other business.

Par. I beseech your honour to heare mee one single word.

Laf. you begge a single peny more: Come you shall ha't, saue your word.

Par. My name my good Lord is Parrolles.

Laf. You begge more then word then. Cox my passion, give me your hand: How does your drummes?

Par. O my good Lord, you were the first that found mee.

Laf. Was I infoolth? And I was the first that lost thee.

Par. It lies in you my Lord to bring me in some grace for you did bring me out.

Laf. Out vpon thee knaue, doest thou put vpon me at once both the office of God and the diuel: one brings thee in grace, and the other brings thee out. The Kings comming I know by his Trumpets. Sirrah, inquire further after me, I had talke of you last night, though you are a foole and a knaue, you shall eate, go too, follow.

Par. I praise God for you.

Flourish. Enter King, old Lady, Lafew, the two French Lords, with attendants.

King. We lost a Iewell of her, and our esteeme
Was made much poorer by it: but your sonne,
As mad in folly, lack'd the sence to know
Her estimation home.

Old La. 'Tis past my Liege,
And I beseech your Maiestie to make it
Natural rebellion, done i'th blade of youth,
When oyle and fire, too strong for reasons force,
Ore-beares it, and burnes on.

King. My honour'd Lady,
I haue forgiuen and forgotten all,
Though my reuenges were high bent vpon him,
And watch'd the time to shoote.

Laf. This I must say,
But first I begge my pardon: the young Lord
Did to his Maiesty, his Mother, and his Ladie,
Offence of mighty note; but to himselfe,
The greatest wrong of all. He lost a wife,
Whose beauty did astonish the survey
Of richest eies: whose words all eares tooke captiue,
Whose dearest perfection, hearts that scorn'd to seuue,
Humbly call'd Mistris.

King. Praising what is lost,
Makes the remembrance deere. Well, call him hither,
We are reconcil'd, and the first view shall kill
All repetition: Let him not aske our pardon,
The nature of his great offence is dead,
And deeper then oblivion, we do bury
Th'incensing reliques of it. Let him approach
A stranger, no offender; and informe him
So 'tis our will he should.

Gent. I shall my Liege.

King. What sayes he to your daughter,
Haue you spoke?

Laf. All that he is, hath reference to your Highnes.

King. Then shall we haue a match. I haue letters sent me, that sets him high in fame.

Enter Count Bertram.

Laf. He lookes well on't

King. I am not a day of season,
For thou maist see a sun-shine, and a haile
In me at once: But to the brightest beames
Distracted clouds giue way, so stand thou forth,
The time is faire againe.

Ber. My high repented blames
Deere Souereigne pardon to me.

King. All is whole,
Not one word more of the consumed time,
Let's take the instant by the forward top:
For we are old, and on our quick'st decrees
Th'inaudible, and noiseless foot of time
Steales, ere we can effect them. You remember
The daughter of this Lord?

Ber. Admiringly my Liege, at first
I stucke my choice vpon her, ere my heart
Durst make too bold a herald of my tongue:
Where the impression of mine eye enfixing,
Contempt his scornfull Perspectiue did lend me,
Which warpe the line, of euerie other fauour,
Scorn'd a faire colour, or expressed it stoine,
Extended or contracted all proportions
To a most hideous obiect. Thence it came,
That she whom all men prais'd, and whom my selfe,
Since I haue lost, haue lou'd; was in mine eye
The dust that did offend it.

King. Well excus'd:
That thou dist loue her, strikes some scores away
From the great compt: but loue that comes too late,
Like a remorseful pardon slowly carried
To the great sender, turnes a sowre offence,
Crying, that's good that's gone: Our rash faults,
Make trivall price of serious things we haue,
Not knowing them, vntill we know their grace
Oft our displeasures to our selues vnkust,
Destroy our friends, and after weepe their dust:
Our owne loue waking, cries to see what's don,
While shamefull hate sleepes out the afternoone.
Be this sweet Helens knell, and now forget her.
Send forth your amorous token for faire Maudlin,
The maine consents are had, and heere we'l stay
To see our widdowers second marriage day:
Which better then the first. O deere heauen bleesse,
Or, ere they meete in me, O Nature cease.

Laf. Come on my sonne, in whom my house name
Must be digested: give a fauour from you
To sparkle in the spirits of my daughter,

That

That she may quickly come. By my old beard,
And ev'ne haire that's on't, Helen that's dead
Was a sweet creature: such a ring as this,
The last that ere I tooke her leave at Court,
I saw vpon her finger.
Ber. Hers it was not.
King. Now pray you let me see it. For mine eye,
While I was speaking, oft was fasten'd too't:
This Ring was mine, and when I gave it Helen,
I bad her if her fortunes ever stoode
Necessitied to helpe, that by this token
I would releeve her. Had you that craft to reuie her
Of what should stead her most?
Ber. My gracious Soueraigne,
How eat it pleases you to take it so,
The ring was never hers.
Old La. Sonne, on my life
I have seene her weare it, and she reckon'd it
At her liues rate.
Lef. I am sure I saw her weare it
Ber. You are deceiu'd my Lord, she never saw it:
In Florence was it from a casement throwne mee,
Wrap'd in a paper, which contain'd the name
Of her that threw it: Noble she was, and thought
I stood ingag'd, but when I had subscrib'd
To mine owne fortune, and informd her fully,
I could not answer in that course of Honour
As she had made the ouerture, she ceas'd
In heauie satisfaction, and would never Receiue the Ring again.
Kin. Plutus himselfe,
That knowes the tinct and multiplying med'cine,
Hath not in natures mysterie more science,
Then I haue in this Ring. 'Twas mine, 'twas Helens,
Who ever gave it you: then if you know
That you are well acquainted with your selfe,
Confesse 'twas hers, and by what rough enforcement
You got it from her. She call'd the Saints to sureté,
That she would never put it from her finger,
Vnlesse she gave it to your selfe in bed,
Where you have never come: or sent it vs
Vpon her great disaster.
Ber. She never saw it.
Kin. Thou speak'st it falsely: as I loue mine Honor,
And mak'st conjecturall feares to come into me,
Which I would fame fain it out, if it should proue
That thou art so inhumane, 'twill not proue so:
And yet I know not, thou dids't hate her deadly,
And she is dead, which nothing but to close
Her eyes my selfe, could win me to beleeue,
More then to see this Ring. Take him away,
My fore-past proofes, how ere the matter fall
Shall taxe my feares of little vanitie,
Hoping vainly fear'd too little. Away with him,
We'l sift this matter further.
Ber. If you shall proue
This Ring was ever hers, you shall as easie
Prove that I husbanded her bed in Florence,
Where yet she never was.

Enter a Gentleman.

King. I am wrap'd in dismall thinkings.
Gen. Gracious Soueraigne.
Whether I have beene too blame or no, I know not,
Here's a petition from a Florentine,
Who hath fet foure or five remoues come short,
To tender it her selfe. I vnderuoake it,
Vanquish'd thereto by the faire grace and speech
Of the poore suppliant, who by this I know
Is heere attending: her business lookes in her
With an importing visage, and she told me
In a sweet verball breeuie, it did concerne
Your Highnesse with her selfe.

A Letter

Vpon his many protestations to marrie me when his wife was dead, I blush to say it, he wonne me. Now is the Count Rossillion a Widdower, his vowes are forfeited to me, and my honor's payed to him. He flies from Florence, taking no leaue, and I follow him to his Country for Iustice. Grant it me, O King, in you it lies, otherwise a sedueed Maiden, and a poore Maid is vndone.

Diana Capilet.

Lef. I will buy me a sonne in Law in a faire, and toule for this. Ile none of him.
Kin. The heauens haue thought well on thee Lafew,
To bring forth this discou'rie, seeke these suitors:
Go speedily, and bring againe the Count.

Enter Bertram.

I am afeard the life of Helen (Ladie)
Was foully snatcht.
Old La. Now iustice on the doers
King. I wonder sir, sir, wiues are monsters to you,
And that you flye them as you sweare them Lordship,
Yet you desire to marry. What woman's that?

Enter Widdow, Diana, and Parrolles.

Dia. I am my Lord a wretched Florentine,
Derived from the ancient Capilet,
My suite as I do vnderstand you know,
And therefore know how farre I may be pitied
wid. I am her Mother sir, whose age and honour
Both suffer vnder this complaint we bring,
And both shall cease, without your remedie.
King. Come hether Count, do you know these Women?
Ber. My Lord, I neither can nor will denie,
But that I know them, do they charge me further?
Dia. Why do you looke so strange vpon your wife?
Ber. She's none of mine my Lord.
Dia. If you shall marrie
You give away this hand, and that is mine,
You give away heauens vowes, and those are mine:
You give away my selfe, which is knowne mine:
For I by vow am so embodied yours,
That she which marries you, must marrie me,
Either both or none.
Lef. your reputation comes too short for my daughter, you are no husband for her.
Ber. My Lord, this is a fond and desp rate creature,
Whom sometime I have laugh'd with: Let your highnes
Lay a more noble thought vpon mine honour.
Then for to thinke that I would sinke it here.
Kin. Sir for my thoughts, you have them ill to friend,
Till your deeds gaine them fairer: prove your honor,
Then in my thought it lies.
Dian. Good my Lord,
Aske him vpon his oath, if he do's thinke
He had not my virginity.
Kin. What sais thou to her?
Ber. She's impudent my Lord,
And was a common gamester to the Campe.
Dia. He do's me wrong my Lord: If I were so,
He might have bought me at a common price.

Do

Do not believe him. O behold this Ring,
Whose high respect and rich validitie
Did lacke a Parallell: yet for all that
He gave it to a Commoner o'th Campe
If I be one.

Cou. He blushes, and 'tis hit:
Of fine preceding Ancestors, that Jemme
Confer'd by testament to'th sequent issue
Hath it beene owed and worne. This is his wife,
That Ring's a thousand proofes

King. Me thought you saide
You saw one heere in Court could witnesse it.

Dia. I did my Lord, but loath am to produce
So bad an instrument, his names Parrolles.

Lef. I saw the man to day, if man he bee.

Kin. Finde him, and bring him hether.

Ref. What of him:
He's quoted for a most perfidious slave
With all the spots o'th world, taxt and debosh'd,
Whose nature sickens: but to speake a truth,
Am I, or that or this for what he'l vtter,
That will speake any thing.

Kin. She hath that Ring of yours.

Ref. I thinke she has; certaine it is I lyk'd her,
And boorded her i'th wanton way of youth
She knew her distance, and did angle for mee,
Madding my eagernesse with her restraint,
As all impediments in fancies course
Are motiues of more fancie, and in fine,
Her insuite comming with her modernе grace,
Subdu'd me to her rate, she got the Ring,
And I had that which any inferiour might
At Market price have bought.

Dia. I must be patient.
You that have turn'd off a first so noble wife,
May justly dyet me. I pray you yet.
(Since you lacke vertue, I will loose a husband)
Send for your Ring, I will returne it home,
And giue me mine againe.

Ref. I have it not.

Kin. What Ring was yours I pray you?

Dum. Sir much like the same vpon your finger

Kin. Know you this Ring, this Ring was his of late

Dia. And this was it I gave him being a bed.

Kin. The story then goes false, you threw it him
Out of a Casement.

Dia. I have spoke the truth. Enter Parolles.

Ref. My Lord, I do confesse the ring was hers.

Kin. You boggle shrewdly, every feather starts you.
Is this the man you speake of?

Dia. I, my Lord.

Kin. Tell me sirrah, but tell me true I charge you,
Not fearing the displeasure of your master.
Which on your just proceeding, I'le keepe off,
By him and by this woman heere, what know you?

Par. So please your Maiesty, my master hath bin an honourable Gentleman. Tricks hee hath had in him, which Gentlemen haue.

Kin. Come, come, to'th purpose: Did hee loue this woman?

Par. Faith sir he did loue her, but how.

Kin. How I pray you?

Par. He did loue her sir, as a Gent. loues a Woman

Kin. How is that?

Par. He lou'd her sir, and lou'd her not.

Kin. As thou art a knaue and no knaue, what an equi-uocall Companion is this?

Par. I am a poore man and at your Maiesties command.

Lef. Hee's a good drumme my Lord, but a naughtie
Orator

Dum. Do you know he promist me marriage?

Par. Faith I know more then I'le speake.

Kin. But wilt thou not speake all thou know'st?

Par. Yes so please your Maiesty: I did goe betweene them as I said, but more then that he loued her, for in-deede he was madde for her, and talkt of Satan, and of Limbo, and of Furies, and I knew not what: yet I was in that credit with them at that time, that I knewe of their going to bed, and of other motions, as promising her marriage, and things which would derine mee ill will to speake of, therefore I will not speake what I know.

Kin. Thou hast spoken all already, vnlesse thou canst say they are maried, but thou art too fine in thy euidence, therefore stand aside. This Ring you say was yours.

Dia. I my good Lord.

Kin. Where did you buy it? Or who gave it you?

Dia. It was not giuen me, nor I did not buy it.

Kin. Who lent it you?

Dia. It was not lent me neither

Kin. Where did you finde it then?

Dia. I found it not

Kin. If it were yours by none of all these wayes,
How could you giue it him?

Dia. I never gave it him.

Lef. This woman an easie glove my Lord, she goes off and on at pleasure.

Kin. This Ring was mine, I gave it his first wife.

Dia. It might be yours or hers for ought I know.

Kin. Take her away, I do not like her now,
To prison with her: and away with him,
Vnlesse thou tell'st me where thou hadst this Ring,
Thou dieſt within this houre.

Dia. I'le never tell you.

Kin. Take her away.

Dia. I'le put in baile my liedge.

Kin. I thinke thee now some common Customer.

Dia. By Ioue if ever I knew man 'twas you.

King. Wherefore hast thou accusde him al this while.

Dia. Because he's guiltie, and he is not guilty:
He knowes I am no Maid, and he'l sweare too't:
I'le sweare I am a Maid, and he knowes not.
Great King I am no strumpet, by my life,
I am either Maid, or else this old mans wife.

Kin. She does abuse our eares, to prison with her.

Dia. Good mother fetch my boyle. Stay Royall sir,
The Iweller that owes the Ring is sent for,
And he shall sweere me. But for this Lord,
Who hath abus'd me as he knowes himselfe,
Though yet he never harm'd me, heere I quit him.
He knowes himselfe my bed he hath defil'd,
And at that time he got his wife with childe:
Dead though she be, she feeles her young one kicke:
So there's my riddle, one that's dead is quicke,
And now behold the meaning.

Enter Hellen and Widdow.

Kin. Is there no exorcist
Beguiles the truer Office of mine eyes?
Is't reall that I see?

Hel. No my good Lord,

Tis but the shadow of a wife you see,
The name, and not the thing.

Ber. Both, both, O pardon.

Hel. Oh my good Lord, when I was like this Maid,
I found you wondrous kinde, there is your Ring,
And looke you, heere's your letter: this it sayes,
When from my finger you can get this Ring,
And is by me with childe, &c. This is done,
Will you be mine now you are doubly wonne?

Ber. If she my Liege can make me know this clearly,
Ile love her dearely, ever, ever dearly.

Hel. If it appeare not plaine, and prove vntrue,
Deadly divorce step betweene me and you.
O my deere mother do I see you liuing?

Laf. Mine eyes smell Onions, I shall weepe anon:
Good Tom Drummes lend me a handkercher.
So I thanke thee, waite on me home, I'le make sport with thee: Let thy curtsies alone, they are scurvy ones.

King. Let vs from point to point this story know,
To make the euen truth in pleasure flow:
If thou beest yet a fresh vncropped flower,
Choose thou thy husband, and I'le pay thy dower.
For I can guesse, that by thy honest ayde,
Thou keptst a wife her selfe, thy selfe a Maide
Of that and all the progresse more and lesse,
Resolutely more leisure shall expresse:
All yet seemes well, and if it end so meete,
The bitter past, more welcome is the sweet.

Flourish.

THe King's a Beggar, now the Play is done,
All is well ended, if this suite be wonne,
That you expresse Content: which we will pay,
With strift to please you, day exceeding day:
Ours be your patience then, and yours our parts,
Your gentle hands lend vs, and taking our hearts. Exeunt omn.

FINIS.

Twelfe Night, Or what you will.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter Orsino Duke of Illyria, Curio, and other Lords.

Duke.

IF Musicke be the food of Loue, play on,
Giue me excesse of it: that surfetting,
The appetite may sicken, and so dye.
That strane agen, it had a dying fall:
O, it came ore my eare, like the sweet sound
That breathes vpon a banke of Violets;
Stealing, and giuing Odour. Enough, no more,
'Tis not so sweet now, as it was before.
O spirit of Loue, how quicke and fresh art thou,
That notwithstanding thy capacitie,
Receiueth as the Sea. Nought enters there,
Of what validity, and pitch so ere,
But falls into abatement, and low price
Even in a minute; so full of shapes is fancie,
That it alone, is high fantastical.

Cu. Will you go hunt my Lord?

Du. What Curio?

Cu. The Hart.

Du. Why so I do, the Noblest that I haue:
O when mine eyes did see Olinia first,
Me thought she purg'd the ayre of pestilence;
That instant was I turn'd into a Hart,
And my desires like fell and cruell hounds,
Ere since pursue me. How now what newes from her?

Enter Valentine.

Val. So please my Lord, I might not be admitted,
But from her handmaid do returne this answer.
The Element itself, till seuen yeares heate,
Shall not behold her face at ample view:
But like a Cloystresse she will vailed walke,
And water once a day her Chamber round
With eye-offending brine: all this to season
A brothers dead loue, which she would keepe fresh
And lasting, in her sad remembrance.

Du. O she that hath a heart of that fine frame
To pay this debt of loue but to a brother,
How will she loue, when the rich golden shaft
Hath kill'd the flocke of all affections else
That liue in her. When Liuer, Braine, and Heart,
These soueraigne thrones, are all supply'd and fill'd
Her sweete perfections with one selfe king:
Away before me, to sweet beds of Flowres,
Loue-thoughts lye rich, when canopy'd with bowres.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda

Enter Viola, a Captaine, and Saylors.

Vio. What Country (Friends) is this?

Cap. This is Illyria Ladie.

Vio. And what should I do in Illyria?
My brother he is in Elizium,
Perchance he is not drown'd: What thinke you saylors?

Cap. It is perchance that you your selfe were saued.

Vio. O my poore brother, and so perchance may he be.

Cap. True Madam, and to comfort you with chance,
Assure your selfe, after our ship did split,
When you, and those poore number saued with you,
Hung on our driuing boate: I saw your brother
Most prouident in peril, binde himselfe.
(Courage and hope both teaching him the practise)
To a strong Maste, that lie'd vpon the sea:
Where like Orion on the Dolphines backe,
I saw him hold acquaintance with the waues,
So long as I could see.

Vio. For saying so, there's Gold:
Mine owne escape vnfoldeth to my hope,
Whereto thy speech serues for authoritie
The like of him. Know'st thou this Countrey?

Cap. I Madam well, for I was bred and borne
Not three hours trauaile from this very place.

Vio. Who gouernes heere?

Cap. A noble Duke in nature, as in name.

Vio. What is his name?

Cap. Orsino.

Vio. Orsino: I haue heard my father name him.
He was a Bachellor then.

Cap. And so is now, or was so very late:
For but a month ago I went from hence,
And then 'twas fresh in murmure (as you know
What great ones do, the lesse will prattle of,)
That he did seeke the loue of faire Olinia.

Vio. What's shee?

Cap. A vertuous maid, the daughter of a Count
That dide some twelue moneth since, then leaving her
In the protection of his sonne, her brother,
Who shortly also dide: for whose deere loue
(They say) she hath abiur'd the sight
And company of men.

Vio. O that I serue that Lady,
And might not be delivered to the world

Till I had made mine owne occasion mellow
What my estate is.

Cap. That were hard to compasse,
Because she will admit no kinde of suite,
No, not the Dukes.

Vio. There is a faire behaviour in thee Captaine,
And though th'art nature, with a beauteous wall
Doth oft close in pollution: yet of thee
I will believe thou hast a minde that suites
With this thy faire and outward character.
I prethee (and I'le pay thee bounteously)
Conceale me what I am, and be my ayde,
For such disguise as haply shall become
The forme of my intent. I'le serve this Duke,
Thou shalt present me as an Eunuch to him,
It may be worth thy paines: for I can sing,
And speake to him in many sorts of Musicke,
That will allow me very worth his service.
What else may hap, to time I will commit,
Onely shape thou thy silence to my wit.

Cap. Be you his Eunuch, and your Mute I'le bee,
When my tongue blabs, then let mine eyes not see.

Vio. I thanke thee: Lead me on. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Maria.

Sir To. What a plague meanes my Neece to take the death of her brother thus? I am sure care's an enemie to life

Mar. By my troth sir Toby, you must come in earlyer a nights: your Cosin, my Lady, takes great exceptions to your ill houres.

To. Why let her except, before excepted

Ma. I, but you must confine your selfe within the modest limits of order.

To. Confine? I'le confine my selfe no finer then I am: these cloathes are good enough to drinke in, and so bee these boots too: and they be not, let them hang themselves in their owne straps.

Ma. That quaffing and drinking will undoe you. I heard my Lady talke of it yesterday: and of a foolish knight that you brought in one night here, to be her wooer

To. Who, Sir Andrew Agu-cheeke?

Ma. I he.

To. He's as tall a man as any's in Illyria.

Ma. What's that to th'purpose?

To. Why he has three thousand ducates a yeare.

Ma. I, but he'l have but a yeare in all these ducates: He's a very foole, and a prodigall.

To. Fie, that you'l say so: he playes o'th Viol-de-gamboys, and speaks three or four languages word for word without booke, & hath all the good gifts of nature.

Ma. He hath indeed, almost natural: for besides that he's a foole, he's a great quarreller: and but that he hath the gift of a Coward, to allay the gust he hath in quarrelling, 'tis thought among the prudent, he would quickly have the gift of a grave.

Tob. By this hand they are scoundrels and substractors that say so of him. Who are they?

Ma. They that adde moreover, he's drunke nightly in your company.

To. With drinking healths to my Neece: I'le drinke to her as long as there is a passage in my throat, & drinke in Illyria: he's a Coward and a Coystrill that will not drinke to my Neece, till his braines turne o'th toe, like a parish top. What wench? Castiliano vulgo: for here comes Sir Andrew Agueface.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. Sir Toby Belch. How now sir Toby Belch?

To. Sweet sir Andrew.

And. Blesse you faire Shrew.

Mar. And you too sir.

Tob. Accost Sir Andrew, accost.

And. What's that?

To. My Neeces Chamber-maid.

Ma. Good Mistris accost, I desire better acquaintance

Ma. My name is Mary sir.

And. Good mistris Mary, accost.

To. You mistake knight: Accost, is ment her, boord her, woe her, assayle her.

And. By my troth I would not undertake her in this company. Is that the meaning of Accost?

Ma. Fare you well Gentlemen.

To. And thou let part so Sir Andrew, would thou mightst never draw sword agen

And. And you part so mistris, I would I might never draw sword agen: I are Lady, doe you thinke you have fooles in hand?

Ma. Sir, I have not you by'th hand.

An. Marry but you shall have, and here's my hand.

Ma. Now sir, thought is free: I pray you bring your hand to'th Buttery barre, and let it drinke.

An. Wherefore (sweet-heart?) What's your Metaphor?

Ma. It's dry sir.

And. Why I thanke so: I am not such an ass, but I can keepe my hand dry. But what's your jest?

Ma. A dry jest Sir.

And. Are you full of them?

Ma. I Sir, I have them at my fingers ends: marry now I let go your hand, I am barren. Exit Maria.

To. O knight, thou lack'st a cup of Canarie: when did I see thee so put downe?

An. Never in your life I thinke, unlesse you see Canarie put me downe: mee thinkes sometimes I have no more wit then a Christian, or an ordinary man has: but I am a great eater of beefe, and I believe that does harme to my wit.

To. No question.

An. And I thought that, I'de forswear it. I'le ride home to morrow sir Toby.

To. Pur-quoy my deere knight?

An. What is pur-quoy? Do, or not do? I would I had bestowed that time in the tongues, that I have in fencing, dancing, and bear-baiting: O had I but followed the Arts.

To. Then hadst thou had an excellent head of haire.

An. Why, would that have mended my haire?

To. Past question, for thou seest it will not coole my An. But it becomes me wel enough, dost not? (nature

To. Excellent, it hangs like flax on a distaffe: & I hope to see a housewife take thee between her legs, & spin it off.

An. Faith I'le home to morrow sir Toby, your niece will not be seene, or if she be it's four to one, she'l none of me: the Count himselfe here hard by, wooes her.

To. She'l none o'th Count, she'l not match above his degree, neither in estate, yeares, nor wit. I have heard her swear it. Tut there's this in't man.

And

And. Ile stay a moneth longer. I am a fellow o'th strangest mande i'th world: I delight in Maskes and Reuels sometimes altogether.

To. Art thou good at these kicke-shawses Knight?

And. As any man in Illyria, whatsoever he be, vnder the degree of my betters, & yet I will not compare with an old man.

To. What is thy excellence in a galliard, knight?

And. Faith, I can cut a caper.

To. And I can cut the Mutton too't.

And. And I thinke I haue the backe-tricke, simply as strong as any man in Illyria.

To. Wherefore are these things hid? Wherefore haue these gifts a Curtaine before 'em? Are they like to take dust, like mistris Mals picture? Why doſt thou not goe to Church in a Galliard, and come home in a Corranto? My vertie walke should be a ligge: I would not so much as make water but in a Sinke-a-pace: What doest thou mean? Is it a world to hide vertues in? I did thinke by the excellent constitution of thy legge, it was form'd vnder the starre of a Galliard.

And. I, 'tis strong, and it does indifferent well in a dam'd colour'd stocke. Shall we fist about some Reuels?

To. What shall we do else: were we not borne vnder Taurus?

And. Taurus? That sides and heart.

To. No sir, it is leggs and thighes: let me see thee caper. Ha, higher: ha, ha, excellent. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Valentine, and Viola in mens attire.

Val. If the Duke continue these fauours towards you Cesario, you are like to be much adu ance'd, he hath known you but three dayes, and already you are no stranger.

Vio. You either feare his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his loue. Is he inconstant sir, in his fauours. Val. No beleeue me.

Enter Duke, Curio and Attendants.

Vio. I thank you: heere comes the Count.

Duke. Who saw Cesario ho?

Vio. On your attendance my Lord heere.

Du. Stand you a-while aloofe. Cesario,
Thou knowst no lesse, but all: I haue vnclasp'd
To thee the booke even of my secret soule.
Therefore good youth, addresse thy gate vnto her,
Be not denie'de access, stand at her doores,
And tell them, there thy fixed foot shall grow
Till thou haue audience.

Vio. Sure my Noble Lord,
If she be so abandon'd to her sorrow
As it is spoke, she never will admit me.

Du. Be clamorous, and leape all ciuill bounds,
Rather then make vnprofited returne,

Vio. Say I do speake with her (my Lord) what then?

Du. O then, vnfold the passion of my loue,
Surprize her with discourse of my deere faith;
It shall become thee well to act my woes:
She will attend it better in thy youth,
Then in a Nuntio's of more grauе aspect.

Vio. I think not so, my Lord.

Du. Deere Lad, beleeue it;
For they shall yet belye thy happy yeeres,
That say thou art a man: Diana's lip
Is not more smooth, and rubious: thy small pipe
Is as the maidens organ, shrill, and sound,
And all is semblatiue a woman part.
I know thy constellation is right apt
For this affayre: some foure or five attend him,
All if you will: for I my selfe am best
When least in companie: prosper well in this,
And thou shalt liue as freely as thy Lord,
To call his fortunes thine.

Vio. Ile do my best
To woe your Lady: yet a barrefull strife,
Who ere I woe, my selfe would be his wife. Exeunt.

Scena Quinta.

Enter Maria, and Clowne.

Ma. Nay, either tell me where thou hast bin, or I will not open my lippes so wide as a brissle may enter, in way of thy excuse: my Lady will hang thee for thy absence.

Cla. Let her hang me: hee that is well hang'de in this world, needs to feare no colours.

Ma. Make that good.

Clo. He shall see none to feare.

Ma. A good lenton answer: I can tell thee where y saying was borne, of I feare no colours.

Clo. Where good mistris Mary?

Ma. In the warrs, & that may you be bolde to say in your foolerie.

Clo. Well, God give them wisedome that haue it: & those that are fooles, let them vse their talents.

Ma. Yet you will be hang'd for being so long absent, or to be turn'd away: is not that as good as a hanging to you?

Clo. Many a good hanging, prouents a bad marriage: and for turning away, let summer beare it out.

Ma. You are resolute then?

Clo. Not so neyther, but I am resolu'd on two points.

Ma. That if one breake, the other will hold: or if both breake, your gaskins fall.

Clo. Apt in good faith, very apt: well go thy way, if sir Toby would leaue drinking, thou wert as witty a piece of Eues flesh, as any in Illyria.

Ma. Peace you rogue, no more o'that: here comes my Lady: make your excuse wisely, you were best.

Enter Lady Olivia, with Malvolio.

Cla. Wit, and't be thy will, put me into good fooling: those wits that thinke they haue thee, doe very oft proue fooles: and I that am sure I lacke thee, may passe for a wise man. For what says Quinapalus, Better a witty foole, then a foolish wit. God blesse thee Lady.

Ol. Take the foole away.

Cla. Do you not heare fellowes, take away the Ladie.

Ol. Go too, y'are a dry foole: Ile no more of you: besides you grow dis-honest.

Clo. Two faults Madona, that drinke & good counsell will amend: for giue the dry foole drink, then is the foole not dry: bid the dishonest man mend himself, if he mend, he is no longer dishonest; if he cannot, let the Botcher mend him: any thing that's mended, is but patch'd: vertue that transgresses, is but patcht with sinne, and sin that amends, is but patcht with vertue. If that this simple Sillogisme will serue, so: if it will not, what remedy?

As there is no true Cuckold but calamity, so beauties a flower; The Lady bad take away the foole, therefore I say againe, take her away.

Ol. Sir, I bad them take away you.

Clo. Misprision in the highest degree. Lady, Cucullus non facit monachum: that's as much to say, as I weare not motley in my braine: good Madona, give meet leaue to prouе you a foole.

Ol. Can you do it?

Clo. Dexterously, good Madona.

Ol. Make your proofe.

Clo. I must catechize you for it Madona, Good my Mouse of vertue answer mee.

Ol. Well sir, for want of other idlenesse, I'le bide your proofe.

Clo. Good Madona, why mournst thou?

Ol. Good foole, for my brothers death.

Clo. I think his soule is in hell, Madona.

Ol. I know his soule is in heaven, foole.

Clo The more foole (Madona) to mourne for your Brothers soule, being in heaven. Take away the Foole, Gentlemen.

Ol. What thinke you of this foole Malvolio, doth he not mend?

Mal. Yes, and shall do, till the pangs of death shake him: Infirmity that decaies the wise, doth euer make the better foole.

Clow. God send you sir, a speedie Infirmity, for the better increasing your folly: Sir Toby will be sworn that I am no Fox but he will not passe his word for two pence that you are no Foole.

Ol. How say you to that Malvolio?

Mal. I marvell your Ladyship takes delight in such a barren rascall: I saw him put down the other day, with an ordinary foole, that has no more braine then a stone. Looke you now, he's out of his gard already: vnles you laugh and minister occasion to him, he is gag'd I protest I take these Wiseman, that crow so at these set kinde of fooles, no better then the fooles Zanies.

Ol. O you are sicke of self-loue Malvolio, and taste with a distemper'd appetite. To be generous, guiltesse, and of free disposition, is to take those things for Bird-bolts, that you deeme Cannon bullets: There is no slander in an allow'd foole, though he do nothing but rayle; nor no rayling, in a knowne discreet man, though hee do nothing but reproue.

Clo. Now Mercury indue thee with leasing, for thou speak'st well of fooles.

Enter Maria.

Mar. Madam, there is at the gate, a young Gentleman, much desires to speake with you

Ol. From the Count Orsino, is it?

Ma I know not (Madam) 'tis a faire young man, and well attended.

Ol Who of my people hold him in delay?

Ma. Sir Toby Madam, your kinsman.

Ol. Fetch him off I pray you, he speakes nothing but madman. Fie on him. Go you Malvolio; If it be a suit from the Count, I am sicke, or not at home What you will, to dismisse it. Exit Malvo.

Now you see sir, how your fooling growes old, & people dislike it.

Clo Thou hast spoke for vs (Madona) as if thy eldest sonne should be a foole: whose scull, Iouе cramme with braines, for here he comes. Enter Sir Toby.

One of thy kin has a most weake Pia-mater.

Ol. By mine honor halfe drunke. What is he at the gate Cosin?

To. A Gentleman.

Ol. A Gentleman? What Gentleman?

To. 'Tis a Gentleman heere. A plague o'these pickle herring! How now Sot.

Clo. Good Sir Toby.

Ol. Cosin, Cosin, how haste you come so early by this Lethargie?

To. Letcherie, I defie Letchery. there's one at the gate.

Ol. Ay marry, what is he?

To. Let him be the diuell and he will, I care not: give me faith say I. Well, it's all one. Exit

Ol. What's a drunken man like, foole?

Clo. Like a drown'd man, a foole, and a madde man. One draught above heate, makes him a foole, the second maddes him, and a third drownes him.

Ol. Go thou and seeke the Crowner, and let him sitte o'my Coz: for he's in the third degree of drinke: hee's drown'd: go looke after him.

Clo. He is but mad yet Madona, and the foole shall looke to the madman.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal Madam, yond young fellow sweares hee will speake with you. I told him you were sicke, he takes on him to vnderstand so much, and therefore comes to speak with you. I told him you were asleepe, he seems to haue a fore knowledge of that too, and therefore comes to speake with you. What is to be said to him Ladie, he's fortified against any denial.

Ol. Tell him, he shall not speake with me.

Mal. He's beene told so: and hee sayes hee'l stand at your doore like a Sheriffes post, and be the supporter to a bench, but hee'l speake with you.

Ol. What kinde o'man is he?

Mal. Why of mankinde.

Ol. What manner of man?

Mal. Of verie ill manner: hee'l speake with you, will you, or no

Ol. Of what personage, and yeeres is he?

Mal. Not yet old enough for a man, nor yong enough for a boy: as a squash is before tis a peascod, or a Codling when tis almost an Apple: 'Tis with him in standing water, betweene boy and man. He is verie well-fauour'd, and he speakes verie shrewishly: One would thinke his mothers milke were scarce out of him.

Ol Let him approach: Call in my Gentlewoman.

Mal. Gentlewoman, my Lady calles. Exit.

Enter Maria.

Ol. Giue me my veile: come throw it ore my face, We'l once more heare Orsinos Embassie.

Enter Violenta.

Vio. The honorable Ladie of the house, which is she?

Ol. Speake to me, I shall answer for her. your will.

Vio. Most radiant, exquisite, and vnmatchable beautie. I pray you tell me if this bee the Lady of the house, for I neuer saw her. I would bee loath to cast away my speech: for besides that it is excellently well pend, I haue taken great paines to con it. Good Beauties, let mee sustaine no scorne; I am very compellable, even to the least sinister vsage.

Ol. Whence came you sir?

Vio. I can say little more then I haue studied, & that question's out of my part. Good gentle one, giue mee modest assurance, if you be the Ladie of the house, that may proceede in my speech.

Ol. Are you a Comedian?

Vio. No my profound heart: and yet (by the verie phanga of malice, I swear) I am not that I play. Are you the Ladie of the house?

Ol. If I do not vsurpe my selfe, I am.

Vio. Most certaine, if you are she, you do vsurp your selfe. for what is yours to bestowe, is, not yours to reserue. But this is from my Commission: I will on with my speech in your praise, and then shew you the heart of my message.

Ol. Come to what is important in't: I forgiue you the praise.

Vio Alas, I tooke great paines to studie it, and 'tis Poetticall.

Ol. It is the more like to be feigned, I pray you keep it in. I heard you were sawcy at my gates, & allowd your approach rather to wonder at you, then to heare you. If you be not mad, be gone: if you haue reason, be breefe: 'tis not that time of Moone with me, to make one in so skipping a dialogue.

Ma. Will you hoyst sayle sir, here lies your way.

Vio. No good swabber, I am to hull here a little longer. Some mollification for your Giant, sweete Ladie; tell me your minde, I am a messenger.

Ol Sure you haue some hiddeous matter to deliuer, when the courtesie of it is so fearefull. Speake your office.

Vio It alone concernes your eare: I bring no ouertures of warre, no taxation of homage; I hold the Olyfe in my hand: my words are as full of peace, as matter.

Ol. Yet you began rudely. What are you? What would you?

Vio. The rudenesse that hath appear'd in mee, haue I learn'd from my entertainment. What I am, and what I would, are as secret as maiden-head: to your eares, Diuinity; to any others, prophanation.

Ol. Gme vs the place alone, We will heare this diuinitie. Now sir, what is your text?

Vio Most sweet Ladie.

Ol A comfortable doctrine, and much may bee saide of it. Where lies your Text?

Vio In Orsinos bosome

Ol In his bosome? In what chapter of his bosome?

Vio To answer by the method in the first of his hart.

Ol. O, I haue read it: it is heresie. Haue you no more to say?

Vio. Good Madam, let me see your face.

Ol. Haue you any Commission from your Lord, to negotiate with my face: you are now out of your Text but we will draw the Curtain, and shew you the picture. Looke you sir, such a one I was this present. Is not well done?

Vio Excellently done, if God did all.

Ol. Tis in graine sir, 'twill endure winde and weather.

Vio. Tis beauty truly blent, whose red and white,
Natures owne sweet, and cunning hand laid on:
Lady, you are the cruell st shee aliue,
If you will leade these graces to the graue,
And leaue the world no copie.

Ol O sir, I will not be so hard-hearted: I will giue out diuers sceedules of my beautie. It shalbe Inuentoried and every particle and vtensile labell'd to my will. As, Item two lippes indifferent redde, Item two grey eyes, with lids to them: Item, one necke, one chin, & so forth. Were you sent hither to praise me?

Vio. I see you what you are, you are too proud:
But if you were the diuell, you are faire.
My Lord, and master loues you: O such loue
Could be but recompenc'd, though you were crown'd
The non-pareil of beautie.

Ol. How does he loue me?

Vio. With adorations, fertill teares,
With groanes that thunder loue, with sighes of fire.

Ol. Your Lord does know my mind, I cannot loue him:
Yet I suppose him vertuous, know him noble,
Of great estate, of fresh and stainlesse youth;
In voyces well diuulg'd, free, learn'd, and valiant,
And in dimension, and the shape of nature,
A gracious person; But yet I cannot loue him:
He might haue tooke his answer long ago.

Vio. If I did loue you in my masters flame,
With such a suffring, such a deadly life:
In your denialL, I would finde no sence,
I would not vnderstand it.

Ol. Why, what would you?

Vio. Make me a willow Cabine at your gate,
And call vpon my soule within the house,
Write loyall Cantons of contemned loue,
And sing them lowd euen in the dead of night:
Hallow your name to the reuerberate hilles,
And make the babling Gossip of the aire,
Cry out Olinos: O you should not rest
Betweene the elements of syre, and earth,
But you should pittie me.

Ol. You might do much:
What is your Parentage?

Vio. Aboue my fortunes, yet my state is well:
I am a Gentleman.

Ol Get you to your Lord:
I cannot loue him: let him send no more,
Vnlesse (perchance) you come to me againe,
To tell me how he takes it: Fare you well:
I thanke you for your paines: spend this for mee.

Vio. I am no feede post, Lady; keepe your purse,
My Master, not my selfe, lackes recompence.
Loue make his heart of flint, that you shal loue,
And let your feruour like my masters be,
Plac'd in contempt. Farwell fayre cruelltie. Exit

Ol. What is your Parentage?
Aboue my fortunes, yet my state is well,
I am a Gentleman Ile be sworne thou art,
Thy tongue, thy face, thy limbes, actions, and spirit.
Do giue thee fiue-fold blazon: not too fast soft, soft,
Vnlesse the Matter were the man. How now?
Euen so quickly may one catch the plague?
Me thinkes I feele this youths perfections
With an inuisible, and subtle stealth
To creepe in at mine eyes. Well, let it be.
What hoa, Malmolio.

Enter Malmolio.

Mal Heere Madam, at your seruice.

Ol Run after that same peeuish Messenger
The Countes man: he left this Ring behinde him
Would I, or not. tell him, Ile none of it.
Desire him not to flatter with his Lord,
Nor hold him vp with hopes, I am not for him:
If that the youth will come this way to morrow,
Ile giue him reasons for't. he thee Malmolio.

Mal Madam, I will. Exit.

Ol I do I know not what, and feare to finde
Mine eye too great a flatterer for my minde:

Fate

Fates, shew thy force, our selues we do not owe,
What is decreed, must be: and be this so.

Finis, Actus primus.

Actus Secundus, Scæna prima.

Enter Antonio & Sebastian.

Ant. Will you stay no longer: nor will you not that I go with you.

Seb. By your patience, no: my starres shine darkely ouer me; the malignancie of my fate, might perhaps distemper yours; therefore I shall crane of you your leaue, that I may beare my euils alone. It were a bad recompence for your loue, to lay any of them on you.

An. Let me yet know of you, whither you are bound.

Seb. No sooth sir: my determinate voyage is meere extrauagancie. But I perceiue in you so excellent a touch of modestie, that you will not extort from me, what I am willing to keepe m: therefore it charges me in manners, the rather to expresse my selfe: you must know of mee then Antonio, my name is Sebastian (which I call'd Rodorigo) my father was that Sebastian of Messaline, whom I know you haue heard of. He left behinde him, my selfe, and a sister, both borne in an houre: if the Heauens had beene pleas'd, would we had so ended. But you sir, alter'd that, for some houre before you tooke me from the breach of the sea, was my sister drown'd.

Ant. Alas the day.

Seb. A Lady sir, though it was said shee much resembled me, was yet of many accounted beautiful: but though I could not with such estimable wonder ouer farre beleeue that, yet thus farre I will boldly publish her, shee bore a minde that enuy could not but call faire: Shee is drown'd already sir with salt water, though I seeme to drowne her remembrance againe with more.

Ant. Pardon me sir, your bad entertainment.

Seb. O good Antonio, forgiue me your trouble.

Ant. If you will not murther me for my loue, let mee be your seruant.

Seb. If you will not vndo what you haue done, that is kill him, whom you haue recouer'd, desire it not. Fare ye well at once, my bosome is full of kindnesse, and I am yet so neere the manners of my mother, that vpon the least occasion more, mine eyes will tell tales of me: I am bound to the Count Orsino's Court, farewell. Exit

Ant. The gentlenesse of all the gods go with thee:
I haue many enemies in Orsino's Court,
Else would I very shortly see thee there:
But come what may, I do adore thee so,
That danger shall seeme sport, and I will go. Exit.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Viola and Malvolio, at seuerall doores.

Mal. Were not you e'n now, with the Countesse Olinna?

Vio. Euen now sir, on a moderate pace, I haue since arriu'd but hither.

Mal. She returnes this Ring to you (sir) you might haue saued mee my paines, to haue taken it away your selfe. She adds moreouer, that you should put your Lord into a desperate assurance, she will none of him. And one thing more, that you be neuer so hardie to come againe in his affaires, vnlesse it bee to report your Lords taking of this: receiue it so.

Vio. She tooke the Ring of me, I'le none of it.

Mal. Come sir, you peruishly threw it to her: and her will is, it should be so return'd: If it bee worth stooping for, there it lies, in your eye: if not, bee it his that findes it. Exit.

Vio. I left no Ring with her: what meanes this Lady?
Fortune forbid my out-side haue not charm'd her:
She made good view of me, indeed so much,
That me thought her eyes had lost her tongue,
For she did speake in starts distractedly.
She loues me sure, the cunning of her passion
Inuites me in this churlish messenger:
None of my Lords Ring? Why he sent her none;
I am the man, if it be so as tis,
Poore Lady, she were better loue a dreame:
Disguise, I see thou art a wickednesse,
Wherein the pregnant enemie does much.
How easie is it, for the proper false
In womens weaker hearts to set their formes:
Alas, O frailtie is the cause, not wee,
For such as we are made, if such we bee:
How will this fadge? My master loues her deerely,
And I (poore monster) fond as much on him:
And she (mistaken) seemes to dote on me:
What will become of this? As I am man,
My state is desperate for my maisters loue:
As I am woman (now alas the day)
What thriftlesse sighes shall poore Olinio breath?
O time, thou must untangle this, not I,
It is too hard a knot for me t'vnty.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Sir Toby, and Sir Andrew.

To. Approach Sir Andrew: not to bee a bedde after midnight, is to be vp betimes, and Diluculo surgere, thou know'st.

And. Nay by my troth I know not: but I know, to be vp late, is to be vp late.

To. A false conclusion: I hate it as an vnfill'd Canne. To be vp after midnight, and to go to bed then is early: so that to go to bed after midnight, is to goe to bed betimes. Does not our liues consist of the foure Elements?

And. Faith so they say, but I thinke it rather consists of eating and drinking.

To. Th'art a scholler; let vs therefore eate and drinke, Marian I say, a stoope of wine.

Enter Clown.

And. Heere comes the foole yfaith.

Clo. How now my harts: Did you neuer see the Picture of we three?

To. Welcome asse, now let's heare a catch.

And. By my troth the fooles has an excellent breast. I had rather then forty shillings I had such a legge, and so sweet a breath to sing, as the foole has. In sooth thou wast in very gracious fooling last night, when thou spok'st of Pygrogromitus, of the Vapians passing the Equinoctial of Quebus: 'twas very good yfaith: I sent thee fiue pence

for

for thy Lemon, hadst it?

Clo. I did impetticoes thy gratillity: for Malvolios nose is no Whip-stocke. My Lady has a white hand, and the Mermidons are no bottle-ale houses.

An. Excellent: Why this is the best fooling, when all is done: Now a song.

To. Come on, there is sixe pence for you. Let's heare a song.

An. There's a testrill of me too: if one knight give a

Clo. Would you haue a love-song, or a song of good life?

To. A love song, a love song.

An. I, I. I care not for good life.

Clowne sings.

O Mistress mine where are you roaming?
O stay and heare, your true loues coming,
That can sing both high and low.
Trip no further pretty sweeting.
Journeys end in lovers meeting,
Every wise mans sonne doth know.

An. Excellent good, ifaith.

To Good, good

Clo. What is loue, tis not hereafter,
Present mirth, hath present laughter:
What's to come, is still vnsure.
In delay there lies no plenty,
Then come kisse me sweet and twenty
Youths a stuffe will not endure.

An. A mettlesome voyce, as I am true knight.

To. A contagious breath.

An. Very sweet, and contagious ifaith.

To. To heare by the nose, it is dulcet in contagion. But shall we make the Welkin dance indeed? Shall wee rouze the night-Owle in a Catch, that will drawe three soules out of one Weauer? Shall we do that?

And. And you loue me, let's doo't: I am dogge at a Catch.

Clo. By'lady sir, and some dogs will catch well.

An. Most certaine: Let our Catch be, Thou Knaue

Clo. Hold thy peace, thou Knaue knight. I shall be constrain'd in't, to call thee knaue, Knight.

An. 'Tis not the first time I haue constrained one to call me knaue. Begin foole: it begins, Hold thy peace.

Clo. I shall never begin if I hold my peace.

An. Good ifaith: Come begin. Catch sung

Enter Maria.

Mar. What a catterwalling doe you keepe here? If my Ladie haue not call'd vp her Steward Malvolio, and bid him turne you out of doores, neuer trust me.

To. My Lady's a Cataian, we are politicians, Malvolio a Peg-a-ramsie, and Three merry men be we. Am not I consanguinious? Am I not of her blood: tilly vally. Ladie, There dwelt a man in Babylon, Lady, Lady.

Clo. Beshrew me, the knights is admirable fooling.

An. I, he do's well enough if he be dispos'd, and so do I too: he does it with a better grace, but I do it more natural.

To O the twelfe day of December

Mar. For the loue o God peace.

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. My masters are you mad? Or what are you? Have you no wit, manners, nor honestie, but to gabble like Tinkers at this time of night? Do you make an Alehouse of my Ladies house, that ye squeak out your Coziers Catches without any mitigation or remorse of voice? Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

To. We did keepe time sir in our Catches. Sneeke vp.

Mal. Sir Toby, I must be round with you. My Lady bad me tell you, that though she harbors you as her kinsman, she's nothing ally'd to your disorders. If you can separate your selfe and your misdemeanors, you are welcome to the house: if not, and it would please you to take leave of her, she is very willing to bid you farewell.

To. Farewell deere heart, since I must needs be gone.

Mar. Nay good Sir Toby.

Clo. His eyes do shew his dayes are almost done.

Mal. Is't euen so?

To. But I will never dye.

Clo. Sir Toby there you lye.

Mal. This is much credit to you.

To. Shall I bid him go.

Clo. What and if you do?

To. Shall I bid him go, and spare not?

Clo. O no, no, no, no, you dare not

To. Out o'tune sir, ye lye: Art any more then a Steward? Doest thou thinke because thou art virtuous, there shall be no more Cakes and Ale?

Clo. Yes by S.Anne, and Ginger shall bee hoote i'th mouth too.

To. Th'art i'th right. Goe sir, rub your Chaine with crums. A stope of Wine Maria.

Mal. Mistris Mary, if you priz'd my Ladies fauour at any thing more then contempt, you would not giue meanes for this vncuill rule; she shall know of it by this hand. Exit

Mar. Go shake your eares.

An. Twere as good a deede as to drink when a mans a hongrie, to challenge him the field, and then to breake promise with him, and make a foole of him.

To. Doo't knight, I'le write thee a Challenge: or I'le deliuer thy indignation to him by word of mouth.

Mar. Sweet Sir Toby be patient for to night: Since the youth of the Counts was to day with my Lady, she is much out of quiet. For Monsieur Malvolio, let me alone with him: If I do not gull him into an ayword, and make him a common recreation, do not thinke I haue wits enough to lye straight in my bed: I know I can do it.

To. Possesse vs, possesse vs, tell vs something of him.

Mar. Marrie sir, sometimes he is a kinde of Puritane.

An. O, if I thought that, I'de beate him like a dogge.

To. What for being a Puritan, thy exquisite reason, deere knight.

An. I haue no exquisite reason for't, but I haue reason good enough.

Mar. The dev'll a Puritane thee hee is, or any thing constantly but a time-pleaser, an affection'd Asse, that cons State without booke, and vtters it by great swarths. The best perswaded of himselfe: so cram'd (as he thinkes) with excellencies, that it is his grounds of faith, that all that looke on him, loue him: and on that vice in him, will my reuenge finde notable cause to worke.

To. What wilt thou do?

Mar. I will drop in his way some obscure Epistles of loue, wherein by the colour of his beard, the shape of his legge, the manner of his gate, the expressure of his eye, forehead, and complection, he shall finde himselfe most feelingly personated. I can write very like my Ladie your Neece, on a forgotten matter wee can hardly make distinction of our hands.

To. Excellent, I smell a deuice.

An. I haue't in my nose too.

To. He shall thinke by the Letters that thou wilt drop

that

that they come from my Neece, and that shee's in loue with him.

Mar. My purpose is indeed a horse of that colour.

An. And your horse now would make him an Asse

Mar. Asse, I doubt not.

An. O twill be admirable.

Mar. Sport royall I warrant you: I know my Physicke will worke with him, I will plant you two, and let the Foole make a third, where he shall finde the Letter: obserue his construction of it: For this night to bed, and dreame on the event: Farewell. Exit

To. Good night Penthisilea.

An. Before me she's a good wench.

To. She is a beagle true bred, and one that adores me: what o'that?

An. I was ador'd once too.

To. Let's to bed knight: Thou hadst need send for more money.

An. If I cannot recouer your Neece, I am a foule way out.

To. Send for money knight, if thou hast her not i'th end, call me Cut.

An. If I do not, never trust me, take it how you will.

To. Come, come, I'le go burne some Sacke, 'tis too late to go to bed now: Come knight, come knight. Exeunt

Scena Quarta.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio and others.

Du. Giue me some Musick; Now good morrow friends. Now good Cesario, but that peece of song, That old and Antickie song we heard last night; Me thought it did releeue my passion much, More then light ayres, and recollected termes Of these most briske and giddy-paced times. Come, but one verse.

Cur. He is not heere (so please your Lordshippe) that should sing it?

Du. Who was it?

Cur. Feste the Iester my Lord, a fooole that the Ladie Olinaes Father tooke much delight in. He is about the house.

Du. Seeke him out, and play the tune the while. Musicke playes.

Come hither Boy, if ever thou shalt loue
In the sweet pangs of it, remember me:
For such as I am, all true Louers are,
Vnstaid and skittish in all motions else,
Save in the constant image of the creature
That is belou'd. How dost thou like this tune?

Vio. It gives a verie eccho to the sense
Where loue is thron'd.

Du. Thou dost speake masterly,
My life vpon't, yong though thou art, thine eye
Hath staid vpon some fauour that it loues:
Hath it not boy?

Vio. A little, by your fauour.

Du. What kinde of woman ist?

Vio. Of your complexion.

Du. She is not worth thee then. What yeares ifaith?

Vio. About your yeares my Lord.

Du. Too old by heauen: Let still the women take
An elder then her selfe, so weares she to him,
So sweyes she leuell in her husbands heart:
For boy, however we do praise our selues,
Our fancies are more giddie and vnfirme,
More longing, wauering, sooner lost and worne,
Then womens are.

Vio. I think it well my Lord.

Du. Then let thy Loue be yonger then thy selfe,
Or thy affection cannot hold the bent:
For women are as Roses, whose faire flowre
Being once displaid, doth fall that verie howre.

Vio. And so they are: alas, that they are so:
To die, even when they to perfection grow.

Enter Curio & Clowne.

Du. O fellow come, the song we had last night:
Marke it Cesario, it is old and plaine;
The Spinsters and the Knitters in the sunne,
And the free maides that weaue their thread with bones,
Do vse to chaunt it: it is silly sooth,
And dallies with the innocence of loue,
Like the old age.

Clo. Are you ready Sir?

Duke. I prethee sing. Musicke.

The Song.

Come away, come away death,
And in sad cypresse let me be laide.
Fye away, fie away breath,
I am slaine by a faire cruell maide:
My shroud of white stuck all with Ew, O prepare it.
My part of death no one so true did share it.

Not a flower, not a flower sweete
On my blacke coffin, let there be strewne:
Not a friend, not a friend greet
My poore corpes, where my bones shall be throwne:
A thousand thousand sighes to saue, lay me o where
Sad true loner never find my grave, to weepe there.

Du. There's for thy paines.

Clo. No paines sir, I take pleasure in singing sir.

Du. Ile pay thy pleasure then.

Clo. Truely sir, and pleasure will be paide one time, or another.

Du. Give me now leave, to leave thee.

Clo. Now the melancholly God protect thee, and the Tailor make thy doublet of changeable Taffeta, for thy minde is a very Opall. I would haue men of such constancie put to Sea, that their business might be every thing, and their intent everie where, for that's it, that always makes a good voyage of nothing. Farewell. Exit

Du. Let all the rest giue place: Once more Cesario, Get thee to yond same soueraigne cruelte: Tell her my loue, more noble then the world Prizes not quantitie of dirtie lands, The parts that fortune hath bestow'd vpon her: Tell her I hold as giddily as Fortune: But 'tis that miracle, and Queene of Iems That nature pranckes her in, attracts my soule.

Vio. But if she cannot loue you sir

Du. It cannot be so answer'd.

Vio. Sooth but you must Say that some Lady, as perhappes there is,
Hath for your loue as great a pang of heart
As you haue for Olinda: you cannot loue her:
You tel her so: Must she not then be answe.'d?

Du. There is no womans sides

Can

Can bide the beating of so strong a passion,
As loue doth giue my heart: no womans heart
So bigge, to hold so much, they lacke retention.
Alas, their loue may be call'd appetite,
No motion of the Liuer, but the Pallat,
That suffer surfet, cloyment, and reuolt,
But mine is all as hungry as the Sea,
And can digest as much, make no compare
Betweene that loue a woman can beare me,
And that I owe Olinia.

Vio. I but I know

Du. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what loue women to men may owe:
In faith they are as true of heart, as we.
My Father had a daughter lou'd a man
As it might be perhaps, were I a woman
I should your Lordship.

Du. And what's her history?

Vio. A blanke my Lord: she never told her loue,
But let concealment like a worme i'th budde
Feede on her damaske cheeke: she pin'd in thought,
And with a greene and yellow melancholly,
She sate like Patience on a Monument,
Smiling at greefe. Was not this loue indeede?
We men may say more, sweare more, but indeed
Our shewes are more then will: for still we prouе
Much in our vowes, but little in our loue.

Du. But di'de thy sister of her loue my Boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my Fathers house,
And all the brothers too: and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this Lady?

Du. I that's the Theame,
To her in haste: giue her this Iewell; say,
My loue can giue no place, bide no denay. exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

To. Come thy wayes Signior Fabian.

Fab. Nay I'le come: if I loose a scruple of this sport, let me be boyl'd to death with Melancholly.

To. Wouldst thou not be glad to haue the niggardly Rascally sheepe-biter, come by some notable shame?

Fa. I would exult man: you know he brought me out o'fauour with my Lady, about a Beare-baiting heere.

To. To anger him we'l haue the Beare againe, and we will foole him black and blew, shall we not sir Andrew?

An. And we do not, it is pitie of our liues.

Enter Maria.

To. Heere comes the little villaine: How now my Mettle of India?

Mar. Get ye all three into the box tree: Malvolio's comming downe this walke, he has beene yonder i'the Sunne practising behaviour to his own shadow this halfe houre: obserue him for the loue of Mockerie, for I know this Letter will make a contemplative Idiot of him. Close in the name of iesting, lye thou there: for heere comes the Trout, that must be caught with tickling. Exit

Enter Malvolio.

Mal. 'Tis but Fortune, all is fortune. Maria once told me she did affect me, and I haue heard her self come thus neere, that should feed fancie, it should bee one of my complexion. Besides she vses me with a more exalted respect, then any one else that followes her. What should I thinke on't?

To. Heere's an ouer-weening rogue.

Fa. Oh peace: Contemplation makes a rare Turkey Cocke of him, how he iets vnder his aduanc'd plumes.

And. Slight I could so beate the Rogue.

To. Peace I say.

Mal. To be Count Malvolio.

To. Ah Rogue.

An. Pistoll him, pistoll him.

To. Peace, peace.

Mal. There is example for't: The Lady of the Strachy, married the yeoman of the wardrob

An. Fie on him Iezabel.

Fa. O peace, now he's deeply in: looke how imagination blowes him.

Mal. Having beene three moneths married to her, sitting in my state.

To. O for a stone-bow to hit him in the eye.

Mal. Calling my Officers about me, in my branch'd Velvet gowne: hauing come from a day bedde, where I haue left Olinia sleeping

To. Fire and Brimstone.

Fa. O peace, peace.

Mal. And then to haue the humor of state: and after a demure traunse of regard: telling them I know my place, as I would they should doe theirs: to ask for my kinsman Toby.

To. Bolles and shackles.

Fa. Oh peace, peace, peace, now, now.

Mal. Seauen of my people with an obedient start, make out for him: I frowne the while, and perchance winde vp my watch, or play with my some rich Iewell: Toby approaches; curtsies there to me.

To. Shall this fellow liue?

Fa. Though our silence be drawne from vs with cars yet peace.

Mal. I extend my hand to him thus: quenching my familiar smile with an austere regard of controll.

To. And do's not Toby take you a blow o'the lippes, then?

Mal. Saying, Cosine Toby, my Fortunes having cast me on your Neece, giue me this prerogatiue of speech.

To. What, what?

Mal. You must amend your drunkennesse.

To. Out scab.

Fab. Nay patience, or we breake the sinewes of our plot!

Mal Besides you waste the treasure of your time, with a foolish knight.

And. That's me I warrant you.

Mal. One fit Andrew.

And. I knew 'twas I, for many do call mee foole.

Mal. What employment haue we heere?

Fa. Now is the Woodcocke neere the gin.

To. Oh peace, and the spirit of humors intimate reading aloud to him.

Mal. By my life this is my Ladies hand: these bee her very C's, her V's, and her T's, and thus makes shee her great P's. It is in contempt of question her hand.

An. Her C's, her V's, and her T's: why that?

Mal. To the vnparagon bolou'd, this, and my good wishes: Her very Phrases: By your leaue wax. Soft, and the impressure her Lucrece, with which she vses to seale: to my Lady: To whom should this be?

Fab. This winnes him, Liuer and all.

Mal.

Mal. I am known Malte, but who, Lips do not mouthe, no man must know. No man must know. What followes? The numbers alter'd: No man must know,
If this should be thee Malvolio?

To. Marrie hang thee brockie.

Mal. I may command where I adore, but silence like a Lucresse knife:
With bloodlesse stroke my heart doth gore, M. O. A. I. doth sway my life.

Fa. A fustian riddle.

To. Excellent Wench, say I.

Mal. M.O.A.I. doth sway my life Nay but first let me see, let me see, let me see.

Fab. What dish a poyson has she dresst him?

To. And with what wing the stallion checkes at it?

Mal. I may command, where I adore: Why shee may command me. I serue her, she is my Ladie. Why this is evident to any formall capacitie. There is no obstruction in this, and the end: What should that Alphabeticall position portend, if I could make that resemble something in me? Softly, M.O.A.I.

To O I. make vp that, he is now at a cold sent

Fab. Sowter will cry vpon't for all this, though it bee as ranke as a Fox

Mal. M. Malvolio, M. why that begins my name.

Fab. Did not I say he would worke it out, the Curre is excellent at faults.

Mal. M. But then there is no consonancy in the sequell that suffers vnder probation: A. should follow, but O. does.

Fa. And O shall end, I hope

To. I, or I'le cudgell him, and make him cry O.

Mal. And then I. comes behind.

Fa. I, and you had any eye behinde you, you might see more detraction at your heeles, then Fortunes before you.

Mal. M,O,A,I. This simulation is not as the former: and yet to crush this a little, it would bow to mee, for every one of these Letters are in my name. Soft, here followes prose: If this fall into thy hand, reuolue. In my stars I am above thee, but be not affraid of greatnesse: Some are become great, some atchieues greatnesse, and some haue greatnesse thrust vppon em. Thy fates open their hands, let thy blood and spirit embrace them, and to inure thy selfe to what thou art like to be: cast thy humble slough, and appeare fresh. Be opposite with a kinsman, surly with seruants: Let thy tongue tang arguments of state; put thy selfe into the trickie of singularitie. Shee thus aduises thee, that sighes for thee. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings, and wish'd to see thee ever crosse garter'd: I say remember, goe too, thou art made if thou desir'st to be so: If not, let me see thee a steward still, the fellow of seruants, and not worthie to touch Fortunes fingers Farewell. Shee that would alter seruices with thee, the fortunate vnhappy daylight and champian discouers not more: This is open. I will bee proud, I will reade politicke Authours, I will baffle Sir Toby, I will wash off grosse acquaintance, I will be point deuise, the very man. I do not now foole my selfe, to let imagination iade mee; for every reason excites to this, that my Lady loues me. She did commend my yellow stockings of late, shee did praise my legge being crosse-garter'd, and in this she manifests her selfe to my loue, & with a kinde of injunction drives mee to these habites of her liking. I thanke my starres, I am happy: I will bee strange, stout, in yellow stockings, and crosse Garter'd, even with the swiftnesse of putting on. Iout, and my starres be praised. Heere is yet a postscript. Thou canst not choose but know who I am. If thou entertainest my loue, let it appeare in thy smiling, thy smiles becomes thee well. Therefore in my presence still smile, deare my sweete, I prethee Iouе
I thanke thee, I will smile, I will do every thing that thou wilt haue me. Exit

Fab. I will not giue my part of this sport for a pension of thousands to be paid from the Sophy.

To. I could marry this wench for this deuice.

An. So could I too.

To. And ake no other dowry with her, but such another iest.

Enter Maria.

An. Not I neither

Fab. Heere comes my noble gull catcher.

To Wilt thou set thy foote o'my necke.

An. Or o'mine either?

To. Shall I play my freedome at tray-trip, and become thy bondslaue?

An. Ifaith, or I either?

Tob. Why, thou hast put him in such a dreame, that when the image of it leaues him, he must run mad.

Ma. Nay but say true, do's it worke vpon him?

To. Like Aqua vite with a Midwife.

Mar. If you will then see the fruites of the sport, mark his first approach before my Lady: hee will come to her in yellow stockings, and 'tis a colour she abhorres, and crosse garter'd, a fashion shee detests: and hee will smile vpon her, which will now be so vnsuitable to her disposition, being addicted to a melancholly, as shee is, that it cannot but turn him into a notable contempt: if you wil see it follow me.

To. To the gates of Tartar, thou most excellent diuell of wit.

And Ile make one too Exeunt.

Finis Actus secundus.

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter Viola and Clown.

Vio. Saue thee Friend and thy Musick: dost thou liue by thy Tabor?

Clo. No sir, I liue by the Church.

Vio. Art thou a Churchman?

Clo. No such matter sir, I do liue by the Church: For, I do liue at my house, and my house doeth stand by the Church

Vio. So thou maist say the King lyes by a begger, if a begger dwell neer him: or the Church stands by thy Tabor, if thy Tabor stand by the Church.

Clo. You haue said sir: To see this age: A sentence is but a cheu'rill glouse to a good witte, how quickely the wrong side may be turn'd outward.

Vio. Nay that's certaine: they that daily seeke with words, may quickely make them wanton.

Clo. I would therefore my sister had had no name Sir.

Vio. Why man?

Clo. Why sir, her names a word, and to dallie with that word, might make my sister wanton: But indeede, words are very Rascals, since bonds disgrac'd them.

Vio. Thy reason man?

Clo.

Clo. Troth sir, I can yeeld you none without words, and words are growne so false, I am loath to proue reason with them.

Vio I warrant thou art a merry fellow, and cas'st for nothing.

Clo. Not so sir, I do care for something: but in my conscience sir, I do not care for you: if that be to care for nothing sir, I would it would make you invisible.

Vio. Art not thou the Lady Olivia's foole?

Clo. No indeed sir, the Lady Olivia has no folly, shee will keepe no foole sir, till she be married, and fooles are as like husbands, as Pilchers are to Herrings, the Husbands the bigger, I am indeede not her foole, but her corrupter of words.

Vio. I saw thee late at the Count Orsino's.

Clo. Foolery sir, does walke about the Orbe like the Sun, it shines every where. I would be sorry sir, but the Foole should be as oft with your Master, as with my Mistris: I thinke I saw your wisedome there.

Vio. Nay, and thou pass vpon me, Ile no more with thee. Hold there's expences for thee.

Clo. Now Loue in his next commodity of hayre, send thee a beard.

Vio. By my troth Ile tell thee, I am almost sicke for one, though I would not haue it grow on my chinne. Is thy Lady within?

Clo Would not a paire of these haue bred sir?

Vio. Yes being kept together, and put to vse.

Clo. I would play Lord Pandarus of Phrygia sir, to bring a Cressida to this Troylus

Vio. I vnderstand you sir, tis well begg'd.

Clo The matter I hope is not great sir; begging, but a begger: Cressida was a begger. My Lady is within sir. I will conster to them whence you come, who you are, and what you would are out of my welkin, I might say Element, but the word is ouer-worne. exit

Vio. This fellow is wise enough to play the foole,
And to do that well, craues a kinde of wit
He must obserue their mood on whom he iests,
The quality of persons, and the time:
And like the Haggard, checke at every Feather
That comes before his eye. This is a practice,
As full of labour as a Wise-mans Art:
For folly that he wisely shewes, is fit;
But wisemens folly falne, quite taint their wit.

Enter Sir Toby and Andrew.

To. Saue you Gentleman.

Vio. And you sir.

And. Dieu vous garde Monsieur

Vio. Et vous aussi vostre serviteur.

An. I hope sir, you are, and I am yours.

To. Will you incounter the house, my Neece is desirous you should enter, if your trade be to her.

Vio. I am bound to your Neece sir, I mean she is the list of my voyage.

To. Taste your legges sir, put them to motion.

Vio. My legges do better vnderstand me sir, then I vnderstand what you meane by bidding me taste my legs.

To. I meane to go sir, to enter

Vio. I will answer you with gate and entrance, but we are preuented.

Enter Olivia, and Gentlewoman.

Most excellent accomplish'd Lady, the heauens raine Odours on you.

And. That youth's a rare Courtier, raine odours, wel.

Vio. My matter hath no voice Lady, but to your owne most pregnant and vouchsafed eare

And. Odours, pregnant, and vouchsafed: Ile get 'em all three already.

Ol. Let the Garden doore be shut, and leaue mee to my hearing. Giue me your hand sir.

Vio. My duties Madam, and most humble seruice.

Ol. What is your name?

Vio. Cesario is your seruants name, faire Princesse.

Ol. My seruant sir? 'Twas never merry world,
Since lowly feigning was call'd compliment:
y are seruant to the Count Orsino youth.

Vio And he is yours, and his must needs be yours:
your seruants seruant, is your seruant Madam.

Ol. For him, I thinke not on him: for his thoughts,
Would they were blanks, rather then fill'd with me

Vio. Madam, I come to whet your gentle thoughts
On his behalfe

Ol. O by your leaue I pray you,
I bad you never speake again of him:
But would you vndertake another suite
I had rather heare you, to solicit that,
Then Musicke from the spheares.

Vio. Deere Lady.

Ol. Giue me leaue, beseech you: I did send,
After the last enchantment you did heare,
A Ring in chace of you. So did I abuse
My selfe, my seruant, and I feare me you:
Vnder your hard construction must I sit,
To force that on you in a shamefull cunning
Which you knew none of yours What might you think?
Haue you not set mine Honor at the stake,
And baited it with all th vnmuzled thoughts
That tyrannous heart can thinke? To one of your receiuing
Enough is shewne, a Cipresse, not a bosome,
Hides my heart: so let me heare you speake.

Vio I pittie you.

Ol That's a degree to loue.

Vio. No not a grize: for tis a vulgar proofe
That very oft we pitty enemies

Ol Why then me thinkes 'tis time to smile again:
O world, how apt the poore are to be proud?
If one should be a prey, how much the better
To fall before the Lion, then the Wolfe?

Clocke strikes.

The clocke vpbraides me with the waste of time:
Be not affraid good youth, I will not haue you,
And yet when wit and youth is come to harvest,
your wife is like to reape a proper man:
There lies your way, due West.

Vio. Then Westward hoe.
Grace and good disposition attend your Ladyship:
you'l nothing Madam to my Lord, by me:

Ol. Stay: I prethee tell me what thou thinkst of me?

Vio. That you do thinke you are not what you are.

Ol. If I thinke so, I thinke the same of you.

Vio. Then thinke you right: I am not what I am.

Ol. I would you were, as I would haue you be.

Vio Would it be better Madam, then I am?
I wish it might, for now I am your foole.

Ol. O what a deale of scorne, looks beautifull?
In the contempt and anger of his lip,
A murdrous guilt shewes not it selfe more soone,
Then loue that would seeme hid: Loues night, is noone.
Cesario, by the Roses of the Spring,
By maid-hood, honor, truth, and every thing,
I loue thee so, that maugre all thy pride,

Nor wit, nor reason, can my passion hide:
Do not extort thy reasons from this clause,
For that I woo, thou therefore hast no cause:
But rather reason thus, with reason fetter;
Loue sought, is good: but gueu vnsought, is better.

Vio. By innocence I sweare, and by my youth,
I haue one heart, one bosome, and one truth,
And that no woman has, nor never none
Shall mistrise be of it, saue I alone.
And so adieu good Madam, never more,
Will I my Masters teares to you deplore.

Ol. Yet come againe: for thou perhaps mayst moue
That heart which now abhorres to like his loue. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Sir Toby, Sir Andrew, and Fabian.

And. No faith, Ile not stay a iot longer:

To. Thy reason deere venom, giue thy reason.

Fab. You must needes yeelde your reason, Sir Andrew?

And. Marry I saw your Neece do more fauours to the Counts Serving-man, then euer she bestow'd vpon mee: I saw't i'th Orchard.

To. Did she see the while, old boy, tell me that.

And. As plaine as I see you now.

Fab. This was a great argument of loue in her toward you.

And. S'lights; will you make an Asse o'me.

Fab. I will prouе it legitimate sir, vpon the Oathes of iudgement, and reason.

To. And they haue beene grand Iurie men, since before Noah was a Saylor.

Fab. Shee did shew fauour to the youth in your sight, onely to exasperate you, to awake your dormouse valour, to put fire in your Heart, and brimstone in your Liuer: you should then haue accosted her, and with some excellent iests, fire-new from the mint, you should haue banged the youth into dumbenesse: this was look'd for at your hand, and this was baulk: the double gilt of this opportunitie you let time wash off, and you are now sayld into the North of my Ladies opinion, where you will hang like an vsickle on a Dutchmans beard, vnlesse you do redeeme it, by some laudable attempt, either of valour or policie.

And. And't be any way, it must be with Valour, for policie I hate: I had as liefe be a Brownist, as a Politician.

To. Why then build me thy fortunes vpon the basis of valour. Challenge me the Counts youth to fight with him: hurt him in eleuen places, my Neece shall take note of it, and assure thy selfe, there is no loue-Broker in the world, can more prevaile in mans commendation with women, then report of valour.

Fab. There is no way but this Sir Andrew.

An. Will either of you beare me a challenge to him?

To. Go, write it in a martial hand, be curst and briefe: it is no matter how witty, so it bee eloquent, and full of inuention: taunt him with the license of Inke: if thou thou'st him some thrice, it shall not be amiss, and as many Lyes, as will lye in thy sheete of paper, although the sheete were bigge enough for the bedde of Ware in England, set 'em downe, go about it. Let there bee gall enough in thy inke, though thou write with a Goose-pen, no matter: about it.

And. Where shall I finde you?

To. We'l call thee at the Cubiculo: Go.

Exit Sir Andrew.

Fa. This is a deere Manekin to you Sir Toby.

To. I haue bene dear to him lad, some two thousand strong, or so.

Fa. We shall haue a rare Letter from him; but you'le not deliuer't.

To. Never trust me then: and by all mannes sinne on the youth to an answer. I thinke Oxen and waine-ropes cannot hale them together. For Andrew, if he were open'd, and you finde so much blood in his Liuer, as will clog the foote of a flea, Ile eate the rest of th'anatomy.

Fab. And his opposit the youth bears in his visage no great presage of cruelty.

Enter Maria.

To. Looke where the youngest Wren of mine comes.

Mar. If you desire the spleene, and will laughe your selues into stitches, follow me; yond gull Malvolio is turned Heathen, a verie Renegatho; for there is no christian that means to be saued by beleeuing rightly, can ever beleeue such impossible passages of grossenesse. He's in yellow stockings.

To. And crosse garter'd?

Mar. Most villanously: like a Pedant that keeps a Schoole i'th Church: I haue dogg'd him like his murtherer. He does obey every point of the Letter that I droppe, to betray him: He does smile his face into more lynes, then is in the new Mappe, with the augmentation of the Indies: you haue not seene such a thing as he: I can hardly forbeare hurling things at him, I know my Ladie will strike him: if shee doe, he'l smile, and take't for a great fauour.

To. Come bring vs, bring vs where he is.

Exeunt Omnes.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Sebastian and Antonio.

Seb. I would not by my will have troubled you,
But since you make your pleasure of your paines,
I will no further chide you.

Ant. I could not stay behinde you: my desire
(More sharpe then filed steele) did sparre me forth,
And not all loue to see you (though so much
As might haue drawne one to a longer voyage)
But iealousie, what might befall your travell,
Being skillesse in these parts: which to a stranger,
Vnguided, and vnfriended, often prove
Rough, and vnhospitable. My willing loue,
The rather by these arguments of feare
Set forth in your pursuite.

Seb. My kinde Antonio,
I can no other answer make, but thanks,
And thanks: and ever oft good turnes,
Are shuffel'd off with such vncurrant pay:
But were my worth, as is my conscience firme,

You

You should finde better dealing: what's to do?
Shall we go see the reliques of this Towne?
Ant. To morrow sir, best first go see your Lodging?
Seb. I am not weary, and 'tis long to night
I pray you let vs satisfie our eyes
With the memorials, and the things of fame
That do renowne this City.
Ant. Would you'd pardon me:
I do not without danger walke these streetes.
Once in a sea-fight 'gainst the Count his gallies,
I did some service, of such note indeede,
That were I tane heere, it would scarse be answer'd.
Seb. Belike you slew great number of his people.
Ant. The offence is not of such a bloody nature,
Albeit the quality of the time, and quarrell
Might well haue given vs bloody argument:
It might haue since bene answer'd in repaying
What we tooke from them, which for Traffiques sake
Most of our City did. Only my selfe stood out,
For which if I be lapsed in this place
I shall pay deere.
Seb. Do not then walke too open.
Ant. It doth not fit me: hold sir, here's my purse,
In the South Suburbes at the Elephant
Is best to lodge: I will bespeake our dyet,
Whiles you beguile the time, and feed your knowledge
With viewing of the Towne, there shall you haue me.
Seb. Why I your purse?
Ant. Haply your eye shall light vpon some toy
You haue desire to purchase: and your store
I thinke is not for idle Markets, sir.
Seb. Ile be your purse-bearer, and leaue you
For an houre
Ant. To th'Elephant.
Seb. I do remember. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Olivia and Maria.

Ol. I haue sent after him, he sayes he'l come:
How shall I feast him? What bestow of him?
For youth is bought more oft, then begg'd, or borrow'd.
I speake too loud: Where's Malvolio, he is sad, and chaill,
And seiznes well for a seruant with my fortunes,
Where is Malvolio?
Mar. He's comming Madame:
But in very strange manner. He is sure possest Madam.
Ol. Why what's the matter, does he raue?
Mar. No Madam, he does nothing but smile: your Ladyship were best to haue some guard about you, if hee come, for sure the man is tainted in's wits.
Ol. Go call him hither.

Enter Malvolio.

I am as madde as hee,
If sad and merry madnesse equall bee.
How now Malvolio?
Mal. Sweet Lady, ho, ho.
Ol. Smil'st thou? I sent for thee vpon a sad occasion.
Mal. Sad Lady, I could be sad:
This does make some obstruction in the blood:
This crosse gartering, but what of that?
If it please the eye of one, it is with me as the very true Sonnet is: Please one, and please all.
Mal. Why how doest thou man?
What is the matter with thee?
Mal. Not blacke in my minde, though yellow in my legges: It did come to his hands, and Commands shall be executed. I thinke we do know the sweet Romane hand.
Ol. Wilt thou go to bed Malvolio?
Mal. To bed? I sweet heart, and Ile come to thee.
Ol. God comfort thee: Why dost thou smile so, and kisse thy hand so oft?
Mar. How do you Malvolio?
Malvo. At your request:
Yes Nightingales answere Daws.
Mar. Why appeare you with this ridiculous boldnesse before my Lady.
Mal. Be not afraid of greatnesse: 'twas well writ.
Ol. What meanst thou by that Malvolio?
Mal. Some are borne great.
Ol. Ha?
Mal. Some atchieue greatnesse.
Ol. What sayst thou?
Mal. And some haue greatnesse thrust vpon them.
Ol. Heauen restore thee.
Mal. Remember who commended thy yellow stockings.
Ol Thy yellow stockings?
Mal And wish'd to see thee crosse garter'd.
Ol. Crosse garter'd?
Mal. Go too, thou art made, if thou desir'st to be so.
Ol. Am I made?
Mal. If not, let me see thee a seruant still.
Ol. Why this is verie Midsommer madnesse.

Enter Seruant.

Ser. Madame, the young Gentleman of the Count Orsino's is return'd, I could hardly entreate him backe: he attends your Ladyships pleasure.
Ol. Ile come to him.
Good Maria, let this fellow be look'd too. Where's my Cosine Toby, let some of my people haue a speciall care of him, I would not haue him miscarrie for the halfe of my Dowry. exit
Mal. Oh ho, do you come neere me now: no worse man then sir Toby to looke to me. This concurres directly with the Letter, she sends him on purpose, that I may appeare stubborne to him: for she incites me to that in the Letter. Cast thy humble slough sayes she: be opposite with a Kinsman, surly with seruants, let thy tongue tanger with arguments of state, put thy selfe into the tricke of singularity: and consequently sets downe the manner how: as a sad face, a reuerend carriage, a slow tongue, in the habite of some Sir of note, and so foorth. I haue lymde her, but it is Loues doing, and Loue make me thankefull. And when she went away now, let this Fellow be look'd too: Fellow? not Malvolio, nor after my degree, but Fellow. Why every thing adheres together, that no dreamme of a scruple, no scruple of a scruple, no obstacle, no incredulous or vnsafe circumstance: What can be sayde? Nothing that can be, can come betweene me, and the full prospect of my hopes. Well Loue, not I, is the doer of this, and he is to be thanked.

Enter Toby, Fabian, and Maria.

To. Which way is hee in the name of sanctity. If all the diuels of hell be drawne in little, and Legion himselfe possest him, yet Ile speake to him.

Fab. Heere he is, heere he is: how ist with you sir? How ist with you man?

Mal. Go off, I discard you: let me enioy my priuate: go off.

Mar. Lo, how hollow the fiend speakes within him; did not I tell you? Sir Toby, my Lady prayes you to haue a care of him.

Mal. Ah ha, does she so?

To. Go too, go too: peace, peace, wee must deale gently with him: Let me alone. How do you Malvolio? How ist with you? What man, defie the diuell: consider, he's an enemy to mankinde.

Mal. Do you know what you say?

Mar. La you, and you speake ill of the diuell, how he takes it at heart Pray God he be not bewitch'd.

Fab. Carry his water to th'wise woman.

Mar. Marry and it shall be done to morrow morning if I liue. My Lady would not loose him for more then ile say.

Mal. How now mistris?

Mar. Oh Lord.

To. Prethee hold thy peace, this is not the way: Doe you not see you moue him? Let me alone with him.

Fa. No way but gentlenesse, gently, gently: the Fiend is rough, and will not be roughly vs'd.

To. Why how now my bawcock? how dost ? chuck?

Mal. Sir.

To. I biddy, come with me. What man, tis not for gravity to play at cherrie-pit with Satan Hang him foul Collier.

Mar. Get him to say his prayers, good sir Toby getse him to pray.

Mal. My prayers Minx.

Mar. No I warrant you, he will not heare of godlynesse.

Mal. Go hang yours selues all: you are ydle shallowe things, I am not of your elements, you shall knowe more hereafter. Exit

To. Ist possible?

Fa. If this were plaid vpon a stage now, I could condemne it as an improbable fiction.

To His very genius hath taken the infection of the deuice man.

Mar. Nay pursue him now, least the deuice take ayre, and taint.

Fa. Why we shall make him mad indeede.

Mar. The house will be the quieter.

To. Come, wee'l haue him in a darke room & bound. My Neece is already in the beleefe that he's mad: we may carry it thus for our pleasure, and his penance, til our very pastime tyred out of breath, prompt vs to haue mercy on him: at which time, we wil bring the deuice to the bar and crowne thee for a finder of madmen: but see, but see.

Enter Sir Andrew.

Fa. More matter for a May morning.

An. Heere's the Challenge, reade it: I warrant there's vinegar and pepper in't.

Fab. Ist so sawcy?

And. I, ist? I warrant him: do but read.

To. Giue me.

Youth, whatsoever thou art, thou art but a scurvy fellow.

Fa. Good, and valiant.

To. Wonder not, nor admire not in thy mindes why I do call thee so, for I will show thee no reason for't. (Law

Fa. A good note, that keepes you from the blow of ?

To. Thou comest to the Lady Olivia, and in my sight she vses thee kindly: but thou lyest in thy throat, that is not the matter I challenge thee for.

Fa. Very breefe, and to exceeding good sence-lesse.

To. I will way-lay thee going home, where if it be thy chance to kill me.

Fa. Good.

To. Thou kilt me like a rogue and a villaine.

Fa. Still you keepe o'th windie side of the Law: good.

Tob. Farthewell, and God haue mercie vpon one of our soules. He may haue mercie vpon mine, but my hope is better, and so looke to thy selfe. Thy friend as thou vseest him, & thy sworne enemie, Andrew Ague-cheeke.

To. If this Letter moue him not, his legges cannot: Ile giu't him.

Mar. You may haue verie fit occasion for't: he is now in some commerce with my Ladie, and will by and by depart.

To. Go sir Andrew: scout mee for him at the corner of the Orchard like a bum-Baylie: so soone as euer thou seest him, draw, and as thou draw'st, swearе horrible: for it comes to passe oft, that a terrible oath, with a swaggering accent sharpely twang'd off, giues manhoode more approbation, then euer proofe is selfe would haue earn'd him. Away.

And. Nay let me alone for swearing. Exit

To. Now wil not I deliuer his Letter: for the behaviour of the yong Gentleman, giues him out to be of good capacity, and breeding: his employment betweene his Lord and my Neece, confirmes no lesse. Therefore, this Letter being so excellently ignorant, will breed no terror in the youth: he will finde it comes from a Clodde-pole. But sir; I will deliuer his Challenge by word of mouth; set vpon Ague-cheeke a notable report of valor, and drive the Gentleman (as I know his youth will aptly receiue it) into a most hideous opinion of his rage, skill, furie, and impetuositie. This will so fright them both, that they wil kill one another by the looke, like Cockatrices.

Enter Olivia and Viola.

Fab. Heere he comes with your Neece, giue them way till he take leaue, and presently after him.

To I wil medicate the while vpon some horrid message for a Challenge.

Ol. I haue said too much vnto a hart of stone,
And laid mine honour too vnchary on't:
There's something in me that reproues my fault:
But such a head-strong potent fault it is,
That it but mockes reproofe.

Vio. With the same hauiour that your passion bears,
Goes on my Masters greefes.

Ol. Heere, weare this Iewell for me, tis my picture:
Refuse it not, it hath no tongue, to vex you:
And I beseech you come againe to morrow.
What shall you aske of me that I le deny,
That honour (sau'd) may vpon asking giue.

Vio. Nothing but this, your true loue for my master.

Ol. How wish mine honor may I giue him that,
Which I haue given to you.

Vio I will acquit you.

Ol. Well, come againe to morrow: far-thee-well,
A Fiend like thee might beare my soule to hell.

Enter Toby and Fabian.

To. Gentleman, God saue thee.

Vio.

Vio. And you sir.

To. That defence thou hast, betake thee too't: of what nature the wrongs are thou hast done him, I knowe not: but thy interceptor full of despight, bloody as the Hunter, attends thee at the Orchard end: dismount thy tucke, be yare in thy preparation, for thy assaylant is quick, skilfull, and deadly.

Vio. You mistake sir I am sure, no man hath any quarrell to me: my remembrance is very free and clearre from any image of offence done to any man.

To. You'l finde it otherwise I assure you: therefore, if you hold your life at any price, betake you to your gard: for your opposite hath in him what youth, strength, skill, and wrath, can furnish man withall.

Vio. I pray you sir what is he?

To. He is knight dubb'd with unhatch'd Rapier, and an carpet consideration, but he is a diuell in priuate brall, soules and bodies hath he diuorc'd three, and his incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but by pangs of death and sepulchre: Hob, nob, is his word: giu't or take't.

Vio. I will returne againe into the house, and desire some conduct of the Lady. I am no fighter, I haue heard of some kinde of men, that put quarrells purposely on others, to taste their valour: belike this is a man of that quirke.

To. Sir, no: his indignation derriues it selfe out of a very competent injurie, therefore get you on, and giue him his desire. Backe you shall not to the house, vnlesse you vnderake that with me, which with as much safetie you might answer him: therefore on, or strippe your sword starke naked: for meddle you must that's certain, or forswearre to weare iron about you.

Vio. This is as vncuill as strange. I beseech you, doe me this courteous office, as to know of the Knight what my offence to him is: It is something of my negligence, nothing of my purpose.

To. I will doe so. Signiour Fabian, stay you by this Gentleman, till my returne. Exit Toby.

Vio. Pray you sir, do you know of this matter?

Fab. I know the knight is incenst against you, even to a mortall arbitrement, but nothing of the circumstance more.

Vio. I beseech you what manner of man is he?

Fab. Nothing of that wonderfull promise to read him by his forme, as you are like to finde him in the proofe of his valour. He is indeede sir, the most skilfull, bloody, & fatall opposite that you could possibly haue found in any part of Illyria: will you walke towards him, I will make your peace with him, if I can.

Vio. I shall bee much bound to you for't: I am one, that had rather go with sir Priest, then sir knight: I care not who knowes so much of my mettle. Exeunt.

Enter Toby and Andrew.

To. Why man hee's a verie diuell, I haue not seen such a firago: I had a passe with him, rapier, scabbard, and all: and he gives me the stucke in with such a mortall motion that it is inuitable: and on the answer, he payes you as surely, as your feete hits the ground they step on. They say, he has bin Fencer to the Sophy.

And. Pox on't I'le not meddle with him.

To. I but he will not now be pacified, Fabian can scarse hold him yonder.

An. Plague on't, and I thought he had beene valiant, and so cunning in Fence, I'de haue seene him damn'd ere I'de haue challeng'd him. Let him let the matter slip, and Ile giue him my horse, gray Capilet.

To. Ile make the motion: stand heere, make a good shew on't, this shall end without the perdition of soules, marry Ile ride your horse as well as I ride you.

Enter Fabian and Viola.

I haue his horse to take vp the quarrell, I haue perswaded him the youths a diuell.

Fa. He is so horribly conceited of him: and pauses, & lookes pale, as if a Beare were at his heeles.

To. There's no remedie sir, he will fight with you for's oath sake: marrie hee hath better bethought him of his quarrell, and hee findes that now scarse to bee worth talking of: therefore draw for the supportance of his vowe, he protests he will not hurt you.

Vio. Pray God defend me: a little thing would make me tell them how much I lacke of a man.

Fab. Giue ground if you see him furious.

To. Come sir Andrew, there's no remedie, the Gentleman will for his honors sake haue one bowt with you: he cannot by the Duello auoide it: but hee has promised me, as he is a Gentleman and a Souldiour, he will not hurt you. Come on, too't.

And. Pray God he keepe his oath.

Enter Antonio.

Vio. I do assure you tis against my will.

Ant. Put vp your sword: if this yong Gentleman
Haue done offence, I take the fault on me:
If you offend him, I for him defie you.

To. You sir? Why, what are you?

Ant. One sir, that for his loue dares yet do more
Then you haue heard him brag to you he will.

To. Nay, if you be an vndertaker, I am for you.

Enter Officers.

Fab. O good sir Toby hold: heere come the Officers.

To. Ile be with you anon.

Vio. Pray sir, put your sword vp if you please.

And. Marry will I sir: and for that I promise'd you Ile be as good as my word. Hee will beare you easily, and reiore well.

1. Off. This is the man, do thy Office.

2 Off. Antonio, I arrest thee at the suit of Count Orsino

An. You do mistake me sir.

1. Off. No sir, no iot: I know your fauour well:
Though now you haue no sea-cap on your head:
Take him away, he knowes I know him well.

Ant. I must obey. This comes with seeking you:
But there's no remedie, I shall answer it:
What will you do: now my necessitie
Makes me to ask you for my purse. It greeues me
Much more, for what I cannot do for you.
Then what befals my selfe: you stand amaz'd,
But be of comfort.

2 Off. Come sir away.

Ant. I must entreat of you some of that money.

Vio. What money sir?
For the fayre kindnesse you haue shew'd me heere,
And part being prompted by your present trouble,
Out of my lesse and low ability
Ile lend you something: my having is not much,
Ile make diuision of my present with you:
Hold, there's halfe my Coffer.

Ant. Will you deny me now,
Is't possible that my deserts to you
Can lacke perswasion. Do not tempt my misery,
Least that it make me so vnsound a man
As to vpbraid you with those kindnesses

That I haue done for you.

Vio. I know of non.,
Not know I you by voyce, or any feature:
I hate ingratitude more in a man,
Then lying, vainnesse, babling drunkennesse,
Or any taint of vice, whose strong corruption
Inhabites our fraile blood.

Ant. Oh heauens themselues.

2. Off. Come sir, I pray you go.

Ant. Let me speake a little. This youth that you see
I snatch'd one halfe out of the iawes of death, (heere,
Releau'd him with such sanctitie of loue;
And to his image, which me thought did promise
Most venerable worth, did I deuotion.

1. Off. What's that to vs, the time goes by: Away.

Ant. But oh, how vilde an idoll proues this God:
Thou hast Sebastian done good feature, shame.
In Nature, there's no blemish but the minde:
None can be call'd deform'd, but the vnkinde.
Vertue is beauty, but the beauteous euill
Are empty trunkes, ore-flourish'd by the deuill.

1. Off The man growes mad, away with him.
Come, come sir.

Ant. Leade me on. Exit

Vio. Me thinkes his words do from such passion flye
That he beleeues himselfe, so do not I:
Proue true imagination, oh proue true,
That I deere brother, be now tane for you.

To. Come hither Knight, come hither Fabian: Weel whisper ore a couplet or two of most sage sawes.

Vio. He nam'd Sebastian: I my brother know
Yet liuing in my glasse: euen such, and so
In fauour was my Brother, and he went
Still in this fashion, colour, ornament,
For him I imitate: Oh if it proue,
Tempests are kinde, and salt waues fresh in loue.

To. A very dishonest paltry boy, and more a coward then a Hare, his dishonestly appeares, in leauing his frend heere in necessity, and denying him: and for his coward ship aske Fabian.

Fab. A Coward, a most deuout Coward, religious in it.

And. Sfid Ile after him againe, and beate him.

To. Do, cuffe him soundly, but neuer draw thy sword

And. And I do not.

Fab. Come, let's see the euent.

To. I dare lay any money, twill be nothing yet. Exit

Actus Quartus, Scæna prima.

Enter Sebastian and Clowne.

Clo. Will you make me beleeue, that I am not sent for you?

Seb. Go too, go too, thou art a foolish fellow,
Let me be cleere of thee.

Clo. Well held out ysfaith: No, I do not know you, nor I am not sent to you by my Lady, to bid you come speake with her: nor your name is not Master Cesario, nor this is not my nose neyther: Nothing that is so, is so.

Seb. I prethee vent thy folly somewhere else, thou know'st not me.

Clo. Vent my folly! He has heard that word of some great man, and now applyes it to a foole. Vent my folly: I am afraid this great lubber the World will prouе a Cockney: I prethee now vngird thy strangenes, and tell me what I shall vent to my Lady? Shall I vent to hir that thou art comming?

Seb. I prethee foolish greeke depart from me, there's money for thee, if you tarry longer, I shall giue worse paiment.

Clo. By my troth thou hast an open hand: these Wisemen that giue fooles money, get themselues a good report, after fourteene yeares purchase.

Enter Andrew, Toby, and Fabian.

And. Now sir, haue I met you again: ther's for you.

Seb. Why there's for thee, and there, and there,
Are all the people mad?

To Hold sir, or Ile throw your dagger ore the house

Clo. This will I tell my Lady straighe, I would not be in some of your coats for two pence.

To. Come on sir, hold.

An. Nay let him alone, Ile go another way to worke with him: Ile haue an action of Battery against him, if there be any law in Illyria: though I stroke him first, yet t's no matter for that.

Seb. Let go thy hand.

To. Come sir, I will not let you go. Come my yong souldier put vp your yron: you are well flesh'd: Come on.

Seb. I will be free from thee. What would'st thou now?
If thou dar'st tempt me further, draw thy sword

To. What, what? Nay then I must haue an Ounce or two of this malapert blood from you.

Enter Olivia.

Ol. Hold Toby, on thy life I charge thee hold.

To. Madam.

Ol. Will it be euer thus? Vngracious wretch,
Fit for the Mountaines, and the barbarous Caues,
Where manners nere were preach'd: out of my sight.
Be not offended, deere Cesario:
Rudesbey be gone. I prethee gentle friend,
Let thy fayre wisedome, not thy passion sway
In this vnciuill, and vnfit extent
Against thy peace. Go with me to my house,
And heare thou there how many fruitlesse pranks
This Ruffian hath botch'd vp, that thou thereby
Mayst smile at this: Thou shalt not choose but goe:
Do not denie, beshrew his soule for mee,
He started one poore heart of mine, in thee.

Seb. What rellish is in this? How runs the streame?
Or I am mad, or else this is a dreame:
Let fancie still my sense in Lethe steepe,
If it be thus to dreame, still let me steepe.

Ol. Nay come I prethee, would thou'st be rul'd by me

Seb. Madam, I will.

Ol. O say so, and so be. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Maria and Clowne.

Mar. Noy, I prethee put on this gown, & this beard, make him beleeue thou art sir Topas the Curate, doe it quickly. Ile call sir Toby the whilst.

Clo. Well, Ile put it on, and I will dissemble my selfe in't, and I would I were the first that euer dissembled in such in such a gowne. I am not tall enough to become the function well, nor leane enough to bee thought a good Student: but to be said an honest man and a good house keeper goes so sairely, as to say, a carefull man, & a great scholler. The Competitors enter.

Enter Toby.

To. Ioue blesse thee M. Parson.

Cle. Bonos dies sir Toby: for as the old hermit of Prage that never saw pen and inke, very wittily said to a Niece of King Gorboduck, that that is, is: so I being M. Parson, am M. Parson; for what is that, but that? and is, but is?

To. To him sir Topas.

Clow. What hoa, I say, Peace in this prison.

To. The knaue counterfeits well: a good knaue.

Malvolio within.

Mal. Who cals there?

Cle. Sir Topas the Curate, who comes to visit Malvolio the Lunatiche.

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas, good sir Topas goe to my Ladie.

Cle. Out hyperbolicall fiend, how vexest thou this man? Talkest thou nothing but of Ladies?

Tob. Well said M. Parson.

Mal. Sir Topas, never was man thus wronged, good sir Topas do not thinke I am mad: they have layde mee heere in hideous darknesse.

Cle. Fye, thou dishonest sathan: I call thee by the most modest termes, for I am one of those gentle ones, that will vse the diuell himselfe with courtesie: sayst thou that house is darke?

Mal. As hell sir Topas.

Cle. Why it hath bay Windowes transparant as barricadoes, and the cleere stores toward the South north, are as lustrous as Ebony: and yet complainest thou of obstruction?

Mal. I am not mad sir Topas, I say to you this house is darke.

Cle. Madman thou errest: I say there is no darknesse but ignorance, in which thou art more puzel'd then the Egyptians in their fogge.

Mal. I say this house is as darke as Ignorance, though Ignorance were as darke as hell; and I say there was never man thus abus'd, I am no more madde then you are, make the triall of it in any constant question.

Cle. What is the opinion of Pythagoras concerning Wilde-fowle?

Mal. That the soule of our grandam, might happily inhabite a bird.

Cle. What thinkst thou of his opinion?

Mal. I thinke nobly of the soule, and no way approue his opinion.

Cle. Fare thee well: remaine thou still in darknesse, thou shalt hold th'opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wits, and feare to kill a Woodcocke, least thou dispossesse the soule of thy grandam. Fare thee well.

Mal. Sir Topas, sir Topas.

Tob. My most exquisite sir Topas.

Cle. Nay I am for all waters.

Mar. Thou might'st have done this without thy beard and gowne, he sees thee not.

To. To him in thine owne voyce, and bring me word how thou findst him: I would we were well ridde of this knauery. If he may bee conueniently deliuer'd, I would he were, for I am now so farre in offence with my Niece, that I cannot pursue with any safety this sport the vppe-shot. Come by and by to my Chamber. Exit

Clo. Hey Robin, iolly Robin, tell me how thy Lady does.

Mal. Foole.

Clo. My Lady is vnkind, pardie.

Mal. Foole.

Clo. Alas why is she so?

Mal. Foole, I say.

Clo. She loues another. Who calles, ha?

Mal. Good foole, as euer thou wilt deserue well at my hand, helpe me to a Candle, and pen, inke, and paper: as I am a Gentleman, I will liue to bee thankefull to thee for't.

Clo. M. Malvolio?

Mal. I good Foole.

Clo. Alas sir, how fell you besides your five wits?

Mal. Foole, there was never man so notoriously abus'd: I am as well in my wits (foole) as thou art.

Clo. But as well: then you are mad indeede, if you be no better in your wits then a foole.

Mal. They have heere propertied me: keepe mee in darknesse, send Ministers to me, Asses, and do all they can to face me out of my wits.

Clo. Aduise you what you say: the Minister is heere. Malvolio, Malvolio, thy wittes the heauens restore: endeauour thy selfe to sleepe, and leaue thy vaine bibble babble

Mal. Sir Topas

Clo. Maintaine no words with him good fellow. Who I sir, not I sir. God buy you good sir Topas: Marry Amen. I will sir, I will.

Mal. Foole, foole, foole I say.

Clo. Alas sir be patient. What say you sir, I am shent for speaking to you.

Mal. Good foole, helpe me to some light, and some paper, I tell thee I am as well in my wittes, as any man in Illyria.

Clo. Well-a-day, that you were sir.

Mal. By this hand I am: good foole, some inke, paper, and light: and conuey what I will set downe to my Lady: it shall aduantage thee more, then ever the bearing of Letter did.

Clo. I will help you too't. But tel me true, are you not mad indeed, or do you but counterfeit.

Mal. Believe me I am not. I tell thee true.

Clo. Nay, I'le nere believe a madman till I see his brains I will fetch you light, and paper, and inke.

Mal. Foole, I'le requite it in the highest degree: I prethee be gone.

Clo. I am gone sir, and anon sir,
I'le be with you againe:
In a trice, like to the old vice,
your neede to sustaine.
Who with dagger of lath, in his rage and his wrath,
cries ah ha, to the diuell:
Like a mad lad, pare thy nayles dad,
Adieu good man diuell. Exit

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Sebastian.

This is the ayre, that is the glorious Sunne,
This pearle she gaue me, I do feel't, and see't,
And though tis wonder that enwraps me thus,

Yet

Yet 'tis not madnesse. Where's Anthonio then,
I could not finde him at the Elephant,
Yet there he was, and there I found this credite,
That he did range the towne to seeke me out,
His counsell now might do me golden seruice,
For though my soule disputes well with my sense,
That this may be some error, but no madnesse,
Yet doth this accident and flood of Fortune,
So farre exceed all instance, all discourse,
That I am readie to distrust mine eyes,
And wrangle with my reason that perswades me
To any other trust, but that I am mad,
Or che the Ladies mad; yet if twere so;
She could not sway her house, command her followers,
Take, and giue backe affayres, and their dispatch,
With such a smooth, discreet, and stable bearing
As I perceiue she do's : there's something in't
That is deceiueable. But heere the Lady comes.

Enter Olivia, and Priest.

Ol. Blame not this haste of mine : if you meane well
Now go with me, and with this holy man
Into the Chantry by : there before him,
And vnderneath that consecrated roofe,
Plight me the full assurance of your faith,
That my most reuerend, and too doubtfull soule
May liue at peace. He shall conceale it
Whiles you are willing it shall come to note,
What time we will our celebration keepe
According to my birth, what do you say?

Seb. I'le follow this good man, and go with you,
And hauing sworne truth, ever will be true.

Ol. Then lead the way good father, & heauens so shine,
That they may fairly note this act of mine. Exeunt.

Finis Actus Quarti.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Clowne and Fabian.

Fab. Now as thou lou'st me, let me see his Letter.

Clo. Good M. Fabian, grant me another request.

Fab. Any thing.

Clo. Do not desire to see this Letter.

Fab. This is to giue a dogge, and in recompence desire my dogge againe.

Enter Duke, Viola, Curio, and Lords.

Duke Belong you to the Lady Olivia, friends?

Clo. I sir, we are some of her trappings.

Duke. I know thee well. how doest thou my good Fellow?

Clo Truely sir, the better for my foes, and the worse for my friends.

Du. Iust the contrary. the better for thy friends.

Clo. No sir, the worse.

Du. How can that be?

Clo. Marry sir, they praise me, and make an asse of me now my foes tell me plainly, I am an Asse : so that by my foes sir, I profit in the knowledge of my selfe, and by my friends I am abused. so that conclusions to be as kisses, if your foure negatiues make your two affirmatiues, why then the worse for my friends, and the better for my foes.

Du. Why this is excellent.

Clo. By my troth sir, no : though it please you to be one of my friends.

Du. Thou shalt not be the worse for me, there's gold.

Clo. But that it would be double dealing sir, I would you could make it another.

Du. O you giue me ill counsell,

Clo. Put your grace in your pocket sir, for this once, and let your flesh and blood obey it.

Du. Well, I will be so much a sinner to be a double dealer : there's another.

Clo. Primo, secundo, tertio, is a good play, and the olde saying is, the third payes for all : the triplex sir, is a good tripling measure, or the belles of S. Bennet sir, may put you in minde, one, two, three.

Du. You can foole no more money out of me at this throw: if you will let your Lady know I am here to speak with her, and bring her along with you, it may awake my bounty further.

Clo. Marry sir, lullaby to your bountie till I come agen. I go sir, but I would not haue you to thinke, that my desire of hauing is the sinne of couetousnesse : but as you say sir, let your bounty take a nappe, I will awake it anon Exit

Enter Anthonio and Officers.

Vio Here comes the man sir, that did rescue mee.

Du. That face of his I do remember well,
yet when I saw it last, it was besmear'd
As blacke as Vulcan, in the smoake of warre :
A bawbling Vessell was he Captaine of,
For shallow draught and bulke vnprizable,
With which such scatheful grapple did he make,
With the most noble bottome of our Fleete,
That very enuy, and the tongue of loffe
Cride fame and honor on him: What's the matter?

1 Offi. Orsino, this is that Anthonio
That tooke the Phoenix, and her fraught from Candy,
And this is he that did the Tyger board,
When your yong Nephew Titus lost his legge :
Heere in the streets, desperate of shame and state,
In priuate brabble did we apprehend him.

Vio. He did me kindnesse sir, drew on my side,
But in conclusion put strange speech vpon me,
I know not what 'twas, but distraction.

Du. Notable Pyrate, thou salt-water Theeue,
What foolish boldnesse brought thee to their mercies,
Whom thou in termes so bloudie, and so deere
Hast made thine enemies?

Ant. Orsino. Noble sir,
Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you giue mee :
Anthonio never yet was Theefe, or Pyrate,
Though I confesse, on base and ground enough
Orsino's enemie. A wrecheast drew me hither :
That most ingratefull boy there by your side,
From the rude seas enrag'd and foamy mouth
Did I redeeme : a wracke past hope he was :
His life I gaue him, and did thereto adde
My loue without retention, or restraint,
All his in dedication. For his sake,
Did I expose my selfe (pure for his loue)
Into the danger of this aduerse Towne,
Drew to defend him, when he was beset :
Where being apprehended, his false cuening
(Not meaning to partake with me in danger)
Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,

And

And grew a twentie yeares removed thing
While one would winke: denide me mine owne purse,
Which I had recommended to his vse,
Not halfe an houre before.
. How can this be?
Du. When came he to this Towne?
Ant. To day my Lord: and for three months before,
No interim, not a minutes vacancie,
Both day and night did we keepe companie.

Enter Olivia and attendants.

Du. Heere comes the Countesse, now heaven walkes on earth:
But for thee fellow, fellow thy words are madnesse,
Three months this youth hath tended vpon mee,
But more of that anon. Take him aside.
Ol. What would my Lord, but that he may not haue,
Wherein Olivia may seeme seruiceable?
Cesario, you do not keepe promise with me.
Vio. Madam.
Du. Gracious Olivia.
Ol. What do you say Cesario? Good my Lord.
Vio. My Lord would speake my duties hushes me.
Ol. If it be aught to the old tune my Lord,
It is as fat and fulsome to mine eare
As howling after Musicke.
Du. Still so cruell?
Ol. Still so constant Lord.
Du. What to perseuerance? you cruell Ladie
To whose ingrate, and vnauspicious Aires
My soule the faithfull'st offrings haue breath'd out
That ere deuotion tender'd. What shall I do?
Ol Even what it please my Lord, that shal becom him
Du. Why should I not, (had I the heart to do it)
Like to th'Egyptian theefe, at point of death
Kill what I loue: (a sauage iealousie,
That sometime sauours nobly) but heere mee this:
Since you to non-regardance cast my faith,
And that I partly know the instrument
That screwes me from my true place in your fauour:
Liue you the Marble-brested Tirant still.
But this your Minion, whom I know you loue,
And whom, by heaven I sweare, I tender dearely,
Him will I tear out of that cruell eye,
Where he sits crowned in his masters spight
Come boy with me, my thoughts are ripe in mischiefe:
Ile sacrifice the Lambe that I do loue,
To spight a Ravens heart within a Doue.
Vio. And I most iocund, apt, and willinghe,
To do you rest, a thousand deaths would dye.
Ol. Where goes Cesario?
Vio. After him I loue,
More than I loue these eyes, more then my life,
More by all mores, than ere I shall loue wife.
If I do feigne, you witnesses aboue
Punish my life, for tainting of my loue.
Ol. Aye me detested, how am I beguil'd?
Vio. Who does beguile you? who does do you wrong?
Ol. Hast thou forgot thy selfe: Is it so long?
Call forth the holy Bacher.
Du. Come, away.
Ol. Whither my Lord? Cesario, Husband, stay.
Du. Husband?
Ol. I Husband. Can he that deny?.
Du. Her husband, sirrah?
Vio. No my Lord, not I.
Ol. Alas, it is the basenesse of thy feare,
That makes thee strangle thy propriety:
Feare not Cesario, take thy fortunes vp
Be that thou know'st thou art, and then thou art
As great as that thou fear'st.

Enter Priest.

O welcome Father:
Father, I charge thee by thy reverence
Heere to vnfold, though lately we intended
To keepe in darkenesse, what occasion now
Reveales before 'tis ripe: what thou dost know
Hath newly past, between this youth, and me.
Priest. A Contract of eternall bond of loue,
Confirm'd by mutuall ioynder of your hands,
Attested by the holy close of lippes,
Strengthned by enterchangement of your rings,
And all the Ceremonie of this compact
Seal'd in my function, by my testimony:
Since when, my watch hath told me, toward my graue
I haue trauell'd but two houres.
Du. O thou dissembling Cub: what wilt thou be
When time hath sow'd a grizzle on thy case?
Or will not else thy craft so quickely grow,
That thine owne trip shall be thine overthrow:
Farewell, and take her, but direct thy feete,
Where thou, and I (henceforth) may neuer meet.
Vio. My Lord, I do protest.
Ol. O do not sweare,
Hold little faith, though thou hast too much feare.

Enter Sir Andrew.

And. For the loue of God a Surgeon, send one presently to sir Toby.
Ol. What's the matter?
And. H'as broke my head a-crosse, and has given Sir Toby a bloody Coxcombe too: for the loue of God your help, I had rather then forty pound I were at home.
Ol. Who has done this sir Andrew?
And. The Countes Gentleman, one Cesario: we tooke him for a Coward, but he's the verie diuell incardinate.
Du. My Gentleman Cesario?
And. Odd's lifelings heere he is: you broke my head for nothing, and that that I did, I was set on to do't by sir Toby
Vio Why do you speake to me, I never hurt you: you drew your sword vpon me without cause, But I bespake you faire, and hurt you not.

Enter Toby and Clowne.

And. If a bloody coxcombe be a hurt, you have hurt me: I thinke you set nothing by a bloody Coxecombe. Heere comes sir Toby halting, you shall heare more: but if he had not beene in drinke, hee would have tickel'd you other gates then he did
Du. How now Gentleman? how is't with you?
To. That's all one, has hurt me, and there's th end on t: Sot, didst see Dicke Surgeon, sot?
Clo. O he's drunke sir Toby an houre agone: his eyes were set at eight i'th morning.
To. Then he's a Rogue, and a passy measures pauyn: I hate a drunken rogue.
Ol. Away with him? Who hath made this banoche with them?
And Ile helpe you sir Toby, because we'll be dresst together.
To. Will you helpe an Asse-head, and a coxcombe, & a knaue: a thin face'd knaue, a gull?

Ol. Get him to bed, and let his hurt be look'd too.

Enter Sebastian.

Seb. I am sorry Madam I haue hurt your kinsman:
But had it beene the brother of my blood,
I must haue done no lesse with wit and safety.
You throw a strange regard vpon me, and by that
I do perceiue it hath offended you.
Pardon me (sweet one) even for the vowes
We made each other, but so late ago.

Du. One face, one voice, one habit, and two persons,
A natural Perspective, that is, and is not.

Seb. Antonio: O my deere Antonio,
How haue the houres rack'd, and tortur'd me,
Since I haue lost thee?

Ant. Sebastian are you?

Seb. Fear'st thou that Antonio?

Ant. How haue you made diuision of your selfe,
An apple cleft in two, is not more twin
Then these two creatures. Which is Sebastian?

Ol. Most wonderfull.

Seb. Do I stand there? I never had a brother:
Nor can there be that Deity in my nature
Of here, and euery where. I had a sister,
Whom the blinde waues and surges haue deuour'd.
Of charity, what kinne are you to me?
What Countreyman? What name? What Parentage?

Vio. Of Messaline: Sebastian was my Father,
Such a Sebastian was my brother too:
So went he suited to his watery tombe:
If spirits can assume both forme and suite,
You come to fright vs.

Seb. A spirit I am indeed,
But am in that dimension grossly clad,
Which from the wombe I did participate.
Were you a woman, as the rest goes even,
I should my teares let fall vpon your cheeke,
And say, thrice welcome drowned Viola.

Vio. My father had a moale vpon his brow.

Seb. And so had mine.

Vio. And dide that day when Viola from her birth
Had numbred thirteene yeares.

Seb. O that record is lively in my soule,
He finished indeed his mortall acte
That day that made my sister thirteene yeares.

Vio. If nothing lets to make vs happie both,
But this my masculine vsurp'd attyre:
Do not embrace me, till each circumstance,
Of place, time, fortune, do co-here and iumpe
That I am Viola, which to confirme,
I'le bring you to a Captaine in this Towne,
Where lye my maiden weeds: by whose gentle helpe,
I was preserv'd to serue this Noble Count:
All the occurrence of my fortune since
Hath beene betweene this Lady, and this Lord.

Seb. So comes it Lady, you haue beene mistooke:
But Nature to her bias drew in that.
You would haue bin contracted to a Maid,
Nor are you therein (by my life) deceiu'd,
You are betroth'd both to a maid and man.

Du. Be not amaz'd right noble is his blood:
If this be so, as yet the glasse seemes true,
I shall haue share in this most happy wracke.
Boy, thou hast sworne to me a thousand times,
Thou never shouldst loue woman like to me.

Vio. And all those sayings, will I euer sweare,
And all those swearings keepe as true in soule,
As doth that Orbed Continent, the fire,
That seuers day from night.

Du. Giue me thy hand,
And let me see thee in thy womans weedes.

Vio. The Captaine that did bring me first on shore
Hath my Maides garments: he vpon some Action
Is now in durance, at Malueolio's suite,
A Gentleman, and follower of my Ladies.

Ol. He shall inlarge him: fetch Malueolio hither,
And yet alas, now I remember me,
They say poore Gentleman, he's much distract.

Enter Clowne with a Letter, and Fabian.

A most extracting frensie of mine owne
From my remembrance, clearly banishe his.
How does he sirrah?

Cl. Truely Madam, he holds Belzebub at the staues end as well as a man in his case may do; has here writ a letter to you, I should haue giuen't you to day morning. But as a madmans Epistles are no Gospels, so it stiddes not much when they are deliuer'd.

Ol. Open't, and read it.

Clo. Looke then to be well edified, when the Foole deliuers the Madman. By the Lord Madam.

Ol. How now, art thou mad?

Clo. No Madam, I do but reade madnesse: and your Ladyship will haue it as it ought to bee, you must allow Vox.

Ol. Prethee reade i'thy right wits.

Clo. So I do Madona: but to reade his right wits, is to reade thus: therefore, perpend my Princesse, and giue eare.

Ol. Read it you, sirrah.

Fab. Reads. By the Lord Madam, you wrong me, and the world shall know it: Though you haue put me into darknesse, and giuen your drunken Cosine rule ouer me, yet haue I the benefit of my sensesas well as your Ladie-ship. I haue your owne letter, that induced mee to the semblance I put on; with the which I doubt not, but to do my selfe much right, or you much shame: thinke on me as you please. I leaue my duty a little vnthought of,
and speake out of my iniury The madly vs'd Malueolio.

Ol. Did he write this?

Clo. I Madame.

Du. This seuours not much of distraction.

Ol. See him deliuer'd Fabian, bring him hither:
My Lord, so please you, these things further thought on,
To thinke me as well a sister, as a wife,
One day shall crowne th'alliance on't, so please you,
Heere at my house, and at my proper cost.

Du. Madam, I am most apt t'embrace your offer:
Your Master quits you: and for your seruice done him,
So much against the mettle of your sex,
So farre beneath your soft and tender breeding,
And since you call'd me Master, for so long:
Heere is my hand, you shall from this time bee
your Masters Mistris

Ol. A sister, you are she.

Enter Malueolio.

Du. Is this the Madman?

Ol. I my Lord, this same: How now Malueolio?

Mal. Madam, you haue done me wrong,
Notorious wrong.

Ol. Haue I Malueolio? No.

Mal. Lady you haue, pray you peruse that Letter.
You must not now denie it is your hand,
Write from it if you can, in hand, or phrase,

Or say, tis not your seale, nor your intention:
You can say none of this. Well, grant it then,
And tell me in the modestie of honor,
Why you haue giuen me such clear lights of fauour,
Bad me come smiling, and cross-garter'd so you,
To put on yellow stockings, and to frowne
Vpon sir Toby, and the lighter people:
And acting this in an obedient hope,
Why haue you suffer'd me to be imprison'd,
Kept in a darke house, visited by the Priest,
And made the most notorious geeke and gull
That ere inuention plaid on? Tell me why?
Ol. Alas Maluolio, this is not my writing,
Though I confesse much like the Charracter
But out of question, tis Maria hand.
And now I do bethinke me, it was shee
First told me thou wast mad; then cam'st in smiling,
And in such formes, which heere were presuppos'd
Vpon thee in the Letter: prethee be content,
This practice hath most shrewdly past vpon thee:
But when we know the grounds, and authors of it,
Thou shalt be both the Plaintiffe and the Iudge
Of thine owne cause.
Fab. Good Madam heare me speake,
And let no quarrell, nor no braule to come,
Taint the condition of this present houre,
Which I haue wondred at. In hope it shall not,
Most freely I confesse my selfe, and Toby
Set this deuice against Maluolio heere,
Vpon some stubborne and vncourteous parts
We had conceiu'd against him. Maria writ
The Letter, at sir Tobyes great importance,
In recompence whereof, he hath married her:
How with a sportfull malice it was follow'd,
May rather placke on laughter then reuenge,
If that the iniuries be iustly weigh'd,
That haue on both sides past
Ol. Alas poore Foole, how haue they baffel'd thee?
Clo. Why some are borne great, some atchieue greatnesse, and some haue greatnesse throwne vpon them. I was one sir, in this Enterlude, one sir Topas sir, but that's all one: By the Lord Foole, I am not mad; but do you remember, Madam, why laugh you at such a barren rascall, and you smile not he's gag'd: and thus the whirlegigge of time, brings in his reuenges.
Mal. Ile be reuenge'd on the whole packe of you?
Ol. He hath bene most notoriously abus'd.
Du. Pursue him, and entreate him to a peace:
He hath not told vs of the Captaine yet,
When that is knowne, and golden time conuents
A solemne Combination shall be made
Of our deere soules. Meane time sweet sister,
We will not part from hence. Cesario come
(For so you shall be while you are a man:)
But when in other habites you are seene,
Orsino's Mistris, and his fancies Queene. Exeunt

Clowne sings.

When that I was and a little tine boy,
with hey, ho, the wonde and the raine:
A foolish thing was but a toy,
for the raine it raineth every day.

But when I came to mans estate,
with hey ho, &c.
Gainst Knaues and Theeues men shut their gate,
for the raine, &c.

But when I came alas to wiue,
with hey ho, &c.
By swaggering could I never thriue,
for the raine, &c.

But when I came vnto my beds,
with hey ho, &c
With toppers still had drunken heads,
for the raine, &c.

A great while ago the world begun,
hey ho, &c.
But that's all one, our Play is done,
and we'l strine to please you every day.

FINIS.

The Winters Tale.

Actus Primus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Camillo and Archidamus.

Arch. If you shall chance (Camillo) to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my seruices are now on-foot, you shall see (as I haue said) great difference betwixt our Bohemia, and your Sicilia.

Cam. I thinke, this comming Summer, the King of Sicilia meanes to pay Bohemia the Visitation, which hee iustly owes him.

Arch. Wherein our Entertainment shall shame vs: we will be iustified in our Loues: for indeed---

Cam. Beseech you---

Arch. Verely I speake it in the freedome of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence--- in so rare--- I know not what to say--- We will giue you sleepie Drinkes, that your Senses (vn-intelligent of our insufficience) may, though they cannot praise vs, as little accuse vs.

Cam. You pay a great deale to dearre, for what's giuen freely.

Arch. Beleeue me, I speake as my vnderstanding instructs me, and as mine honestie puts it to vtterance.

Cam. Sicilia cannot shew himselfe owne-kind to Bohemia: They were trayn'd together in their Child-hoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but braunch now. Since their more mature Dignities, and Royall Necessities, made seperation of their Societie, their Encounters (though not Personall) hath been Royally attorneyed with inter-change of Gifts, Letters, loaing Embassies, that they haue seem'd to be together, though absent: shooke hands, as ouer a Vast; and embrac'd as it were from the ends of opposed Winds. The Heauens continue their Loues.

Arch. I thinke there is not in the World, either Malice or Matter, to alter it. You haue an vnspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamilius: it is a Gentleman of the greatest Promise, that euer came into my Note.

Cam. I very well agree with you, in the hopes of him: it is a gallant Child; one, that (indeed Physicks the Subiect, makes old hearts fresh: they that went on Crutches ere he was borne desire yet their life, to see him a Man.

Arch. Would they else be content to die?

Cam. Yes; if there were no other excuse, why they should desire to liue.

Arch. If the King had no Sonne, they would desire to liue on Crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Hermione, Mamilius, Polixenes, Camillo.

Pol. Nine Changes of the Watry-Starre hath been The Shepheards Note, since we haue left our Throne Without a Burthen: Time as long againe Would be fill'd vp (my Brother) with our Thanks, And yet we should, for perpetuitie, Goe hence in debt: And therefore, like a Cypher (Yet standing in rich place) I multiply With one we thanke you, many thousands moe, That go before it.

Leo. Stay your Thanks a while, And pay them when you part.

Pol. Sir, that's to morrow; I am question'd by my feares, of what may chance, Or breed vpon our absence, that may blow No sneaping Winds at home, to make vs say, This is put forth too truly: besides, I haue stay'd To tyre your Royaltie.

Leo. We are tougher (Brother) Then you can put vs to't.

Pol. No longer stay.

Leo. One Seue'night longer.

Pol. Very sooth, to morrow.

Leo. We'le part the time betweene's thee and that I'le no gaine-saying.

Pol. Presse me not ('beseech you) so: There is no Tongue that moues; none, none i'th' World So soone as yours could win me: so it should now, Were there necessitie in your request, although 'Twere needfull I denyd it. My Affaires Doe euen drag me home-ward: which to hinder, Were (in your Loue) a Whip to me; my stay, To you a Charge, and Trouble: to saue both, Farewell (our Brother.)

Leo. Tongue-ty'd our Queene? speake you.

Her. I had thought (Sir) to haue held my peace, vntill You had drawne Oathes from him, not to stay: you (Sir) Charge him too coldly. Tell him, you are sure All in Bohemia's well: this satisfaction, The by-gone-day proclaym'd, say this to him, He's beat from his best ward.

Leo. Well said, Hermione.

Her. To tell, he longs to see his Sonne, were strongs But let him say so then, and let him goe; But let him sweare so, and he shall not stay, We'l thwack him hence with Distaffes. Yet of your Royall presence, I'le aduenture The bourow of a Weeke. When at Bohemia You take my Lord, I'le giue him my Commission, To let him there a Moneth, behind the Gest Prefix'd for's partings: yet (good-deed) Leontes, I loue thee not a Iarre o'th' Clock, behind

What

What Lady she her Lord. You'le stay?
Pol. No, Madame.
Her. Nay, but you will?
Pol. I may not verely.
Her. Verely?
You put me off with limber Vowes: but I,
Though you would seek t'vnsphere the Stars with Oaths,
Should yet say, Sir, no going. Verely
You shall not goe; a Ladyes Verely is
As potent as a Lords. Will you goe yet?
Force me to keepe you as a Prisoner,
Not like a Guest: so you shall pay your Fees
When you depart, and save your Thanks. How say you?
My Prisoner? or my Guest? by your dread Verely,
One of them you shall be.
Pol. Your Guest then, Madame:
To be your Prisoner, should import offending;
Which is for me, lesse easie to commit,
Then you to punish.
Her. Not your Gaoler then,
But your kind Hostesse. Come, I'le question you
Of my Lords Tricks, and yours, when you were Boyes:
You were pretty Lordings then?
Pol. We were (fair Queene)
Two Lads, that thought there was no more behind,
But such a day to morrow, as to day,
And to be Boy eternall.
Her. Was not my Lord
The veryer Wag o'th' two?
Pol. We were as twyn'd Lambs, that did frisk i'th' Sun,
And bleat the one at th' other: what we chang'd,
Was Innocence, for Innocence: we knew not
The Doctrine of ill-doing, nor dream'd
That any did: Had we pursu'd that life,
And our weake Spirits ne're been higher rear'd
With stronger blood, we should have answer'd Heaven
Boldly, not guilty; the Imposition clear'd,
Hereditarie ours.
Her. By this we gather
You have tript since.
Pol. O my most sacred Lady,
Temptations have since then been borne to'vs for
In those vnfledg'd dayes, was my Wife a Girle;
Your precious selfe had then not crost's the eyes
Of my young Play-fellow
Her. Grace to boot
Of this make no conclusion, least you say
Your Queene and I are Deuils. yet go on,
Th'offences we have made you doe, we'le answere,
If you first sinn'd with vs: and that with vs
You did continue fault; and that you slipt not
With any, but with vs
Leo. Is he won yet?
Her. He'le stay (my Lord.)
Leo. At my request he would not
Hermione (my dearest) thou never spoak'st
To better purpose.
Her. Never?
Leo. Never, but once.
Her What? have I twice said well? when was't before?
I prethee tell me. cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: One good deed, dying tongueleſſe,
Slaughters a thousand, waiting vpon that.
Our praises are our Wages. You may ride's
With one soft Kisse a thousand Furlonges, are
With Spur we heat an Acre. But to th' Goale:
My last good deed, was to entreat his stay.
What was my first? it has an elder Sister,
Or I mistake you. O, would her Name were Grace.
But once before I spoke to th' purpose? when?
Nay, let me have't: I long.
Leo. Why, that was when
Three crabbed Moneths had sour'd themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white Hand
A clap thy selfe, my Loue; then didst thou vtter,
I am yours for ever.
Her. 'Tis Grace indeed.
Why lo-you now; I have spoke to th' purpose twice.
The one, for ever earn'd a Royall Husband;
Th'other, for some while a Friend.
Leo. Too hot, too hot?
To mingle friendship farre, is mingling bloods.
I have Tremor Cordis on me: my heart dances,
But not for joy; not joy. This Entertainment
May a free face put on: derive a Liberty
From Heartinesse, from Bountie, fertile Bosome,
And well become the Agent: 't may; I grant:
But to be padling Palmes, and pinching Fingers,
As now they are, and making preacht Smiles
As in a Looking-Glasse; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The Mort o'th Deere. oh, that is entertainment
My Bosome likes not, nor my Browes. Mamillius,
Art thou my Boy?
Mam. I, my good Lord.
Leo. I'fecks:
Why that's my Bawcock: what, has't smutch'd thy Nose?
They say it is a Copy out of mine. Come Captaine,
We must be neat; not neat, but cleanly Captaine:
And yet the Steere, the Heyfer, and the Calfe,
Are all call'd Neat. Still Virgin-walking
Vpon his Palme? How now (you wanton Calfe)
Art thou my Calfe?
Mam. Yes, if you will (my Lord.)
Leo Thou wert't a rough pash, & the shoots that I have
To be full, like me: yet they say we are Almost as like as Eggs; Women say so,
(That will say any thing.) But were they false
As o're-dy'd Blacks, as Wind, as Waters; false
As Dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bome 'twixt his and mine; yet were it true,
To say this Boy were like me. Come (Sir Page)
Looke on me with your Welkin eye: sweet Villaine,
Most dear'st, my Collop: Can thy Dam, may't be Affection? thy Intention stabs the Center.
Thou do'st make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with Dreames; (how can this be?)
With what's vnreall: thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then 'tis very credent,
Thou may'st co-joyne with something, and thou do'st,
(And that beyond Commission) and I find it,
(And that to the infection of my Brames,
And hardning of my Browes.)
Pol. What means Sicilia?
Her. He something seemes vnsettled.
Pol How? my Lord?
Leo. What cheere? how is't with you, best Brother?
Her. You look as if you held a Brow of much distraction:
Are you mou'd (my Lord?)
Leo. No, in good earnest.
How sometimes Nature will betray its folly?
Its tenderness? and make its selfe a Pastime
To harder bolnesses? Looking on the Lynes

Of my Boyes face, me thought I did recoyne
Twentie three yeares, and saw my selfe vn-breech'd,
In my greene Velvet Coat; my Dagger muzzled,
Least it should bite its Mother, and so prove
(As Ornaments oft do's) too dangerous:
How like (me thought) I then was to this Kernell,
This Squoth, this Gentleman. Mine best of Friend,
Will you take Eggs for Money?

Mem. No (my Lord) I'le fight.

Leo. You will: why happy man be's dole. My Brother
Are you so fond of your young Prince, as we
Doe seeme to be of ours?

Pol. If at home (Sir)
He's all my Exercise, my Mirth, my Matter;
Now my (worne Friend, and then mine Enemy;
My Paradise, my Souldier: Statesman: all:
He makes a Julyes day, short as December,
And with his varying childnesse, cures in me
Thoughts, that would thick my blood.

Leo. So stands this Square
Offe'd with me: We two will walke (my Lord)
And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione,
How thou lou'st us, shew in our Brothers welcome;
Let what is deare in Sicily, be cheape:
Next to thy selfe, and my young Rouen, he's Apparent to my heart.

Her. If you would seeke us,
We are yours i'th'Garden: shall's attend you there?

Leo. To your owne bents dispose you: you'le be found,
Be you beneath the Sky: I am angling now,
(Though you perceive me not how I giue Lyne)
Goe too, goe too
How the hobbs vp the Nobe the Bull to him?
And arraies her with the boldnesse of a Wife
To her allowing Husband. Gone already,
Inch-thick, knee-deep, ore head and eares a fork'd one.
Goe play (Boy) play: thy Mother playes, and I
Play too; but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue
Will hisse me to my Grave: Contempt and Clamor
Will be my Knell. Goe play (Boy) play, there have been (Or I am much deceiu'd) Cuckolds ere now,
And many a man there is (even at this present,
Now, while I speake this) holds his Wife by th'Arme,
That little thinkes she has been sluy'd in's absence,
And his Pond fish'd by his next Neighbor (by Sir Smith, his Neighbor:) nay, there's comfort in't,
Whiles other men have Gates, and those Gates open'd
(As mine) against their will. Should all despaire
That have revolted Wives, the tenth of Mankind
Would hang themselves. Physick for't, there's none:
It is a bawdy Planet, that will strike
Where 'tis predominant; and 'tis powerfull: think it:
From East, West, North, and South, be it concluded,
No Barricade for a Belly. Know't,
It will let in and out the Enemy,
With bag and baggage: many thousand on's
Have the Disease, and feele't not. How now Boy?

Mam. I am like you say.

Leo. Why, that's some comfort.
What? Camillo there?

Cam. I, my good Lord.

Leo. Goe play (Mamillius) thou'rt an honest man:
Camillo, this great Sir will yet stay longer.

Cam. You had much ado to make his Anchor hold,
When you cast out, it still came home.

Leo. Didst note it?

Cam. He would not stay at your Petitions, made
His Business more material.

Leo. Didst perceiue it?
They're here with me already, whispering, rounding:
Sicilia is a so-forth: 'tis some gone,
When I shall gest it left. How can't (Camillo)
That he did stay?

Cam. At the good Queenes entreatie.

Leo. At the Queenes be't: Good should be pertinent,
But so it is, is not. Was this taken
By any understanding Pate but thine?
For thy Conceit is soaking, will draw in
More than the common Blocks. Not noted, is't,
But of the finer Natures? by some Severalls
Of Head-peece extraordinarie? Lower Messes
Perchance are to this Business purblind? say.

Cam. Business, my Lord? I think most understand
Bohemia stayes here longer.

Leo. Ha?

Cam. Stayes here longer.

Leo. I, but why?

Cam. To satisfie your Highnesse, and the Entreaties
Of our most gracious Mistrisse.

Leo. Satisfie?
Th'entreaties of your Mistrisse? Satisfie?
Let that suffice. I haue trusted thee (Camillo)
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My Chamber-Councels, wherein (Priest-like) thou
Hast cleans'd my Bosome: I, from thee departed
Thy Penitent reform'd: but we have been
Deceiu'd in thy Integritie, deceiu'd
In that which seemes so.

Cam. Be it forbid (my Lord.)

Leo. To bide vpon't: thou art not honest: or
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a Coward,
Which boues honestie behind, restraining
From Course requir'd: or else thou must be counted
A Seruant, grafted in my serious Trust,
And therein negligent: or else a Foole,
That seest a Game play'd home, the rich Stake drawne,
And tak'st it all for iest.

Cam. My gracious Lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and feareful,
In every one of these, no man is free,
But that his negligence, his folly, feare,
Among the infinite doings of the World,
Sometime put forth in your affaires (my Lord.)
If ever I were wilfull-negligent,
It was my folly: if industriously
I play'd the Foole, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end: if ever fearefull
To doe a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out
Against the non-performance, 'twas a feare
Which oft infects the wisest: these (my Lord)
Are such allow'd Infirmities, that honestie
Is never free of. But beseech your Grace
Be plainer with me, let me know my Trespas
By its owne visage; if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.

Leo. Ha' not you seene Camillo?
(But that's past doubt: you haue, or your eye-glasse
Is thicker than a Cuckolds Horne) or heard?
(For to a Vision so apparent, Rumor
Cannot be mute) or thought? (for Cogitation
Resides not in that man, that do's not think?)

My Wife is slipperie? If thou wilt confesse,
Or else be impudently negatiue,
To haue not Eyes, not Ears, not Thoughts, then say
My Wife's a Holy-Horse, deserues a Name
As ranke as any Flax-Wench, that puts to
Before her troth-plight: say't, and stiffly't.

Cam. I would not be a Stander-by, to heare
My Soueraigne Mistresse clouded so, without
My present vengeance taken: 'shrew my heart,
You neuer spoke what did become you lesse
Then this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deepe as that, though true.

Leo. Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning Cheeke to Cheeke? is meeting Noses?
Kissing with inside Lip? stopping the Cursey
Of Laughter, with a sigh? (a Note infallible
Of breaking Honestie) horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? wishing Clocks more swift?
Houres, Minutes? Noone, Mid-night? and all Eyes
Blind with the Pin and Web, but theirs; theirs only,
That would vnseene be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why then the World, and all that's in't, is nothing,
The couering Skie is nothing, Bohemia nothing,
My Wife is nothing, not Nothing haue these Nothings,
If this be nothing.

Cam. Good my Lord, be cur'd
Of this diseas'd Opinion, and betimes,
For 'tis most dangerous.

Leo. Say it be, 'tis true.

Cam. No, no, my Lord.

Leo. It is: you lye, you lye:
I say thou lyest Camillo, and I hate thee,
Pronounce thee a grosse Lowt, a mindlesse Slaue,
Or else a houering Temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and euill,
Inclining to them both: were my Wiues Liuer
Infected (as her life) she would not liue
The running of one Glasse.

Cam. Who do's infect her?

Leo. Why be that weares her like her Medall, hanging
About his neck (Bohemia) who, if I
Had Seruants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine Honor, as their Profits,
(Their owne particular Thrifts) they would doe that
Which should vndoe more doing: I, and thou
His Cup-bearer, whom I from meaner forme
Haue Bench'd, and rear'd to Worship, who may'st see
Plainely, as Heauen sees Earth, and Earth sees Heauen,
How I am gall'd, might'st be-spice a Cup,
To giue mine Enemy a lasting Winke:
Which Draught to me, were cordiall.

Cam. Sir (my Lord)
I could doe this, and that with no rash Potion,
But with a lingring Dram, that should not worke
Maliciously, like Poyson. But I cannot Beleeue this Crack to be in my dread Mistresse
(So soueraignely being Honorable.)
I haue lou'd thee,

Leo. Make that thy question, and goe rot:
Do'st thinke I am so muddy, so vnsettled,
To appoint my selfe in this vexation?
Sully the purtie and whitenesse of my Sheetes
(Which to preserue, is Sleepe; which being spotted,
Is Goades, Thornes Nettles, Tayles of Waspes)
Giue scandall to the blood o'th' Prince, my Sonne,
(Who I doe thinke is mine, and loue as mine)
Without ripe mouing to't? Would I doe this?
Could men so blench?

Cam. I must beleeue you (Sir)
I doe, and will seech off Bohemia for't:
Prouided, that when hee's remoo'd, your Highnesse
Will take again your Queene, as yours at first,
Euen for your Sonnes sake, and thereby for sealing
The Iniurie of Tongues, in Courts and Kingdomes
Knowne, and ally'd to yours.

Leo. Thou do'st aduise me,
Euen so as I mine owne course haue set downe:
Ile giue no blemish to her Honor, none.

Cam. My Lord,
Goe then; and with a countenance as cleare
As Friendship weares at Feasts, keepe with Bohemia,
And with your Queene: I am his Cup-bearer,
If from me he haue wholesome Beuerdge,
Account me not your Seruant.

Leo. This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'st thine owne.

Cam. Ile do't my Lord.

Leo. I will seeme friendly, as thou hast aduis'd me. Exit

Cam. O miserable Lady. But for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poysoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't,
Is the obedience to a Master; one,
Who in Rebellion with himselfe, will haue
All that are his, so too. To doe this deed,
Promotion followes: If I could find example
Of thousand's that had struck anoynted Kings,
And flourish'd after, I'd not do't: But since
Nor Brasse, nor Stone, nor Parchment bearer not one,
Lest Villanie itselfe forswear't. I must
Forsake the Court: to do't, or no, is certaine
To me a breake-neck. Happy Starre raigne now,
Here comes Bohemia. Enter Polixenes.

Pol. This is strange: Me thinkes
My fauor here begins to warpe. Not speake?
Good day Camillo.

Cam. Hayle most Royall Sir.

Pol. What is the Newes i'th' Court?

Cam. None rare (my Lord.)

Pol. The King hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some Prouince, and a Region
Lou'd, as he loues himselfe: euen now I met him
With customarie complement, when he
Wafting his eyes to th' contrary, and falling
A Lippe of much contempt, speedes from me, and
So leaues me, to consider what is breeding,
That changes thus his Manners.

Cam. I dare not know (my Lord.)

Pol. How, dare not? doe not? doe you know, and dare not?
Be intelligent to me: 'tis thereabouts:
For to your selfe, what you doe know, you must,
And cannot say, you dare not. Good Camillo
Your chang'd complexions are to me a Mirror,
Which shewes me mine chang'd too: for I must be
A partie in this alteration, finding
My selfe thus alter'd with't.

Cam. There is a sicknesse
Which puts some of vs in distemper, but
I cannot name the Disease, and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well.

Pol. How caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the Basilisque.

I haue

I haue look'd on thousands, who haue sped the better
By my regard, but kill'd none so: Camillo,
As you are certainely a Gentleman, thereto
Clerke-like experienc'd, which no lesse adornes
Our Gentry, then our Parents Noble Names,
In whose successe we are gentle: I beseech you,
If you know ought which do's behoue my knowledge,
Thereof to be inform'd, imprison't not
In ignorant concealement.
Cam. I may not answere.
Pol. A Sicknesse caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answer'd. Do'st thou heare Camillo,
I conjure thee, by all the parts of man,
Which Honor do's acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this Suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidencie thou do'st ghesse of harme
Is creeping toward me; how farre off, how neere,
Which way to be preuented, if to be:
If not, how best to beare it.
Cam. Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charg'd in Honor, and by him
That I thinke Honorable: therefore marke my counsaile,
Which must be ea'n as swiftly followed, as
I meane to vtter it; or both your selfe, and me,
Cry lost, and so good night.
Pol. On, good Camillo.
Cam. I am appointed him to murther you.
Pol. By whom, Camillo?
Cam. By the King.
Pol. For what?
Cam. He thinkes, nay with all confidence he sweares,
As he had seen't, or beene an Instrument
To vice you to't, that you haue touch'd his Queene
Forbiddenly.
Pol. Oh then, my best blood turne
To an infected Gelly, and my Name
Be yok'd with his, that did betray the Best:
Turne then my freshest Reputation to
A fauour, that may strike the dullest Nosthrill
Where I arriue, and my approch be shun'd,
Nay hated too, worse then the great'st Infection
That ere was heard, or read
Cam. Sweare his thought ouer
By each particular Starre in Heauen, and
By all their Influences; you may as well
Forbid the Sea for to obey the Moone,
As (or by Oath) remoue, or (Counsaile) shake
The Fabrick of his Folly, whose foundation
Is pyl'd vpon his Faith, and will continue
The standing of his Body.
Pol. How should this grow?
Cam. I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Auoid what's growne, then question how 'tis borne.
If therefore you dare trust my honestie,
That lyes enclosed in this Trunke, which you
Shall beare along impawned, away to Night,
Your Followers I will whisper to the Business,
And will by twoes, and threes, at seuerall Posternes,
Clapse them o'th' Citie: For my selfe, I'le put
My fortunes to your seruice (which are here
By this discouerie lost.) Be not vncertaine,
For by the honor of my Parents, I
Haue vttred Truth: which if you seeke to proue,
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,
Than one condemned by the Kings owne mouth:
Thereon his Execution sweare.
Pol. I doe believe thee:
I saw his heart in's face. Giue me thy hand,
Be Pilot to me, and thy places shall Still neighbour mine. My Ships are ready, and
My people did expect my hence departure
Two dayes a goe. This Iealousie
Is for a precious Creature: as shee's rare,
Must it be great; and, as his Person's mightie,
Must it be violent: and, as he do's conceiue,
He is dishonor'd by a man, which euer
Profess'd to him: why his Reuenges must
In that be made more bitter. Feare ore-shades me:
Good Expedition be my friend, and comfort
The gracious Queene, part of his Theame; but nothing
Of his ill-ta'ne suspition. Come Camillo,
I will respect thee as a Father, if
Thou bear'st my life off, hence: Let vs auoid
Cam. It is in mine authoritie to command
The Keyes of all the Posternes: Please your Highnesse
To take the vrgent houre. Come Sir, away. Exeunt.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Hermione, Mamilius, Ladies: Leontes, Antigonus, Lords.

Her. Take the Boy to you: he so troubles me,
'Tis past enduring.
Lady. Come (my gracious Lord)
Shall I be your play-fellow?
Mam. No, I'le none of you.
Lady. Why (my sweet Lord?)
Mam. You'le kisse me hard, and speake to me, as if I were a Baby still. I loue you better.
2. Lady. And why so (my Lord?)
Mam. Not for because
Your Browes are blacker (yet black-browes they say
Become some Women best, so that there be not Too much haire there, but in a Semicircle,
Or a halfe-Moone, made with a Pen.)
2. Lady. Who taught 'this?
Mam. I learn'd it out of Womens faces: pray now,
What colour are your eye-browes?
Lady. Blew (my Lord.)
Mam. Nay, that's a mock: I haue seene a Ladies Nose
That ha's beene blew, but not her eye-browes
Lady. Harke ye,
The Queene (your Mother) rounds apace: we shall Present our seruices to a fine new Prince
One of these dayes, and then you'd wanton with vs,
If we would haue you.
2. Lady. She is spreed of late
Into a goodly Bulke (good time encounter her.)
Her. What wisdome stirs amongst you? Come Sir, now
I am for you againe: 'Pray you sit by vs,
And tell's a Tale.
Mam. Merry, or sad, shall't be?
Her. As merry as you will.
Mam. A sad Tale's best for Winter:
I haue one of Sprights, and Goblins.
Her. Let's haue that (good Sir.)
Come-on, sit downe, come-on, and doe your best,
To fright me with your Sprights: you're powerfull at it
Mam. There

Mam. There was a man.
Her. Nay, come sit downe: then on.
Mam. Dwelt by a Church-yard: I will tell it softly,
Yond Crickets shall not heare it.
Her. Come on then, and giu't me in mine eare.
Leon Was hee met there? his Traine? Camillo with him?
Lord. Behind the tuft of Pines I met them, never Saw I men scowre so on their way: I eyed them
Even to their Ships.
Leo. How blest am I
In my just Censure? in my true Opinion?
Alack, for lesser knowledge, how accurs'd,
In being so blest? There may be in the Cup
A Spider steep'd, and one may drinke; depart,
And yet partake no venome: (for his knowledge
Is not infected) but if one present
Th'abhor'd Ingredient to his eye, make knowne
How he hath drunke, he cracks his gorge, his sides
With violent Hefts: I haue drunke, and seene the Spider.
Camillo was his helpe in this, his Pander:
There is a Plot against my Life, my Crowne;
All's true that is mist rusted: that false Villaine,
Whom I employ'd, was pre-employ'd by him:
He has discouer'd my Designe, and I
Remaine a pinch'd Thing, yea, a very Trick
For them to play at will: how came the Posternes
So easily open?
Lord. By his great authority,
Which often hath no lesse prevail'd, than so,
On your command.
Leo. I know't too well.
Give me the Boy, I am glad you did not nurse him:
Though he do's beare some signes of me, yet you
Haue too much blood in him.
Her. What is this? Sports?
Leo. Beare the Boy hence, he shall not come about her;
Away with him, and let her sport her selfe
With that shee's big-with, for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.
Her. But I'd say he had not;
And I'le be sworne you would beleeue my saying,
How e're you leane to th'Nay-ward.
Leo. You (my Lords)
Looke on her, marke her well: be but about
To say she is a goodly Lady, and
The justice of your hearts will thereto adde
'Tis pitty shee's not honest: Honorable;
Praise her but for this her without-doore-Forme,
(Which on my faith deserues high speech) and straight
The Shrug, the Hum, or Ha, (these Petty-brands
That Calumnie doth vse: Oh, I am out,
That Mercy do's, for Calumnie will seare
Vertue it selfe) these Shrugs, these Hum's, and Ha's,
When you haue said shee's goodly, come between,
Ere you can say shee's honest: but be't known
(From him that has most cause to grieue it should be)
Shee's an Adultresse.
Her. Should a Villaine say so,
(The most replenish'd Villaine in the World)
He were as much more Villaine: you (my Lord)
Doe but mistake.
Leo. You haue mistooke (my Lady)
Polixenes for Leontes: O thou Thing,
(Which I'le not call a Creature of thy place,
Least Barbarisme (making me the precedent)
Should a like Language vse to all degrees,
And mannerly distinguishment leaue out,
Betwixt the Prince and Begger:) I haue said
Shee's an Adultresse, I haue said with whom:
More; shee's a Traytor, and Camillo is
A Federarie with her, and one that knowes
What she should shame to know her selfe,
But with her most vile Principall: that shee's
A Bed-swarver, even as bad as those
That Vulgars giue bold'st Titles; I, and priuy
To this their late escape.
Her. No (by my life)
Priuy to none of this: how will this grieue you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus haue publish'd me? Gentle my Lord,
You scarce can right me throughly, then, to say
You did mistake.
Leo. No: if I mistake
In those Foundations which I build vpon,
The Centre is not bigge enough to beare
A Schoole-Boyes Top. Away with her, to Prison:
He who shall speake for her, is a fauoured
But that he speakes.
Her. There's some ill Planet raigneth:
I must be patient, till the Heauens looke
With an aspect more fauorable. Good my Lords,
I am not prone to weeping (as our Sex
Commonly are) the want of which vaine dew
Perchance shall dry your pitties: but I haue
That honorable Griefe lodg'd here, which burnes
Worse than Teares drowne: beseech you all (my Lords)
With thoughts so qualified, as your Charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me; and so
The Kings will be perform'd.
Leo. Shall I be heard?
Her. Who is't that goes with me? beseech your Highnes
My Women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Doe not weepe (good Fooles)
There is no cause: When you shall know your Mistris
Has deseru'd Prison, then abound in Teares,
As I come out; this Action I now goe on,
Is for my better grace. Adieu (my Lord)
I never wish'd to see you sorry, now,
I trust I shall: my Women cheere, you haue teene.
Leo. Goe, doe our bidding: hence.
Lord. Beseech your Highnesse call the Queene againe.
Antig. Be certaine what you do (Sir) least your Iustice
Proue violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Your Selfe, your Queene, your Sonne.
Lord. For her (my Lord)
I dare my life lay downe, and will do't (Sir)
Please you t'accept it, that the Queene is spotless
I'th' eyes of Heauen, and to you (I meane
In this, which you accuse her.)
Antig. If it prouе
Shee's otherwise, I'le keepe my Stables where
I lodge my Wife, I'le goe in couples with her:
Then when I feele, and see her, no further trust her.
For every inch of Woman in the World,
I, every dram of Woman's flesh is false,
If she be.
Leo. Hold your peaces.
Lord. Good my Lord,
Antig. It is for you we speake, not for our selues.
You are abus'd, and by some putter on.
That will be damn'd for't: would I know the Villaine,

I would

I would Lord-shame him: be she honor-flaw'd,
I have three daughters: the eldest is eleven,
The second, and the third, nine: and some five:
If this prove true, they'l pay for't. By mine Honor
I'le geld 'em all: fourteene they shall not see
To bring false generations: they are co-heyres,
And I had rather glib my selfe, then they Should not produce fayre issue.

Leo. Cease, no more.
You smell this business with a sence as cold
As is a dead-mans nose: but I do see't, and feel't,
As you feele doing thus: and see withall
The Instruments that feele.

Antig. If it be so,
We needs no grave to bury honesty.
There's not a grame of it, the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy-earth.

Leo. What? lacke I credit?

Lord. I had rather you did lacke then I (my Lord)
Vpon this ground: and more it would content me
To have her Honor true, then your suspition
Be blam'd for't how you might.

Leo. Why what needs we
Commune with you of this? but rather follow
Our forcefull instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your Counsailes, but our naturall goodnesse
Imparts this: which, if you, or stupified,
Or seeming so, in skill, cannot, or will not
Relish a truth, like vs: inform your selves,
We needs no more of your advice. the matter,
The losse, the gaine, the ord'ring on't,
Is all properly ours.

Antig. And I wish (my Liege)
You had only in your silent judgement tried it,
Without more overture.

Leo. How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wer't borne a foole: Camillo's slight
Added to their Familiarity
(Which was as grosse, as ever touch'd conjecture,
That lack'd sight onely, nought for approbation
But only seeing, all other circumstances
Made vp to'th deed) doth push-on this proceeding.
Yet, for a greater confirmation
(For in an Acte of this importance, 'twere
Most paltrous to be wilde) I have dispatch'd in post,
To sacred Delphos, to Appollo's Temple,
Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
Of stuff'd-sufficiency: Now, from the Oracle
They will bring all, whose spirituall counsaile had Shall stop, or spurre me. Have I done well?

Lord. Well done (my Lord.)

Leo. Though I am satisfide, and needs no more
Than what I know, yet shall the Oracle
Give rest to th'minds of others; such as he Whose ignorant credulitie, will not Come vp to th'truth. So have we thought it good
From our free person, she should be confinde,
Lest that the treachery of the two, fled hence,
Be left her to performe. Come follow vs,
We are to speake in publique: for this business
Will raise vs all.

Antig. To laughter, as I take it,
If the good truth, were knowne.

Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter Paulina, a Gentleman, Gaoler, Emilia.

Paul. The Keeper of the prison, call to him:
Let him have knowledge who I am. Good Lady,
No Court in Europe is too good for thee,
What dost thou then in prison? Now good Sir,
You know me, do you not?

Gao. For a worthy Lady,
And one, who much I honour.

Pau. Pray you then,
Conduct me to the Queene.

Gao. I may not (Madam)
To the contrary I have expresse commandement.

Pau. Here's a-do, to locke vp honesty & honour from Th'access of gentle visitors. Is't lawfull pray you
To see her Women? Any of them? Emilia?

Gao. So please you (Madam)
To put a-part these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

Pau. I pray now call her:
With-draw your selves.

Gao. And Madam,
I must be present at your Conference.

Pau. Well. be's so: prettiee.
Heere's such a-doe, to make no staine, a staine,
As passes colouring. Deare Gentlewoman,
How fares our gracious Lady?

Emil. As well as one so great, and so forlorne
May hold together: On her frights, and greefes
(Which never tender Lady hath borne greater)
She is, something before her time, deliver'd.

Pau. A boy?

Emil. A daughter, and a goodly babe,
Lusty, and like to live: the Queene receives
Much comfort in't: Says, my poore prisoner,
I am innocent as you.

Pau. I dare be sworne:
These dangerous, vnsafe Lunes i'th'King, beshrew them
He must be told on't, and he shall: the office
Becomes a woman best. I'le take't vpon me,
If I prove hony-mouth'd, let my tongue blister,
And never to my red-look'd Anger be
The Trumpet any more: pray you (Emilia)
Commend my best obedience to the Queene,
If she dares trust me with her little babe,
I'le shew't the King, and vndertake to bee
Her Aduocate to th'lowd'st. We do not know
How he may soften at the sight o'th'Childe:
The silence often of pure innocence
Persuades, when speaking fails.

Emil. Most worthy Madam,
your honor, and your goodnesse is so evident,
That your free vndertaking cannot miss
A thriving issue: there is no Lady living
So meete for this great errand; please your Ladiship
To visit the next roome, I'le presently
Acquaint the Queene of your most noble offer,
Who, but to day hammered of this designe,
But dare not tempt a mastiffe of honour
Lest she should be deny'd.

Paul. Tell her (Emilia)
I'le vse that tongue I haue: If wit flow from't
As boldnesse from my bosome, let't not be doubted
I shall do good.
Emil. Now be you blest for it,
I'le to the Queene: please you come something nearer.
Gao. Madam, if't please the Queene to send the babe
I know not what I shall incurre, to passe it,
Hauing no warrant
Pau. You needs not feare it (sir)
This Childe was prisoner to the wombe, and is
By Law and process of great Nature, thence Free'd, and enfranchis'd, not a party to
The anger of the King, nor guilty of
(If any be) the trespasse of the Queene.
Gao. I do beleeue it.
Paul. Do not you feare: vpon mine honor, I
Will stand betwixt you, and danger. Exeunt

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Seruants, Paulina, Antigonus, and Lords.

Leo. Nor night, nor day, no rest: It is but weakneſſe
To beare the matter thus: mere weakneſſe, if
The cause were not in being: part o'th cause,
She, th'A dulcesse: for the harlot-King
Is quite beyond mine Arme, out of the blanke
And leuell of my braine: plot-proofe: but thee,
I can hooke to me: say that she were gone,
Giuen to the fire, a moity of my rest
Might come to me against. Whose there?
Ser. My Lord.
Leo. How do's the boy?
Ser. He tooke good rest to night: 'tis hop'd
His sicknesse is discharg'd
Leo. To see his Noblenesse,
Conceyuing the dishonour of his Mother.
He straight declin'd, droop'd, tooke it deeply,
Fasten'd, and fix'd the shame on't in himselfe:
Throw-off his Spirit, his Appetite, his Sleepe,
And down-right languish'd. Leaue me solely: goe,
See how he fares: fie, fie, no thought of him,
The very thought of my Reuenges that way
Recoyle vpon me: in himselfe too mightie,
And in his parties, his Alliance; Let him be,
Until a time may serue. For present vengeance
Take it on her: Camillo, and Polixenes
Laugh at me: make their pastime at my sorrow:
They should not laugh, if I could reach them, nor Shall she, within my powre.
Enter Paulina.
Lord. You must not enter.
Paul. Nay rather (good my Lords) be second to me:
Feare you his tyrannous passion more (alas)
Then the Queenes life? A gracious innocent soule,
More free, then he is iealous.
Antig. That's enough.
Ser. Madam; he hath not slept to night, commanded
None should come at him.
Pau. Not so hot (good Sir)
I come no being him sleepe. 'Tis such as you
That creepe like shadowes by him, and do sighe
At each his needlesse heauings: such as you
Nourish the cause of his awaking. I
Do, come with words, as medicinall, as true;
(Honest, as either) to purge him of that humor
That presses him from sleepe.
Leo. Who noyse there, ho?
Pau. No noyse (my Lord) but needfull conference,
About some Gossips for your Highnesse.
Leo. How?
Away with that audacious Lady. Antigonus,
I charg'd thee that she should not come about me,
I knew she would.
Ant. I told her so (my Lord)
On your displeasures perill, and on mine,
She should not visit you.
Leo. What? canst not rule her?
Paul. From all dishonestie he can: in this (Vnlesse he take the course that you haue done)
Commit me, for committing honor, trust it,
He shall not rule me:
Ant. La-you now, you heare,
When she will take the raine, I let her run,
But see'e'l not stumble.
Paul. Good my Liege, I come:
And I beseech you heare me, who professes
My selfe your loyall Seruant, your Physitian,
Your most obedient Counsailor: yet that dares
Lesse appeare so, in comforting your Euills,
Then such as most seeme yours. I say, I come
From your good Queene.
Leo. Good Queene?
Paul. Good Queene (my Lord) good Queene,
I say good Queene,
And would by combate, make her good so, were I
A man, the worst about you.
Leo. Force her hence.
Pau. Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me: on mine owne accord, I'le off,
But first, I'le do my errand. The good Queene
(For she is good) hath brought you forth a daughter,
Heere 'tis. Commends it to your blessing
Leo. Out.
A mankinde Witch? Hence with her, out o'dore:
A most intelligencing bawd.
Paul. Not so:
I am as ignorant in that, as you,
In so entitling me: and no lesse honest
Then you are mad: which is enough, I'le warrant
(As this world goes) to passe for honest:
Leo. Traitors;
Will you not push her out? Giue her the Bastard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tyr'd: vnroosted
By thy dame Partlet heere. Take vp the Bastard,
Take't vp, I say: giue't to thy Crosse.
Paul. For ever
Vnuenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st vp the Princesse, by that forced baseness
Which he has put vpon't
Leo. He dreads his Wife.
Paul. So I would you did: then 'twere past all doubt
You'd call your children, yours.
Leo. A nest of Traitors.
Ant. I am none, by this good light.
Pau. Nor I: nor any
But one that's here: and that's himselfe: for he.

The sacred Honor of himselfe, his Queenes,
His hopefull Sonnes, his Babes, betrayes to Slander,
Whose sting is sharper then the Sword; and will not
(For as the case now stands, it is a Curse
He cannot be compell'd too't) once remoue
The Root of his Opinion, which is rotten,
As euer Oake, or Stone was sound.

Leo. A Callat
Of boundlesse tongue, who late hath beat her Husband,
And now bayts me: This Brat is none of mine,
It is the Issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the Dam,
Commit them to the fire.

Paul. It is yours:
And ought we say th'old Prouerb to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse. Behold (my Lords)
Although the Print be little, the whole Matter
And Coppy of the Father: (Eye, Nose, Lippe,
The trick of's Frowne, his Fore-head, nay, the Valley,
The pretty dimples of his Chin, and Cheeke; his Smiles:
The very Mold, and frame of Hand, Nayle, Finger.)
And thou good Goddesse Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got it, if thou hast
The ordering of the Mind too, mongst all Colours
No Yellow in't, least the suspect, as he do's,
Her Children, not her Husbands.

Leo. A gresse Hagge:
And Lozell, thou art worthy to be hang'd,
That wilt not stay her Tongue.

Antig. Hang all the Husbands
That cannot doe that Feat, you'le leaue your selfe
Hardly one Subiect.

Leo. Once more take her hence.

Paul. A most vnworthy, and vnnaturall Lord
Can doe no more.

Leo. Ile ha' thee burnt.

Paul. I care not:
It is an Heretique that makes the fire,
Not she which burnes in't. Ile not call you Tyrant;
But this most cruell vsage of your Queene
(Not able to produce more accusation
Then your owne weake-hinds'd Fancy) something smores
Of Tyrannie, and will ignoble make you,
Yea Scandalous to the World.

Leo. On your Allegeance,
Out of the Chamber with her. Were I a Tyrant,
Where were her life? she durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her.

Paul. I pray you doe not push me, Ile be gone.
Looke to your Babe (my Lord) 'tis yours: Ioue send her
A better guiding Spirit. What needs these hands?
You that are thus so tender o're his Follyes,
Will neuer doe him good, not one of you.
So, so: Farewell, we are gone. Exit

Leo. Thou (Traytor) hast set on thy Wife to this.
My Child? away with't? euen thou, that hast
A heart so tender o're it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consum'd with fire.
Euen thou, and none but thou. Take it vp straight:
Within this houre bring me word 'tis done,
(And by good testimonie) or Ile seize thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine: if thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my Wrath, say so;
The Bastard-brayne with these my proper hands
Shall I dash out. Goe, take it to the fire,
For thou sert's on thy Wife.

Antig. I did not, Sir:
These Lords, my Noble Fellowes, if they please,
Can cleare me in't.

Lords. We can: my Royall Liege,
He is not guiltie of her comming hither.

Leo. You're lyers all.

Lord. Beseech your Highnesse, giue vs better credit:
We haue always truly seru'd you, and beseech
So to esteeme of vs: and on our knees we begge.
(As recompence of our deare seruices
Past, and to come) that you doe change this purpose,
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must
Lead on to some foule Issue. We all kneele.

Leo. I am a Feather for each Wind that blows:
Shall I liue on, to see this Bastard kneele,
And call me Father? better burne it now,
Then curse it then. But be it: let it liue.
It shall not neyther. You Sir, come you hither:
You that haue beene so tenderly officious
With Lady Margerit, your Mid-wife there,
To saue this Bastards life; for 'tis a Bastard,
So sure as this Beard's gray. What will you aduenture,
To saue this Brats life?

Antig. Any thing (my Lord)
That my ability may vndergoe,
And Nobleness impose: at least thus much;
Ile pawne the little blood which I haue left,
To saue the Innocent: any thing possible.

Leo. It shall be possible: Sweare by this Sword
Thou wilt performe my bidding.

Antig. I will (my Lord.)

Leo. Marke, and performe it: seest thou for the faile
Of any point in't, shall not onely be
Death to thy selfe, but to thy lewd-tongu'd Wife,
(Whom for this time we pardon) We enioyne thee,
As thou art Liege-man to vs, that thou carry
This female Bastard hence, and that thou beare it
To some remote and desart place, quite out
Of our Dominions; and that there thou leaue it
(Without more mercy) to it owne protection,
And seuour of the Climate: as by strange fortune
It came to vs, I doe in Iustice charge thee,
On thy Soules peril, and thy Bodyes torture,
That thou commend it strangely to some place,
Where Chance may nurse, or end it: take it vp.

Antig. I sweare to doe this: though a present death
Had beene more merciful. Come on (poore Babe)
Some powerfull Spirit instruct the Kytes and Rauens
To be thy Nurses. Wolues and Beares, they say,
(Casting their saungenesse aside) haue done
Like offices of Pitty. Sir, be prosperous
In more then this deed do's require; and Blessing
Against this Cruelty, fight on thy side
(Poore Thing, condemn'd to loose.) Exit.

Leo. No: lie not neare
Anothers Issue. Enter a Seruant.

Serv. Please your Highnesse, Posts
From those you sent to th'Oracle, are come
An houre since: Cleomines and Dion,
Being well arriu'd from Delphos, are both landed,
Hasting to th' Court.

Lord. So please you (Sir) their speed
Hath beene beyond accompt.

Leo. Twencie three dayes
They haue beene absent: 'tis good speed: fore-tells
The great Apollo suddenly will haue

The

The truth of this appeare: Prepare you Lords,
Summon a Sessions, that we may arraigne
Our most disloyall Lady: for as she hath
Been publikely accus'd, so shall she have
A iust and open Triall. While she lives,
My heart will be a burthen to me. Leave me,
And thinke vpon my bidding. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Cleomenes and Dion.

Cleo. The Clymate's delicate, the Ayre most sweet,
Fertile the Ile, the Temple much surpassing
The common praise it beares.
Dion. I shall report,
For most it caught me, the Celestiall Habits,
(Me thinkes I so should terme them) and the reverence
Of the grave Wearers. O, the Sacrifice,
How ceremonious, solemne, and vn-earthly
It was i'th'Offring?
Cleo But of all, the burst
And the ear-deafe ning Voyce o th'Oracle,
Kin to Iouis Thunder, so surprise'd my Sence,
That I was nothing.
Dio. If the event o'th'Journey
Proue as successfull to the Queene (O be't so)
As it hath beene to vs, rare, pleasant, speedie,
The time is worth the vse on't.
Cleo Great Apollo
Turne all to th'best: these Proclamations,
So forcing faults vpon Hermione,
I little like.
Dio The violent carriage of it
Will clearer, or end the Businesse, when the Oracle
(Thus by Apollo's great Diuine seal'd vp)
Shall the Contents discouer: something rare
Euen then will rush to knowledge. Goe: fresh Horses,
And gracious be the issue Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Leontes, Lords, Officers: Hermione (as to her Triall) Ladies: Cleomenes, Dion

Leo. This Sessions (to our great griefe we pronounce)
Euen pushes 'gainst our heart. The partie ay'd,
The Daughter of a King, our Wife, and one
Of vs too much beloved. Let vs be clear'd
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in Iustice, which shall have due course,
Euen to the Guilt, or the Purgation.
Produce the Prisoner.
Officer. It is his Highnesse pleasure, that the Queene
Appeare in person, here in Court. Silence.
Leo. Reade the Indictment.
Officer. Hermione, Queene to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of High Treason, in committing Adultery with Polixenes King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the Life of our Soueraigne Lord the King, thy Royall Husband: the prouocations whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou (Hermione) contrary to the Faith and Allegiance of a true Subiect, didst counsaile and aydes them, for their better safetie, to fly away by Night.
Her. Since what I am to say, must be but that Which contradicts my Accusation, and
The testimonie on my part, no other
But what comes from my selfe, it shall scarce boot me
To say, Not guiltie: mine Innocrncie
Being counted Falsehood, shall (as I expresse it)
Be so receiu'd. But thus, if Powers Diuine
Behold our humane Actions (as they doe)
I doubt not then, but Innocence shall make False Accusation blush, and Tyrannie
Tremble at Patience. You (my Lord) best know
(Whom least will seeme to doe so) my past life
Hath beene as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now vnhappy; which is more
Then Historie can parterne, though drein'd,
And play'd, to the Spectators. For behold me,
A Fellow of the Royall Bed, which owe
A Mother of the Throne: a great Kings Daughter,
The Mother to a hopefull Prince, here standing
To prate and talke for Life, and Honor, fooe
Who please to come, and heare. For Life, I prize it
As I weigh Griefe (which I would spare:) For Honor,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,
And onely that I stand for. I appeale
To your owne Conscience (Sir) before Polixenes
Came to your Court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so: Since he came,
With what encounter so vncurrant, I
Have strayn'd t'appeare thus; if one iot beyond
The bound of Honor, or in act, or wit
That way inclining, hardned be the hearts
Of all that heare me, and my neer'st of Kin
Cry fie vpon my Grave.
Leo. I ne're heard yet,
That any of these bolder Vices wanted
Lesse Impudence to gainsay what they did,
Then to performe it first.
Her That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying (Sir) not due to me.
Leo. You will not owne it.
Her. More than Mistrresse of,
Which comes to me in name of Fault, I must not
At all acknowledge. For Polixenes
(With whom I am accus'd) I doe confesse
I lou'd him, as in Honor he requir'd:
With such a kind of Loue, as might become
A Lady like me; with a Loue, euen such,
So, and no other, as your selfe commanded:
Which, not to haue done, I think had been in me
Both Disobedience, and Ingratitude
To you, and toward your Friend, whose Loue had spoke,
Euen since it could speake, from an Infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now for Conspiracie,
I know not how it taste, though it be dish'd
For me to try how: All I know of it,
Is, that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your Court, the Gods themselues
(Wotting no more than I) are ignorant.
Leo. You knew of his departure, as you know
What you haue vnderta'ne to doe in's absence.

Her. Sir,

Her. Sir,
You speake a Language that I vnderstand not;
My Life stands in the leuell of your Dreames,
Which I'le lay downe.
Leo. Your Actions are my Dreames.
You had a Bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dream'd it: As you were past all shame,
(Those of your Fact are so) so past all truth;
Which to deny, concernes more then auailes. for so
Thy Brat hath been cast out, like to it selfe,
No Father owning it (which is indeed
More criminall in thee, then it) so thou
Shalt feele our Iustice; in whose easiest passage,
Looke for no lesse then death.
Her. Sir, spare your Threats:
The Bugge which you would fright me with, I seeke:
To me can Life be no commoditie;
The comfort and comfort of my Life (your Peace)
I doe giue lost, for I doe feele it gone,
But know not how it went. My second Ioy,
And first Fruits of my body, from his presence
I am bar'd, like one infectious. My third comfort
(Star'd most vnlouckily) is from my breast
(The innocent milke in it most innocent mouth)
Hal'd out to murther. My selfe on every Post
Proclaym'd a Strumpet: With immodest hatred
The Child-bed priuiledge deny'd, which longs
To Women of all fashion. Lastly, hurried
Here, to this place, i'th' open ayre, before
I haue got strength of limit. Now (my Liege)
Tell me what blessings I haue here aliue,
That I should feare to die? Therefore proceed:
But yet heare this: mistake me not: no Life,
(I prize it not a straw) but for mine Honor,
Which I would free: if I shall be condemn'd
Vpon surmizes (all proofes sleeping else,
But what your Iealousies awake) I tell you
'Tis Rigor, and not Law. Your Honors all,
I doe referre me to the Oracle:
Apollo be my Iudge.
Lord. This your request
Is altogether iust: therefore bring forth
(And in Apollo's Name) his Oracle.
Her. The Emperor of Russia was my Father.
Oh that he were aliue, and here beholding
His Daughters Tryall: that he did but see
The flatnesse of my miserie; yet with eyes
Of Pitty, not Reuenge.
Officer. You here shall swearе vpon this Sword of Iustice,
That you (Cleomenes and Dion) haue
Been both at Delphos, and from thence haue brought
This seal'd-vp Oracle, by the Hand deliuer'd
Of great Apollo's Priest; and that since then,
You haue not dar'd to breake the holy Seale,
Nor read the Secrets in't.
Cleo. Dio. All this we swearе.
Leo. Breake vp the Seales, and read.
Officer. Hermione is chast, Polixenes blemishlesse, Camillo a true Subiect, Leontes a vniust Tyrant, his innocent Babe truly begotten, and the King shall liue without an Heire, if that which is lost, be not found.
Lords. Now blessed be the great Apollo.
Her. Prayised.
Leo. Hast thou read truth?
Offe. I (my Lord) even so as it is here set downe.
Leo. There is no truth at all i'th'Oracle:
The Sessions shall proceed: this is meere falsehood.
Ser. My Lord the King: the King?
Leo. What is the business?
Ser. O Sir, I shall be hated to report it.
The Prince your Sonne, with meere conceit, and feare
Of the Queenes speed, is gone.
Leo. How? gone?
Ser. Is dead.
Leo. Apollo's angry, and the Heauens themselues
Doe stake at my Iniustice. How now there?
Paul. This newes is mortall to the Queene: Look downe
And see what Death is doing.
Leo. Take her hence:
Her heart is but o're-charg'd: she will recouer.
I haue too much beleeu'd mine owne suspition:
'Beseech you tenderly apply to her
Some remedies for life. Apollo pardon
My great prophanenesse 'gainst thine Oracle.
I'le reconcile me to Polixenes,
New woe my Queene, recall the good Camillo
(Whom I proclaime a man of Truth, of Mercy:)
For being transported by my Iealousies
To bloody thoughts, and to reuenge, I chose
Camillo for the minister, to poyson
My friend Polixenes: which had been done,
But that the good mind of Camillo tardied
My swift command: though I with Death, and with Reward, did threaten and encourage him,
Not doing it, and being done. he (most humane,
And fill'd with Honor) to my Kingly Guest
Vnclasp'd my practise, quit his fortunes here
(Which you knew great) and to the hazard
Of all Incertainties, himselfe commended,
No richer then his Honor: How he glisters
Through my Rust? and how his Pietie
Do's my deeds make the blacker?
Paul. Woe the while:
O cut my Lace, least my heart, (cracking it)
Breake too.
Lord. What fit is this? good Ladyes?
Paul. What studied torments (Tyrant) hast for me?
What Wheeles? Racks? Fires? What flaying? boyling?
In Leads, or Oyles? What old, or newer Torture
Must I receiue? whose every word deserues
To taste of thy most worst. Thy Tyrannie
(Together working with thy Iealousies,
Fancies too weake for Boyes, too greene and idle
For Girles of Nine) O thinke what they haue done,
And then run mad indeed: starke-mad: for all
Thy by-gone fooleries were but spices of it.
That thou betrayed'st Polixenes, 'twas nothing,
(That did but shew thee, of a Foole, inconstant,
And damnable ingrateful:) Nor was't much,
Thou would'st haue poyson'd good Camillo's Honor,
To haue him kill a King: poore Trespasses,
More monstrous standing by: whereof I reckon
The casting forth to Crowes, thy Baby-daughter,
To be or none, or little; though a Deuill
Would haue shed water out of fire, ere don't:
Nor is't directly layd to thee the death
Of the young Prince, whose honorable thoughts
(Thoughts high for one so tender) cleft the heart
That could conceiue a gresse and foolish Sire
Blemish'd his gracious Dam: this is not, no,
Layd to thy answere: but the last: O Lords,
When I haue said, cry woe: the Queene, the Queene,

The

The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead: & vengeance for't
Not drop'd downe yet.

Lord. The higher powres forbid.

Paul. I say she's dead: I'le swear't. If word, nor oath
Prevaile not, go and see: if you can bring
Tincture, or lustre in her lip, her eye
Heate outwardly, or breath within, I'le serve you
As I would do the Gods. But, O thou Tyrant,
Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
Then all thy woes can stirre: therefore betake thee
To nothing but dispaire. A thousand knees,
Ten thousand yeares together, naked, fasting,
Vpon a barren Mountaine, and still Winter
In storme perpetuall, could not move the Gods
To looke that way thou wer't.

Leo. Go on, go on
Thou canst not speake too much, I have deserv'd
All tongues to talke their bitterest.

Lord. Say no more;
How ere the business goes, you have made fault
I'th boldnesse of your speech.

Paul. I am sorry for't;
All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
I do repent: Alas, I have shew'd too much
The rashnesse of a woman: he is touch'd
To th'Noble heart. What's gone, and what's past helpe
Should be past greefe: Do not receive affliction
At my petition; I beseech you, rather
Let me be punish'd, that have minded you
Of what you should forget. Now (good my Liege)
Sir, Royall Sir, forgive a foolish women:
The love I bore your Queene (Lo, fools again)
I'le speake of her no more, nor of your Children:
I'le not remember you of my owne Lord
(Who is lost too:) take your patience to you,
And I'le say nothing.

Leo. Thou dost speake but well,
When most the truth: which I receyve much better,
Then to be pitied of thee. Prethee bring me
To the dead bodies of my Queene, and Sonne.
One grave shall be for both: Vpon them shall
The causes of their death appeare (vnto
Our shame perpetuall) once a day, I'le visit
The Chappell where they lye, and teares shed there
Shall be my recreation. So long as Nature
Will beare vp with this exercise, so long
I daily vow to visit Come, and leade me
To these sorrowes.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Antigonus, a Mariner, Babe, Sheepe-heard, and Clowne.

Ant. Thou art perfect then, our ship hath touch'd vpon
The Deserts of Bohemia.

Mar. I (my Lord) and feare
We have Landed in ill time: the skies looke grimly,
And threaten present blusters. In my conscience
The heavens with that we have in hand, are angry,
And frowne vpon's.

Ant. Their sacred wil's be done: go get a-boord,
Looke to thy barke, I'le not be long before
I call vpon thee.

Mar. Make your best haste, and go not
Too-farre i'th Land: 'tis like to be loud weather,
Besides this place is famous for the Creatures
Of prey, that keepe vpon't.

Ant. Go thou away,
I'le follow instantly.

Mar. I am glad at heart
To be so ridde o'th business. Exit.

Ant. Come, poore babe;
I have heard (but not believe'd) the Spirits o'th'dead
May walke againe: if such thing be, thy Mother
Appear'd to me last night: for ne're was dreame
So like a waking. To me comes a creature,
Sometimes her head on one side, some another,
I never saw a vessell of like sorrow
So fill'd, and so becomming: in pure white Robes
Like very sanctity she did approach
My Cabine where I lay: thrice bow'd before me,
And (gasping to begin some speech) her eyes
Became two spouts; the furie spent, anon
Did this breake from her. Good Antigonus,
Since Fate (against thy better disposition)
Hath made thy person for the Thower-out
Of my poore babe, according to thine oath,
Places remote enough are in Bohemia,
There weepe, and leave it crying: and for the babe
Is counted lost for ever, Perdita
I prethee call't: For this vngentle business
Put on thee, by my Lord, thou ne're shalt see
Thy Wife Paulina more: and so, with shrieks
She melted into Ayre. Affrighted much,
I did in time collect my selfe, and thought
This was so, and no slumber: Dreames, are toyes,
Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,
I will be squar'd by this. I do beleeve
Hermione hath suffer'd death, and that Apollo would (this being indeede the issue
Of King Polixenes) it should heere be laide
(Either for life, or death) vpon the earth
Of its right Father. Blossome, speed thee well,
There lye, and there thy character: there thee,
Which may if Fortune please, both breed thee (pretty)
And still rest thine. The storme beginnes, poore wretch,
That for thy mothers fault, art thus expos'd
To losse, and what may follow. Weepe I cannot,
But my heart bleedes: and most accursst am I
To be by oath enjoyn'd to this. Farewell,
The day frownes more and more: thou'rt like to have
A lullabie too rough: I never saw
The heavens so dim, by day. A savage clamor?
Well may I get a-boord: This is the Chace,
I am gone for ever. Exit pursued by a Beare.

Shep. I would there were no age between ten and three and twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest for there is nothing (in the betweene) but getting wenches with childe, wronging the Ancientry, stealing, fighting. Hearke you now: would any but these boylde-braines of nineteene, and two and twenty hunt this weather? They have scar'd away two of my best Sheepe, which I feare the Wolfe will sooner finde then the Master; if any where I have them, 'tis by the sea-side, browzing of Ivy. Good-lucke (and's be thy will) what have we heere? Mercy on's, a Barne? A very pretty barne; A boy, or a Childe? I wonder? (A pretty one, a verie pretty one) sure some Scape; Though I am not bookish yet I
can

can reade Waiting-Gentlewomen in the scape: this has beene some stare-worke, some Trunke-worke, some behinde-doore worke: they were warmer that got this, then the poore Thing is here. Ile take it vp for pity, yes Ile tarry till my some come: he hallow'd but eam now. Whoo-ho-hoo.

Enter Clown.

Clo. HillOo, loo.

Shep. What? art so neere? If thou'lt see a thing to talke on, when thou art dead and rotten, come hither: what ayl'st thou, man?

Clo. I have seene two such sights, by Sea & by Land: but I am not to say it is a Sea, for it is now the skie, betwixt the Firmament and it, you cannot thrust a bodkins point.

Shep. Why boy, how is it?

Clo. I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes vp the shore, but that's not to the point: Oh, the most piteous cry of the poore soules, sometimes to see 'em and not to see 'em: Now the Shippe boaring the Moone with her maine Mast, and anon swallowed with yest and froth, as you'ld thrust a Cocke into a hogs-head. And then for the Land-seruice, to see how the Beare tore out his shoulder-bone, how he cride to mee for helpe, and said his name was Antigonus, a Nobleman: But to make an end of the Ship, to see how the Sea flap-dragon d it: but first, how the poore soules roared, and the sea mock'd them: and how the poore Gentleman roared, and the Beare mock'd him, both roaring lowder then the sea, or weather.

Shep. Name of mercy, when was this boy?

Clo. Now, now: I haue not wink'd since I saw these sights: the men are not yet cold vnder water, nor the Beare half din'd on the Gentleman: he's at it now.

Shep. Would I had bin by, to haue help'd the olde man.

Clo. I would you had beene by the ship side, to haue help'd her: there your charity would haue lack'd footing.

Shep. Heavy matters, heavy matters: but looke thee heere boy. Now blesse thy selfe: thou met'st with things dying, I with things new borne. Here's a sight for thee: Looke thee, a bearing-cloath for a Squires childe: looke thee heere, take vp, take vp (Boy:) open't: so, let's see, it was told me I should be rich by the Fairies. This is some Changeling: open't: what's within, boy?

Clo. You're a mad olde man: If the sinnes of your youth are forgiuen you, you're well to liue. Golde, all Golde.

Shep. This is Priery Gold boy, and 'twill prouе so: vp with it, keepe it close: home, home, the next way. We are lockie (boy) and to bee so still requires nothing but secrecie. Let my sheepe go. Come (good boy) the next way home.

Clo. Go you the next way with your Findings, Ile go see if the Beare bee gone from the Gentleman, and how much he hath eaten: they are neuer curst but when they are hungry: if there be any of him left, Ile bury it.

Shep. That's a good deed: if thou mayest discerne by that which is left of him, what he is, fetch me to th'sighe of him.

Clown. Merry will I: and you shall helpe to put him o'th'ground.

Shep. 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and wee'l do good deeds on's. Exeunt

Actus Quartus. Scena Prima.

Enter Time, the Chorus.

Time. I that please some, try all: both ioy and terror
Of good, and bad: that makes, and vnfolds error,
Now take vpon me (in the name of Time)
To vse my wings: Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide
Ore sixteene yeeres, and leaue the growth vnstride
Of that wide gap, since it is in my powre
To orethrow Law, and in one selfe-borne houre
To plant, and ore-whelme Custome. Let me passe
The same I am, ere ancient'st Order was,
Or what is now receiu'd. I witnesse to
The times that brought them in, so shall I do
To th'freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glistering of this present, as my Tale
Now seemes to it: your patience this allowing,
I turne my glasse, and giue my Scene such growing
As you had slept betweene: Leontes leaving
Th'effects of his fond iealousies, so greeuing
That he shuts vp himselfe. Imagine me
(Gentle Spectators) that I now may be
In faire Bohemia, and remember well,
I mentioned a sonne o'th'Kings, which Florizell
I now name to you: and with speed so pace
To speake of Perdita, now growne in grace
Equall with wond'ring. What of her insues
I list not prophesie: but let Times newes
Be knowne when 'tis brought forth. A shepherds daugh-
And what to her adheres, which followes after, (ter
Is th'argument of Time: of this allow,
If euer you haue spent time worse, ere now:
If never, yet that Time himselfe doth say,
He wishes earnestly, you never may. Exit.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Polixenes, and Camillo.

Pol. I pray thee (good Camillo) be no more importunate: 'tis a sicknesse denying thee any thing: a death to grant this.

Cam. It is sixteene yeeres since I saw my Country: though I haue (for the most part) bin aired abroad, I desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent King (my Master) hath sent for me, to whose feeling sorrowes I might be some allay, or I o'reweene to thinke so) which is another spurre to my departure.

Pol. As thou lou'st me (Camillo) wipe not out the rest of thy seruices, by leaving me now: the neede I haue of thee, thine owne goodnesse hath made: better not to haue had thee, then thus to want thee, thou hauing made me Businesses, (which none (without thee) can sufficiently manage) must either stay to execute them thy selfe, or take away with thee the very seruices thou hast done: which if I haue not enough considered (as too much I cannot) to bee more thankefull to thee, shall bee my studie, and my profite therein, the heaping friendships. Of that fatall Country Sicilia, prethee speake no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent (as thou calst him) and reconciled King my brother, whose losse of his most precious Queene & Children, are even now to be a-fresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st thou the Prince Florizell my son? Kings are no lesse vnhappy, their issue, not being gracious, then they are in loosing them, when they haue approued their Vertues.

Cam. Sir, it is three dayes since I saw the Prince: what his happier affayres may be, are to me vnknowne: but I haue (misiingly) noted, he is of late much retyred from Court, and is lesse frequent to his Princely exercises then formerly he hath appeared.

Pol. I haue considered so much (Camillo) and with some care, so farre, that I haue eyes vnder my seruice, which looke vpon his remouednesse: from whom I haue this Intelligence, that he is seldome from the house of a most homely shepheard: a man (they say) that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbours, is growne into an vnspeakable estate.

Cam. I heare heard (sir) of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note: the report of her is extended more, then can be thought to begin from such a cottage

Pol. That's likewise part of my Intelligence: but (I feare) the Angle that plucks our sonne thither. Thou shalt accompany vs to the place, where we will (not appearing what we are) haue some question with the shepheard; from whose simplicity, I think it not vnfeasible to get the cause of my sonnes resort thither. Prethe be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicillia.

Cam. I willingly obey your command.

Pol. My best Camillo, we must disguise our selues. Exeu

Scena Tertia

Enter Autolycus singing.

When Daffodils begin to peere,
With heigh the Doxy ouer the dale,
Why then comes in the sweet o'the yeere,
For the red blood raigns in ye winters pale.

The white throte blurbling ou the hedge,
With hey the sweet birds, O how they sing:
Doth set my pugging tooth on edge,
For a quart of Ale is a dish for a King.

The Larke that tirra Lyra chaunts,
With heigh, the Thrush and the Iay:
Are Summer songs for me and my Aunts,
While we lye tumbling on the hay.

I haue seru'd Prince Florizell, and in my time wore three pile, but now I am out of seruice.

But shall I go mourne for that (my deare)
the pale Moone shines by night:
And when I wander here, and there
I then do most go right.
If Tinkers may haue leaue to liue,
and bearc the Sow-skin Bougee,
There is my account I well may goue,
and in the Stocks auouch it.

My Trafficke is sheetes: when the Kite builds, looke to lesser Linnen. My Father nam'd me Autolycus, who being (as I am) litter'd vnder Mercurie, was likewise a snapper-vp of vnconsidered trifles: With Dye and drab, I purchas'd this Caparison, and my Reuenew is the silly Cheate. Gallowes, and Knocke, are too powerfull on the Highway. Beating and hanging are terrors to me: For the life to come, I sleepe out the thought of it. A prize, a prize.

Enter Clowne.

Clo. Let me see, every Leuen-weather toddes, every tod yeeldes pound and odde shilling: fifteene hundred shorne, what comes the wooll too?

Aut. If the springe hold, the Cocke's mine.

Clo. I cannot do't without Compters. Let mee see, what am I to buy for our Sheepe-shearing-Feast? Three pound of Sugar, five pound of Currence, Rice: What will this sister of mine do with Rice? But my father hath made her Mistris of the Feast, and she layes it on. She hath made-me four and twenty Nose-gayes for the shearers (three-men song-men, all, and very good ones) but they are most of them Meanes and Basses; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings Psalmes to horne-pipes. I must haue Saffron to colour the Warden Pies, Mace: Dates, none: that's out of my note: Nutmegges, seuen; a Race or two of Ginger, but that I may begge: Foure pound of Prewyns, and as many of Reysons o'th Sun.

Aut. Oh, that euer I was borne.

Clo. I'th name of me.

Aut. Oh help me, help mee. pluck but off these rages: and then, death, death.

Clo. Alacke poore soule, thou hast need of more rags to lay on thee, rather then haue these off.

Aut. Oh sir, the loathsomnesse of them offend mee, more then the stripes I haue receiued, which are mighty ones and millions.

Clo. Alas poore man, a million of beating may come to a great matter.

Aut. I am rob'd sir, and beaten: my money, and apparell tane from me, and these detestable things put vpon me.

Clo. What, by a horse-man, or a foot-man?

Aut. A footman (sweet sir) a footman.

Clo. Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee: If this bee a horsemans Coate, it hath seene very hot seruice. Lend me thy hand, Ile helpe thee. Come, lend me thy hand.

Aut. Oh good sir, tenderly, oh.

Clo. Alas poore soule.

Aut. Oh good sir, softly, good sir: I feare (sir) my shoulder-blade is out.

Clo. How now? Canst stand?

Aut. Softly, deere sir: good sir, softly: you hs done me a charitable office.

Clo. Dost lacke any money? I haue a little money for thee.

Aut. No, good sweet sir: no, I beseech you sir: I haue a Kinsman not past three quarters of a mile hence, vnto whome I was going: I shall there haue money, or any thing I want: Offer me no money I prey you, that killes my heart.

Clo. What manner of Fellow was hee that robb'd you?

Aut. A fellow (sir) that I haue knowne to goe about with Troll-my-dames: I knew him once a seruant of the Prince: I cannot tell good sir, for which of his Vertues it was, but he was certainely Whipt out of the Court.

Clo. His vices you would say: there's no vertue whipt out of the Court: they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.

Aut. Vices I would say (Sir.) I know this man well, he hath bene since an Ape-bearer, then a Proceffe-server (a Bayliffe) then he compaft a Motion of the Prodigall Sonne, and married a Tinkers wife, within a Mile where my Land and Living lyes; and (having flowne over many knauish professions) he settled onely in Rogue: some call him Autolicus.

Clo. Out vpon him: Prig for my life Prig he haunts Wakes, Faires, and Bear-baitings.

Aut. Very true sir: he sir, he: that's the Rogue that put me into this apparrell.

Clo. Not a more cowardly Rogue in all Bohemia; If you had but look'd bigge, and spit at him, he'd haue runne.

Aut. I must confesse to you (sir) I am no fighter: I am false of heart that way, & that he knew I warrant him.

Clo. How do you now?

Aut. Sweet sir, much better then I was: I can stand, and walke: I will even take my leave of you, & pace softly towards my Kinsmens.

Clo. Shall I bring thee on the way?

Aut. No, good fac'd sir, no sweet sir.

Clo. Then farthewell, I must go buy Spices for our sheepe-shearing. Exit.

Aut. Prosper you sweet sir. Your purse is not hot enough to purchase your Spice: I'le be with you at your sheepe-shearing too: If I make not this Cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheepe, let me be vnrold, and my name put in the booke of Vertue.

Song. Iog-on, Iog-on, the foot path way,
And merrily hent the Stile-a:
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tyres in a Mile-a. Exit.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Florizell, Perdita, Shepherd, Clotrum, Polixenes, Camillo, Mopsa, Dorcas, Servants, Autolicus.

Flo. These your vnvsuall weeds, to each part of you
Do's give a life: no Shepherdesse, but Flora
Peering in Aprils front. This your sheepe-shearing,
Is as a meeting of the petty Gods,
And you the Queene on't.

Perd. Sir: my gracious Lord,
To chide at your extremes, it not becomes me:
(Oh pardon, that I name them:) your high self
The gracious marke o'th'Land, you have obscur'd
With a Swaines wearing: and me (poore lowly Maide)
Most Goddesse-like prank'd vp: But that our Feasts
In every Messe, haue folly; and the Feeders
Digest with a Custome, I should blush
To see you so attyr'd: sworne I think,
To shew my selfe a glasse.

Flo. I bleese the time.
When my good Falcon, made her flight a-cross
Thy Fathers ground.

Perd. Now Loue afford you cost:
To me the difference forges dread (your Greatnesse
Hath not bene vs'd to feare) even now I tremble
To think your Father, by some accident
Should passe this way, as you did: Oh the Fates,
How would he looke, to see his worke, so noble,
Vildely bound vp? What would he say? Or how Should I (in these my borrowed Flaunts) behold
The sternesse of his presence?

Flo. Apprehend
Nothing but iollity: the Godds themselues
(Humbling their Deities to loue) have taken
The shapes of Beasts vpon them. Iupiter,
Became a Bull, and bellow'd: the greene Neptune
A Ram, and bleated: and the Fire-cosb'd-God
Golden Apollo, a poore humble Swaine,
As I seeme now. Their transformations,
Were never for a peece of beauty, rarer,
Nor in a way so chaste: since my desires
Run not before mine honor: nor my Lusts
Burne hotter then my Faith.

Perd. O but Sir,
Your resolution cannot hold, when 'tis
Oppos'd (as it must be) by th'powre of the King:
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speake, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.

Flo. Thou dear'st Perdita,
With these forc'd thoughts, I prethee darke not
The Mirth o'th' Feast: Or I'le be thine (my Faire)
Or not my Father. For I cannot be Mine owne, nor any thing to any, if
I be not thine. To this I am most constant,
Though destiny say no. Be merry (Gentle)
Strangle such thoughts as these, with any thing
That you behold the while. Your guests are comming:
Lift vp your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptiall, which
We two haue sworne shall come.

Perd. O Lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious.

Flo. See, your Guests approach,
Addresse your selfe to entertaine them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

Shep. Fy (daughter) when my old wife liu'd: vpon
This day, she was both Pastler, Butler, Cooke,
Both Dame and Seruant: Welcom'd all: serv'd all,
Would sing her song, and dance her turne: now here
At vpper end o'th Table; now, i'th middle:
On his shoulder, and his: her face o'fire
With labour, and the thing she tooke to quench it
She would to each one sip. You are retyred,
As if you were a feasted one: and not
The Hostesse of the meeting: Pray you bid
These vnknowne friends to's welcome, for it is
A way to make vs better Friends, more knowne.
Come, quench your blushes, and preface your selfe
That which you are, Mistris o'th'Feast. Come on,
And bid vs welcome to your sheepe-shearing,
As your good flocke shall prosper.

Perd. Sir, welcome:
It is my Fathers will, I should take on me
The Hostessship o'th' day: you're welcome sir.
Give me those Flowres there (Dorcas.) Reverend Sirs,
For you, there's Rosemary, and Rue, these keepe
Seeming, and Savour all the Winter long:
Grace, and Remembrance be to you both,
And welcome to our Shearing.

Pol. Shepherdesse,
(A faire one are you:) well you fit our ages
With flowres of Winter.
Perd. Sir, the yeare growing ancient,
Not yet on summers death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fayrest flowres o'th season
Are our Carnations, and streak'd Gilly-vors,
(Which some call Natures bastards) of that kind
Our rusticke Gardens barren, and I care not
To get slips of them.
Pol. Wherefore (gentle Maiden)
Do you neglect them.
Perd. For I haue heard it said,
There is an Art, which in their pideneſſe shares
With great creating-Nature.
Pol. Say there be:
Yet Nature is made better by no meane,
But Nature makes that Meane: so ouer that Art,
(Which you say addes to Nature) is an Art
That Nature makes: you see (sweet Maid) we marry
A gentler Scen, to the wildest Stocke,
And make conceyue a barke of baſer kinde
By bud of Nobler race. This is an Art
Which do's mend Nature: change 't rather, but
The Art itſelfe, is Nature.
Perd. So it is.
Pol. Then make you Garden rich in Gilly'vors,
And do not call them bastards.
Perd. Ile not put
The Dibble in earth, to set one slip of them:
No more then were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 't were well: and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flowres for you:
Hot Lauender, Mints, Sauory, Marioram,
The Mary-gold, that goes to bed with Sun,
And with him rises, weeping: These are flowres
Of middle summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. Y'are very welcome.
Cam. I should leaue grasing, were I of your flocke,
And onely live by gazing.
Perd. Out alas:
You'ld be so leane, that blasts of Ianuary (Friend,
Would blow you through and through. Now (my fairest
I would I had some Flowres o'th Spring, that might Become your time of day: and yours, and yours,
That weare vpon your Virgin-branches yet
Your Maiden-heads growing: O Proſerpina,
For the Flowres now, that (frighted) thou let'ſt fall
From Dyſes Waggon: Daffodils,
That come before the Swallow dares, and take
The windes of March with beauty: Violets (dim,
But sweeter then the lids of Iuno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's breath) pale Prime-roses,
That dye vnmarried, ere they can behold
Bright Phœbus in his strength (a Maladie
Most incident to Maids:) bold Oxlips, and
The Crowne Imperiall: Lillies of all kinds,
(The Flowre-de-Luce being one.) O, these I lacke,
To make you Garlands of) and my sweet friend,
To strew him o're, and ore.
Flo. What? like a Corſe?
Perd. No, like a banke, for Loue to lye, and play on:
Not like a Corſe: or if: not to be buried,
But quicke, and in mine armes. Come, take your flowrs,
Methinkes I play as I haue seene them do
In Whitson-Pastorals: Sure this Robe of mine
Do's change my disposition.
Flo. What you do,
Still betters what is done. When you speake (sweet)
I'ld haue you do it ever: When you sing,
I'ld haue you buy, and sell so: so giue Alms,
Pray so: and for the ord'ring your Affayres,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o'th Sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that: move still, still so:
And owne no other Function. Each your doing,
(So singular, in each particular)
Crownes what you are doing, in the present deeds,
That all your Actes, are Queenes.
Perd. O Doricles,
Your praises are too large: but that your youth
And the true blood which peepes fairely through't,
Do plainly giue you out an vnstain'd Shepherd
With wisdome, I might feare (my Doricles)
You woo'd me the false way.
Flo. I think you haue
As little skill to feare, as I haue purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance I pray,
Your hand (my Perdita) so Turtles pairs
That never meane to part.
Perd. Ile swear for 'em.
Po. This is the prettiest Low-borne Lasse, that ever
Ran on the greene-ford: Nothing she do's, or speaches
But smackes of something greater then her selfe,
Too Noble for this place.
Cam. He tels her something
That makes her blood looke on't: Good sooth she is
The Queene of Curds and Creame.
Clo. Come on: strike vp.
Dorcas. Mopsa must be your Mistris: marry Garlick to mend her kissing with.
Mop. Now in good time.
Clo. Not a word, a word, we stand vpon our manners,
Come, strike vp.

Heere a Dance of Shepherds and Shepherdesses.

Pol. Pray good Shepheard, what faire Swaine is this,
Which dances with your daughter?
Shep. They call him Doricles, and boasts himselfe
To haue a worthy Feeding; but I haue it
Vpon his owne report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth: he says he loues my daughter,
I thinke so too; for never gaz'd the Moone
Vpon the water, as he'l stand and reade
As 'twere my daughters eyes: and to be plaine,
I thinke there is not halfe a kisse to choose
Who loues another best.
Pol. She dances featly.
Shep. So she do's any thing, though I report it
That should be silent: If young Doricles
Do light vpon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreames of. Enter Servant.
Ser. O Master: if you did but heare the Pedler at the doore, you would never dance againe after a Tabor and Pipe: no, the Bag-pipe could not move you: he sings seuerall Tunes, faster then you'l tell money: he vtters them as he had eaten ballads and all men ears grew to his Tunes.
Clo. He could never come better: he shall come in:
I loue a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set downe: or a very pleasant thing indeede and sung lamentably.

Ser. He hath songs for man, or woman, of all sizes: No Mslliner can so fit his customers with Gloves: he has the prettiest Loue-songs for Maids, so without bawdrie (which is strange,) with such delicate burthens of Dildo's and Fadings: Iump-her, and thump-her; and where some stretch-mouth'd Rascall, would (as it were) meane mischeefe, and breake a fowle gap into the Matter, hee makes the maid to answere, Whoop, doe me no harme good man: put's him off, slights him, with Whoop, doe me no harme good man.

Pol. This is a brauе fellow.

Clo. Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited fellow, has he any vnbraided Wares?

Ser. Hee hath Ribbons of all the colours i'th Rainebow; Points, more then all the Lawyers in Bohemia, can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th'gross: Inckles, Caddysses, Cambrickes, Lawnes: why he sings 'em ouer, as they were Gods, or Goddesses: you would thinke a Smocke were a Shee-Angell, he so chaunted to the sleeue-hand, and the worke about the square on't.

Clo. Pre'thee bring him in, and let him approach singing.

Perd. Forewarne him, that he vse no scurrilous words in's tunes.

Clow. You haue of these Pedlers, that haue more in them, then you'd thinke (Sister.)

Perd. I, good brother, or go about to thinke.

Enter Autolycus singing.

Lawne as white as driuen Snow,
Cypresse blacke as ere was Crow,
Gloues as sweete as Damaske Roses,
Maskes for faces, and for noses
Bugle-bracelet, Neckly-lace Amber,
Perfume for a Ladies Chamber:
Golden Quoifes, and Stomachers
For my Lads, to gaue their dears:
Pins, and poukings-sticks of steele.
What Maids lacke from head to heele:
Come buy of me, come come buy, come buy,
Buy Lads, or else your Lasses cry: Come buy.

Clo. If I were not in loue with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me, but being enthrall'd as I am, it will also be the bondage of certaine Ribbons and Gloues.

Mop. I was promis'd them against the Feast, but they come not too late now.

Dor. He hath promis'd you more then that, or there be liers.

Mop. He hath paid you all he promis'd you: May be he has paid you more, which will shame you to giue him again.

Clo. Is there no manners left among maids? Will they weare their plackets, where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time? When you are going to bed? Or kill-hole? To whistle of these secrets, but you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whispring: clamor your tongues, and not a word more.

Mop. I haue done; Come you promis'd me a tawdry-lace, and a paire of sweet Gloues.

Clo. Haue I not told thee how I was cozen'd by the way, and lost all my money.

Aut. And indeed Sir, there are Cozeners abroad, therefore it behoues men to be wary.

Clo. Feare not thou man, thou shalt lose nothing here

Aut. I hope so sir, for I haue about me many parcels of charge.

Clo. What has't heere? Ballads?

Mop. Pray now buy some: I loue a ballet in print, life, for then we are sure they are true

Aut. Here's one, to a very doleful tune, how a Vsurers wife was brought to bed at twenty money bagges at a burthen, and how she long'd to eate Adders heads, and Toads carbonado'd.

Mop. Is it true, thinke you?

Aut. Very true, and but a moneth old.

Dor. Bless me from marrying a Vsurer.

Aut. Here's the Midwiues name to't: one Mist. Tale-Porter, and fiue or six honest Wiues, that were present. Why should I carry lyes abroad?

Mop. Pray you now buy it.

Clo. Come-on, lay it by: and let's first see more Ballads We'l buy the other things anon.

Aut. Here's another ballad of a Fish, that appeared vpon the coast, on wensday the foure-score of April, forty thousand fadom aboue water, & sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids: it was thought she was a Woman, and was turn'd into a cold fish, for she would not exchange flesh with one that lou'd her: The Ballad is very pitiffull, and as true.

Dor. Is it true too, thinke you.

Autol. Five Iustices hands at it, and witnesses more then my packe will hold.

Clo. Lay it by too; another.

Aut. This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

Mop. Let's haue some merry ones.

Aut. Why this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of two maids wooing a man: there's scarse a Maide westward but she sings it: 'tis in request, I can tell you.

Mop. We can both sing it: if thou'lt beare a part, thou shalt heare, 'tis in three parts.

Dor. We had the tune on't, a month agoe.

Aut. I can beare my part, you must know 'tis my occupation: Haue at it with you:

Song Get you hence, for I must goe
Aut. Where it fits not you to know.
Dor. Whether?
Mop O whether?
Dor. Whether?
Mop. It becomes thy oath full well,
Thou to me thy secrets tell.
Dor: Me too: Let me go whether?
Mop Or thou goest to th'Grange, or Mill,
Dor: If to either thou dost ill.
Aut: Neither.
Dor: What neither?
Aut: Neither:
Dor: Thou hast sworne my Loue to be,
Mop Thou hast sworne it more to me.
Then whether goest? Say whether?

Clo. We'l haue this song out anon by our selues: My Father, and the Gent. are in sad talke, & we'll not trouble them: Come bring away thy pack after me, Wenches I'le buy for you both: Pedler let's haue the first choice, follow me girles. Aut. And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song. Will you buy any Tape, or Lace for your Cape?
My dainty Ducky, my deere-a?
Any Silke, any Thread, any Toyes for your head
Of the new't, and fine't, fine't wore-a.
Come to the Pedler, Money's a meddler,
That doth offer all mens ware-a. Exit.

Ser. man. Mayster, there is three Carters, three Sheepherds, three Neat-herds, three Swine-herds y haue made them themselves all men of haire, they cal themselves Saltiers, and they haue a Dance, which the Wenches say is a gally-mauffrey of Gambols, because they are not in't: but they themselves are o'th'mynde (if it bee not too rough for some, that know little but bowling) it will please plentifully.

Shep. Away: We'l none on't; heere has beene too much homely foolery already. I know (Sir) wee weare you.

Pol. You weare those that refresh vs: Pray let's see these sourte-throes of Heardmen.

Ser. One three of them, by their owne report (Sir,) hath dance'd before the King: and not the worst of the three, but jumpes twelue foote and a halfe by th'square.

Shep. Leaue your prating, since these good men are pleas'd, let them come in: but quickly now.

Ser. Why, they stay at doore Sir.

Heere a Dance of twelue Satyres.

Pol. O Father, you'l know more of that hereafter: Is it not too farre gone? 'Tis time to part them. He's simple, and tols much. How now (faire shepherd) Your heart is full of something, that do's take Your minde from feasting. Sooth, when I was yong, And handed loue, as you do; I was wont To load my Shee with knackes: I would haue ransacht The Pedlers silken Treasury, and haue pour'd it To her acceptance: you haue let him go, And nothing marted with him. If your Lasse Interpretation should abuse, and call this Your lacke of loue, or bounty, you were straited For a reply, at least, if you make a care Of happie holding her.

Flo. Old Sir, I know She prizes not such trifles as these are: The gifts she looks from me, are packt and locke Vp in my heart, which I haue given already, But not deliuer'd. O heare me breath my life Before this ancient Sir, whom (it should seeme) Hath sometime loo'd: I take thy hand, this hand, As soft as Doues-downe, and as white as it, Or Ethiopians tooth, or the fan'd snow, that's bolted By th'Northerne blasts, twice one.

Pol. What followes this? How prettily th'yong Swaine seemes to wash The hand, was faire before? I haue put you out. But to your protestation: Let me heare What you professe.

Flo. Do, and be witnesse too't.

Pol. And this my neighbours too?

Flo. And he, and more Than he, and men: the earth, the heauens, and all; That were I crown'd the most Imperiall Monarch Thereof most worthy: were I the fayrest youth That euer made eye swerue, had force and knowledge More then was euer spent, I would not prize them Without her Loue; for her, employ them all, Commend them, and condemne them to her seruice, Or to their owne perdition.

Pol. Fairely offer'd.

Cam. This shewes a sound affection.

Shep. But my daughter, Say you the like to him.

Per. I cannot speake So well, (nothing so well) no, nor meane better By th'pattern of mine owne thoughts, I cut out The purtie of his.

Shep. Take hands, a bargaine; And friends vnknowne, you shall beare witnesse to't: I giue my daughter to him, and will make Her Portion, equall his.

Flo. O, that must bee I th'Vertue of your daughter: One being dead, I shall haue more then you can dreame of yet, Enough then for your wonder: but come on, Contract vs fore these Witnesses.

Shep. Come, your hand: And daughter, yours.

Pol. Soft Swaine a-while, beseech you, Haue you a Father?

Flo. I haue: but what of him?

Pol. Knowes he of this?

Flo. He neither do's, nor shall.

Pol. Me-thinkes a Father, Is at the Nuptiall of his sonne, a guest That best becomes the Table: Pray you once more Is not your Father growne incapable Of reasonable affayres? Is he not stupid With Age, and alring Rheumes? Can he speake? heare? Know man, from man? Dispute his owne estate? Lies he not bed-rid? And again, do's nothing But what he did, being childish?

Flo. No good Sir He has his health, and ampler strength indeed Then most haue of his age.

Pol. By my white beard, You offer him (if this be so) a wrong Something vnfilially. Reason my sonne Should choose himselfe a wife, but as good reason The Father (all whose joy is nothing else) But for some other reasons (my grave Sir) Which (is not fit you know, I not acquaint My Father of this business).

Pol. Let him know't.

Flo. He shall not.

Pol. Prethee let him.

Flo. No, he must not.

Shep. Let him (my sonne) he shall not need to grieue At knowing of thy choice.

Flo. Come, come, he must not. Marke our Contract.

Pol. Marke your diuorce (yong sir) Whom sonne I dare not call: Thou art too base To be acknowledge. Thou a Sceptres heire, That thus affects a sheepe-hooke? Thou, old Traitor, I am sorry, that by hanging thee, I can but shorten thy life one weeke. And thou, fresh peece Of excellent Witchcraft, whom of force must know The royall Foole thou coap'st with.

Shep. Oh my heart.

Pol. Ile haue thy beauty scratcht with briers & made More homely then thy state. For thee (fond boy) If I may euer know thou dost but sigh, That thou no more shalt neuer see this knacke (as never I meant thou shalt) we'l barre thee from succession, Not hold thee of our blood, no not our Kin, Farre than Deucalion off: (marke thou my words) Follow vs to the Court. Thou Churle, for this time (Though full of our displeasure) yet we free thee From the dead blow of it. And you Enchantment,

Wor-

Worthy enough a Herdsman: yea him too,
That makes himselfe (but for our Honor therein)
Vnworthy thee. If ever henceforth, thou
These rurall Latches, to his entrance open,
Or hope his body more, with thy embraces,
I will deuise a death, as cruell for thee
As thou art tender to't. Exit.

Perd. Even here vndone:
I was not much a-feard: for once, or twice
I was about to speake, and tell him plainely,
The selfe-same Sun, that shines vpon his Court,
Hides not his visage from our Cottage, but
Lookes on alike. Will please you (Sir) be gone?
I told you what would come of this: Beseech you
Of your owne State take care: This dreame of mine
Being now awake, Ile Queene it no inch farther,
But milke my Ewes, and weepe.

Cam. Why how now Father,
Speake ere thou dyest.

Shep. I cannot speake, nor think,
Nor dare to know, that which I know: O Sir,
You haue vndone a man of fourescore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet: yea,
To dye vpon the bed my father dy'de,
To lye close by his honest bones; but now
Some Hangman must put on my shrowd, and lay me
Where no Priest shouels-in dust. Oh cursed wretch,
That knew'st this was the Prince, and wouldst aduenture
To mingle faith with him. Vndone, vndone:
If I might dye within this houre, I haue liu'd
To die when I desire. Exit.

Flo. Why looke you so vpon me?
I am but sorry, not affear'd: delaid,
But nothing altred: What I was, I am:
More straining on, for plucking backe; not following
My leash vnwillingly.

Cam. Gracious my Lord,
You know my Fathers temper: at this time
He will allow no speech: (which I do guesse
You do not purpose to him:) and as hardly
Will he endure your sight, as yet I feare;
Then tell the fury of his Highnesse settles
Come not before him.

Flo. I not purpose it:
I thinke Camillo.

Cam. Even he, my Lord.

Per. How often haue I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'twer knowne?

Flo. It cannot faile, but by
The Violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature crush the sides o'th earth together,
And marre the seeds within. Lift vp thy lookes:
From my succession wipe me (Father) I
Am heyre to my affection.

Cam. Be aduis'd.

Flo. I am: and by my fancie, if my Reason
Will thereto be obedient: I haue reason:
If not, my senses better pleas'd with madnesse,
Do bid it welcome.

Cam. This is desperate (sir.)

Flo. So call it: but it do's fulfill my vow:
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo,
Not for Bohemia, nor the pompe that may
Be thereon gleaned: for all the Sun sees, or
The close earth wombes, or the profound seas, hides
In vnknowne fadoms, will I breake my oath
To this my faire beton'd: Therefore, I pray you.
As you haue ever bin my Fathers honour'd friend
When he shall miss me, as (in faith I meane not
To see him any more) cast your good counsailes
Vpon his passion: Let my selfe, and Fortune
Tug for the time to come. This you may know,
And so deliuer, I am put to Sea
With her, who here I cannot hold on shore:
And most opportune to her needs, I haue
A Vessell rides fast by, but not prepar'd
For this designe. What course I meane to hold Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concerne me the reporting.

Cam. O my Lord,
I would your spirit were easier for aduice,
Or stronger for your needs.

Flo. Heare Perdita,
Ile heare you by and by.

Cam. He's irremouable,
Resolu'd for flight: Now were I happy if
His going, I could frame to serue my turne,
Saue him from danger, do him loue and honor,
Purchase the sight againe of deere Sicillia,
And that vnhappy King, my Master, whom
I so much thirst to see.

Flo. Now good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious business, that
I leaue out ceremony.

Cam. Sir, I thinke
You haue heard of my poore seruices, i'th loue
That I haue borne your Father?

Flo. Very nobly
Haue you deseru'd: It is my Fathers Musicke
To speake your deeds: not little of his care
To haue them recompense'd, as thought on.

Cam. Well (my Lord)
If you may please to thinke I loue the King,
And through him, what's nearest to him, which is
Your gracious selfe; embrace but my direction,
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration. On mine honor,
Ile point you where you shall haue such receiuing
As shall become your Highnesse, where you may Enioy your Mistris; from the whom, I see
There's no disiunction to be made, but by
(As heauens forefend) your ruine: Marry her,
And with my best endeuours, in your absence,
Your discontenting Father, strive to qualifie
And bring him vp to liking.

Flo. How Camillo
May this (almost a miracle) be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And after that trust to thee.

Cam. Haue you thought on
A place whereto you'l go?

Flo. Not any yet:
But as th'vnthought-on accident is guiltie
To what we wildely do, so we professe
Our selues to be the slaues of chance, and flyes
Of every winde that blowes.

Cam. Then list to me:
This followes, if you will not change your purpose
But vndergo this flight; make for Sicillia,
And there present your selfe, and your fayre Princesse,
(For so I see she must be) 'fore Leontes;

Shee

She shall be habited, as it becomes
The partner of your Bed. Me thinkes I see
Leontes opening his free Armes, and weeping
His Welcomes forth: asks thee there Sonne forgiuenesse,
As 'twere i'th' Fathers person: kisses the hands
Of your fresh Princesse; ore and ore diuides him,
'Twixt his vnkindnesse, and his Kindnesse: th'one
He chides to Hell, and bids the other grow
Faster then Thought, or Time.

Flo. Worthy Camillo,
What colour for my Visitation, shall I
Hold vp before him?

Cam. Sent by the King your Father
To greet him, and to giue him comforts. Sir,
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you (as from your Father) shall deliuer,
Things knowne betwixt vs three, Ile write you downe,
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say: that he shall not perceiue,
But that you haue your Fathers Bosome there,
And speake his very Heart.

Flo. I am bound to you:
There is some sappe in this.

Cam. A Course more promising,
Then a wild dedication of your selues
To vnpath'd Waters, vndream'd Shores; most certaine,
To Misteries enough: no hope to helpe you,
But as you shake off one, to take another:
Nothing so certaine, as your Anchors, who
Doe their best office, if they can but stay you,
Where you'le be loth to be: besides you know,
Prosperitie's the very bond of Loue,
Whose fresh complexion, and whose heart together,
Affliction alters.

Perd. One of these is true:
I thinke Affliction may subdue the Cheeke,
But not take-in the Mind.

Cam. Yea? say you so?
There shall not, at your Fathers House, these seuen yeeres
Be borne another such.

Flo. My good Camillo,
She's as forward, of her Breeding, as
She is i'th' rear 'our Birth.

Cam. I cannot say 'tis pitty
She lacks Instructions, for she seemes a Mistresse
To most that teach.

Perd. Your pardon Sir, for this,
Ile blush you Thanks.

Flo. My prettiest Perdita.
But O, the Thornes we stand vpon: (Camillo)
Preserver of my Father, now of me,
The Medicine of our House: how shall we doe?
We are not furnish'd like Bohemia's Sonne,
Nor shall appeare in Sicilia.

Cam. My Lord,
Feare none of this: I thinke you know my fortunes
Doe all lye there: it shall be so my care,
To haue you royally appointed, as if
The Scene you play, were mine. For instance Sir,
That you may know you shall not want: one word.

Enter Autolycus

Aut. Ha, ha, what a Foole Honestie is? and Trust (his sworne brother) a very simple Gentleman. I haue sold all my Trumperie: not a counterfeit Stone, not a Ribbon, Glasse, Pomander, Browch, Table-booke, Ballad, Knife, Tape, Glouc, Shoo-tye, Bracelet, Horne-Ring, to keepe my Pack from fasting: they throng who should buy first, as if my Trinkets had beene hallowed, and brought a benediction to the buyer: by which meanes, I saw whose Purse was best in Picture; and what I saw, to my good vse, I remembred. My Clowne (who wants but something to be a reasonable man) grew so in loue with the Wenches Song, that hee would not stirre his Petty-toes, till he had both Tune and Words, which so drew the rest of the Heard to me, that all their other Senses stocke in Eares: you might haue pinch'd a Placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a Cod-peece of a Purse? I would haue fill'd Keyes of that hung in Chaynes: no hearing, no feeling, but my Sirs Song, and admiring the Nothing of it. So that in this time of Lethargie, I picked and cut most of their Festiuall Purses: And had not the old-man come in with a Whoo-bub against his Daughter, and the Kings Sonne, and scar'd my Choughes from the Chaffe, I had not left a Purse alme in the whole Army.

Cam. Nay, but my Letters by this mesnes being there
So soone as you arriue, shall clearse that doubt.

Flo. And those that you'le procure from King Leontes?

Cam. Shall satisfie your Father.

Perd. Happy be you:
All that you speake, shewes fair.

Cam. Who haue we here?
We'le make an Instrument of this: omit
Nothing may giue vs aide.

Aut. If they haue ouer-heard me now: why hanging.

Cam. How now (good Fellow)
Why shak'st thou so? Feare not (man)
Here's no harme intended to thee.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir.

Cam. Why, be so still: here's no body will steale that from thee: yet for the out-side of thy poueritie, we must make an exchange; therefore dis-case thee instantly (thou must thinke there's a necessitie in't) and change Garments with this Gentleman: Though the penny-worth (on his side) be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.

Aut. I am a poore Fellow, Sir: (I know ye well enough.)

Cam. Nay prethee dispatch: the Gentleman is halfe flea'd already.

Aut. Are you in earnest, Sir? (I smell the trick on't.)

Flo. Dispatch, I prethee.

Aut. Indeed I haue had Earnest, but I cannot with conscience take it.

Cam. Vnbuckle, vnbuckle.
Fortunate Mistresse (let my prophecie
Come home to ye:) you must retire your selfe
Into some Couert; take your sweet-hearts Hat
And pluck it ore your Browes, muffle your face,
Dis-mantle you, and (as you can) dissiken
The truth of your owne seeming, that you may
(For I doe feare eyes ouer) to Ship-board
Get vnder-sey'd.

Perd. I see the Play so lyes,
That I must beare a part.

Cam. No remedie:
Haue you done there?

Flo. Should I now meet my Father,
He would not call me Sonne.

Cam. Nay, you shall haue no Hat:
Come Lady, come: Farewell (my friend.)

Aut. Adieu, Sir.

Flo. O Perdita: what haue we twaine forgot?

Pray.

Pray you a word.

Cam. What I doe next, shall be to tell the King
Of this escape, and whither they are bound;
Wherein, my hope is, I shall so prevaile,
To force him after: in whose company
I shall re-view Sicilia; for whose sight,
I have a Womens Longing.

Flo. Fortune speed vs:
Thus we set on (Camillo) to th'Sea-side.

Cam. The swifter speed, the better. Exit.

Aut. I vnderstand the businesse, I heare it: to have an open eare, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a Cut-purse; a good Nose is requisite also, to smell out worke for th'other Sences. I see this is the time that the vnwiseft man doth thriue. What an exchange had this been, without boot? What a boot is here, with this exchange? Sure the Gods doe this yeere connive at vs, and we may doe any thing extempore. The Prince himselfe is about a peece of Iniquitie (stealing away from his Father, with his Clog at his heeles:) if I thought it were a peece of honestie to acquaint the King withall, I would not do't: I hold it the more knaverie to conceale it; and therein am I constant to my Profession.

Enter Clowne and Shepheard.

Aside, aside, here is more matter for a hot braine: Every Lanes end, every Shop, Church, Session, Hanging, yeelds a carefull man worke.

Clowne. See, see: what a man you are now? there is no other way, but to tell the King she's a Changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

Shep. Nay, but heare me.

Clow. Nay; but heare me.

Shep. Goe too then.

Clow. She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood ha's not offended the King, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punish'd by him. Shew those things you found about her (those secret things, all but what she ha's with her:) This being done, let the Law goe whistle: I warrant you.

Shep. I will tell the King all, every word, yea, and his Sonnes pranckes too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his Father, nor to me, to goe about to make me the Kings Brother in Law.

Clow. Indeed Brother in Law was the farthest off you could haue beene to him, and then your Blood had beene the dearer, by I know how much an ounce

Aut. Very wisely (Puppies.)

Shep. Well: let vs to the King: there is that in this Fardell, will make him scratch his Beard.

Aut. I know not what impediment this Complaint may be to the flight of my Master.

Clo. Pray heartily he be at' Pallace.

Aut. Though I am not naturally honest, I am so sometimes by chance: Let me pocket vp my Pedlers excrement. How now (Rustiques) whither are you bound?

Shep. To th' Pallace (and it like your Worship.)

Aut. Your Affaires there? what? with whom? the Condition of that Fardell? the place of your dwelling? your names? your ages? of what having? breeding, and any thing that is fitting to be knowne, discouer?

Clo. We are but plaine fellowes, Sir.

Aut. A Lye; you are rough, and hairie: Let me have no lying; it becomes none but Tradesmen, and they often giue vs (Souldiers) the Lye, but we pay them for it with stamped Coyne, not stabbing Steele, therefore they doe not giue vs the Lye.

Clo. Your Worship had like to haue given vs one, if you had not taken your selfe with the manner.

Shep. Are you a Courtier, and't like you Sir?

Aut. Whether it like me, or no, I am a Courtier. Seest thou not the ayre of the Court, in these enfoldings? Hath not my gait in it, the measure of the Court? Receiues not thy Nose Court-Odour from me? Reflect I not on thy Basenesse, Court-Contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toaze from thee thy Businesse, I am therefore no Courtier? I am Courtier Cap-a-pe; and one that will eyther push-on, or pluck-back, thy Businesse there: whereupon I command thee to open thy Affaire.

Shep. My Businesse, Sir, is to the King.

Aut. What Aduocate ha'st thou to him?

Shep. I know not (and't like you.)

Clo. Aduocate's the Court-word for a Pheasant: say you haue none.

Shep. None, Sir: I haue no Pheasant Cock, nor Hen.

Aut. How blessed are we, that are not simple men?
Yet Nature might haue made me as these are,
Therefore I will not disdaine.

Clo. This cannot be but a great Courtier.

Shep. His Garments are rich, but he weares them not handsomely.

Clo. He seemes to be the more Noble, in being fantastical: A great man, I'le warrant; I know by the picking on's Teeth.

Aut. The Fardell there? What's i'th' Fardell? Wherefore that Box?

Shep. Sir, there lyes such Secrets in this Fardell and Box, which none must know but the King, and which hee shall know within this houre, if I may come to th' speech of him.

Aut. Age, thou hast lost thy labour.

Shep. Why Sir?

Aut. The King is not at the Pallace, he is gone aboard a new Ship, to purge Melancholy, and ayre himselfe: for if thou bee'st capable of things serious, thou must know the King is full of griefe

Shep. So 'tis said (Sir:) about his Sonne, that should haue married a Shepheards Daughter.

Aut. If that Shepheard be not in hand-fast, let him flye; the Curses he shall haue, the Tortures he shall feele, will breake the back of Man, the heart of Monster.

Clo. Think you so, Sir?

Aut. Not hee alone shall suffer what Wit can make heauie, and Vengeance bitter; but those that are germane to him (though remou'd fifty times) shall all come vnder the Hang-man: which, though it be great pitty, yet it is necessarie. An old Sheepe-whistling Rogue, a Ram-tender, to offer to haue his Daughter come into grace? Some fry hee shall be flon'd: but that death is too soft for him (say I:) Draw our Throne into a Sheep-Coat? all deaths are too few, the sharpest too easie.

Clo. Ha's the old-man ere a Sonne Sir (doe you heare) and't like you, Sir?

Aut. Hee ha's a Sonne, who shall be flayd alive, then 'noynted ouer with Honey, set on the head of a Wespes Nest, then stand till he be three quarters and a dram dead: then recouer'd againe with Aquavite, or some other hot Infusion: then, raw as he is (and in the hottest day Prognostication proclaymes) shall he be set against a Brick-wall, (the Sunne looking with a South-ward eye vpon him; where hee is to behold him, with Flyes blown to death) But what talke we of these Traitorly-Rascals, whose miseries are to be smil'd at, their offences being so capitall?

Tell

Tell me(for you seeme to be honest plaine men) what you haue to the King: being something gently consider'd, Ile bring you where he is aboard, tender your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfes: and if it be in man, besides the King, to effect your Suites, here is man shall doe it.

Clow. He seemes to be of great authoritie close with him, give him Gold; and though Authoritie be a stubborne Beare, yet hee is oft led by the Nose with Gold: shew the in-side of your Purse to the out-side of his hand, and no more adoe. Remember stoon'd, and flay'd alive.

Shep. And't please you(Sir) to vnderstake the Business for vs, here is that Gold I haue: Ile make it as much more, and leaue this young man in pawne, till I bring it you.

Aut. After I haue done what I promised?

Shep. I Sir.

Aut. Well, give me the Moitie: Are you a partie in this Business?

Clow. In some sort, Sir: but though my case be a pittifull one, I hope I shall not be flayd out of it.

Aut. Oh, that's the case of the Shepheards Sonne: hang him hee'le be made an exampie.

Clow. Comfort, good comfort: We must to the King, and shew our strange sights: he must know 'tis none of your Daughter, nor my Sister: wee are gone else. Sir, I will give you as much as this old man do's, when the Business is performed, and remaine(as he sayes) your pawne till it be brought you.

Aut. I will trust you. Walke before toward the Seaside, goe on the right hand, I will but looke vpon the Hedge, and follow you.

Clow We are blest'd, in this man: as I may say, even blest'd.

Shep. Let's before, as he bids vs: he was prouided to doe vs good.

Aut. If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer mee: shee drops Booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion: (Gold, and a means to doe the Prince my Master good; which, who knowes how that may turne backe to my aduancement?) I will bring these two Moales, these blind-ones, aboard him, if he thinke it fit to shoare them againe, and that the Complaine they haue to the King, concernes him nothing, let him call me Rogue, for being so farre officious, for I am proofe against that Title, and what shame else belongs to't: To him will I present them, there may be matter in it. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Leontes, Cleomenes, Dion, Paulina, Seruants: Florizel, Perdita.

Cleo. Sir, you haue done enough, and haue perform'd
A Saint-like Sorrow: No fault could you make,
Which you haue not redeem'd; indeed pay'd downe
More penitence, then done trespas: At the last
Doe, as the Heauens haue done; forget your euill,
With them, forgiue your selfe.

Leo. Whilest I remember
Her, and her Vertues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still thinke of
The wrong I did my selfe: which was so much,
That Heire-lesse it hath made my Kingdome, and Destroy'd the sweet'st Companion, that eie man
Bred his hopes out of, true.

Paul. Too true (my Lord:)
If one by one, you wedded all the World,
Or from the All that are, tooke something good,
To make a perfect Woman; she you killd,
Would be vparallell'd.

Leo. I think so. Kill'd?
She I kill'd? I did so: but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did: it is as bitter
Vpon thy Tongue, as in my Thought. Now, good now,
Say so but seldome.

Cleo. Not at all, good Lady:
You might haue spoken a thousand things, that would
Haue done the time more benefit, and grac'd
Your tindernesse better.

Paul. You are one of those
Would haue him wed againe.

Dio. If you would not so,
You pitty not the State, nor the Remembrance
Of his most Soueraigne Name: Consider little,
What Dangers, by his Highnesse faile of Issue,
May drop vpon his Kingdome, and drowne
Incertaine lookers on. What were more holy,
Then to reioyce the former Queene is well?
What holyer, then for Royalties repayre,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the Bed of Maiestie againe
With a sweet Fellow to't?

Paul. There is none worthy,
(Respecting her that's gone:) Besides the Gods
Will haue fulfill'd their secret purposes:
For ha's not the Diuine Apollo said?
Is't not the tenor of his Oracle,
That King Leontes shall not haue an Heire,
Till his lost Child be found? Which, that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our humane reason,
As my Antigonus to breake his Grosse,
And come againe to me: who, on my life,
Did perish with the Infant. 'Tis your counsell,
My Lord should to the Heauens be contrary,
Oppose against their will. Care not for Issue,
The Crowne will find an Heire. Great Alexander
Left his to th' Worthiest: so his Successor
Was like to be the best.

Leo. Good Paulina,
Who hast the memorie of Hermione
I know in honor: O, that ever I
Had squar'd me to thy counsell: then, even now,
I might haue look'd vpon my Queenes full eyes,
Haue taken Treasure from her Lippes.

Paul. And left them
More rich, for what they yeilded.

Leo. Thou speak'st truth:
No more such Wiues, therefore no Wife: one worse,
And better vs'd, would make her Sainted Spirit
Againe possesse her Corpe, and on this Stage
(Where we Offendors now appeare) Soule-vexe,
And begin, why to me?

Paul. Had shee such power,
She had iust such cause.

Leo. She had, and would incense me
To murther her I married.

Paul. I should so:
Were I the Ghost that walk'd, I'd bid you marke
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her: then I'd shriake, that euen your eares
Should rift to heare me, and the words that follow'd,
Should be, Remember mine.

Leo. Starres, Starres,
And all eyes else, dead coales: feare thou no Wife;
Ile haue no Wife, Paulina.

Paul. Will you sweare
Neuer to marry, but by my free leaue?

Leo. Neuer (Paulina) so be blest'd my Spirit.

Paul. Then good my Lords, beare witnesse to his Oath

Cleo. You tempt him ouer-much.

Paul. Vnlesse another,
As like Hermione, as is her Picture,
Affront his eye.

Cleo. Good Madame, I haue done.

Paul. Yet if my Lord will marry: if you will, Sir;
No remedie but you will: Giue me the Office
To chose your Queene: she shall not be to young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As (walk'd your first Queenes Ghost) it should take joy
To see her in your armes.

Leo. My true Paulina,
We shall not marry, till thou bidst vs.

Paul. That
Shall be when your first Queene's againe in breath:
Never till then.

Enter a Seruant.

Ser. One that giues out himselfe Prince Florizell,
Sonne of Polixenes, with his Princesse (shee
The fairest I haue yet beheld) desires access
To your high presence.

Leo. What with him? he comes not
Like to his Fathers Greatnesse: his approach
(So out of circumstance, and suddaine) tells vs,
'Tis not a Visitation fram'd, but force'd
By need, and accident. What Traine?

Ser. But few,
And those but meane.

Leo. His Princesse (say you) with him?

Ser. Ie: the most peerlesse peece of Earth, I thinke,
That ever the Sunne shone bright on.

Paul. Oh Hermione,
As every present Time doth boast itselfe
Aboue a better, gone; so must thy Graue
Giue way to what's seene now. Sir, you your selfe
Haue said, and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder then that Theame: shee had not beene,
Nor was not to be equall'd, then your Verse
Flow'd with her Beauties once; 'tis throwdly ebb'd,
To say you haue seene a better.

Ser. Pardon, Madame:
The one, I haue almost forgot (your pardon:)
The other, when she ha's obtayn'd your Eye,
Will haue your Tongue too. This is a Creature,
Would she begin a Sect, might quench the zeale
Of all Professors else; make Proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.

Paul. How? not women?

Ser. Women will loue her, that she is a Woman
More worth then any Man: Men, that she is
The rarest of all Women.

Leo. Goe Cleomines,
Your selfe (assisted with your honor'd Friends)
Bring them to our embracement. Still 'tis strange,
He thus should steale vpon vs. Exit.

Paul. Had our Prince
(Iewell of Children) seene this houre, he had payr'd
Well with this Lord; there was not full a moneth
Betweene their births.

Leo. Prethee no more; cease: thou know'st
He dyes to me againe, when talk'd-of: sure
When I shall see this Gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that, which may Vnfurnish me of Reason. They are come.

Enter Florizell, Perdita, Cleomines, and others.

Your Mother was most true to Wedlock, Prince,
For she did print your Royall Father off,
Conceiuing you. Were I but twenty one,
Your Fathers Image is so hit in you,
(His very ayre) that I should call you Brother,
As I did him, and speake of something wildly
By vs performd before. Most dearely welcome,
And your faire Princesse (Goddesse) oh: alas,
I lost a couple, that 'twixt Heauen and Earth
Might thus haue stood, begetting wonder, as
You (gracious Couple) doe: and then I lost
(All mine owne Folly) the Societie,
Amitie too of your brauе Father, whom
(Though bearing Misery) I desire my life
Once more to looke on him.

Flo. By his command
Haue I here touch'd Sicilia, and from him
Giue you all greetings, that a King (at friend)
Can send his Brother: and but Infirmitie
(Which waits vpon worne times) hath something seiz'd
His wish'd Abilitie, he had himselfe
The Lands and Waters, 'twixt your Throne and his
Measur'd, to looke vpon you; whom he loues
(He bad me say so) more then all the Sceptters,
And those that beare them, liuing.

Leo. Oh my Brother,
(Good Gentleman) the wrongs I haue done thee, stirre
Afresh within me: and these thy offices
(So rarely kind) are as Interpreters
Of my behind-hand slacknesse. Welcome hither,
As is the Spring to th'Earth. And hath he too
Expos'd this Paragon to th'fearefull vsage
(At least vngentle) of the dreadfull Neptune,
To greet a man, not worth her paines; much lesse,
Th'adventure of her person?

Flo. Good my Lord,
She came from Libia.

Leo. Where the Warlike Smalus,
That Noble honor'd Lord, is fear'd, and lou'd?

Flo. Most Royall Sir,
From thence: from him, whose Daughter
His Teares proclaym'd his parting with her: thence
(A prosperous South-wind friendly) we haue crost'd,
To execute the Charge my Father gaue me,
For visiting your Highnesse: My best Traine
I haue from your Sicilian Shores dismiss'd;
Who for Bohemia bend, to signifie
Not only my successe in Libia (Sir)
But my arriuall, and my Wifes, in safetie
Here, where we are.

Leo. The blessed Gods
Purge all Infection from our Ayre, whilst you
Doe Clymate here: you haue a holy Father,
A graceful Gentleman, against whose person

So

(So sacred as it is) I have done sinne,
For which, the Heauens (taking angry note)
Haue left me Issue-lesse: and yet your Father's blest (As he from Heauen merits it) with you, Worthy his goodnesse. What might I haue been,
Might I a Sonne and Daughter now haue look'd on,
Such goodly things as you?

Enter a Lord.

Lord. Most Noble Sir,
That which I shall report, will beare no credit,
Were not the proofe so nigh. Please you (great Sir)
Bohemia greets you from himselfe, by me:
Desires you to attach his Sonne, who has
(His Dignitie, and Duties both cast off)
Fled from his Father, from his Hopes, and wich
A Shepheards Daughter.

Leo. Where's Bohemia? speake.

Lord. Here, in your Citie: I now came from him
I speake amazedly, and it becomes
My meeresile, and my Message. To your Court
Whiles he was hastning (in the Chase, it seemes,
Of this faire Couple) meetes he on the way
The Father of this seeming Lady, and
Her Brother, having both their Countrey quitted,
With this young Prince.

Flo. Camillo has betray'd me;
Whose honor, and whose honestie till now,
Endur'd all Weathers.

Lord. Lay't so to his charge:
He's with the King your Father.

Leo. Who? Camillo?

Lord. Camillo (Sir) I spake with him: who now
Has these poore men in question. Never saw I
Wretches so quake: they kneele, they kisse the Earth;
Forsweare themselues as often as they speake:
Bohemia stops his eares, and threatens them
With diuers deaths, in death.

Perd. Oh my poore Father:
The Heauen sets Spyes vpon vs, will not haue
Our Contract celebrated.

Leo. You are married?

Flo. We are not (Sir) nor are we like to be:
The Starres (I see) will kiss the Valleyes first:
The odds for high and low's alike.

Leo. My Lord,
Is this the Daughter of a King?

Flo. She is,
When once she is my Wife.

Leo. That once (I see) by your good Fathers speed
Will come-on very slowly. I am sorry
(Most sorry) you haue broken from his liking,
Where you were tyd in duties: and as sorry,
Your Choise is not so rich in Worth, as Beautie,
That you might well enioy her.

Flo. Deare, looke vp:
Though Fortune, visible as Enemie,
Should chase vs, with my Father; powre no stop
Hath she to change our Loues. Beseech you (Sir)
Remember, since you ow'd no more to Time
Than I doe now: with thought of such Affections,
Step forth mine Advocate: at your request,
My Father will grant precious things, as Trifles.

Leo. Would he doe so, I'd beg your precious Mistris,
Which he counts but a Trifle.

Paul. Sir (my Liege)
Your eye hath too much youth in't: not a month
Fore your Queene dy'd, she was more worth such gazes,
Then what you looke on now.

Leo. I thought of her,
Euen in these Looks I made. But your Petition
Is yet vn-answer'd: I will to your Father:
Your Honor not o're-throwne by your desires,
I am friend to them, and you: Vpon which Errand
I now goe toward him: therefore follow me,
And marke what way I make: Come good my Lord.

Exeunt.

Scœna Secunda.

Enter Antigonus, and a Gentleman.

Ant. Beseech you (Sir) were you present at this Relation?

Gent. 1. I was by at the opening of the Fardell, heard the old Shepheard deliuer the manner how he found it: Whereupon (after a little amazednesse) we were all commanded out of the Chamber: only this (me thought) I heard the Shepheard say, he found the Child.

Ant. I would most gladly know the issue of it.

Gent. 1. I make a broken deliuerie of the business; but the changes I perceiued in the King, and Camillo, were very Notes of admiration: they seem'd almost, with staring on one another, to tear the Cases of their Eyes. There was speech in their dumbnesse, Language in their very gesture: they look'd as they had heard of a World ransom'd, or one destroyed: a notable passion of Wonder appeared in them: but the wisest beholder, that knew no more but seeing, could not say, if th'importance were Ioy, or Sorrow: but so the extremities of the one, it must needs be. Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes a Gentleman, that happily knowes more: The Newes, Rogero.

Gent. 2. Nothing but Bon-fires: the Oracle is fulfill'd: the Kings Daughter is found: such a deale of wonder is broken out within this houre, that Ballad-makers cannot be able to expresse it. Enter another Gentleman.
Here comes the Lady Paulina's Steward, he can deliuer you more. How goes it now (Sir.) This Newes (which is call'd true) is so like an old Tale, that the verisie of it is in strong suspition: Has the King found his Heire?

Gent. 3. Most true, if ever Truth were pregnant by Circumstance: That which you heare, you'le sweare you see, there is such vnitie in the proofes. The Mantle of Queene Hermione's: her Iewell about the Neck of it: the Letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his Character: the Maiestie of the Creature, in resemblance of the Mother: the Affection of Nobleness, which Nature shewes above her Breeding, and many other Euidences, proclayme her, with all certaintie to be the Kings Daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two Kings?

Gent. 2. No.

Gent. 3. Then haue you lost a Sight which was to be seene, cannot be spoken of. There might you haue beheld one Ioy crowne another, so and in such manner, that it seem'd Sorrow wept to take leaue of them: for their Ioy waded in teares. There was casting vp of Eyes, holding vp of Hands, with Countenance of such distraction, that they were to be knowne by Garment, not by Fauor.

Our

Our King being ready to leape out of himselfe, for loy of his found Daughter; as if that loy were now become a Loſſe, cryes, Oh, thy Mother: then tellsthe Bohemia forgiuenesse, then embraces his Sonne-in-Law: then againe worryes he his Daughter, with clipping her. Now he thanks the old Shepheard (which ſtands by, like a Weather-bitten Conduit, of many Kings Reigneſ.) I never heard of ſuch another Encounter; which lames Report to follow it, and vndo's deſcription to doe it.

Gent. 2. What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carryed hence the Child?

Gent. 3. Like an old Tale ſtill, which will haue matter to rehearſe, though Credit be aſleepe, and not an eare open; he was torne to pieces with a Beare: This anouches the Shepheards Sonne; who he's not only his Ignorance (which ſeemes much) to inſtifie him, but a Hand-kerchief and Rings of his, that Paulina knowes.

Gent. 1. What became of his Barke, and his Followers?

Gent. 3. Wracke the ſame inſtant of their Mothers death, and in the view of the Shepheard: ſo that all the Inſtruments which aided to expoſe the Child, were even then loſt when it was found. But oh the Noble Combat, that 'twixt loy and Sorrow was fought in Paulina. Shee had one Eye declin'd for the loſſe of her Husband, another clouered, that the Oracle was fulfill'd: Shee hiſed the Princeſſe from the Earth, and ſo locks her in embracing, as if ſhee would pin her to her heart, that ſhee might no more be in danger of loſing.

Gent. 1. The Dignitie of this Act was worth the audience of Kings and Princes, for by ſuch was it acted.

Gent. 3. One of the prettyeſt touches of all, and that which angl'd for mine Eyes (caught the Water, though not the Fiſh) was, when at the Relation of the Queenes death (with the manner how ſhee came to't bravely confeſs'd, and lamented by the King) how ſtrangeneſſe wounded his Daughter, till (from one ſigne of dolour to another) ſhee did (with an Alas) I would faine ſay, bleed Teares; for I am ſure, my heart wept blood. Who was moſt marble, there changed colour: ſome ſwounded, all ſorrowed: if all the World could haue ſeen't, the Woe had beene vniuerſall.

Gent. 1. Are they returned to the Court?

Gent. 3. No: the Princeſſe hearing of her Mothers Statue (which is in the keeping of Paulina) a Peece many yeares in doing, and now newly perform'd, by that rare Italian Maſter, Iulio Romano, who (had he himſelfe Eternitie, and could put Breath into his Worke) would beguile Nature of her Cuſtome, ſo perfectly he is her Ape: He ſo neere to Hermione, hath done Hermione, that they ſay one would ſpeake to her, and ſtand in hope of anſwer. Thither (with all greedineſſe of affection) are they gone, and there they intend to Sup.

Gent. 2. I thought ſhe had ſome great matter there in hand, for ſhee hath priuately, twice or thrice a day, ever ſince the death of Hermione, viſited that removed Houſe. Shall wee thither, and with our companie peece the Reioycing?

Gent. 1. Who would be thence, that has the benefit of Acceſſe? every winke of an Eye, ſome new Grace will be borne: our Abſence makes vs vnthriftie to our Knowledge. Let's along. Exit.

Aut. Now (had I not the dash of my former life in me) would Preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his Sonne aboard the Prince; told him, I heard them talke of a Fardell, and I know not what: but he at that time ouer-fond of the Shepheards Daughter, (ſo he then tooke her to be) who began to be much Sea-ſick, and himſelfe little better, extremitie of Weather conuincing, this Myſterie remained vndiſcouer'd. But 'tis all one to me: for had I beene the finder-out of this Secret, it would not haue rellith'd among my other diſcredits.

Enter Shepheard and Clown.

Here come thoſe I haue done good to againſt my will, and already appearing in the bloſſomes of their Fortune.

Shep. Come Boy, I am paſt more Children: but thy Sonnes and Daughters will be all Gentlemen borne.

Clow. You are well met (Sir.) you denyd to fight with mee this other day, becauſe I was no Gentleman borne. See you theſe Clothes? ſay you ſee them not, and think me ſtill no Gentleman borne: You were beſt ſay theſe Robes are not Gentlemen borne. Give me the Lye: doe: and try whether I am not now a Gentleman borne.

Aut. I know you are now (Sir) a Gentleman borne.

Clow. I, and haue been ſo any time theſe foure houres.

Shep. And ſo haue I, Boy.

Clow. So you haue: but I was a Gentleman borne before my Father: for the Kings Sonne tooke me by the hand, and call'd mee Brother: and then the two Kings call'd my Father Brother: and then the Princeſſe (my Brother) and the Princeſſe (my Siſter) call'd my Father, Father; and ſo wee wept: and there was the firſt Gentleman-like teares that euer we ſhed.

Shep. We may liue (Sonne) to ſhed many more.

Clow. I: or elſe 'twere hard luck, being in ſo prepoſterous eſtate as we are.

Aut. I humbly beſeech you (Sir) to pardon me all the faults I haue committed to your Worſhip, and to giue me your good report to the Prince my Maſter.

Shep. 'Prethee-Sonne doe; for we muſt be gentle, now we are Gentlemen.

Clow. Thou wilt amend thy life?

Aut. I, and it like your good Worſhip.

Clow. Giue me thy hand: I will ſweare to the Prince, thou art as honeſt a true Fellow as any is in Bohemia.

Shep. You may ſay it, but not ſweare it.

Clow. Not ſweare it, now I am a Gentleman? Let Boores and Franchlins ſay it, Ile ſweare it.

Shep. How if it be falſe (Sonne?)

Clow. If it be ne're ſo falſe, a true Gentleman may ſweare it, in the behalfe of his Friend: And Ile ſweare to the Prince thou art a tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt not be drunke: but I know thou art no tall Fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunke: but Ile ſweare it, and I would thou would'ſt be a tall Fellow of thy hands.

Aut. I will prouе ſo (Sir) to my power.

Clow. I, by any meanes prouе a tall Fellow: If I do not wonder, how thou dar'ſt venture to be drunke, not being a tall Fellow, truſt me not. Harke, the Kings and the Princes (our Kindred) are going to ſee the Queenes Picture. Come, follow vs: wee'le be thy good Maſters. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Leontes, Polixenes, Florizell, Perdita, Camillo, Paulina: Hermione (like a Statue:) Lords &c.

Leo. O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort
That I haue had of thee?

Paul. What (Soueraigne Sir)
I did not well, I meant well: all my Seruices
You haue pay'd home. But that you haue vouchsaf'd
(With your Crown'd Brother, and these your contracted Heires of your Kingdomes) my poore House to visit;
It is a surplus of your Grace, which neuer
My life may last to answere.
Leo. O Paulina,
We honor you with trouble: but we came
To see the Statue of our Queene. Your Gallerie
Haue we pass'd through, not without much content
In many singularities; but we saw not
That which my Daughter came to looke vpon,
The Statue of her Mother.
Paul. As she liu'd peerelesse,
So her dead likenesse I doe well beleeue
Excells what euer yet you look'd vpon,
Or hand of Man hath done: therefore I keepe it
Louely, apart. But here it is: prepare
To see the Life as liuely mock'd, as euer
Still Sleepe mock'd Death: behold, and say 'tis well,
I like your silence, it the more shewes-off
Your wonder: but yet speake, first you (my Liege)
Comes it not something neere?
Leo. Her natural Posture.
Chide me (deare Stone) that I may say indeed
Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she,
In thy not chiding: for she was as tender
As Infancie, and Grace. But yet (Paulina)
Hermione was not so much wrinckled, nothing
So aged as this seemes.
Pol. Oh, not by much.
Paul. So much the more our Carrers excellence,
Which lets goe-by some sixteene yeeres, and makes her
As she liu'd now.
Leo. As now she might haue done,
So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my Soule. Oh, thus she stood,
Euen with such Life of Maiestie (warme Life,
As now it coldly stands) when first I woo'd her.
I am asham'd: Doe not the Stone rebuke me,
For being more Stone then it? Oh Royall Peece:
There's Magick in thy Maiestie, which has
My Euils coniur'd to remembrance; and
From thy admiring Daughter tooke the Spirits,
Standing like Stone with thee.
Perd. And giue me leaue,
And doe not say 'tis Superstition, that
I kneele, and then implore her Blessing. Lady,
Deare Queene, that ended when I but began,
Giue me that hand of yours, to kisse.
Paul. O, patience:
The Statue is but newly fix'd; the Colour's
Not dry.
Camb. My Lord, your Sorrow was too sore lay'd-on,
Which sixteene Winters cannot blow away,
So many Summers dry: scarce any Ioy
Did euer so long liue; no Sorrow,
But kill'd it selfe much sooner.
Pol. Deare my Brother,
Let him, that was the cause of this, haue power
To take-off so much griefe from you, as he
Will peece vp in himselfe.
Paul. Indeed my Lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poore Image
Would thus haue wrought you (for the Stone is mine)
I'd not haue shew'd it.
Leo. Doe not draw the Curtaine.
Paul. No longer shall you gaze on't, least your Fancie
May think anon, it moues.
Leo. Let be, let be:
Would I were dead, but that me thinkes already.
(What was he that did make it?) See (my Lord)
Would you not deeme it breath'd; and that those veines
Did verily beare blood?
Pol. Masterly done:
The very Life seemes warme vpon her Lippe.
Leo. The fixure of her Eye has motion in't,
As we are mock'd with Art.
Paul. Ile draw the Curtaine:
My Lord's almost so farre transported, that
He'le thinke anon it liues.
Leo. Oh sweet Paulina,
Make me to thinke so twentie yeares together:
No setled Senses of the World can match
The pleasure of that madnesse. Let't alone.
Paul. I am sorry (Sir) I haue thus farre stir'd you: but I could affect you further.
Leo. Doe Paulina:
For this Affliction has a taste as sweet
As any Cordiall comfort. Still me thinkes
There is an ayre comes from her. What fine Chizzell
Could euer yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kisse her.
Paul Good my Lord, forbeare:
The rudd'nesse vpon her Lippe, is wet:
You'le marre it, if you kisse it; stayne your owne
With Oyly Painting: shall I draw the Curtaine.
Leo. No: not these twentie yeares.
Perd. So long could I
Stand-by, a looker-on.
Paul. Either forbeare,
Quit presently the Chappell, or resolue you
For more amazement: if you can behold it,
Ile make the Statua moue indeed; descend,
And take you by the hand: but then you'le thinke
(Which I protest against) I am assisted
By wicked Powers.
Leo. What you can make her doe,
I am content to looke on: what to speake,
I am content to heare: for 'tis as easie
To make her speake, as moue.
Paul. It is requir'd
You doe awake your Faith: then, all stand still:
On those that think it is vnlawfull Businesse
I am aboue, let them depart.
Leo. Proceed:
No foot shall stirre.
Paul. Musick; awake her Strike:
'Tis time: descend; be Stone no more: approach:
Strike all that looke vpon with marrible: Come:
Ile fill your Grace vp: stirre: nay, come away:
Bequeath to Death your numbnesse, (for from him,
Deare Life redeemes you) you perceiue she stirres:
Start not: her Actions shall be holy, as
You heare my Spell is lawfull: doe not shun her,
Vntill you see her dye againe; for then
You kill her double: Nay, present your Hand:
When she was young, you woo'd her: now, in age,
Is she become the Suitor?
Leo. Oh she's warme:
If this be Magick, let it be an Art

Lawfull

Lawfull as Eating.

Pol. She embraces him.

Cam. She hangs about his necke,
If she pertaine to life, let her speake too.

Pol. I, and make it manifest where she ha's lin'd,
Or how stolne from the dead?

Paul. That she is living,
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old Tale: but it appeares she lives,
Though yet she speake not. Marke a little while:
Please you to interpose (faire Madam) kneele,
And pray your Mothers blessing: turne good Lady,
Our Perdita is found.

Her. You Gods looke downe,
And from your sacred Vials poure your graces
Vpon my daughters head: Tell me (mine owne)
Where hast thou bin preserv'd? Where liu'd? How found
Thy Fathers Court? For thou shalt heare that I
Knowing by Paulina, that the Oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being, have preserv'd
My selfe, to see the issue.

Paul. There's time enough for that,
Least they desire (vpon this push) to trouble
Your joyes, with like Relation. Go together
You precious winners all: your exultation
Partake to every one: I (an old Turtle)
Will wing me to some wither'd bough, and there
My Mate (that's never to be found againe)
Lament, till I am lost.

Leo. O peace Paulina:
Thou shoulst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a Wife. This is a Match,
And made betweene's by Vowes. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be question'd: for I saw her
(As I thought) dead: and have (in vaine) said many
A prayer vpon her grave. Ile not seeke farre
(For him, I partly know his minde) to finde thee
An honourable husband. Come Camillo,
And take her by the hand: whose worth, and honesty
Is richly noted: and here justified
By Vs, a paire of Kings. Let's from this place.
What? looke vpon my Brother: both your pardons,
That ere I put betweene your holy looke
My ill suspition: This your Son-in-law,
And Sonne vnto the King, whom heavens directing
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina,
Leade vs from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand, and answere to his part
Perform'd in this wide gap of Time, since first
We were dissever'd: Hastily lead away. Exeunt.

The Names of the Actors.

Leontes, King of Sicilia.
Mamillius, young Prince of Sicilia.
Camillo.
Antigonus. } Foure
Cleomenes. } Lords of Sicilia.
Dion.
Hermione, Queene to Leontes.
Perdita, Daughter to Leontes and Hermione.
Paulina, wife to Antigonus.
Emilia, a Lady.
Polixenes, King of Bohemia.
Florizell, Prince of Bohemia.
Old Shepheard, reputed Father of Perdita.
Clowne, his Sonne.
Autolicus, a Rogue.
Archidamus, a Lord of Bohemia.
Other Lords, and Gentlemen, and Servants.
Shepheards, and Shepheardesses.

FINIS.

The life and death of King Iohn.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Iohn, Queene Elinor, Pembroke, Essex, and Salisbury, with the Chatillon of France.

King Iohn.

NOw say Chatillon, what would France with vs?

Chat. Thus (after greeting) speaks the King of France,
In my behaiour to the Maiesty,
The borrowed Maiesty of England here.

Elna. A strange beginning: borrowed Maiesty?

K. Iohn. Silence (good mother) heare the Embassie.

Chat. Philip of France, in right and true behalfe
Of thy deceased brother, Geffreys sonne,
Arthur Plantagenet, lays most lawfull claime
To this faire Iland, and the Territories:
To Ireland, Poyctiers, Anioue, Touraine, Maine,
Desiring thee to lay aside the sword
Which sweates vnstaynedly these seuerall titles,
And put the same into yong Arthurs hand,
Thy Nephew, and right royall Soueraigne.

K. Iohn. What followes if we disallow of this?

Chat. The proud controule of fierce and bloody warre,
To inforce these rights, so forcibly with-held.

K. Io. Here haue we war for war, & blood for blood,
Controlement for controlement: so answer France.

Chat. Then take my Kings defiance from my mouth,
The farthest limit of my Embassie.

K. Iohn. Bear mine to him, and so depart in peace,
Be thou as lightning in the eies of France;
For ere thou canst report, I will be there:
The thunder of my Cannon shall be heard.
So hence: be thou the trumpet of our wrath,
And sullen presage of your owne decay:
An honourable conduct let him haue,
Pembroke looke to't: farewell Chatillon.

Exit Chat. and Pem.

Elo. What now my sonne, haue I not ever said
How that ambitious Constance would not cease
Till she had kindled France and all the world,
Vpon the right and party of her sonne.
This might haue beene preuented, and made whole
With very easie arguments of loue,
Which now the manage of two kingdomes must
With fearefull bloody issue arbitrate.

K. Iohn. Our strong possession, and our right for vs.

Eli. Your strong possession much more then your right,
Or else it must go wrong with you and me,
So much my conscience whispers in your eare,
Which none but heauen, and you, and I, shall heare.

Enter a Sheriffe.

Essex. My Liege, here is the strangest controuersie
Come from the Country to be iudg'd by you
That ere I heard: shall I produce the men?

K. Iohn. Let them approach:
Our Abbies and our Priories shall pay
This expeditious charge: what men are you?

Enter Robert Faulconbridge, and Philip.

Philip. Your faithfull subiect, I a gentleman
Borne in Northamptonshire, and eldest sonne
As I suppose, to Robert Faulconbridge,
A Souldier by the Honor-giuing-hand
Of Cordelion Knighted in the field.

K. Iohn. What art thou?

Robert. The son and heire to that same Faulconbridge.

K. Iohn. Is that the elder, and art thou the heyre?
You came not of one mother then it seemes.

Philip. Most certaine of one mother, mighty King,
That is well knowne, and as I thinke one father:
But for the certaine knowledge of that truth,
I put you o're to heauen, and to my mother;
Of that I doubt, as all mens children may.

Eli. Out on thee rude man, & dost shame thy mother,
And wound her honor with this diffidence.

Phil. I Madame? No, I haue no reason for it,
That is my brothers plea, and none of mine,
The which if he can proue, a pops me out,
At least from faire five hundred pound a yeere:
Heauen guard my mothers honor, and my Land.

K. Iohn. A good blunt fellow: why being yonger born
Doth he lay claime to thine inheritance?

Phil. I know not why, except to get the land.
But once he slandered me with bastardy.
But whe'r I be as true begot or no,
That still I lay vpon my mothers head,
But that I am as well begot my Liege
(Faire fall the bones that tooke the paines for me)
Compare our faces, and be Iudge your selfe
If old Sir Robert did beget vs both,
And were our father, and this sonne like him:
O old sir Robert Father, on my knee
I giue heauen thanks I was not like to thee.

K. Iohn. Why what a mad-cap hath heauen lent vs here?

Elna. He hath a trickle of Cordelions face,
The accent of his tongue affecteth him:
Doe you not read some tokens of my sonne
In the large composition of this man?

K.John. Mine eye hath well examined his parts,
And findes them perfect Richard: sirra speake,
What doth moue you to claime your brothers land.
Philip. Because he hath a half-face like my father:
With halfe that face would he haue all my land,
A halfe-fac'd groat, five hundred pound a yeere?
Rob. My gracious Liege, when that my father liu'd,
Your brother did imploy my father much.
Phil. Well sir, by this you cannot get my land,
Your tale must be how he employ'd my mother.
Rob. And once dispatch'd him in an Embassie
To Germany, there with the Emperor
To treat of high affaires touching that time:
Th'aduantage of his absence tooke the King,
And in the meane time sojourn'd at my fathers;
Where how he did prouaile, I shame to speake:
But truth is truth, large lengths of seas and shores
Betweene my father, and my mother lay,
As I haue heard my father speake himselfe
When this same lusty gentleman was got:
Vpon his death-bed he by will bequeath'd
His lands to me, and tooke it on his death
That this my mothers sonne was none of his,
And if he were, he came into the world
Full fourteene weekes before the course of time:
Then good my Liedge let me haue what is mine,
My fathers land, as was my fathers will.
K.John. Sirra, your brother is Legitimate.
Your fathers wife did after wedlocke beare him:
And if she did play false, the fault was hers,
Which fault lyes on the hazards of all husbands
That marry wiues: tell me, how if my brother
Who as you say, tooke paines to get this sonne,
Had of your father claim'd this sonne for his,
Infooth, good friend, your father might haue kept
This Calfe, bred from his Cow from all the world.
Infooth he might: then if he were my brothers
My brother might not claime him, nor your father
Being none of his, refuse him: this concludes,
My mothers sonne did get your fathers heyre,
Your fathers heyre must haue your fathers land.
Rob. Shal then my fathers Will be of no force,
To dispossesse that childe which is not his.
Phil. Of no more force to dispossesse me sir,
Then was his will to get me, as I think.
Eli. Whether hadst thou rather be a Faulconbridge,
And like thy brother to enioy thy land:
Or the reputed sonne of Cordelion,
Lord of thy presence, and no land beside.
Bast. Madam, and if my brother had my shape
And I had his, sir *Robert*s his like him,
And if my legs were two such riding rods,
My armes, such eele-skins stuft, my face so thin,
That in mine eare I durst not stickle a rose,
Lest men should say, looke where three farthings goes,
And to his shape were heyre to all this land,
Would I might neuer stirre from off this place,
I would giue it every foot to haue this face:
It would not be sir nobbe in any case.
Elinor. I like thee well: wilt thou forsake thy fortune,
Bequeath thy land to him, and follow me?
I am a Souldier, and now bound to France.
Bast. Brother, take you my land, I'le take my chance;
Your face hath got five hundred pound a yeere,
Yet sell you face for five pence and 'tis deere:
Madam, I'le follow you vnto the death.
Elinor. Nay, I would haue you go before me thither.
Bast. Our Country manners giue our betters way.
K.John. What is thy name?
Bast. Philip my Liege, so is my name begun.
Philip, good old Sir *Robert*s wiues eldest sonne.
K.John. From henceforth beare his name
Whose forme thou bearest:
Kneele thou downe Philip, but rise more great,
Arise Sir Richard, and Plantagenet.
Bast. Brother by th'mothers side, giue me your hand,
My father gaue me honor, yours gaue land:
Now blessed be the houre by night or day
When I was got, Sir Robert was away.
Eli. The very spirit of Plantagenet:
I am thy grandame Richard, call me so.
Bast. Madam by chance, but not by truth, what tho;
Something about a little from the right,
In at the window, or else ore the hatch:
Who dares not stirre by day, must walke by night,
And haue is haue, how euer men doe catch:
Neere or farre off, well wonne is still well shot,
And I am I, how ere I was begot.
K.John. Goe, Faulconbridge, now hast thou thy desire,
A landlesse Knight, makes thee a landed Squire:
Come Madam, and come Richard, we must speed
For France, for France, for it is more then need.
Bast. Brother adieu, good fortune come to thee,
For thou wast gotten th'way of honestly.
Exeunt all but bastard.

Bast. A foot, of Honor better then I was,
But many a many foot of Land the worse.
Well, now can I make any Joane a Lady,
Good den Sir Richard, Godamercy fellow,
And if his name be George, I'le call him Peter;
For new made honor doth forget mens names:
'Tis too respective, and too sociable
For your conuersion, now your traueller,
He and his tooth-picke at my worships messe,
And when my knightly stomacke is suffis'd,
Why then I suckle my teeth, and catechize
My picked man of Countries: my dear sir,
Thus leaning on mine elbow I begin,
I shall beseech you; that is question now,
And then comes answer like an Abey booke:
O sir, sayes answer, at your best command,
At your employment, at your seruice sir:
No sir, sayes question, I sweet sir at yours,
And so ere answer knowes what question would,
Saving in Dialogue of Complement,
And talking of the Alpes and Apennines,
The Perennean and the riuer Po,
It drawes toward supper in conclusion so.
But this is worshipfull society,
And fits the mounting spirit like my self;
For he is but a bastard to the time
That doth not smoake of obseruation,
And so am I whether I smoke or no:
And not alone in habit and device,
Exterior forme, outward accoutrement;
But from the inward motion to deliuer
Sweet, sweet, sweet poyson for the ages tooth,
Which though I will not practise to deceiue,
Yet to auoid deceit I meane to learne;
For it shall strew the footsteps of my rising:
But who comes in such haste in riding robes?

What women son is this? hath thee no husband
That will take paines to blow a horse behindher?
O me, 'tis my mother: how now good Lady,
What brings you heere to Court so hastily?

Enter Lady Faulconbridge and Iaques Gurney.

Lady. Where is that slaue thy brother? where is he?
That holds in chase mine honour vp and downe.
Bast. My brother Robert, old Sir Robert's sonne:
Colbrand the Gyant, that same mighty man,
Is Sir Robert's sonne that you seeke so?
Lady. Sir Robert's sonne, I thou vnreuerend boy,
Sir Robert's sonne? why scorn'st thou at sir Robert?
He is Sir Robert's sonne, and so art thou.
Bast. Iaques Gournie, wilt thou giue vs leaue a while?
Gour. Good leaue good Philip.
Bast. Philip, sparrow, Iames,
There's toyes abroad, anon I'le tell thee more.

Exit Iames.

Madam, I was not old Sir Robert's sonne,
Sir Robert might haue eat his part in me
Vpon good Friday, and neere broke his fast:
Sir Robert could doe well, marrie to confesse
Could get me sir Robert could not doe it;
We know his handy-worke, therefore good mother
To whom am I beholding for these limmes?
Sir Robert never holpe to make this legge.
Lady. Hast thou conspired with thy brother too,
That for thine owne gaine shouldst defend mine honor?
What means this scorne, thou most vncouerd knaue?
Bast. Knighe, knight good mother, Basilisco-like:
What, I am dub'd, I haue it on my shoulder:
But mother, I am not Sir Robert's sonne,
I haue disclaim'd Sir Robert and my land,
Legitimation, name, and all is gone;
Then good my mother, let me know my father,
Some proper man I hope, who was it mother?
Lady. Hast thou denied thy self a Faulconbridge?
Bast. As sinfully as I denie the deuill.
Lady. King Richard Cordelion was thy father,
By loue and vehement suit I was seduc'd
To make roome for him in my husbands bed:
Heauen lay not my transgression to my charge,
That art the issue of my deere offence
Which was so strongly vrg'd past my defence.
Bast. Now by this light were I to get againe,
Madam I would not wish a better father:
Some sinnes doe beare their priuiledge on earth,
And so doth yours: your fault, was not your folly,
Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose,
Subiected tribute to commanding loue,
Against whose furie and vnmatched force,
The awlesse Lion could not wage the fight,
Nor keepe his Princely heart from Richards hand:
He that perforce robs Lions of their hearts,
May easily winne a woman: aye my mother,
With all my heart I thanke thee for my father:
Who lies and dares but say, thou didst not will
When I was got. I'le send his soule to hell.
Come Lady I will shew thee to my kinne,
And they shall say, when Richard me begot,
If thou hadst said him nay, it had beene sinne;
Who says it was, he lies, I say twas not.

Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter before Angiers, Philip King of France, Lewis, Dauphin, Austria, Constance, Arthur.

Lewis. Before Angiers well met braue Austria,
Arthur that great fore-runner of thy blood,
Richard that rob'd the Lion of his heart,
And fought the holy Warres in Palestine,
By this braue Duke came early to his graue:
And for amends to his posteritie,
At our importance hether is he come,
To spread his colours boy, in thy behalfe,
And to rebuke the vsurpation
Of thy vnnaturall Vncle, English John,
Embrace him, loue him, giue him welcome hether.
Arth. God shall forgiue you Cordelions death
The rather, that you giue his off-spring life,
Shadowing their right vnder your wings of warre:
I giue you welcome with a powerlesse hand,
But with a heart full of vnstained loue,
Welcome before the gates of Angiers Duke.
Lewis. A noble boy, who would not doe thee right?
Aust. Vpon thy cheeke lay I this zelous kiss,
As seale to this indenture of my loue:
That to my home I will no more returne
Till Angiers, and the right thou hast in France,
Together with that pale, that white-fac'd shore,
Whose foot spurnes backe the Oceans roaring tides,
And coopes from other lands her Iianders,
Even till that England hedg'd in with the main,
That Water-walled Bulwarke, still secure
And confident from forreine purposes,
Even till that vtmost corner of the West
Salute thee for her King, till then faire boy
Will I not thinke of home, but follow Armes.
Const. O take his mothers thanks, a widdows thanks,
Till your strong hand shall helpe to giue him strength,
To make a more requitall to your loue.
Aust. The peace of heauen is theirs: lift their swords
In such a iust and charitable warre.
King. Well, then to worke our Cannon shall be bent
Against the browes of this resisting towne,
Call for our chiefest men of discipline,
To cull the plots of best aduantages:
We'll lay before this towne our Royal bones,
Wade to the market-place in French-mens bloud,
But we will make it subiect to this boy.
Con. Stay for an answer to your Embassie,
Lest vnadui'd you staine your swords with bloud,
My Lord Chatillon may from England bring
That right in peace which heere we vrge in warre,
And then we shall repent each drop of bloud,
That hot rash haste so indirectly shedde.

Enter Chatillon.

King. A wonder Lady: lo vpon thy wish
Our Messenger Chatillon is arriu'd,
What England saies, say briefely gentle Lord,
We coldly pause for thee, Chatillon speake.
Chat. Then turne your forces from this paltry siege,
And stirre them vp against a mightier taske:
England impatient of your iust demands,
Hath put himselfe in Armes, the aduerse winds

Whose leisure I haue staid, haue given him time
To land his Legions all as soone as I:
His marches are expedient to this towne,
His forces strong, his Souldiers confident:
With him along is come the Mother Queene,
An Ace stirring him to blood and strife,
With her her Neece, the Lady Blanch of Spaine,
With them a Bastard of the Kings deceast,
And all th'vnsettled humors of the Land,
Rash, inconsiderate, fiery voluntaries,
With Ladies faces, and fierce Dragons spleenes,
Haue sold their fortunes at their native homes,
Bearing their birth-rights proudly on their backs,
To make a hazard of new fortunes heere:
In briefe, a braue choyse of dauntlesse spirits
Then now the English bottomes haue wast o're,
Did never flote vpon the swelling tide,
To doe offence and scathe in Christendome:
The interruption of their churlish drums
Cuts off more circumstance, they are at hand,
Drums beate.
To parle or to fight, therefore prepare.
Kin. How much valook'd for, is this expedition.
Aust By how much vnexpected, by so much
We must awake indeuor for defence,
For courage mounteth with occasion,
Let them be welcome then, we are prepar'd.

Enter K. of England, Bastard, Queene, Blanch, Pembroke, and others.

K.John. Peace be to France: If France in peace permit
Our iust and lineall entrance to our owne;
If not, bleede France, and peace ascend to heauen.
Whiles we Gods wrathfull agent doe correct
Their proud contempt that bates his peace to heauen.
Fran. Peace be to England, if that warre returne
From France to England, there to liue in peace:
England we loue, and for that England's sake,
With burden of our armor heere we sweat:
This toyle of ours should be a worke of thine;
But thou from loosing England art so sure,
That thou hast vnder-wrought his lawfull King,
Cut off the sequence of posterity,
Out-faced Infant State, and done a rape
Vpon the maiden vertue of the Crowne:
Looke heere vpon thy brother Geffreyes face,
These eyes, these browes, were moulded out of his;
This little abstract doth containe that large,
Which dwell in Geffrey and the hand of time,
Shall draw this briefe into as huge a volume:
That Geffrey was thy elder brother borne,
And this his sonne, England was Geffreys right,
And this is Geffreyes in the name of God:
How comes it then that thou art call'd a King,
When liuing blood doth in these temples beat
Which owe the crowne, that thou ouer-masterest?
K.John. From whom hast thou this great commission
To draw my answer from thy Articles? (France
Fra. Frō that supernal Iudge that stirs good thoughts
In any breast of strong authoritie,
To looke into the blots and staines of right,
That Iudge hath made me guardian to this boy
Vnder whose warrant, I impeach thy wrong,
And by whose helpe I meane to chastise it.
K.Iohn. Alack thou dost vsurpe authoritie.
Fran. Excuse it is to beat vsurping downe.
Queen. Who is it thou dost call vsurper France?
Const. Let me make answer: thy vsurping sonne.
Queen. Out insolent, thy bastard shall be King,
That thou maist be a Queen, and checke the world.
Con. My bed was ever to thy sonne as true
As thine was to thy husband, and this boy
Liker in feature to his father Geffrey
Then thou and John, in manners being as like,
As rain to water, or deuill to his dammes;
My boy a bastard? by my soule I thinke
His father never was so true begot,
It cannot be, and if thou wert his mother. (-ther
Queen. Theres a good mother boy, that blots thy fa-
Const. There's a good grandame boy
That would blot thee.
Aust. Peace.
Bast. Heare the Cryer.
Aust. What the deuill art thou?
Bast. One that will play the deuill sir with you,
And a may catch your hide and you alone:
You are the Hare of whom the Proueb goes
Whose valour plucks dead Lyons by the beard;
Ile sniuake your skin-coat and I catch you right,
Sirra looke too't, yfaith I will, yfaith.
Blan. O well did he become that Lyons robe,
That did disrobe the Lion of that robe.
Bast. It lies as sightly on the backe of him,
As great Alcides shooes vpon an Asse:
But Asse, Ile take that burthen from your backs,
Or lay on that shall make your shoulders cracke.
Aust. What cracker is this same that deafes our eares
With this abundance of superfluous breath?
King Lewis, determine what we shall doe strait.
Lew. Women & fooles, breake off your conference.
King Iohn, this is the very summe of all:
England and Ireland, Anglers, Touraine, Maine,
In right of Arthur doe I claime of thee.
Wilt thou resigne them, and lay downe thy Armes?
Iohn. My life as soone: I doe defie thee France,
Arthur of Britaine, yeeld thee to my hand,
And out of my deere loue Ile giue thee more,
Then ever the coward hand of France can win;
Submit thee boy.
Queen. Come to thy grandame child.
Const. Doe childe, goe to yt grandame childe,
Giue grandame kingdome, and it grandame will
Giue yt a plum, a cherry, and a figge,
There's a good grandame.
Arthur. Good my mother peace,
I would that I were low laid in my grave,
I am not worth this coyle that's made for me. (weepes.
Qu. Mo. His mother shames him so, poore boy he
Con. Now shame vpon you where she does or no.
His grandames wrongs, and not his mothers shames
Drawes these heauen-moueing pearles fro his poor eies,
Which heauen shall take in nature of a fee:
I, with these Christall beads heauen shall be brib'd
To doe him Iustice, and reuenge on you.
Qu. Thou monstrous slanderer of heauen and earth.
Con. Thou monstrous iniurer of heauen and earth,
Call not me slanderer, thou and thine vsurpe
The Dominations, Royalties, and rights
Of this oppressed boy; this is thy eldest sonnes sonne,
Infortunate in nothing but in thee:

Thy

Thy sonne are vilified in this poore childe,
The Canon of the Law is laide on him,
Being but the second generation
Removed from thy sinne-conceiving wombe.
Iohn. Bedlam haue done.
Con. I haue but this to say,
That he is not only plagued for her sin,
But God hath made her sinne and her, the plague
On this removed issue, plagued for her,
And with her plague her sinne: his injury
Her marrie the Beadle to her sinne,
All punish'd in the person of this childe,
And all for her, a plague vpon her.
Qu. Thou vnreuised scold, I can produce
A Will, that barres the title of thy sonne.
Con. I who doubts that, a Will: a wicked will,
A woman's will, a cankred Grandams will.
Pro. Peace Lady, pause, or be more temperate,
It ill becomes this presence to cry ayme
To these ill tuned repetitions:
Some Trumpet summon hither to the walles
These men of Angiers, let vs heare them speake,
Whose title they admit, Arthur's or Iohn's.

Trumpet sounds.
Enter a Citizen vpon the walles.

Cit. Who is it that hath warn'd vs to the walles?
Pro. Tis France, for England.
Iohn. England for it selfe.
You men of Angiers, and my louing subiects.
Pro. You louing men of Angiers, Arthur's subiects,
Our Trumpet call'd you to this gentle parle.
Iohn. For our aduantage, therefore heare vs first.
These flaggs of France that are aduanced heere
Before the eye and prospect of your Towne,
Haue hither march'd to your endamagement.
The Canons haue their bowels full of wrath,
And ready mounted are they to spit forth
Their Iron indignation 'gainst your walles:
All preparation for a bloody siedge
And merciles proceeding, by these French,
Comfort your Cities eyes, your winking gates:
And but for our approch, those sleeping stones,
Thou as a waste doth girdle you about
By the compulsion of their Ordinance,
By this time from their fixed beds of lime
Had bin dishabited, and wide breaches made
For bloody power to rush vppon your peace.
But on the sight of vs your lawfull King,
Who painefully with much expedient march
Haue brought a counter-checke before your gates,
To saue vnscratch'd your Cities threatned cheeke:
Behold the French amaz'd vouchsafe a parle,
And now instead of bullets wrapt in fire
To make a shaking feuer in your walles,
They shoote but calme words, folded vp in smoake,
To make a faithlesse errour in your eares,
Which trust accordingly kinde Citizens,
And let vs in. Your King, whose labour'd spirits
Fore-wearied in this action of swift speede,
Craues harbourage within your Citie walles.
France. When I haue said, make answer to vs both.
Lo in this right hand, whose protection
Is most diuinely vow'd vpon the right
Of him it holds, stands young Plantagenet,
Sonne to the elder brother of this man,
And King ore him, and all that he enioyes:
For this downe-troden equity, we tread
In warlike march, these greenes before your Towne,
Being no further enemy to you
Then the constraint of hospitable zeale,
In the relieue of this oppressed childe,
Religiously prouokes. Be pleased then
To pay that duties which you truly owe,
To him that owes it, namely, this yong Prince,
And then our Armes, like to a muzled Beare,
Saue in aspect, hath all offence seal'd vp:
Our Cannons malice vainly shall be spent
Against th'inuoluerable clouds of heauen,
And with a blessed and vn-vext retyre,
With vnbruis'd swords, and Helmets all vnbruis'd,
We will beare home that lustie blood againe,
Which heere we came to spout against your Towne,
And leaue your children, wiues, and you in peace.
But if you fondly passe our proffer'd offer,
Tis not the rounder of your old-fac'd walles,
Can hide you from our messengers of Warre,
Though all these English, and their discipline
Were harbour'd in their rude circumference:
Then tell vs, Shall your Citie call vs Lord,
In that behalfe which we haue challeng'd it?
Or shall we giue the signall to our rage,
And stalke in blood to our possession?
Cit. In breefe, we are the King of Englands subiects
For him, and in his right, we hold this Towne.
Iohn. Acknowledge then the King, and let me in.
Cit. That can we not: but he that proues the King
To him will we prouе loyall, till that time
Haue we rammed vp our gates against the world.
Iohn. Doth not the Crowne of England, prouе the King?
And if not that, I bring you Witnesses
Twice fifteene thousand hearts of Englands breed
Bast. Bastards and else.
Iohn. To verifie our title with their liues.
Fran. As many and as well-borne bloods as those.
Bast. Some Bastards too.
Fran. Stand in his face to contradict his claime.
Cit. Till you compound whose right is worthiest,
We for the worthiest hold the right from both.
Iohn. Then God forgiue the sinne of all those soules,
That to their everlasting residence,
Before the dew of euening fall, shall fleere
In dreadfull triall of our kingdomes King.
Fran. Amen, Amen, mount Cheualiers to Armes.
Bast. Saint George that swinge'd the Dragon,
And ere since sits on's horse-backe at mine Hostesse doore
Teach vs some fence. Sirrah, were I at home
At your den sirrah, with your Lionnesse,
I would set an Ox-head to your Lyons hide:
And make a monster of you.
Aust. Peace, no more.
Bast. O tremblers for you heare the Lyon roare.
Iohn. Vp higher to the plaine, where we'l set forth
In best appointment all our Regiments.
Bast. Speed then to take aduantage of the field.
Fra. It shall be so, and at the other hill
Command the rest to stand. God and our right. Exeunt
Heere after excursions, Enter the Herald of France with Trumpets to the gates.
F. Her. You men of Angiers open wide your gates,
And let yong Arthur Duke of Britaine in,

Who by the hand of France, this day hath made
Much worke for teares in many an English mother,
Whose sonnes lye scattered on the bleeding ground:
Many a widdowes husband grouling lies,
Coldly embracing the discoloured earth,
And victorie with little loffe doth play
Vpon the dancing banners of the French,
Who are at hand triumphantly displayed
To enter Conquerors, and to proclaime
Arthur of Britaine, Englands King, and yours.

Enter English Herald with Trumpet.

E.Her. Reioyce you men of Angiers, ring your bels,
King John, your king and Englands, doth approach,
Commander of this hot malicious day,
Their Armours that march'd hence so siluer bright,
Hither returne all gilt with Frenchmens blood.
There finche no plume in any English Crest,
That is removed by a staffe of France.
Our colours do returne in those same hands
That did display them when we first marche forth
And like a iolly troope of Huntsmen come
Our loffie English, all with purpled hands,
Dide in the dying slaughter of their foes,
Open your gates, and give the Victors way

Hubert. Heralds, from off our towres we might beholde
From first to last, the on-set and retyre:
Of both your Armies, whose equality
By our best eyes cannot be censured: (blowes.
Blood hath bought blood, and blowes have answerd
Strength matcht with strength, and power confronted power,
Both are alike, and both alike we like.
One must prove greatest. While they weigh so even,
We held our Towne for neither: yet for both.

Enter the two Kings with their powers, at seuerall doores.

John. France, hast thou yet more blood to cast away?
Say, shall the current of our right rome on,
Whose passage vext with thy impediment,
Shall leave his native channell, and ore-swell
with course disturb'd even thy confining shores,
Vnlesse thou let his siluer Water, keepe
A peaceful progresse to the Ocean.

Pra. England thou hast not saw'd one drop of blood
In this hot triall more than we of France,
Rather lost more. And by this hand I sweare
That sweepes the earth this Climate ouer-looke,
Before we will lay downe our loft-borne Armes,
We'l put thee downe, gainst whom these Armes wee
Or adde a royall number to the dead: (beare,
Gracing the scroule that tels of this warres losse,
With slaughter coupled to the name of kings.

Bast. Ha Maiesty: how high thy glory towres,
When the rich blood of kings is set on fire:
Oh now doth death line his dead chaps with steele,
The swords of souldiers are his teeth, his phangs,
And now he feasts, mouzing the flesh of men
In vndistinguish'd distemperature of kings.
Why stand these royall fronts amazed thus:
Cry hawcke kings, lanche to the fained field
You royall Peasants, fierce hindled spirits,
Then let confusion of one part confirm
The others peace: till then, blowes, blood, and death.

John. Whose party do the Townesmen yet admit?

Pra. Speake Citizens for England, whose your king.

Hub. The king of England, when we know the king.

Pra. Know him in vs, that heere hold vp his right.

John. In vs, that are our owne great Deputie,
And bearе possession of our Person heere,
Lord of our presence Angiers, and of you.

Pra. A greater power then We denies all this,
And till it be vndoubted, we do lockе
Our former scrupls in our strong barr'd gates:
Kings of our feare, vntill our feares resolu'd
Be by some certaine king, purg'd and depos'd.

Bast. By heaven, these scroyles of Angiers flouts you
And stand securely on their battlements, (kings,
As in a Theatre, whence they gape and point
At your industrious Scenes and acts of death.
Your Royall presences be rul'd by mee,
Do like the Mutines of Ierusalem,
Be friends a-while, and both conioynctly bend
Your sharpest Deeds of malice on this Towne.
By East and West let France and England mount.
Their battering Canon charged to the mouthes,
Till their soule-fearing clamours have brau'd downe
The flinty ribbes of this contemptuous Citie,
I'de play incessantly vpon these lades,
Even till vnfenced desolation
Leave them as naked to the vulgar eye:
Then done, diffuse your vained strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again,
Turne face to face, and bloody point to point:
Then in a moment Fortune shall cull forth
Out of one side her happy Minion,
To whom in fauour she shall give the day,
And kisse him with a glorious victory:
How like you this wilde counsell mighty States,
Smacks it not something of the policie.

John. Now by the sky that hangs aboue our heads,
I like it well. France, shall we knit our powers,
And lay this Angiers even with the ground,
Then after fight who shall be king of it?

Bast. And if thou hast the mettle of a king,
Being wrong'd as we are by this peeuish Towne:
Turne thou the mouth of thy Artillerie,
As we will ours, against these saucie walles,
And when that we have dash'd them to the ground,
Why then defie each other, and pell-mell,
Make worke vpon our selues, for heaven or hell.

Pra. Let it be so: say, where will you assault?

John. We from the West will send destruction
Into this Cities bosome.

Aust. I from the North.

Frer. Our Thunder from the South,
Shall raine their drift of bullets on this Towne.

Bast. O prudent discipline! From North to South:
Austrin and France shoot in each others mouth.
I'le stirre them to it: Come, away, away.

Hub. Heare vs great kings, vouchsafe awhile to stay
And I shall shew you peace, and faire-fac'd league:
Win you this Citie without stroke, or wound,
Rescue those breathing lives to dye in beds,
That heere come sacrifices for the field.
Perseuer not, but heare me mighty kings.

John. Speake on with fauour, we are bent to heare.

Hub. That daughter there of Spaine, the Lady Blanch
Is neere to England, looke vpon the yeares
Of Lewis the Dolphin, and that lovely maid.
If lustie loue should go in quest of beauty,

Where

Where should he finde a fairer, then in Blanch:
If ancestous loue should go in search of vertue,
Where should he finde a peeer then in Blanch?
If loue ambitious, sought a match of birth,
Whose veines bound richer blood then Lady Blanch?
Such as she is, in beauty, vertue, birth,
Is the young Dolphin every way complete,
If ought complete of, say he is not she,
And she again wants nothing, to name want,
If want it be not, that she is not he:
He is the half part of a blessed man,
Left so to be finished by such as she,
And she a fine diuided excellence,
Whose fitnesse of perfection lyes in him.
O two such siluer currents when they loyne
Do glorifie the banks that bound them in:
And two such shores, to two such streames made one,
Two such controlling bounds shall you be, kings,
To these two Princes, if you marie them.
This Vnion shall do more than battrie can
To our fast closed gates: for at this match,
With swifter spleene then powder can enforce
The mouth of passage shall we fling wide ope,
And give you entrance: but without this match,
The sea enraged is not halfe so deafe,
Lyons more confident, Mountaines and rocks
More free from motion, no not death himselfe
In mortall furie halfe so peremptorie,
As we to keepe this Citie.

Bast. Heere's a stay,
That shakes the rotten carkasse of old death
Out of his ragges. Here's a large mouth indeede,
That spits forth death, and mountaines, rocks, and sea,
Talkes as familiarly of roaring Lyons,
As maids of thirteene do of puppi-dogges.
What Cannoneere begot this lusty blood,
He speakes plaine Cannon fire, and smoake, and bounce,
He gives the bastinado with his tongue:
Our eares are cudgel'd, not a word of his
But buffets better then a fist of France:
Zounds, I was never so bethumpt with words,
Since I first call'd my brothers father Dad.

Old Qu. Son, list to this conuniction, make this match
Give with our Neece a dowrie large enough.
For by this loue, thou shalt sir surely tye
Thy now vnsur'd assurance to the Crowne,
That you greene boy shall haue no Sunne to ripe
The bloome that promiseth a mightie fruite.
I see a yeelding in the looks of France:
Marke how they whisper, urge them while their soules
Are capable of this ambition,
Lest zeale now melted by the windie breath
Of soft petitions, pitie and remorse,
Cooles and congeals againe to what it was.

Hub. Why answer not the double Maiesties,
This friendly treaty of our threatned Towne.

Fra. Speake England first, that hath bin forward first
To speake vnto this Citie: what say you?

John. If thou the Dolphin thou thy Princely loue,
Can in this booke of beauty read, I loue:
Her Dowrie shall weigh equall with a Queene:
For Anjoiu, and faire Touraine Maine, Poyctiers,
And all that we vpon this side the Sea,
(Except this Citie now by vs besieg'd)
Finde liable to our Crowne and Dignitie,
Shall gild her bridall bed and make her rich
In titles, honors, and promotions,
As she in beauty, education, blood,
Holdes hand with any Princesse of the world.

Fra. What say'st thou boy? looke in the Ladies face.

Dol. I do my Lord, and in her eie I find
A wonder, or a wondrous miracle,
The shadow of my selfe form'd in her eye,
Which being but the shadow of your sonne,
Becomes a sonne and makes your sonne a shadow:
I do protest I never lou'd my selfe
Till now, infixed I beheld my selfe,
Drawne in the flattering table of her eie.

whispers with Blanch.

Bast. Drawne in the flattering table of her eie,
Hang'd in the frowning wrinkle of her brow,
And quarter'd in her heart, he doth espie
Himselfe loues traytor, this is pittie now:
That hang'd, and drawne, and quarter'd there should be
In such a loue, so vile a Lout as he,

Blan. My vnckles will in this respect is mine.
If he see aught in you that makes him like,
That any thing he sets which moues his liking,
I can with ease translate it to my will:
Or if you will, to speake more properly,
I will enforce it easie to my loue.
Further I will not flatter you, my Lord
That all I see in you is worthie loue,
Then this, that nothing do I see in you,
Though churlish thoughts themselues should be your Iudge,
That I can finde, should merit any hate.

John. What say these young-ones? What say you my Neece?

Blan. That she is bound in honor still to do
What you in wisdome still vouchsafe to say.

John. Speake then Prince Dolphin, can you loue this Ladie?

Dol. Nay asks me if I can refraine from loue,
For I doe loue her most vehemently.

John. Then do I give Volquessen, Touraine, Maine,
Poyctiers, and Anjoiu, these fine Prouinces
With her to thee, and this addition more,
Full thirty thousand Markes of English coyne.
Philip of France, if thou be pleas'd withall,
Command thy sonne and daughter to joyne hands.

Fra. It likes vs well young Princes close your hands

Aust. And your lippes too, for I am well assur'd,
That I did so when I was first assur'd.

Fra. Now Citizens of Angiers ope your gates,
Let in that amitie which you haue made,
For at Saint Maries Chappell presently,
The rites of marriage shall be solemnis'd.
Is not the Ladie Constance in this troupe?
I know she is not for this match made vp,
Her presence would haue interrupted much.
Where is she and her sonne, tell me, who knowes?

Dol. She is sad and passionate at your highnes Tent.

Fra. And by my faith, this leagues thus we haue made
Will giue her sadnesse very little cure:
Brother of England, how may we content
This widdow Lady? In her right we came,
Which we God knowes, haue turn'd another way,
To our owne vantage.

John. We will heale vp all,
For we'l create young Arthur Duke of Brittaine
And Earle of Richmond, and this rich faire Towne

We

We make him Lord of. Call the Lady Constance,
Some speedy Messenger bid her repaire
To our solemnity: I trust we shall,
(If not fill vp the measure of her will)
Yet in some measure satisfie her so,
That we shall stop her exclamation.
Go we as well as haste will suffer vs,
To this vnlook'd for vnprepared pompe. Exeunt.

Bast. Mad world, mad kings, mad composition:
Iohn to stop Arthurs Title in the whole,
Hath willingly departed with a part,
And France, whose armour Conscience buckled on,
Whom zeale and charitie brought to the field,
As Gods owne souldier, rounded in the eare,
With that same purpose-changer, that sly diuel,
That Broker, that still breakes the pace of faith,
That daily breake-vow, he that winnes of all,
Of kings, of beggers, old men, yong men, maids,
Who having no externall thing to loose,
But the word Maid, cheats the poore Maide of that.
That smooth-fac'd Gentleman, tickling commodiue.
Commodiue, the byas of the world,
The world, who of it selfe is peysed well,
Made to run even, vpon even ground:
Till this aduantage, this vile drawing byas,
This sway of motion, this commodiue,
Makes it take head from all indifferency,
From all direction, purpose, course, intent.
And this same byas, this Commodiue,
This Bawd, this Broker, this all-changing-word,
Clap'd on the outward eye of fickle France,
Hath drawne him from his owne determin'd ayd,
From a resolu'd and honourable warre,
To a most base and vile-concluded peace.
And why rayle I on this Commodiue?
But for because he hath not wooed me yet:
Not that I haue the power to clutch my hand,
When his faire Angels would salute my palme,
But for my hand, as vnattempted yet,
Like a poore begger, raileth on the rich.
Well, whiles I am a begger, I will raile,
And say there is no sin but to be rich:
And being rich, my vertue then shall be,
To say there is no vice, but beggerie:
Since Kings breake faith vpon commodiue,
Gaine be my Lord, for I will worship thee. Exit.

Actus Secundus

Enter Constance, Arthur, and Salisbury.

Con. Gone to be married? Gone to sweare a peace?
False blood to false blood ioyn'd. Gone to be friends?
Shall Lewis haue Blanch, and Blanch those Prouinces?
It is not so, thou hast misspoke, misheard,
Be well aduis'd, tell ore thy tale againe
It cannot be, thou do'st but say 'tis so.
I trust I may not trust thee, for thy word
Is but the vaine breath of a common man:
Beleeue me, I doe not beleeue thee man,
I haue a Kings oath to the contrarie.
Thou shalt be punish'd for thus frighting me,
For I am sicke, and capable of feares,
Oppreſt with wrongs, and therefore full of feares,
A widdow, husbandles, subiect to feares,
A woman naturally borne to feares;
And though thou now confesse thou didst but iest
With my vexe spirits, I cannot take a Truce,
But they will quake and tremble all this day.
What doest thou meane by shaking of thy head?
Why doest thou looke so sadly on my sonne?
What meanes that hand vpon that breast of thine?
Why holdes thine eie that lamentable thewme,
Like a proud riuer peering ore his bounds?
Be these sad signes confirmers of thy words?
Then speake againe, not all thy former tale,
But this one word, whether thy tale be true.

Sal. As true as I beleeue you think them false,
That giue you cause to prouse my saying true.

Con. Oh if thou teach me to beleeue this sorrow,
Teach thou this sorrow, how to make me dye,
And let beliefe, and life encounter so,
As doth the fairie of two desperate men,
Which in the very meeting fall, and dye.
Lewis marry Blanch? O boy, then where art thou?
France friend with England, what becomes of me?
Fellow be gone: I cannot brooke thy sight,
This news hath made thee a most vgly man.

Sal. What other harme haue I, good Lady done,
But spoke the harme, that is by others done?

Con. Which harme within it selfe so heynous is,
As it makes harmefull all that speake of it.

Ar. I do beseech you Madam be content.

Con. If thou that bidst me be content, great grim
Vgly, and slanderous to thy Mothers wombe,
Full of vnpleasing blots, and sightlesse staines,
Lame, foolish, crooked, swart, prodigious,
Patch'd with foule Moles, and eye-offending markes,
I would not care, I then would be content,
For then I should not loue thee; no, nor thee
Become thy great birth, nor deserue a Crowne.
But thou art faire, and at thy birth (dearre boy)
Nature and Fortune ioyn'd to make thee gaine.
Of Natures gifts, thou mayst with Lilies boast,
And with the half-blowne Rose. But Fortune, oh,
She is corrupted, chang'd, and wonne from thee.
Sh'adulterates hourly with thine Vncle Iohn,
And with her golden hand hath plucke on France
To tread downe faire respect of Soueraignie,
And made his Maiestie the bond to theirs.
France is a Bawd to Fortune, and King Iohn,
That strumpet Fortune, that vsurping Iohn:
Tell me thou fellow, is not France forsworne?
Euenom him with words, or get thee gone,
And leaue those woes alone, which I alone
Am bound to vnder-beare.

Sal. Pardon me Madam,
I may not goe without you to the kings.

Con. Thou mayst, thou shalt, I will not go with thee,
I will instruct my sorrowes to be proud,
For grefe is proud, and makes his owner stoope,
To me and to the state of my great grefe,
Let kings assemble: for my grefe's so great,
That no supporter but the huge firme earth
Can hold it vp: here I and sorrowes sit,
Here is my Throne, bid kings come bow to it.

Actus

Actus Tertius, Scæna prima.

Enter King John, Prance, Dolphin, Blanch, Elanor, Philip, Austria, Constance.

Pran. Tis true (faire daughter) and this blessed day,
Ever in France shall be kept festiuall:
To solemnize this day the glorious sunne
Stayes in his course, and playes the Alchymist,
Turning with splender of his precious eye
The meeger cloddy earth to glittering gold:
The yearely course that brings this day about,
Shall never see it, but a holy day.
Const. A wicked day, and not a holy day.
What hath this day deserv'd? what hath it done,
That it in golden letters should be set
Among the high tides in the Kalender?
Nay, rather turne this day out of the weeke,
This day of shame, oppression, periury.
Or if it must stand still, let wives with childe
Pray that their burthens may not fall this day,
Lest that their hopes prodigiously be crost:
But (on this day) let Sea-men feare no wrache,
No bargaines breake that are not this day made;
This day all things begun, come to ill end,
Yea, faith it selfe to hollow falsehood change.
Fra. By heaven Lady, you shall haue no cause
To curse the faire proceedings of this day:
Haue I not pawn'd to you my Maiesty?
Const. You haue beguil'd me with a counterfeit
Resembling Maiesty, which being touch'd and tride,
Proues valueless: you are forsworne, forsworne.
You came in Armes to spill mine enemies bloud,
But now in Armes, you strengthen it with yours.
The grapling vigor, and rough frowne of Warre
Is cold in amitie, and painted peace,
And our oppression hath made vp this league:
Armes, armes, you heauens, against these periur'd Kings,
A widdow cries, be husband to me (heauens)
Let not the howres of this vngodly day
Weare out the dates in Peace; but ere Sun-set,
Set armed discord 'twixt these periur'd Kings,
Heare me, Oh, heare me.
Aust. Lady Constance, peace.
Const. War, war, no peace, peace is to me a warre:
O Lymoges, O Austria, thou dost shame
That bloody spoyle: thou slaue, thou wretch, & coward,
Thou little valiant, great in villanie,
Thou ever strong vpon the stronger side;
Thou Fortunes Champion, thou do'st neuer fight
But when her humourous Ladiship is by
To teach thee safety: thou art periur'd too,
And sooth'st vp greatnesse. What a foole art thou,
A ramping foole, to brag, and stamp, and sweare,
Vpon my partie: thou cold blooded slaue,
Hast thou not spoke like thunder on my side?
Been sworne my Souldier, bidding me depend
Vpon thy starres, thy fortune, and thy strength,
And dost thou now fall out to my foes?
Thou weare a Lyons hide, doff it for shame,
And hang a Calues skin on those recreant limbes.
Aust. O that a man should speake those words to me.
Phil. And hang a Calues-skin on those recreant limbs
Aust. Thou dar'st not say so villaine for thy life.
Phil. And hang a Calues skin on those recreant limbs.
John. We like not this, thou dost forgot thy selfe.

Enter Pandulph.

Fra. Heare comes the holy Legat of the Pope.
Pan. Haile you annointed deputies of heauen;
To thee King John my holy errand is:
I Pandulph, of faire Addlane Cardinall,
And from Pope Innocent the Legate heere,
Doe in his name religiously demand
Why thou against the Church, our holy Mother,
So wilfully dost sparne; and force perforce
Keepe Stephen Langton chosen Archbishop
Of Canterbury from that holy Sea.
This in our foresaid holy Fathers name
Pope Innocent, I doe demand of thee.
John. What earthie name to Interrogatories
Can tast the free breath of a sacred King?
Thou cost not (Cardinall) deuise a name
So slight, vnworthy, and ridiculous
To charge me to an answere, as the Pope:
Tell him this tale, and from the mouth of England,
Adde thus much more, that no Italian Priest
Shall tythe or tall in our dominions.
But as we, vnder heauen, are supreame head,
So vnder him that great supremacy
Where we doe reigne, we will alone vphold
Without th'assistance of a mortall hand:
So tell the Pope, all reuerence set apart
To him and his vsurp'd authoritie.
Fra. Brother of England, you blaspheme in this.
John. Though you, and all the Kings of Christendom
Are led so grossly by this meddling Priest,
Dreading the curse that money may buy out,
And by the merit of vilde gold, drosse, dust,
Purchase corrupted pardon of a man,
Who in that sale sels pardon from himselfe:
Though you, and al the rest so grossly led,
This iugling witchcraft with reuenue cherish,
Yet I alone, alone doe me oppose
Against the Pope, and count his friends my foes.
Pand. Then by the lawfull power that I haue,
Thou shalt stand curst, and excommunicate,
And blessed shall he be that doth reuolt
From his Allegeance to an heretique,
And meritorious shall that hand be call'd,
Canonized and worship'd as a Saint,
That takes away by any secret course
Thy hatefull life.
Const. O lawfull let it be
That I haue roome with Rome to curse a while.
Good Father Cardinall, cry thou Amen
To my keene curses; for without my wrong
There is no tongue hath power to curse him right.
Pan. There's Law and Warrant (Lady) for my curse.
Const. And for mine too, when Law can do no right.
Let it be lawfull, that Law bares no wrong:
Law cannot give my childe his kingdome heere;
For he that holds his Kingdome, holds the Law.
Therefore since Law is selfe is perfect wrong,
How can the Law forbid my tongue to curse?
Pand. Philip of France, on perill of a curse,
Let goe the hand of that Arch-heretique,
And raise the power of France vpon his head,
Vnlesse he doe submit himselfe to Rome.
Eln. Look'st thou pale France? do not let go thy hand.
Con. Looke to that Deuill, lest that France repent,

And

And by disioyning hands hell lose a soule.

Aust. King Philip, listen to the Cardinall.

Bast. And hang a Calues-skin on his recreant limbs.

Aust. Well ruffian, I must pocket vp these wrongs,
Because,

Bast. Your breeches best may carry them.

John. Philip, what saist thou to the Cardinall?

Con. What should he say, but as the Cardinall?

Dolph. Bethinke you father, for the difference
Is purchase of a heauy curse from Rome,
Or the light loss of England, for a friend:
Forgoe the easier.

Blc. That s the curse of Rome.

Con. O Lewis, stand fast, the deuill tempts thee here
In like sheape of a new vntrimmed Bride.

Blc The Lady Constance speakes not from her faith,
But from her need.

Con. Oh, if thou grant my need,
Which only lines but by the death of faith,
That need, must needs infere this principle,
That faith would liue against by death of need:
O then tread downe my need, and faith mounts vp,
Keepe my need vp, and faith is trodden downe.

John. The king is moued, and answers not to this.

Con. O be remou'd from him, and answere well.

Aust. Doe so king Philip, hang no more in doubt.

Bast. Hang nothing but a Calues skin most sweet lout.

Fra. I am perplext, and know not what to say.

Pan. What canst thou say, but wil perplex thee more?
If thou stand excommunicate, and curst?

Fra. Good reuerend father, make my person yours,
And tell me how you would bestow your selfe?
This royall hand and mine are newly knit,
And the contiuuation of our inward soules
Married in league, coupled, and link'd together
With all religious strength of sacred vowes,
The latest breath that gaue the sound of words
Was deepe-sworne faith, peace, amity, true loue
Betweene our kingdomes and our royall selues,
And euen before this truce, but new before,
No longer then we well could wash our hands,
To clap this royall bargaine vp of peace,
Heauen knowes they were besmear'd and ouer-stained
With slaughters pencill; where reuenge did paint
The fearefull difference of incensed kings:
And shall these hands so lately purg'd of blood?
So newly ioyn'd in loue? so strong in both,
Vnyoke this seysure, and this kinde regreete?
Play fast and loose with faith? so iest with heauen,
Make such vnconstant children of our selues
As now againe to snatch our palme from palme:
Vn-sweare faith sworne, and on the marriage bed,
Of smiling peace to march a bloody hoast,
And make a ryot on the gentle brow
Of true sincerity? O holy Sir
My reuerend father, let it not be so;
Out of your grace, deaffe, ordaine, impose
Some gentle order, and then we shall be blest
To doe your pleasure, and continue friends.

Pand. All forme is formelesse, Order orderlesse,
Saue what is opposite to Englands loue.
Therefore to Armes, be Champion of our Church,
Or let the Church our mother breathe her curse,
A mothers curse, on her rewarding sonne:
Fraunce thou maist hold a serpent by the tongue,
A cased Lion by the mortal paw,
A fasting Tyger safer by the tooth,
Then keepe in peace that hand which thou dost hold.

Fra. I may dis-ioyne my hand, but not my faith.

Pand. So mak'st thou faith an enemy to faith,
And like a ciuill warre sett oath to oath,
Thy tongue against thy tongue. O let thy vow
First made to heauen, first be to heauen performe'd,
That is, to be the Champion of our Church,
What since thou sworst, is sworne against thy selfe,
And may not be performed by thy selfe,
For that which thou hast sworne to doe amisse,
Is not amisse when it is truely done:
And being not done, where doing ends to ill,
The truth is then most done not doing it:
The better Act of purposes mistooke,
Is to mistake again, though indirect,
Yet indirection thereby growes direct,
And falshood, falshood cures, as fire cooles fire
Within the scorched veines of one new burn'd:
It is religion that doth make vowes kept,
But thou hast sworne against religion:
By what thou swear'st against the thing thou swear'st
And mak'st an oath the surette for thy truth,
Against an oath the truth, thou art vnsure
To sweare, sweares only not to be forsworne,
Else what a mockerie should it be to sweare?
But thou dost sweare, onely to be forsworne,
And most forsworne, to keepe what thou dost sweare,
Therefore thy later vowes, against thy first,
Is in thy selfe rebellion to thy selfe:
And better conquest never canst thou make,
Then arme thy constant and thy nobler parts
Against these giddy loose suggestions:
Vpon which better part, our prayers come in,
If thou vouchsafe them. But if not, then know
The perill of our curses light on thee
So heauy, as thou shalt not shake them off
But in despaire, dye vnder their blacke weight.

Aust. Rebellion, flat rebellion.

Bast. Wilt not be?
Will not a Calues-skin stop that mouth of thine?

Dauf. Father, to Armes.

Blanch. Vpon thy wedding day?
Against the blood that thou hast married?
What, shall our feast be kept with slaughtered men?
Shall braying trumpets, and loud churlish drums
Clamors of hell, be measures to our pomp?
O husband heare me: aye, alacke, how new
Is husband in my mouth? euen for that name
Which till this time my tongue did nere pronounce;
Vpon my knee I beg, goe not to Armes
Against mine Vncle.

Const. O, vpon my knee made hard with kneeling,
I doe pray to thee, thou vertuous Dauphin,
Alter not the doome fore-thought by heauen.

Blan. Now shall I see thy loue, what meetine may
Be stronger with thee, then the name of wife?

Con. That which vpholdeth him, that thee vpholds,
His Honor, Oh thine Honor, Lewis thine Honor.

Dolph. I muse your Maiesty doth seeme so cold,
When such profound respects do pull you on?

Pand. I will denounce a curse vpon his head.

Fra. Thou shalt not need. England, I will fall fro thee.

Const. O fiere retreate of banish'd Maiestie.

Eln. O foule reuolt of French inconstancy.

Eng. France, thou shalt rue this houre within this houre.

Bast

Raf. Old Time the clocke setter, y bald sexton Time:
Is it as he will? well then, France shall rue.
Bla. The Sun's orecast with blood: faire day adieu,
Which is the side that I must goe withall?
I am with both, each Army hath a hand,
And in their rage, I having hold of both,
They whirle a-funder, and dismember mee.
Husband, I cannot pray that thou maist winne:
Vncle, I needs must pray that thou maist lose:
Father, I may not with the fortune thine:
Grandsam, I will not wish thy wishes thrive:
Who-ever winne, on that side shall I lose:
Assured loss, before the match be plaid.
Dolph. Lady, with me, with me thy fortune lies.
Bla. There where my fortune lies, there my life dies.
John. Cosin, goe draw our poisonce together,
France, I am burn'd vp with inflaming wrath,
A rage, whose heat hath this condition;
That nothing can allay, nothing but blood,
The blood and dearest valued blood of France.
Fra. Thy rage shall burne thee vp, & thou shalt turne
To ashes, ere our blood shall quench this fire:
Looke to thy selfe, thou art in leopardie.
John. No more than he that threates. To Arms let's hie.
Exeunt.

Scoena Secunda.

Alarums, Excursions: Enter Bastard with Austria's head.

Bas. Now by my life, this day grows wondrous hot,
Some ayery Deuill hourers in the skie,
And pour's downe mischiefe. Austria's head lye there,
Enter John, Arthur, Hubert.
While Philip breathes.
John. Hubert, keepe this boy: Philip make vp,
My Mother is assayled in our Tent,
And taen I feare.
Bas. My Lord I rescued her,
Her Highnesse is in safety, feare you not:
But on my Liege, for very little pinnes
Will bring this labor to an happy end. Exit.

Alarums, excursions, Retreat. Enter John, Elanor, Arthur Bastard, Hubert, Lords.

John. So shall it be: your Grace shall stay behinde
So strongly guarded: Cosin, looke not sad,
Thy Grandame loues thee, and thy Vncle will
As dearre be to thee, as thy father was.
Arth. O this will make my mother die with griefe.
John. Cosin away for England, haste before,
And ere our comming see thou shake the bags
Of hoarding Abbots, imprisoned angells
Set at liberty: the fat ribs of peace
Must by the hungry now be fed vpon:
Vse our Commission in his vtmost force.
Bas. Bell, Booke, & Candle, shall not drive me back,
When gold and siluer becks me to come on.
I leave your highnesse: Grandame, I will pray,
(If ever I remember to be holy)
For your true faithy: so I kisse your hand.
Ela. Farewell gentle Cosin.
John. Coz, farewell.
Ela. Come hither little kinsman, harke, a words.
John. Come hither Hubert. O my gentle Hubert,
We owe thee much: within this wall of flesh
There is a soule counts thee her Creditor,
And with advantage means to pay thy loue:
And my good friend, thy voluntary oath
Liues in this bosome, dearly cherished.
Give me thy hand, I had a thing to say,
But I will fit it with some better time.
By heaven Hubert, I am almost asham'd
To say what good respect I haue of thee.
Hub. I am much bounden to your Maiesty.
John. Good friend, thou hast no cause to say so yet,
But thou shalt have; and creepe time ne'ere so slow,
Yet it shall come, for me to do thee good.
I had a thing to say, but let it goe:
The Sunne is in the heaven, and the proud day,
Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gawdes
To give me audience: If the mid-night bell
Did with his iron tongue, and brazen mouth
Sound on into the drowsie race of night:
If this same were a Church-yard where we stand,
And thou possessed with a thousand wrongs:
Or if that surly spirit melancholy
Had bak'd thy blood, and made it heavy, thicke,
Which else runnes tickling vp and downe the veines,
Making that idiot laughter keepe mens eyes,
And strainc their cheekes to idle merriment,
A perfect hatefull to my purposes:
Or if that thou couldst see me without eyes,
Heare me without thine eares, and make reply
Without a tongue, vsing conceit alone,
Without eyes, eares, and harmefull sound of words:
Then, in despight of brooded watchfull day,
I would into thy bosome poure my thoughts:
But (ah) I will not, yet I loue thee well,
And by my troth I thinke thou lou'st me well.
Hub. So well, that what you bid me vnderstand,
Though that my death were adiunct to my Act,
By heaven I would doeit.
John. Doe not I know thou wouldst?
Good Hubert, Hubert, Hubert throw thine eye
On yon young boy: I'le tell thee what my friend,
He is a very serpent in my way,
And whereforee this foot of mine doth tread,
He lies before me: dost thou vnderstand me?
Thou art his keeper.
Hub. And I'le keepe him so,
That he shall not offend your Maiesty.
John. Death.
Hub. My Lord.
John. A Grave.
Hub. He shall not liue.
John. Enough.
I could be merry now, Hubert, I loue thee.
Well, I'le not say what I intend for thee:
Remember: Madam, Fare you well.
I'le send those powers o're to your Maiesty.
Ela. My blessing goe with thee.
John. For England Cosin, goe.
Hubert shall be your man, attend on you
With all true duetie: On toward Calice, hoe.
Exeunt.

Scoena

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Pandulphe, Dolphin, Pandulphe, Attendants.

Fra. So by a roaring Tempest on the flood,
A whole Armado of conuicted saile
Is scattered and dis-ioyn'd from fellowship.
Pand. Courage and comfort, all shall yet goe well.
Fra. What can goe well, when we haue runne so ill?
Are we not beaten? Is not Angiers lost?
Arthur tane prisoner? diuers dere friends slaine?
And bloody England into England gone,
O-bearing interruption spight of France?
Dol. What he hath won, that hath he fortified:
So hot a speed, with such aduice disposed,
Such temperate order in so fierce a cause,
Doth want example: who hath read, or heard
Of any kindred-action like to this?
Fra. Well could I beare that England had this prosie,
So we could finde some patterne of our shame:
Enter Constance.
Looke who comes heere? a grace vnto a soule,
Holding th'eternall spirit against her will,
In the vile prison of afflicted breath:
I prethee Lady goe away with me.
Con. Lo, now: now see the issue of your peace.
Fra. Patience good Lady, comfort gentle Constance.
Con. No, I desie all Counsell, all redresse,
But that which ends all counsell, true Redresse:
Death, death, O amiable, louely death,
Thou odoriferous stench: sound rottennesse,
Arise forth from the couch of lasting night,
Thou hate and terror to prosperitie,
And I will kisse thy detestable bones,
And put my eye-balls in thy vaulte browes,
And ring these fingers with thy houshold wormes,
And stop thus gap of breath with fulsome dust,
And be a Carrion Monster like thy selfe:
Come, grin on me, and I will thinke thou smil'st,
And buffe thee as thy wife: Miseries Loue,
O come to me.
Fra. O faire affliction, peace.
Con. No, no, I will not, having breath to cry:
O that my tongue were in the thunders mouth,
Then with a passion would I shake the world,
And rouse from sleepe that fell Anatomy
Which cannot heare a Ladies feeble voyce,
Which scornes a moderne Inuocation.
Pand. Lady, you vtter madnesse, and not sorrow.
Con. Thou art holy to belye me so,
I am not mad: this haire I teare is mine,
My name is Constance, I was Geffreyes wife,
Yong Arthur is my sonne, and he is lost:
I am not mad, I would to heauen I were,
For then 'tis like I should forget my selfe:
O, if I could, what griefe should I forget?
Preach some Philosophy to make me mad,
And thou shalt be Canonis'd (Cardinall.)
For, being not mad, but sensible of greefe,
My reasonable part produces reason
How I may be deliuer'd of these woes,
And teaches mee to kill or hang my selfe:
If I were mad, I should forget my sonne,
Or mayby thinke a babe of clouts were he;
I am not mad: too well, too well I feele
The differant plague of each calamitie.
Fra. Binde vp those tresses: O what loue I note
In the faire multitude of those her haires;
Where but by chance a siluer drop hath fallne,
Even to that drop ten thousand wiery friends
Doe glew themselues in sociable griefe,
Like true, inseparable, faithfull loues,
Sticking together in calamitie.
Con. To England, if you will.
Fra. Binde vp your haires.
Con. Yes that I will: and wherefore will I do it?
I tore them from their bonds, and cride aloud,
O, that these hands could so redeeme my sonne,
As they haue given these hayres their libertie:
But now I enuie at their libertie,
And will againe commit them to their bonds,
Because my poore childe is a prisoner.
And Father Cardinall, I haue heard you say
That we shall see and know our friends in heauen:
If that be true, I shall see my boy againe;
For since the birth of Cayne, the first male-childe
To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature borne:
But now will Canker-sorrow eat my bud
And chase the native beauty from his cheeke,
And he will looke as hollow as a Ghost,
As dim and meager as an Agues fitte,
And so he'll dye: and rising so againe,
When I shall meet him in the Court of heauen
I shall not know him: therefore never, never
Must I behold my pretty Arthur more.
Pand. You hold too heynous a respect of greefe.
Const. He talkes to me, that never had a sonne.
Fra. You are as fond of greefe, as of your childe.
Con. Greefe fits the roome vp of my absent childe:
Lies in his bed, walkes vp and downe with me,
Puts on his pretty lookes, repeats his words,
Remembers me of all his gracious parts,
Stuffes out his vacant garmentes with his forme:
Then, haue I reason to be fond of griefe?
Fare you well: had you such a loss as I,
I could give better comfort than you doe.
I will not keepe this forme vpon my head,
When there is such disorder in my witte:
O Lord, my boy, my Arthur, my faire sonne,
My life, my ioy, my food, my all the world:
My widow-comfort, and my sorrowes care. Exit.
Fra. I feare some out-rage, and I'le follow her. Exit.
Dol. There's nothing in this world can make me ioy,
Life is as tedious as a twice-told tale,
Vexing the dull eare of a drowsie man;
And bitter shame hath spoyl'd the sweet world taste,
That it yeelds nought but shame and bitternesse.
Pand. Before the curing of a strong disease
Even in the instant of repaire and health,
The fit is strongest: Euils that take leaue
On their departure, most of all shew euill:
What haue you lost by losing of this day?
Dol. All dates of glory, ioy, and happinesse.
Pan. If you had won it, certainly you had.
No, no: when Fortune meanes to men most good,
She looks vpon them with a threatning eye.
'Tis strange to thinke how much King John hath lost
In this which he accounts so clearely wonne:

Are

Are not you griev'd that Arthur is his prisoner?

Del. As heartily as he is glad he hath him.

Pan. Your minde is all as youthfull as your blood.
Now heare me speake with a prophaticke spirit:
For even the breath of what I meane to speake,
Shall blow each dust, each straw, each little rub
Out of the path which shall directly lead
Thy foote to Englands Throne. And therefore marke:
John hath seiz'd Arthur, and it cannot be,
That whiles warme life playes in that infants veines
The misplac'd John should entertaine an houre,
One minute, nay one quiet breath of rest.
A Sceptre snatch'd with an vnruly hand,
Must be as boysterously maintain'd as gain'd.
And he that stands vpon a slipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vilde hold to stay him vp:
That John may stand, then Arthur needs must fall,
So be it, for it cannot be but so.

Del. But what shall I gaine by yong Arthurs fall?

Pan. You in the right of Lady Blanch your wife,
May then make all the claime that Arthur did.

Del. And loose it, life and all, as Arthur did.

Pan. How green you are, and fresh in this old world?
John layes you plots: the times conspire with you,
For he that steepes his safetie in true blood,
Shall finde but bloodie safety, and vntrue.
This Act so evilly borne shall coole the hearts
Of all his people, and freeze vp their zeale,
That none so small advantage shall step forth
To checke his reigne, but they will cherish it.
No naturall exhalation in the skie,
No scope of Nature, no distemper'd day,
No common winds, no customed event,
But they will pluck away his naturall cause,
And call them Meteors, prodigies, and signes,
Abortives, presages, and tongues of heaven,
Plainly denouncing vengeance vpon John.

Del. May he he will not touch yong Arthurs life,
But hold himselfe safe in his prisonment.

Pan. O Sir, when he shall heare of your approach,
If that yong Arthur be not gone already,
Even at that newes he dies: and then the hearts
Of all his people shall reuolt from him,
And kisse the lippes of vnacquainted change,
And picke strong matter of reuolt, and wrath
Out of the bloody fingers ends of John.
Me thinkes I see this hurley all on foot;
And O, what better matter breeds for you,
Then I have nam'd. The Bastard Falconbridge
Is now in England ransacking the Church,
Offending Charity: If but a dozen French
Were there in Armes, they would be as a Call
To traine ten thousand English to their side;
Or, as a little snow, tumbled about,
Anon becomes a Mountaine. O noble Dolphine,
Go with me to the King, 'tis wonderfull,
What may be wrought out of their discontent,
Now that their soules are topfull of offence,
For Eng) and go; I will whet on the King.

Del. Strong reasons makes strange actions: let vs go,
If you say I, the King will not say no. Exeunt.

Actus Quartus, Scæna prima.

Enter Hubert and Executioners.

Hub. Heate me these Irons hot, and looke thou stand
Within the Arras: when I strike my foot
Vpon the bosome of the ground, rush forth
And binde the boy, which you shall finde with me
Fast to the chaire: be heedfull: hence, and watch.

Exec. I hope your warrant will beare out the deed.

Hub. Vncleanly scruples feare not you: looke to't.
Yong Lad come forth; I have to say with you.

Enter Arthur.

Ar. Good morrow Hubert.

Hub. Good morrow, little Prince.

Ar. As little Prince, having so great a Title
To be more Prince, as may be: you are sad.

Hub. Indeed I have beene merrier.

Art. Mercie on me:
Me thinkes no body should be sad but I:
Yet I remember, when I was in France,
Yong Gentlemen would be as sad as night
Onely for wantonnesse: by my Christendome,
So I were out of prison, and kept Sheepe
I should be as merry as the day is long:
And so I would be heere, but that I doubt
My Vncle practises more harme to me:
He is affraid of me, and I of him:
Is it my fault, that I was Geffreyes sonne?
No in deede is't not: and I would to heaven
I were your sonne, so you would loue me, Hubert.

Hub. If I talke to him, with his innocent prate
He will awake my mercie, which lies dead:
Therefore I will be sodaine, and dispatch.

Ar. Are you sicke Hubert? you looke pale to day,
Inforoth I would you were a little sicke,
That I might sit all night, and watch with you.
I warrant I loue you more then you do me.

Hub. His words do take possession of my bosome.
Reade heere yong Arthur. How now foolish rheume?
Turning dispitious torture out of doore?
I must be breefe, least resolution drop
Out at mine eyes, in tender womanish teares.
Can you not reade it? Is it not faire writ?

Ar. Too fairely Hubert, for so foule effect.
Must you with hot Irons, burne out both mine eyes?

Hub. Yong Boy, I must.

Art. And will you?

Hub. And I will.

Art. Have you the heart? When your head did but ake,
I knit my hand-kercher about your browes
(The best I had, a Princesse wrought it me)
And I did neuer aske it you againe:
And with my hand, at midnight held your head;
And like the watchfull minutes, to the houre,
Still and anon cheer'd vp the heavy time;
Saying, what lacke you? and where lies your greefe?
Or what good loue may I performe for you?
Many a poore mans sonne would have lyen still,
And neere have spoke a loving word to you:
But you, at your sicke service had a Prince:
Nay, you may thinke my loue was crafte loue,
And call it cunning. Do, and if you will,

If heauen be pleas'd that you must vse me ill,
Why then you must. Will you put out mine eyes.
These eyes, that never did, nor never shall
So much as frowne on you.
Hub. I haue sworne to do it:
And with hot Irons must I burne them out.
Art. Ah, none but in this Iron Age, would do it
The Iron of it selfe, though heate red hot
Approaching neere these eyes, would drinke my teares,
And quench this fierie indignation,
Euen in the matter of mine innocence:
Nay, after that, consume away in rust,
But for containing fire to harme mine eye.
Are you more stubborne-hard, then hammer'd Iron?
And if an Angell should haue come to me,
And told me Hubert should put out mine eyes,
I would not haue beleeu'd him: no tongue but Hubert.
Hub. Come forth: Do as I bid you do.
Art. O saue me Hubert, saue me: my eyes are out
Euen with the fierce lookes of these bloody men.
Hub. Giue me the Iron I say, and binde him heere.
Art. Alas, what neede you be so boistrous rough?
I will not struggle, I will stand stone still.
For heauen sake Hubert let me not be bound:
Nay heare me Hubert, drive these men away,
And I will sit as quiet as a Lambe.
I will not stirre, nor winch, nor speake a word,
Nor looke vpon the Iron angerly:
Thrust but these men away, and I'le forgiue you,
What euer torment you do put me too.
Hub. Go stand within: let me alone with him.
Exec. I am best pleas'd to be from such a deede.
Art. Alas, I then haue chid away my friend,
He hath a sterne looke, but a gentle heart:
Let him come backe, that his compassion may
Giue life to yours.
Hub. Come (Boy) prepare your selfe.
Art. Is there no remedie?
Hub. None, but to lose your eyes.
Art. O heauen: that there were but a moth in yours,
A graine, a dust, a gnat, a wandering haire,
Any annoyance in that precious sense:
Then feeling what small things are boysterous there,
Your vilde intent must needs seeme horrible.
Hub. Is this your promise? Go too, hold your toong
Art. Hubert, the vtterance of a brace of tongues,
Must needes want pleading for a paire of eyes:
Let me not hold my tongue: let me not Hubert,
Or Hubert, if you will cut out my tongue,
So I may keepe mine eyes. O spare mine eyes,
Though to no vse, but still to looke on you.
Loe, by my troth, the Instrument is cold,
And would not harme me.
Hub. I can heare it, Boy
Art No, in good sooth: the fire is dead with griefe,
Being create for comfort, to be vs'd
In vndeserued extreames: See else your selfe,
There is no malice in this burning cole,
The breath of heauen, hath blowne his spirit out,
And strew'd repentant ashes on his head.
Hub. But with my breath I can reuiue it Boy.
Art. And if you do, you will but make it blush,
And glow with shame of your proceedings, Hubert:
Nay, it perchance will sparkle in your eyes:
And like a dogge that is compell'd to fight,
Snatch at his Master that doth tarre him on.
All things that you should vse to do me wrong
Deny their office: onely you do lacke
That mercie, which fierce fire, and Iron extends,
Creatures of note for mercy, lacking vses.
Hub. Well, see to liue: I will not touch thine eye.
For all the Treasure that thine Vncle owes,
Yet am I sworne, and I did purpose, Boy,
With this same very Iron, to burne them out.
Art. O now you looke like Hubert. All this while
You were disguis'd.
Hub. Peace: no more Adieu,
Your Vncle must not know but you are dead.
I'le fill these dogged Spies with false reports:
And, pretty childe, sleepe doublelesse, and secure,
That Hubert for the wealth of all the world,
Will not offend thee.
Art. O heauen! I thanke you Hubert.
Hub. Silence, no more; go closely in with me,
Much danger do I vndergo for thee. Exeunt

Scena Secunda.

Enter John, Pembroke, Salisbury, and other Lordes.

John. Heere once againe we sit: once against crown'd
And look'd vpon, I hope, with cheerefull eyes.
Pem. This once again (but that your Highnes pleas'd)
Was once superfluous: you were Crown'd before,
And that high Royalty was ne're pluck'd off,
The faiths of men, ne're stained with reuolt:
Fresh expectation troubled not the Land
With any long'd-for-change, or better State.
Sal. Therefore, to be possess'd with double pompe,
To guard a Title, that was rich before;
To gilde refined Gold, to paint the Lilly;
To throw a perfume on the Violet,
To smooth the yce, or adde another hew
Vnto the Raine-bow; or with Taper-light
To seeke the beauteous eye of heauen to garnish.
Is wastefull, and ridiculous excesse.
Pem. But that your Royall pleasure must be done,
This a&ce, is as an ancient tale new told,
And, in the last repeating, troublesome,
Being vrged at a time vnseasonable.
Sal. In this the Antiche, and well noted face
Of plaine old forme, is much disfigured,
And like a shifted winde vnto a saile,
It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about,
Startles, and frights consideration:
Makes sound opinion sicke, and truth suspected.
For putting on so new a fashion'd robe.
Pem. When Workemen strive to do better then wel,
They do confound their skill in coueteousnesse,
And oftentimes excusing of a fault,
Doth make the fault the worse by th'excuse:
As patches set vpon a little breach,
Discredite more in hiding of the fault,
Then did the fault before it was so patch'd.
Sal. To this effect, before you were new crown'd
We breath'd our Councell: but it pleas'd your Highnes
To ouer-beare it, and we are all well pleas'd,
Since all, and every part of what we would
Doth make a stand, at what your Highnesse will.

Iob. Some reasons of this double Coronation
I haue possest you with, and thinke them strong,
And more, more strong, then lesser is my feare
I shall indue you with: Meane time, but aske
What you would haue reform'd, that is not well,
And well shall you perceiue, how willingly
I will both heare, and grant you your sequests.
Pem. Then I, as one that am the tongue of these
To sound the purposes of all their hearts,
Both for my selfe, and them: but chiefe of all
Your safety: for the which, my selfe and them
Bend their best studies, heartily request
Th'infranchisement of Arthur, whose restraint
Doth moue the murmuring lips of discontent
To breake into this dangerous argument.
If what in rest you haue, in right you hold,
Why then your feares, which (as they say) attend
The steppes of wrong, should moue you to mew vp
Your tender kinsman, and to choake his dayes
With barbarous ignorance, and deny his youth
The rich aduantage of good exercise,
That the times enemies may not haue this
To grace occasions: let it be our suite,
That you haue bid vs ask his libertie,
Which for our goods, we do no further aske,
Then, whereupon our weale on you depending,
Counts it your weale: he haue his liberty.
Enter Hubert.
Iohn. Let it be so: I do commit his youth
To your direction: Hubert, what newes with you?
Pem. This he the man should do the bloody deed:
He shew'd his warrant to a friend of mine.
The image of a wicked heynous fault
Lives in his eye: that close aspect of his,
Do shew the mood of a much troubled breast,
And I do fearefully believe 'tis done,
What we so fear'd he had a charge to do.
Sal. The colour of the King doth come, and go
Betweene his purpose and his conscience,
Like Heralds 'twixt two dreadfull battailes set:
His passion is so ripe, it needs must breake.
Pem. And when it breakes, I feare will issue thence
The foule corruption of a sweet childes death.
Iohn. We cannot hold mortalities strong hand.
Good Lords, although my will to giue, is liuing,
The suite which you demand is gone, and dead.
He tells vs Arthur is deceas'd to night.
Sal. Indeed we fear'd his sicknesse was past cure.
Pem. Indeed we heard how neere his death he was,
Before the child himselfe felt he was sicke:
This must be answer'd either here, or hence.
Iob. Why do you bend such solemne browes on me?
Think'st you I beare the Sheeres of destiny?
Haue I commandement on the pulse of life?
Sal. It is apparant foule-play, and 'tis shame
That Greatnesse should so grossly offer it;
So thriue it in your game, and so farewell.
Pem. Stay yet (Lord Salisbury) I'le go with thee,
And finde the inheritance of this poore childe,
His little kingdome of a forced grace.
That blood which ow'd the breath of all this Ile,
Three foot of it doth hold; bad world the while:
This must not be thus borne, this will breake out
To all our sorrowes, and ere long I doubt. Exeunt
Io. They burn in indignation: I repent:
There is no sure foundation set on blood:
No certaine life atchieu'd by others death:
A fearefull eye thou hast. Where is that blood,
That I haue seene inhabite in those cheekes?
So foule a skie, clears not without a storme,
Poure downe thy weather: how goes all in France?
Mes. From France to England, never such a power
For any forraigne preparation,
Was leuied in the body of a land.
The Copie of your speede is learn'd by them:
For when you should be told they do prepare,
The tydings comes, that they are all arriu'd.
Iob. Oh where hath our Intelligence bin drunke?
Where hath it slept? Where is my Mothers care?
That such an Army could be drawne in France,
And she not heare of it?
Mes. My Liege, her eare
Is stopt with dost: the first of Aprill di'de
Your noble mother; and as I heare, my Lord,
The Lady Constance in a frenzie di'de
Three dayes before: but this from Rumors tongue
I idely heard: if true, or false I know not.
Iohn. With-hold thy speed, dreadfull Occasion:
O make a league with me, 'till I haue pleas'd
My discontented Peeres. What? Mother dead?
How wildely then walkes my Estate in France?
Vnder whose conduct came those powres of France,
That thou for truth giu'st out are landed heere?
Mes. Vnder the Dolphin.
Enter Bastard and Peter of Pomfret.
Iob. Thou hast made me giddy
With these ill tydings: Now? What sayes the world
To your proceedings? Do not seeke to stuffe
My head with more ill newes: for it is full.
Bast. But if you be a-feard to heare the worst,
Then let the worst vn-heard, fall on your head.
Iohn. Beare with me Cosen, for I was amaz'd
Vnder the tide; but now I breath againe
Aloft the flood, and can giue audience
To any tongue, speake it of what it will.
Bast. How I haue sped among the Clergy men,
The summes I haue collected shall expresse:
But as I travail'd hither through the land,
I finde the people strangely fantasied,
Possest with rumors, full of idle dreames.
Not knowing what they feare, but full of feare.
And here's a Prophet that I brought with me
From forth the streets of Pomfret, whom I found
With many hundreds treading on his heeles:
To whom he sung in rude harsh sounding rimes,
That ere the next Ascension day at noone,
Your Highnes should deliuer vp your Crowne.
Iohn. Thou idle Dreamer, wherefore didst thou so?
Pet. Fore-knowing that the truth will fall out so.
Iohn. Hubert, away with him: imprison him,
And on that day at noone, whereon he sayes
I shall yeeld vp my Crowne, let him be hang'd.
Deliuer him to safety, and returne,
For I must vse thee. O my gentle Cosen,
Hear'st thou the newes abroad, who are arriu'd?
Bast. The French (my Lord) mens mouths are full of it:
Besides I met Lord Bigot, and Lord Salisburie
With eyes as red as new enkindled fire,
And others more, going to seeke the grace
Of Arthur, whom they say is kill'd to night, on your (suggestion.
Iohn. Gentle kinsman, go
And thrust thy selfe into their Companies,

I haue a way to winne their loues againe:
Bring them before me.

Bast. I will seeke them out.

Iohn. Nay, but make haste: the better foote before.
O, let me haue no subiect enemies,
When aduerse Forreyners affright my Townes
With dreadfull pompe of stout inuasion.
Be Mercurie, set feathers to thy heeles,
And fly (like thought) from them, to me againe.

Bast. The spirit of the time shall teach me speed. Exit

Iohn. Spoke like a sprightfull Noble Gentleman.
Go after him: for he perhaps shall neede
Some Messenger betwixt me, and the Peeres,
And be thou hee.

Mes. With all my heart, my Liege.

Iohn. My mother dead?

Enter Hubert.

Hub. My Lord, they say fiue Moones were seene to Foure fixed, and the fift did whirle about (night:
The other foure, in wondrous motion.

Iohn. Fiue Moones?

Hub. Old men, and Beldames, in the streets
Do prophesie vpon it dangerously:
Yong Arthurs death is common in their mouths,
And when they talke of him, they shake their heads,
And whisper one another in the eare.
And he that speakes, doth gripe the hearers wrist,
Whilst he that heares, makes fearefull action
With wrinkled browes, with nods, with rolling eyes.
I saw a Smith stand with his hammer (thus)
The whilst his Iron did on the Anuile coole,
With open mouth swallowing a Taylors newes,
Who with his Sheeres, and Measure in his hand,
Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste
Had falsely thrust vpon contrary feete,
Told of a many thousand warlike French,
That were embattailed, and rank'd in Kent.
Another leane, vnwash'd Artificer,
Cuts off his tale, and talkes of Arthurs death.

Io. Why seek'st thou to possesse me with these feares?
Why vrgest thou so oft yong Arthurs death?
Thy hand hath murdred him. I had a mighty cause
To wish him dead, but thou hadst none to kill him.

H No had (my Lord) why did you not provoke me?

Iohn. It is the curse of Kings, to be attended
By slaues, that take their humors for a warrant,
To breake within the bloody house of life,
And on the winking of Authoritie
To vnderstand a Law; to know the meaning
Of dangerous Maiesty, when perchance it frownes
More vpon humor, then aduis'd respect.

Hub. Heere is your hand and Seale for what I did.

Iob. Oh, when the last accompt twixt heauen & earth
Is to be made, then shall this hand and Seale
Witnesse against vs to damnation.
How oft the sight of meanes to do ill deeds,
Make deeds ill done? Had'st not thou beene by
A fellow by the hand of Nature mark'd,
Quoted, and sign'd to do a deede of shame,
This murther had not come into my minde.
But taking note of thy abhorr'd Aspect,
Finding thee fit for bloody villanie:
Apt, liable to be employ'd in danger,
I faintly broke with thee of Arthurs death.
And thou, to be endeered to a King,
Made it no conscience to destroy a Prince.

Hub. My Lord.

Iob. Had'st thou but shooke thy head, or made a pause
When I spake darkely, what I purposed:
Or turn'd an eye of doubt vpon my face;
As bid me tell my tale in expresse words:
Deepe shame had struck me dumbe, made me break off,
And those thy feares, might haue wrought feares in me
But, thou didst vnderstand me by my signes,
And didst in signes against parley with sinne,
Yes, without stop, didst let thy heart consent,
And consequently, thy rude hand to act
The deed, which both our tongues held vilde to name
Out of my sight, and neuer see me more:
My Nobles leaue me, and my State is braued,
Euen at my gates, with rankes of forreigne powres:
Nay, in the body of this fleshly Land,
This kingdome, this Confine of blood, and breathe
Hostilitie, and ciuill tumult reignes
Betweene my conscience, and my Cosins death.

Hub. Arme you against your other enemies:
Ile make a peace betweene your soule, and you.
Yong Arthur is aliue. This hand of mine
Is yet a maiden, and an innocent hand.
Not painted with the Crimson spots of blood,
Within this bosome, neuer entred yet
The dreadfull motion of a murderous thought,
And you haue slander'd Nature in my forme,
Which howsoeuer rude exteriorly,
Is yet the couer of a fayrer minde,
Then to be butcher of an innocent childe.

Iohn. Doth Arthur liue? O haste thee to the Peeres,
Throw this report on their incensed rage,
And make them tame to their obedience.
Forgiue the Comment that my passion made
Vpon thy feature, for my rage was blinde,
And foule immaginarie eyes of blood
Presented thee more hideous than thou art
Oh, answer not; but to my Closset bring
The angry Lords, with all expedient haste,
I conieure thee but slowly: run more fast. Exeunt

Scœna Tertia.

Enter Arthur on the walles.

Ar. The Wall is high, and yet will I leape downe.
Good ground be pittifull, and hurt me not:
There's few or none do know me, if they did,
This Ship-boyes semblance hath disguis'd me quite.
I am afraide, and yet Ile venture it.
If I get downe, and do not breake my limbes,
Ile finde a thousand shifts to get away;
As good to dye and go; as dye, and stay.
Oh me, my Vncles spirit is in these stones,
Heauen take my soule, and England keep my bones Dies

Enter Pembroke, Salisbury, & Bigot

Sal. Lords, I will meet him at S. Edmundsbury,
It is our safetie, and we must embrace
This gentle offer of the perillous time.

Pem. Who brought that Letter from the Cardinall?

Sal. The Count Melune, a Noble Lord of France,
Whose priuate with me of the Dolphines loue,
Is much more generall, then these lines import.

Big.

Big. To morrow morning let vs meete him then.
Sal. Or rather then set forward, for 'twill be
Two long dayes iourney (Lords) or ere we meete.
Enter Bastard.
Bast. Once more to day well met, distemper'd Lords,
The King by me requests your presence straight.
Sal. The king hath dispossest himselfe of vs,
We will not lyne his thin-bestained cloake
With our pure Honors: nor attend the foote
That leaues the print of blood where ere it walkes.
Returne, and tell him so: we know the worst.
Bast. What ere you thinke, good words I thinke were best.
Sal. Our greefes, and not our manners reason now
Bast. But there is little reason in your greefe.
Therefore 'twere reason you had manners now.
Pem. Sir, sir, impatience hath his priuiledge.
Bast. 'Tis true, to hurt his master, no mans else.
Sal. This is the prison: What is he lyes heere?
P. Oh death, made proud with pure & princely beauty.
The earth had not a hole to hide this deede.
Sal. Murther, as hating what himselfe hath doone,
Doth lay it open to vrge on reuenge.
Big. Or when he doom'd this Beautie to a grave,
Found it too precious Princely, for a grave.
Sal. Sir Richard, what thinke you? you haue beheld,
Or haue you read, or heard, or could you thinke?
Or do you almost thinke, although you see,
That you do see? Could thought, without this obiect
Forme such another? This is the very top,
The heighth, the Creft: or Creft vnto the Creft
Of murthers Armes: This is the bloodiest shame,
The wildest Sauagery, the vildest stroke
That euer wall-ey'd wrath, or staring rage
Presented to the teares of soft remorse.
Pem. All murthers past, do stand excus'd in this:
And this so sole, and so vnmatcheable,
Shall giue a holinesse, a purrile,
To the yet vnbegotten sinne of times;
And proue a deadly blood-shed, but a iest,
Exampled by this heynous spectacle.
Bast. It is a damned, and a bloody worke,
The graceless action of a heavy hand,
If that it be the worke of any hand.
Sal. If that it be the worke of any hand?
We had a kinde of light, what would ensue:
It is the shamefull worke of Huberts hand,
The practice, and the purpose of the king:
From whose obedience I forbid my soule,
Kneeling before this ruine of sweete life,
And breathing to his breathlesse Excellence
The Incense of a Vow, a holy Vow:
Neuer to taste the pleasures of the world,
Neuer to be infected with delight,
Nor conuersant with Ease, and Idlenesse,
Till I haue set a glory to this hand,
By giuing it the worship of Reuenge.
Pem. Big. Our soules religiously confirme thy words.
Enter Hubert.
Hub. Lords, I am hot with haste, in seeking you,
Arthur doth liue, the king hath sent for you.
Sal. Oh he is bold, and blushes not at death,
Auaunt thou hatefull villain, get thee goone. (the Law?
Hu. I am no villaine. Sal. Must I rob
Bast Your sword is bright sir, put it vp againe.
Sal. Not till I sheath it in a murtherers skin.
Hub. Stand backe Lord Salsbury, stand backe I say:
By heauen, I thinke my sword's as sharpe as yours.
I would not haue you (Lord) forget your selfe,
Nor tempt the danger of my true defence;
Least I, by marking of your rage, forget your Worth, your Greatnesse, and Nobility.
Big. Out dunghill: dar'st thou braue a Nobleman?
Hub. Not for my life: But yet I dare defend
My innocent life against an Emperor.
Sal. Thou art a Murtherer.
Hub. Do not prouo me so:
Yet I am none. Whose tongue so ere speakes false,
Not truely speakes: who speakes not truly, Lies.
Pem. Cut him to peeces.
Bast. Keepe the peace, I say.
Sal. Stand by, or I shall gaul you Faulconbridge.
Bast. Thou wer't better gaul the diuell Salsbury.
If thou but frowne on me, or stirre thy foote,
Or teach thy hastie spleene to do me shame,
Ile strike thee dead. Put vp thy sword betime,
Or Ile so maule you, and your tossing-Iron,
That you shall thinke the diuell is come from hell.
Big. What wilt thou do, renowned Faulconbridge?
Second a Villaine, and a Murtherer?
Hub Lord Bigot, I am none.
Big. Who kill'd this Prince?
Hub. 'Tis not an houre since I left him well:
I honour'd him, I lou'd him, and will weepe
My date of life out, for his sweete liues losse.
Sal Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes,
For villanie is not without such rheume,
And he, long traded in it, makes it seeme
Like Riuers of remorse and innocencie.
Away with me, all you whose soules abhorre
Th'vncleanly sauours of a Slaughter-house,
For I am stifled with this smell of sinne.
Big. Away, toward Burre, to the Dolphin there.
P. There tel the king, he may inquire vs out. Ex Lords.
Ba. Here's a good world: knew you of this faire work?
Beyond the infinite and boundlesse reach of mercie,
(If thou didst this deed of death) art ꝟ damn'd Hubert.
Hub Do but heare me sir.
Bast. Ha! Ile tell thee what,
Thou 'rt damn'd as blacke, nay nothing is so blacke,
Thou art more deepe damn'd then Prince Lucifer:
There is not yet so vgly a fiend of hell
As thou shalt be, if thou didst kill this childe.
Hub. Vpon my soule.
Bast. If thou didst but consent
To this most cruell Act: do but dispaire,
And if thou want'st a Cord, the smallest thred
That euer Spider twisted from her wombe
Will serue to strangle thee: A rush will be a beame
To hang thee on. Or wouldst thou drowne thy selfe,
Put but a little water in a spoone,
And it shall be as all the Ocean,
Enough to stifle such a villaine vp.
I do suspect thee very grieuously.
Hub. If I in act, consent, or sinne of thought,
Be guiltie of the stealing that sweete breath
Which was embounded in this beauteous clay,
Let hell want paines enough to torture me:
I left him well.
Bast. Go, beare him in thine armes:
I am amaz'd me thinkes, and loose my way
Among the thornes, and dangers of this world

How eaſie doſt thou take all England vp,
Fromforth this morcell of dead Royalitie?
The life, the right, and truth of all this Realme
Is fled to heauen: and England now is left
To tug and ſcamble, and to part by th'teeth
The vn owed intereſt of proud ſwelling State:
Now for the bare-picht bone of Maieſty,
Doth dogged warre briſtle his angry creſt,
And ſnarleth in the gentle eyes of peace:
Now Powers from home, and diſcontents at home
Meet in one line: and vaſt confuſion waites
As doth a Rauen on a ſicke-faine beaſt,
The imminent decay of wreſted pompe.
Now happy he, whoſe cloake and center can
Hold out this tempeſt. Beare away that childe,
And follow me with ſpeed: Ile to the King:
A thouſand buſineſſes are briefe in hand,
And heauen itſelfe doth frowne vpon the Land. Exe.

Actus Quartus, Scæna prima.

Enter King Iohn and Pandolph, attendants.

K. Iohn. Thus haue I yeelded vp into your hand
The Circle of my glory.
Pan. Take againe
From this my hand, as holding of the Pope
Your Soueraigne greatneſſe and authoritie.
Iohn. Now keep your holy word, go meet the French,
And from his holineſſe vſe all your power
To ſtop their marches 'fore we are enflam'd:
Our diſcontented Counties doe reuolt:
Our people quarrell with obedience,
Swearing Allegiance, and the loue of ſoule
To ſtranger-blood, to forren Royalty;
This inundation of miſtempered humor,
Reſts by you onely to be qualified.
Then pauſe not. for the preſent time's ſo ſicke,
That preſent medicine muſt be miniſtred,
Or ouerthrow incureable enſues.
Pand. It was my breath that blew this Tempeſt vp,
Vpon your ſtubborne vſage of the Pope.
But ſince you are a gentle conuertite,
My tongue ſhall hush againe this ſtorme of warre,
And make faire weather in your bluſtring land:
On this Aſcention day, remember well,
Vpon your oath of ſeruice to the Pope,
Goe I to make the French lay downe their Armes. Exit
Iohn. Is this Aſcenſion day: did not the Prophet
Say, that before Aſcenſion day at noone,
My Crowne I ſhould giue off? even ſo I haue:
I did ſuppoſe it ſhould be on conſtraine,
But (heau'n be thank d) it is but voluntary.

Enter Baſtard.

Baſt. All Kent hath yeelded: nothing there holds out
But Douer Caſtle: London hath receiu'd
Like a kinde Hoſt, the Dolphin and his powers.
Your Nobles will not heare you, but are gone
To offer ſeruice to your enemy:
And wilde amazement hurries vp and downe
The little number of your doubtfull friends.
Iohn. Would not my Lords returne to me againe
After they heard young Arthur was alue?
Baſt. They found him dead, and caſt into the ſtreets
An empty Casket, where the ſweet of life
By ſome damn'd hand was rob'd, and tane away.
Iohn. That villaine Hubert told me he did liue.
Baſt. So on my ſoule he did, for ought he knew.
But wherefore doe you droope? why looke you ſad?
Be great in act, as you haue beene in thought:
Let not the world ſee feare and ſad diſtruſt
Gouerne the motion of a kinglye eye:
Be ſtirring as the time, be fire with fire,
Threaten the threatner, and out-face the brow
Of bragging horror: So ſhall inferior eyes
That borrow their behaiuiours from the great,
Grow great by your example, and put on
The dauntleſſe ſpirit of reſolution.
Away, and gliſter like the god of warre
When he intendeth to beconne the field:
Shew boldneſſe and aſpiring confidence:
What, ſhall they ſeeke the Lion in his denne,
And fright him there? and make him tremble there?
Oh let it not be ſaid: forrage, and runne
To meet diſpleaſure farther from the doores,
And grapple with him ere he come ſo nye.
Iohn. The Legat of the Pope hath beene with me.
And I haue made a happy peace with him,
And he hath promis'd to diſmiſſe the Powers
Led by the Dolphin.
Baſt. Oh inglorious league:
Shall we vpon the footing of our land,
Send fayre-play-orders and make compromiſe,
Inſinuation, parley, and baſe truce
To Armes Inuaſius? Shall a beardleſſe boy,
A cockred-ſilken wanton beaue our fields,
And ſteeth his ſpirit in a warre-like ſoyle,
Mocking the ayre with colours idlely ſpred,
And finde no checke? Let vs my Liege to Armes:
Perchance the Cardinall cannot make your peace;
Or if he doe, let it at leaſt be ſaid
They ſaw we had a purpoſe of defence.
Iohn. Haue thou the ordering of this preſent time.
Baſt. Away then with good courage: yet I know
Our Partie may well meet a prouder foe. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter (in Arms) Dolphin, Salisbury, Melouin, Pembroke, Bigot, Souldiers.

Dol. My Lord Melouine, let this be copied out,
And keepe it ſafe for our remembrance:
Returne the preſident to theſe Lords againe,
That hauing our faire order written downe,
Both they and we, peruſing ore theſe notes
May know wherefore we tooke the Sacrament,
And keepe our faithes firme and inuiolable.
Sal. Vpon our ſides it never ſhall be broken.
And Noble Dolphin, albeit we ſweare
A voluntary zeale, and an vn-vrg'd Faith
To your proceedings: yet believe me Prince,
I am not glad that ſuch a ſore of Time
Should ſeeke a plaiſter by contemn'd reuolt,
And heale the inueterate Canker of one wound.

By

By making many: Oh it grieues my soule,
That I must draw this metaile from my side
To be a widdow-maker: oh, and there
Where honourable rescue, and defence
Cries out vpon the name of Salisbury.
But such is the infection of the time,
That for the health and Physicke of our right,
We cannot deale but with the very hand
Of sterne Iniustice, and confused wrong:
And is't not pitty, (oh my grieued friends)
That we, the sonnes and children of this Ile,
Was borne to see so sad an houre as this,
Wherein we step after a stranger, march
Vpon her gentle bosom, and fill vp
Her Enemies rankes? I must withdraw, and weepe
Vpon the spot of this inforced cause,
To grace the Gentry of a Land remote,
And follow vnacquainted colours heere:
What heere? O Nation that thou couldst remoue,
That Neptunes Armes who clippeth thee about,
Would beare thee from the knowledge of thy selfe,
And cripple thee vnto a Pagan shore,
Where these two Christian Armies might combine
The blood of malice, in a vaine of league,
And not to spend it so vn-neighbourly.

Dolph. A noble temper dost thou shew in this,
And great affections wrastling in thy bosome
Doth make an earth-quake of Nobility:
Oh, what a noble combat hast fought
Between compulsion, and a brave respect:
Let me wipe off this honourable dewe,
That siluerly doth progresse on thy cheekes:
My heart hath melted at a Ladies teares,
Being an ordinary Inundation:
But this effusion of such manly drops,
This showre, blowne vp by tempest of the soule,
Scarcles mine eyes, and makes me more amaz'd
Then had I seene the vaultie top of heauen
Figur'd quite ore with burning Meteors.
Lift vp thy brow (renowned Salisburie)
And with a great heart heave away this storme:
Commend these waters to those baby-eyes
That never saw the giant-world enrag'd,
Nor met with Fortune, other then at feasts,
Full warm of blood, of mirth, of gossipping:
Come, come; for thou shalt thrust thy hand as deepe
Into the purse of rich prosperity
As Lewis himselfe: so (Nobles) shall you all,
That knit your sinewes to the strength of mine.

Enter Pandulphe.

And euen there, methinkes an Angell spake,
Looke where the holy Legate comes apace,
To giue vs warrant from the hand of heauen,
And on our actions set the name of right
With holy breath.

Pand. Haile noble Prince of France:
The next is this: King John hath reconcil'd
Himselfe to Rome, his spirit is come in,
That so stood out against the holy Church,
The great Metropolis and Sea of Rome:
Therefore thy threatning Colours now wind vp,
And cause the sauage spirit of wilde warre,
That like a Lion fostered vp at hand,
It may lie gently at the foot of peace,
And be no further harmefull then in shewe.

Dol. Your Grace shall pardon me, I will not backe:
I am too high-borne to be proportied
To be a secondary at controll,
Or vsefull seruing-man, and Instrument
To any Soueraigne State throughout the world.
Your breath first kindled the dead coale of warre,
Betweene this chastiz'd kingdome and my selfe,
And brought in matter that should feed this fire;
And now 'tis farre too huge to be blowne out
With that same weake winde, which enkindled it
You taught me how to know the face of right,
Acquainted me with interest to this Land,
Yea, thrust this enterprize into my heart,
And come ye now to tell me John hath made
His peace with Rome? what is that peace to me?
I (by the honour of my marriage bed)
After yong Arthur, claime this Land for mine,
And now it is halfe conquer'd, must I backe,
Because that John hath made his peace with Rome?
Am I Romes slaue? What penny hath Rome borne?
What men prouided? What munition sent
To vnder-prop this Action? Is't not I
That vnder-goe this charge? Who else but I,
And such as to my claime are liable,
Sweat in this businesse, and maintaine this warre?
Haue I not heard these Islanders shout out
Viue le Roy, as I haue bank'd their Towns?
Haue I not heere the best Cards for the game
To winne this easie match, plaid for a Crowne?
And shall I now giue ore the yeelded Set?
No, no, on my soule it never shall be said.

Pand. You looke but on the out-side of this worke.

Dol. Out-side or in-side, I will not returne
Till my attempt so much be glorified,
As to my ample hope was promised,
Before I drew this gallant head of warre,
And cull'd these fiery spirits from the world
To out-looke Conquest, and to winne renowne
Euen in the iawes of danger, and of death
What lusty Trumpet thus doth summon vs?

Enter Bastard.

Bast. According to the faire-play of the world,
Let me haue audience: I am sent to speake:
My holy Lord of Millane, from the King
I come to learne how you haue dealt for him:
And, as you answer, I doe know the scope
And warrant limited vnto my tongue.

Pand. The Dolphin is too wilfull opposite
And will not temporize with my intreaties:
He flatly saies, hee'll not lay downe his Armes.

Bast. By all the blood that euer fury breath'd,
The youth saies well. Now heare our English King,
For thus his Royaltie doth speake in me:
He is prepar'd, and reason to he should,
This apish and vnmannerly approach,
This harnes'd Maske, and vnadaised Reuell,
This vn-heard sawcinesse and boyish Troopes,
The King doth smile at, and is well prepar'd
To whip this dwarfish warre, this Pigmy Armes
From out the circle of his Territories.
That hand which had the strength, euen at your dore,
To cudgell you, and make you take the hatch,
To dust like Buckets in concealed Welles,
To crowch in litter of your stable planks,
To lye like pawnes, lock'd vp in chests and trancks,
To hug with swine, to seeke sweet safety out
In vaults and prisons, and to thrill and shake,

Euen

Euen at the crying of your Nations crow,
Thinking this voyce an armed Englishmen,
Shall that victorious hand be feebled heere,
That in your Chambers gaue you chastisement?
No: know the gallant Monarch is in Armes,
And like an Eagle, o're his eyerie towres,
To sowse annoyance that comes neere his Nest:
And you degenerate, you ingrate Reuolts,
you bloudy Nero's, ripping vp the wombe
Of your deere Mother-England: blush for shame:
For your owne Ladies, and pale-visag'd Maides,
Like Amazons, come tripping after drummes:
Their thimbles into armed Gantlets change,
Their Needl's to Lances, and their gentle hearts
To fierce and bloody inclination.

Dol. There end thy braue, and turn thy face in peace,
We grant thou canst out-scold vs: Fare thee well,
We hold our time too precious to be spent
With such a brabler.

Pem. Giue me leaue to speake.

Bast. No, I will speake.

Dol. We will attend to neyther:
Strike vp the drummes, and let the tongue of warre
Pleade for our interest, and our being heere.

Bast. Indeede your drums being beaten, wil cry out;
And so shall you, being beaten: Do but start
An eccho with the clamor of thy drumme,
And euen at hand, a drumme is readie brac'd,
That shall reuerberate all, as lowd as thine.
Sound but another, and another shall
(As lowd as thine) rattle the Welkins eare,
And mocke the deepe mouth'd Thunder: for at hand
(Not trusting to this halting Legate heere, Whom he hath vs'd rather for sport, then neede)
Is warlike Iohn; and in his fore-head sits
A bare-rib'd death, whose office is this day
To feast vpon whole thousands of the French.

Dol. Strike vp our drummes, to finde this danger out.

Bast. And thou shalt finde it (Dolphin) do not doubt.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Alarums. Enter Iohn and Hubert.

Iohn. How goes the day with vs? oh tell me Hubert.

Hub. Badly I feare; how fares your Maiesty?

Iohn. This Feuer that hath troubled me so long,
Lyes heauie on me: oh, my heart is sicke.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. My Lord: your valiant kinsman Falconbridge,
Desires your Maiestie to leaue the field,
And send him word by me, which way you go.

Iohn. Tell him toward Swinstead, to the Abbey there.

Mes. Be of good comfort: for the great supply,
That was expected by the Dolphin heere,
Are wrack'd three nights ago on Goodwin sands.
This newes was brought to Richard but euen now,
The French fight coldly, and retyre themselues.

Iohn. Aye me, this tyrant Feuer burnes mee vp,
And will not let me welcome this good newes.
Set on toward Swinstead: to my Litter straight,
Weaknesse possesseth me, and I am faint. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, Pembroke, and Bigot.

Sal. I did not thinke the King so stor'd with friends.

Pem. Vp once againe: put spirit in the French,
If they miscarry: we miscarry too.

Sal. That misbegotten diuell Falconbridge,
In spight of spight, alone vpholds the day.

Pem. They say King Iohn sore sick, hath left the field.

Enter Meloon wounded.

Mel. Lead me to the Reuolts of England heere.

Sal. When we were happie, we had other names.

Pem. It is the Count Meloone.

Sal. Wounded to death.

Mel. Fly Noble English, you are bought and sold,
Vnchord the rude eye of Rebellion,
And welcome home againe discarded faith,
Seeke out King Iohn, and fall before his feete:
For if the French be Lords of this loud day,
He meanes to recompence the paines you take,
By cutting off your heads: Thus hath he sworne,
And I with him, and many moe with mee,
Vpon the Altar at S. Edmondsbury,
Euen on that Altar, where we swore to you
Deere Amity, and euerlasting loue.

Sal. May this be possible? May this be true?

Mel. Haue I not hideous death within my view,
Retaining but a quantity of life,
Which bleeds away, euen as a forme of wax
Resoluteth from his figure 'gainst the fire?
What in the world should make me now deceiue,
Since I must loose the vse of all deceite?
Why should I then be false, since it is true
That I must dye heere, and liue hence, by Truth?
I say againe, if Lewis do win the day,
He is forsworne, if ere those eyes of yours
Behold another day breake in the East:
But euen this night whose blacke contagious breath
Already smoakes about the burning Crest
Of the old, feeble, and day-wearied Sonne,
Euen this ill night, your breathing shall expire,
Paying the fine of rated Treachery,
Euen with a treacherous fine of all your liues:
If Lewis, by your assistance win the day.
Commend me to one Hubert, with your King;
The loue of him, and this respect besides
(For that my Grandsire was an Englishman)
Awakes my Conscience to confesse all this.
In lieu whereof, I pray you beare me hence
From forth the noise and rumour of the Field;
Where I may thinke the remnant of my thoughts
In peace: and part this bodie and my soule
With contemplation, and deuout desires.

Sal. We do beleeue thee, and beshrew my soule,
But I do loue the fauour, and the forme
Of this most faire occasion, by the which
We will vntread the steps of damned flight,
And like a bated and retired Flood,
Leaving our rankenesse and irregular course,
Stoope loue within those bounds we haue ore-look'd,
And calmely run on in obedience
Euen to our Ocean, to our great King Iohn.
My arme shall giue thee helpe to beare thee hence,

For

For I do see the cruell pangs of death
Right in thine eye. Away, my friends, new flight,
And happie newnesse, that intends old right. Exeunt

Scena Quinta.

Enter Dolphin, and his Traine.

Dol. The Sun of heauen (me thought) was loth to set
But staid, and made the Westerne Welkin blush,
When English measure backward their owne ground
In faint Retyre: Oh bravely came we off,
When with a volley of our needlesse shot,
After such bloody toile, we bid good night,
And wonn'd our tott'ring colours clearly vp,
Left in the field, and almost Lords of it.

Enter a Messenger.

Mes. Where is my Prince, the Dolphin?

Dol. Heere: what newes?

Mes. The Count Melloon is slaine: The English Lords
By his perswasion, are againe faine off,
And your supply, which you haue wish'd so long,
Are cast away, and sunke on Goodwin sands.

Dol. Ah foule, throw'd newes. Beshrew thy very hart
I did not thinke to be so sad to night (hart
As this hath made me. Who was he that said
King John did flie an houre or two before
The stumbling night did part our wearie powres?

Mes. Who euer spoke it, it is true my Lord.

Dol. Well: keepe good quarter, & good care to night,
The day shall not be vp so soone as I,
To try the faire adeuenture of to morrow. Exeunt

Scena Sexta.

Enter Bastard and Hubert, seuerally.

Hub. Whose there? Speake hoa, speake quickely, or I shoote.

Bast. A Friend. What art thou?

Hub. Of the part of England.

Bast. Whether doest thou go?

Hub. What's that to thee?
Why may not I demand of thine affaires,
As well as thou of mine?

Bast. Hubert, I thinke.

Hub. Thou hast a perfect thought:
I will vpon all hazards well believe
Thou art my friend, that know'st my tongue so well:
Who art thou?

Bast. Who thou wilt: and if thou please
Thou maist be-friend me so much, as to thinke
I come one way of the Plantagenets.

Hub. Vnkinde remembrance: thou, & endless night,
Haue done me shame: Braue Soldier, pardon me,
That any accents breaking from thy tongue,
Should scape the true acquaintance of mine eare.

Bast. Come, come: sans complement, What newes abroad?

Hub. Why heere walke I, in the black brow of night
To finde you out.

Bast. Breefe then: and what's the newes?

Hub. O my sweet sir, newes fitting to the night,
Blacke, fearefull, comfortlesse, and horrible.

Bast. Shew me the very wound of this ill newes,
I am no woman, I le not swound at it.

Hub. The King I feare is poyson'd by a Monke,
I left him almost speechlesse, and broke out
To acquaint you with this euill, that you might
The better arme you to the sodaine time,
Then if you had at leisure knowne of this.

Bast. How did he take it? Who did taste to him?

Hub. A Monke I tell you, a resolued villaine
Whose Bowels sodainly burst out: The King
Yet speakes, and peradventure may recouer.

Bast. Who didst thou leaue to tend his Maiesty?

Hub. Why know you not? The Lords are all come backe,
And brought Prince Henry in their companie,
At whose request the king hath pardon'd them,
And they are all about his Maiestie.

Bast. With hold thine indignation, mighty heauen,
And tempt vs not to beare aboue our power.
I le tell thee Hubert, halfe my power this night
Passing these Flats, are taken by the Tide,
These Lincolne-Washes haue deuoured them,
My selfe, well mounted, hardly haue escap'd.
Away before: Conduct me to the king,
I doubt he will be dead, or ere I come. Exeunt

Scena Septima.

Enter Prince Henry, Salisbury, and Bigot.

Hen. It is too late, the life of all his blood
Is touch'd, corruptibly: and his pure braine
(Which some suppose the soules fraile dwelling house)
Doth by the idle Comments that it makes,
Fore-tell the ending of mortality.

Enter Pembroke.

Pem. His Highnesse yet doth speak, & holds beleefe,
That being brought into the open ayre,
It would allay the burning qualitie
Of that fell poison which assayleth him.

Hen. Let him be brought into the Orchard heere:
Doth he still rage?

Pem. He is more patient
Then when you left him; euen now he sung.

Hen. Oh vanity of sicknesse: fierce extremes
In their continuance, will not feele themselues.
Death hauing praide vpon the outward parts
Leaues them inuisible, and his seiges is now
Against the winde, the which he pricket and wounds
With many legions of strange fantasies,
Which in their throng, and preffe to that last hold,
Confound themselues. 'Tis strange death shold sing:
I am the Symet to this pale faint Swan,
Who chaunts a doleful hymne to his owne death,
And from the organ-pipe of frailety sings
His soule and body to their lasting rest.

Sal. Be of good comfort (Prince) for you are borne
To set a forme vpon that indigest
Which he hath left so shapelesse, and so rude.

John brought in.

John. I marrie, now my soule hath elbow roome,

It would not out at windowes, nor at doores,
There is so hot a summer in my bosome,
That all my bowels crumble vp to dust:
I am a scribled forme drawne with a pen
Vpon a Parchment, and against this fire
Do I shrinke vp.

Hen. How fares your Maiesty?

Ioh. Poyson'd, ill fare: dead, forsoake, cast off,
And none of you will bid the winter come
To thrust his icie fingers in my maw;
Nor let my kingdomes Riuers take their course
Through my burn'd bosome, nor intreat the North
To make his bleake windes kisse my parched lips,
And comfort me with cold. I do not aske you much,
I begge cold comfort, and you are so straight
And so ingratefull, you deny me that.

Hen. Oh that there were some vertue in my teares,
That might releeue you.

Ioh. The sale in them is hot.
Within me is a hell, and there the poyson
Is, as a fiend, confin'd to tyrannize,
On vnrepreuable condemned blood.

Enter Bastard.

Bast. Oh, I am scalded with my violent motion
And spleene of speede, to see your Maiesty.

Ioh. Oh Cozen, thou art come to set mine eye:
The tackle of my heart, is crack'd and burnt,
And all the shrowds where with my life should saile,
Are turned to one thred, one little haire:
My heart hath one poore string to stay it by,
Which holds but till thy newes be vttered,
And then all this thou seest, is but a clod,
And module of confounded royalty.

Bast. The Dolphin is preparing hither-ward,
Where heauen he knowes how we shall answer him.
For in a night the best part of my powre,
As I vpon aduantage did remoue,
Were in the Washes all vnwarily,
Deuoured by the vnexpected flood.

Sal. You breath these dead newes in as dead an eare
My Liege, my Lord: but now a King, now thus.

Hen. Euen so must I run on, and euen so stop
What surety of the world, what hope, what stay,
When this was now a King, and now is clay?

Bast. Art thou gone so? I do but stay behinde.
To do the office for thee, of reuenge,
And then my soule shall waite on thee to heauen,
As it on earth hath bene thy seruant still.
Now, now you Starres, that moue in your right spheres,
Where be your powres? Shew now your mended faiths,
And instantly returne with me againe.
To push destruction, and perpetuall shame
Out of the weake doore of our fainting Land.
Straight let vs seeke, or straight we shall be sought,
The Dolphine rages at our verie heeles.

Sal. It seemes you know not then so much as we.
The Cardinall Pandulph is within at rest,
Who halfe an houre since came from the Dolphin,
And brings from him such offers of our peace,
As we with honor and respect may take,
With purpose presently to leaue this warre.

Bast. He will the rather do it when he sees
Our selues well sinew'd to our defence.

Sal. Nay, 'tis in a manner done already,
For many carriages he hath dispe-ch'd
To the sea side, and put his cause and quarrell
To the disposing of the Cardinall,
With whom your selfe, my selfe, and other Lords,
If you thinke meete, this afternoone will post
To consummate this businesse happily.

Bast. Let it be so, and you my noble Prince,
With other Princes that may best be spar'd,
Shall waite vpon your Fathers Funerall.

Hen. At Worster must his bodie be inter'd,
For so he will'd it.

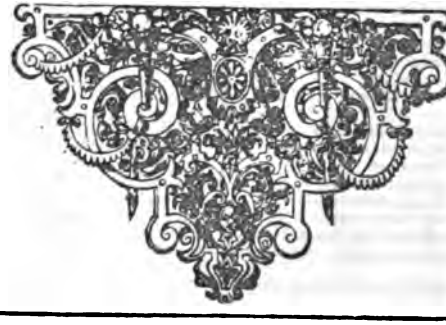
Bast. Thither shall it then,
And happily may your sweet selfe put on
The lineall state, and glorie of the Land,
To whom with all submission on my knee,
I do bequeath my faithfull seruices
And true subiection euerlastingly.

Sal. And the like tender of our loue we make
To rest without a spot for euermore.

Hen. I haue a kinde soule, that would giue thanks,
And knowes not how to do it, but with teares.

Bast. Oh let vs pay the time: but needfull woe,
Since it hath beene before hand with our griefes.
This England never did, nor never shall
Lye at the proud foote of a Conqueror,
But when it first did helpe to wound it selfe.
Now, these her Princes are come home againe,
Come the three corners of the world in Armes,
And we shall shocke them: Naught shall make vs rue,
If England to it selfe, do rest but true.

Exeunt



The life and death of King Richard the Second.

Actus Primus, Scæna Prima.

Enter King Richard, John of Gaunt, with other Nobles and Attendants.

King Richard.

LEt Iohn of Gaunt, time-honoured Lancaster,
Hast thou according to thy oath and band
Brought hither Henry Herford thy bold son:
Here to make good ſ boiſtrous late appeale,
Which then our leyſure would not let vs heare,
Againſt the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Gaunt. I haue my Liege.

King. Tell me moreouer, haſt thou ſounded him,
If he appeale the Duke on ancient malice,
Or worthily as a good ſubiect ſhould
On ſome knowne ground of treacherie in him.

Gaunt. As neere as I could ſift him on that argument,
On ſome apparant danger ſeene in him,
Aym'd at your Highneſſe, no inueterate malice.

Kin. Then call them to our preſence face to face,
And frowning brow to brow, our ſelues will heare
Th'accuſer, and the accuſed, freely ſpeake;
High ſtomack'd are they both, and full of ire,
In rage, deafe as the ſea; haſtie as fire.

Enter Bullingbrooke and Mowbray.

Bul. Many yeares of happy dayes befall
My gracious Soueraigne, my moſt louing Liege.

Mow. Each day ſtill better others happineſſe,
Vntill the heauens enuying earths good hap,
Adde an immortall title to your Crowne.

King. We thanke you both, yet one but flatters vs,
As well appeareth by the cauſe you come,
Namely, to appeale each other of high treaſon.
Cooſin of Hereford, what doſt thou obiect
Againſt the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray?

Bul. First, heauen be the record to my ſpeech,
In the deuotion of a ſubiects loue,
Tendering the precious ſafetie of my Prince,
And free from other misbegotten hate,
Come I appeelant to this Princely preſence.
Now Thomas Mowbray do I turne to thee,
And marke my greeting well: for what I ſpeake,
My body ſhall make good vpon this earth,
Or my diuine ſoule anſwer it in heauen.
Thou art a Traitor, and a Miſcreant;
Too good to be ſo, and too bad to liue
Since the more faire and chriſtall is the skie,
The vglier ſeeme the cloudes that in it flye:
Once more, the more to aggrauate the note,
With a foule Traitors name ſtuffe I thy throte,
And wiſh (ſo pleaſe my Soueraigne) ere I moue,
What my tong ſpeaks, my right drawn ſword may proue

Mow. Let not my cold words heere accuſe my zeale:
'Tis not the triall of a Womens warre,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cauſe betwixt vs twaine:
The blood is hot that muſt be cool'd for this.
Yet can I not of ſuch tame patience boaſt,
As to be hoſht, and nought at all to ſay.
First the faire reuerence of your Highneſſe curbes mee,
From giuing reines and ſpurres to my free ſpeech,
Which elſe would poſt, vntill it had return'd
These termes of treaſon, doubly downe his throat.
Setting aſide his high bloods royalty,
And let him be no Kinſman to my Liege,
I do defie him, and I ſpit at him,
Call him a ſlanderous Coward, and a Villaine:
Which to maintaine, I would allow him odds,
And meete him, were I tide to runne aſoote
Euen to the frozen ridges of the Alpes,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where euer Engliſhman durſt ſet his ſoote.
Meane time, let this defend my loyaltie,
By all my hopes moſt falſely doth he lie.

Bul. Pale trembling Coward, there I throw my gage,
Diſclaiming heere the kindred of a King,
And lay aſide my high bloods Royalty,
Which feare, not reuerence makes thee to except.
If guilty dread hath left thee ſo much ſtrength,
As to take vp mine Honors pawne, then ſtoope.
By that, and all the rites of Knight-hood elſe,
Will I make good againſt thee arme to arme,
What I haue ſpoken, or thou canſt deuiſe.

Mow. I take it vp, and by that ſword I ſweare,
Which gently laid my Knight-hood on my ſhoulder,
Ile anſwer thee in any faire degree,
Or Chiualrous deſigne of knightly triall:
And when I mount, aliue may I not light,
If I be Traitor, or vniuſtly fight.

King. What doth our Coſin lay to Mowbrays charge?
It muſt be great that can inherite vs,
So much as of a thought of ill in him.

Bul. Looke what I ſaid, my life ſhall proue it true,
That Mowbray hath receiu'd eight thouſand Nobles,

In

In name of lendings for your Highnesse Soldiers,
The which he hath detain'd for lewd employments,
Like a false Traitor, and iniurious Villaine.
Besides I say, and will in battaile proue,
Or here, or elsewhere to the furthest Verge
That euer was surney'd by English eye,
That all the Treasons for these eighteene yeeres
Complotted, and contriued in this Land,
Fetch'd from false Mowbray their first head and spring.
Further I say, and further will maintaine
Vpon his bad life, to make all this good.
That he did plot the Duke of Glousters death,
Suggest his soone beleeuing aduersaries,
And consequently, like a Traitor Coward,
Slae'd out his innocent soule through streames of blood
Which blood, like sacrificing Abels cries,
(Euen from the toonglesse cauernes of the earth)
To me for iustice, and rough chastisement:
And by the glorious worth of my descent,
This arme shall do it, or this life be spent.

King. How high a pitch his resolution soares:
Thomas of Norfolke, what sayest thou to this?

Mow. Oh let my Soueraigne turne away his face,
And bid his eares a little while be deafe,
Till I haue told this slander of his blood,
How God, and good men, hate so foule a lyar.

King. Mowbray, impartiall are our eyes and eares,
Were he my brother, nay our kingdomes heyre,
As he is but my fathers brothers sonne;
Now by my Scepters awe, I make a vow,
Such neighbour-nearenesse to our sacred blood,
Should nothing priuiledge him, nor partialize
The vn-floopingfirmenesse of my vpright soule.
He is our subiect (Mowbray) so art thou,
Free speech, and fearelesse, I to thee allow.

Mow. Then Bullingbrooke, as low as to thy heart,
Through the false passage of thy throat; thou lyest:
Three parts of that receipt I had for Callice,
Disbursd I to his Highnesse souldiers:
The other part reserv'd I by consent,
For that my Soueraigne Liege was in my debt,
Vpon remainder of a deere Accompt,
Since last I went to France to fetch his Queene:
Now swallow downe that Lye. For Glousters death,
I slew him not; but (to mine owne disgrace)
Neglected my sworne duty in that case:
For you my noble Lord of Lancaster,
The honourable Father to my foe.
Once I did lay an ambush for your life,
A trespasse that doth vex my greeued soule.
But ere I last receiu'd the Sacrament,
I did confesse it, and exactly begg'd
Your Graces pardon, and I hope I had it.
This is my fault: as for the rest appeal'd,
It issues from the rancour of a Villaine,
A recreant, and most degeberate Traitor,
Which in my selfe I boldly will defend,
And interchangeably hurle downe my gage
Vpon this ouer-weening Traitors foote,
To proue my selfe a loyall Gentleman,
Euen in the best blood chamber'd in his bosome:
In hast whereof, most heartily I pray
Your Highnesse to assigne our Triall day.

King. Wrath-kindled Gentlemen be rul'd by me:
Let's purge this choller without letting blood:
This we prescribe, though no Physition,
Deepe malice makes too deepe incision.
Forget, forgiue, conclude, and be agreed,
Our Doctors say, This is no time to bleed.
Good Vncle, let this end where it begun.
We'l calme the Duke of Norfolke; you, your son.

Gaunt. To a make-peace shall become my age.
Throw downe (my sonne) the Duke of Norfolkes gage.

King. And Norfolke, throw downe his.

Gaunt. When Harry when? Obedience bids,
Obedience bids I should not bid agen.

King. Norfolke, throw downe, we bidde; there is no boote.

Mow. My feife I throw (dread Soueraigne) at thy foot
My life thou shalt commaud, but not my shame,
The one my duetie owes, but my faire name
Despight of death, that liues vpon my grauc
To darke dishonours vse, thou shalt not haue
I am disgrac'd, impeach'd, and baffel'd heere,
Pierc'd to the soule with slanders venom'd speare.
The which no balme can cure, but his heart blood
Which breath'd this poyson.

King. Rage must be withstood:
Giue me his gage: Lyons make Leopards tame.

Mo. Yea, but not change his spots: take but my shame,
And I resigne my gage. My deere, deere Lord,
The purest treasure mortall times afford
Is spotlesse reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loome, or painted clay.
A Iewell in a ten times barr'd vp Chest,
Is a bold spirit, in a loyall breft.
Mine Honor is my life; both grow in one:
Take Honor from me, and my life is done.
Then (deere my Liege) mine Honor let me trie,
In that I liue; and for that will I die.

King. Coosin, throw downe your gage,
Do you begin.

Bol. Oh heauen defend my soule from such foule sin,
Shall I seeme Crest-falne in my fathers sight,
Or with pale beggar-feare impeach my high
Before this out-dar'd dastard? Ere my tooung,
Shall wound mine honor with such feeble wrongs
Or sound so base a parle: my teeth shall teare
The slauish motiue of recanting feare,
And spit it bleeding in his high disgrace,
Where shame doth harbour, euen in Mowbrays face.

Exit Gaunt.

King. We were not borne to sue, but to commaud,
Which since we cannot do to make you friends,
Be readie, (as your liues shall answer it)
At Couentree, vpon S. Lamberts day:
There shall your swords and Lances arbitrate
The swelling difference of your settled hate:
Since we cannot attone you, you shall see
Iustice designe the Victors Chiualrie.
Lord Marshall, command our Officers at Armes,
Be readie to direct these home Alarmes. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Gaunt, and Duchesse of Glouncst.

Gaunt. Alas, the part I had in Glousters blood,
Doth more solicite me then your exclaimes,
To stirre against the Butchers of his life.

But since correction lyeth in those hands
Which made the fault that we cannot correct,
Put we our quarrell to the will of heauen,
Who when they see the houres ripe on earth,
Will raigne hot vengeance on offenders heads.
Dur. Findes brotherhood in thee no sharper spurre?
Hath loue in thy old blood no liuing fire?
Edwards seuen sonnes (whereof thy selfe art one)
Were as seuen violles of his Sacred blood,
Or seuen faire branches springing from one roote:
Some of those seuen are dride by natures course,
Some of those branches by the destinies cut:
But Thomas, my deere Lord, my life, my Gloufter,
One Viall full of Edwards Sacred blood,
One flourishing branch of his most Royall roote
Is crack'd, and all the precious liquor spilt;
Is hackt downe, and his summer leaues all vaded
By Enuies hand, and Murders bloody Axe.
Ah Gaunt! His blood was thine, that bed, that wombe,
That mettle, that selfe-mould that fashion'd thee,
Made him a man; and though thou liu'st, and breath'st,
Yet art thou slaine in him: thou dost consent
In some large measure to thy Fathers death,
In that thou seest thy wretched brother dye,
Who was the modell of thy Fathers life.
Call it not patience (Gaunt) it is dispaire,
In suffering thus thy brother to be slaughter'd,
Thou shew'st the naked pathway to thy life,
Teaching sterne murther how to butcher thee:
That which in meane men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breast:
What shall I say, to safegard thine owne life,
The best way is to venge my Gloufters death.
Gaunt. Heauens is the quarrell: for heauens substitute
His Deputy anointed in his sighe,
Hath caus'd his death, the which if wrongfully
Let heauen reuenge: for I may never lift
An angry arme against his Minister.
Dur. Where then (alas may I) complaint my selfe?
Gau. To heauen, the widdowes Champion to defence
Dur. Why then I will: farewell old Gaunt.
Thou go'st to Couentrie, there to behold
Our Cosine Herford, and fell Mowbray fight:
O sit my husbands wrongs on Herfords speare,
That it may enter butcher Mowbrayes breast:
Or if misfortune misse the first carreere,
Be Mowbrayes sinnes so heauy in his bosome,
That they may breake his foaming Coursers backe,
And throw the Rider headlong in the Lists,
A Coytiffe recreant to my Cosine Herford:
Farewell old Gaunt, thy sometimes brothers wife
With her companion Greefe, must end her life.
Gau. Sister farewell: I must to Couentree,
As much good stay with thee, as go with mee.
Dur. Yet one word more: Greefe boundeth where it falls,
Not with the empty hollowes, but weight:
I take my leaue, before I haue begun,
For sorrow ends not, when it seemeth done.
Commend me to my brother Edmund Yorke.
Loe, this is all: nay, yet depart not so,
Though this be all, do not so quickly go,
I shall remember more. Bid him, Oh, what?
With all good speed at Plesshie visit mee.
Alacke, and what shall good old Yorke there see
But empty lodgings, and vnfurnish'd walles,
Vn-peopel'd Offices, vntroden stones?
And what heare there for welcome, but my groanes?
Therefore commend me, let him not come there,
To seeke out sorrow, that dwels every where:
Desolate, desolate will I hence, and dye,
The last leaue of thee, takes my weeping eye. Exeunt

Scena Tertia.

Enter Marshall, and Aumerle.

Mar. My L. Aumerle, is Harry Herford arm'd.
Aum. Yea, at all points, and longs to enter in.
Mar. The Duke of Norfolke, sprightfully and bold,
Stayes but the summons of the Appealants Trumpet.
Au. Why then the Champions, are prepar'd, and stay
For coming but his Maiesties approach. Flourish.

Enter King, Gaunt, Bushy, Bagot, Greene, & others: Then Mowbray in Armour, and Herrold.

Rich. Marshall, demand of yonder Champion
The cause of his arriuall heere in Armes,
Aske him his name, and orderly proceed
To sweare him in the iustice of his cause.
Mar. In Gods name, and the Kings, say who art,
And why thou com'st thus knightly clad in Armes?
Against what man thou com'st, and what's thy quarrell,
Speake truly on thy knighthood, and thine oath,
As so defend thee heauen, and thy valour.
Mow. My name is Tho. Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk,
Who hither comes engaged by my oath
(Which heauen defend a knight should violate)
Both to defend my loyalty and truth,
To God, my King, and his succeeding issue,
Against the Duke of Herford, that appeales me:
And by the grace of God, and this mine arme,
To proue him (in defending of my selfe)
A Traitor to my God, my King, and me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.
Trucket. Enter Herford, and Herold.
Rich. Marshall: Aske yonder Knight in Armes,
Both who he is, and why he commeth hither,
Thus placed in habiliments of warre:
And formerly according to our Law
Depose him in the iustice of his cause.
Mar. What is thy name? and wherefore comst thy hither
Before King Richard in his Royall Lists?
Against whom com'st thou? and what's thy quarrell?
Speake like a true Knight, so defend thee heauen.
Bol. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derbie,
Am I: who ready heere do stand in Armes,
To proue by heauens grace, and my bodies valour,
In Lists, on Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolke,
That he's a Traitor foule, and dangerous,
To God of heauen, King Richard, and to me,
And as I truly fight, defend me heauen.
Mar. On paine of death, no person be so bold,
Or daring hardie as to touch the Lists,
Except the Marshall, and such Officers
Appointed to direct these faire designes.
Bol. Lord Marshall, let me kisse my Soueraigns hand,
And bow my knee before his Maiestie:
For Mowbray and my selfe are like two men,
That vow a long and weary pilgrimage.

Then let vs take a ceremonious leaue
And louing farwell of our generall friends.
Mar. The Appellant in all duty greets your Highnes,
And craues to kisse your hand, and take his leaue.
Rich. We will descend, and fold him in our armes.
Cosin of Herford, as thy cause is iust,
So be thy fortune in this Royall fight:
Farewell, my blood, which if to day thou shead,
Lamente we may, but not reuenge thee dead.
Bol. Oh let no noble eye prophane a teare
For me, if I be gor'd with Mowbrayes speare:
As confident, as is the Falcons flight
Against a bird, do I with Mowbray fight.
My louing Lord, I take my leaue of you,
Of you (my Noble Cosin) Lord Aumerle,
Not sicke, although I haue to do with death,
But lusti, yong, and cheerely drawing breath.
Loe, as at English Feasts, so I regreete
The daintiest last, to make the end most sweet.
Oh thou the earthy author of my blood,
Whose youthfull spirit in me regenerate,
Doth with a two-fold rigor lift mee vp
To reach at victory aboue my head,
Adde proofe vnto mine Armour with thy prayres,
And with thy blessings steele my Lances point,
That it may enter Mowbrayes waxen Coate,
And finish new the name of Iohn a Gaunt,
Euen in the lusty hauiour of his sonne.
Gaunt. Heauen in thy good cause make thee prosp'rous
Be swift like lightning in the execution,
And let thy blowes doubly redoubled,
Fall like amazing thunder on the Casko
Of thy amaz'd pernicious enemy.
Rouse vp thy youthfull blood, be valiant, and liue.
Bol. Mine innocence, and S. George to thriue.
Mow. How euer heauen or fortune cast my lot,
There liues, or dies, true to Kings Richards Throne,
A loyall, iust, and vpright Gentleman:
Never did Captiue with a freer heart,
Cast off his chaines of bondage, and embrace
His golden vncontroul'd enfranchisement,
More then my dancing soule doth celebrate
This Feast of Battell, with mine Aduersarie.
Most mighty Liege, and my companion Peeres,
Take from my mouth, the wish of happy yeares,
As gentle, and as iocond, as to iest,
Go I to fight: Truth, hath a quiet brest.
Rich. Farewell, my Lord, securely I espy
Vertue with Valour, couched in thine eye:
Order the triall Marshall, and begin.
Mar. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
Receiue thy Lance, and heauen defend thy right.
Bol. Strong as a towre in hope, I cry Amen.
Mar. Go bere this Lance to Thomas D. of Norfolke.
1. Her. Harry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derbie,
Stands heere for God, his Soueraigne, and himselfe,
On paine to be found false, and recreant,
To prooue the Duke of Norfolke, Thomas Mowbray,
A Traitor to his God, his King, and him,
And dares him to set forwards to the fight.
2. Her. Here standeth Thomas Mowbray Duke of Norfolk
On paine to be found false and recreant,
Both to defend himselfe, and to approue
Henry of Herford, Lancaster, and Derby,
To God, his Soueraigne, and to him disloyall:
Courageously, and with a free desire
Attending but the signall to begin. A charge sounded.
Mar. Sound Trumpets, and set forward Combatants
Stay, the King hath throwne his Warder downe.
Rich. Let them lay by their Helmets & their Speares:
And both returne backe to their Chaires againe:
Withdraw with vs, and let the Trumpets sound,
While we returne these Dukes what we decree.
A long Flourish.
Draw neere and list
What with our Councell we haue done.
For that our kingdomes earth should not be soyld
With that deere blood which it hath fostered,
And for our eyes do hate the dire aspect
Of ciuill wounds plough'd vp with neighbors swords,
Which so rouz'd vp with boystrous vntun'd drummes,
With harsh resounding Trumpets dreadfull bray,
And grating shocke of wrathfull iron Armes,
Might from our quiet Confines fright faire peace,
And make vs wade euen in our kindreds blood:
Therefore, we banish you our Territories.
You Cosin Herford, vpon paine of death,
Till twice five Summers haue enrich'd our fields,
Shall not regreet our faire dominions,
But treade the stranger pathes of banishment.
Bol. Your will be done: This must my comfort be,
That Sun that warmes you heere, shall shine on me:
And those his golden beames to you heere lent,
Shall point on me, and gild my banishment.
Rich. Norfolke: for thee remaines a heauier doome,
Which I wish some vnwillingnesse pronounce.
The fiye slow houres shall not determinate
The dateless limit of thy deere exile:
The hopeless word, of Neuer to returne,
Breath I against thee, vpon paine of life.
Mow. A heauy sentence, my most Soueraigne Liege,
And all vnlook'd for from your Highnesse mouth:
A deerer merit, not so deepe a maime,
As to be cast forth in the common ayre
Haue I deserued at your Highnesse hands.
The Language I haue learn'd these forty yeares
(My native English) now I must forgo,
And now my tongues vse is to me no more,
Then an vnstringed Vyall, or a Harpe,
Or like a cunning Instrument cas'd vp,
Or being open, put into his hands
That knowes no touch to tune the harmony.
Within my mouth you haue engaol'd my tongue,
Doubly portcullist with my teeth and lippes,
And dull, vnfeeling, barren ignorance,
Is made my Gaoler to attend on me:
I am too old to fawne vpon a Nurse,
Too farre in yeeres to be a pupill now:
What is thy sentence then, but speechlesse death,
Which robbeth my tongue from breathing natiue breath?
Rich. It boots thee not to be compassionate,
After our sentence, plaining comes too late.
Mow. Then thus I turne me from my countries ligh
To dwell in solemne shades of endlesse night.
Ric. Returne again, and take an oath with thee,
Lay on our Royall sword, your banisht hands;
Sweare by the duty that you owe to heauen
(Our part therein we banish with your selues)
To keepe the Oath that we administer:
You nuer shall (so helpe you Truth, and Heauen)
Embrace each others loue in banishment,
Nor euer looke vpon each others face,

Nor

Nor ever write, regreete, or reconcile
This lowring tempest of your home-bred hate,
Nor ever by advised purpose meete,
To plot, contrive, or complot any ill,
Gainst Vs, our State, our Subiects, or our Land.

Bul. I sweare.

Mow. And I, to keepe all this.

Bul. Norfolke, so fare, as to mine enemie,
By this time (had the King permitted vs)
One of our soules had wandred in the aye,
Banish'd this frasle sepulchre of our flesh,
As now our flesh is banish'd from this Land.
Confesse thy Treasons, ere thou flye this Realme,
Since thou hast faire to go, beare not along
The clogging burthen of a guilty soule.

Mow. No Bullingbroke: If ever I were Traitor,
My name be blotted from the booke of Life,
And I from heauen banish'd, as from hence:
But what thou art, heauen, thou, and I do know,
And all too soone (I feare) the King shall rue
Farewell (my Liege) now no way can I stray,
Saue backe to England, all the worlds my way. Exit.

Rich. Vncle, even in the glasses of thine eyes
I see thy greeued heart: thy sad aspect,
Hath from the number of his banish'd yeares
Pluck'd foure away: Six frozen Winters spent,
Returne with welcome home, from banishment.

Bul. How long a time lyes in one little word:
Foure lagging Winters, and foure wanton springs
End in a word, such is the breath of Kings.

Gaunt. I thanke my Liege, that in regard of me
He shortens foure yeares of my sonnes exile:
But little vantage shall I reape thereby.
For me the foure yeares that he hath to spend
Can change their Moones, and bring their times about,
My oyle-dride Lampe, and time-bewasted light
Shall be extinct with age, and endlesse night:
My inch of Taper, will be burnt, and done,
And blindfold death, not let me see my sonne.

Rich. Why Vncle, thou hast many yeeres to liue.

Gaunt. But not a minute (King) that thou canst giue;
Shorten my dayes thou canst with sudden sorow,
And plucke nights from me, but not lend a morrow:
Thou canst helpe time to furrow me with age,
But stop no wrinkle in his pilgrimage:
Thy word is currant with him, for my death,
But dead, thy kingdome cannot buy my breath.

Rich. Thy sonne is banish'd vpon good aduice,
Whereto thy tongue a party-verdict gaue,
Why at our Iustice seem'st thou then to lowre?

Gaunt. Things sweet to taste, proue in digestion sowre:
You reg'd me as a Iudge, but I had rather you would haue bid me argue like a Father.
Alas, I look'd when some of you should say,
I was too strict to make mine owne away:
But you gaue leaue to my vnwilling tong,
Against my will, to do my selfe this wrong.

Rich. Cosine farewell: and Vncle bid him so:
Six yeares we banish him, and he shall go. Exit.

Flourish.

Au. Cosine farewell: what presence must not know
From where you do remaine, let paper show.

Mar. My Lord, no leaue take I, for I will ride
As farre as land will let me, by your side.

Gaunt. Oh to what purpose dost thou hord thy words,
That thou returnest no greeting to thy friends?

Bul. I haue too few to take my leaue of you
When the tongues office should be prodigall,
To breath th'abundant dolour of the heart.

Gau. Thy greefe is but thy absence for a time.

Bul. Ioy absent, greefe is present for that time.

Gau. What is fixe Winters, they are quickly gone?

Bul. To men in ioy, but greefe makes one houre ten.

Gau. Call it a trauell that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Bul. My heart will sigh, when I miscall it so,
Which finders it an inforced Pilgrimage.

Gau. The sullen passage of thy weary steppes
Esteeme a foyle, wherein thou art to set
The precious Iewell of thy home-returne.

Bul. Oh who can hold a fire in his hand
By thinking on the frostie Caucasus?
Or cloy the hungry edge of appetite,
by bare imagination of a Feast?
Or Wallow naked in December snow
by thinking on fantasticke summers heate?
Oh no, the apprehension of the good
Gives but the greater feeling to the worse:
Fell sorrowes tooth, doth ever rankle more
Then when it bites, but lanceth not the sore.

Gau. Come, come (my son) Ile bring thee on thy way
Had I thy youth, and cause, I would not stay.

Bul. Then Englands ground farewell: sweet soil adieu,
My Mother, and my Nurse, which beares me yet:
Where ere I wander, boast of this I can,
Though banish'd, yet a true-borne Englishman.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter King, Aumerle, Greene, and Bagot.

Rich. We did obserue. Cosine Aumerle,
How far brought you high Hereford on his way?

Aum. I brought high Herford (if you call him so) but to the next high way, and there I left him.

Rich. And say, what store of parting teares were shed:

Aum. Faith none for me: except the Northeast wind
Which then grew bitterly against our face,
Awak'd the sleepie rheume, and so by chance
Did grace our hollow parting with a teare.

Rich. What said our Cosin when you parted with him?

Au. Farewell: and for my hart disdained ye my tongue
Should so prophane the word, that taught me craft
To counterfeit oppression of such greefe,
That word seem'd buried in my sorrowes grave.
Marry, would the word Farewell, haue lengthen'd hours,
And added yeeres to his short banishment,
He should haue had a volume of Farewels,
but faice it would not, he had none of me.

Rich. He is our Cosin (Cosin) but 'tis doubt,
When time shall call him home from banishment,
Whether our kinsman come to see his friends.
Our selfe, and Bushy: beere Bagot and Greene
Observ'd his Courtship to the common people:
How he did seeme to dine into their hearts,
With humble, and familiar courtesie,
What reuerence he did throw away on slaues;
Wooing poore Craftsf-men, with the craft of soules,
And patient vnder-bearing of his Fortune,
As 'twere to banish their effects with him.
Off goes his bonnet to an Oyster-wench,

A brace of Dray-men bid God speed him well,
And had the tribute of his supple knee,
With thankes my Countrymen, my louing friends,
As were our England in reuersion his,
And he our subiects next degree in hope.

Gr. Well, he is gone, & with him go these thoughts:
Now for the Rebels, which stand out in Ireland,
Expedient manage must be made my Liege
Ere further leysure, yeeld them further meanes
For their aduantage, and your Highnesse losse.

Ric. We will our selfe in person to this warre,
And for our Coffers, with too great a Court,
And liberall Largesse, are growne somewhat light,
We are inforc'd to farme our royall Realme,
The Reuenew whereof shall furnish vs
For our affayres in hand: if that come short
Our Substitutes at home shall haue Blanke-charters:
Whereto, when they shall know what men are rich,
They shall subscribe them for large summes of Gold,
And send them after to supply our wants
For we will make for Ireland presently.

Enter Bushy.

Bushy, what newes?

Bu. Old Iohn of Gaunt is verie sicke my Lord,
Sodainly taken, and hath sent post haste
To entreat your Maiesty to visit him.

Ric. Where lyes he?

Bu. At Ely house.

Ric. Now put it (heauen) in his Physitions minde,
To helpe him to his graue immediately:
The lining of his coffers shall make Coates
To decke our souldiers for these Irish warres.
Come Gentlemen, let's all go visit him:
Pray heauen we may make haste, and come too late. Exeu.

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter Gaunt, sicke with Yorke.

Gau. Will the King come, that I may breath my last
In wholsome counsell to his vnstaid youth?

Yor. Vex not your selfe, nor striue not with your breath,
For all in vaine comes counsell to his eare

Gau. Oh but (they say) the tongues of dying men
Inforce attention like deepe harmony;
Where words are scarce, they are seldome spent in vaine,
For they breath truth, that breath their words in paine.
He that no more must say, is listen'd more,
Then they whom youth and ease haue taught to glose,
More are mens ends markt, then their liues before,
The setting Sun, and Musicke is the close
As the last taste of sweetes, is sweetest last.
Writ in remembrance, more then things long past;
Though Richard my liues counsell would not heare,
My death's sad tale, may yet vndeafe his eare.

Yor. No, it is stopt with other flatt'ring sounds
As praises of his state: then there are sound
Lascriuous Meeters, to whose venom sound
The open eare of youth doth alwayes listen.
Report of fashions in proud Italy,
Whose manners still our tardie apish Nation
Limpes after in base imitation.
Where doth the world thrust forth a vanity,
So it be new, there's no respect how vile,
That is not quickly buz'd into his eares?
That all too late comes counsell to be heard,
Where will doth mutiny with wits regard:
Direct not him, whose way himselfe will choose,
Tis breath thou lackst, and that breath wilt thou loose

Gaunt. Me thinkes I am a Prophet new inspir'
And thus expiring, do foretell of him,
His rash fierce blaze of Ryot cannot last,
For violent fires soone burne out themselues,
Small showres last long, but sodaine stormes are short.
He tyres betimes, that spurs too fast betimes;
With eager feeding, food doth choake the feeder:
Light vanity, insatiate cormorant,
Consuming meanes soone preyes vpon it selfe.
This royall Throne of Kings, this sceptred Isle,
This earth of Maiesty, this seate of Mars,
This other Eden, demy paradise,
This Fortresse built by Nature for her selfe,
Against infection, and the hand of warre:
This happy breed of men, this little world,
This precious stone, set in the siluer sea,
Which serues it in the office of a wall,
Or as a Moate defensiue to a house,
Against the enuy of less happier Lands,
This blessed plot, this earth, this Realme, this England,
This Nurse, this teeming wombe of Royall Kings,
Fear'd by their breed, and famous for their birth,
Renowned for their deeds, as farre from home,
For Christian seruice, and true Chiualrie,
As is the sepulcher in stubborne Iury
Of the Worlds ransome, blessed Marie's Sonne.
This Land of such deere soules, this deere-deare Land,
Deere for her reputation through the world,
Is now Leas'd out (I dye pronouncing it)
Like to a Tenement or pelting Farme.
England bound in with the triumphant sea,
Whose rocky shore beates backe the enuious siedge
Of watery Neptune, is now bound in with shame,
With Inky blottes, and rotten Parchment bonds.
That England, that was wont to conquer others,
Hath made a shamefull conquest of it selfe.
Ah! would the scandall vanish with my life,
How happy then were my enseuing death?

Enter King, Queene, Aumerle, Bushy, Greene, Bagot, Ros, and Willoughby.

Yor The King is come, deale mildly with his youth,
For young hot Colts, being rag'd do rage the more.

Qu. How fares our noble Vncle Lancaster?

Ri. What comfort man? How is't with aged Gaunt?

Ga. Oh how that name befits my composition:
Old Gaunt indeed, and gaunt in being old:
Within me greefe hath kept a tedious fast,
And who abstaynes from meate, that is not gaunt?
For sleeping England long time haue I watcht,
Watching breeds leanenesse, leanenesse is all gaunt.
The pleasure that some Fathers feede vpon,
Is my strict fast, I meane my Childrens lookes,
And therein fasting, hast thou made me gaunt:
Gaunt am I for the graue, gaunt as a graue,
Whose hollow wombe inherits naught but bones.

Ric. Can sicke men play so nicely with their names?

Gau. No, misery makes sport to mocke it selfe:
Since thou dost seeke to kill my name in mee,

I mocke my name (great King) to flatter thee

Ric. Should dying men flatter those that liue?

Gau. No, no, men living flatter those that dye.

Rich. Thou now a dying, sayst thou flatter'st me.

Gau Oh no, thou dyest, though I the sicker be.

Rich. I am in health, I breath, I see thee ill.

Gau. Now he that made me, knowes I see thee ill:
Ill in my selfe to see, and in thee, seeing ill,
Thy death-bed is no lesser then the Land,
Wherein thou lyest in reputation sicke,
And thou too care-lesse patient as thou art,
Commit'st thy'anointed body to the cure
Of those Physitians, that first wounded thee:
A thousand flatterers sit within thy Crowne,
Whose compasse is no bigger then thy head,
And yet incaged in so small a Verge,
The waste is no whit lesser then thy Land:,
Oh had thy Grandsire with a Prophets eye,
Seene how his sonnes sonne, should destroy his sonnes,
From forth thy reach he would haue laid thy shame,
Deposing thee before thou wert possest,
Which art possest now to depose thy selfe.
Why (Cosine) were thou Regent of the world,
It were a shame to let his Land by lease:
But for thy world enioying but this Land,
Is it not more then shame, to shame it so?
Landlord of England art thou, and not King:
Thy state of Law, is bondslaue to the law,
And———

Rich. And thou, a lunaticke lean-witted fooles,
Presuming on an Agues priuiledge,
Darr'st with thy frozen admonition
Make pale our cheeke, chasing the Royall blood
With fury, from his native residence?
Now by my Seates right Royall Maiestie,
Wer't thou not Brother to great Edwards sonne,
This tongue that runs so roundly in thy head,
Should run thy head from thy vnreuerent shoulders.

Gau. Oh spare me not, my brothers Edwards sonne,
For that I was his Father Edwards sonne:
That blood already (like the Pellican)
Thou hast tapt out, and drunkenly carouss'd.
My brother Gloucester, plaine well meaning soule
(Whom faire befall in heauen 'mongst happy soules)
May be a president, and witnesse good,
That thou respect'st not spilling Edwards blood:
Ioyne with the present sicknesse that I haue,
And thy vnkindnesse be like crooked age,
To crop at once a too-long wither'd flowre.
Liue in thy shame, but dye not shame with thee,
These words hereafter, thy tormentors bee.
Conuey me to my bed, then to my grauе,
Loue they to liue, that loue and honor haue. Exit

Rich. And let them dye, that age and sullens haue,
For both hast thou, and both become the grauе.

Yor. I do beseech your Maiestie impute his words
To wayward sicklinesse, and age in him:
He loues you on my life, and holds you deere
As Harry Duke of Herford, were he heere.

Rich. Right, you say true: as Herfords loue, so his;
As theirs, so mine: and all be as it is.

Enter Northumberland.

Nor My Liege, olde Gaunt commends him to your Maiestie.

Rich. What says he?

Nor. Nay nothing, all is said:
His tongue is now a stringlesse instrument,
Words, life, and all, old Lancaster hath spent.

Yor. Be Yorke the next, that must be bankrupt so,
Though death be poore, it ends a mortall wo.

Rich. The ripest fruit first falls, and so doth he,
His time is spent, our pilgrimage must be:
So much for that. Now for our Irish warres,
We must supplant those rough rug-headed Kerues,
Which liue like venom, where no venom else
But onely they, haue priuiledge to liue.
And for these great affayres do aske some charge
Towards our assistance, we do seize to vs
The plate, coine, reuennewes, and moueables,
Whereof our Vncle Gaunt did stand possest.

Yor. How long shall I be patient? Oh how long
Shall tender duties make me suffer wrong?
Not Glosters death, not Herfords banishment,
Not Gaunts rebukes, nor Englands priuate wrongs,
Nor the prouocation of poore Bullingbrooke,
About his marriage, nor my owne disgrace
Haue ever made me sowre my patient cheeke,
Or bend one wrinckle on my Soueraignes face:
I am the last of noble Edwards sonnes,
Of whom thy Father Prince of Wales was first,
In warre was never Lyon rag'd more fierce:
In peace, was never gentle Lambe more milde,
Then was that young and Princely Gentleman,
His face thou hast, for even so look'd he
Accomplish'd with the number of thy howres:
But when he frown'd, it was against the French,
And not against his friends: his noble hand
Did win what he did spend: and spent not that
Which his triumphant fathers hand had won:
His hands were guilty of no kindreds blood,
But bloody with the enemies of his kinne:
Oh Richard, Yorke is too farre gone with greefe,
Or else he never would compare betweene.

Rich. Why Vncle,
What's the matter?

Yor. Oh my Liege, pardon me if you please, if not
I pleas'd not to be pardon'd, am content with all:
Seeke you to seize, and gripe into your hands
The Royalties and Rights of banish'd Herford?
Is not Gaunt dead? and doth not Herford liue?
Was not Gaunt iust? and is not Harry true?
Did not the one deserue to haue an heyre?
Is not his heyre a well-deserving sonne?
Take Herfords rights away, and take from time
His Charters, and his customarie rights:
Let not to morrow then infoe to day,
Be not thy selfe. For how art thou a King
But by faire sequence and succession?
Now afore God, God forbid I say true,
If you do wrongfully seize Herfords right,
Call in his Letters Patents that he hath
By his Attorneyes generall, to sue
His Liuerie, and denie his offer'd homage,
You pluck a thousand dangers on your head,
You loose a thousand well-disposed hearts,
And pricke my tender patience to those thoughts
Which honor and allegiance cannot thinke.

Ric. Thinke what you will: we seize into our hands,
His plate, his goods, his money, and his lands.

Yor. Ile not be by the while: My Liege farewell.

What will ensue hereof, there's none can tell.
But by bad courses may be understood,
That their events can never fall out good. Exit.

Rich. Go Bushie to the Earle of Wiltshire straight,
Bid him repaire to vs to Ely house,
To see this businesse: to morrow next
We will for Ireland, and 'tis time, I trow:
And we create in absence of our selfe
Our Vncle Yorke, Lord Gouernor of England:
For he is iust, and alwayes lou'd vs well
Come on our Queene, to morrow must we part,
Be merry, for our time of stay is short. Flourish.

Manet North. Willoughby, & Ross

Nor Well Lords, the Duke of Lancaster is dead.

Ross. And living too, for now his sonne is Duke.

Wil. Barely in title, not in reuennew.

Nor. Richly in both, if iustice had her right.

Ross. My heart is great: but it must break with silence,
Ere't be disburthen'd with a liberall tongue.

Nor. Nay speake thy mind. & let him ne'r speak more
That speakes thy words againe to do thee harme.

Wil. Tends that thou dst speake to th'Du. of Hereford,
If it be so, out with it boldly man,
Quicke is mine eare to heare of good towards him.

Ross. No good at all that I can do for him,
Vnlesse you call it good to pitie him,
Bereft and gelded of his patrimonie.

Nor. Now afore heauen, 'tis shame such wrongs are borne,
In him a royall Prince, and many moe
Of noble blood in this declining Land;
The King is not himselfe, but basely led
By Flatterers, and what they will informe
Merrely in hate 'gainst any of vs all.
That will the King severely prosecute
'Gainst vs, our liues, our children, and our heires.

Ross. The Commons hath he pil'd with grieuous taxes
And quite lost their hearts: the Nobles hath he finde
For ancient quarrels, and quite lost their hearts.

Wil. And daily new exactions are deuis'd,
As blankes, benevolences, and I wot not what:
But what o'Gods name doth become of this?

Nor. Wars hath not wasted it, for war'd he hath not.
But basely yeelded vpon compromize,
That which his Ancestors atchieu'd with blowes:
More hath he spent in peace, then they in warres.

Ross. The Earle of Wiltshire hath the realme in Farme.

Wil. The Kings growne bankrupt like a broken man.

Nor. Reproach, and dissolution hangeth ouer him.

Ross. He hath not monie for these Irish warres:
(His burthenous taxations notwithstanding)
But by the robbing of the banish'd Duke.

Nor. His noble Kinsman, most degenerate King:
But Lords, we heare this fearefull tempest sing,
Yet seeke no shelter to auoid the storme:
We see the winde sit sore vpon our sailes,
And yet we strike not, but securely perish

Ross. We see the very wracke that we must suffer,
And vnauoyded is the danger now
For suffering so the causes of our wracke.

Nor. Not so: euen through the hollow eyes of death,
I spie life peering: but I dare not say
How neere the tidings of our comfort is.

Wil. Nay let vs share thy thoughts, as thou dost ours

Ross. Be confident to speake Northumberland,
We three, are but thy selfe, and speaking so,
Thy words are but as thoughts, therefore be bold.

Nor. Then thus: I haue from Port le Blanc
A Bay in Britaine, receiu'd intelligence,
That Harry Duke of Herford, Rainald Lord Cobham,
That late broke from the Duke of Exeter,
His brother Archbishop, late of Canterbury,
Sir Thomas Erpingham, Sir John Raynston,
Sir John Norberie, Sir Robert Waterton, & Francis Quoyne.
All these well furnish'd by the Duke of Britaine,
With eight tall ships, three thousand men of warre
Are making hither with all due expedience,
And shortly meane to touch our Northerne shore:
Perhaps they had ere this, but that they stay
The first departing of the King for Ireland.
If then we shall shake off our slauish yoake,
Impe out our drooping Countries broken wing,
Redeeme from broaking pawne the blemish'd Crowne,
Wipe off the dust that hides our Scepters gilt,
And make high Maiestie looke like it selfe,
Away with me in poste to Ramenspargh,
But if you faint, as fearing to do so,
Stay, and be secret, and my selfe will go.

Ross. To horse, to horse, vrge doubts no them ⸗ feare

Wil. Hold out my horse, and I will first be there.

Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Enter Queene, Bushy, and Bagot.

Bush. Madam, your Maiesty is too much sad.
You promis'd when you parted with the King,
To lay aside selfe-harming heauinesse,
And entertaine a cheerefull disposition.

Qu. To please me King, I did: to please my selfe
I cannot do it: yet I know no cause
Why I should welcome such a guest as greefe,
Saue bidding farewell to so sweet a guest
As my sweet Richard: yet againe me thinkes,
Some vnborne sorrow, ripe in fortunes woombe
Is comming towards me, and my inward soule
With nothing trembles, at something it greeues,
More then with parting from my Lord the King.

Bush. Each substance of a greefe hath twenty shadows
Which shewes like greefe it selfe, but is not so:
For sorrowes eye, glazed with blinding teares,
Diuides one thing entire, to many obiects,
Like perspectiues, which rightly gaz'd vpon
Shew nothing but confusion, ey'd awry,
Distinguish forme: so your sweet Maiestie
Looking awry vpon your Lords departure,
Finde shapes of greefe, more then himselfe to waile,
Which look'd on as it is, is naught but shadowes
Of what it is not: then thrice-gracious Queene,
More then your Lords departure weep not, more's not
Or if it be, 'tis with false sorrowes eie, (seene
Which for things true, weepe things imaginary.

Qu. It may be so: but yet my inward soule
Perswades me it is otherwise: how ere it be,
I cannot but be sad; so heauy sad,
As though on thinking on no thought I thinke,
Makes me with heauy nothing faint and shrinke.

Bush. 'Tis nothing but conceit (my gracious Lady.)

Queene

Qu. Tis nothing lesse: conceite is still deriu'd
From some forefather greefe, mine is not so,
For nothing hath begot my something greefe,
Or something, hath the nothing that I greeue,
'Tis in reuersion that I do possesse,
But what it is, that is not yet known, what
I cannot name, 'tis nameless woe I wot.

Enter Greene.

Gre. Heauen saue your Maiesty, and wel met Gentlemen: I hope the King is not yet shipt for Ireland. (men:

Qu. Why hop'st thou so? Tis better hope he is so
For his designes crauе haste, his haste good hope,
Then wherefore dost thou hope he is not shipt?

Gre. That he our hope, might haue retyr'd his power, and driuen into despaire an enemies hope,
Who strongly hath set footing in this Land.
The banish'd Bullingbrooke repeales himselfe,
And with vp-lifted Armes is safe arriu'd
At Rauenspurg.

Qu. Now God in heauen forbid.

Gr. O Madam 'tis too true: and that is worse,
The L. Northumberland, his yong sonne Henrie Percie,
The Lords of Ross, Beaumond, and Willoughby,
With all their powerfull friends are fled to him.

Bush. Why haue you not proclaim'd Northumberland
And the rest of the reuolted faction, Traitors?

Gre. We haue: whereupon the Earle of Worcester
Hath broke his staffe, resign'd his Stewardship,
And al the houshold seruants fled with him to Bullinbrook.

Qu. So Greene, thou art the midwife of my woe,
And Bullinbrooke my sorrowes dismall heyre:
Now hath my soule brought forth her prodigie,
And I a gasping new deliuered mother,
Haue woe to woe, sorrow to sorrow ioyn'd.

Bush. Dispaire not Madam.

Qu. Who shall hinder me?
I will dispaire, and be at enmitie
With couzening hope; he is a Flatterer,
A Parasite, a keeper backe of death,
Who gently would dissolue the bands of life,
Which false hopes linger in extremity.

Enter Yorke

Gre. Heere comes the Duke of Yorke.

Qu. With signes of warre about his aged necke,
Oh full of carefull businesse are his looke:
Vncle, for heauens sake speake comfortable words:

Yor. Comfort's in heauen, and we are on the earth,
Where nothing liues but crosses, care and greefe:
Your husband he is gone to saue farre off,
Whilst others come to make him loose at home:
Heere am I left to vnder-prop his Land,
Who weake with age, cannot support my selfe.
Now comes the sicke houre that his surfet made,
Now shall he try his friends that flattered him.

Enter a seruant.

Ser. My Lord, your sonne was gone before I came.

Yor. He was: why so: go all which way it will:
The Nobles they are fled, the Commons they are cold,
And will I feare reuolt on Herfords side.
Sirra, get thee to Plashie to my sister Gloster,
Bid her send me presently a thousand pound,
Hold, take my Ring

Ser. My Lord, I had forgot
To tell your Lordship, to day I came by, and call'd there,
But I shall greeue you to report the rest.

Yor. What is't knaue?

Ser. An houre before I came, the Duchesse di'de.

Yor. Heau'n for his mercy, what a tide of woes
Come rushing on this woefull Land at once?
I know not what to do: I would to heauen
(So my vnctcth had not prouok'd him to it)
The King had cut off my head with my brothers.
What, are there posts dispatcht for Ireland?
How shall we do for money for these warres?
Come sister (Cozen I would say) pray pardon me.
Go fellow, get thee home, prouide some Carts,
And bring away the Armour that is there.
Gentlemen, will you muster men?
If I know how, or which way to order these affaires
Thus disorderly thrust into my hands,
Neuer beleeue me. Both are my kinsmen,
Th'one is my Soueraigne, whom both my oath
And duetie bids defend: th'other againe
Is my kinsman, whom the King hath wrong'd,
Whom conscience, and my kindred bids to right:
Well, somewhat we must do: Come Cozen,
Ile dispose of you. Gentlemen, go muster vp your men,
And meet me presently at Berkley Castle
I should to Plashy too: but time will not permit.
All is vneuen, and every thing is left at six and seuen. Exit

Bush. The winde sits faire for newes to go to Ireland,
But none returnes: For vs to leuy power
Proportionable to th'enemy, is all impossible.

Gr. Besides our neerenesse to the King in loue,
Is neere the hate of those loue not the King.

Ba And that's the wauering Commons, for their loue
Lies in their purses, and who so empties them,
By so much fils their hearts with deadly hate.

Bush. Wherein the king stands generally condemn'd

Bag. If iudgement lye in them, then so do we,
Because we haue beene euer neere the King.

Gr. Well: I will for refuge straight to Bristoll Castle,
The Earle of Wiltshire is already there.

Bush. Thither will I with you, for little office
Will the hatefull Commons performe for vs,
Except like Curres, to tearе vs all in peeces:
Will you go along with vs?

Bag. No, I will to Ireland to his Maiestie:
Farewell, if heart's presages be not vaine,
We three here part, that neu'r shall meete againe.

Bu. That's as Yorke thriues to beate back Bullinbrooke

Gr. Alas poore Duke, the task he vndertakes
Is numbring sands, and drinking Oceans drie,
Where one on his side fights, thousands will flye.

Bush. Farewell at once, for once, for all, and euer.
Well, we may meete againe.

Bag. I feare me neuer. Exit.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter the Duke of Herford, and Northumberland.

Bul. How farre is it my Lord to Berkley now?

Nor. Beleeue me noble Lord,
I am a stranger heere in Gloustershire,
These high wilde hilles, and rough vneuen ways,
Drawes out our miles, and makes them wearisome:
And yet our faire discourse hath beene as sugar,

Mak in

Making the hard way sweet and delectable:
But I bethinke me, what a weatie way
From Rauenspurgh to Cotsshold will be found,
In Rosse and Willoughby, wanting your companie,
Which I protest hath very much beguild
The tediousnesse, and processe of my trauell:
But theirs is sweetned with the hope to haue
The present benefit that I possesse;
And hope to ioy, is little lesse in ioy.
Then hope enioy'd: By this, the weatie Lords
Shall make their way seeme short, as mine hath done,
By sight of what I haue, your Noble Companie.

Bull. Of much lesse value is my Companie,
Then your good words: but who comes here?

Enter H. Percie.

North. It is my Sonne, young Harry Percie,
Sent from my Brother Worcester: Whence sorrow.
Harry, how fares your Vnckle?

Percie. I had thought, my Lord, to haue learn'd his health of you.

North. Why, is he not with the Queene?

Percie. No, my good Lord, he hath forsook the Court,
Broken his Staffe of Office, and dispersd
The Household of the King.

North. What was his reason?
He was not so resolu'd, when we last spake together.

Percie. Because your Lordship was proclaimed Traitor.
But hee, my Lord, is gone to Rauenspurgh,
To offer seruice to the Duke of Hereford,
And sent me ouer by Barkely, to discouer
What power the Duke of Yorke had leuied there,
Then with direction to repaire to Rauenspurgh.

North. Haue you forgot the Duke of Hereford (Boy.)

Percie. No, my good Lord; for that is not forgot
Which ne're I did remember: to my knowledge,
I neuer in my life dd looke on him.

North. Then learne to know him now: this is the Duke.

Percie. My gracious Lord, I tender you my seruice,
Such as it is, being tender, raw, and young,
Which elder dayes shall ripen, and confirme
To more approued seruice, and desert.

Bull. I thanke thee gentle Percie, and be sure
I count my selfe in nothing else so happy,
As in a Soule remembring my good Friends:
And, as my Fortune ripens with thy Loue,
It shall be still thy true Loues recompence,
My Heart this Couenant makes, my Hand thus seales it.

North. How fare is it to Barkely? and what stirre
Keepes good old Yorke there, with his Men of Warre?

Percie. There stands the Castle, by yond tuft of Trees,
Mann'd with three hundred men, as I haue heard,
And in it are the Lords of Yorke, Barkely, and Seymour,
None else of Name, and noble estimate.

Enter Rosse and Willoughby.

North. Here come the Lords of Rosse and Willoughby,
Bloody with spurring, fierie red with haste.

Bull. Welcome my Lords, I wot your loue pursues
A banisht Traytor; all my Treasurie
Is yet but vnfelt thankes, which more enrich'd,
Shall be your loue, and labours recompence.

Ross. Your presence makes vs rich, most Noble Lord.

Wills. And sure sermounts our labour to attaine it.

Bull. Euermore thankes, th'Exchequer of the poore,
Which till my infant fortune comes to yeeres,
Stands for my Bountie: but who comes here?

Enter Barkely.

North. It is my Lord of Barkely, as I ghesse.

Bark. My Lord of Hereford, my Message is to you.

Bull. My Lord, my Answere is to Lancaster,
And I am come to seeke that Name in England,
And I must finde that Title in your Tongue,
Before I make reply to aught you say.

Bark. Mistake me not, my Lord, 'tis not my meaning
To raze one Title of your Honor out.
To you, my Lord, I come (what Lord you will)
From the most glorious of this Land,
The Duke of Yorke, to know what pricks you on
To take aduantage of the absent time,
And fright our Natiue Peace with selfe-borne Armes.

Enter Yorke.

Bull. I shall not need transport my words by you,
Here comes his Grace in Person My Noble Vnckle.

York. Shew me thy humble heart, and not thy knee,
Whose duty is deceiuable, and false.

Bull. My gracious Vnckle.

York. Tut, tut Grace me no Grace, nor Vnckle me,
I am no Traytors Vnckle; and that word Grace,
In an vngracious mouth, is but prophane.
Why haue these banish'd, and forbidden Leggers,
Dar'd once to touch a Dust of Englands Ground?
But more then why, why haue they dar'd to march
So many miles vpon her peacefull Bosome,
Frighting her pale-fac'd Villages with Warre,
And ostentation of despised Armes?
Com'st thou because th'anointed King is hence?
Why foolish Boy, the King is left behind,
And in my loyall Bosome lyes his power.
Were I but now the Lord of such hot youth,
As when brauе Gaunt, thy Father, and my selfe
Rescued the Black Prince, that yong Mars of men,
From forth the Rankes of many thousand French:
Oh then, how quickly should this Arme of mine,
Now Prisoner to the Palsie, chastise thee,
And minister correction to thy Fault.

Bull. My gracious Vnckle, let me know my Fault,
On what Condition stands it, and wherein?

York. Euen in Condition of the worst degree,
In grosse Rebellion, and detested Treason:
Thou art a banish'd man, and here art come
Before th'expiration of thy time,
In breaking Armes against thy Souersigne.

Bull. As I was banish'd, I was banish'd Hereford,
But as I come, I come for Lancaster.
And Noble Vnckle, I beseech you Grace
Looke on my Wrongs with an indifferent eye:
You are my Father, for me thinkes in you
I see old Gaunt aliue. Oh then my Father,
Will you permit, that I shall stand condemn'd
A wandring Vagabond; my Rights and Royalties
Plucks from my armes perforce, and giues away
To vpstart Vnthrifts? Wherefore was I borne?
If that my Cousin King, be King of England,
It must be granted, I am Duke of Lancaster.
You haue a Sonne, Aumerle, my Noble Kinsman,
Had you first died, and he beene thus trod downe,
He should haue found his Vnckle Gaunt a Father,
To rouse his Wrongs, and chase them to the bay.
I am denyde to sue my Liuerie here,
And yet my Letters Patents giue me leaue:
My Fathers goods are all distrayned, and sold,
And these, and all, are all amiss imployd.

What

What would you haue me doe? I am a Subiect,
And challenge Law: Attorneyes are deny'd me;
And therefore personally I lay my claime
To my Inheritance of free Discent.

North. The Noble Duke hath been too much abus'd.

Ross. It stands your Grace vpon, to doe him right.

Wille. Base men by his endowments are made great.

York. My Lords of England, let me tell you this,
I haue had feeling of my Cosens Wrongs,
And labour'd all I could to doe him right:
But in this kind, to come in braving Armes,
Be his owne Caruer, and cut out his way,
To find out Right with Wrongs, it may not be;
And you that doe abett him in this kind,
Cherish Rebellion, and are Rebels all.

North. The Noble Duke hath sworne his comming is
But for his owne; and for the right of that,
Wee all haue strongly sworne to giue him aid,
And let him neu'r see Ioy, that breakes that Oath.

York. Well, well; I see the issue of these Armes,
I cannot mend it, I must needes confesse,
Because my power is weake, and all ill left:
But if I could, by him that gaue me life,
I would attach you all, and make you stoope
Vnto the Soueraigne Mercy of the King.
But since I cannot, be it knowne to you,
I doe remaine as Neuter. So fare you well,
Vnlesse you please to enter in the Castle,
And there repose you for this Night.

Bull. An offer Vncle, that wee will accept:
But wee must winne your Grace to goe with vs
To Bristow Castle, which they say is held
By Bushie, Bagot, and their Complices,
The Caterpillers of the Commonwealth,
Which I haue sworne to weed, and pluckе away.

York. It may be I will go with you: but yet Ile pause,
For I am loth to breake our Countries Lawes:
Nor Friends, nor Foes, to me welcome you are,
Things past redresse, are now with me past care. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Salisbury, and a Captaine.

Capt. My Lord of Salisbury, we haue staya'd ten dayes,
And hardly kept our Countreymen together,
And yet we heare no tidings from the King;
Therefore we will disperse our selues: farewell.

Sal. Stay yet another day, thou trusticke Welchman,
The King reposeth all his confidence in thee.

Capt. 'Tis thought the King is dead, we will not stay;
The Bay-trees in our Countrey all are wither'd,
And Meteors fright the fixed Starres of Heauen;
The pale-fac'd Moone lookes bloody on the Earth,
And lean-look'd Prophets whisper fearefull change;
Rich men looke sad, and Ruffians dance and leape,
The one in feare, to loose what they enioy,
The other to enioy by Rage, and Warre:
These signes fore-run the death of Kings.
Farewell, our Countreymen are gone and fled,
As well assur'd Richard their King is dead. Exit.

Sal. Ah Richard, with eyes of heauie mind,
I see thy Glory, like a shooting Starre,
Fall to the base Earth, from the Firmament:
Thy Sunne sets weeping in the lowly West,
Witnessing Stormes to come, Woe, and Vnrest:
Thy Friends are fled, to wait vpon thy Foes,
And crossely to thy good, all fortune goes. Exit.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Yorke, Northumberland, Ross, Percie, Willoughby, with Bushie and Greene Prisoners.

Bull. Bring forth these men:
Bushie and Greene, I will not vex your soules,
(Since presently your soules must part your bodies)
With too much vrging your pernitious liues,
For 'twere no Charitie: yet to wash your blood
From off my hands, here in the view of men,
I will vnfold some causes of your deaths.
You haue mis-led a Prince, a Royall King,
A happie Gentleman in Blood, and Lineaments,
By you vnhappied, and disfigur'd cleane:
You haue in manner with your sinfull hours
Made a Diuorce betwixt his Queene and him,
Broke the possession of a Royall Bed,
And staya'd the beautie of a faire Queene: Cheekes,
With teares drawn fro her eyes, with your foule wrongs.
My selfe a Prince, by fortune of my birth,
Neere to the King in blood, and neere in loue,
Till you did make him mis-interprete me,
Haue stoopt my neck vnder your iniuries,
And sigh'd my English breath in forraine Clouds,
Eating the bitter bread of banishment;
While you haue fed vpon my Seignories,
Dis-park'd my Parkes, and fell'd my Forrest Woods;
From mine owne Windowes torne my Household Coat,
Raz'd out my Impresse, leaving me no signe,
Saue mens opinions, and my liuing blood,
To shew the World I am a Gentleman.
This, and much more, much more then twice all this,
Condemnes you to the death: see them deliuered over
To execution, and the hand of death.

Bushie. More welcome is the stroake of death to me,
Then Bullingbrooke to England.

Greene. My comfort is, that Heauen will take our soules,
And plague Iniustice with the paines of Hell.

Bull. My Lord Northumberland, see them dispatch'd:
Vncle, you say the Queene is at your House,
For Heauens sake fairely let her be entreated,
Tell her I send to her my kind commends;
Take speciall care my Greetings be deliuer'd.

York. A Gentleman of mine I haue dispatch'd
With Letters of your loue, to her at large.

Bull. Thankes gentle Vncle: come Lords away,
To fight with Glendowr, and his Complices;
A while to worke, and after holliday. Exeunt.

Scena Secunda.

Drums: Flourish, and Colours.

Enter Richard, Aumerle, Carlile, and Souldiers.

Rich. Barkloughly Castle call you this at hand?

Aum. Yes, my Lord: how brooks your Grace the ayre,
After your late tossing on the breaking Seas?

Rich. Needs must I like it well: I weepe for joy
To stand vpon my Kingdome once againe.
Deare Earth, I doe salute thee with my hand,
Though Rebels wound thee with their Horses hoofes:
As a long parted Mother with her Child,
Playes fondly with her teares, and smiles in meeting;
So weeping, smiling, greet I thee my Earth,
And doe thee favor with my Royall hands.
Feed not thy Soueraigne Foe, my gentle Earth,
Nor with thy Sweetes, comfort his ravenous sence:
But let thy Spiders, that suck vp thy Venome,
And heavie-gaited Toades lye in their way,
Doing annoyance to the treacherous feete,
Which with vsurping steps doe trample thee.
Yeeld stinging Nettles to mine Enemies,
And when they from thy Bosome pluck a Flower
Guard it I prethee with a lurking Adder,
Whose double tongue may with a mortall touch
Throw death vpon thy Soueraignes Enemies.
Mock not my senseless Conjuration, Lords;
This Earth shall haue a feeling, and these Stones
Prove armed Souldiers, ere her Native King
Shall falter vnder foule Rebellious Armes.

Car. Feare not my Lord, that Power that made you King
Hath power to keepe you King, in spight of all.

Aum. He means, my Lord, that we are too remisse,
Whileft Bullingbrooke through our securitie,
Growes strong and great, in substance and in friends.

Rich. Discomfortable Cousin, know'st thou not,
That when the searching Eye of Heaven is hid
Behind the Globe, that lights the lower World,
Then Theeues and Robbers range abroad vnseene,
In Murthers and in Out-rage bloody here:
But when from vnder this Terrestriall Ball
He fires the proud tops of the Easterne Pines,
And darts his Lightning through eu'ry guilty hole,
Then Murthers, Treasons, and detested sinnes
(The Cloake of Night being plucke from off their backs)
Stand bare and naked, trembling at themselves.
So when this Theefe, this Traytor Bullingbrooke,
Who all this while hath reuell'd in the Night,
Shall see vs rising in our Throne, the East,
His Treasons will sit blushing in his face,
Not able to endure the sight of Day;
But feare-affrighted, tremble at his sinne.
Not all the Water in the rough rude Sea
Can wash the Balme from an anoynted King;
The breath of worldly men cannot depose
The Deputie elected by the Lord:
For every man that Bullingbrooke hath prest,
To lift shrewd Steele against our Golden Crowne,
Heaven for his Richard hath in heavenly pay
A glorious Angell: then if Angels fight,
Weake men must fall, for Heaven still guards the right.

Enter Salisbury.

Welcome my Lord, how farre off lyes your Power?

Salisb. Nor neere, nor farther off, my gracious Lord,
Then this weake arme; discomfort guides my tongue,
And bids me speake of nothing but despaire:
One day too late, I feare (my Noble Lord)
Hath clouded all thy happie dayes on Earth!
Oh call backe Yesterday, bid Time returne,
And thou shalt haue twelue thousand fighting men:
To day, to day, vnhappie day too late
Ore throwes thy loyes, Friends, Fortune, and thy State;
For all the Welchmen hearing thou wert dead,
Are gone to Bullingbrooke, dispersst, and fled.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, why lookes your Grace so pale?

Rich. But now the blood of twentie thousand men
Did triumph in my face, and they are fled,
And till so much blood thither come againe,
Haue I not reason to looke pale, and dead?
All Soules that will be safe, flye from my side,
For Time hath set a blot vpon my pride.

Aum. Comfort my Liege, remember who you are.

Rich. I had forgot my selfe. Am I not King?
Awake thou sluggard Maiestie, thou sleepest:
Is not the Kings Name fortie thousand Names?
Arme, arme my Name: a poore subiect strikes
At thy great glory. Looke not to the ground,
Ye Fauorites of a King: are wee not high:
High be our thoughts: I know my Vncle Yorke
Hath Power enough to serue our turne.
But who comes here? Enter Scroope.

Scroope. More health and happinesse betide my Liege,
Then can my care-tun'd tongue deliver him.

Rich. Mine eare is open, and my heart prepar'd:
The worst is worldly losse, thou canst vnfold:
Say, Is my Kingdome lost? why 'twas my Care:
And what losse is it to be rid of Care?
Strives Bullingbrooke to be as Great as wee?
Greater he shall not be: If hee serue God,
Wee'l serue him too, and be his Fellow so.
Revolt our Subiects? That we cannot mend,
They breake their Faith to God, as well as vs:
Cry Woe, Destruction, Ruine, Losse, Decay,
The worst is Death, and Death will haue his day.

Scroope. Glad am I, that your Highnesse is so arm'd
To beare the tidings of Calamitie.
Like an vnseasonable stormie day,
Which make the Siluer Riuers drowne their Shores,
As if the World were all dissolu'd to teares:
So high, above his Limits, swells the Rage
Of Bullingbrooke, coueting your fearefull Land
With hard bright Steele, and hearts harder then Steele:
White Beares haue arm'd their thin and hairelesse Scalps
Against thy Maiestie, and Boyes with Women Voyces,
Strive to speake bigge, and clap their female joints
In stiffe vnwieldie Armes: against thy Crowne
Thy very Beadf-men learne to bend their Bowes
Of double fatall Eugh: against thy State
Yea Distaffe-Women manage rusticke Bills:
Against thy Seat both young and old rebell,
And all goes worse then I haue power to tell.

Rich. Too well too well thou tell'st a Tale so ill.
Where is the Earle of Wiltshire? where is Bagot?
What is become of Bushiet where is Greene?

That

That they haue let the dangerous Enemie
Measure our Confines with such peacefull steps?
If we preuaile, their heads shall pay for it.
I warrant they haue made peace with Bullingbrooke.

Scroope. Peace haue they made with him indeede (my Lord.)

Rich. Oh Villaine, Vipers, damn'd without redemption,
Dogges, easily woon to fawne on any man,
Snakes in my heart blood warm'd, that sting my heart,
Three Iudasses, each one thrice worse then Iudas,
Would they make peace? terrible Hell make warre
Vpon their spotted Soules for this Offence.

Scroope. Sweet Loue (I see) changing his propertie,
Turnes to the sowrest, and most deadly hate:
Againe vncurse their Soules; their peace is made
With Heads, and not with Hands: those whom you curse
Haue felt the worst of Deaths destroying hand,
And lye full low, grau'd in the hollow ground.

Aum. Is Bushe, Greene, and the Earle of Wiltshire dead?

Scroope. Yea all of them at Bristow lost their heads.

Aum. Where is the Duke my Father with his Power?

Rich. No matter where; of comfort no man speake:
Let's talke of Graues, of Wormes, and Epitaphs,
Make Dust our Paper, and with Raynie eyes
Write Sorrow on the Bosome of the Earth.
Let's chuse Executors, and talke of Wills:
And yet not so; for what can we bequeath,
Saue our deposed bodies to the ground?
Our Lands, our Liues, and all are Bullingbrookes,
And nothing can we call our owne, but Death,
And that small Modell of the barren Earth,
Which serues as Paste, and Couer to our Bones:
For Heauens sake let vs sit vpon the ground,
And tell sad stories of the death of Kings:
How some haue been depos'd, some slaine in warre,
Some haunted by the Ghosts they haue depos'd,
Some poyson'd by their Wiues, some sleeping kill'd,
All murther'd. For within the hollow Crowne
That rounds the mortall Temples of a King,
Keepes Death his Court, and there the Antique sits
Scoffing his State, and grinning at his Pompe,
Allowing him a breath, a little Scene,
To Monarchize, be feare'd, and kill with lookes,
Infusing him with selfe and vaine conceit,
As if this Flesh, which walls about our Life,
Were Brasse impregnable: and humor'd thus,
Comes at the last, and with a little Pinne
Bores through his Castle Walls, and farwell King.
Couer your heads, and mock not flesh and blood
With solemne Reuerence: throw away Respect,
Tradition, Forme, and Ceremonious duties,
For you haue but mistooke me all this while:
I liue with Bread like you, feele Want,
Taste Griefe, need Friends: subiected thus,
How can you say to me, I am a King?

Carl. My Lord, wise men ne'e wailie their present woes,
But presently prevent the wayes to wailie:
To feare the Foe, since feare oppresseth strength,
Gives in your weaknesse, strength vnto your Foe;
Feare, and be slaine, no worse can come to fight,
And fight and die, is death destroying death,
Where fearing, dying, payes death seruile breath.

Aum. My Father hath a Power, enquire of him,
And learne to make a Body of a Limbe.

Rich. Thou chid'st me well: proud Bullingbrooke I come
To change Blowes with thee, for our day of Doome.
This ague fit of feare is ouer-blowne,
An easie task: it is to winne our owne.
Say Scroope, where lyes our Vncle with his Power?
Speake sweetly man, although thy lookes be sowre.

Scroope. Men iudge by the complexion of the Skie
The state and inclination of the day;
So may you by my dull and heauie Eye:
My Tongue hath but a heauier Tale to say:
I play the Torturer, by small and small
To lengthen out the worst, that must be spoken.
Your Vncle Yorke is ioyn'd with Bullingbrooke,
And all your Northerne Castles yeelded vp,
And all your Southerne Gentlemen in Armes
Vpon his Faction.

Rich. Thou hast said enough.
Beshrew thee Cousin, which didst lead me forth
Of that sweet way I was in, to despaire:
What say you now? What comfort haue we now?
By Heauen Ile hate him everlastingly.
That bids me be of comfort any more.
Goe to Flint Castle, there Ile pine away,
A King, Woes slaue, shall Kingly Woe obey:
That Power I haue, discharge, and let 'em goe
To ear the Land, that hath some hope to grow,
For I haue none. Let no man speake againe
To alter this, for counsaile is but vaine.

Aum. My Liege, one word.

Rich. He does me double wrong,
That wounds me with the flatteries of his tongue.
Discharge my followers: let them hence away,
From Richards Night, to Bullingbrooks faire Day.

Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter with Drum and Colours, Bullingbrooke, Yorke, Northumberland, Attendants.

Bull. So that by this intelligence we learne
The Welchmen are dispers'd, and Salisbury
Is gone to meet the King, who lately landed
With some few priuate friends, vpon this Coast.

North. The newes is very faire and good, my Lord,
Richard, not farre from hence, hath hid his head.

York. It would beseeme the Lord Northumberland,
To say King Richard: alack the heauie day,
When such a sacred King should hide his head.

North. Your Grace mistakes: only to be briefe,
Left I his Title out.

York. The time hath beene,
Would you haue beene so briefe with him, he would
Haue beene so briefe with you, to shorten you,
For taking so the Head, your whole heads length.

Bull. Mistake not (Vncle) farther then you should.

York. Take not (good Cousin) farther then you should.
Least you mistake the Heauens are ore your head.

Bull. I know it (Vncle) and oppose not my selfe
Against their will. But who comes here?

Enter Percie.

Welcome Harry: what, will not this Castle yeeld?

Per. The Castle royally is man'd, my Lord,
Against thy entrance.

Bull. Roy-

Bull. Royally: Why, it containes no King?
Per. Yes (my good Lord)
It doth containe a King: King Richard lyes
Within the limits of yond Lime and Stone,
And with him, the Lord Aumerle, Lord Salisbury,
Sir Stephen Scroope, besides a Clergie man
Of holy reverence; who, I cannot learne.
North. Oh, belike it is the Bishop of Carlile.
Bull. Noble Lord,
Goe to the rude Ribs of that ancient Castle,
Through Brazen Trumpet send the breath of Parle
Into his ruin'd Eares, and thus deliver:
Henry Bullingbrooke vpon his knees doth kisse
King Richards hand, and sends allegeance
And true faith of heart to his Royall Person: hither come
Euen at his feet, to lay my Armes and Power,
Provided, that my Banishment repeal'd,
And Lands restor'd againe, be freely graunted:
If not, Ile vse th'aduantage of my Power,
And lay the Summers dust with showers of blood,
Rayn'd from the wounds of slaughter'd Englishmen;
The which, how farre off from the mind of Bullingbrooke
It is, such Crimson Tempest should bedrench
The fresh greene Lap of faire King Richards Land,
My stooping duetie tenderly shall shew.
Goe signifie as much, while here we march
Vpon the Grassie Carpet of this Plaine:
Let's march without the noyse of threatning Drum,
That from this Castles tatter'd Battlements
Our faire Appointments may be well perus'd.
Me thinkes King Richard and my selfe should meet
With no lesse terror then the Elements
Of Fire and Water, when their thundring smoake
At meeting teares the cloudie Cheekes of Heaven:
Be he the fire, Ile be the yeelding Water;
The Rage be his while on the Earth I raine
My Waters on the Earth, and not on him.
March on, and marke King Richard how he lookes.

Parts without, and answere within: then a Flourish.
Enter on the Walls, Richard, Carlile, Aumerle, Scroop, Salisbury.

See see, King Richard doth himselfe appeare
As doth the blushing discontented Sunne,
From out the fiery Portall of the East,
When he perceiues the enuious Clouds are bent
To dimme his glory, and to staine the tract
Of his bright passage to the Occident.
Yorke. Yet lookes he like a King: behold his Eye
(As bright as is the Eagles) lightens forth
Controlling Maiestie: alack, alack, for woe,
That any harme should staine so faire a shew
Rich. Wee are amaz'd, and thus long haue we stood
To watch the fearefull bending of thy knee,
Because we thought our selfe thy lawfull King:
And if we be, how dare thy loynts forget
To pay their awfull duetie to our presence?
If we be not, shew vs the Hand of God,
That hath dismiss'd vs from our Stewardship,
For well wee know, no Hand of Blood and Bone
Can gripe the sacred Handle of our Scepter,
Vnlesse he doe prophane, steale, or vsurpe.
And though you thinke, that all, as you haue done,
Haue come their Soules, by turning them from vs,
And we are barren, and bereft of Friends:
Yet know, my Master, God Omnipotent,
Is mustring in his Clouds, on our behalfe,
Armies of Pestilence, and they shall strike
Your Children yet vnborne, and vnbegot,
That lift your Vassall Hands against my Head,
And threat the Glory of my precious Crowne.
Tell Bullingbrooke, for yond me thinkes he is,
That euery stride he makes vpon my Land,
Is dangerous Treason: He is come to ope
The purple Testament of bleeding Warre;
But ere the Crowne he lookes for, liue in peace,
Ten thousand bloody crownes of Mothers Sonnes
Shall ill become the flower of Englands face,
Change the complexion of her Maid-pale Peace
To Scarlet Indignation, and bedew
Her Pastors Grasse with faithfull English Blood.
North. The King of Heaven forbid our Lord the King
Should so with ciuill and vnciuill Armes
Be rush'd vpon: Thy thrice-noble Cousin,
Harry Bullingbrooke, doth humbly kisse thy hand,
And by the Honorable Tombe he sweares,
That stands vpon your Royall Grandsires Bones,
And by the Royalties of both your Bloods,
(Currents that spring from one most gracious Head)
And by the buried Hand of Warlike Gaunt,
And by the Worth and Honor of himselfe,
Comprising all that may be sworne, or said,
His comming hither hath no further scope,
Then for his Lineall Royalties, and to begge
Infranchisement immediate on his knees:
Which on thy Royall parrie graunted once,
His glittering Armes he will commend to Rust,
His barbed Steedes to Stables, and his heart
To faithfull seruice of your Maiestie:
This sweares he, as he is a Prince, is iust,
And as I am a Gentleman, I credit him.
Rich. Northumberland, say thus: The King returnes,
His Noble Cousin is right welcome hither,
And all the number of his faire demands
Shall be accomplish'd without contradiction:
With all the gracious vtterance thou hast,
Speake to his gentle hearing kind commends.
We doe debase our selfe (Cousin) doe we not,
To looke so poorely, and to speake so faire?
Shall we call back Northumberland, and send
Defiance to the Traytor, and so die?
Aum. No, good my Lord, let's fight with gentle words
Till time lend friends, and friends their helpeful Swords
Rich. Oh God, oh God, that ere this tongue of mine,
That layd the Sentence of dread Banishment
On yond prowd man, should take it off againe
With words of sooth: Oh that I were as great
As is my Griefe, or lesser then my Name,
Or that I could forget what I haue beene,
Or not remember what I must be now:
Swell'st thou prowd heart? Ile giue thee scope to beat,
Since Foes haue scope to beat both thee and me.
Aum. Northumberland comes backe from Bullingbrooke.
Rich. What must the King doe now? must he submit
The King shall doe it: Must he be depos'd
The King shall be contented: Must he loose
The Name of King? o' Gods Name let it goe.
Ile giue my Iewels for a sett of Beades,
My gorgeous Pallace, for a Hermitage,
My gay Apparrell, for an Almes-mans Gowne,
My figur'd Goblets, for a Dish of Wood,
My Scepter, for a Palmers walking Staffe,

My Subiects, for a payre of carued Saints,
And my large Kingdome, for a little Graue,
A little little Graue, an obscure Graue.
Or I le be buryed in the Kings high-way,
Some way of common Trade, where Subiects feet
May hourely trample on their Soueraignes Head:
For on my heart they tread now, whilest I liue;
And buryed once, why not vpon my Head?
Aumerle, thou weep'st (my tender-hearted Cousin)
We'le make foule Weather with despised Teares:
Our sighes, and they, shall lodge the Summer Corne,
And make a Dearth in this reuoking Land.
Or shall we play the Wantons with our Woes,
And make some pretie Match, with shedding Teares?
As thus: to drop them still vpon one place,
Till they haue fretted vs a payre of Graues,
Within the Earth: and therein lay'd there lyes
Two Kinsmen, digg'd their Graues with weeping Eyes?
Would not this ill, doe well? Well, well, I see
I talke but idly, and you mock at mee.
Most mightie Prince, my Lord Northumberland,
What sayes King Bullingbrooke? Will his Maiestie
Giue Richard leaue to liue, till Richard die?
You make a Legge, and Bullingbrooke sayes I.
North. My Lord, in the base Court he doth attend
To speake with you, may it please you to come downe.
Rich. Downe, downe I come, like glist'ring Phaeton,
Wanting the manage of vnruly Iades.
In the base Court? base Court, where Kings grow base,
To come at Traytors Calls, and doe them Grace.
In the base Court come down: down Court, down King,
For night-Owls shrike, where mounting Larks should sing.
Bull. What sayes his Maiestie?
North. Sorrow, and griefe of heart
Makes him speake fondly, like a frantick man;
Yet he is come.
Bull. Stand all aport,
And shew faire duetie to his Maiestie.
My gracious Lord.
Rich. Faire Cousin.
You debase your Princely Knee,
To make the base Earth proud with kissing it.
Me rather had, my Heart might feele your Loue,
Then my vnpleas'd Eye see your Courtesie.
Vp Cousin, vp, your Heart is vp, I know,
Thus high at least, although your Knee be low.
Bull. My gracious Lord, I come but for mine owne.
Rich. Your owne is yours, and I am yours, and all.
Bull. So farre be mine, my most redoubted Lord,
As my true seruice shall deserue your loue.
Rich. Well you deseru'd:
They well deserue to haue,
That know the strong'st, and surest way to get.
Vncle giue me your Hand: nay, drie your Eyes,
Teares shew their Loue, but want their Remedies.
Cousin, I am too young to be your Father,
Though you are old enough to be my Heire.
What you will haue, I le giue, and willing to,
For doe we must, what force will haue vs doe.
Set on towards London.
Cousin, is it so?
Bull. Yea, my good Lord.
Rich. Then I must not say, no.

Flourish. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter the Queene, and two Ladies.

Qu. What sport shall we deuise here in this Garden,
To driue away the heauie thought of Care?
La. Madame, wee'le play at Bowles.
Qu. 'Twill make me thinke the World is full of Rubs
And that my fortune runnes against the Byas.
La. Madame, wee'le Dance.
Qu. My Legges can keepe no measure in Delight,
When my poore Heart no measure keepes in Griefe.
Therefore no Dancing (Girle) some other sport.
La. Madame, wee'le tell Tales.
Qu. Of Sorrow, or of Griefe?
La. Of eyther, Madame.
Qu. Of neyther, Girle.
For if of Ioy, being altogether wanting,
It doth remember me the more of Sorrow:
Or if of Griefe, being altogether had,
It addes more Sorrow to my want of Ioy:
For what I haue, I need not to repeat;
And what I want, it boots not to complaine.
La. Madame I le sing.
Qu. 'Tis well that thou hast cause:
But thou should'st please me better, would'st thou weepe.
La. I could weepe, Madame, would it doe you good.
Qu. And I could sing, would weeping doe me good,
And never borrow any Teare of thee.

Enter a Gardiner, and two Seruants.

But stay, here comes the Gardiners,
Let's step into the shadow of these Trees.
My wretchednesse, vnto a Rowe of Pinnes,
They'le talke of State; for every one doth so,
Against a Change; Woe is sorr-runne with Woe.
Gard. Goe binde thou vp yond dangling Apricocks,
Which like vnruly Children, make their Syre
Stoupe with oppression of their prodigall weight:
Giue some supportance to the bending twiggs.
Goe thou, and like an Executioner
Cut off the heads of too fast growing sprayes,
That looke too lofftie in our Common-wealth:
All must be euen, in our Gouernment.
You thus imploy'd, I will goe root away
The noysome Weedes, that without profit sucke
The Soyles fertilitie from wholesome flowers.
Ser. Why should we, in the compasse of a Pale,
Keepe Law and Forme, and due Proportion,
Shewing as in a Modell our firme Estate?
When our Sea-walled Garden, the whole Land,
Is full of Weedes, her fairest Flowers choakt vp,
Her Fruit-trees all vnprun'd, her Hedges rain'd,
Her Knots disorder'd, and her wholesome Hearbes
Swarming with Caterpillers.
Gard. Hold thy peace.
He that hath suffer'd this disorder'd Spring,
Hath now himselfe met with the Fall of Leafe.
The Weeds that his broad-spreading Leaues did shelter,
That seem'd, in eating him, to hold him vp,
Are pull'd vp, Root and all, by Bullingbrooke:
I meane, the Earle of Wilshire, Bushie, Greene.

Ser. What are they dead?
Gard. They are,
And Bullingbrooke hath seiz'd the wastefull King.
Oh, what pitty is it, that he had not so trim'd
And dreſt his Land, as we this Garden, at time of yeare,
And wound the Barke, the skin of our Fruit-trees,
Leaſt being ouer-proud with Sap and Blood,
With too much riches it confound it ſelfe?
Had he done ſo, to great and growing men,
They might haue liu'd to beare, and he to taſte
Their fruites of duzie. Superfluous branches
We lop away, that bearing boughes may liue:
Had he done ſo, himſelfe had borne the Crowne,
Which waſte and idle houres, hath quite thrown downe.
Ser. What thinke you the King ſhall be depos'd?
Gar. Depreſt he is already, and depos'd
Tis doubted he will be. Letters came laſt night
To a deere Friend of the Duke of Yorkes,
That tell blacke tydings.
Qu. Oh I am preſt to death through want of ſpeaking:
Thou old Adams likeneſſe, ſet to dreſſe this Garden:
How dares thy harſh rude tongue ſound this vnpleaſing
What Eue? what Serpent hath ſuggeſted thee, (newes
To make a ſecond fall of curſed man?
Why do'ſt thou ſay, King Richard is depos'd,
Dar'ſt thou, thou little better thing then earth,
Diuine his downfall? Say, where, when, and how Cam'ſt thou by this ill-tydings? Speake thou wretch.
Gard. Pardon me Madam. Little joy haue I
To breath theſe newes; yet what I ſay, is true;
King Richard, he is in the mighty hold
Of Bullingbrooke, their Fortunes both are weigh'd:
In your Lords Scale, is nothing but himſelfe,
And ſome few Vanities, that make him light:
But in the Ballance of great Bullingbrooke,
Beſides himſelfe, are all the Engliſh Peeres,
And with that odes he weighes King Richard downe.
Poſte you to London, and you'l finde it ſo,
I ſpeake no more, then every one doth know.
Qu. Nimble miſchance, that art ſo light of foote,
Doth not thy Embaſſage belong to me?
And am I laſt that knowes it? Oh thou think'ſt
To ſerue me laſt, that I may longeſt keepe
Thy ſorrow in my breaſt. Come Ladies goe,
To meet at London, Londons King in woe.
What was I borne to this: that my ſad looke,
Should grace the Triumph of great Bullingbrooke.
Gard'ner, for telling me this newes of woe.
I would the Plants thou graft'ſt, may never grow. Exit.
Q. Poore Queen, ſo that thy State might be no worſe,
I would my ſkill were ſubject to thy curſe:
Heere did ſhe drop a teare, heere in this place
Ile ſet a Banke of Rew, ſowre Herbe of Grace:
Rue, eu'n for ruth, heere ſhortly ſhall be ſeene,
In the remembrance of a Weeping Queene. Exit.

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter as to the Parliament, Bullingbrooke, Aumerle, Northumberland, Percie, Fitz-Water, Surrey, Carlile, Abbot of Weſtminſter. Herauld, Officers, and Bagot.

Bullingbrooke. Call forth Bagot.
Now Bagot, freely ſpeake thy minde,
What thou do'ſt know of Noble Gloſters death:
Who wrought it with the King, and who perform'd
The bloody Office of his Timeleſſe end.
Bag. Then ſet before my face, the Lord Aumerle.
Bol. Coſin, ſtand forth, and looke vpon that man.
Bag. My Lord Aumerle, I know your daring tongue
Scornes to vnſay, what it hath once deliuer'd.
In that dead time, when Gloſters death was plotted,
I heard you ſay, Is not my arme of length,
That reacheth from the reſtfull Engliſh Court
As farre as Calais, to my Vnkles head.
Amongſt much other talke, that very time,
I heard you ſay, that you had rather refuſe
The offer of an hundred thouſand Crownes,
Then Bullingbrooke's returne to England; adding withall,
How bleſt this Land would be, in this your Coſins death.
Aum. Princes, and Noble Lords:
What anſwer ſhall I make to this baſe man?
Shall I ſo much diſhonor my faire Starres,
On equall termes to give him chaſtiſement?
Either I muſt, or haue mine honor ſoyl'd
With th'Attaindor of his ſlanderous Lippes.
There is my Gage, the manuall Seale of death
That markes thee out for Hell. Thou lyeſt,
And will maintaine what thou haſt ſaid, is falſe,
In thy heart blood, though being all too baſe
To ſtaine the temper of my Knightly ſword.
Bol. Bagot forbeare, thou ſhalt not take it vp.
Aum. Excepting one, I would he were the beſt
In all this preſence, that hath mou'd me ſo.
Fitz. If that thy valour ſtand on ſympathize:
There is my Gage, Aumerle, in Gage to thine:
By that faire Sunne, that ſhewes me where thou ſtand'ſt,
I heard thee ſay (and vauntingly thou ſpak'ſt it)
That thou wer't cauſe of Noble Gloſters death.
If thou deniest it, twenty times thou lyeſt.
And I will turne thy falſhood to thy hart,
Where it was forged with my Rapiers point.
Aum. Thou dar'ſt not (Coward) liue to ſee the day.
Fitz. Now by my Soule, I would it were this houre.
Aum. Fitzwater thou art damn'd to hell for this.
Per. Aumerle, thou lye'ſt: his Honor is as true
In this Appeale, as thou art all vnfaint:
And that thou art ſo, there I throw my Gage
To proue it on thee, to th'extreameſt point
Of mortall breathing. Seize it, if thou dar'ſt.
Aum. And if I do not, may my hands rot off,
And neuer brandiſh more reuengeſull Steele,
Ouer the glittering Helmet of my Foe.
Surrey. My Lord Fitz-water:
I do remember well, the very time
Aumerle, and you did talke.
Fitz. My Lord,
'Tis very true: You were in preſence then,
And you can witneſſe with me, this is true.
Surrey. As falſe, by heauen,
As Heauen it ſelfe is true.
Fitz. Surrey, thou Lyeſt.
Surrey. Diſhonourable Boy;
That Lye, ſhall lie ſo heauy on my Sword,
That it ſhall render Vengeance, and Reuenge,
Till thou the Lye-giver, and that Lye, doe lye
In earth as quiet, as thy Fathers Scull.
In proofe whereof, there is mine Honors pawne,
Engage it to the Triall, if thou dar'ſt.

Mow. How fondly do'st thou spurre a forward Horse?
If I dare eate, or drinke, or breathe, or live,
I dare meete Surrey in a Wilderness,
And spit vpon him, whilest I say he Lyes,
And Lyes, and Lyes: there is my Bond of Faith,
To tye thee to my strong Correction.
As I intend to thrive in this new World,
Aumerle is guiltie of my true Appeale.
Besides, I heard the banish'd Norfolke say,
That thou Aumerle didst send two of thy men,
To execute the Noble Duke at Callis.

Aum. Some honest Christian trust me with a Gage,
That Norfolke lyes: here doe I throw downe this,
If he may be repeal'd, to trie his Honor.

Bull. These differences shall all rest vnder Gage,
Till Norfolke be repeal'd: repeal'd he shall be;
And (though mine Enemie) restor'd againe
To all his Lands and Seignories: when he's return'd,
Against Aumerle we will enforce his Tryall.

Carl. That honorable day shall ne're be seene.
Many a time hath banish'd Norfolke fought
For Jesu Christ, in glorious Christian field
Streaming the Ensigne of the Christian Crosse,
Against black Pagans, Turkes, and Saracens:
And toyl'd with workes of Warre, retyr'd himselfe
To Italy, and there at Venice gave
His Body to that pleasant Countries Earth,
And his pure Soule vnto his Captaine Christ,
Vnder whose Colours he had fought so long.

Bull. Why Bishop, is Norfolke dead?

Carl. As sure as I live, my Lord.

Bull. Sweet peace conduct his sweet Soule
To the Bosome of good old Abraham.
Lords Appellants your differences shall all rest vnder gage,
Till we assigne you to your dayes of Tryall.

Enter Yorke.

Yorke. Great Duke of Lancaster, I come to thee
From plume-pluck'd Richard, who with willing Soule
Adopts thee Heire, and his high Scepter yeelds
To the possession of thy Royall Hand.
Ascend his Throne, descending now from him,
And long live Henry, of that Name the Fourth.

Bull. In Gods Name. Ile ascend the Regall Throne.

Carl. May, Heaven forbid.
Worst in this Royall Presence may I speake.
Yet best beseeming me to speake the truth.
Would God, that any in this Noble Presence
Were enough Noble, to be vpright Iudge
Of Noble Richard: then true Noblenesse would
Learne him forbearance from so foule a Wrong.
What Subiect can give Sentence on his King.
And who sits here, that is not Richards Subiect?
Theeves are not iudg'd, but they are by to heare,
Although apparent guilt be seene in them:
And shall the figure of Gods Maiestie,
His Capteine, Steward, Deputie elect,
Anointed, Crown'd, planted many yeeres,
Be iudg'd by subiect, and inferior breathe,
And he himselfe not present? Oh, forbid it, God,
That in a Christian Climate, Soules refin'de
Should shew so heynous, black, obscene a deed.
I speake to Subiects, and a Subiect speakes,
Stirr'd vp by Heaven, thus boldly for his King.
My Lord of Hereford here, whom you call King,
Is a foule Traytor to proud Hereford's King.
And if you Crowne him, let me prophecie,
The blood of English shall manure the ground,
And future Ages groane for his foule Act.
Peace shall goe sleepe with Turkes and Infidels,
And in this Seat of Peace, tumultuous Warres
Shall Kinne with Kinne, and Kinde with Kinde confound.
Disorder, Horror, Feare, and Mutinie
Shall here inhabite, and this Land be call'd
The field of Golgotha, and dead mens Sculls.
Oh, if you rearе this House, against this House
It will the woefullest Diuision prove,
That ever fell vpon this cursed Earth.
Prevent it, resist it, and let it not be so,
Least Child, Childs Children cry against you, Woe.

North. Well haue you argu'd Sir: and for your paines,
Of Capitall Treason we arrest you here.
My Lord of Westmonster, be it your charge,
To keepe him safely, till his day of Tryall.
May it please you, Lords, to grant the Commons Suit?

Bull. Fetch hither Richard, that in common view
He may surrender: so we shall proceede
Without suspition.

Yorke. I will be his Conduct. Exit.

Bull. Lords, you that here are vnder our Arrest,
Procure your Sureties for your Dayes of Answer:
Little are we beholding to your Loue,
And little look'd for at your helping Hands.

Enter Richard and Yorke.

Rich. Alack, why am I sent for to a King,
Before I haue shooke off the Regall thoughts
Wherewith I reign'd? I hardly yet haue learn'd
To insinuate, flatter, bowe, and bend my Knee.
Give Sorrow leave a while, to tutore me
To this submission. Yet I well remember
The fauors of these men: were they not mine?
Did they not sometime cry, All hayle to me?
So Iudas did to Christ: but he in twelve,
Found truth in all, but one; I, in twelve thousand, none.
God save the King: will no man say, Amen?
Am I both Priest, and Clarke? well then, Amen.
God save the King, although I be not he:
And yet Amen, if Heaven doe thinke him mee.
To doe what service, am I sent for hither?

Yorke. To doe that office of thine owne good will,
Which tyred Maiestie did make thee offer:
The Resignation of thy State and Crowne
To Henry Bolingbroke.

Rich. Give me the Crown. Here Cousin, seize the Crown:
Here Cousin, on this side my Hand, on that side thine.
Now is this Golden Crowne like a deepe Well,
That owes two Buckets, filling one another,
The emptier ever dancing in the aire,
The other downe, vnseene, and full of Water:
That Bucket downe, and full of Teares am I,
Drinking my Griefes, whilst you mount vp on high.

Bull. I thought you had been willing to resigne.

Rich. My Crowne I am: but still my Griefes are mine
You may my Glories and my State depose,
But not my Griefes; still am I King of those.

Bull. Part of your Cares you give me with your Crowne.

Rich. Your Cares set vp, do not pluck my Cares downe.
My Care is loss of Care, by old Care done,
Your Care is gaine of Care, by new Care woone:
The Cares I give, I haue, though given away,
They tend the Crowne, yet still with me they stay.

Bull. Are you contented to resigne the Crowne?

Rich. I, no; no, I: for I must nothing bee:
Therefore no, no, for I resigne to thee.
Now, make me how I will vndoe my selfe.
I give this heauie Weight from off my Head;
And this vnwieldie Scepter from my Hand,
The pride of Kingly sway from out my Heart.
With mine owne Teares I wash away my Balme,
With mine owne Hands I give away my Crowne,
With mine owne Tongue denie my Sacred State,
With mine owne Breath release all dutious Oathes,
All Pompe and Maiestie I doe forsweare:
My Manors, Rents, Reuenues, I forgoe;
My Acts, Decrees, and Statutes I denie:
God pardon all Oathes that are broke to mee,
God keepe all Vowes vnbroke are made to thee.
Make me, that nothing haue, with nothing griev'd,
And thou with all pleas'd, that hast all atchiev'd.
Long may'st thou liue in Richards Seat to sit,
And soone lye Richard in an Earthie Pit.
God saue King Henry, vn-King'd Richard sayes,
And send him many yeeres of Sunne-shine dayes.
What more remaines?

Northb. No more: but that you reade
These Accusations, and these grieuous Crymes,
Committed by your Person, and your followers,
Against the State, and Profit of this Land:
That by confessing them, the Soules of men
May deeme, that you are worthily depos'd.

Rich. Must I doe so? and must I rauell out
My weav'd-vp follyes? Gentle Northumberland,
If thy Offences were vpon Record,
Would it not shame thee, in so faire a troupe,
To reade a Lecture of them? If thou would'st,
There should'st thou finde one heynous Article,
Containing the deposing of a King.
And cracking the strong Warrant of an Oath,
Mark'd with a Blot, damn'd in the Booke of Heauen.
Nay, all of you, that stand and looke vpon me,
Whil'st that my wretchednesse doth bait my selfe,
Though some of you, with Pilate, wash your hands,
Shewing an outward pittie: yet you Pilates
Haue here deliuer'd me to my sowre Crosse,
And Water cannot wash away your sinne.

Northb. My Lord dispatch, reade o're these Articles

Rich. Mine Eyes are full of Teares, I cannot see:
And yet salt-Water blindes them not so much,
But they can see a sort of Traytors here.
Nay, if I turne mine Eyes vpon my selfe,
I finde my selfe a Traytor with the rest:
For I haue giuen here my Soules consent,
T'vndeck the pompous Body of a King;
Made Glory base; a Soueraignetie, a Slaue;
Proud Maiestie, a Subiect; State, a Peasant.

Northb. My Lord.

Rich. No Lord of thine, thou haughty-insulting man;
No, nor no mans Lord: I haue no Name, no Title;
No, not that Name was giuen me at the Font,
But 'tis vsurpt: alack the heauie day,
That I haue worne so many Winters out,
And know not now, what Name to call my selfe.
Oh, that I were a Mockerie, King of Snow,
Standing before the Sunne of Bullingbrooke,
To melt my selfe away in Water-drops.
Good King, great King, and yet not greatly good,
And if my word be Sterling yet in England,
Let it command a Mirror hither straight,
That it may shew me what a Face I haue,
Since it is Bankrupt of his Maiestie.

Bull. Goe some of you, and fetch a Looking-Glasse.

Northb. Read o're this Paper, while ye Glasse doth come.

Rich. Fiend, thou tormentest me, ere I come to Hell.

Bull. Vrge it no more, my Lord Northumberland.

Northb. The Commons will not then be satisfy'd.

Rich. They shall be satisfy'd: I'le reade enough,
When I doe see the very Booke indeede,
Where all my sinnes are writ, and that's my selfe.

Enter one with a Glasse

Giue me that Glasse, and therein will I reade.
No deeper wrinckles yet? hath Sorrow struck
So many Blowes vpon this Face of mine,
And made no deeper Wounds? Oh flatt'ring Glasse,
Like to my followers in prosperitie,
Thou do'st beguile me. Was this Face, the Face
That every day, vnder his House-hold Roofe,
Did keepe ten thousand men? Was this the Face,
That like the Sunne, did make beholders winke?
Is this the Face, which fac'd so many follyes,
That was at last out-fac'd by Bullingbrooke?
A brittle Glory shineth in this Face,
As brittle as the Glory, is the Face,
For there it is, cracke in an hundred shiuers.
Marke silent King, the Morall of this sport,
How soone my Sorrow hath destroy'd my Face.

Bull. The shadow of your Sorrow hath destroy'd
The shadow of your Face.

Rich. Say this againe.
The shadow of my Sorrow: ha, let's see,
'Tis very true, my Griefe lyes all within,
And these externall manner of Lamentes,
Are merely shadowes, to the vnseene Griefe,
That swells with silence in the tortur'd Soule.
There lyes the substance: and I thanke thee King
For thy great bountie, that not onely giu'st
Me cause to wayle, but teach'st me the way
How to lament the cause. I'le begge one Boone,
And then be gone, and trouble you no more
Shall I obtaine it?

Bull. Name it, faire Cousin.

Rich. Faire Cousin? I am greater then a King:
For when I was a King, my flatterers
Were then but subiects; being now a subiect,
I haue a King here to my flatterer:
Being so great, I haue no neede to begge.

Bull. Yet aske.

Rich. And shall I haue?

Bull. You shall.

Rich. Then giue me leaue to goe.

Bull. Whither?

Rich. Whither you will, so I were from your sights.

Bull. Goe some of you, conuey him to the Tower.

Rich. Oh good: conuey: Conueyers are you all,
That rise thus nimbly by a true Kings fall.

Bull. On Wednesday next, we solemnly set downe
Our Coronation: Lords, prepare your selues. Exeunt.

Abbot. A woefull Pageant haue we here beheld.

Carl. The Woes to come, the Children yet vnborne,
Shall feele this day as sharpe to them as Thorne.

Aum. You holy Clergie-men, is there no Plot
To rid the Realme of this pernicious Blot.

Abbot. Before I freely speake my minde herein,
You shall not onely take the Sacrament,
To bury mine Intents, but also to effect

What

What euer I shall happen to deuise.
I fear your Sorrowes are full of Distraction,
Your Heart of Sorrow, and your Eyes of Teares.
Come home with me to Supper, the lay a Plot
Shall shew vs all merry day. Exeunt.

Actus Quintus. Scena Prima.

Enter Queene, and Ladies.

Qu. This way the King will come: this is the way
To Iohn Caesar's ill-erected Tower:
To whose flint Bosome, my condemned Lord
Is doom'd a Prisoner, by proud Bullingbrooke.
Here let vs rest, if this rebellious Earth
Haue any resting for her true Kings Queene.

Enter Richard, and Guard.

But soft, but see, or rather doe not see,
My faire Rose wither: yet looke vp; behold,
That you in pitie may dissolue to dew,
And wash him fresh again with true-loue Teares.
Ah thou, the Modell where old Troy did stand,
Thou Map pe of Honor, thou King Richards Tombe,
And not King Richard: thou most beauteous Inne,
Why should hard-fauor'd Griefe be lodg'd in thee,
When Triumph is become an Ale-house Guest.
Rich. Ioyne not with griefe, faire Woman, do not so,
To make my end too sudden: learne good Soule,
To thinke our former State a happie Dreame,
From which awak'd, the truth of what we see,
Shewes vs but this. I am sworne Brother (Sweet)
To grim Necessitie; and hee and I
Will keepe a League till Death. High thee to France,
And Cloyster thee in some Religious House:
Our holy lines must winne a new Worlds Crowne,
Which our prophane houres here haue stricken downe.
Qu. What, is my Richard both in shape and minde
Transform'd, and weaken'd? Hath Bullingbrooke
Depos'd thine Intellect? hath he beene in thy Heart?
The Lyon dying, thrusteth forth his Paw,
And wounds the Earth, if nothing else, with rage
To be o're-pow'r'd: and wilt thou, Pupill-like,
Take thy Correction mildly, kisse the Rodde,
And fawne on Rage with base Humilitie,
Which art a Lyon, and a King of Beasts?
Rich. A King of Beasts indeed: if aught but Beasts,
I had beene still a happy King of Men.
Good (sometime Queene) prepare thee hence for France:
Think I am dead, and that even here thou tak'st,
As from my Death-bed, my last liuing leaue.
In Winters tedious Nights sit by the fire
With good old folkes, and let them tell thee Tales
Of woefull Age, long gone betide:
And ere thou bid good-night, to quite their griefe,
Tell thou the lamentable fall of me,
And send the hearers weeping to their Beds:
For why? the senseless Brands will sympathize
The heauie accent of thy moaning Tongue,
And in compassion, weepe the fire out:
And some will mourne in ashes, some coale-black,
For the deposing of a rightfull King.

Enter Northumberland.

North. My Lord, the mind of Bullingbrooke is chang'd.
You must to Pomfret, not vnto the Tower.
And Madame, there is order ta'ne for you:
With all swift speed, you must away to France.
Rich. Northumberland, thou Ladder wherewithall
The mounting Bullingbrooke ascendes my Throne,
The time shall not be many hours of age,
More than it is, ere foule sinne, gathering head,
Shall breake into corruption: thou shalt think,
Though he diuide the Realme, and giue thee halfe,
It is too little, helping him to all;
He shall think, that thou which know'st the way
To plant vnrightfull Kings, will know againe,
Being ne're so little vrg'd another way,
To pluck him headlong from the vsurped Throne.
The Loue of wicked friends conuerts to Feare;
That Feare, to Hate; and Hate turnes one, or both,
To worthie Danger, and deserued Death.
North. My guilt be on my Head, and there an end:
Take leaue, and part, for you must part forthwith.
Rich. Doubly diuorc'd? (bad men) ye violate
A two-fold Marriage; 'twixt my Crowne, and me,
And then betwixt me, and my married Wife.
Let me vn-kisse the Oath 'twixt thee, and me;
And yet not so, for with a Kisse 'twas made.
Part vs, Northumberland; I, towards the North,
Where shiuering Cold and Sicknesse pines the Clyme:
My Queene to France: from whence, set forth in pompe,
She came adorned hither like sweet May;
Sent back like Hallowmas, or short'st of day.
Qu. And must we be diuided? must we part?
Rich. I, hand from hand my Loue, and heart fro heart.
Qu. Banish vs both, and send the King with me.
North. That were some Loue, but little Policy.
Qu. Then whither he goes, thither let me goe.
Rich. So two together weeping, make one Woe.
Weepe thou for me in France; I, for thee here:
Better farre off, then neere, be ne're the neere.
Goe, count thy Way with Sighes; I, mine with Groanes.
Qu. So longest Way shall haue the longest Moanes.
Rich. Twice for one Step I'le groane, the Way being short,
And peece the Way out with a heauie heart.
Come, come, in wooing Sorrow let's be briefe,
Since wedding it, there is such length in Griefe:
One Kisse shall stop our mouthes, and doubtlesse part;
Thus giue I mine, and thus take I thy heart.
Qu. Giue me mine owne again: 'twere no good part
To take on me to keepe, and kill thy heart.
So, now I haue mine owne again, be gone,
That I may striue to kill it with a groane.
Rich. We make Woe wanton with this fond delay:
Once more adieu; the rest, let Sorrow say. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Yorke, and his Duchesse.

Duch. My Lord you told me you would tell the rest,
When weeping made you breake the story off,
Of our two Cousins comming into London.
Yorke. Where did I leaue?
Duch. At that sad stoppe, my Lord,
Where rude miss-gouern'd hands, from Windowes tops
Threw dust and rubbish on King Richard's head.

Yorke. Then, as I said, the Duke, great Bullingbrooke,
Mounted vpon a hot and fiertie Steed,
Which his aspiring Rider seem'd to know,
With slow, but stately pace, kept on his course:
While all tongues cride, God saue thee Bullingbrooke.
You would haue thought the very windowes spake,
So many greedy lookes of yong and old,
Through Casements darted their desiring eyes
Vpon his visage: and that all the walles,
With painted Imagery had said at once,
Iesu preserue thee, welcom Bullingbrooke.
Whilst he, from one side to the other turning,
Bare-headed, lower then his proud Steeds necke,
Bespake them thus: I thanke you Countrimen:
And thus still doing, thus he past along.

Dutch. Alas poore Richard, where rides he the whilst?

Yorke. As in a Theater, the eyes of men
After a well grac'd Actor leaues the Stage,
Are idlely bent on him that enters next,
Thinking his prattle to be tedious:
Even so, or with much more contempt, mens eyes
Did scowle on Richard: no man cride, God saue him:
No ioyfull tongue gaue him his welcome home,
But dust was throwne vpon his Sacred head,
Which with such gentle sorrow he shooke off,
His face still combating with teares and smiles
(The badges of his greefe and patience)
That had not God (for some strong purpose) steel'd
The hearts of men, they must perforce haue melted,
And Barbarisme it selfe haue pitied him.
But heauen hath a hand in these euents,
To whose high will we bound our calme contents.
To Bullingbrooke, are we sworne Subiects now,
Whose State, and Honor, I for aye allow.

Enter Aumerle.

Dut. Heere comes my sonne Aumerle.

Yor. Aumerle that was,
But that is lost, for being Richards Friend.
And Madam, you must call him Rutland now:
I am in Parliament pledge for his truth,
And lasting fealtie to the new-made King.

Dut. Welcome my sonne: who are the Violets now,
That strew the greene lap of the new-come Spring?

Aum. Madam, I know not, nor I greatly care not,
God knowes, I had as liefe be none, as one.

Yorke. Well, beare you well in this new-spring of time
Least you be crept before you come to prime.
What newes from Oxford? Hold those lists & Triumphs?

Aum. For ought I know my Lord, they do.

Yorke. You will be there I know.

Aum. If God prevent not, I purpose so.

Yor. What Seale is that that hangs without thy bosom?
Yea, look'st thou pale? Let me see the Writing.

Aum. My Lord, 'tis nothing.

Yorke. No matter then who sees it,
I will be satisfied, let me see the Writing.

Aum. I do beseech your Grace to pardon me,
It is a matter of small consequence,
Which for some reasons I would not haue seene.

Yorke. Which for some reasons sir, I meane to see
I feare, I feare.

Dut. What should you feare?
'Tis nothing but some bond, that he is enter'd into
For gay apparrell against the Triumph.

Yorke. Bound to himselfe? What doth he with a Bond
That he is bound to? Wife, thou art a foole.
Boy, let me see the Writing.

Aum. I do beseech you pardon me, I may not shew it

Yor. I will be satisfied: let me see it I say. Searches it
Treason, foule Treason, Villaine, Traitor, Slaue.

Dut. What's the matter, my Lord?

Yorke. Hoa, who's within there? Saddle my horse.
Heauen for his mercy: what treachery is heere?

Dut. Why, what is't my Lord?

Yorke. Giue me my boots, I say: Saddle my horse:
Now by my Honor, my life, my troth,
I will appeach the Villaine.

Dut. What is the matter?

Yorke. Peace foolish Woman.

Dut. I will not peace. What is the matter Sonne?

Aum. Good Mother be content, it is no more
Then my poore life must answer.

Dut. Thy life answer?

Enter Seruant with Boots.

Yor. Bring me my Boots, I will vnto the King.

Dut. Strike him Aumerle. Poore boy, thou art amaz'd,
Hence Villaine, never more come in my sight.

Yor. Giue me my Boots, I say.

Dut. Why Yorke, what wilt thou do?
Wilt thou not hide the Trespasse of thine owne?
Haue we more Sonnes? Or are we like to haue?
Is not my teeming date drunke vp with time?
And wilt thou pluck my faire Sonne from mine Age,
And rob me of a happy Mothers name?
Is he not like thee? Is he not thine owne?

Yor. Thou fond mad woman:
Wilt thou conceale this darke Conspiracy?
A dozen of them here haue tane the Sacrament,
And interchangeably set downe their hands
To kill the King at Oxford.

Dut. He shall be none:
We'l keepe him heere: then what is that to him?

Yor Away fond woman: were he twenty times my Son, I would appeach him.

Dut. Hadst thou groan'd for him as I haue done,
Thou wouldest be more pittifull:
But now I know thy minde; thou do'st suspect
That I haue bene disloyall to thy bed,
And that he is a Bastard, not thy Sonne:
Sweet Yorke, sweet husband, be not of that minde:
He is as like thee, as a man may bee,
Not like to me, not any of my Kin,
And yet I loue him.

Yorke. Make way, vnruly Woman. Exit

Dut. After Aumerle. Mount thee vpon his horse,
Spurre post, and get before him to the King,
And begge thy pardon, ere he do accuse thee,
He not be long behind: though I be old,
I doubt not but to ride as fast as Yorke:
And neuer will I rise vp from the ground,
Till Bullingbrooke haue pardon'd thee: Away be gone. Exit

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Bullingbrooke, Percie, and other Lords.

Bul. Can no man tell of my vnthrifte Sonne?
'Tis full three months, since I did see him last.
If any plague hang euer vs, 'tis he,
I would to heauen (my Lords) he might be found:
Enquire at London, 'mongst the Tauerues there:

For

For there (they say) he dayly doth frequent,
With vnrestrained loose Companions,
Euen such (they say) as stand in narrow Lanes,
And rob our Watch, and beate our passengers,
Which he, yong wanton, and effeminate Boy
Takes on the point of Honor, to support
So dissolute a crew.

Per. My Lord, some two dayes since I saw the Prince.
And told him of these Triumphes held at Oxford.

Bul. And what said the Gallant?

Per. His answer was: he would vnto the Stewes,
And from the common'st creature plucke a Glouc
And weare it as a fauour, and with that
He would vnhorse the lustiest Challenger.

Bul. As dissolute as desp'rate, yet through both,
I see some sparkes of better hope: which elder dayes
May happily bring forth. But who comes heere?

Enter Aumerle.

Aum. Where is the King?

Bul. What meanes our Cosin, that hee stares
And looks so wildely?

Aum. God saue your Grace. I do beseech your Maiesty
To haue some conference with your Grace alone.

Bul. Withdraw your selues, and leaue vs here alone.
What is the matter with our Cosin now?

Aum. For euer may my knees grow to the earth,
My tongue cleaue to my roofe within my mouth,
Vnlesse a Pardon, ere I rise, or speake.

Bul. Intended, or committed was this fault?
If on the first, how heynous ere it bee,
To win thy after loue, I pardon thee.

Aum. Then giue me leaue, that I may turne the key,
That no man enter, till my tale me done.

Bul. Haue thy desire. Yorke within.

Yor. My Liege beware, looke to thy selfe,
Thou hast a Traitor in thy presence there.

Bul. Villaine, Ile make thee safe.

Aum. Stay thy reuengefull hand, thou hast no cause to feare.

Yorke. Open the doore, secure foole-hardy King:
Shall I for loue speake treason to thy face?
Open the doore, or I will breake it open.

Enter Yorke.

Bul. What is the matter (Vncle) speak, recouer breath,
Tell vs how neere is danger,
That we may arme vs to encounter it.

Yor. Peruse this writing heere, and thou shalt know
The reason that my haste forbids me show.

Aum. Remember as thou read'st, thy promise past:
I do repent me, reade not my name there,
My heart is not confederate with my hand.

Yor. It was (villaine) ere thy hand did set it downe.
I rent it from the Traitors bosome, King.
Feare, and not Loue, begets his penitence;
Forget to pitty him, least thy pitty proue
A Serpent, that will sting thee to the heart.

Bul. Oh heinous, strong, and bold Conspiracie,
O loyall Father of a treacherous Sonne:
Thou sheere, immaculate, and siluer fountaine,
From whence this streame, through muddy passages
Hath had his current, and defil'd himselfe.
Thy ouerflow of good, conuerts to bad,
And thy abundant goodnesse shall excuse
This deadly blot, in thy digressing sonne.

Yorke. So shall my Vertue be his Vices bawd,
And he shall spend mine Honour, with his Shame:
As thriftlesse Sonnes, their scraping Fathers Gold.
Mine honor liues, when his dishonor dies,
Or my sham'd life, in his dishonor lies:
Thou kill'st me in his life, giuing him breath,
The Traitor liues, the true man's put to death.

Duchesse within.

Duc. What hos (my Liege) for heauens sake let me in.

Bul. What shrill-voic'd Suppliant, makes this eager cry?

Duc. A woman, and thine Aunt (great King) 'tis I.
Speake with me, pitty me, open the doore,
A Begger begs, that neuer begg'd before.

Bul. Our Scene is alter'd from a serious thing,
And now chang'd to the Begger, and the King.
My dangerous Cosin, let your Mother in,
I know she's come, to pray for your foule sin.

Yorke. If thou do pardon, whosoeuer pray,
More sinnes for this forgiuenesse, prosper may.
This fester'd ioynt cut off, the rest rests sound,
This let alone, will all the rest confound.

Enter Duchesse.

Duc. O King, beleeue not this hard-hearted man,
Loue, loiuing not it selfe, none other can.

Yor. Thou frantick woman, what dost y make here,
Shall thy old dugges, once more a Traitor reare?

Duc. Sweet Yorke be patient, heare me gentle Liege.

Bul. Rise vp good Aunt.

Duc. Not yet, I thee beseech.
For euer will I kneele vpon my knees,
And neuer see day, that the happy sees,
Till thou giue ioy: vntill thou bid me ioy.
By pardoning Rutland, my transgressing Boy.

Aum. Vnto my mothers prayres, I bend my knee.

Yorke. Against them both, my true ioynts bended be.

Duc. Pleades he in earnest? Looke vpon his Face,
His eyes do drop no teares: his prayres are in iest:
His words come from his mouth, ours from our brest.
He prayes but faintly, and would be denide,
We pray with heart, and soule, and all beside:
His weary ioynts would gladly rise, I know,
Our knees shall kneele, till to the ground they grow:
His prayers are full of false hypocrisie,
Ours of true zeale, and deepe integritie:
Our prayers do out-pray his, then let them haue
That mercy, which true prayers ought to haue.

Bul. Good Aunt stand vp.

Duc. Nay, do not say stand vp.
But Pardon first, and afterwards stand vp.
And if I were thy Nurse, thy tongue to teach,
Pardon should be the first word of thy speach.
I neuer long'd to heare a word till now:
Say Pardon (King), let pitty teach thee how.
The word is short: but not so short as sweet,
No word like Pardon, for Kings mouth's so meet.

Yorke. Speake it in French (King) say Pardon'ne moy.

Duc. Dost thou teach pardon, Pardon to destroy?
Ah my sweet husband, my hard-hearted Lord,
That set's the word it selfe, against the word.
Speake Pardon, as 'tis current in our Land,
The chopping French we do not vnderstand.
Thine eye begins to speake, set thy tongue there,
Or in thy pitteous heart, plant thou thine eare,
That hearing how our plaints and prayres do pearce,
Pitty may moue thee. Pardon to rehearse.

Bul. Good Aunt, stand vp.

Duc. I do not sue to stand,
Pardon is all the suite I haue in hand.

Bul.

Bul. I pardon him, as heauen shall pardon mee.
Dut. O happy vantage of a kneeling knee:
Yet am I sicke for feare: Speake it againe,
Twice saying Pardon, doth not pardon twaine,
But makes one pardon strong.
Bul. I pardon him with all my hart.
Dut. A God on earth thou art.
Bul. But for our trusty brother-in-Law, the Abbot,
With all the rest of that consorted crew,
Destruction straight shall dogge them at the heeles:
Good Vncle helpe to order seuerall powres
To Oxford, or where ere these Traitors are:
They shall not line within this world I sweare,
But I will haue them, if I once know where.
Vncle farewell, and Cosin adieu:
Your mother well hath prayd, and prouе you true.
Dut. Come my old son, I pray heauen make thee new.
Exeunt.

Enter Exton and Seruants.

Ext. Didst thou not marke the King what words hee spake?
Haue I no friend will rid me of this liuing feare:
Was it not so?
Ser. Those were his very words.
Ex. Haue I no Friend? (quoth he:) he spake it twice,
And vrg'd it twice together, did he not?
Ser. He did.
Ex. And speaking it, he wistly look'd on me,
As who should say, I would thou wer't the man
That would diuorce this terror from my heart,
Meaning the King at Pomfret: Come, let's goe;
I am the Kings Friend, and will rid his Foe. Exit.

Scæna Quarta.

Enter Richard.

Rich. I haue bin studying, how to compare
This Prison where I liue, vnto the World:
And for because the world is populous,
And heere is not a Creature, but my selfe,
I cannot do it: yet Ile hammer't out.
My Braine, Ile proue the Female to my Soule,
My Soule, the Father: and these two beget
A generation of still breeding Thoughts;
And these same Thoughts, people this Little World
In humors, like the people of this world,
For no thought is contented. The better sort,
As thoughts of things Diuine, are intermixt
With scruples, and do set the Faith it selfe
Against the Faith: as thus: Come litle ones: & then again,
It is as hard to come, as for a Camell
To thred the posterne of a Needles eye.
Thoughts tending to Ambition, they do plot
Vnlikely wonders; how these vaine weake nailes
May teare a passage through the Flinty ribbes
Of this hard world, my ragged prison walles:
And for they cannot, dye in their owne pride.
Thoughts tending to Content, flatter themselues,
That they are not the first of Fortunes slaues,
Nor shall not be the last. Like silly Beggars,
Who sitting in the Stocks, refuge their shame
That many haue, and others must sit there;
And in this Thought, they finde a kind of ease,
Bearing their owne misfortune on the backe
Of such as haue before indur'd the like.
Thus play I in one Prison, many people,
And none contented. Sometimes am I King;
Then Treason makes me wish my selfe a Beggar,
And so I am. Then crushing penurie,
Perswades me, I was better when a King:
Then am I king'd againe: and by and by,
Thinke that I am vn-king'd by Bullingbrooke,
And straight am nothing. But what ere I am, Musicke.
Nor I, nor any man, that but man is,
With nothing shall be pleas'd, till he be eas'd
With being nothing. Musicke do I heare?
Ha, ha! keepe time: How sowre sweet Musicke is,
When Time is broke, and no Proportion kept?
So is it in the Musicke of mens liues:
And heere haue I the daintinesse of eare,
To heare time broke in a disorder'd string:
But for the Concord of my State and Time,
Had not an eare to heare my true Time broke.
I wasted Time, and now doth Time waste me:
For now hath Time made me his numbring clocke;
My Thoughts, are minutes; and with Sighes they iarre,
Their watches on vnto mine eyes, the outward Watch,
Whereto my finger, like a Dialls point,
Is pointing still, in cleansing them from teares.
Now sir, the sound that tels what houre it is,
Are clamorous groanes, that strike vpon my heart,
Which is the bell: so Sighes, and Teares, and Groanes,
Shew Minutes, Houres, and Times: but my Time
Runs posting on, in Bullingbrookes proud ioy,
While I stand fooling heere, his iacke o'th' Clocke.
This Musicke mads me. Let it sound no more,
For though it haue helpe madmen to their wits,
In me it seemes, it will make wise-men mad:
Yet blessing on his heart that giues it me;
For 'tis a signe of loue and loue to Richard,
Is a strange Brooch, in this all hating world.

Enter Groome.

Groo. Hsile Royall Prince.
Rich. Thankes Noble Peere,
The cheapest of vs, is ten groates too deere.
What art thou? And how com'st thou hither?
Where no man euer comes, but that sad dogge
That brings me food, to make misfortune liue?
Groo. I was a poore Groome of thy Stable (King)
When thou wer't King: who trauelling towards Yorke,
With much adoo, at length haue gotten leaue
To looke vpon my (sometimes Royall) masters face.
O how it yern'd my heart, when I beheld
In London streets, that Coronation day,
When Bullingbrooke rode on Roane Barbary,
That horse, that thou so often hast bestrid,
That horse, that I so carefully haue dress'd.
Rich. Rode he on Barbary? Tell me gentle Friend,
How went he vnder him?
Groo. So proudly, as if he had disdain'd the ground.
Rich. So proud, that Bullingbrooke was on his backe;
That Iade hath eate bread from my Royall hand.
This hand hath made him proud with clapping him.
Would he not stumble? Would he not fall downe
(Since Pride must haue a fall) and breake the necke
Of that proud man, that did vsurpe his backe?
Forgiuenesse horse: Why do I raile on thee,
Since thou created to be aw'd by man
Was't borne to beare? I was not made a horse,

And

And yet I beare a burthen like an Asse,
Spur-gall'd, and tyred by iaunciug Bullingbrooke.

Enter Keeper with a Dish.

Keep. Fellow, give place, heere is no longer stay.

Rich. If thou loue me, 'tis time thou wer't away.

Gro. What my tongue dares not, that my heart shall say. Exeu.

Keep. My Lord, wilt please you to fall too?

Rich. Taste of it first, as thou wer't wont to doo.

Keep. My Lord I dare not: Sir Pierce of Exton,
Who lately came from th'King, commands the contrary.

Rich. The diuell take Henrie of Lancaster, and thee;
Patience is staie, and I am weary of it.

Keep. Helpe, helpe, helpe.

Enter Exton and Seruants.

Ri. How now? what meanes Death in this rude assalt?
Villaine, thine owne hand yeelds thy death's instrument.
Go thou and fill another roome in hell.

Exton strikes him downe.

That hand shall burne in never-quenching fist,
That staggers thus my person. Exton, thy fierce hand,
Hath with the Kings blood, stain'd the Kings own land.
Mount, mount my soule, thy seate is vp on high,
Whil'st my grosse flesh sinkes downward, heere to dye.

Exton. As full of Valor, as of Royall blood,
Both haue I spilt: Oh would the deed were good.
For now the diuell, that told me I did well,
Sayes, that this deede is chronicled in hell.
This dead King to the liuing King I'le beare,
Take hence the rest, and giue them buriall heere. Exit.

Scœna Quinta.

Flourish. Enter Bullingbrooke, Yorke, with other Lords & attendants.

Bul. Kinde Vnkle Yorke, the latest newes we heare,
Is that the Rebels haue consum'd with fire
Our Towne of Cicester in Gloucestershire,
But whether they be tane or slaine, we heare not.

Enter Northumberland.

Welcome my Lord: What is the newes?

Nor. First to thy Sacred State, with I all happinesse:
The next newes is, I haue to London sent
The heads of Salsbury, Spencer, Blunt, and Kent:
The manner of their taking may appeare
At large discoursed in this paper heere.

Bul. We thank thee gentle Percy for thy paines,
And to thy worth will adde right worthy gaines.

Enter Fitz-water.

Fitz. My Lord, I haue from Oxford sent to London,
The heads of Brocas, and Sir Bennet Seely,
Two of the dangerous conferred Traitors,
That sought at Oxford, thy dire ouerthrow.

Bul. Thy paines Fitzwaters shall not be forgot,
Right Noble is thy merit, well I wot.

Enter Percy and Carlile.

Per. The grand Conspirator, Abbot of Westminster,
With clog of Conscience, and sowre Melancholy,
Hath yeelded vp his body to the grane:
But heere is Carlile, liuing to abide
Thy Kingly doome, and sentence of his pride.

Bul. Carlile, this is your Doome:
Choose out some secret place, some reuerend roome
More then thou hast, and with it ioy thy life:
So as thou liu'st in peace, dye free from strife:
For though mine enemy thou hast ever beene,
High sparkes of Honor in thee haue I seene.

Enter Exton with a Coffin.

Exton. Great King, within this Coffin I present
Thy buried feare. Herein all breathlesse lies
The mightiest of thy greatest enemies
Richard of Burdeaux, by me hither brought.

Bul. Exton, I thanke thee not, for thou hast wrought
A deede of Slaughter, with thy fatall hand,
Vpon my head, and all this famous Land.

Ex. From your owne mouth my Lord, did I this deed.

Bul. They loue not poyson, that do poyson neede,
Nor do I thee: though I did wish him dead,
I hate the Murtherer, loue him murthered.
The guilt of conscience take thou for thy labour,
But neither my good word, nor Princely fauour.
With Cain go wander through the shade of night,
And never shew thy head by day, nor light.
Lords, I protest my soule is full of woe,
That blood should sprinkle me, to make me grow.
Come mourne with me, for that I do lament,
And put on sullen Blacke incontinent:
I'le make a voyage to the Holy-land,
To wash this blood off from my guilty hand.
March sadly after, grace my mourning heere,
In weeping after this untimely Beere. Exeunt.

FINIS.

The First Part of Henry the Fourth,
with the Life and Death of HENRY Sirnamed HOT-SPVRRE.

Actus Primus. Scæna Prima.

Enter the King, Lord John of Lancaster, Earle of Westmerland, with others.

King.

SO shaken as we are, so wan with care,
Finde we a time for frighted Peace to pant,
And breath shortwinded accents of new broils
To be commune'd in Stounds a-farre remote:
No more the thirsty entrance of this Soile,
Shall doubble her lippes with her owne childrens blood:
No more shall trenching Warre channell her fields,
Nor bruise her Flowrets with the Armed hoofes
Of hostile paces. Those opposed eyes,
Which like the Meteors of a troubled Heaven,
All of one Nature, of one Substance bred,
Did lately meete in the intestine shocke,
And furious close of civill Butchery,
Shall now in mutuall well-beseeming ranks
March all one way, and be no more oppos'd
Against Acquaintance, Kindred, and Allies.
The edge of Warre, like an ill-sheathed knife,
No more shall cut his Master. Therefore Friends,
As farre as to the Sepulcher of Christ,
Whose Souldier now vnder whose blessed Crosse
We are impressed and ingag'd to fight,
Forthwith a power of English shall we leuie,
Whose armes were moulded in their Mothers wombe,
To chace these Pagans in those holy Fields,
Ouer whose Acres walk'd those blessed feete
Which fourteene hundred yeares ago were nail'd
For our aduantage on the bitter Crosse.
But this our purpose is a twelvemonth old,
And bootlesse 'tis to tell you we will go:
Therefore we meete not now. Then let me heare
Of you my gentle Cousin Westmerland,
What yesternight our Councell did decree,
In forwarding this deere expedience.

West. My Liege: This haste was hot in question,
And many limits of the Charge set downe
But yesternight: when all athwart there came
A Post from Wales, loaden with heavy Newes;
Whose worst was, That the Noble Mortimer,
Leading the men of Herefordshire to fight
Against the vrregolar and wilde Glendower,
Was by the rude hands of that Welshmen taken,
And a thousand of his people butchered:
Vpon whose dead corpes there was such misuse,
Such beastly, shamelesse transformation,
By those Welshwomen done, as may not be (Without much shame) re-told or spoken of.

King. It seemes then, that the tidings of this broile,
Brake off our businesse for the Holy land.

West. This matcht with other like, my gracious Lord.
Farre more vneuen and vnwelcome Newes
Came from the North, and thus it did report:
On Holy-roode day, the gallant Hotspurre there,
Young Harry Percy, and brave Archibald,
That euer-valiant and approuued Scot,
At Holmedon met, where they did spend
A sad and bloody houre:
As by discharge of their Artillerie,
And shape of likely-hood the newes was told:
For he that brought them, in the very heate
And pride of their contention, did take horse,
Vncertaine of the issue any way.

King. Heere is a deere and true industrious friend,
Sir Walter Blunt, new lighted from his Horse,
Strain'd with the variation of each soyle,
Betwixt that Holmedon, and this Seat of ours:
And he hath brought vs smooth and welcome newes.
The Earle of Douglas is discomfited,
Ten thousand bold Scots, two and twenty Knights
Balk'd in their owne blood did Sir Walter see
On Holmedons Plaines. Of Prisoners, Hotspurre tooke
Mordake Earle of Fife, and eldest sonne
To beaten Douglas, and the Earle of Athol,
Of Murry, Angus, and Menteith.
And is not this an honourable spoyle?
A gallant prize? Ha Cosin, is it not? Infaith it is.

West. A Conquest for a Prince to boast of.

King. Yea, there thou makst me sad, & makst me sin,
In enuy, that my Lord Northumberland
Should be the Father of so blest a Sonne:
A Sonne, who is the Theame of Honors tongue;
Amongst a Grouse, the very straightest Plant,
Who is sweet Fortunes Minion, and her Pride:
Whilst I by looking on the praise of him,
See Ryot and Dishonor staine the brow
Of my yong Harry. O that it could be proo'd,
That some Night-tripping-Fairry, had exchang'd
In Cradle-clothes, our Children where they lay,
And call'd mine Percy, his Plantagenet:

Then would I haue his Harry, and he mine:
But let him from my thoughts. What thinke you Coze
Of this young Percies pride? The Prisoners
Which he in this aduenture hath surpriz'd,
To his owne vse he keepes, and sends me word
I shall haue none but Mordake Earle of Fife.

Worc. This is his Vncles teaching. This is Worcester
Malecolent to you in all Aspects:
Which makes him prune himselfe and bristle vp
The crest of Youth against your Dignity.

King. But I haue sent for him to answer this:
And for this cause a-while we must neglect
Our holy purpose to Ierusalem.
Cosin, on Wednesday next, our Councell we will hold
At Windsor, and so informe the Lords:
But come your selfe with speed to vs again,
For more is to be said, and to be done,
Then out of anger can be vttered.

Worc. I will my Liege. Exeunt

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Henry Prince of Wales, Sir Iohn Falstaffe, and Poinz.

Fal. Now Hal, what time of day is it Lad?

Prince Thou art so fat-witted with drinking of olde Sacke, and vnbuttoning thee after Supper, and sleeping vpon Benches in the afternoone, that thou hast forgotten to demand that truely, which thou wouldest truly know. What a diuell hast thou to do with the time of the day? vnlesse hours were cups of Sacke, and minutes Capons, and clockes the tongues of Bawdes, and dials the signes of Leaping-houses, and the blessed Sunne himselfe a faire hot Wench in Flame-coloured Taffata; I see no reason, why thou shouldest bee so superfluous, to demand the time of the day.

Fal. Indeed you come neere me now Hal, for we that take Purses, go by the Moone and seuen Starres, and not by Phœbus hee, that wand'ring Knight so faire. And I prythee sweet Wagge, when thou art King, as God saue thy Grace, Maiesty I should say, for Grace thou wilt haue none.

Prin What, none?

Fal. No, not so much as will serue to be Prologue to an Egge and Butter.

Prin. Well, how then? Come roundly, roundly.

Fal. Marry then, sweet Wagge, when thou art King, let not vs that are Squires of the Nights bodie, bee call'd Theeues of the Dayes beautie. Let vs be Dunnes Forresters, Gentlemen of the Shade. Minions of the Moone; and let men say, we be men of good Gouernment, being gouerned as the Sea is, by our noble and chast mistris the Moone, vnder whose countenance we steale.

Prin. Thou say'st well, and it holds well too: for the fortune of vs that are the Moones men, doth ebbe and flow like the Sea, being gouerned as the Sea is, by the Moone: as for proofe. Now a Purse of Gold most resolutely snatch'd on Monday night, and most dissolutely spent on Tuesday Morning; got with swearing, Lay by: and spent with crying, Bring in: now, in as low an ebbe as the foot of the Ladder, and by and by in as high a flow as the ridge of the Gallowes.

Fal. Thou say'st true Lad: and is not my Hostesse of the Tauerne a most sweet Wench?

Prin. As the hony, my old Lad of the Castle: and is not a Buffe Ierkin a most sweet robe of durance?

Fal. How now? how now mad Wagge? What in thy quips and thy quiddities? What a plague haue I to doe with a Buffe-Ierkin?

Prin. Why, what a poxe haue I to doe with my Hostesse of the Tauerne?

Fal. Well, thou hast call'd her to a reckning many a time and oft.

Prin. Did I euer call for thee to pay thy part?

Fal. No, I'le giue thee thy doe, thou hast paid al there.

Prin. Yea and elsewhere, so farre as my Coine would stretch, and where it would not, I haue vs'd my credit.

Fal. Yea, and so vs'd it, that were it heere apparant, that thou art Heire apparant. But I prythee sweet Wag, shall there be Gallowes standing in England when thou art King? and resolution thus fobb'd as it is, with the rustie curbe of old Father Antick the Law? Doe not thou when thou art a King, hang a Theefe.

Prin. No, thou shalt.

Fal. Shall I? O rare! I'le be a braue Iudge.

Prin. Thou iudgest false already. I meane, thou shalt haue the hanging of the Theeues, and so become a rare Hangman.

Fal. Well Hal, well: and in some sort it iumpes with my humour, as well as waiting in the Court, I can tell you.

Prin. For obtaining of suites?

Fal. Yea, for obtaining of suites, whereof the Hangman hath no leane Wardrobe. I am as Melancholly as a Gyb-Cat, or a lugg'd Beare.

Prin. Or an old Lyon, or a Louers Lute.

Fal. Yea, or the Drone of a Lincolnshire Bagpipe.

Prin. What say'st thou to a Hare, or the Melancholly of Moore Ditch?

Fal. Thou hast the most vnsauoury similes, and art indeed the most comparatiue rascallest sweet young Prince. But Hal, I prythee trouble me no more with vanity. I wold thou and I knew, where a Commodity of good names were to be bought: an olde Lord of the Councell rated me the other day in the street about you sir; but I mark'd him not, and yet he talk'd very wisely, but I regarded him not, and yet he talk'd wisely, and in the street too.

Prin. Thou dids't well: for no man regards it.

Fal. O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeede able to corrupt a Saint. Thou hast done much harme vnto me Hal, God forgiue thee for it. Before I knew thee Hal, I knew nothing; and now I am (if a man should speake truly) little better then one of the wicked. I must giue ouer this life, and I will giue it ouer: and I do not, I am a Villaine. I'le be damn'd for neuer a King's sonne in Christendome.

Prin. Where shall we take a purse to morrow, Iacke?

Fal. Where thou wilt Lad, I'le make one: and I doe not, call me Villaine, and baffle me.

Prin. I see a good amendment of life in thee: From Praying, to Purse-taking.

Fal. Why, Hal, 'tis my Vocation Hal: 'Tis no sin for a man to labour in his Vocation.

Poinz. Now shall wee know if Gads hill haue set a Watch. O, if men were to be saued by merit, what hole in Hell were hot enough for him? This is the most omnipotent Villaine, that euer cryed, Stand, to a true man.

Prin. Good morrow Ned.

Poinz.

Poins. Good morrow sweet Hal. What sayes Monsieur Remorse? What sayes Sir Iohn Sacke and Sugar: Iacke? How agrees the Diuell and thee about thy Soule, that thou soldest him on Good-Friday last, for a Cup of Madera, and a cold Capon's legge?

Prin. Sir Iohn stands to his word, the diuel shall haue his bargaine, for he was neuer yet a Breaker of Prouerbs: He will giue the diuell his due.

Poin. Then art thou damn'd for keeping thy word with the diuell.

Prin. Else he had damn'd for cozening the diuell.

Poy. But my Lads, my Lads, to morrow morning, by foure a clocke early at Gads hill, there are Pilgrimes going to Canterbury with rich Offerings, and Traders riding to London with fat Purses. I haue vizards for you all; you haue horses for your selues: Gads-hill lyes to night in Rochester, I haue bespoke Supper to morrow in Eastcheape; we may doe it as secure as sleepe: if you will go, I will stuffe your Purses full of Crownes: if you will not, tarry at home and be hang'd.

Fal. Heare ye Yedward, if I tarry at home and go not, Ile hang you for going.

Poy. You will chops.

Fal. Hal, wilt thou make one?

Prin. Who, I rob? I a Theefe? Not I.

Fal. There's neither honesty, manhood, nor good fellowship in thee, nor thou cam'st not of the blood-royall, if thou dar'st not stand for ten shillings.

Prin. Well then, once in my dayes Ile be a mad-cap.

Fal. Why, that's well said.

Prin. Well, come what will, Ile tarry at home.

Fal. Ile be a Traitor then, when thou art King.

Prin. I care not.

Poyn. Sir Iohn, I prythee leaue the Prince & me alone, I will lay him downe such reasons for this aduenture, that he shall go.

Fal. Well, maist thou haue the Spirit of perswasion; and he the eares of profiting, that what thou speakest, may moue; and what he heares may be beleeued, that the true Prince, may (for recreation sake) prouse a false theefe; for the poore abuses of the time, want countenance. Farewell, you shall finde me in Eastcheape.

Prin. Farewell the latter Spring. Farewell Allhallown Summer.

Poy. Now, my good sweet Hony Lord, ride with vs to morrow. I haue a sett to execute, that I cannot manage alone. Falstaffe, Harny, Rossill, and Gads-hill, shall robbe those men that wee haue already way-layde, your selfe and I, will not be there: and when they haue the booty, if you and I do not rob them, cut this head from my shoulders.

Poins. But how shal we part with them in setting forth?

Poyn. Why, we will set forth before or after them, and appoint them a place of meeting, wherin it is at our pleasure to faile; and then will they aduenture vppon the exploit themselues, which they shall haue no sooner atchieued, but wee'l set vpon them.

Prin. I, but tis like that they will know vs by our horses, by our habits, and by every other appointment to be our selues.

Poy. Tut our horses they shall not see, Ile tye them in the wood, our vizards wee will change after wee leaue them: and sirrah, I haue Cases of Buckram for the nonce, to immaske our noted outward garments.

Prin. But I doubt they will be too hard for vs.

Poin. Well, for two of them, I know them to bee as true bred Cowards as euer turn'd backe: and for the third if he fight longer then he sees reason, Ile forswear Armes. The vertue of this Iest will be, the incomprehensible lyes that this fat Rogue will tell vs, when we meete at Supper: how thirty at least he fought with, what Wardes, what blowes, what extremities he endured; and in the reproofe of this, lyes the Iest.

Prin. Well, Ile goe with thee, prouide vs all things necessary, and meete me to morrow night in Eastcheape, there Ile sup. Farewell.

Poyn. Farewell, my Lord. Exit Poinz.

Prin. I know you all, and will a-while vphold
The vnyoak'd humor of your idlenesse:
Yet herein will I imitate the Sunne,
Who doth permit the base contagious cloudes
To smother vp his Beauty from the world,
That when he please againe to be himselfe,
Being wanted, he may be more wondred at,
By breaking through the foule and vgly mists
Of vapours, that did seeme to strangle him.
If all the yeare were playing holidaies,
To sport, would be as tedious as to worke;
But when they seldome come, they wisht-for come,
And nothing pleaseth but rare accidents.
So when this loose behaiour I throw off,
And pay the debt I never promised;
By how much better then my word I am,
By so much shall I falsifie mens hopes,
And like bright Metall on a sullen ground;
My reformation glittering o're my fault,
Shall shew more goodly, and attract more eyes,
Then that which hath no foyle to set it off.
Ile so offend, to make offence a skill,
Redeeming time, when men think least I will.

Scœna Tertia.

Enter the King, Northumberland, Worcester, Hotspurre, Sir Walter Blunt, and others.

King. My blood hath beene too cold and temperate,
Vnapt to stirre at these indignities,
And you haue found me; for accordingly,
You tread vpon my patience: But be sure,
I will from henceforth rather be my Selfe,
Mighty, and to be fear'd, then my condition
Which hath beene smooth as Oyle, soft as yong Downe,
And therefore lost that Title of respect,
Which the proud soule ne're payes, but to the proud.

Wor. Our house (my Soueraigne Liege) little deserues
The scourge of greatnesse to be vsed on it,
And that same greatnesse too, which our owne hands
Haue holpe to make so portly.

Nor. My Lord.

King. Worcester get thee gone: for I do see
Danger and disobedience in thine eye.
O sir, your presence is too bold and peremptory,
And Maiestie might never yet endure
The moody Frontier of a seruant brow,
You haue good leaue to leaue vs. When we need
Your vse and counsell, we shall send for you.
You were about to speake.

North. Yea, my good Lord.

Those

Those Prisoners in your Highnesse demanded,
Which Harry Percy here at Holmedon tooke,
Were (as he sayes) not with such strength denied
As was delivered to your Maiesty:
Who either through envy, or misprision,
Was guilty of this fault; and not my Sonne.

Hot. My Liege, I did deny no Prisoners.
But, I remember when the fight was done,
When I was dry with Rage, and extreame Toyle,
Breathless, and faint, leaning vpon my Sword,
Came there a certaine Lord, neat, and trimly dress'd
Fresh as a Bride-groome, and his Chin new reapt,
Shew'd like a stubble Land at Marsh-tide home.
He was perfumed like a Mulliner,
And 'twixt his Finger and his Thumbe, he held
A Pouncet-box: which ever and anon
He gave his Nose, and took't away again:
Who therewith angry, when it next came there,
Tooke it in Snuffe. And still he smil'd and talk'd:
And as the Souldiers bare dead bodies by,
He call'd them untaught Knaves, Vnmannerly,
To bring a slovenly vnhandsome Corse
Betwixt the Wind, and his Nobility.
With many Holiday, and Lady terme
He question'd me: Among the rest, demanded
My Prisoners, in your Maiesties behalfe.
I then, all-smarting, with my wounds being cold,
(To be so pestered with a Popinjay)
Out of my Grosse, and my Impatience,
Answer'd (neglectingly) I know not what,
He should, or should not: For he made me mad,
To see him shake so briske, and smell so sweet,
And talke so like a Waiting-Gentlewoman,
Of Guns, & Drums, and Wounds; God save the mark;
And telling me, the Soueraign'st thing on earth
Was Parmacity, for an inward bruise:
And that it was great pity, so it was,
That villanous Salt-peter should be digg'd
Out of the Bowels of the harmlesse Earth,
Which many a good Tall Fellow had destroy'd
So Cowardly. And but for these vile Guynes,
He would himselfe have beene a Souldier.
This bald, vnioynted Chat of his (my Lord)
Made me to answer indirectly (as I said)
And I beseech you, let not this report
Come current for an Accusation,
Betwixt my Loue, and your high Maiesty.

Blunt. The circumstance considered, good my Lord,
What ever Harry Percie then had said,
To such a person, and in such a place,
At such a time, with all the rest reuold,
May reasonably dye, and never rise
To do him wrong, or any way impeach
What then he said, so he vnsay it now.

King. Why yet doth deny his Prisoners,
But with Proviso and Exception,
That we at our owne charge, shall ransome straight
His Brother-in-Law, the foolish Mortimer,
Who (in my soule) hath wilfully betraid
The lives of those, that he did lead to Fight,
Against the great Magician, damn'd Glendower,
Whose daughter (as we heare) the Earle of March
Hath lately married. Shall our Coffers then,
Be emptied, to redeeme a Traitor home?
Shall we buy Treason, and indeed with Feare,
When they have left and forfeited themselves.
No: on the barren Mountaines let him starve:
For I shall never hold that man my Friend,
Whose tongue shall ake me for one penny cost
To ransome home revolted Mortimer.

Hot. Revolted Mortimer?
He never did fall off, my Soueraigne Liege,
But by the chance of Warre: to prove that true,
Needs no more but one tongue. For all those Wounds,
Those mouthed Wounds, which valiantly he scorne,
When on the gentle Seuernes sedgie banke,
In single Opposition hand to hand,
He did confound the best part of an houre
In changing hardiment with great Glendower:
Three times they breath'd, and three times did they drink
Vpon agreement, of swift Sperrans flood;
Who then affrighted with their bloody looks,
Ran fearefully among the trembling Reeds,
And hid his crispe-head in the hollow banke,
Blood-stained with these Valiant Combatants.
Never did base and coward Policy
Colour her working with such deadly wounds;
Nor never could the Noble Mortimer
Receive so many, and all willingly:
Then let him not be slandred with Revolt.

King. Thou dost belie him Percy, thou dost belie him,
He never did encounter with Glendower:
I tell thee, he durst as well have met the diuell alone,
As Owen Glendower for an enemy.
Art thou not asham'd? But Sirrah, henceforth
Let me not heare you speake of Mortimer.
Send me your Prisoners with the speediest meanes,
Or you shall heare in such a kinde from me
As will displease ye. My Lord Northumberland,
We License your departure with your sonne.
Send vs your Prisoners, or you'l heare of it. Exit King.

Hot. And if the diuell come and roare for them
I will not send them. I will after straight
And tell him so: for I will ease my heart,
Although it be with hazard of my head.

Nor. What? drinke with choller? stay & pause awhile,
Heere comes your Vncle. Enter Worcester.

Hot. Speake of Mortimer?
Yes, I will speake of him, and let my soule
Want mercy, if I do not joyne with him.
In his behalfe, I'le empty all these Veines,
And shed my deere blood drop by drop i'th dust,
But I will lift the downfall Mortimer
As high i'th Ayre, as this Vnthankfull King,
As this Ingrate and Canker'd Bullingbrooke.

Nor. Brother, the King hath made your Nephew mad.

Wor. Who struck this heate vp after I was gone?

Hot. He will (forsooth) have all my Prisoners;
And when I vrg'd the ransome once again
Of my Wiues Brother, then his cheeke look'd pale,
And on my face he turn'd an eye of death,
Trembling even at the name of Mortimer.

Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd
By Richard that dead is, the next of blood?

Nor. He was: I heard the Proclamation,
And then it was, when the vnhappy King
(Whose wrongs in vs God pardon) did set forth
Vpon his Irish Expedition:
From whence he intercepted, did returne
To be depos'd, and shortly murthered.

Wor. And for whose death, we in the worlde wide mouth
Lives scandalis'd, and foulely spoken of.

Hot. But soft I pray you; did King Richard then
Proclaime my brother Mortimer,
Heyre to the Crowne?
Nor. He did, my selfe did heere it.
Hot. Nay then I cannot blame his Cousin King,
That wish'd him on the barren Mountaines stare'd.
But shall it be, that you that set the Crowne
Vpon the head of this forgetfull man,
And for his sake, wore the detested blot
Of murtherous subornation? Shall'it be,
That you a world of curses undergoe,
Being the Agents, or base second meanes,
The Cords, the Ladder, or the Hangman rather?
O pardon, if that I descend so low,
To shew the Line, and the Predicament
Wherein you range vnder this subtill King.
Shall it for shame, be spoken in these dayes,
Or fill vp Chronicles in time to come,
That men of your Nobility and Power,
Did gage them both in an vniust behalfe
(As Both of you, God pardon it, haue done)
To put downe Richard, that sweet lovely Rose,
And plant this Thorne, this Canker Bullingbrooke?
And shall it in more shame be further spoken,
That you are fool'd, discarded, and shooke off
By him, for whom these shames ye vnderwent?
No: yet time serues, wherein you may redeeme
Your banish'd Honors, and restore your selues
Into the good Thoughts of the world againe.
Reuenge the geering and disdain'd contempt
Of this proud King, who studies day and night
To answer all the Debt he owes vnto you,
Even with the bloody Payment of your deaths:
Therefore I say———
Wor. Peace Cousin, say no more.
And now I will vnclasp a Secret booke,
And to your quicke conceiving Discontents,
Ile reade you Matter, deepe and dangerous,
As full of perill and aduenturous Spirit,
As to o're-walke a Current, roaring loud
On the vnstedfast footing of a Speare.
Hot. If he fall in, good night, or sinke or swimme:
Send danger from the East vnto the West,
So Honor crosse it from the North to South,
And let them grapple: The blood more stirres
To rouse a Lyon, then to start a Hare.
Nor. Imagination of some great exploit,
Driues him beyond the bounds of Patience.
Hot. By heaven, me thinkes it were an easie leap,
To pluckle bright Honor from the pale-fac'd Moone,
Or diue into the bottome of the deepe,
Where Fadome-line could never touch the ground,
And plucke vp drowned Honor by the Locks:
So he that doth redeeme her thence, might weare
Without Co-riuall, all her Dignities:
But out vpon this half-fac'd Fellowship.
Wor. He apprehends a World of Feares heere,
But not the forme of what he should attend:
Good Cousin giue me audience for a-while,
And lift to me.
Hot. I cry you mercy.
Wor. Those same Noble Scottes
That are your Prisoners.
Hot. Ile keepe them all.
By heaven, he shall not haue a Scot of them:
No if a Scot would saue his Soule, he shall not.
Ile keepe them, by this Hand.
Wor. You start away,
And lend no eare vnto my purposes.
Those Prisoners you shall keepe.
Hot. Nay, I will; that's flat:
He said, he would not ransome Mortimer:
Forbad my tongue to speake of Mortimer.
But I will finde him when he lyes asleepe,
And in his eare, Ile hollo Mortimer.
Nay, Ile haue a Starling shall be taught to speake
Nothing but Mortimer, and giue it him,
To keepe his anger still in motion.
Wor. Heare you Cousin: a word.
Hot. All studies heere I solemnly defie,
Save how to gall and pinch this Bullingbrooke,
And that same Sword and Buckler Prince of Wales.
But that I thinke his Father loues him not,
And would be glad he met with some mischance,
I would haue poyson'd him with a pot of Ale.
Wor. Farewell Kinsman: Ile talke to you
When you are better temper'd to attend.
Nor. Why what a Wasp-tongu'd & impatient foole
Art thou, to breake into this Woman's mood,
Tying thine eare to no tongue but thine owne?
Hot. Why look you, I am whipt & scoung'd with rods,
Netled, and stung with Pismires, when I heare
Of this vile Politician Bullingbrooke.
In Richards time: What do'ye call the place?
A plagues vpon't, it is in Gloucestershire:
'Twas, where the madcap Duke his Vncle kept,
His Vncle Yorke, where I first bow'd my knee
Vnto this King of Smiles, this Bullingbrooke:
When you and he came backe from Ramesburgh.
Nor. At Berkley Castle.
Hot. You say true:
Why what a candle-dazle of curtesie,
This fawning Grey-hound then did proffer me.
Looke when his infant Fortune came to age,
And gentle Harry Percy, and kinde Cousin:
O, the Diuell take such Cozeners, God forgiue me,
Good Vncle tell your tale, for I haue done.
Wor. Nay, if you haue not, too't again,
We'l stay your leysure.
Hot. I haue done insooth.
Wor. Then once more to your Scottish Prisoners.
Deliuer them vp without their ransome straight,
And make the Douglas sonne your only meane
For powers in Scotland: which for diuers reasons
Which I shall send you written, be assur'd
Will easily be granted you, my Lord.
Your Sonne in Scotland being thus emp l y'd,
Shall secretly into the bosome creepe
Of that same noble Prelate, well belou'd,
The Archbishop.
Hot. Of Yorke, is't not?
Wor. True, who beares hard
His Brothers death at Bristow, the Lord Scroop.
I speake not this in estimation,
As what I thinke might be, but what I know
Is ruminated, plotted, and set downe,
And only stayes but to behold the face
Of that occasion that shall bring it on.
Hot. I smell it:
Vpon my life, it will do wond'rous well.
Nor. Before the game's a-foot, thou still let'st slip.
Hot. Why, it cannot choose but be a Noble plot.

And

And then the power of Scotland, and of Yorke
To joyne with Mortimer, Ha.
Wor. And so they shall.
Hot. Infaith it is exceedingly well aym'd.
Wor. And 'tis no little reason bids vs speed,
To save our heads, by raising of a Head:
For, beare our selues as euen as we can,
The King will always thinke him in our debt,
And think, we think our selues satisfied,
Till he hath found a time to pay vs home.
And see already, how he doth beginne
To make vs strangers to his lookes of loue.
Hot. He does, he does; we'l be reuenge'd on him.
Wor. Cousin, farewell. No further go in this,
Then I by Letters shall direct your course
When time is ripe, which will be sodainly:
I'le steale to Glendower, and lo, Mortimer,
Where you, and Douglas, and our powres at once,
As I will fashion it, shall happily meete,
To beare our fortunes in our owne strong armes,
Which now we hold at much vncertainty.
Nor. Farewell good Brother, we shall thriue, I trust.
Hot. Vncle, adieu: O let the houres be short,
Till fields, and blowes, and groanes, applaud our sport. exeunt

Actus Secundus. Scena Prima.

Enter a Carrier with a Lanthorne in his hand.

1. Car. High-ho, an't be not foure by the day, I'le be hang'd. Charles-wane is ouer the new Chimney, and yet our horse not packt. What Ostler?

Ost. Anon, anon.

1. Car. I prethee Tom, beate Cuts Saddle, put a few Flocks in the point: the poore Iades is wrung in the withers, out of all cesse.

Enter another Carrier.

2. Car. Pease and Beanes are as danke here as a Dog, and this is the next way to giue poore Iades the Bo tes: This house is turned vpside downe since Robin the Ostler dyed.

1. Car. Poore fellow never ioy'd since the price of oats rose, it was the death of him.

2. Car. I thinke that is the most villanous house in al London rode for Fleas: I am stung like a Tench.

1. Car. Like a Tench? There is ne're a King in Christendome, could be better bit, then I haue beene since the first Cocks.

2. Car. Why, you will allow vs ne're a Iourdan, and then we leake in your Chimney: and your Chamber-lye breeds Fleas like a Loach.

1. Car. What Ostler, come away, and be hang'd: come away.

2. Car. I haue a Gammon of Bacon, and two razes of Ginger, to be delivered as farre as Charing-crosse.

1. Car. The Turkies in my Pannier are quite starved. What Ostler? A plague on thee, hast thou never an eye in thy head? Can'st not heare? And t'were not as good a deed as drinke, to break the pate of thee, I am a very Villaine. Come and be hang'd, hast no faith in thee?

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Good-morrow Carriers. What's a clocke?

Car. I thinke it be two a clocke.

Gad. I prethee lend me thy Lanthorne to see my Gelding in the stable.

1. Car. Nay soft I pray ye, I know a trick worth two of that.

Gad. I prethee lend me thine.

2. Car. I, when, canst tell? Lend mee thy Lanthorne (quoth a) marry I'le see thee hang'd first.

Gad. Sirra Carrier: What time do you mean to come to London?

2. Car. Time enough to goe to bed with a Candle, I warrant thee. Come neighbour Mugges, we'll call vp the Gentlemen, they will along with company, for they haue great charge. Exeunt

Enter Chamberlaine.

Gad. What ho, Chamberlaine?

Cham. At hand quoth Pick-purse.

Gad. That's euen as faire, as at hand quoth the Chamberlaine: For thou variest no more from picking of Purses, then giuing direction, doth from labouring. Thou lay'st the plot, how.

Cham. Good morrow Master Gads-Hill, it holds current that I told you yesternight. There's a Franklin in the wilde of Kent, hath brought three hundred Markes with him in Gold: I heard him tell it to one of his company last night at Supper; a kinde of Auditor, one that hath abundance of charge too (God knowes what) they are vp already, and call for Eggs and Butter. They will away presently.

Gad. Sirra, if they meete not with S. Nicholas Clarks, I'le giue thee this neckie.

Cham. No, I'le none of it: I prythee keep that for the Hangman, for I know thou worshipst S. Nicholas as truly as a man of falshood may.

Gad. What talkest thou to me of the Hangman? If I hang, I'le make a fat payre of Gallowes. For, if I hang, old Sir Iohn hangs with me, and thou know'st he's no Starueling. Tut, there are other Troians that I dream't not of, the which (for sport sake) are content to doe the Profession some grace; that would (if matters should bee look'd into) for their owne Credit sake, make all whole. I am ioyned with no Foot-land-Rakers, no Long-staffe six-penny strikers, none of these mad Mustachio-purple-hu'd Maltworms, but with Nobility, and Tranquillity; Bourgomasters, and great Oneyers, such as can hold in, such as will strike sooner then speake; and speake sooner then drinke, and drinke sooner then pray: and yet I lye, for they pray continually vnto their Saint the Commonwealth; or rather, not to pray to her, but prey on her for they ride vp & downe on her, and make her their Boots.

Cham. What, the Commonwealth their Boots? Will she hold out water in foule way?

Gad. She will, she will; Iustice hath liquor'd her. We steale as in a Castle, cockfure: we haue the recete of Fernseede, we walke invisible.

Cham. Nay, I thinke rather, you are more beholding to the Night, then to the Fernseed, for your walking invisible.

Gad. Give me thy hand
Thou shalt haue a share in our purpose.
As I am a true man.

Cham. Nay, rather let mee haue it, as you are a false Theefe.

Gad. Goe too: Homo is a common name to all men. Bid the Ostler bring the Gelding out of the stable. Farewell, ye muddy Kaue. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter Prince, Poynes, and Peto.

Poines. Come shelter, shelter, I have remounted Falstaffs Horse, and he frets like a gum'd Velvet.

Prin. Stand close.

Enter Falstaff.

Fal. Poines, Poines, and be hang'd Poines.

Prin. Peace ye fat-kidney'd Rascall, what a brawling dost thou keepe

Fal. What Poines. Hal?

Prin. He is walk'd up to the top of the hill, I'le go seek him.

Fal. I am accurst to rob in that Theefe company: that Rascall hath removed my Horse, and tied him I know not where. If I travell but foure foot by the Squire further a foote, I shall breake my winde. Well, I doubt not but to dye a faire death for all this, if I scape hanging for killing that Rogue. Those forswore his company hourely any time this two and twenty yeere, & yet I am bewitch'd with the Rogues company. If the Rascall have not given me medicines to make me love him, I'le be hang'd; it could not be else: I have drunke Medicines. Poines, Hal, a Plague upon you both. Bardolph, Peto: I'le starve ere I rob a foote further. And 'twere not as good a deede as to drinke, to turne True-man, and to leave these Rogues, I am the verriest Varlet that ever chewed with a Tooth. Eight yards of uneven ground, is threescore & ten miles afoot with me: and the stony-hearted Villaines know it well enough. A plague upon't, when Theeves cannot be true one to another. They whistle.

Whew: a plague light upon you all. Give my Horse you Rogues: give me my Horse, and be hang'd.

Prin. Peace ye fat guttes, lye downe, lay thine eare close to the ground, and lift if thou can heare the tread of Travellers.

Fal. Have you any Levers to lift me up again being downe? He not beare mine owne flesh so far afoot again, for all the coine in thy Fathers Exchequer. What a plague meane ye to colt me thus?

Prin. Thou lyest, thou art not colted, thou art uncolted.

Fal. I prethee good Prince Hal, help me to my horse, good Kings sonne.

Prin. Out you Rogue, shall I be your Ostler?

Fal. Go hang thy selfe in thine owne heire-apparent-Garters: If I be ta'ne, I'le peach for this: and I have not Ballads made on all, and sung to filthy tunes, let a Cup of Sacke be my poyson: when a jest is so forward, & a foote too, I hate it

Enter Gads-hill.

Gad. Stand.

Fal. So I do against my will.

Poin. O 'tis our Setter, I know his voyce.

Bardolfe, what newes?

Bar. Case ye, case ye; on with your Vizards, there's money of the Kings comming downe the hill, 'tis going to the Kings Exchequer.

Fal. You lie you rogue, 'tis going to the Kings Tuzzen.

Gad. There's enough to make us all.

Fal. To be hang'd.

Prin. You foure shall front them in the narrow Lane: Ned and I, will walke lower; if they scape from your encounter, then they light on us.

Peto. But how many be of them?

Gad. Some eight or ten.

Fal. Will they not rob us?

Prin. What, a Coward Sir John Paunch?

Fal. Indeed I am not John of Gaunt your Grandfather; but yet no Coward, Hal.

Prin. We'l leave that to the proofe.

Poin. Sirra Jacke, thy horse stands behinde the hedge, when thou need'st him, there thou shalt finde him. Farewell, and stand fast.

Fal. Now cannot I strike him, if I should be hang'd.

Prin. Ned, where are our disguises?

Poin. Heere hard by: Stand close.

Fal. Now my Masters, happy man be his dole, say I: every man to his business.

Enter Travellers.

Tra. Come Neighbor: the boy shall leade our Horses downe the hill: We'l walke a-foot awhile, and ease our Legges.

Theeves. Stay.

Tra. Jesu blesse us.

Fal. Strike; down with them, cut the villains throates; a whorson Caterpillars. Bacon-fed Knaves, they hate us youth; downe with them, fleece them.

Tra. O, we are undone, both we and ours for ever.

Fal. Hang ye gorbellied knaves, are you undone? No ye Fat Chuffes, I would your store were heere. On Bacons on, what ye knaves? Yong men must live, you see Grand lorrers, are ye? We'l use ye sfaith.

Heere they rob them, and bonde them. Enter the Prince and Poynes.

Prin. The Theeves have bound the True-men: Now could thou and I rob the Theeves, and go merrily to London, it would be argument for a Weeke, Laughter for a Moneth, and a good jest for ever Poynes. Stand close, I heare them comming.

Enter Theeves again.

Fal. Come my Mosters, let us share, and then to bedde before day: and the Prince and Poynes bee not two arrand Cowards, there's no equity stirring. There's no more valour in that Poynes, than in a wilde Duche.

Prin. Your money.

Poin. Villaines.

All they are sharing, the Prince and Poynes fall upon them.

They all run away, leaving the booty behind them.

Prince. Got with much ease. Now merrily to Horse: The Theeves are scattered, and possest with fear so strangely, that they dare not meet each other: each takes his fellow for an Officer. Away good Ned. Falstaff sweates to death, and Lards the leane earth as he walkes along: wer't not for laughing, I should pitty him.

Poin. How the Rogue roar'd. Exeunt.

Scæna Tertia.

Enter Hotspurre solus, reading a Letter.

But for mine own part, my Lord, I could be well contented to be there, in respect of the loue I beare your house.

He

He could be contented: Why is he not then? in respect of the loue he beares our house. He shewes in this, he loues his owne Barne better then he loues our house. Let me see some more. The purpose you vndertake is dangerous. Why that's certaine: 'Tis dangerous to take a Colde, to sleepe, to drinke: but I tell you (my Lord foole) out of this Nettle, Danger; we pluske this Flower, Safety. The purpose you vndertake is dangerous, the Friends you haue named vncertaine, the Time it selfe vnsorted, and your whole Plot too light, for the counterpoise of so great an Opposition. Say you so, say you so: I say vnto you againe, you are a shallow cowardly Hinde, and you Lye. What a lacke-brainesse this? I protest, our plot is as good a plot as euer was laid; our Friend true and constant: A good Plotte, good Friends, and full of expectation: An excellent plot, very good Friends. What a Frosty-spirited rogue is this? Why, my Lord of Yorke commends the plot, and the generall course of the action. By this hand, if I were now by this Rascall, I could braine him with his Ladies Fan. Is there not my Father, my Vncle, and my Selfe, Lord Edmund Mortimer, my Lord of Yorke, and Owen Glendower? Is there not besides, the Douglas? Haue I not all their letters, to meete me in Armes by the ninth of the next Moneth? and are they not some of them set forward already? What a Pagan Rascall is this? An Infidell. Ha, you shall see now in very sincerity of Feare and Cold heart, will he to the King, and lay open all our proceedings. O, I could diuide my selfe, and go to buffets, for mouing such a dish of skimd Milk with so honourable an Action. Hang him, let him tell the King we are prepared. I will set forwards to night.

Enter his Lady.

How now Kate, I must leaue you within these two hours.

La. O my good Lord, why are you thus alone?
For what offence haue I this fortnight bin
A banish'd woman from my Harriet bed?
Tell me (sweet Lord) what is't that takes from thee
Thy stomacke, pleasure, and thy golden sleepe?
Why dost thou bend thine eyes vpon the earth?
And start so often when thou sit'st alone?
Why hast thou lost the fresh blood in thy cheekes?
And giuen my Treasures and my rights of thee,
To thicke-ey'd musing, and curst melancholly
In my saint-slumbers, I by thee haue watcht,
And heard thee murmure tales of Iron Wares;
Speake terrmes of manage to thy bounding Steed,
Cry courage to the field. And thou hast talk'd
Of Sallies, and Retires; Trenches, Tents,
Of Palizadoes, Frontiers, Parapets,
Of Basilisks, of Canon, Culuerin,
Of Prisoners ransome, and of Souldiers slaine,
And all the current of a headdy fight.
Thy spirit within thee hath beene so at Warre,
And thus hath so bestirr'd thee in thy sleepe,
That beds of sweate hath stood vpon thy Brow,
Like bubbles in a late-disturbed Streame;
And in thy face strange motions haue appear'd,
Such as we see when men restraine their breath
On some great sodaine hast. O what portents are these?
Some heauie business hath my Lord in hand,
And I must know it: else he loues me not.

Hot. What ho; Is Gillians with the Packet gone?

Ser. He is my Lord, an houre agone.

Hot. Hath Butler brought those horses fro the Sheriffe?

Ser. One horse, my Lord, he brought euen now.

Hot. What Horse? A Roane, a crop eare, is it not.

Ser. It is my Lord.

Hot. That Roane shall be my Throne. Well, I will backe him straight. Esperance, bid Butler lead him forth into the Parke.

La. But heare you, my Lord.

Hot. What say'st thou my Lady?

La. What is it carries you away?

Hot. Why, my horse (my Loue) my horse.

La. Out you mad-headed Ape, a Weazell hath not such a deale of Spleene, as you are tost with. In sooth I'le know your businesse Harry, that I will. I feare my Brother Mortimer doth stirre about his Title, and hath sent for you to line his enterprise. But if you go———

Hot. So farre a foot, I shall be weary, Loue.

La. Come, come, you Paraquito, answer me directly vnto this question, that I shall aske. Indeede I'le breake thy little finger Harry, if thou wilt not tell me true.

Hot. Away, away you trifler: Loue, I loue thee not,
I care not for thee Kate: this is no world
To play with Mammets, and to tilt with lips.
We must haue bloodie Noses, and crack'd Crownes,
And passe them current too. Gods me, my horse.
What say'st thou Kate? what wold'st thou haue with me?

La. Do ye not loue me? Do ye not indeed?
Well, do not then. For since you loue me not
I will not loue my selfe. Do you not loue me?
Nay, tell me if thou speak'st in iest or no.

Hot. Come, wilt thou see me ride?
And when I am a horseback, I will sweare
I loue thee infinitely. But hearke you Kate,
I must not haue you henceforth, question me,
Whether I go: nor reason whereabout.
Whether I must, I must: and to conclude,
This Euening must I leaue thee, gentle Kate.
I know you wise, but yet no further wise
Then Harry Percies wife. Constant you are,
But yet a woman: and for secrecie,
No Lady closer. For I will beleeue
Thou wilt not vtter what thou do'st not know,
And so farre wilt I trust thee, gentle Kate.

La. How so farre?

Hot. Not an inch further. But hark'e you Kate,
Whither I go, thither shall you go too:
To day will I set forth, to morrow you.
Will this content you Kate?

La. It must of force. Exeunt.

Scena Quarta.

Enter Prince and Poins.

Prin. Ned, prethee come out of that fat roome, & lend me thy hand to laugh a little.

Poines. Where hast bene Hall?

Prin. With three or foure Logger-heads, amongst 3. or fourescore Hogsheads. I haue founded the verie base string of humility. Sirra, I am sworn brother to a leash of Drawers, and can call them by their names, as Tom Dicke, and Francis. They take it already vpon their confidence, that though I be but Prince of Wales, yet I am the King of Courtesie: telling me flatly I am no proud Iack like Falstaffe, but a Corinthian, a lad of mettle, a good boy, and when I am King of England, I shall command all the good Lads in East-cheape. They call drinking deeps, dying Scarlet; and when you breath in your watering, they they cry hem, and bid you play it off. To conclude, I am so good a proficient in one quarter of an houre, that I can drinke with any Tinker in his owne Language during my life. I tell thee Ned, thou hast loſt much honor, that thou wer't not with me in this action: but ſweet Ned, to ſweeten which name of Ned, I gine thee this penniworth of Sugar, clape euen now into my hand by an vnder Skinker, one that neuer ſpake other Engliſh in his life, then Eight ſhillings and ſix pence, and, You are welcome: with this ſhrill addition, Anon, Anon ſir, Score a Pint of Baſtard in the Halfe Moone, or ſo. But Ned, to drive away time till Falſtaffe come, I prythee doe thou ſtand in ſome by-roome, while I queſtion my puny Drawer, to what end he gaue me the Sugar, and do neuer leaue calling Francis, that his Tale to me may be nothing but, Anon: ſtep aſide, and Ile ſhew thee a Preſident.

Poines. Francis.

Prin. Thou art perfect.

Poin. Francis.

Enter Drawer.

Fran. Anon, anon ſir; looke downe into the Pomgarnet, Ralfe.

Prince. Come hither Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. How long haſt thou to ſerue, Francis?

Fran. Forſooth fiue yeares, and as much as to———

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon ſir.

Prin. Fiue yeares: Berlady a long Leaſe for the clinking of Pewter. But Francis, dareſt thou be ſo valiant, as to play the coward with thy Indenture, & ſhew it a faire paire of heeles, and run from it?

Fran. O Lord ſir, Ile be ſworne vpon all the Books in England, I could finde in my heart.

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon ſir.

Prin. How old art thou, Francis?

Fran. Let me ſee, about Michaelmas next I ſhalbe——

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon ſir, pray you ſtay a little, my Lord.

Prin. Nay but harke you Francis, for the Sugar thou gaueſt me, 'twas a penyworth, was't not?

Fran. O Lord ſir, I would it had beene two.

Prin. I will giue thee for it a thouſand pound: Aske me when thou wilt, and thou ſhalt haue it.

Poin. Francis.

Fran. Anon, anon.

Prin. Anon Francis? No Francis, but to morrow Francis: or Francis, on thurſday: or indeed Francis when thou wilt. But Francis.

Fran. My Lord.

Prin. Wilt thou rob this Leathern Ierkin, Chriſtall button, Not-pated, Agat ring, Puke ſtocking, Caddice garter, Smooth tongue, Spaniſh pouch.

Fran. O Lord ſir, who do you meane?

Prin. Why then your brown Baſtard is your only drinke: for looke you Francis, your white Canuas doublet will ſullen. In Barbary ſir, it cannot come to ſo much.

Fran. What ſir?

Poin. Francis.

Prin. Away you Rogue, doſt thou heare them call?

Here they both call him, the Drawer ſtands amazed, not knowing which way to go.

Enter Vintner.

Vint. What, ſtand'ſt thou ſtill, and hear'ſt ſuch a calling? Looke to the Gueſts within: My Lord, olde Sir Iohn with halfe a doozen more, are at the doore: ſhall I let them in?

Prin. Let them alone awhile, and then open the doore. Poines.

Enter Poines.

Poin. Anon, anon ſir.

Prin. Sirra, Falſtaffe and the reſt of the Theeues, are at the doore, ſhall we be merry?

Poin. As merrie as Crickets my Lad. But harke you, What cunning match haue you made with this Iaſt of the Drawer? Come, what's the iſſue?

Prin. I am now of all humours, that haue ſhewed themſelues humors, ſince the old dayes of goodman Adam, to the pupill age of this preſent twelue a clock at midnight. What's a clocke Francis?

Fran. Anon, anon ſir.

Prin. That euer this Fellow ſhould haue fewer words then a Parrot, and yet the ſonne of a Woman. His induſtry is vp-ſtaires and down-ſtaires, his eloquence the parcell of a reckoning. I am not yet of Percies mind, the Hotſpurre of the North, he that kilies me ſome ſixe or Teuen dozen of Scots at a Breakfaſt, washes his hands, and ſaies to his wife; Fie vpon this quiet life, I want worke. O my ſweet Harry ſayes ſhe, how many haſt thou killed to day? Giue my Roane horſe a drench (ſayes hee) and anſwers, ſome fourteene, an houre after: a trifle, a trifle. I prethee call in Falſtaffe, Ile play Percy, and that damn'd Browne ſhall play Dame Mortimer his wife. Rim, ſayes the drunkard. Call in Ribs, call in Tallow.

Enter Falſtaffe.

Poin. Welcome Iacke, where haſt thou beene?

Fal. A plague of all Cowards I ſay, and a Vengeance too, marry and Amen. Giue me a cup of Sacke Boy. Ere I leade this life long, Ile ſowe nether ſtockes, and mend them too. A plague of all cowards. Giue me a Cup of Sacke, Rogue. Is there no Vertue extant?

Prin. Doſt thou never ſee Titan kiſſe a diſh of Butter, pitiſull hearted Titan that melted at the ſweete Tale of the Sunne? If thou diſdſt, then behold that compound.

Fal. You Rogue, here's Lime in this Sacke too: there is nothing but Roguery to be found in Villainous man: yet a Coward is worſe then a Cup of Sack with lime. A villanous Coward, go thy wayes old Iacke, die when thou wilt, if manhood, good manhood be not forgot vpon the face of the earth, then am I a ſhotten Herring: there lives not three good men vnhang'd in England, & one of them is fat, and growes old, God helpe the while, a bad world I ſay. I would I were a Weaver, I could ſing all manner of ſongs. A plague of all Cowards, I ſay ſtill.

Prin. How now Woolſack, what mutter you?

Fal. A Kings Sonne: If I do not beate thee out of thy Kingdome with a dagger of Lath, and drive all thy Subiects afore thee like a flocke of Wilde-geese, Ile never weare haire on my face more. You Prince of Wales?

Prin. Why you horſon round man? what's the matter?

Fal. Are you not a Coward? Anſwer me to that, and Poines there?

Prin. Ye fleſh-pounch, and yet call mee Coward, Ile ſtab thee.

Fal. I call thee Coward? Ile ſee thee damn'd ere I call thee Coward: but I would giue a thouſand pound I could run as faſt as thou canſt. You are ſtraight enough in the ſhoulders, you care not who ſees your backe: Call you that backing of your friends? a plague vpon such backing: give me them that will face me. Give me a Cup of Sack, I am a Rogue if I drunke to day.

Prince. O Villaine, thy Lippes are scarce wip'd, since thou drunk'st last.

Falst. All's one for that. He drinkes.
A plague of all Cowards still, say I.

Prince. What's the matter?

Falst. What's the matter? here be foure of vs, have ta'ne a thousand pound this Morning.

Prince. Where is it, Jack? where is it?

Falst. Where is it? taken from vs, it is: a hundred vpon poore foure of vs.

Prince. What, a hundred, man?

Falst. I am a Rogue, if I were not at halfe Sword with a dozen of them two hours together. I have scoped by miracle. I am eight times thrust through the Doublet, foure through the Hose, my Buckler cut through and through, my Sword hackt like a Hand-saw, ecce signum. I never dealt better since I was a man: all would not doe. A plague of all Cowards: let them speake; if they speake more or lesse then truth, they are villaines, and the sonnes of darknesse.

Prince. Speake sirs, how was it?

Gad. We foure set vpon some dozen.

Falst. Sixteene, at least, my Lord.

Gad. And bound them.

Peto. No, no, they were not bound.

Falst. You Rogue, they were bound, every man of them, or I am a Iew else, an Ebrew Iew.

Gad. As we were sharing, some foure or seuen fresh men set vpon vs.

Falst. And vnbound the rest, and then come in the other.

Prince. What, fought yee with them all?

Falst. All? I know not what yee call all: but if I fought not with fiftie of them, I am a bunch of Radish: if there were not two or three and fiftie vpon poore olde Iack, then am I no two-legg'd Creature.

Poins. Pray Heauen, you haue not murthered some of them.

Falst. Nay, that's past praying for. I haue peppe'd two of them: Two I am sure I haue payed, two Rogues in Buckrom Suites. I tell thee what, Hal, if I tell thee a Lye, spit in my face, call me Horse: thou knowest my olde word: here I lay, and then I bore my point; foure Rogues in Buckrom let drioe at me.

Prince. What, foure? thou sayd'st but two, euen now.

Falst. Foure Hal, I told thee foure.

Poins. I, I, he said foure.

Falst. These foure came all a-front, and mainly thrust at me; I made no more adoe, but tooke all their seuen points in my Target, thus.

Prince. Seuen? why there were but foure, euen now.

Falst. In Buckrom.

Poins. I, foure, in Buckrom Suites.

Falst. Seuen, by these Hilts, or I am a Villaine else.

Prin. Prethee let him alone, we shall haue more anon.

Falst. Doest thou heare me, Hal?

Prin. I, and marke thee too, Iack.

Falst. Doe so, for it is worth the listning too: these nine in Buckrom, that I told thee of.

Prin. So, two more already.

Falst. Their Points being broken.

Poins. Downe fell his Hose.

Falst. Began to giue me ground: but I followed me close, came in foot and hand, and with a thought, seuen of the eleuen I pay'd.

Prin. O monstrous! eleuen Buckrom men growne out of two?

Falst. But as the Deuill would haue it, three mis-begotten Knaues, in Kendall Greene, came at my Back, and let drioe at me; for it was so darke, Hal, that thou could'st not see thy Hand.

Prin. These Lyes are like the Father that begets them, grosse as a Mountaine, open, palpable. Why thou Clay-brayn'd Guts, thou Knotty-pated Foole, thou Horson obscene greasie Tallow Catch.

Falst. What, art thou mad? art thou mad? is not the truth, the truth?

Prin. Why, how could'st thou know these men in Kendall Greene, when it was so darke, thou could'st not see thy Hand? Come, tell vs your reason: what say'st thou to this?

Poins. Come, your reason Iack, your reason.

Falst. What, vpon compulsion? No: were I at the Strappado, or all the Racks in the World, I would not tell you on compulsion. Giue you a reason on compulsion? If Reasons were as plentie as Black-berries, I would giue no man a Reason vpon compulsion, I.

Prin. Ile be no longer guilty of this sinne. This sanguine Coward, this Bed-presser, this Horse-back-breaker, this huge Hill of Flesh.

Falst. Away you Starueling, you Elfe-skin, you dried Neats tongue, Bulles-pissell, you stocke-fish: O for breth to vtter. What is like thee? You Tailors yard, you sheath you Bow-case, you vile standing tucke.

Prin. Well, breath a-while, and then to't againe: and when thou hast tyr'd thy selfe in base comparisons, heare me speake but thus.

Poins. Marke Iacke.

Prin. We two, saw you foure set on foure and bound them, and were Masters of their Wealth: mark now how a plaine Tale shall put you downe. Then did we two, set on you foure, and with a word, outface'd you from your prize, and haue it: yea, and can shew it you in the House. And Falstaffe, you carried your Guts away as nimbly, with as quicke dexteritie, and roared for mercy, and still ranne and roar'd, as euer I heard Bull-Calfe. What a Slaue art thou, to hacke thy sword as thou hast done, and then say it was in fight. What trick? what deuice? what starting hole canst thou now find out, to hide thee from this open and apparant shame?

Poins. Come, let's heare Iacke: What tricke hast thou now?

Fal. I knew ye as well as he that made ye. Why heare ye my Masters, was it for me to kill the Heire apparant? Should I turne vpon the true Prince? Why, thou knowest I am as valiant as Hercules: but beware Instinct, the Lion will not touch the true Prince: Instinct is a great matter. I was a Coward on Instinct: I shall thinke the better of my selfe, and thee, during my life: I, for a valiant Lion, and thou for a true Prince. But Lads, I am glad you haue the Mony. Hostesse, clap to the doores: watch to night, pray to morrow. Gallants, Lads, Boyes, Harts of Gold, all the good Tiles of Fellowship come to you. What, shall we be merry? shall we haue a Play extempory.

Prin. Content, and the argument shall be, thy running away.

Fal. A, no more of that Hall, and thou loest me.

Enter Hostesse.

Host. My Lord, the Prince?

Prin.

Prin How now my Lady the Hostesse, what say'ſt thou to me?

Hoſteſſe. Marry, my Lord, there is a Noble man of the Court at doore would ſpeake with you: hee ſayes, hee comes from your Father.

Prin. Giue him as much as will make him a Royall man, and ſend him backe againe to my Mother.

Falſt. What manner of man is hee?

Hoſteſſe. An old man.

Falſt. What doth Gravitie out of his Bed at Midnight? Shall I giue him his anſwere?

Prin. Prethee doe Jacky.

Falſt. Faith, and Ile ſend him packing. Exit.

Prince. Now Sirs: you fought faire; ſo did you Peto, ſo did you Bardol: you are Lyons too, you ranne away vpon inſtinct: you will not touch the true Prince; no, fie.

Bard. Faith, I ranne when I ſaw others runne.

Prin. Tell mee now in earneſt, how came Falſtaffes Sword ſo hacke?

Peto. Why, he hacke it with his Dagger, and ſaid, hee would ſweare truth out of England, but hee would make you beleeue it was done in fight, and perſwaded vs to doe the like.

Bard Yea, and to tickle our Noſes with Spear-graſſe, to make them bleed, and then to beſlubber our garments with it, and ſweare it was the blood of true men. I did that I did not this ſeuen yeeres before, I bluſht to heare his monſtrous deuices.

Prin. O Villaine, thou ſtoleſt a Cup of Sacke eighteene yeeres agoe, and wert taken with the manner, and euer ſince thou haſt bluſht extempore: thou hadſt fire and ſword on thy ſide, and yet thou ranſt away; what inſtinct hadſt thou for it?

Bard. My Lord, doe you ſee theſe Meteors? doe you behold theſe Exhalations?

Prin. I doe.

Bard. What thinke you they portend?

Prin. Hot Liuers, and cold Purſes.

Bard. Choler, my Lord, if rightly taken.

Prin No, if rightly taken, Halter.

Enter Falſtaffe.

Heere comes leane Jacky, heere comes bare-bone. How now my ſweet Creature of Bombaſt, how long ſ't agoe, Jacky, ſince thou ſaw'ſt thine owne Knee?

Falſt. My owne Knee? When I was about thy yeeres (Hal) I was not an Eagles Talent in the Waſte, I could have crept into any Aldermans Thumbe-Ring: a plague of ſighing and grieſe, it blowes a man vp like a Bladder. There's villanous Newes abroad: heere was Sir Iohn Braby from your Father; you muſt goe to the Court in the Morning. The ſame mad fellow of the North, Percy; and hee of Wales, that gaue Amaimon the Baſtinado, and made Lucifer Cuckold, and ſwore the Deuill his true Liege-man vpon the Croſſe of a Welch-hooke; what a plague call you him?

Poin O, Glendower.

Falſt. Owen, Owen; the ſame, and his Sonne in Law Mortimer, and old Northumberland, and the ſprightly Scot of Scots, Douglas, that runnes a Horſe-backe vp a Hill perpendicular.

Prin. Hee that rides at high ſpeede, and with a Piſtoll kills a Sparrow flying.

Falſt. You haue hit it

Prin. So did he never the Sparrow.

Fal. Well, that Raſcall hath good-mettall in him, hee will not runne.

Prin. Why, what a Raſcall art thou then, to praiſe him ſo for running?

Falſt. A Horſe-backe (ye Cuckoe) but a ſe pt hee will not budge a foot.

Prin. Yes Jacky, vpon inſtinct.

Falſt I grant ye, vpon inſtinct: Well, hee is there too, and one Mordake, and a thouſand blew-Coppes more. Worceſter is ſtolne away by Night: thy Fathers Beard is turn'd white with the Newes; you may buy Land now as cheape as ſtinking Mackrell.

Prin Then 'tis like, if there come a hot Sunne, and this ciuill buffeting hold, wee ſhall buy Maiden-heads as they buy Hob-nayles, by the Hundreds.

Falſt. By the Maſſe Lad, thou ſay'ſt true, it is like wee ſhall haue good trading that way. But tell me Hal, art not thou horrible afear'd? thou being Heire apparant, could the World picke thee out three ſuch Enemyes againe as that Fiend Douglas, that Spirit Percy, and that Deuill Glendower? Art not thou horrible afraid? Doth not thy blood thrill at it?

Prin. Not a whit: I lacke ſome of thy inſtinct.

Falſt. Well, thou wilt be horrible chidde to morrow, when thou commeſt to thy Father: if thou doe loue me, practiſe an anſwere.

Prin. Doe thou ſtand for my Father, and examine me vpon the particulars of my Life.

Falſt. Shall I? content: This Chayre ſhall bee my State, this Dagger my Sceptar, and this Cuſhion my Crowne.

Prin. Thy State is taken for a Ioyn'd-Stoole, thy Golden Sceptet for a Leaden Dagger, and thy precious rich Crowne, for a pittifull bald Crowne.

Falſt. Well, and the fire of Grace be not quite out of thee now ſhalt thou be moued. Giue me a Cup of Sacke to make mine eyes looke redde, that it may be thought I haue wept for I muſt ſpeake in paſſion, and I will doe it in King Cambyſes vaine.

Prin. Well, heere is my Legge.

Falſt. And heere is my ſpeech: ſtand aſide Nobilitie.

Hoſteſſe. This is excellent ſport, yfaith.

Falſt. Weepe not, ſweet Queene, for trickling teares are vaine.

Hoſteſſe. O the Father, how hee holdes his countenance?

Falſt. For Gods ſake Lords, conuey my truſtfull Queen, For teares doe ſtop the flood-gates of her eyes.

Hoſteſſe. O rare, he doth it as like one of theſe harlotry Players, as ever I ſee.

Falſt. Peace good Pint-pot, peace good Tickle-braine. Harry, I doe not onely marueil where thou ſpendeſt thy time; but alſo, how thou art accompanied: For though the Camomile, the more it is trodden, the faſter it growes, yet Youth, the more it is waſted, the ſooner it weares. Thou art my Sonne: I haue partly thy Mothers Word, partly my Opinion; but chiefely, a villanous tricke of thine Eye, and a foolifh hanging of thy nether Lippe, that doth warrant me. If then thou be Sonne to mee, heere lyeth the point: why, being Sonne to me, art thou ſo poynted at? Shall the bleſſed Sonne of Heauen proue a Micher, and eate Black-berryes? a queſtion not to bee aſkt. Shall the Sonne of England proue a Theefe, and take Purſes? a queſtion to be aſkt. There is a thing, Harry, which thou haſt often heard of, and it is knowne to many

money in our Land, by the Name of Pitch: this Pitch (as ancient Writers doe report) doth defile; so doth the companie thou keepest: for Harry, now I doe not speake to thee in Drinke, but in Teares; not in Pleasure, but in Passion; not in Words onely, but in Woes also: and yet there is a vertuous man, whom I have often noted in thy companie, but I know not his Name.

Prin. What manner of man, and it like your Majestie?

Falst. A goodly portly man, i'faith, and a corpulent, of a cheerefull Looke, a pleasing Eye, and a most noble Carriage, and as I thinke, his age some fifty, or (byrlady) inclining to threescore; and now I remember mee, his Name is Falstaffe: if that man should be lewdly given, hee deceives mee; for Harry, I see Vertue in his Lookes. If then the Tree may be knowne by the Fruit, as the Fruit by the Tree, then peremptorily I speake it, there is Vertue in that Falstaffe: him keepe with, the rest banish. And tell mee now, thou naughtie Varlet, tell mee, where hast thou beene this month?

Prin. Do'st thou speake like a King? doe thou stand for mee, and Ile play my Father.

Falst. Depose me: if thou do'st it halfe so gravely, so majestically, both in word and matter, hang me vp by the heeles for a Rabbet-sucker, or a Poulter's Hare.

Prin. Well, heere I am set.

Falst. And heere I stand: judge my Masters.

Prin. Now Harry, whence come you?

Falst. My Noble Lord, from East-cheape.

Prin. The complaints I heare of thee, are grievous.

Falst. Yfaith, my Lord, they are false: Nay, Ile tickle ye for a young Prince.

Prin. Swearest thou, ungracious Boy? henceforth ne're looke on me: thou art violently carryed away from Grace: there is a Devill haunts thee, in the likenesse of a fat old Man; a Tuns of Man is thy Companion: Why do'st thou converse with that Trunke of Humors, that Bolting-Hutch of Beastlinesse, that swolne Parcell of Dropsies, that huge Bombard of Sacke, that stuft Cloakebagge of Guts, that rosted Manning Tree Ox: with the Pudding in his Belly, that reverend Vice, that grey Iniquitie, that Father Ruffian, that Vanitie in yeeres? wherein is he good, but to taste Sacke, and drinke it? wherein neat and cleanly, but to carve a Capon, and eat it? wherein Cunning, but in Craft? wherein Craftie, but in Villanie? wherein Villanous, but in all things? wherein worthy, but in nothing.

Falst. I would your Grace would take me with you: whom meanes your Grace?

Prince. That villanous abhominable mis-leader of Youth, Falstaffe, that old white-bearded Satan.

Falst. My Lord, the man I know.

Prince. I know thou do'st.

Falst. But to say, I know more harme in him then in my selfe, were to say more then I know. That hee is olde (the more the pitie) his white hayres doe witnesse it: but that hee is (saving your reverence) a Whore-master, that I utterly deny. If Sacke and Sugar bee a fault, Heaven help the Wicked: if to be olde and merry, be a sinne, then many an olde Host that I know, is damn'd: if to be fat, be to be hated, then Pharaohs leane Kine are to be loved. No, my good Lord, banish Peto, banish Bardolph, banish Poins: but for sweete Jacke Falstaffe, kinde Jacke Falstaffe, true Jacke Falstaffe, valiant Jacke Falstaffe, and therefore more valiant, being as hee is olde Jacke Falstaffe, banish not him thy Harryes companie, banish not him thy Harryes companie; banish plumpe Jacke and banish all the World.

Prince. I doe, I will.

Enter Bardolph running.

Bard. O, my Lord, my Lord, the Sherife, with a most most monstrous Watch, is at the doore.

Falst. Out you Rogue, play out the Play: I have much to say in the behalfe of that Falstaffe.

Enter the Hostesse.

Hostesse. O, my Lord, my Lord.

Falst. Heigh, heigh, the Devill rides vpon a Fiddle stick: what's the matter?

Hostesse. The Sherife and all the Watch are at the doore: they are come to search the House, shall I let them in?

Falst. Do'st thou heare Hal, never call a true peece of Gold a Counterfeit: thou art essentially made, without seeming so.

Prince. And thou a naturall Coward, without instinct.

Falst. I deny your Majesty: if you will deny the Sherife, so: if not, let him enter. If I become not a Cart as well as another man, a plague on my bringing vp: I hope I shall as soone be strangled with a Halter, as another.

Prince. Goe hide thee behinde the Arras, the rest walke vp above. Now my Masters, for a true Face and good Conscience.

Falst. Both which I have had: but their date is out, and therefore Ile hide me. Exit.

Prince. Call in the Sherife.

Enter Sherife and the Carrier.

Prince. Now Master Sherife, what is your will with mee?

Sher. First pardon me, my Lord. A Hue and Cry hath followed certaine men vnto this house.

Prince. What men?

Sher. One of them is well knowne, my gracious Lord, a grosse fat man.

Car. As fat as Butter.

Prince. The man, I doe assure you, is not heere,
For I my selfe at this time have imploy'd him:
And Sherife, I will engage my word to thee,
That I will by to morrow Dinner time,
Send him to answere thee, or any man,
For any thing he shall be charg'd withall:
And so let me entreat you, leave the house.

Sher. I will, my Lord: there are two Gentlemen
Have in this Robberie lost three hundred Marke.

Prince. It may be so: if he have robb'd these men,
He shall be answerable: and so farewell.

Sher. Good Night, my Noble Lord.

Prince. I thinke it is good Morrow, is it not?

Sher. Indeede, my Lord, I thinke it be two a Clocke. Exit.

Prince. This only Rascall is knowne as well as Poules: goe call him forth.

Peto. Falstaffe! fast asleepe behinde the Arras, and snorting like a Horse.

Prince. Marke, how hard he fetches breath: search his Pockets.

He searcheth his Pockets, and finseth certaine Papers.

Prince. What hast thou found?

Poto. Nothing but Papers, my Lord.

Prince. Let's see, what be they? reade them.

Poto. Item, a Capon. ii.s.ii.d.
Item, Sauce. iiii.d.
Item, Sacke, two Gallons. v.s. viii.d.
Item. Anchouies and Sacke after Supper. ii.s.vi.d.
Item, Bread. ob.

Prince. O monstrous, but one halfe penny-worth of Bread to this intolerable deale of Sacke! What there is else, keepe close, we'le reade it at more advantage: there let him sleepe till day. Ile to the Court in the Morning: We must all to the Warres, and thy place shall be honorable. Ile procure this fat Rogue a Charge of Foot, and I know his death will be a Match of Twelue-score. The Money shall be pay'd backe again with advantage. Be with me betimes in the Morning: and so good morrow Poto.

Poto. Good morrow, good my Lord. Exeunt.

Actus Tertius. Scena Prima.

Enter Hotspurre, Worcester Lord Mortimer, Owen Glendower.

Mort. These promises are faire, the parties sure,
And our induction full of prosperous hope.

Hotsp. Lord Mortimer, and Cousin Glendower,
Will you sit downe?
And Vncle Worcester; a plague vpon it,
I haue forgot the Mappe.

Glend. No, here it is:
Sit Cousin Percy, sit good Cousin Hotspurre:
For by that Name, as oft as Lancaster doth speake of you,
His Cheekes looke pale, and with a rising sigh,
He wishesh you in Heaven.

Hotsp. And you in Hell, as oft as he hears Owen Glendower spoke of.

Glend. I cannot blame him: At my Nativitie,
The front of Heaven was full of fiery shapes,
Of burning Cressets: and at my Birth,
The frame and foundation of the Earth
Shak'd like a Coward.

Hotsp. Why so it would haue done at the same season, if your Mothers Cat had but kittens'd, though your selfe had never beene borne.

Glend. I say the Earth did shake when I was borne.

Hotsp. And I say the Earth was not of my minde, if you suppose, he fearing you, it shooke.

Glend. The Heauens were all on fire, the Earth did tremble.

Hotsp. Oh, then the Earth shooke
To see the Heauens on fire,
And not in feare of your Nativitie.
Diseased Nature oftentimes breakes forth
In strange eruptions; and the teeming Earth
Is with a kinde of Colick pinchet and vexe,
By the imprisoning of vnruly Winde
Within her Wombe: which for enlargement striving,
Shakes the old Beldame Earth, and tombles downe.
Steeples, and mosse-growne Towers. At your Birth,
Our Grandam Earth, hauing this distemperature,
In passion shooke.

Glend. Cousin: of many men
I doe not beare these Crossings: Giue me leaue
To tell you once againe, that at my Birth
The front of Heauen was full of fierie shapes,
The Goates ranne from the Mountaines, and the Heards
Were strangely clamorous to the frighted fields:
These signes haue markt me extraordinarie,
And all the courses of my Life doe shew,
I am not in the Roll of common men.
Where is the Liuing, clipt in with the Sea,
That chides the Bankes of England, Scotland, and Wales,
Which calls me Pupill, or hath read to me?
And bring him out, that is but Woman Sonne,
Can trace me in the tedious wayes of Art,
And hold me pace in deepe experiments.

Hotsp. I thinke there's no man speakes better Welsh: Ile to Dinner.

Mort. Peace Cousin Percy, you will make him mad.

Glend. I can call Spirits from the vastie Deepe.

Hotsp. Why so can I, or so can any man:
But will they come, when you doe call for them?

Glend. Why, I can teach thee, Cousin, to command the Deuill.

Hotsp. And I can teach thee, Cousin, to shame the Deuill,
By telling truth. Tell truth, and shame the Deuill.
If thou haue power to rayse him, bring him hither,
And Ile be sworne, I haue power to shame him hence
Oh, while you liue, tell truth, and shame the Deuill.

Mort. Come, come, no more of this vnprofitable Chat.

Glend. Three times hath Henry Bullingbrooke made head
Against my Power: thrice from the Banks of Wye,
And sandy-bottom'd Seuerne, haue I sent him
Bootlesse home, and Weather-beaten backe.

Hotsp. Home without Bootes,
And in foule Weather too,
How scapes he Agues in the Deuils name?

Glend. Come, here's the Mappe:
Shall wee diuide our Right,
According to our three-fold order ta'ne?

Mort. The Arch-Deacon hath diuided it
Into three Limits, very equally:
England, from Trent, and Seuerne, hitherto
By South and East is to my part assigned:
All Westward, Wales, beyond the Seuerne shore,
And all the fertile Land within that bounds,
To Owen Glendower: And dearе Coziе, to you
The remnant Northward, lying off from Trent.
And our Indentures Tripartite are drawne:
Which being sealed interchangeably,
(A Bonnesse that this Night may enterprise)
To morrow, Cousin Percy, you and I,
And my good Lord of Worcester, will set forth,
To meeste your Father, and the Scottish Power,
As is appointed vs at Shrewsbury.
My Father Glendower is not readie yet;
Nor shall wee neede his helpe these fourteene dayes:
Within that space, you may haue drawne together
Your Tenants, Friends, and neighbouring Gentlemen.

Glend. A shorter time shall send me to you, Lords:
And in my Conduct shall your Ladies come,
From whom you now must stealе, and take no leaue,
For there will be a World of Water shed,

Vpon

Vpon the parting of your Wiues and you.

Hotsp. Me thinks my Moity, North from Burton here,
In quantitie equals not one of yours:
See, how this River comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the best of all my Land,
A hege half Moone, a monstrous Cantle out.
Ile haue the Current in this place damm'd vp,
And here the smug and Siluer Trent shall runne,
In a new Channell, faire and euenly:
It shall not winde with such a deepe indent,
To rob me of so rich a Bottome here.

Glend. Not winde? it shall, it must, you see it doth.

Mort. Yea, but marke how he beares his course,
And runnes me vp with like aduantage on the other side,
Gelding the opposed Continent as much,
As on the other side it takes from you.

Wor. Yea, but a little Charge will trench him here,
And on this North side winne this Cape of Land,
And then he runnes straight and euen.

Hotsp. Ile haue it so, a little Charge will doe it.

Glend. Ile not haue it alter'd.

Hotsp. Will not you?

Glend. No, nor you shall not.

Hotsp. Who shall say me nay?

Glend. Why, that will I.

Hotsp. Let me not vnderstand you then, speake it in Welsh.

Glend. I can speake English, Lord, as well as you:
For I was trayn'd vp in the English Court;
Where, being but young, I framed to the Harpe
Many an English Ditty, louely well,
And gaue the Tongue a helpefull Ornament;
A Vertue that was neuer seene in you.

Hotsp. Marry, and I am glad of it with all my heart,
I had rather be a Kitten, and cry mew,
Then one of these same Metre Ballad-mongers:
I had rather heare a Brazen Candlestick turn'd,
Or a dry Wheele grate on the Axle-tree,
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much, as mincing Poetrie;
'Tis like the forc'd gaite of a shuffling Nagge.

Glend. Come, you shall haue Trent turn'd.

Hotsp. I doe not care: Ile giue thrice so much Land
To any well-deseruing friend;
But in the way of Bargaine, marke ye me,
Ile cauill on the ninth part of a hayre.
Are the Indentures drawne? shall we be gone?

Glend. The Moone shines faire,
You may away by Night:
Ile haste the Writer; and withall,
Breake with your Wiues, of your departure hence:
I am afraid my Daughter will runne madde,
So much she doteth on her Mortimer. Exit.

Mort. Fie, Cousin Percy, how you crosse my Father.

Hotsp. I cannot chuse: sometime he angers me,
With telling me of the Moldwarpe and the Ant,
Of the Dreamer Merlin, and his Prophecies;
And of a Dragon, and a finne-lesse Fish,
A clip-wing'd Griffin, and a moulten Raven,
A couching Lyon, and a ramping Cat,
And such a deale of skimble-skamble Stuff,
As puts me from my Faith. I tell you what,
He held me last Night, at least, nine howres,
In reckning vp the seuerall Deuils Names,
Thus were his Lacquayes:
I cry'd hum, and well, goe too,
But marke him not a word. O, he is as tedious
As a tyred Horse, a raylling Wife,
Worse then a smoakie House. I had rather liue
With Cheese and Garlick in a Windmill farre,
Then feede on Cates, and hear him talke to me,
In any Summer-House in Christendome.

Mort. In faith he was a worthy Gentleman,
Exceeding well read, and profited,
In strange Concealements.
Valiant as a Lyon, and wondrous affable,
And as bountifull, as Mynes of India.
Shall I tell you, Cousin,
He holds your temper in a high respect,
And curbes himselfe, even of his naturall scope,
When you doe crosse his humor: faith he does.
I warrant you, that man is not alive,
Might so haue tempted him, as you haue done,
Without the taste of danger, and reproofe:
But doe not vse it oft, let me entreat you.

Wor. In faith, my Lord, you are too willfull blame,
And since your coming hither, haue done enough,
To put him quite besides his patience.
You must needes learne, Lord, to amend this fault:
Though sometimes it shew Greatnesse, Courage, Blood,
And that's the dearest grace it renders you;
Yet oftentimes it doth present harsh Rage,
Defect of Manners, want of Gouernment,
Pride, Haughtinesse, Opinion, and Disdaine:
The least of which, haunting a Nobleman,
Loseth men hearts, and leaues behinde a stayne
Vpon the beauty of all parts besides,
Beguiling them of commendation.

Hotsp. Well, I am school'd:
Good-manners be your speede;
Heere come your Wiues, and let vs take our leaue.

Enter Glendower, with the Ladies.

Mort. This is the deadly spight, that angers me,
My Wife can speake no English, I no Welsh.

Glend. My Daughter weepes, shee'le not part with you,
Shee'le be a Souldier too, shee'le to the Warres.

Mort. Good Father tell her, that she and my Aunt Percy
Shall follow in your Conduct speedily.

Glendower speakes to her in Welsh, and she answeres him in the same.

Glend. She is desperate heere:
A peeuish self-will'd Harlotry,
One that no perswasion can doe good vpon.

The Lady speakes in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Looks: that pretty Welsh
Which thou pour'st down from these swelling Heauens,
I am too perfect in: and but for shame,
In such a parley should I answere thee.

The Lady again in Welsh.

Mort. I vnderstand thy Kisses, and thou mine,
And that's a feeling disputation:
But I will neuer be a Truant, Loue,
Till I haue learn'd thy Language: for thy tongue

Makes

Makes Welsh as sweet as Ditties highly penn'd,
Sung by a faire Queene in a Summers Bowre,
With ravishing Division to her Lute.

Glend. Nay, if thou melt, then will she runne madde.

The Lady speaks again in Welsh.

Mort. O, I am Ignorance it selfe in this.

Glend. She bids you,
On the wanton Rushes lay you downe,
And rest your gentle Head upon her Lappe,
And she will sing the Song that pleaseth you,
And on your Eye-lids Crowne the God of Sleepe,
Charming your blood with pleasing heauinesse;
Making such difference betwixt Wake and Sleepe,
As is the difference betwixt Day and Night,
The houre before the Heauenly Harness'd Teeme
Begins his Golden Progresse in the East.

Mort. With all my heart I'le sit, and heare her sing:
By that time will our Booke, I thinke, be drawne.

Glend. Doe so:
And those Musitians that shall play to you,
Hang in the Ayre a thousand Leagues from thence;
And straight they shall be here: sit, and attend.

Hotsp. Come Kate, thou art perfect in lying downe:
Come, quicke, quicke, that I may lay my Head in thy Lappe.

Lady. Goe, ye giddy-Goose.

The Musicke plays.

Hotsp. Now I perceiue the Deuill understands Welsh,
And 'tis no marvell he is so humorous:
By'ladye hee's a good Musitian.

Lady. Then would you be nothing but Musicall,
For you are altogether governed by humors:
Lye still ye Theefe, and heare the Lady sing in Welsh.

Hotsp. I had rather heare (Lady) my Brach howle in Irish.

Lady. Would'st haue thy Head broken?

Hotsp. No.

Lady. Then be still.

Hotsp. Neyther, 'tis a Womans fault.

Lady. Now God helpe thee.

Hotsp. To the Welsh Ladies Bed.

Lady. What's that?

Hotsp. Peace, shee sings.

Heere the Lady sings a Welsh Song.

Hotsp. Come, I'le heare your Song too.

Lady. Not mine, in good sooth.

Hotsp. Not yours, in good sooth?
You sweare like a Comfit-makers Wife:
Not you, in good sooth; and, as true as I liue;
And, as God shall mend me; and, as sure as day:
And giuest such Sarcenet surtie for thy Oathes,
As if thou never walk'st further than Finsbury.
Sweare me, Kate, like a Lady, as thou art,
A good mouth-filling Oath: and leaue in sooth,
And such protest of Pepper Ginger-bread,
To Velvet-Guards, and Sunday-Citizens.
Come, sing.

Lady. I will not sing.

Hotsp. 'Tis the next way to turne Taylor, or be Redbreast teacher: and the Indentures be drawne, I'le away within these two houres: and so come in, when ye will. Exit.

Glend. Come, come, Lord Mortimer, you are as slow,
As hot Lord Percy is on fire to goe.
By this our Booke is drawne: we'le but seale,
And then to Horse immediately.

Mort. With all my heart. Exeunt.

Scæna Secunda.

Enter the King, Prince of Wales and others.

King. Lords, giue vs leaue:
The Prince of Wales, and I,
Must haue some priuate conference:
But be neere at hand,
For wee shall presently haue neede of you.
Exeunt Lords.
I know not whether Heauen will haue it so,
For some displeasing seruice I haue done;
That in his secret Doome, out of my Blood,
He'le breede Reuengement, and a Scourge for me:
But thou do'st in thy passages of Life,
Make me believe, that thou art onely mark'd
For the hot vengeance, and the Rod of heauen
To punish my Mistreadings. Tell me else,
Could such inordinate and low desires,
Such poore, such bare, such lewd, such mean attempts,
Such barren pleasures, rude societie,
As thou art match'd withall, and grafted too,
Accompanie the greatnesse of thy blood,
And hold their level with thy Princely heart?

Prince So please your Maiesty, I would I could
Quit all offences with as cleare excuse,
As well as I am doubtlesse I can purge
My selfe of many I am charg'd withall:
Yet such extenuation let me begge,
As in reproofe of many Tales devis'd,
Which oft the Eare of Greatnesse needes must heare,
By smiling Pick-thankes, and base Newes-mongers;
I may for some things true, wherein my youth
Hath faultie wandred, and irregular,
Finde pardon on my true submission.

King. Heauen pardon thee:
Yet let me wonder, Harry,
At thy affections, which doe hold a Wing
Quite from the flight of all thy ancestors.
Thy place in Councell thou hast rudely lost,
Which by thy younger Brother is supply'de;
And art almost an alien to the hearts
Of all the Court and Princes of my blood.
The hope and expectation of thy time
Is ruin'd, and the Soule of every man
Prophetically doe fore-think thy fall.
Had I so lavish of my presence beene,
So common hackney'd in the eyes of men,
So stale and cheape to vulgar Company;
Opinion, that did helpe me to the Crowne,
Had still kept loyall to possession,
And left me in reputeless banishment,
A fellow of no marke, nor likelyhood.
By being seldome seene, I could not stirre,
But like a Comet, I was wondred at,

That men would tell their Children, This is he:
Others would say; Where, Which is Bullingbroke.
And then I stole all Courtesie from Heaven,
And dresst my selfe in such Humilitie,
That I did pluckle Allegeance from mens hearts,
Loud Showts and Salutations from their mouthes,
Even in the presence of the Crowned King.
Thus I did keepe my Person fresh and new,
My Presence like a Robe Pontificall,
Ne're seene, but wondred at: and so my State,
Seldome but sumptuous, shewed like a Feast,
And wonne by rareness such Solemnitie.
The skipping King hee ambled vp and downe,
With shallow Jesters, and rash Bavin Wits,
Soone kindled, and soone burnt, carded his State,
Mingled his Royalty with Carping Fooles,
Had his great Name prophaned with their Scornes,
And gave his Countenance, against his Name,
To laugh at gybing Boyes, and stand the push
Of every Beardlesse vaine Comparatiue;
Grew a Companion to the common Streetes,
Enfeoff'd himselfe to Popularitie:
That being daily swallowed by mens Eyes,
They surfeited with Honey, and began to loathe
The taste of Sweetnesse, whereof a little
More then a little, is by much too much.
So when he had occasion to be seene,
He was but as the Cuckow is in June,
Heard, not regarded: seene but with such Eyes,
As sicke and blunted with Communitie,
Afford no extraordinarie Gaze,
Such as behoest on Sunne-like Maiestie,
When it shines seldome in admiring Eyes:
But rather drowz'd, and hung their eye-lids downe,
Slept in his Face, and rendred such aspect
As Cloudie men vse to doe to their aduersaries,
Being with his presence glutted, gorg'd, and full.
And in that very Line, Harry, standest thou:
For thou hast lost thy Princely Priuiledge,
With vile participation. Not an Eye
But is a-weary of thy common sight,
Save mine, which hath desir'd to see thee more:
Which now doth that I would not haue it doe,
Make blinde it selfe with foolish tendernesse.

Prince. I shall hereafter, my thrice gracious Lord,
Be more my selfe.

King. For all the World,
As thou art to this hour, was Richard then,
When I from France set foot at Rauenspurgh;
And even as I was then, is Percy now:
Now by my Scepter, and my Soule to boot,
He hath more worthy interest to the State
Then thou, the shadow of Succession;
For of no Right, nor colour like to Righe.
He doth fill fields with Harnesse in the Realme,
Turnes head against the Lyons armed Iawes;
And being no more in debt to yeares, then thou,
Leades ancient Lords, and reuerent Bishops on
To bloody Battailes, and to bruising Armes.
What never-dying Honor hath he got,
Against renowned Douglas? whose high Deedes,
Whose hot Incursions, and great Name in Armes,
Holds from all Souldiers chiefe Maiorittie,
And Militarie Title Capitall.
Through all the Kingdomes that acknowledge Christ,
Thrice hath the Hotspur Mars, in swathing Clothes,
This Infant Warrior, in his Enterprises,
Discomfited great Douglas, ta'ne him once,
Enlarged him, and made a friend of him,
To fill the mouth of deepe Defiance vp,
And shake the peace and safetie of our Throne.
And what say you to this? Percy, Northumberland,
The Arch-bishops Grace of Yorke, Douglas, Mortimer,
Capitulate against vs, and are vp.
But wherefore doe I tell these Newes to thee?
Why, Harry, doe I tell thee of my Foes,
Which art my neer'st and dearest Enemie?
Thou, that art like enough, through vassall Feare,
Base Inclination, and the start of Spleene,
To fight against me vnder Percies pay,
To dogge his heeles, and curtsie at his frowbes,
To shew how much thou art degenerate.

Prince. Doe not think so, you shall not finde it so:
And Heauen forgiue them, that so much haue sway'd
Your Maiesties good thoughts away from me:
I will redeeme all this on Percies head,
And in the closing of some glorious day,
Be bold to tell you, that I am your Sonne,
When I will weare a Garment all of Blood,
And staine my fauours in a bloody Maske:
Which washe away, shall scowre my shame with it.
And that shall be the day, when ere it lighes,
That this same Child of Honor and Renowne,
This gallant Hotspur, this all-prayse'd Knight,
And your vnthought-of Harry chance to meet:
For every Honor sitting on his Helme,
Would they were multitudes, and on my head
My shames redoubled. For the time will come,
That I shall make this Northerne Youth exchange
His glorious Deedes for my Indignities.
Percy is but my Factor, good my Lord,
To engrosse vp glorious Deedes on my behalfe:
And I will call him to so strict account,
That he shall render every Glory vp,
Yea, even the slightest worthip of his time,
Or I will teare the Reckoning from his Heart.
This, in the Name of Heauen, I promise here:
The which, if I performe, and doe survive,
I doe beseech your Maiestie, may salue
The long-growne Wounds of my intemperance:
If not, the end of Life cancells all Bonds,
And I will die a hundred thousand Deaths,
Ere breake the smallest parcell of this Vow.

King. A hundred thousand Rebels die in this:
Thou shalt haue Charge, and soueraigne trust herein.

Enter Blunt.

How now good Blunt? thy Lookes are full of speed.

Blunt. So hath the Business that I come to speake of.
Lord Mortimer of Scotland hath sent word,
That Douglas and the English Rebels met
The eleuenth of this moneth, at Shrewsbury:
A mightie and a fearefull Head they are,
(If Promises be kept on every hand)
As ever offered foule play in a State.

King. The Earle of Westmerland set forth to day:
With him my sonne, Lord John of Lancaster,
For this aduertisement is five dayes old.
On Wednesday next, Harry thou shalt set forward:
On Thursday, wee our Leiues will march.
Our meeting is Bridgenorth: and Harry, you shall march

Through Gloucestershire: by which account,
Our Business valued some twelve dayes hence,
Our generall Forces at Bridgenorth shall meete.
Our Hands are full of Business: let's away,
Advantage feedes him fat, while men delay. Exeunt.

Scena Tertia.

Enter Falst. & Bardolph

Falst. Bardolph, am I not falne away vilely, since this last action? doe I not bate? doe I not dwindle? Why my skinne hangs about me like an olde Ladies loose Gowne: I am withered like an olde Apple John. Well, Ile repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking: I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall haue no strength to repent. And I haue not forgotten what the in-side of a Church is made of, I am a Pepper-Corne, a Brewers Horse, the in-side of a Church. Company, villanous Company hath beene the spoyle of me.

Bard. Sir John, you are so fretfull, you cannot liue long.

Falst. Why there is it: Come, sing me a bawdy Song, make me merry: I was as vertuously giuen, as a Gentleman need to be; vertuous enough, swore little, dic'd not above foure times a weeke, went to a Bawdy-house not above once in a quarter of an houre, payd Money that I borrowed, three or foure times; liued well, and in good compasse: and now I liue out of all order, out of compasse.

Bard Why, you are so fat, Sir John, that you must needes bee out of all compasse; out of all reasonable compasse, Sir John.

Falst. Doe thou amend thy Face, and Ile amend thy Life: Thou art our Admirall, thou bearest the Lanterne in the Poope, but 'tis in the Nose of thee; thou art the Knight of the burning Lampe.

Bard. Why, Sir John, my Face does you no harme.

Falst. No, Ile be sworne: I make as good vse of it, as many a man doth of a Deaths-Head, or a Memento Mori. I never see thy Face, but I thinke vpon Hell fire, and Dives that liued in Purple; for there he is in his Robes burning, burning. If thou wert any way given to vertue, I would sweare by thy Face; my Oath should be, By this Fire: But thou art altogether given over; and wert indeede, but for the Light in thy Face, the Sunne of vtter Darkenesse. When thou ran'st vp Gads-Hill, in the Night, to catch my Horse, if I did not thinke that thou hadst beene an Ignis fatuus, or a Ball of Wild-fire, there's no Purchase in Money. O thou art a perpetuall Triumph, an euerlasting Bone-fire-Light: thou hast saued me a thousand Markes in Linkes and Torches, walking with thee in the Night betwixt Tauerne and Tauerne: But the Sack that thou hast drunke me, would haue bought me Lights as good cheape, as the deerest Chandlers in Europe. I haue maintain'd that Salamander of yours with fire, any time this two and thirtie yeares, Heauen reward me for it.

Bard I wold my Face were in your Belly.

Falst. So should I be sure to be heart-burn'd.

Enter Hostesse.

How now, Dame Partlet the Hen, haue you enquir'd yet who pick'd my Pocket?

Hostesse. Why Sir John, what doe you thinke, Sir John? doe you thinke I keepe Theeues in my House? I haue search'd, I haue enquired, so hee, my Husband, Man by Man, Boy by Boy, Seruant by Seruant: the tight of a hayre was never lost in my house before.

Falst. Ye lye Hostesse: Bardolph was shau'd, and lost many a hayre; and Ile be sw ore my Pocket was pick'd: goe to, you are a Woman, goe.

Hostesse. Who I? I defie thee: I was never call'd so in mine owne house before.

Falst. Goe to, I know you well enough.

Hostesse. No, Sir John, you doe not know me, Sir John: I know you, Sir John: you owe me Money, Sir John, and now you picke a quarrell, to beguile me of it: I bought you a dozen of Shirts to your Backe.

Falst. Dowlas, filthy Dowlas: I haue given them away to Bakers Wiues, and they haue made Boulters of them.

Hostesse. Now as I am a true Woman, Holland of eight shillings an Ell: You owe Money here besides, Sir John, for your Diet, and by-Drinkings, and Money lent you, foure and twentie pounds.

Falst. Hee had his part of it, let him pay.

Hostesse. Hee? alas, he is poore, he hath nothing.

Falst. How? Poore? Looke vpon his Face: What call you Rich? Let them coyne his Nose, let them coyne his Cheekes, Ile not pay a Denier. What, will you make a Younker of me? Shall I not take mine ease in mine Inne, but I shall haue my Pocket pick'd? I haue lost a Seale-Ring of my Grand-fathers, worth forte Marke.

Hostesse. I haue heard the Prince tell him, I know not how oft, that that Ring was Copper.

Falst. How? the Prince is a Iacke, a Sneake-Cupper: and if hee were heere, I would cudgell him like a Dogge, if hee would say so.

Enter the Prince marching, and Falst. meets him, playing on his Truncheon like a Fife.

Falst. How now Lad? is the Wind in that Doore? Must we all march?

Bard. Yes, two and two, Newgate fashion.

Hostesse. My Lord, I pray you heare me.

Prince. What say'st thou, Mistresse Quickly? How does thy Husband? I loue him well, hee is an honest man.

Hostesse. Good, my Lord, heare mee.

Falst. Prethee let her alone, and list to mee.

Prince. What say'st thou, Iacke?

Falst. The other Night I fell asleepe heere behind the Arras, and had my Pocket pickt: this House is turn'd Bawdy-house, they picke Pockets.

Prince. What doest thou lose, Iacke?

Falst. Wilt thou beleeue me, Hal? Three or foure Bonds of forte pound apeece, and a Seale-Ring of my Grandfathers.

Prince. A Trifle, some eight-penny matter.

Host. So I told him, my Lord; and I said, I heard your Grace say so: and (my Lord) he speakes most vilely of you, like a foule-mouth'd man as hee is, and said, hee would cudgell you.

Prince. What hee did not?

Host. There's no ther Faith, Truth, nor Woman-hood in me else.

Falst. There's

Fall. There's no more faith in thee then a stu'de Prunes nor no more truth in thee, then in a drawne Fox: and for Woman-hood, Maid-marian may be the Deputies wife of the Ward to thee. Go you nothing: go.

Host. Say, what thing? what thing?

Fall. What thing? why a thing to thanke heauen on.

Host. I am no thing to thanke heauen on, I would thou shouldst know it: I am an honest mans wife: and setting thy Knighthood aside, thou art a knaue to call me so.

Fall. Setting thy woman-hood aside, thou art a beast to say otherwise.

Host. Say, what beast, thou knaue thou?

Fal. What beast? Why an Otter.

Prin. An Otter, sir John? Why an Otter?

Fal. Why? She's neither fish nor flesh; a man knowes not where to haue her.

Host. Thou art vnreuerent in saying so; thou, or any man knowes where to haue me, thou knaue thou.

Prince. Thou say'st true Hostesse, and he slanders thee most grossely.

Host. So he doth you, my Lord, and saydst this other day, You ought him a thousand pound.

Prince. Sirrah, do I owe you a thousand pound?

Fall. A thousand pound Hal? A Million. Thy loue is worth a Million: thou ow'st me thy loue.

Host. Nay my Lord, he call'd you Iacke, and said hee would cudgell you.

Fal. Did I, Bardolph?

Bar. Indeed Sir John, you said so.

Fal. Yes, if he said my Ring was Copper.

Prince. I say 'tis Copper. Dar'st thou bee as good as thy word now?

Fal. Why Hal? thou know'st, as thou art but a man, I dare: but, as thou art a Prince, I feare thee, as I feare the roaring of the Lyons Whelpe.

Prince. And why not as the Lyon?

Fal. The King himselfe is to bee feared as the Lyon: Do'st thou think I'le feare thee, as I feare thy Father? nay if I do, let my Girdle breake.

Prin. O, if it should, how would thy guttes fall about thy knees. But sirra: There's no roome for Faith, Truth, nor Honesty, in this bosome of thine: it is all fill'd vppe with Guttes and Mid'riffe. Charge an honest Woman with picking thy pocket? Why thou horson impudent imbost Rascall, if there were any thing in thy Pocket but Tauerne Reckonings, Memorandums of Bawdie-houses, and one poore peny-worth of Sugar-candie to make thee long-winded: if thy pocket were enrich'd with any other iniuries but these, I am a Villaine: And yet you will stand to it, you will not Pocket vp wrong. Art thou not asham'd?

Fal. Do'st thou heare Hal? Thou know'st in the state of Innocency, Adam fell; and what should poore Iacke Falstaffe do, in the dayes of Villany? Thou seest, I haue more flesh then another man, and therefore more frailty. You confesse then you pickt my Pocket?

Prin. It appeares so by the Story.

Fal. Hostesse, I forgiue thee:
Go make ready Breakfast, loue thy Husband,
Looke to thy Seruants, and cherish thy Guests:
Thou shalt find me tractable to any honest reasons
Thou seest, I am pacified still.
Nay, I prethee be gone.

Exit Hostesse.

Now Hal, to the newes at Court for the Robbery, Lad? How is that answered?

Prin. O my sweet Beefe:
I must still be good Angell to thee.
The Money is paid backe again.

Fal. O, I do not like that paying backe, 'tis a double Labour.

Prin. I am good Friends with my Father, and may do any thing.

Fal. Rob me the Exchequer the first thing thou do'st, and do it with vnwash'd hands too.

Bard. Do my Lord.

Prin. I haue procured thee Iacke, a Charge of Foot.

Fal. I would it had beene of Horse. Where shal I finde one that can steale well? O, for a fine theefe, of two and twenty, or thereabout: I am heynously vnpraised. Wel God be thanked for these Rebels, they offend none but the Vertuous. I loud them, I praise them.

Prin. Bardolph.

Bar. My Lord.

Prin. Go bearе this Letter to Lord Iohn of Lancaster
To my Brother Iohn. This to my Lord of Westmerland.
Go Poins, to horse: for thou, and I,
Haue thirtie miles to ride yet ere dinner time.
Iacke, meet me to morrow in the Temple Hall
At two a clocke in the afternoone,
There shalt thou know thy Charge, and there receiue
Money and Order for their Furniture.
The Land is burning, Percie stands on hye,
And either they, or we must lower lye.

Fal. Rare words! braue world.
Hostesse, my breakfast, come:
Oh, I could wish this Tauerne were my drummе.

Exeunt omnes.

Actus Quartus. Scœna Prima.

Enter Harry Hotspurre, Worcester, and Douglas.

Hot. Well said, my Noble Scot, if speaking truth
In this fine Age, were not thought flatterie,
Such attribution should the Douglas haue,
As not a Souldiour of this seasons stampe,
